INSIDE THIS ISSUE:
ANTON LA VEY - INTERVIEW
"DESIDERATA SATANICUS"
KING DIAMOND - INTERVIEW
"DUELING DUALITIES"
"HERD ELITIST IDEOLOGIES"
"EUGENICS AND DYSGENICS"
"ODDITORIUM:"
PRINT, MUSIC, VIDEO REVIEWS
AND MUCH MORE!
My worst enemies are those who presume me to be harmless. They cannot imagine how much I resent and disdain them, or just how great a threat they would face if I could get at them. Everything in their behavior speaks of insult and presumptuousness, and for now it is all I can do to make constructive use of my anger toward them. At this time, I just make a list of them and keep a watch on. Some day, with the help of time, space, and circumstance, I will be able to humiliate them properly — not in a manner they would enjoy, but in a style calculated to make them wish that they had never been born.

— Anton Szandor LaVey
© 1989
THE TIDE TURNS
BY PETER H. GILMORE

WE HAVE SEEN IN RECENT MONTHS a trend on the part of academics, picked up by the media, towards refutation of the contemporary urban legend of "Satanic Ritual Abuse" which has been the foundation of entire "consultation" and "therapy" industries. The idiot fundamentalist effort to convince people that a worldwide conspiracy exists (to breed babies from dysfunctional women, spread drugs, pornography, and snuff films in an effort to dominate the globe) is finally being perceived to be a laughable fantasy. How long will it be until the McMartin trial joins the Salem debacle as a symbol of the American "justice" system gone wrong?

Yet during the entire hooplah, real Satanists have been untouched by this "witch hunt." Instead, children of Christian parents have come under the influence of their pastors and therapists and have accused family members and friends of being Satanists, often ruining their lives. And who can ignore the continuing media-touted scandal of child molestation perpetrated by Christian clergymen? This is all so well deserved. Behold the utter desperation of Christianity in its last gasp to find an enemy which can frighten the gullible into their churches. This enemy is but a projection of their own misdeeds which stem from the heart of their anti-life creed. Let them feed on themselves, as followers of the flaccid Nazarene should.

Church of Satan spokespeople have been going on talk-shows for years, debunking this hysteria, yet now that "official" sources are coming to their senses does anyone look to us and say, "Gee, you were right all along"? Of course not. We were invited on these shows not as sources of truth, but as fools, "real live Satanists" at whom the proses could gawk. However, we did not shrink from articulating the unvarnished truth of our beliefs which many label as brutal, fascist, animalistic. If people want to fear us, then let them face us for the correct reasons. We made this effort so that there would be an accurate presentation of our beliefs, especially should the time come when we could face legal difficulties because of our affiliations.

The real danger lies in the remaining influence of this mythology on law enforcement agencies. Tax dollars are still being wasted on seminars run by self-proclaimed experts (often retired, moonlighting, or would-be law officers of a decidedly Christian bent) who spread completely bogus information. The gullible local cops, wooed by jargon-laden presentations, swallow this stuff whole as it comes from apparent "experts" and thus they help spread a panic by seeing signs of the Devil's work in minor and typical crimes. Just recently I was called in to examine evidence that Satanic cult activity was the basis for vandalism of a house up for sale that had remained vacant for about a year. Prior to examining the site, I was told that certain Satanic graffiti and an inverted cross had been found, proof positive that this had been done by a local cult. Yeah, right.

When I got to the house, an old structure that is fairly isolated, I examined every room and the entire grounds. What I found was an old mattress in the living room, with a collapsed card table next to it as well as two candles (one green, one
The small cross pendant was hung on the edge of the table, which seemed to have been removed by the wearer before going to sleep on the aforementioned mattress (the cross had sharp edges, but was not intended). The only graffiti were various slogans such as "Nicole loves Mark" (if there is hidden Satanic significance, it escapes me). And in an upstairs room, once belonging to a child as evidenced by the garish sports-figure wall paper, there was a copy of the Netronomicon and a Ouija board. We all know how essential this paraphernalia is to authentic Satanic ritual - NOT OUTDOORS, the squatters had taken the lawn mower from the garage and cut a path through the overgrown grass to a section of the yard surrounded by pine trees. Here they nixed out a roughly circular patch, about eight feet in diameter, in which to sun-bathe. There were no signs of ritualistic activity in this circle. So, here was, at most, teenage dabbling stuff, but hardly evidence of a cult. This sort of incident has been repeated across the nation and has been inflated by the overactive imaginations of the gullible (often those with Christian beliefs) evidence for a broad-based conspiracy. I don't particularly care about the paranoid fantasies of the dysfunctionals, but when members of the police are convinced that there are Satans lurking under the beds of innocent Americans, that is when we must insistently stand up and tell them the truth about our beliefs. And so we have been doing.

I have been active in recent months as a consultant/expert witness regarding the practice of Satanism in cases concerning the religious rights of prisoners (individuals who have become members of the Church of Satan after their incarceration). Numerous prisons are very "liberal" where religious observances are concerned and some have even multi-million dollar complexes to serve the needs of their inmate population, yet when it comes to allowing Satanism to ritualize, or even have their literature, there has been resistance from some institutional authorities. We have been making headway in this area by demonstrating our credentials as a legally-recognized religious organization whose existence must be tolerated along with the other minority religions permitted. We do not seek special treatment for these incarcerated Satanists, simply that they be given equal treatment concerning religious practices. Also, we assist only those inmates whose professed Satanism is consistent with our philosophy, which has been clearly delineated in our publicly available literature and other media presentations.

It has never been the goal of the Church of Satan to take its place among the other world religions, with dutiful followers and neatly labeled congregations. No, Satanism will permeate the societies of the globe as a secular lifestyle. Indeed, Satanism has penetrated the culture in many ways, and obvious imagery has particularly conquered the heavy metal world. Yet our religion is often not taken seriously. This can be used as a strength, for Satanists continue to influence larger cultural movement without being recognized as such, except by the astute - and some of our Christian enemies do know what we really stand for.

We do not intend to turn the vast increase masses into Satanists. Nor do we wish to eliminate those whom we consider to be less than elite (though we'd definitely like to see their numbers reduced from the overwhelming majority they now hold). How then could we predators exercise our prerogatives? The masses will die as always and follow their inertia. However, in the growing Satanic Age, we shall find desired situations and objects a bit more easily obtainable, and we shall have direct recourse to justice. In the interim, we will not be treated with any less respect than other religions.

While the Christians have been tilting at straw men, we have continued to extend our influence through society. We have defended real Satanism, and have spread our literature so that our followers will know by what name they are to be known. Meanwhile, the altruists/egalitarians have continued to force situations into extremes so that even the dullard couch potatoes have come to see the error of this doctrine - reducio ad absurdum works again!

As always, we remain aloof from the lhubb with our cherished objects and individuals, and when the time comes we push and direct the currents as they should naturally go. Our victory is assured as we are in harmony with Nature - avatars of the Universe's Order. We demand that "sex Talionis be the rallying cry for a return to justice, and that - as long as this present system lasts - those who are hired to administer justice, and thus act as agents of the state, will leave their religious prejudices at home. For nothing did our Satanic founding fathers create a Constitution which demands a separation of church and state.

So enjoy the ringside Colosseum seats and the spectacle of Christians being thrown to the Christians, but keep an eye on those gullible cardinals. As our influence continues, we will see real order based on Natural law, not the criminal-favoring morass enshrined in today's "justice" system. And don't be surprised if some of those men and women in blue, who aren't the least bit gullible, put on Baphomet when their badges come off.
I ran across a new book on the Sociology shelves yesterday—Satanic Panic: The Creation of a Contemporary Legend, by Jeffrey S. Victor. At first glance, it's a much-needed objective debunking of the Satanic hysteria, analyzing it not from a Christian perspective, but from the standpoint of an academically-accredited scholar well-versed in the phenomena of rumor-paranoids. Upon closer examination, though the book is 310 pages long (minus appendices, notes and references), it is a relatively superficial analysis and adds little to the debunking books already out, such as In Pursuit of Satan, Satanism in America, and The Satanism Scare. Bulk is impressive to those of small minds, however, so I suppose the more anti-hysteria books on the shelves, the better. But there is a fault that is erupting with the "academic" anti-hysteria stance that we, as Satanists, should be aware of and prepared to combat. This article doesn't concern everyone who is in academia; I will use the term "academic" in the perjorative to define only those professors, writers and researchers who are too wrapped-up in their ivory tower cocoons to see what's happening around them.

It seems, in their recent passion for disproving the Christian myth of an international Satanic conspiracy, academics are overlooking the modern Satanic movement altogether. Instead of defining Satanism, and showing where the presuppositions by which we are damned by society are false (i.e. sacrificing animals and babies, drinking blood, holding weekly Black Masses and orgies), certain academics find it easier to say "there are no Satanists," period. Or, at best, that any "Satanic movement" is limited and inconsequential (therefore, not a threat to society).

In Victor's book, for example, there are only two references to "Anton LaVey" in the index, one of which reads: "In the 1970s, small groups calling themselves followers of Satanistic religion developed. However, they really didn't receive much public notice. Even Anton LeVay, who is now touted as the Godfather of Satanism in popular accounts of the subject, was a relative unknown." What rock was this guy under? Didn't he bother to find out when the Church of Satan started? Or call up any media coverage of the occult scene from that time? Anton LeVay was getting worldwide coverage from 1966 on, hardly a "relative unknown." I don't make this point simply to defend Anton LaVey, but to point out that such glaring errors call an academician's research, objectivity and ego needs into question.

There is an underlying presupposition that pervades works like Victor's that indicates that he is buying into the very myths he is trying to debunk! That is a presupposition that Satanists are baby-sacrificing, blood-drinking muderers. But there has been no evidence presented that such miscreants exist so Satanists don't exist. It's easier to write Anton LaVey and modern Satanism out of history than to get into the polemics of exactly what Satanism is and, more importantly, what it is not.

Any Satanist should be deeply offended by this kind of shoddy dismissal of the real issues. It's like saying, "No, these people aren't really Jews who suck the blood out of babies, don't worry." The poor parents accused of abusing their children in Satanic rituals aren't really dirty Satanists. We all know how awful they are. Taking it a step further, "These people aren't really dirty, filthy, buggering queers. If you publicly accuse them of such heinous acts, it could mark them for life—ruin their lives and reputations." The presuppositions remain. Especially in today's heavy PC climate, Victor wouldn't dare make those kinds of assumptions about gays, or Jews. He never once bothers to define the tenets of modern Satanists, explaining that there is nothing in our philosophy about child sacrificing or animal slaying. He never asks, "What would be wrong if they were Satanists? What's wrong with being a Satanist?" He simply dismisses it.

It irks me that academics remained silent for so long, allowing the hysteria to build to such a fever pitch before they stepped in. Perhaps that's why they prefer to overlook us. When were they ten years ago? We were yelling our heads off and left to dangle in the wind. Talk shows often didn't want us because we were the real thing and would blow holes in their breeder stories and generational Satanists. After all, what would Satanists know about Satanism? We'd only lie anyway, right? I'm sure you found yourself muttering, as I did, "Where are they? Where are the sociologists, the Freudian psychiatrists, where are the cultural anthropologists? Have we forgotten everything we've learned about mass psychology and the media?" What? Who? Why? Why aren't they offended by this madness? Why aren't they speaking out?" When we contacted them to back us up, they, safely insulated from the real world, would act as if the phenomenon wasn't happening and that it wasn't worthy of their attention. They didn't want to put themselves on the line. Their precious objectivity might be compromised; their colleagues might jeer. Now, after we've blown a hole in the wall, the academics come along on their white horses to clear up all this horrible mess, without even a nod to Satanist Victor, for example, never bothered to contact the Church of Satan while writing his book—ostensibly on a topic we might have some experience with. Academicians are safe; they aren't Satanists and they have letters after their name.

Evangelist, at least, go out of their way to explain our vile philosophy, often reprinting the Nine Satanic Statements in their books of rants. The academicians seem to want to pretend we don't even exist. So who is more threatened by our existence? And why? Christians need us. Now, academia needs us too, for our very emergence and growing influence has brought us to their attention. Yet, academia surely must have a monopoly on "reason." Hence, the very grouping that has provided food for study must be purged by the established purveyors of enlightenment. No wonder they're pissed off — they're supposed to be the smart ones, not us. Is it so threatening to find that there are other people out there who might know more about the subject than they do? Or are they just too steeped in Judeo-Christian myths _themselves_, regardless of their sanctimonious posture as defenders of rationality, to understand what true Satanism is? Perhaps we should, as Anton LaVey suggested recently, domesticate the Ninth Satanic Statem Ent to: "Satan is the best friend academia ever had..." There is plenty of present interest evoked by Satanism in the academic community, just as there is in law enforcement circles. It's a lot more fun to spend department money to attend a seminar on "Satanic crimes" than another boring seminar on the finer points of suspect's rights or fingerprint casting. Satanism provides juicy grant opportunities, like studying the sociological and psychological profiles of witches. We've all seen the books by Jeffrey Burton Russell who managed to write an entire series of at least four doorstop-sized tomes on the subject of "historical" Satanism with barely a mention of the Church of Satan.

By neglecting the phenomenon of modern Satanism as defined and edited by Anton LaVey, sociologists and contemporary culture scholars are missing out on some very rich soil to till. They examine Satanic hysteria but neglect to adequately answer the underlying question: What prompted it? They study the symptom but overlook the first cause itself. The "Satanic panic" is a direct result of the rise in contemporary Satanism and the trappings of Satanism in modern society. Death or black metal music, horror movies and books, fashion, Satanic rituals, New Age dabblings are all part of a burgeoning Satanic aesthetic. If sociologists or social psychologists want to study Satanism, why don't they ask themselves what the social conditions were and are that instigated the rise in Satanism in the first place — the "death" of God, the slipping away of "moral" underpinnings, the sexual revolution, the technological revolution, the disintegration of the nuclear family, a hunger for metaphors of strength and mastery in a world that is increasingly violent and oppressive... Now that would be a book! There are plenty of avenues of research to bleed grant money with if academics want to study Satanism, but they'll be forced to confront more than rude altars and drug-induced orgies.

As it is, academics who refuse to acknowledge a modern Satanic movement are taking one step forward but two steps back. The two main problems with this stance are:

1) In trying so maintain their objective posture, they are compromising the validity of their research. As with any witch-hunt phenomenon, academics are afraid that, by explaining what contemporary Satanism is, they themselves would then be labelled Satanists, and their objectivity might be compromised. It is a simpler argument for them to pretend that real Satanism doesn't exist and is therefore no threat, than to get into the polemics of exactly what it is and, more importantly, what it's not. That muddles people's brains too much. Things get complicated. But by not acknowledging and defining the modern Satanism, their research appears superficial and incomplete. Therefore their conclusions are compromised.

2) It perpetuates the problem. Showing the Christian agenda behind most of these accusations and exposing the accusers for the liars that they are is half the battle, but it doesn't work toward communicating what Satanism really is. And it doesn't work toward protecting our religious freedom. Nothing is solved if a distinction isn't forced that there are a significant number of practicing Satanists, but that we aren't involved in illegal activities and, on the contrary, have a rational and life-loving philosophy. By underplaying our influence, our very existence!f these "objective researchers" insidiously perpetuate the underlying myths. Then when people are found reading _The Satanic Bible_, or practicing rituals in the woods or in their own homes, the rumors, panic, and accusations continue. It still leaves a wide-open door for deliberate misunderstanding and righteous persecution. Real Satanists might still be in danger of losing jobs, spouses and perhaps their own children, because of wild, unfounded accusations. But Satanists will triumph. And simply saying we don't exist and therefore there is no Satanic threat" evades that fact.

We can thank the elbow-patch commandos for their "brave and dauntless" stance, but Satanists, more than ever, need to come forward to kick them in the shins.

Witches! Have you been touched by Satan?...

...Or perhaps another supernatural or alien being? If so, I'd like to hear from you. I'm researching a new book on true womanly power, contemporary sexual mythology, and connections with Satanism and EDC. I'd like to get some frank answers from women who haven't had a chance to voice certain dark thoughts. Anonymity is assured — names will not be required, but honesty is essential. To receive a questionnaire, please send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to:

Blanche Barton
Post Office Box 210082
San Francisco, CA 94121
IN LATE SUMMER, SOUTHERN ARIZONA is often buffeted by wild and ferocious electrical storms. Such a display of nature’s savagery had just occurred as we began this interview; our little circle was gathered on the covered patio to watch the incredible flashes of lightning and to listen to thunder crashing in the nearby mountains. A brisk breeze drove the few remaining storm clouds across a fragment of moon, and brought the scent of creosote bushes and ozone. We sat comfortably on cushioned chairs of old Mexican wrought-iron, the flagstones lit by a single hurricane lamp. The huge black Belgian Shepherd at the High Priest’s feet pricked his ears at the far-off yips of foraging coyotes, but was otherwise motionless.

On Satanism: The Movement, and the role of the Church of Satan

Anton Szandor LaVey: Among dedicated Satanists, there will be a direction toward living Satanism and promoting a Satanic lifestyle rather than simply doing rituals and exploring Satanic "theology." No, Satanism won’t cease as a religion to become a political movement; rather, it will be activated more as a secular lifestyle than as a religious or theological set of principles.

Man needs ritual, so religious Satanism is an "opener of the way," to foster the eventual lifestyle of Satanism. We’re hoping to develop practitioners versus parishioners. The Church of Satan’s role, increasingly, will be to turn the latter into the former.

The present evolutionary stage, the one we’re seeing right now, is for Satanism to enter the mainstream, to evolve from a religion to a secular lifestyle. Christianity has done the reverse; it developed from Man’s precepts about following an "ethical lifestyle," into an organization, an edifice known as "The Church." It’s entrenched. Man looks to the Church for rules, regulations, divine inspiration, redemption.

Blanche Barton: We make people self-dedicated, self-sufficient – the reverse of Christianity.

ASL: The secular powers that-be know what we’re doing, realize that this is the only way human animals can be weaned away from an outdated belief system. The 1980’s witnessed, for real Satanism, only a cosmetic persecution, nothing like the real persecution of the witch hunts.

On the surface, Satanism is economically disastrous. Our people keep things, honor them, cherish them – the expendability of certain goods will lessen a great deal. But then, humans have been inculcated to be dissatisfied.

We can’t change them overnight; the workability of this concept will be less than ideal. When Satanism is completely mainstream, planned obsolescence will continue for a time – business as usual. But there’s a trade-off: there’s money to be made by applying Satanism to merchandising. The streets are paved with gold.

Humans will buy products that appeal to individualism and reinforce stratification. Satanism won’t knock the economy off for the multitudes. For every outraged economic dinosaur, there will be a new Satanic opportunity. For instance, home architecture – since "anything goes," opportunities will abound for those who can create modular castles, total environments, anything fun, indulgent, childlike. For a popular culture already steeped in the Gothic, the past, the dark – "Draculavenercular." Music – a return to something that’s fading out, a new classicism and lyricism.

Movies – where the "villains" are shown to be the "good guys." Stories, novels, a whole new literary realm based on Satanistic justice. The Most Dangerous Game codified. Death Wish amplified.

All it takes is for the Satanic aesthetic to get out there, not just in anti-hero figures, but in ever-increasing areas like clothing, cars – all kinds of product design.

We’re living in the Satanic Age now, but there’s so much static – the static created by the last runnings of Judeo-Christian ethics and procedures, inherent in the restrictions of our bureaucratic legal system. "When there are too many lawyers, there can be no justice."

On the role of the Active Members of the Church of Satan –

ASL: They represent a conscious alternative to herd mentality; they should be viable role models for the rest of society. There is a growth potential for each member and by this, I don't mean that they should all wear black or buy more candles. I want most to encourage an individuality within a uniform model that will benefit the whole. If you live by the Nine Satanic Statements, then you're a living embodiment of Satanism - a true role model. Even though we don't proselytize, true Active Advocates, true Satanists, are proselytizing by what they are.

They should also recognize opponents of the Church of Satan for what they are; they should recognize their intent to damage or destroy what we're fighting so hard to develop. And vanquish them. Deal with them as they deserve.

On the role of Magic Group vs. Personal –

ASL: Satanic magic differentiates between rites, ceremonies, and ritual or rallies. To rally together as Satanists can be productive – gathering to share and celebrate a common philosophy can reinforce that philosophy.

A ritual, conversely, should involve only one or two people; the presence of others only dilutes the potency and effectiveness. If one wishes to practice Satanic magic and feels he needs a group, it should be noted that the mere presence of others not personally involved in the situation can lessen the potency. In a large group ritual, the generalization of energy is confined to the identity needs of the individuals involved, rather than the goal or Is-To-Be the ritual is intended to produce. Better two than twenty – the latter serves certain social and identity needs and can bolster the participants, but does nothing to amplify the outcome. A real Greater Magic ritual is about the outcome.

Addressing claimants to the "Satanic Mandate" –

ASL: Mandate? Mandate? I never used the word. I thought a mandate was some kind of monkey – a cross between a mandrill and a primate. Or maybe something a spitter looked under the bed for or a gay guy went on cruising for. If you mean a bestowal of authority from a higher, supernatural source, I have no use for such nonsense. A "Satanic Mandate" is a non-sequitur, an oxymoron. I didn't know or care about any infernal bestowal. I presented reasons for a Church of Satan – I wasn't inspired by any external source; I wasn't given "dispensation," or any "honorific." I would never be so presumptuous.

Recognise these claimants for what they are self-deluded, pretentious gods who must announce, must proclaim their exalted, self-gratifying status to all.

They lack any true identity; the only way they can have one is by stealing it from us. The Church of Satan's identity is established; they have to pretend it was bestowed by "supernatural" forces. My right I have made for myself. You know how I feel about hypocrisy and Goodyear Badges. Only when needed for one's survival, I don't go to show you no stinking badges.

But getting back to mandates, you really put a nickel in me on that one. For eighteen years, for example, one obsessive shi-shi-daruber has been trying to undermine and extinguish myself and the Church of Satan – to pretend it's kaput, gone, disappeared. In the guise of receiving a "Satanic Mandate," this nut case endowed a "Temple" based on the supposedly revealed word of the Prince of Darkness himself. Those who were suckered into what was really his Christianized warmed-over Madame Blavatsky-Egyptoid kind of Rosicrucianism, were fed a self-help, personal success premise – not promise – called "Xeper," which at first I thought it meant "to become."

While ostensibly "Xepering" and "becoming," the main activities of this outfit consists of Sons of the Desert type conventions where the supposedly defunct Church of Satan was the bottomless wellspring for group. Between conventions, an ongoing barrage prevailed of surly desigation of, yet para tonic dependency on, the Church of Satan and its founder: me – far more constrained than evangelical identity Christians or Wicca types.

Beyond a catalytic burst of sobriety involving alleged child molestation, this mandated "Temple" and its progenitor did absolutely nothing to produce evidence of any remotely Satanic plan, purpose, direction or implementation during its entire existence. At best, just being around provided the media with a readily exploitive alternative to the Church of Satan. In other words, "the other bunch of Satanists."

My unsolicited advice to this mandated Temple and its supernal potentate is to take your mandate, go out among the world of mere mortals, cease your parasitic dependency upon me and my finest and, if you can, do something. Or at least, as they say, "get a life." You got your goddamned mandate, so Xeper-Dee-Doe-Dah and either get the show on the road, or fold up your tents and silently steal away – 'cause you can't do business with a surly Temple.

On "Authentic" Satanists –

ASL: We must resist any attempts by individuals, groups or agencies - Christian, "Satanic" or otherwise, to differentiate Satanism and Satanists into denominations. Check the copyright dates; there are no ecumenical Satanists. I'm all for individually within the scope of Satanism. If anyone wants to start his or her own thing, fine. If it's basically a spin-off of real Satanism, it's still Satanism. If not, it's either Christian "new age" mysticism or Christian blasphemy.

On fascism —

It seems apparent that Nazism and fascism sell. It's too horrible to contemplate (smacks lips). I could write a book — and maybe will — on the repulsive attraction of tyranny. It would speak of aesthetic imperatives and Jewish doctors and lawyers who drive Mercedes and BMWs and latter-day hippies in VW Beetles and WASP Yuppies whose non-lives are perpetuated by every manner of ocho-goody cunningly fashioned by sneaky Jap sub-humans. Of all things fascistic, even greater than the forgetfulness of past orthodoxies, the aesthetic of dominance is making its mark. There'll be a lot more to come.

I won't even get into the clichéd defense of National Socialism: "There were some important things which should be studied — we shouldn't condemn the whole thing without extracting the worthwhile." So what else is new? I think young people are doing a pretty good job of extracting the pay dirt from fascism. Unlike the hypocritical Yuppies, they're plugging into what feels and looks and sounds good about it. No guile, because they weren't around at the time of World War Two. Their parents, most of whom weren't around either, are the Boomer inheritors of post-war jitters and misgivings who had to yell "peace" and "love" until they were hoarse.

If a neo-fascist look — and outlook — makes for men who look like men and women who look like women, I'm all for it.

What is the greatest fear people need have of Satanism?

ASL: That they might have to think for themselves.

Don't miss issue number 18 of The Nose, that wonderfully iconoclastic magazine, as it features a fashion layout with Dr. LaVey — "Full Devil Jacket." This includes spiffy photos of Dr. LaVey and the denizens of the Den of Iniquity, as well as two curvaceous blondes — one of whom is Blanche Barnt! Images are accompanied by quotations from The Devil's Notebook.

To order, send $5.00 to: The Nose Magazine, P.O. Box 31353, San Francisco, CA 94131.

ANTON LAVEY

Answer Me/Honolulu Baby 7" 45 RPM single

Church of Satan founder Anton LaVey lends his evocative keyboard style and vocal presence to a pair of neglected tunes. Beautifully packaged, pressed in blue vinyl and strictly limited to 1000 numbered copies.

$5.00 + $1.00 shipping.

Make checks payable to Gregg Turkington

send orders to:

AMARILLO RECORDS
P.O. BOX 24433
SAN FRANCISCO, CA 94124 USA
Throughout the twenty-eight years of the existence of the Church of Satan, the organization has continued to expand while its charter has undergone a number of carefully-planned developmental phases. In the process, we have at times found it necessary to eject individuals who have acted in ways that were not in keeping with our high standards for social behavior. We have also had a small number of individuals freely depart from us, finding our means too challenging to their false images of personal superiority. Neither types are ever missed, as the true elite of talented, highly-motivated productive, creative, and above all, independent individuals still find their way to us.

There have been those who would attempt to imitate us, but they usually discover that our shoes are far too big to fill. Short-lived spinoffs have included The Church of Satanic Brotherhood, Ovdo Tempel Satanas, Order of the Black Ram, Church of Lucifer, Thee Orthodox Satanic Church and so on. None of these has prospered or even affected the course of Satanism, as they have quickly collapsed due to the lack of energy or direction. One group formed by ex-members of the Church of Satan which has continued to exist, albeit as a small and fairly clandestine "vanity" organization (riding on the funds provided by its "high priests," the Temple of Set. This church is significant only in that they continue to try to ride upon the coattails of the Church of Satan, and indeed even publicly claim to be the "successor to" and "custodian of" the Church of Satan. You might have come across some advertisements or writing influenced by these Satians. Don't be fooled; they are not in any way associated with the Church of Satan and their tales of schemes are convenient diversions. Let us examine from whence this group appeared and clear away their false claims.

In 1974 C.E. the Church of Satan instituted its fourth phase of development. The thrust of this phase was to reorient the members at all levels to proceed on a far more independent course. Previously we had issued charts for formal "Grotos" which were small congregations comprised of Satanists in specific geographical regions. It had been discovered that these formal Grotos led certain members to confine their efforts at personal advancement to the realm of the Grotto alone, rather than towards the success in the outside world which is of paramount importance to Satanism. Certain members were far more interested in trying to gain elevated rank yet were merely competing in the Grotto's social arena. They neglected to develop their talents and forge ahead. Many other members were strong-willed individuals who did not mix well with other Satanists. Rather than functioning as bases for the development of Satanic strategies, these groups often became shields against true advancement, filled with Eduardo that were solely interested in internecine strife. Not everyone involved fits this picture, but there were enough to make it obsolete as a system of growth.

The new phase stressed independent functioning, keeping individuals spurred to pursue their own goals. If Satanists used their initiative to find their fellows, and they wished to informally create groups for socialization and ritual, that was most acceptable. But the momentum for the existence of these informal groups had to come from the social compatibility of the constituent members, not geographical proximity.

This phase of isolation, which laid the groundwork for a much broader base for Satanism as a movement (seen today especially in the commercial acceptance of Satanic imagery in the popular Heavy Metal music business), was upsetting to the "pen-pals" and "coffee klatch conclave" members, whom it was basically designed to ease out of the way. Michael A. Aquino, at that time the editor of The Cloven Hoof, had attained the IVth and was injecting a strongly supernatural bent to the Hoof's articles. Mr. Aquino had a history of creating documents which he claimed to have transcribed from superhuman entities. These include the Diabolicus (1970 C.E.), a series of statements from Satan, Beezlebub, Azazel, Abaddon, Asmodeus, Azathoth, Belial, and Leviathan, as well as the Ninth Solitary Message (1974 C.E.) which declared Azazel LaVey a "claimant."

Dr. LaVey, who then as now, had a firm grasp on the Church's ideology, began to implement the phase which had slowly been evolving over the previous two years. He had even outlined the basic concepts for this formal phase during the summer of 1972 C.E. in a letter to Aquino, stating that the "social Satanists" and their "limelight loving" priests contribute nothing to Satanism as a movement, and that they would fall by the wayside when they didn't receive the attention they sought by starting their own "churches." LaVey wrote that he had far more respect for his "underground clergy" who were very productive in the real world. Aquino did not accept this, especially Dr. LaVey's awarding of priesthoods to non-esoteric, non-public achievers and thus he would no longer be privy to even the small amount of information regarding underground activities that had previously been given to him. LaVey was determined that the status of Church members should reflect their standing in the world outside of the organization. Degrees are not reflective of simple book learning and esoteric knowledge, but the actual application of Satanic principles towards personal advancement. To this end, the Church would honor values given to it in kind with degree recognition as would be deemed appropriate by Dr. LaVey. The achievement of degrees via written tests was not to be abandoned at this time, but this additional means of advancement was now open to the "above-ground" members. This was formalized by the new phase in 1974 C.E. and outlined to Aquino in May, during one of his rare personal meetings with Dr. LaVey.

Aquino did not protest this policy at the meeting and later claimed this alternate route to advancement as a public reason to announce a break with the Church of Satan, accusing Dr. LaVey of "selling" degrees. He wrote letters to his handful of pen-pal cronies, fellow mystics who had also mortgaged the new phase and too resigned to go off with Aquino and form their own group. Aquino had wanted to start a "Second Church of Satan" but was thwarted by copyright laws. Instead, mulling his readings of Egyptian history and mythology, he claimed to have invoked Satan (in whom he literally believed as an entity) and to have been answered instead by Set, the "actual" Prince of Darkness who, through a series of realizations in Aquino's mind, caused him to record as Set's answer a document which he titled the Book of Coming Forth by Night. This "supernatural revelation" supposedly gives him the right to supercede the Church of Satan. Doesn't that sound familiar?

Aquino would like you to believe that the "entire priesthood" of the Church of Satan followed him in departing. This is untrue, especially as there were many underground members, including priests and higher, of whom he had no knowledge. The Church of Satan was at that time, and still continues to be, a large and highly stratified organization with many discrete individuals placed in positions of power. As Orwell had envisioned in his classic 1984, it is not an organization in the usual sense as it is held together by an idea whose time has come, which is indestructible. The departure of less than thirty members can hardly be called a schism. This was instead a welcome housecleaning of an element that had become less than desirable to the future development of the Church of Satan. And thus the fourth phase functioned as planned and Aquino became one of those who, as predicted in 1972 C.E., fell by the wayside.

The ex-Satanists who formed the Temple of Set follow a path quite different from that of the Church of Satan, which has never veered from its dedication to rational self-interest, indulgence, and the cultivation of the carnal and material. The belief in Set as an actual entity with whom followers may commune is in marked contrast to our disbelief in any external diety figures. They have a consuming preoccupation with rank and satans within their organization, thus titles and medallions of degree level are eagerly sought by members to affirm their position in the pecking order of the temple's internal world (particularly evident at their "conclaves"). This is not surprising considering Aquino's background - a byword steeped in military academies and in pursuit of Boy Scout merit badges. The Church of Satan retains its right to grant degrees, but these are still based on an individual's achievements in the outside world and his level of freedom from herd conformity and independence from forced interac-

---

CHURCH OF SATAN

FOR INFORMATION:
SEND A SELF-ADDRESSED STAMPED ENVELOPE OR FOUR IRC'S TO:

CHURCH OF SATAN
P.O. BOX 210082
SAN FRANCISCO, CA 94121 USA
I SEE A RED DOOR, and I want to paint it black. I'm one of the things that goes "bump" in the night. I'm a born Satanist. I'm a happy little blob of custard and you can't nail me to any wall; in fact, I'd pull those nails out and aim them at you. Tell me how negative I am; tell me how I'm filled with hate. You're not just stupid — you're wrong.

Dracula loved his brides. Dr. Frankenstein loved his monster. My Satanic love burns fiercely; it's perfect and uncompromising.

Firstly, necessarily, I love myself. I'm my own God, after all, and I put no gods before Me. I'm supermost in my mind; I always bring me flowers. Sometimes I realize I could have done something better; sometimes I make mistakes. It's wonderful how I learn from these things; it's exciting to have an opportunity to be an even better Me. Even when I deny myself something, withhold gratification, it's always in order to enjoy something even more fulfilling and worthwhile down the road. This is why I can hate so purely, so uncompromisingly, anything that wastes my precious time, energy and attention.

Along with Me, I love He Who Is Not Me, my husband. He is, for one thing, the consciousness in which I see a wonderful reflection of my own God, myself. His love for me qualifies him with the very best of taste and discriminations, after all; he obviously knows what's good for him. My cells respond to his pheromones, and being around him gives me a heightened feeling of happiness, contentment and well-being. The shape of his face is the clearest sight in the world to me. He is my mentor, my master, my very best friend; I have placed with him my perfect trunus and he accepts it as only a real man can. His hopes, dreams, goals are mine; his disappointments are mine, too, and thankfully I hate whatever distresses him or gets in his way. This hate, too, is black and pure, like gunpowder; it can burn as brightly and as fervently as my love.

Next, I love my tribe, my folk, those who are like me as I am. They can be friends or family, but in my heart they are simply my tribe, and the Black Flame burns within all of them. They light my days and brighten my night through their achievements and antics; they make the world a more interesting place, and only a Satanist knows what a gift that is. Sometimes they are close enough to share food or warmth or simply company; sometimes they are far away, voices on phone lines, words on a page. But they're always in here, part of me, my folk. I cannot feel indiffertent toward those who would distress my tribe. He who attacks them attacks Me, he who places obstacles in their way earns my ire, my enmity, my hate.

As a natural-born Satanist, I'm joyfully free of the Judeo-Christian-Islamic bias against non-human animals, and so have never questioned that what I feel and have felt for my pets is pure and simple love. I love them more than I love many people; I value their lives more highly. The Black Flame of Swan burns dark and soft in animals, as its purest and deepest. I bristle and chafe at the laws that give destructive, unwanted, horrific little children more rights than my dog has. She is my property, and I can only protect her as such. A product of a thousand generations of breeding for domestication, for compatibility with humans, she is nevertheless only a hair-breath away from wild. As highly as I treasure her life, so deeply does my hate run for those who would be cruel to her. I bare my fangs at them.

I love everything that belongs to me, all my stuff. I love my books, my music, my pretty chins, my coffee machine, my raincoat, my old, soft green blouson, I hate anybody who would steal, destroy or disorder my precious stuff; why wouldn't? What value could such a creep have that would exceed that of my heavy stoneware mug, my perfect leather bag?

Contingent on all of this, I love the world. It's so beautiful, so perfect a setting for my God, Me. I love mountains, the sea, acres of trees without a single house, rows of houses all antique and charming, museums, fog, delicious nourishment, quiet afternoons, star-filled nights. If only there weren't all these anti-life bards who want to suck it all up, who hate themselves so much they have to destroy the source of their own sustenance. I hate them. Only in the depths of the Black Flame in my heart is it known how much I hate them and what they've done to the world, these library-burners, these child-molesters, these people who, as Charlie said, kill things that are better than they are. When they ask why we hate Christians, can they ever really understand the answer unless they love as we do, love with the dark, Satanic love of life and self?

CARNIVORA #1, BY TIMOTHY PATRICK BUTLER
RY AS ONE MIGHT, there is almost no means by which one can avoid shopping for groceries. Eating is not only pleasurable, it's necessary, and I doubt that most of us have the financial resources to eat at our favorite restaurants every night. Grocery shopping is, therefore, imminent doom on a weekly basis.

All of the Nine Satanic Sins are in painful evidence at the supermarket, no matter where or when you might deign to shop. I always seem to arrive just after a busload of Senior Citizens or retirees has come to stock their larders, or I end up going the same day that welfare checks and food stamps have been siphoned from mailboxes, or I arrive when there are no operable carts, when the aisles are crowded with boxes of Tomato Strudel and Velanums, when the line at the delicatessen is 150 yards long and wizened cronies blurt that their olive loaf isn't cut thinly enough, when the only packages of meat available are eight pound "econo-paks" for Catholic families, when the only bananas left are phallic green or black and foetid, when it's triple coupon day, when it's two days before some painful Xian holiday like Thanksgiving or Xmas, or when someone forgets their checkbook, their credit card, their money, their brain.

I have seen (and this is all taken from actual experiences of the author) a man thumb-fuck a package of chicken breasts as his wife decided which cut of poultry that they'd be consuming that week. I've seen an old man take a plum from a display, put it in his mouth, produce a pit or seed, and throw the pit or seed back into the display. I've watched as old women have taken from three to five minutes in choosing the right bell pepper for them. I've seen acne-faced deli boys with colds make sandwiches for store patrons, sniffing and coughing all the while. I've seen tubs of chicken livers left at the register (near Soup Opera Dives) by people who decided at the last crucial minute that they didn't want chicken livers after all. I've seen welfare moms knock a jar of tomato sauce (or apple sauce, or mayonnaise) onto the floor, and keep right on going.

People (mean as in derogatory a sense as possible) consistently make unehraged Ururns without looking behind them, their carts inevitably bumping into some fragile, glaze-eyed zag, or me. People will spend hours gazing (for I am certain they are not reading) at the labels of every brand of canned beans that the store stocks, and then decide that they never wanted canned beans in the first place. People will squeeze the shit out of the last knot of your favorite bread and leave it. People will put their elly mitts upon all manner of fruits, vegetables, meats and baked goods without having intended to purchase any of these things. People suck. I hate them.

The corporations that produce all of the stuff in these stores suck, too. There is always some idiot (usually a horrid, maternal type) giving away free samples or coupons in which I am NEVER interested, although they will often go out of their way to insist that I am. I do not use coupons, and I do not want anything free that you want to give to me. Among the things that have been proffered to me: "Weight Watchers" stuff (Whatta matha, am I too fat?), little "Pizza-Snax," and diarrhea medicine (my personal favorite).

What's a law-abiding, blood-sucking, Devil-worshiping cultist to do? Here are some suggestions, but I'm sure you all have your own solutions already (like sending someone eke or packing an Uzi).

1) Go at night, preferably after ten o'clock. The drawback with this is that many places seem to close their delis and meat counters at night, even if they're a 24-hour operation. There will, however, always be some good time to go; I've found that the herd's grazing hour (5-6 pm) is usually not too crowded.

2) Become a cannibal. This option will not enable you to avoid shopping entirely, however, as you still must purchase condiments and desserts.

3) Look mean. Dress in leather. Scream. Although an obvious solution Satanically, it is truly inspiring in its effectiveness.

4) When some idiot is blocking your way checking out the maxi-pads or whatever, intone "Excuse me." In as melodious a tone as possible, and if they ignore you, ram your cart into them. (See Satanic Rule of the Earth #11.)

5) Memorize the store, and buy the same things every week. It's the same fucking store. Get out of this Hellsake as quickly as you can. I am usually able to buy sixty dollars worth of groceries (a week's supply) in about fifteen minutes, if I do not bring my beloved. Bringing your beloved will at least double your time.

6) Put the heavy objects in your order on the conveyor belt first. I cannot emphasize this point strongly enough! The retard (and often enough, it really is a genuine retard) who bags your groceries will not be attentive to the various weights and masses of the elements of your purchase, and at least half of your stuff will otherwise be annihilated.

7) Estimate the cost of your order before you even go to the store. You will thus avoid personal embarrassment, and my wrath, should be held you.

And put your goddamned cart back where you got it! What is described above is the result of a consumer-oriented society, where demand for useless and unnecessary products is created by advertisement. How many different
I Hate Everyone

by Timothy Patrick Butler

1) People are ugly.
2) People are stupid.
3) People are lazy.
4) People are cruel to the wrong entities.
5) People are kind to the wrong entities.
6) People are gullible.
7) People always appreciate a little sarcasm.
8) People have bad taste.
9) People are irresponsible.
10) People have no sense of humor.
11) People insist upon being poorly educated.
12) People insist upon being ripped-off.
13) People insist upon paying high prices for bad food.
14) People smell.
15) People do not pay attention to what they are doing.
16) People insist upon living in close proximity to one another.
17) People assume that everyone is everyone else's friend.
18) People assume that relatives should naturally get along with each other.
19) People assume that "going out," getting drunk and having a five minute fuck once per week is not only necessary, but desirable.
20) People are afraid of anything that conflicts with their programming.
21) People assume that one's worth can be discerned by one's occupation.
22) People assume that the more widely a thing is done, the more correct it is.
23) People think that God, UFO's, psychics and horoscopes are real and important.
24) People lie in attempt to cloak their deficiencies.
25) People occupy too much space, use too much raw material, and impinge upon too much of my valuable time.

Why are there so few persons?

"Why is there so much trouble in this world?"
KING DIAMOND MAY BE FAMILIAR to some readers as a popular heavy metal musician with an unmistakable voice, bizarre stage shows and a series of concept albums with allegorical themes. But that's not all - he's also an unrepentant Satanist.

Emerging out of Denmark in the early Eighties with his previous band Mercyful Fate, he's had an undeniable influence on many arenas of modern metal. After two initial LPs, he began a rise to prominence with a second band, named simply after his stage persona, King Diamond. Numerous records (released on the Roadrunner label), world tours and interviews have appeared since then, all the while with King remaining sincere in his beliefs.

A pleasure to speak with, both cordial and articulate, he certainly doesn't fit into any stereotype of the typical rock star. The following interview took place via telephone in late 1992 from his homestead in Texas.

What kinds of music have influenced you over the years?

I listen to a lot of different music back home here, all kinds of music - classical too. I try to listen to a lot of different things, but when it comes to playing I only want one thing and that has to come straight from my heart. Exactly what I feel, that's what I want to do.

Can you describe what creates that?

I think the instruments we use - because we use a lot more than just guitar, bass and drums. We orchestrate a lot of things in King Diamond, even with just guitars, we tend to orchestrate them in what I guess is kind of a classical way - coloring it with a lot of different moods. And then you can really underline it with cellos, violins, harpichords, good old-fashioned Leslie organs, and that is what we're using quite a bit of in King Diamond.

I've always thought you can draw some comparisons with heavy metal and classical music.

Definitely. There are bands that are playing the basic three-chord songs, which can be nice to listen to, but for me to do something I need to satisfy myself and feel that I've gone a step further or that I'm covering a different area than what I've done before - and trying not to repeat myself and not take riffs that I've used before, which is unfortunately the case for some bands. So we really try to do something else. And also because we're so involved in trying to create different moods, we'll end up with songs on the album that that differ quite a bit from each other. A lot of different tempos - changing the tempo within a song is something that does a lot for me. With many bands you can start a metronome at the beginning of a song and it'll go the whole way through the song - no matter what, they don't change the tempo. And changing the tempo is really hard - you have to stop thinking and start thinking in a different way, which makes it hard to perform. That's satisfying for yourself, to pull that off.

So in writing is it still very instinctual, or more a conscious thought process?

It's what I feel, you know. Some parts of songs, like the major part, can be super simple, because that's the mood that feels right there. It doesn't need to be complex, that's not the idea. I don't sit down and think, I've got to come up with some complex riffs or otherwise this song won't work. If it works from feeling, then it works.

Is there any time of day when you prefer to write?
Well, it usually has a better atmosphere in the night, definitely. I do a lot of work is the day too, but I’m not dealing with an open window and the sun coming in — I couldn’t work like that! I pull the blinds and turn off all the lights...

How did you discover Satanism?

A long time back I had some really weird experiences with what I guess you would call “the occult,” or the other side, the powers of the unknown... which, there was no way of explaining it — there was nothing like mass-psychosis or my bullshit like that, it really happened. I’ve had a lot of these experiences but the first time was really weird, because I’d never experienced — and definitely not been aware — of anything like that before. It made me go to the library and get a lot of books about the occult, start reading about it. And whenever you talked about, or heard about, that word “Satan” it was: bad, negative, killing, slaughtering, being evil, evil, evil. And that’s probably the way most people see Satanism, they have no idea. They’ve based it all on what the Church has said in history and unfortunately quite a lot of bonds who are dealing with “Satanism” are actually dealing with Christian Satanism — it’s exactly the view that Christians would like people to have on Satanism.

I think it’s unfortunately just all that these kids know.

That’s true, exactly. And then one day in an occult bookstore I saw this book that L. Evy wrote and I thought, wow, I’ll see what this is like and I’ll give it a shot. Because I didn’t really know, apart from what had been written which was so damn negative. So I thought, I’ll just do it, I’ve been here the best way, from the source itself. So I read the book and thought, “Hey, this is the way I live my life — this is the way I feel inside!” It’s not only a new religion or anything like that, it was a lifestyle that I could relate to 500%. And it’s just nice to see your own views and thoughts in words, in a book. It comforts you in some way. And that is how I felt. Another thing I really like a lot if you’re given a big, open space for whatever you want to believe in when it comes to the other side, the afterlife, the beforelife, or whatever you want to believe in. Whatever you want, you can do what suits you best, without feeling you’re doing something bad or something wrong — which is not the case in most religions, where it’s like follow this or you’re out! We’re all different individuals and we all have our different views, even if it’s a simple thing like a car — we don’t all like a red car. Some like it red, some like it blue, and it’s the same with anything. That’s the main thing. You should also be allowed to have an individual choice, even when it comes to where you’re just thinking with about what might be later on, what happens when I die, why am I here. There are a lot of thoughts you have when you’re not even putting anything into action directly. You should definitely be allowed to have a free mind there, and whatever suits you best, you should believe in. Then of course, you are a certain way, and that comes out into your actions.

Christians would like to imagine everything is black and white, according to their own belief structures.

Yeah, and that’s what I really like here — it’s not like a dictatorship religion with “do this” or “do that.” It’s not even really described, when it comes to beliefs — because it’s up to you. If people could only accept each other for being each other and have different views, and then judge each other by personality, which I think we should. Then we’d have a much better world. That was very much what our last album, The Eye, was about — the mixture of power in religion, any kind of religion. Even though it’s (fictionally) written, it’s actually historically correct. It depicts a lot of stuff that was done in the name of Christ — horrific stuff.

Do you remember how long ago it was when you first discovered The Satanic Bible?

I think it must have been 1991.

And it had an immediate resonance?

Oh yeah, and you’ll see it reflected in our early lyrics with King Diamond and Mercyful Fate. I used the word Skon at that time, and i had a very specific meaning for me — not the one that other people had. So I was involved in misconceptions immediately, from the first thing. A song like “Satan’s Fall” from the Meliss album, for instance, it opens up with exactly this Christian view that I’m talking about, that I don’t like banal portraying. But there are only two lines in the whole song that are actually the essence of it, of the lyrics, and it says: Yeur demen ovcr. The song opens with “7 Satanic Hell preachers, bringing the blood of a newborn child” — exactly all the stuff I read that I was so pissed off about after I had finally found out what it was all really about. But then I say later on that if you really want to put something down — it doesn’t matter what it is, it doesn’t have to be Satanism or a religion — you should experience it first, or you should at least read about it from the source. You could say, like, a Pontiac Firebird doesn’t handle well — some people might say that, some might say the opposite. But how can you say it if you never drove one — just because you heard some jerk say it? You need to experience things yourself to be able to take a stand — you can’t just take everyone else’s word. Because they are individuals too, with their own little viewpoints... you have to be aware of that constantly. And that was brought out in this song, but it was covered up — was covered up too much in fact. And at that time, not many people knew about these things - it hadn’t been described at all to very many people what it was really about. So immediately when they heard the word Satan or Lucifer they were scared shiteless, hair standing on end everywhere, and "God, this guy’s evil!"

Well, "evil" is another one of those words that’s pretty open-ended.

Yeah I know it, and as well as I say, it’s all individual. It might be evil to somebody to kill a rat in an experiment, to see if we can come up with a drug that will save people. To someone it’s evil to kill that thing, but other people don’t take that view at all - they find it evil to see that opportunity to try and better the human race. It’s a matter of viewpoint, what’s good and what’s evil. Of course most of the time you have common sense guidelines, but in a lot of examples you can come up with these things where there is no black and white, it doesn’t work that way.

So would you define your own Satanism as extreme individualism?

Pretty much so, but also you recognize who you are, and you appreciate it. You try to get the most out of it, without feeling bad about it. There are so many things, and why should you feel bad about them, because what you’re doing is just natural human instinct? So what’s so bad about it?

We were made that way, that’s the way we came out. We have these human instincts and if we don’t go by them we won’t survive. It’s as simple as that. And those who are trying to tell people: "Hey, go by this book here and you’ll be saved forever." - you will not be saved! You’ll be the easiest victim of all.

If these people really followed Jesus’ commandments they’d be perpetually stuck on the bottom rung and at the back of the line.

We’d still be in the stone age! Fortunately it’s a minor part of the population who are like that. There are a lot of people who might consider themselves Christians but they don’t act it out like that, according to the book anyway. It’s only these preachers who are unfortunately able to get air time on TV; I watch that sometimes, just to get a cheap, good laugh you know - it’s amazing, the loss of good actors we have within the field! And again, I’m not sitting here trying to condemn anybody, not at all. I’m saying, if somebody is Christian and is getting something out of it, without hurting anybody, then stick to that belief. Great - though, I don’t want you on my team!

Were you ever influenced by the pagan religions of Scandinavia?

Of course you’re influenced by it and you bear about it - it’s deep within the culture of the whole country. The old Vikings, the castles you can go and visit. I’ve visited a lot of them and I’m very much into this stuff, we’ve got it all there. Definitely...

How did it come about that you met Dr. LaVey?

I ran into his daughter Zeena, in Los Angeles, it must have been in 1988 or something like that. She came to one of our shows, and of course I knew who LaVey was, but suddenly some of our crew guys came up and said, "There’s somebody from the Church outside who would like to get in and she says she’s Anton Szandor LaVey’s daughter." So I said, "Well, let her in, let’s see if it’s true." And yeah, it actually was. So she went back to the hotel with me and he knew of me and checked up on all our interviews and music and things like that. And one night we played in San Francisco and a couple of people from the Church came to the show and came up to me and said that he’d like to invite me to come by. And I said, "Wow, I’m not going to pass up that opportunity!"

It’s very moving to actually speak with him.

Definitely. And that made an impression for life, no doubt about it. Spending the night there, just feeling his presence, getting to know the charisma he has, the intelligence and the humor... It’s so far from what a lot of people probably imagine him as.

He’s a true gentleman.

Absolutely. And the letters I’ve received from him... I’ve been given the privilege of calling him whenever I feel like it, and I haven’t used it yet. I don’t want to misuse his hospitality. Some day I might really feel that I need to talk to him about things and then I’ll take up the opportunity.

Do you consider the music you’re playing to have an inherently Satanic content? For example, Dr. LaVey has certain music, especially old songs from the 30’s and 40’s, which he holds to be particularly powerful.

Well, of course that’s the music he grew up with, that was some of the input he got. And even still today I, by far, listen mostly to bands from the early 70’s. It’s just a fact. And I grew up with that stuff. But the main thing I think, if you want to label music Satanic, is you should look at the artist and see, does this stuff really come from the inner feelings? Is this person really letting out his true feelings into this stuff, or is it just a bunch of fake shit to make money? But labelling music is something I don’t like very much. A lot of people ask, “How would you label your music?” But I never label my music – I don’t say it’s death metal, or Satanic metal, or classical metal, or whatever. I don’t care. I write some music, with certain instruments, and this is the way it sounds. If you like it, buy it. If you don’t – too bad!

Do you think the fans of Mercyful Fate and King Diamond understand some of the ideas you’re putting into the music?

Well, I make pretty sure that nobody can come and say, “Hey – you are trying to influence people into doing this or doing that,” or “You want to convert people” and so on. No way. I raise a lot of questions, definitely. But I try not to give – it straight words – an answer of what I feel about it. You’ll never see me doing things like that. People have got to make up their own minds. And if people are not interested in getting anything deeper out of words on an album, that’s fine too. We are entertainers – we’re not priests. I have my way of life and of course that will influence my music and my lyrics. I put all my feelings into both.

What are your future plans?

Right at this moment we’ve started shopping deals for both King Diamond and Mercyful Fate [since the time of this conversation Mercyful Fate has signed with Metal Blade and will release an LP titled In the Shadows on June 22], and they’re definitely going to be two separate units, it’s only me that will be part of both bands, all the other members are different. And Mercyful Fate will pursue exactly where we left off, because we definitely left something undone, and that’s the feeling of all the old guys. The King Diamond side of it, the album has already been written, we need the deal and we’ll go into the studio and do it. It’s 11 songs, the title of the album will be the Spider’s Lullaby, and there are only three songs connected lyric-wise into a small trilogy, the rest is individual songs. The reason being that I have enough concepts with actually trying to put them and Conspiracy into book form, which I’m also doing. That’s a project that won’t be done for some time, but once it is I’ll have people into reading horror books read through it and get their input, and if they like it then I’ll start pursuing some big publishers and hopefully get the book out sometime. And if the book is a hit – there are a lot of “ifs” here, but you have to be positive – then that might make way for a movie, finally!
FROM THE PIT, Volumes 1 & 2, comprising eight issues published throughout 1991, 1992 and 1993. (Available in two compilations, one for each volume, at $10.00 each. Volume Three, at $12.00/$10.00 outside the U.S. Contact: Rev. Michael Rose, P.O. Box 1413, Decatur, AL 35602.) Michael Rose is a member of the Church of Satan, and his magazine reflects his own roots in true Satanism. His opinions are forthright, strong and delivered clearly, and I know you'll enjoy his publication. Each compilation is digested, computer- typed very neatly on grey paper with red covers. Volume One is 64 pages, Volume Two is 76 pages. From Volume One: "Bigotry," an article on "Why Charlie's Not Free," "The Fruits of Eugenarianism," and "Law and Order," as well as many other articles, "Lucifer's Library" (book reviews) and Satanic quotes. Volume Two has more good stuff on "Eugenics," "That Old Time Religion," the writings of Thomas Szasz, as well as an ever-growing review section and more.

Volume Three, #1, starts with a perceptive editorial examining the conflict of Christians in Waco, and includes an incisive statement concerning the differences between Satanists and Satanists, an examination of Objectivism, "Masfand vs. Fault," and an exploration of chandalas vs. aristocratic values. This issue is rounded out with a fine review section and Satanic quotes interspersed through the pages. The editor is Chris Bray, the proprietor of the Soremen's Apprentice, an excellent source of books and magical supplies based in England. This is a very worthwhile publication. First, there's a wonderful essay by Bray, expressing his fears and doubts about the future of religious freedom for occultists worldwide. "Golem's Gossip" is just that, goomy and mean but amusing to read. There are well-thought-out articles on astrology, visualization (how to get someone to spring for a drink in a bar), hypnosis and even an "Occult Problem Page." There's a piece entitled "Magic as a Refuge For Failures," along with much more. As a parting shot, the last article is "Laurel and Hardy Satanism," detailing the controversy surrounding Satan David Auzen and his participation in the Cook Report. A Geraldo-esque TV special broadcast several years ago in Britain and produced by fundamentalist Xians. The people behind this report courted UK occultists without telling them their real agenda, and as a result of the slanderous broadcast, Chris Bray's store was firebombed. John Freedman, the author of the article, further describes Michael Aquino's campaign against other UK Satanic groups. "Americans may fall for Aquino's self-righteous hypocritical double-speak," he contends, "but British Satanists are less gullible. The Temple of Set's UK representative is a dangerous media quidling and publicity junkie." This issue was sent to us along with an amusing button showing Michael Aquino wearing mouse ears.

THE HERETIC (one issue/month) $7.00 in New Zealand, $10.00 elsewhere for surface, $15.00 elsewhere for air. Make checks payable to Realm Publications, P.O. Box 38-262, Peterlee, Wellington, NZ.

K.R. Bolton is the editor/publisher here, and I think it's safe to assume he authors the contents unless otherwise noted; he is a Satanist. The masthead of The Heretic declares: "We champion the creative individual above the mass, the defiant above the submissive," October 1992, No. 2. This issue begins with a great lead article on Suddam Hussein and his efforts to create a new Babylon. There is apparently a historical basis for Hussein's role as the heir to Nebuchadnezzar, a heritage preceding Islam. Bolton describes the Iraqis' recent restanctification of the Ishtar Gate and Temple, Nebuchadnezzar's Palace, etc. I wish we could see more. There is a review section featuring Michael Mysyhan, a lengthy article on "War Steve," a pulsing piece by Amon Long of the GNA, entitled "The Demonic Occult 1982." He depicts very accurately the sort of pulsed-up intellectuals who haunt the occult community, those displaying "persecution, artificial, the 'I must preserve my own ego by doing down others' syndrome." But his depiction of the real occultist is scarcely any better, as he stresses hatred, depravity and the casting-aside of any quest for personal happiness (only on illusion, to Long) to achieve... something that is not clear. I know Long is no Christian, but on the surface this sounds Christian -- work, sacrifice, the unwillingness to accept Man as he is.

Also includes lots of news notes, some nice poetry, and a bit of folklore about the Huntress. Only 16 digests-sized pages, reduced photoscopic, but there’s a good deal here for the money. Definitely one of the better Satanist lines.

Issue #4, Jan./Feb/Mar 1993. The lead article details "The Rite of Iron Youth," and mentions Boyd Rice and Michael Moonman. Includes four pages of reviews, and an update on the BBS exposure of “anti- Satanists,” the Christian child abuse scare and its debunkers. The ONA article at this time around is clear and inspired, in "Satanism & Race," the author asserts correctly that "Satanism, as part of its sinister strategy, may encourage those forces/behaviors which express this type of imperium/Satanic goal." For instance, present day “extreme Right Wing movements,” In this, Satanists are being sinister — they are not expressing or supporting such views as "racism" for instance, because they believe them, but because they know those views may enflame their Satanic goals, in particular by countering the Nazarene sickness or spirit.” Wish some Satanists could see the ends of their noses to grasp this fact.

Boiton’s "Current Concerns" is here again, as well as another "Forlornite" piece, this time about Wayland the Smith. An article detailing "Australia’s Paneg Art" rounds out another fine issue.

Issue #8, April/May/June 1993. With an attractive new logo, this issue starts with an excellent, extensive article on the "Rebirth of the pagan Ethos" by Karsten O’Rourke. O’Rourke follows the story plot of the pagans as depicted from the Roman era through Wagner, Nietzsche, Von List, Von Liebelkra and the New Templars, concluding that "Pagan ideals emerged as a New Order which was only crowned down by W.W.II... As the 20th century closes, there’s still room for the same mythological forces. A new era is about to begin, now the world is ready to begin a new era."

Other articles include "Celtic Left Hand Path" and a piece on the origin of "SAINTAN" by Tarn Jantzen. The other extensive piece is on "The Strange Case of David Austin," a Mason in the Temple of Set and member of its Council of Nine. Bohon’s criticisms and exegesis of Austin are merciless. Austin’s responses are cryptic, obscure and often hilarious. As Bugs Bunny would say, "What a mannequin!!"

The usual reviews, news, poems, and editor Bohon took extra care to get some illustrations into this one.

Issue #5, July/August/September 1993. This gets off to a fine start documenting the Satanic activities and views of Albert Pike, Confederate Brigadier General. Next Yonder Michael Aquino’s reply to the previous issue’s Austin exposé along with Bohon’s reply. Articles on "Satanism & the Chibbino Myths," "Vlad Dracula," and more fun at the expense of TS/US (including cartoons) as well as the usual features complete another fine issue.

Also from Realist Publications be sure to exists "Temple of Set: Behind the Facade (NYC - $10, US - $5) which documents in detail the various attempts by TS/US to slander occult organizations and how it has blown up in their faces. Also of interest is The Dark Doctrine, the principal doctrinal text of O.C.L.H.? This 34 page booklet (NZ-$10, US-$15) covers the Satanic philosophy espoused by this organization and presents several original rituals based on various historically Satanic traditions.

BLOOD OF YGGGRASLE: A Pictorial Journey Through the Nine Norse Worlds ($8.00 from COWAN, PO Box 15, Alameda, CA 94501 USA. Postage $1.00 US, $2.00 foreign).

A curious and enchanting little volume of illustrations depicting characters and incidents from the Norse legends. Those involved in Norse and Roman magic will want this, as may any Wagner fans. The book itself is about 6½ x 9”, 48 heavy pages, clothbound in an antique-looking red. The old-fashioned cover printing is in gold.

When you open these "fals" (for so book covers once called when they were all handbound) you’ll find more red pages with black printing, hand-sewn into the heavy binding. The illustrations are good, for the most part, and the introduction emphasizes and encourages a tunving-away from the slave religion of Christianity and back to the rich traditions of our pagan ancestors. The publisher has recreated the look of magical old book you might find in a flea market and take home to wonder over.

KING OF INSTRUMENTS, INSTRUMENT OF KINGS by Doran Raganor ($5.00 from COWAN, PO Box 15, Alameda, CA 94503 USA. Postage: $1.00 US, $2.00 foreign).

Adapts a concept, but more than a pamphlet, produced with the same quality care for the beauty and perhaps an air of antiquity, as the volume mentioned above (BLOOD OF YGGGRASLE). Only (weber little red pages, bound into a leather-textured rotcoast, hand-sewn around red "reddyed." The same gold printing and lovely roman design grace the cover. This is the story of the theatre organ, that great soaring orchestra— itself that most of the generation has never been able to experience it is its native state, Ragnarok’s treatment covers the highlights, but it is not meant to be exhaustive, only an introductions pointing the way to more for those who are interested. Some nice illustrations and quality printing.

GRIEF Issue #1, March 1993 (full-sized, 48 pages, $5.00 per issue, $10.00 for 5 issues. c/o ALCI, P.O. Box 45231, Denver, CO 80248-45231). Michael Moonman is a Senior Editor here.

GRIEF tells us it’s "most mostly great stuff," and it’s true. Firstly, the format is professional and attractive, and it’s check-full of material. There’s an overview of the career of Bobbi, a Danish porn queen whose specialty was animals and whose early beauty has decayed rapidly. Bobbi’s fall from a fresh-cheeked young girl who loved animals (really — she ran her own farm to the broken-down whore with whose swaddled older male and devasting. One of my favorite pieces was an analysis of sorted meat product; I now feel justified in my lifelong devotion to it. But the highlight of the issue is the "Interview With a Bear," conducted by Michael Moonman and Shaun Partridge of the Partridge Family Temple — the reporters buy a homeless man a McDonald’s meal and get him to spill his guts about life on the street. According to him, the biggest problem is all those people who pretend to be homeless they’re just mean it up for everyone. A rather odd sexual encounter comprises "The Tender Chronicles," and there’s another excellent interview with film composer Danny Elfman, X.C. Dobbs contributes a personal experience on drugs the issue is round out with several pieces of strange fiction which I didn’t find particularly interesting, but the editors are promising more, by Paul DiFilippo and Marc Laidlaw, two SF writers of note.

ABRAAX # 17, 18, 19, 20, edided by James M. Martin ($5.00 each from PO Box 1219, Corpus Christi, TX 78403-1219). Billing itself as an "ocult quarterly," ABRAAX is mainly concerned with Thleena and Crowley, but is happy to stray into any area of 20th Century magic editor James Martin Meeks may be of interest to his readers. Articles from these issues include: "Music Magic," "Spy: Secret Societies & Occult Espionage," "The Rite of the Wheel," and in issue #9, a remembrance of Satanic poet Andre Soly written by Tani Jantsang.

Of possible interest to Satanism is a regular column by Diane Vera - the Miss Hathaway of Satanism. In her inaugural installment of "From the Darkside," Vera professes to seek historical references to Satanic religions prior to the founding of the Church of Satan in 1966 C.E. But when presented with the wealth of such material by the Jantsang/March cabal, she glosses over it quickly in her column in #7, preferring to spend the next seven pages on so-discussing 20 year old gossip about Michael Aquino and Anton LaVey that is boring and inaccurate. Vera has her own ad, "Satanism Without Delusions of Grandeur?" And Without Right-Wing Politics? It's interesting that Vera constantly professes her ignorance of the Satanic scene, then tries to sum it up in a couple of phrases like these: "I'm not qualified to judge them one way or the other." The word "spiritual" is almost unused when one "I have no way of knowing whose story is true," which only attest to her cluelessness. Presumably Jantsang/March's suggestions would have had her cracking the books for weeks, but instead she appeals, more than once, to the readership for their thoughts on the subjects. Why? For more gossip, hearsay, unfounded and undocumented assertions?

Vera further asserts that "there's no such thing as Satanic political philosophy." Perhaps. But there are certain implications to tenets like "responsibility of the responsible" and some of your unspoken three-folds. If this kind of power philosophy isn't what attracted Vera to Satanism, what did? Maybe she'd like to share her own feelings about Satan as freely as she discusses LaVey's.

Issue #19 sees the premiere of a magical advice column, "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," which should be of interest to beginners while #20 has a splendid article "Humanism and the Invisible War" which examines Dr. LaVey's influence on magick(s) and a perfect antidote to Vera's meanderings. ARRAS also improves with each issue, the last three moving on so laser-type setting even more interesting graphic art so don't hesitate to subscribe. This one's a keeper.

THE SWORD & SHIELD #1 (by the Knights of Satan, 12 pages, no price but $3.00 should do in P.O. Box #1137, Fiddlers Green Post Station, Ancaster Ontario, Canada L9G 4X1).

BALDER (July 1992 Issue, 32 disguised pages - free to members - editor Jason Bridgehead c/o O/C of the Juht of Balder, 60 Ellimbur Rd., Reading, Berks. RG1 5HY England).

The cover depicts a rather bucolic scene, ancient Greeks discussing a written document. The tone of Balder is equally gentle; while the articles advise us that the elite are at war with things-as-they-are, there is a spirit of community and concern for other members of "The Brotherhood." This magic is not overly Satan-inspired, although the contents reveal that these brothers do consider themselves Satanists - affiliated orders listed in the back include O.N.A., O.L.H.P., and the O.T.O.

There is a page of letters from members and a discussion of two major issues. Next comes a delightful article on Rontelli, a historical piece on the Berbers, "The Greatest Prize" (an exhortation by a recently-appointed Elder advocating a coming together of elite folk under Balder to battle the Xian scourge), "The Ethos of Warrior" part 18 lays it all down, stressing respect, "Conquor, Destroy, Create" by the O.N.A.'s Anton Long, advocating the destruction of the mediocrity breeding powers and an equation for a new society - thought he seems to think happiness and comfort are illusions (perhaps for him they are), and finally a discussion of the swastika and the Thule Society.

SADANSM – A Basic Introduction for Perspective Adherents, under the auspices of the Order of Nine Angles (Thornpost Press, P.O. Box 700, Stewartby, Beds, England (no price). Its $5.00 US cash, $25.00 if paying by US check, 1 f in the UK).

This is digest-sized, cleverness, about 15 pages typewriter. It's an excellent introduction to what the O.N.A.'s all about, if you've been reading their work elsewhere and would like a handle on it. The author claims he has an "intimate of being of the Grand Master representing traditional Satanism." The O.N.A. veers from the Church of Satan in several ways. Firstly, they stress the Satanic path as one that is difficult and fraught with adversity. No one's denying that life can throw you some curves and that you're usually better off when you learn to deal with them. But no Satanist I know seeks pain or the path of greatest resistance; certainly no animal would. O.N.A. also stresses amorality for Satanists, and I agree – but why then do they say "there is also evil evil?" Is the judging of something as "evil" not a subjective judgement based on some moral code? The O.N.A. also stresses that a Satanist "desires to evolve...to fulfill the potential of existence, of godhead/divinity latent within them [sic]." Once again, a man is not good enough as he is he's not permitted to accept himself until he's gone on some journey to fulfillment. To me, this is moving in exactly the wrong direction: most people's biggest problems stem from their inability to live the truth of their flesh, to accept themselves as the animals they are. This striving toward Divinity, is Christian in nature.

LIVE! (seventeen pages, typewriter type printer sideways in a digestsized format, $3.00 from P.O. Box 101, St. Boniface Post Station, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada R2H 3B4).

The cover is of a laughing young man lounging on a mussed-up bed in someone's attic bedroom; there's a cute I'll devil cartoon in one corner (logo of the Order of Dionysius/Satana of which this is an affiliating publication). Issue #1, January 1993, articles include dealing with the "Age of Consent," and another on "The Oppression of Youth." Sandwiched between these are little pearls of wisdom from the editor whose views on other issues are usually in line with true Satanic principles as put forth in The Satanic Bible. A little pricey for 16 pages, but it's printed very neatly and attractively, and the editor writes well. Issue #3, April 1993, begins with a rather obtuse, four-page explanation that their "cover uyish" is Billy Bob, and he personifies some principle important to the editor. "Youthfulness (and sexuality) is certainly a theme in this little publication; the editorial tells us that "visiting locations where younger guys or gals hang out is obviously essential but not that difficult. You, as the seeker, do not have to be a Boy Scout troop leader, or a Big Brother or Sister, or a Roman Catholic priest or nun, or a school teacher, or the like, though you have a head start if you are." The article "Hypocrisy in Society"
OFFICIAL JOURNAL of the ABRAXAS FOUNDATION

Enter a brave new world of Social Darwinism, Primal Law, Returgent Atavism, Blood Mysticism, and much more. At last there is a newspaper wholly devoted to exploiting the darkest aspects of man and nature—with an emphasis on how to integrate them into your life and harvest their power as your own.

THE PREMIER ISSUE FEATURES:

NATURE'S ETERNAL FASCISM
An inquiry into the relationship between natural law, violence, and inequality.

LONG-LIVE DEATH!
Insightful and inspirational observations extolling the virtues of destructive force.

ABRAXAS SPEAKS
A stirring introduction to the Abraxas Foundation's weltanschauung.

GUSTAVE LEBON: HIS WIT AND WISDOM
LeBon is universally hailed as the father of social psychology, but has been virtually disowned by academia due to his decidedly anti-egalitarian slant. His philosophy is beautifully encapsulated for our readers in a series of hard-hitting aphorisms.

AND A WHOLE LOT MORE...
More anti-humanitarian philosophy and Social Darwinist gnostics from history’s most notorious figures—past, present, and future.

Here’s the vital information you need, untainted by liberal humanist (aka Judeo-Christian) bias. If you’re ready to take one giant step beyond good v evil, WAKE is the journal for you!

$2 ppd per copy/$3 overseas airmail

PRE-ORDERS NOW BEING ACCEPTED

TOTAL WAR (Video)
A video document of the last concert of NOV's Japan tour, recorded live in Osaka. 30 exciting minutes of Social Darwinism, manor music, speeches, and songs, a must for your video library.

$19.69 plus $3 postage/$6 postage for overseas airmail

ABRAXAS ON THE AIR (Cassette Tape)
Lots of laughs as a Foundation spokesman takes on the host of one of the country’s most popular Christian talk radio programs. Two hours of content and controversy.

$5 ppd / $7 ppo overseas airmail

COMING SOON
The Abraxas Foundation television transmission. Pre-production has already begun on this Abraxas Foundation cable T.V. program. Qualified individuals are invited to submit inquiries regarding how to sponsor his program in your area and have it broadcast via public access cable.

Make checks and money orders payable to WAKE SERVICES. Send all communications to:

THE ABRAXAS FOUNDATION P.O. BOX 300081 DENVER, CO 80203 USA
also bears this out, as it bemoans society's two-faced approach to youth, stemming its beauty but forbidding its freedom. The best piece is probably "The Human Animal," a lightweight analysis of the progressively greater repression of our instincts in civilized countries. Neatly done, clear and readable, but thin.

REVENNAOT MAGAZINE, Issues 3, 4, 5, 6 edited by Joe Auerich ($4.00 USA, $5.00 elsewhere from F&O, Box 711, Lakewood, OH 44107).

Thirty pages, digest-sized, typewriter typeset, a little difficult to read (a new typewriter is called for, I believe). This publication, edited by the founder of the Order of Dionysia/Sabation, has a similar focus to that of LUVY! teen freedom, sexual freedom in particular is advocated. In issue #3 topics covered include "Fire Will vs. God's Will," "Evolution Theory Isn't Evil," "Drunks Are Not Satanists," and "Future Sex." Issue #4 includes a poem about a young man and his 9-year-old girlfriend, "Self-sacrifice/What For?", and "Let Teens Vote," Issue #5 runs the gamut from "Myths: Psychotherapy and Mental Illness," and "The Thrashing Gym 'teacher,'" to Demo reviews, Issue #6 includes youth advocate poetry, "Bowling Alley Bulfinh," Death Metal Reviews and a commentary on accusations that their order advocates paedophilia. Each issue contains "Lilith Lustlove's Penauls" for those seeking contact. Mr. Auerich explores areas of Satanism and his particular slant on the masculinity and right to freedom of adolescents as well as their ability to "rejuvenate" older individuals through interaction.

CALL OF THE RAGE: An Epic Poem by Kenneth Lloyd Anderson ($3.00 from White Temple Books, P.O. Box 452, Hastings, MN 55033).

A tidy 4" x 7" pamphlet bound in red, with 26 professionally-typeset pages inside. Anderson talks, in free verse, about what he views as the roots of the White race's downfall, what's keeping it down, and how Whites must lift themselves up again. One might expect such a "racist" (Anderson prefers the term "racialisism") to be illettrite and shallow, but this poem is poignant and moving. "This is still Nietzsche's age," he tells us. "We have run away from what's necessary...whole men know/That hate is as necessary as love."

THEMEDIX, 1993, a production of the Ordo Mysterium Baephe-metis, printed in a limited print run of 56 copies, available only by the selection of Grand Maitre MegAstron and Grand Master Megalion.

Digest-sized, thirty-five pages with the ubiquitous red cover. Well-written essays concerning the number of wisdom, "naga," the Serpent, chivalry in the occult world, the Major Greek Gods, the powers of the "True Sell," "coven, Sepsrom and Throns," and computers. Not without its own wry humor; finishes with something called "The Emerald Tablets." If this is your thing, these people seem very knowledgeable but with their feet on the ground; contact them at P.O. Box 156, W. Nottingham, NH 03291-0156, USA.

ONSPOUGHT, Vol. 4, no. 1, edited by Dragom Undomiel ($5.00 from the Luciferian Light Group, P.O. Box 7207, Tampa, FL 33627).

The LLG is a White Power group that calls itself Satanic; they use Satanic symbols and say that the Aryan peoples are the true children of Satan." This issue contains a ritual of "Gratitude/Honor Before Satan," some charts of "magical" elements and correspondences, and a lengthy section of reprinted new articles titled "Dataline: Hell - A Special Report from Hell's Newsroom." Nice use of graphics here. There are extensive listings and ads of other Satanist groups and publications, as well as an explanation of the "United Churches," an attempt to put together several of the self-proclaimed Satanic groups operating right now. This may be already defunct, as this issue was followed up by a bulletin detailing the LLG's split from Embasat. An attractive, neat publication but not much "meat."

THE NEW JACKAL, Vol. 1, Embassy of Lucifer, Chad Ian Miller, presiding, P.O. Box 998, Swarow, BC, V1T 1W0, Canada. (No price given, try $5.00). Fifteen pages of 8.5" x 11" paper, covered front and back with poorly photocopied, single space dot matrix output.)

Serian Chad starts out by preaching to the converted about how bad Xristianity is. Then he goes into a long description of the Embasat and its degree system, which must be a real degree system because you get to change the color of your robes and belts a lot. Next a discussion of "Satanic Child Molestation and Animal Sacrifice" which barely mentions these topics although the article is six pages in length. Then a treatise about math and magic which Pythagoras would spit upon, followed by a piece on time which is actually about "Creation." Concludes with a very extended dictionary of Demonic. Entire contents by Chad.

It was reported to us that Chad has again changed horses and formed an Xian church, but this is unverified. However, this "wine may be unavailable for that reason - inquist.

LUCIFER RISING #1, yet another new publication by Chad Ian Miller, who changes his projects (and his mind) like other people change their shoes, which they seem, ($6.00 from the Embassy of Lucifer, P.O. Box 998, Swarow, BC V1T 2W0, Canada).

"Typewriter-typset on goldendor paper and stapled in one corner; the cover is the god Baphomet, an off-pressed piece of artwork. There's about eight pages of Chad outlining his perspectives on the Satanic scene plus the rules and regulations for his own, much better than new organization. Then there's the reprinting of a sample of ONSPOUGHT, the publication of the Luciferian Light Group (separate from Chad's) and finally the reprinting of some pages from 'The King in White Bone' (perhaps, Chad's choice of paper). Chad claims to be providing a neutral forum for all Satanists, via this publication and his Embassy of Lucifer and Church of Lucifer. However, he has been a member of the Temple of Set for about eight months, and immediately launches into the splashy story of the "collapse of the Church of Satan" and how Ammon Ra Vel "plagiarized" [sic] The Satanic Bible. How neutral does that sound to you? This is warmed-over non-information plus more blathering from Chad; your six bucks would be better spent elsewhere.

ECLECTIC MAGE JOURNAL, Issue #0, Jan/Feb 1993, edited by H.J. Moyry, Jr. aka Zephyr ($3.00 from F&O, Box 6911, Portland, OR 97212).

Very perky layout with interesting use of scanned graphics, full-sized with eighteen pages. EMP's subtitle is "Achieving Gods Through a Diverse System of Magic" Poetry is sandwiched between articles on witchcraft, color magic, etc. This issue is concerned with Satan: "Is He Really a Bad Guy?" The authors demonstrate sympathy for the Devil even if their sources in modern Satanism are more than a bit myopic. We've learned that the editor has become enamored of Aquino's world view so take that into consideration should you have cause to deal with this person.
The Archives of Aesthetic Nihilism

Extensive archival research materials on: Manson, Ozymandias, De Oedipus.

To order 100-page illustrated catalog with color cover send $6.00 U.S.

$12.00 foreign: U.S. Cash, Stamps, Postal Money Orders Only! No Checks!

To: Aes-Nihil Prod. 7210 Jordan Av. #B-41, Canoga Park, Ca. 91303, U.S.A.

818-905-4635
INCREDIBLY STRANGE MUSIC VOL.
I, edited by V. Vale and Andrea Duro

A series of interviews with record collectors and recording artists, focusing on music from the 50's and 60's. The music they talk about is largely rockabilly and trash bikers, and the emphasis is on what middle class American culture has left behind, deemed "tacky" or "bad." And some of it is in bad; how good could a bunch of songs by Rodney Allen Rippy be? Some of these collectors are interested in the obscurity of the recordings themselves, while others genuinely enjoy the sounds, all seen a little disappointed that many others are beginning to discover their finds and are driving up the flea market prices. However, if the underground had never embraced Martin Denny, there wouldn't be the wonderful Erotika releases on CD and I wouldn't have been able to enjoy it. The interview with Denny is good, as are the reproductions of album covers throughout the volume.

What interested meocumentally about the book, was the principle of cultural scavenging, roaming through what the status quo has left behind, published in the real garage, the truly magical recordings then returning to your fair to enjoy that magic, to send those vibes out into the ether. You don't have to like these people or their music to learn something about the power of getting off the cultural beaten track. As the editors say in their introduction, "These records become more than a consumeristic product; they become an expression of the outside-in vision and express an alternate aesthetic philosophy."

The fact that Juno and Vale have termed this "Volume One," gives them an out, I suppose, to explain the glaring omissions of musical Preservationists like Antoine LaNey, Tiny Tim, Roy Orbison and even Dr. Demento, the latter whose radio show drove me out into the garage sales for 78's when I was only fifteen. I hope Volume Two is a little more adventurous.

ANSWER ME! Issue 3, edited by Jim Goad (Goad to Hell Ent., 408 N. Calveria Blvd, #666, Hollywood, CA 90028. $5.00 first class, $4.00 chuse.

Long awaited, but worth the wait. Jim and Debbie have hit their stride with this one, with full color Nazi cover and 131 pages of beautifully-designed mayhem. Many artists have contributed cartoons and drawings, including John Wayne Gacy, Oris "oof, Mark David Chapman and Charles Manson, so if you're a serious collector, get out your checkbook. Jim does another excellent "encyclopedia," this time about unique and notorious suicides - photos abound. Debbie's tirades are right on the money; particularly touching is "I Hate Being a Jew," wherein the rails against her psychological heritage of being a penny-pushing pessimist. I got the biggest kick of all, though, from Jim's article on guns. Goad's poison pen was never sharper, and after reading this to myself I read it aloud to others and we laughed until the tears ran. Combining truth with masterful wit and sarcasm, Jim tells one Man's Gun Story, and includes devastating pro-gun quotes from our founding fathers.

Also included are interviews with Boyd Rice, Al Sharpton, the Underdog Lady, the Kid of Wimsey High, and Debbie contributes a couple of phony phone calls to Dr. Kevorkian and a suicide prevention hotline. Debbie is great at these things; the call to Kevorkian is chilling.

What's really gonna get Answer Me! #3 on America's shit list, however, is Adam Parfrey's "Peculiar Park." This piece pieces up the notion that director Steven Spielberg has "short eyes," and analyzes his past film efforts as expressions of this peculiarity. Cartoonist Coop supplies the accompanying artwork, which shows Spielberg wielding a "hook" at a bare-breasted Peter Pan.

You might find this issue on a newstand somewhere, or you can order it from See/See. I recommend you send out immediately and get it right from the Goads own little hands. You need Answer Me!, the misanthrope's balm for cultural ennui.

PANTY LINE FEVER #4, edited by Rick Hall
($4.00 from PLS; 234 E. 7th St, #1FE, New York, NY 10009 - age statement must accompany order. make/check/m.o. payable to Rick S. Hall).

The Bizarre Bulletin of Sex, Film and Intellectual Smugness, PLS is a perky little mag that never fails to satisfy. This time around, an interview with underground comic artist Daniel Clowes, a visit to a Manhattan S&M parlor, a critique of Ken Russell's film The Devils by Ivan Lerner,Reid's Radding's column "The Final Judgement," lovely lasses with half-clad asses, and more.

EVIL: The Newsletter For True Crime Book Fanatics edited by Dan Kelly ($1.00 from P.O. Box 476644, Chicago, IL 60647). I guess the tag line says it all; I know there are such fans in our readership. Editor Kelly gets lots of reviews of true crime books into a slim but well-laid-out and typset format. This might be the place for you to trade info on new or old books and find out what clinkers to avoid on the bookstalls.

VAMPIRES ANONYMOUS, Winter and Summer 1993, edited by Anners ($5.00 from P.O. Box 803, Langhorne, PA, 19047).

Each issue is about 20 pages of manuscript/typewriter/serialization, dealing with vampires and vampiric magic. The magazine is produced by the Order of Xanania, "an Elitist Society for Thelemic Heathens of all persuasions, writers, artists, vampires, horror and science fiction fans." The poetry was in the usual romantic, Dark Shadow-esque vein, and I particularly liked the full-page, black and white sigils which would make nice tattoos.

QUEST REVIEWS

William Everson, Reviewer.

If you're looking for an excellent survey of general horror and its interaction with our culture from the turn of the century to modern chillers like Silence of the Lambs, this is the book for you. Skal dredges up authors and connections from the early days of Dracula, Frankenstein and the Mummy that other writers have neglected. He makes quite a point of the Nazi fascination with wolves and the contemporary American rage of Wolfmen and Cat people movies. From there, he moves deftly through Entertainment Comics vs. Dr. Frederic Werthman, Malia Nurmi as the original "doom, gloom and va-voom" TV hostess, and the Japanese 50's Godzilla type screamers which, in Skal's analysis, "put a face on the Bomb."

The book opens with a still from Franka, setting a tone throughout the book of Americans horror as sideshow. Skal states that "the motion picture itself had begun its career as a sideshow attraction, a curiosity at the fringes of mainstream entertainment."

He credits one man, Tod Browning, with setting the tone with his productions of Dracula and Franka - a carnival Barker's tone
Devilish Merchandise for Christian Hating, Occult Fascist, Elitists!

Front Design

God Is Dead

Back Design

Hail Victory

1993

Debut Album

CD & Cassette
JL America, U.S. Release
(Not Turbo Music)

Merchandise Order Form

T-Shirts (White on Black)
L or XL
$13.00 U.S., $17.00 Foreign Acheron
Rites of The Black Mass
Cassette $13.00 U.S., $15.00 Foreign
CD $17.00 U.S., $20.00 Foreign
Amount Enclosed
Item(s) Requested

T-Shirt Size(s)

All Checks and Money orders are made out to Vincent Crowley, Postage and Handling is Included.

Send To - Acheron, Order Of The Evil Eye
P.O. Box 272929, Tampa, Fl. 33688, U.S.A.
that naturally grew from his background in carnivals and vaudeville. Though Skal does a thorough job of showing the influence of Freuds, its too bad he hadn't contacted Anita LaVey to fill in some gaps regarding its re-release in the late 50's, which LaVey was responsible for.

Skel marks 1931 as the birth of the horror film, with the release of Frankenstein and Dracula and neatly does the book by paralleling the release of modern versions in 1991: "Ressurect & Silence of the Lambs. Throughout this book, he ties our compulsion toward horror to events dominating the world's consciousness at the time war, economic collapse, politics and public witch-hunts. One particularly pertinent summons quote comes from anti-feminist filmmaker Camille Paglia: "Horror films are rituals of pagan worship. There Western man obsessively confronts what Christianity has never been able to bury or explain away." Skal's book shows that as long as Man continues his lurching toward 'civilization,' there will always be a place for nightmares.

FRIGHTEN THE HORSES, edited by Mark Pritchard (Heat Seeking Publishing, 41 Suter St. #108, San Francisco, CA 94104. $5.00 for sample issue, $18.00 for four-issue subscription).

Jeffrey Debo, Reviewer:

Professional-quality quarterly dedicated to the cutting edge of sexuality, especially in its more unorthodox variants. bondage, fetishism, sadomasochism, gay/bi-- whatever you're into, you'll find it here. Both erotic fantasy fiction and serious articles are featured, along with reviews and a news roundup from the front lines of the depressingly endless battle for sexual freedom against life-hating religious fanatics. A leftist political undercurrent sometimes intrudes, but in the main these people skewer the "progressive" P.C. sacred cows as eagerly as those of Christian "traditional family values" -- article topics have included the menace of overpopulation, the biological/evolutionary roots of human behavior, an expose of the myth that AIDS threatens U.S. heterosexuals, and a deliciously ruthless piece on revenge against rapists. It's rough, raw, and gritty, not sweetness-and-light romanticism; a pleasure-loving, life-affirming philosophy is evident throughout. Highly recommended.

CHRISTIAN CHILD ABUSE: The Reality (42 pages, digest-sized, $10.00 from Realist Publications, P.O. Box 38-262, Penrose, Wellington, New Zealand).

Jeffrey Debo, reviewer:

After reading this item, you'll be enraged on two counts: first on behalf of all the children molested by the perverts who seem to infest the clergy of almost every branch of Christianity, and second, to the colonial nerve of those who have been spreading the "Satanic ritual abuse" myths while the malady of their holy men's depravities isn't even on their fantasies about us!

The text analyzes why Christianity is a breeding ground for pedophilia (a religion which demands repression of normal sexual urges, notably Catholicism with its celibate clergy, just bottles up those urges until they explode in some twisted new form) and discreet a few celebrated cases such as the Mt. Cashel Catholic Orphanage in Canada. The rest is accounts culled from news media around the world, in which countless men of God seem almost to vie with one another to see who can heap the worst abuse on any minor in reach. A New Orleans priest carries off the trophy with allegations that he made his dog take part in the molesting sessions (which were sometimes done at gunpoint), accumulated a 160-hour hardcore video library of his acts, and supplied a kiddie-porn magazine with photos of a retarded youth he had victimized.

Worst of all is how, in case after case, higher church authorities actively shield molesters. Parents outraged at some clergyman's depredations are told to exercise (yes, you guessed it) the Christian virtue of forgiveness, while the offender is transferred out of trouble and into a new locality where he is unknown and where fresh, unsuspecting victims await.

Now that even the mainstream media are focusing increased attention on this subject, it's clear that our New Zealand brethren have found a potent issue to wield against the sick Nazarene cult bowelng our civilization.

Jeffrey Debo, reviewer:

Originally written over a century ago and now newly republished, this formidable work (the product of thirty years of research) brings to life the story of Satanism from the birth of the Middle Ages to the Renaissance, in elegant and stately yet easily-devoured prose. This is history as epic rather than dry chronicle, a tapestry of words more moving and revealing than a thousand clinical photographs.

Never save perhaps in the best of Twain, have the utter majesty and scale and degradation of medieval life been made so vivid. Micheler shows how medieval man's hopelessness and desperation, born of a thousand torments raining down upon him by Church and State in the name of God, drove him to seek the aid of the Rebel who was that God's chief adversary -- and who, alone of the delities available to him, would sanction his own rebelliousness against the vile abominations of his masters, rather than telling him to turn the other cheek.

Medieval Satanism took a thousand forms, from the dumb mass' fearful ritual to old women who had managed to preserve the old pharmacual knowledge demonstrated and forgotten by the Church, to the invocation of forbidden arts by the victimized to better their lot and strike back against their oppressors, to the Dionysian abandon of the "Sabbaths" and the solemn blasphemies of the Black Mass. Medieval Satanism was widespread and it was real -- the similarity of accounts from widely separated lands and eras affirms this. The term Satanism (rather than Devil worship) is appropriately used here, since with rare exceptions the witches and sorcerers of those days saw Satan as an ally and fellow foe of tyranny and injustice, not as a stern and demanding master like Jehovah.

Micheler clearly wrote with no concern about how his prurient and-progressive contemporaries would react to the results of his research. He pulls no punches in revealing -- even with some sympathy -- the frequency of incestuous practices in the Middle Ages, and the intimate links between incest and Satanism in every era. He emphasizes the fully equal and sometimes even pre-eminent role of women in Satanism, from the lone witch to the "Sabbath" priestess, in a day when Christianity's byword was still malus tacet as a rule. But interestingly, though medieval witchcraft did indeed preserve many pagan practices, he finds therein no trace of any other prehistoric goddess-worship -- which sharply makes the repudiation of this work something of an unconvenient fact among certain groups who have long made a practice of beefing up their own rather wan mythology by ripping-off what turns out to be our heritage after all.
But for us, who seek to reclaim this heritage, it is essential reading. Do not read with all its drama and tragedy shining through.

I cannot close this review without one quote from Michlell's splendid preface: "Knowing both Nazism and Christianity can be reconciled in modern times, he proclaims:"

"In this one science you can name that was not originally a revolt against authority. There is only one way to reconcile the two spirits and unite the two churches. This is to demolish the one, the one which, from its earliest beginnings, was declared sinful and damnable. Let us destroy it, if we can. All the sciences of nature, demolish the observatory, the museum, the botanical garden, the school of medicine, every library of modern books. Let us burn our legal enactments and our codes. Let us go back to the Canon Laws. These novels, one and all, were Satanic; to progress ever more but was his guilty work... How to expiate all this? -- will Satan undo this great work? Never for it rests on three eternal foundations-stones, -- Reason, Right, and Nature."

This man was one of us in spirit. Even a century later, his book should be read.

GLENN DANZIG, musician and member of the bands Samhain, Misfits and DANZIG. (Check larger music stores for albums.)

Ken Gage, reviewer

BOOMASTIC MUSIC IS HERE! In a market so glutted with mediocrity, the commercial release of Glenn Danzig's Black Aria is a true landmark. Black Aria's darkly powerful and secessionist sound keeps the album from being categorized with Neo-Classical or New Age music; yet this is no rock album. In fact, this may only be an experimental departure for the musician, whose three DANZIG albums are often described as a blend of R&B and melodious heavy metal. In job titles, the booker meets Black Sabbath. Although his early years with Samhain and the Misfits were a punk-rock legend, they can't hold a black candle to DANZIG or his latest -- lend an ear to Black Aria. I think you'll discover that your only regret is the album is far too short.

MINISTRY, a unique musical group. (Check any large music store.)

Ken Gage, reviewer

If you've been haunting music stores for a sound that meets His Satanic Majesty's measure, then MINISTRY has arrived! Although the band has been extant since the early 80's, its visceral distantly industrial/cyberfly sound didn't blossom until the 1990 release of Land of Rape and Honey. Their cyberfly, you pondered -- a combination of bluegrass and thrash! Now, don't be frightened by MINISTRY's semi-commercial viability. (And don't give me any sahlother-than-thou lip about melody either.) -- I'm talking about an overall Devilish musicianship!

Sporting Ol' Nick's pentagram etched on his shoulders, lead vocalist Rossjourney gloriously delivers mainstream religion: "It's one giant, fake life-insurance policy. Pay us money now, we'll promise you'll have a good afterlife." So they pay your money and happily go on their own merry little way, making sacrifices on the promise of a better afterlife. Do you know anyone who's come back and complained about their policy? -- it's the biggest insurance scam ever invented. Nothing new to our ears.

MINISTRY's bassist, Paul Barker, offers his own apoplectic evokship in punctuation to Journey's "Sw, if you're gonna sin", says Barker, "I'm baldly. Because, if you believe, you're gonna have to do something in the long run to make up for it." If you know what he's saying, give the band a listen. But if you don't appreciate Psythic TV, Godflesh, or Frong, this won't be your cup of tea either.

TERRA-SHOCK The Art of Impact Demo tape. Contact Black Mosaic Management, PO Box 419, Rockland, ME 04841.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

Satanism has greatly influenced the field of heavy metal, from surface imagery to deeper philosophical explorations of Satanist principles. This tape is a fine example of the latter, with well-crafted music that attempts to create an invisible war against Darwinian thinking, and living apart from the herd. The five songs herein are professionally performed and well recorded. Under Stefan Blaczer's able hand, this demo is a strong start from a band that will certainly be heard from in the near future.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

Here at last is a book exploring the subject of heavy metal music without the usual moralistic condemnation or plain condemnation so prevalent in other works to touch the subject. Walter is a musician (he's even played with metal bands) and gives a detailed musical analysis whose complexity, and links to such past virtuosic styles as baroque music, might surprise many. Also explored are the sociological factors which have made this such a potent genre in recent years. The author has some history and confines his work to the more popular and obvious musicians, thus avoiding the more obscure androgynes and their symbolism and lyrics. Satanism as a motivating philosophy is not part of this book, but the author demurralizes arguments against heavy metal made by Carl Funk in his "Aesthetic Positivist", Painted Black. This book will be an eye-opener and a great foundation for future works to take this musical genre seriously.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

This graphically beautiful "zine" covers the alternative music scene with a social Darwinian slant. Featured here are interviews with Michael Myrnahan (Blood Axis), Swallowdown Reincarnation, Republic, Fire & Bolt, and Cthulhu Records. If you can read French and like this style of music, get it.

BRIMSTONE PRESS #1, Spring XXVIII A.S., edited by Earl Hammond (394 East Clear, Cabot, AR 72023-9666 USA, 1993, 35 pages, photocopied, 8.5" x 11", side-stapled).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

This is a new Death Metal "zine" that features many reviews and interviews with Pale Unearthed, Heads of Filth, Banished, Impetigo, Acheron, Boneyard Press, Cremator Death, Living Sacrifice, and Peter Gilmore. A good start for Mr. Hammond. No price listed but $4.00 should get you a copy.

D.B.N. Magazine #10, ($2.50 from PO Box 3547, Lantana, FL 33465-3547), 40 pages, 8.5" x 11" on newsprint.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

Billed as "Your source for subversive entertainment," this zine features music reviews and has interviews with such luminaries as G.G. Allin, Alice Donut, White Zombie, and Forced Entry. Has some fine comic art, especially the cover image of Drew by Eddie Garcia.

SECOND'S, (Various issues, $2.95, on newsstands everywhere)

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

Under the capable hands of managing editor George Petros (of EC's fame) this rotoscop magazine has broken ground in their willingness to interview not only the usual bands being promoted for exposure, but "fringer" folk such as Poothis and Laffitch, as well as pioneers like Wendy Carlos and Timothy Leary. At this rate, maybe Norman Connors will be next! They even criticized Decius's claim to being Satanid!

EXPLODING HEARTS EXPLODING STARS, The Satirical Art & Propaganda of George Petros ($11.95 from Norman Gessert, 1148 W. 23rd St., New York, NY 10011, 1993; 36 pages, 11 x 14 x paperback).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

This overwrought compendium of black and white art clearly demonstrates Petros's mastery of the form of narrative graphic propaganda. Piece herein skater PC concepts of racism, sexuality, politics, aesthetics and the philosophies that underlie these topics. The cartoonist's iconoclastic image is less successful, however, due to the inherent conflict between the two. Petros challenges his viewers to come to terms with elements of reality that can only be ignored at the peril of the perceiver.

SIEGE, The Collected Writings of James Mason edited and introduced by Michael M. Jenkins (Storm Books, P.O. Box 18029, Denver, CO 80211 U.S.A., 1993; 434 pages, $60, paperback).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

This book is a monumental achievement. Editor Jenkins took great care to assemble Mason's writings, which had been published in his newsletter SIEGE from 1980-1986, into a coherent presentation that shows Mason's thinking on his National Socialist odyssey, from an explorer picking up his predecessors to the sage with wisdom gained from writing to make an effective revolutionary movement in the exacting arena of reality. Mason is most certainly a political extremist, but dear reader, as a Satanist you are also an extremist in the realm of religion and philosophy. This book offers great insights into the progression and evolution of an extremism movement here in the US. I found remarkable parallels between the types of individuals Mason encountered and his field to those that I have experienced in the "Satanic zone."

Even amongst his "peers" Mason became a loser as he comprehended the meaning behind the deeds attributed to Charles Manson, and thus founded Universal Order, a concept very much akin to the Satanic view of Man's place in the cosmos. If you are a Satanist and have not

Excerpted from the book mentioned above.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

Here's an odd little number, a horror novel in which several of the protagonists are Satanists, from Prohemon Faust - ex- kop and founder of a Satanist Church, Cal HUDSOOR - worshipper of Satan who is working on a symphony comprised of samples of voices of the victims of his brutal and graphically described tortures, and Terr - dabbling with the Children of Belial. Savage has been included all the sorts of Satanism claimed to exist by the Chisrians, but he attempts a partially sympathetic portrait of Faust as a generic, if masochistic, Satanist. This novel is the stuff of "B" movies, but is entertainingly written. I was disappointed in the lack of pursuit of the idea of the "scream symphony" beyond its mere mention and the change of attitude wrought in Faust by the novel's end, but that is to be expected of the author as a practitioner of Chaos magic. A fun read to fill your spare time.

HALF DRESSED, SHE OBEYED by Deborah Ryder (Divine Press, P.O. Box 108, Stockport, Cheshire, SK1 4QJ, England, 1993; 185 pages, $15.95, trade paperback).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer
This volume of S&M erotic fiction is well illustrated by Trevor Brown and includes a provocative foreword by Sissy Owens as well as a preface by the author, "Writing Sado-Masochistic Pornography: A Woman's Defense," wherein she does just what it claims and laments. In this arena of erotica one is on, or you'd like to find an area that is new to you, the tales herein will certainly supply you with archetypal scenarios for fantasy. There are many insights to be gained as well, concerning the psyche's of those who belong to this realm, where there are clearly defined roles and no lacking of discipline. Check it out.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

A fascinating volume that brings some needed research and insightful grounding to this topic. If you are interested in Thrall, the Black Order, Szatmári, Gagarina, and other Hyperborean subjects, then you must have this book. There is an extensive bibliography as well to point you towards further sources of information.

THE FIFTH PATH, issue 4, edited by Robert Ward (P.O. Box 1632, Carmichael, CA 95608-1632, 1993; 76 pages, full-sized softcover magazine $6.00).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

Once again editor Ward has put together an issue to delight and intrigue. Of particular interest are the interviews with Adam Parfrey of Feral House and Thomas Thurn of the Svastica band "The Electric Helfire Club. Also of note is the very extensive review section which covers audio, video, and print media. We suggest that you subscribe as soon to miss a single issue.

PRIMAL CHAOS, edited by Wendy Van Duun (1072 Polson Street, #338, San Francisco, CA 94103, 1993; current issue #7, $3.00, full-sized softcover magazine).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

We are in possession of Primal Chaos #2 through #7 and have been highly impressed with the growth in quality and depth displayed under the very able helm of editor Wendy Van Duun. This "zine has from the start shown a good sense of graphics and fine artwork and poetry. Articles are meant to get one's feet wet in the subjects covered (Odinism, Runes, and Lycanthropy are regular topics of discussion). Each issue also contains an interview with someone of note: Monte Cassia (#2), Kenneth Grant (#3), Peter Carroll (#4), Nick Boughs (#5), Peter Gilmore (#6), and Z'ev (#7).

Miss Van Duun is also a musician and her band Neith-Nether World, has produced a darkly lyrical album with 13 songs, Sociopathic Humans. This is available as an LP (80.00) and compact disc (Funky Mushroom, P.O. Box 10072, Brooklyn, NY 11210). Be sure to keep up with these endeavors.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

This hefty volume ranges quite widely in material, much of it Satanic, such as "Satan" by Ann LaVey, "The Demonic Glamour of Cinema" by the editor, "The Left-Handed Path" by The O.N.A., "The Rise of Ragnart" by Peter Gilmore, "Recognizing Pseudo-Satanism" by Nemo, and "Pharagoms, Pluto and the Helleses" by Philip March. There are other articles on magical topics by Freya Aswynn, Hymnenbau Bess and a reprint of Austin Osman Spare's "Armaments of Zeus." There is much here to get you thinking and doing. Don't miss it.

PROMETHEAN CIRCLE, A publication dedicated to Satanism and the path of the strong, edited by John Hizkiai and George Zahnepoulos (P.O. Box 7906, 1202 Himittinos, Athens, Greece, 1991; 28 pages, 8.25" x 11.75" side stapled).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

This is a fine debut issue. Editor Zahnepoulos starts off with a fine blast at Humanism, Faustian Superstition espouses on "The Promethean Quest," "Life is War, War is Life" presents philosophy from the Church of W.A.R., Stephen Waters offers insights into "Why Love," and perhaps most apropos is editor Hizkiai's piece on ancient Hellenic Satanic mythology. There's much material of interest here and the editors seek articles for future issues.

DIABOLICAL CREATIONS #1, edited by Ken Gage (GIZM Enterprises, P.O. Box 753, Maple Park, IL 60151, 1993; 42 pages, full-sized, side stapled).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

Another new Satanic publication that is ballyhoo and fun. There's pieces on Satanism, Gothis, Ouija themes in Rap, Satan and the Soul, plus poetry, reviews, many ads, and underground comic-style artwork. There's even a piece by a Christian providing his proof for his choice in God-belief. A new perspective here that you should enjoy - check it out.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

Having never previously received review material from T.O.T.P., I imagine that this issue was sent because the opening article entitled "Satan is Dead" is a misunderstanding of the Church of Satan and The Black Flame. The balance of the publication is concerned with various Thedemic and Chasanic concerns, as well as reviews of material with a similar bent. A cassette accompanied this, but I was not inspired to listen. If such is your interest, then this is a source for additional material.

ESTRELLA, No. 2, edited by R.F. Paul and Chad Henley (2116 Guadalupe, #14, Austin, TX 78705, 1992; 42 pages, digipack, $5.00).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

This is a neat zine which commences with a fun piece by Adam Parfrey on "Weird Sex Cults" which is followed by an interview with Parfrey. There are three tarot-style "Esoteric Image" by David Grimble with explanations, an intro to the Esoteric Order of Dagon, an analysis of the symbols in Lovecraft's The White Ship, an interview with Sleep Chamber poet by Fraser Ocen, and some very fine art. This is a well done effort that you will do yourself a favor to check it out.

VILE PEACOCK, issue 2, edited by Richas Polycoshare "6t (Magpie Rats, 409 North P.C.S.T., 106, June 639, Redondo Beach, CA 90277, 1992; 38 pages, digiptacked, $2.00).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

This is a "zine filled with comics, collaged and collaged images of misanthropy. This collection is not for the squeamish, with both visceral and sexually explicit material. Just a little bit of "human" life.}

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

More of the same kind of material as VILE PEACOCK, which is not surprising since this is called a “first and last breakdown” from that publication. My favorite image is on page three titled “Nature’s Kingdom Seen No Evil.”

THE OHM CLOCK, issue 1, edited by Aaron Garland (P.O. Box 43894, Las Vegas, NV 89102, 1995, 21 pages, full-sized magazine, $3.00 US, $5.00 Econ, preprint).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

This new “scene is generally focused on alternative music and thus has interviews with the misanthropic band Man Is The Beast, Kingdom Scum, Anomalous Records, it is all as a piece about Richard Wagner plus music reviews. Also interviewed is Robert Ward, editor of The Fifth Path, and there is an article about Ancient Egypt. There is a good blend of material in this first issue.

MODERN TABOO, issue #9, edited by Mitchell Fi (P.O. Box 55138, Atlanta, GA 30302-0138, 1995, 14 pages, full-sized, $2.00).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

Included herein are articles on Mantitas, The Pleiid Foundation, EMBASSAT, and interviews with Chad Ian Miller and Jim Goad. There’s also a review section of recordings and publications. For some reason there are often handwritten headings for articles and for all the reviews.

FLASHBACK, #1, edited by Jan Axelrod (P.O. Box 676, S-114 79, Stockholm, Sweden, 1995, 80 pages, A4 format, 29 krone).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

A new Swedish music ‘zine focused on explorations of other cultural oddities. Most interesting is the first part of an article on the Church of Satan by Carl Abrahamsen. Other topics covered: LSD, Film Censorship in Sweden, Jean-Michel Jarre, Iggy Pop, and more. This is all in Swedish, so it’s for those who can speak Swedish.

GRAY AREAS, Vol. 1, No. 1, edited by Netta Gilboa (P.O. Box 801, Broomall, PA 19008-0808, 1992, 2 pages, soft-cover full-sized magazine, $4.50).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

This is a magazine that wishes to examine the “gray areas of life,” thus they have a massive review section of alternative products in all media that attempts to one-up that of Factotum Fine. The production values are very high here, but outside of the incredible reviews the focus seems to be on the Grateful Dead. The reviews are quite clear and supportive and definitely provide an excellent source for your browsing.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

This massive reference work has detailed listings of groups, publications, spas, centers, communities, museums, school biographies, bookstores, distributors, media producers, and even events! I must say that it is skimpy on Satanism (it’s not even listed in the “Topics Index”) and there are two listings for the Church of Satan, one of which has an old, defunct mailing address. I found this to be a fun video to flip through, as you never quite know what you’ll come across, though there’s a bit too much occultish stuff to wade through. There’s quite a guide to stores and services which could help folks find local sources for items of interest. It is a very professional publication and quite reasonable at the price.

GO TO HELL #5, Family Values, a video by John Dewey ($9.95 paperback, Britstone Ministries, Box 664, Martins Mills, MA 02648, 1993, 30 minutes, VHS format).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

Once again David Egan is back and seems to be his hit with this video. It begins with some paranoia evolving close-ups of Egan, then moves on to the running joke, a returning round refrain wherein a priest knocks on Egan’s front door (embalmed with a Halloween witch with a rather phallic nose) with some such proc. Suddenly, the character with whom Egan has a snapsey comeback. Also included is an interview with Ralph Frazee, who doesn’t let boredom stop him from misting the Christians’ smugness, a wonderful take-off on Serrrano’s Pas Christ, Egan’s sermon exposing the nameake of the Gideon’s, those obvious fools who put Bibles in hotel rooms, and also a segment called “The 666 Club,” in which Egan and his associate Lucifer Taylor discuss the family values exemplified by the holy men of the Bible. The tape is finished with Taylor, naked, reciting a statement that was wired into the congressional record (on Walpurgisnacht!) which mocks Christian charity. All in all it is a fun tape and well worth the asking price.

LASSEZ FAIRE BOOKS CATALOGUE, (942 Howard Street, San Francisco, CA 94103).

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

This is an excellent source for books in the Libertarian vein of thought, and stocks such classic authors as Thomas Szasz, H.L. Mencken, Mark Twain, Ayn Rand, and many others who you will find fascinating and useful. Contact them for the latest issue.

EXPOSING THE FRAUDS

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

This is a Christian publication wherein those who promote the SRA fraud are taken quite thoroughly to task by some heavy hitters in this field. It seems that the Christian community of intellectuals decided that it was time to clean house. Just as we separate ourselves from misguided dabbles who kill cats and vandalize cemeteries, the mainstream Christians want nothing to do with this Satanic scam fostered by mentally disturbed individuals and the therapists and consultants who’ve grown offensive from this urban legend. There’s great ammo in here from Christians to use should you be in a position to need to debunk the hysteria. Highly recommended.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer

In this issue, Jon Trost and Mike Herrenstein shine the light of investigative reporting on Mike Warneke, author of The Satan Sailer, and they demolish his claims to having been a member of a Satanic organization and expose his use of his ministry for personal gain. Once again, this is a Christian publication which wishes to get the sludge out of their corner. Warneke has been making big bucks for years with his phony trials, and now he’s been caught and pinned-down. Much useful info here, should this “clown for Christ” bring his evangelism to your area.

FAKE MEMORY SYNDROME
FOUNDATION, 308 Market St - suite 128, Philadelphia, PA 19104,
Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.
Let me quote from an informational pamphlet published by this organization. “It is the purpose of the Foundation: To seek the reasons for the spread of False Memory Syndrome; To work for the prevention of new cases of False Memory Syndrome; and To aid the victims, both primary and secondary, of False Memory Syndrome.”

Here we have an organization that is working to combat the spread of false memories of sexual abuse in general, which will certainly be of use to smash the hysteria concerning “ritual abuse” that is a subset of this specter sports. If information is needed to debunk the lies of fundies and Xian “therapists,” this organization can be of use.
Also, should proponents of the hysteria arise in your locale, alert this organization and put responsible local officials in touch so that they can get a balanced view or view concerning the issue and not be hoodwinked out of sympathy for those claiming falsely to have been the victims of extraordinarily horrific crimes.

THE TAOIST
Sway with the breeze
Smell the scent of the trees
Feel the SAT pushing Life through you

Smoke drifting along the tides of the moon
Surrounded by her presence, my senses swoon
Twilight's peace beckons their beatiful songs

Leopard hunting, gazelle dying, a sparrow born in a mere moment passing Sri Kala Chakra, nothing is wasted or everlasting

A mere thread in Life's woven weave
His bright cloak shining, Yin gracefully leaves
These are the best moments of Life

Andre T. Soli
POET. SATANIST

“'That is too deep which can eternal lie,
And with strange wos even death may die.'”

ANTICHRIST
BY BILL EHMANN, JR.
standing in the ritual chamber, the dim light of a single drozer does little to dispel the darkness. I stand before the Baphomet and for the duration of this ceremony consciously suspend my disbelief in the reality of Satan and the infernal demons of Hell.

But as commonly happens when I speak less and pause more, I feel the presence of someone there, someone listening, someone watching.

I feel a benevolent interest and a strange sense of comradeship with this presence. As I continue to move through the ritual and address Satan, I am addressing this presence I feel but do not see. Always, when finished with each such ritual I have the profound sense of having communicated with someone and this communication feels meaningful and unbounded by the limitations imposed by the words which were spoken.

What is more, when I have had these experiences in ritual with others, the other individuals consistently report the same feeling of a presence. It is talking with different Satanists about this experience I find they commonly have felt this curious communication.

So what is happening here? Our religion stands solidly based upon the bedrock of doubt not faith. We have rejected exterior gods in favor of recognizing our personal godhood in the present moment. We indulge in the power of belief only within the framework of ritual but agree to cast that powerful drug at ritual’s end. We agree to turn on again the light switch of reason. We choose to be the magician and not the rube.

Yet the experience in ritual keeps occurring, like the persistent scratching of a cat who wants to be let in. There remains this powerful sense of feeling that there is someone present in ritual who, once called, has come to visit.

I realize that only two conclusions have been drawn by those who have reported this experience since 1966. They either rejected it as mere fantasy (which does not address the intensity of the experience) or embraced it as belief (which ignores the ambiguity of the experience). I wondered if there might not be a third option.

Experimenting with the elements of ritual I discovered that there are several factors which seem to produce this sense of a visitor. First is darkness. When I have conducted ritual with two or more brightly lit candles in a chamber I have not become aware of this ghostly presence. If the chamber is dimly lit by a single burning lamp of jellyfuel (such as worry) or even in complete pitch darkness, then the awareness of another is felt. The second factor is the act of expectation through speech and action. When I correctly enter into the Satanic ritual and address Satan as if He were actually listening and present, then the phenomenon of feeling someone present occurs.

Of course all of this could be explained by suggestion. The dim or dark chamber softens the shades I can see so that the aspect of my mind which imposes sensory order is activated to make sense out of what is there. This is the same action the mind takes when we say that our eyes are "playing tricks." One example of this is when we are driving a car and can barely see some indistinct object on the road ahead. As we approach it looks to be a body of an animal until we get close enough to see it actually is a cardboard box. By suspending my disbelief in the context of ritual, I am certainly entering into the same dreamlike world of imagination where the mind creates impressions. Thus this experience could be nothing more than a form of self-hypnosis.

Digging deeper, however, I wondered exactly how exactly I am aware of this sense of presence in the ritual. I do not normally see anything (such as a shadowy form). Neither do I hear any voice or breathing or some such. Neither is there a smell, taste nor touch. Yet somehow I keep sensing this presence. How?

I began to experiment in ritual. I would invoke the presence and then (with no small humor at this situation) ask myself how the Hell I knew there was this presence. What was this feeling and how did I know about it?

At one point I decided it must actually be that peculiar subset of the sense of hearing which can detect the physical presence of surrounding objects nearby. Physically blind people have demonstrated this remarkable use of "sonar" to "feel" physical objects and people around them through a subtle awareness of sounds. But I found that the visitor was not felt by me to have a specific physical location. It wasn’t so simple.

Finally I came to realize that there is a peculiar difference between how I feel when I am alone and when there is another person present. If you are in a room and someone enters who could be important to you (a friend, for example) there is a special complex of subtle physical shifts that occur which you can feel. You will not feel these shifts if someone enters who is totally unimportant and does not require any degree of social interaction (such as a stranger entering a bus depot where you are reading a book). This feeling of social preparation, of readying oneself to interact with another person, was exactly what I have been experiencing as the visitor phenomenon.

However, even this has not answered the ultimate question. After all, am I sensing this presence because it is actually there or because I have fallen prey to my own suggestive expectations?

And then finally the answer loomed clear and distinct. Since in ritual, the magic is most effective when the magician suspends disbelief and believes totally and completely in the magical reality of Satan and his minions, and since so many feel this presence in ritual, then the answer is to BELIEVE IT... in ritual, INBELIEVE IT... outside of ritual.

Just the way it was described in The Satanic Bible in 1969.
WHAT IF THEY GAVE A WAR AND NOBODY CAME?

November 1387. A massive army of Tartars appear on the plains outside the city of Ispahan in central Iran.

Their leader, the Turkish war-lord Tammerlane, dispatches emissaries to announce his arrival and to convey his challenge of battle to commence on the following day.

The Muradsharif governor of Ispahan, Murad-I-Kashi receives Tammerlane’s emissaries and is informed of the challenge they have come to deliver. He wastes no time in conferring with his ministers of state. The rich mercantile population of the city has little stomach for battle. They lack the necessary courage and fortitude to meet the Tartar challenge with resolve. There must be some other less dangerous course to follow, their plead.

Murad-I-Kashi politelydeclines the challenge. Instead he offers the keys of the city to Tammerlane, hoping to placate him.

The inhabitants of Ispahan, oblivious to their impending doom, carry on “business as usual.”

Tammerlane, a seasoned warrior of a hundred desperate battles, can feel no compassion for men so cowardly and insolent as to refuse to defend their own families, city and possessions. To his fierce warrior ethic, this refusal, and subsequent token of submission, is both an insult and an outrage.

Tammerlane orders the wholesale slaughter of the city’s inhabitants. Each of his army units is required to contribute a fixed number of heads to the general “pooz.”

The horror that ensues is unparalleled by even the Golden Horde of Genghis Khan in the previous century. For the Mongols, despite their ferocity, were but simple savages, whereas Tammerlane is a cultured Turk.

The city of Ispahan becomes a chaos of thunderous hoofbeats, curved scimitars flashing in arcs beneath a dazzling Arabian sun, cries of terror and pain, and the sickly-sweet fragrance of death lingering in the afternoon.

Tammerlane decrees that the pyramid reaching many stories high is to be constructed on the following day. It is to be a monument to the once prosperous, but cowardly people of Ispahan. It is to be composed of the 70,000 skulls of the men, women, and children of the city who have perished there that unforgettable day.

R. N. Taylor
The Infernal Garrison. (7205 Goweray Drive, P.O. Box 59049, Mississauga, Ontario, L4T 4J1, Canada)

Growing out of the Knights of Satan, from whom we haven't heard a peep in a while, Doug Richards has here forged an active ensemble promoting real Satanism. The membership package includes "Statutes That Govern The Infernal Garrison," and many fine images drawn by Mr. Richards as well as his militant Satanic poetry and their initiation ritual. They also have spiffy membership cards. From one of their information sheets:

"The Infernal Garrison was formed in response to the demands of those in the Toronto area... [We] follow the philosophies of the Church of Satan and practice true Satanic magic, not what society 'thinks' is practiced... With determination, perhaps more groups will eventually follow to offer man identity instead of herd conformity."

They've also produced a cassette of music for rituals, basically from various soundtracks (Blums Stoker's Dracula) and Orff's Carmina Burana, among others. It is an effective blend. Contact them for further information.

The Shiva Groto (710 16th Courtland Ave., Kokomo, IN 46901)

The basic intent of the Shiva Groto, according to James M. Davis, is to destroy the "Geraldino-satanist" image as well as the over-rated Christian religion. A further goal is to show that when need be, instead of ritualizing for everything, real Satanists get off their asses and employ their natural intelligence and wit in order to make their desires happen. From one of their pamphlets:

"Throughout history, anyone who veers from the mainstream and has obtained any success has been accused of diabolical connections to a dark force. Satanism is not about who can sacrifice the most babies or take the most drugs, it's about living by a set philosophy and calling up the dark forces in nature to exert your Will into the world as you see fit... Satan demands a much harder task than signing over your soul in blood. He demands that you live your life as fully as possible, prosper by your own wits and avoid misery."

Their organization is firmly based on the writings of Anton Szandor LaVey.

Please note: Both William Gidney and the "Infernal Groto" are no longer associated with the Church of Satan, by decree of the Council of Nine.

Also, there are still pseudo-Satanic organizations out there claiming that the Church of Satan is defunct, bankrupts, or in some way non-existent - and that they are taking over. A bogus history is usually supplied to give credibility to their pedigree. Ignore them. Innovators succeed while imitators fail.
HELL'S KITCHEN PRODUCTIONS PRESENT

CLOISONNÉ SIGIL OF BAPHOMET MEDALLIONS

1.75 INCHES IN DIAMETER
SILVER SYMBOL BACKED BY ENAMEL IN BLACK, RED, OR PURPLE
ONLY $30 EACH
(ADD $5.00 EACH, OUTSIDE U.S.)

SEND CHECK, MONEY ORDER, OR BANK DRAUGHT IN U.S. FUNDS TO:
HELL'S KITCHEN PRODUCTIONS,
P.O. BOX 499, RADIO CITY STATION, NY, NY 10101-0499 U.S.A.

---

THE CHURCH OF SATAN by Blanche Barton

A History Of The World's Most Notorious Religion

Where Satanism has been, its present state, and where it is going, plus a guide to ritual magic and formation of groups and grottos.

ORDER NOW!

$8.95 plus $1.50 shipping and handling ($5.00 for overseas orders)

---

SPEAK OF THE DEVIL: THE CANON OF ANTON LAVEY

A 90 minute documentary featuring all-new interviews with the High Priest of the Church of Satan. Don't miss the tour of The Black House, including the forbidden Den of Iniquity. You'll be dazzled by his keyboard artistry as the Maestro takes you to worlds gone by - soon to be resurrected. Also featuring interviews with other Satanists of note. Don't miss it!

AVAILABLE THIS FALL FROM:

WAVELENGTH VIDEO,
BOX 1290, BURBANK, CA 91507
Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for information.

---

THE FENRIS WOLF #3

Featuring:

- "Tests" by Anton LaVey
- "Pseudo Satanism" by Nemo
- "Rite of Ragnarök" by Peter Gilmore
- "Roots of Satanism" by Philip Marsh and other articles of interest.

To order: send U.S. $25 in cash or International Money Order for 150 Swedish Crowns

Coming in 1994:

Den Sataniska Bibeln
(Swedish translation of The Satanic Bible by Carl Abrahamsson)

for information contact:
Psychick Release PCP, P.O. Box 26067, S-100 41, Stockholm, Sweden
HOW MUCH MORE OVERCROWDED can our prisons get? People should be laughing WITH the death penalty, not AT it. Those who are laughing at the death penalty are confused in thinking that it is not a deterrent. A person who is put to death can never harm another innocent person again. A corpse doesn’t have a chance for parole, nor does it have any opportunities for escape.

Convicts who have no substantial evidence against them, but who are on death row, are spared (for the time being). Those criminals who have admitted openly to murder, or who have overwhelming evidence against them, MUST be put to death without reservation. Of course, those who kill in self-defense should be spared by the government, and commended by the Sanitarist.

Capital Punishment is a euphemism for “destroying low-lifes.” If Satanism ruled the government, the degenerates would go bound and gagged to the victim’s family for them to torture, then destroy. sheer torture would make any would-be perpetrator think twice. Since this isn’t going to happen in our world just yet, let the government destroy the degenerates. An end would come to the building of more and more prisons, paying people to “rehabilitate” those beyond rehabilitation, as well as the feeding and health-care of these morons.

Whenever someone is put to death, and it is not in your own state, the newspapers print only a very small article about it. I suppose this is to offend Christians by making a big story out of how the state got rid of someone who would have eaten up the taxpayers money, and “gulped” put someone to death. Some politicians will whine that it costs the state too much money to execute these parasites. (What about the expenses of the court cases, and prison?) Some defense lawyers are bucketing the criminal’s loved ones into prolonging trials at their, and the taxpayers’ expense, knowing full well the criminal will not go free.

When an animal gets impounded, they are either adopted, or the inevitable happens. A thirty or forty year sentence served in full, would be very unfortunate for the criminal who commits a heinous crime, as they usually get out earlier now.

In our state, a criminal was mistakenly let out of the Maryland State Penitentiary. The result? An innocent boy and girl were shot to death in a convenience store for no reason at all. He said he lost it because the world stinks. He’s right there, the world does stink. That’s only because the Christian/Humanist government doesn’t give a damn and only a Satanic government would have the guts to stand up and say, (as all Dark Heroes) “All wrong does – You shall perish!” More quality people – less quantity. As the ABRAXAS Foundation states in Apocalypse Culture: “Long Live Death!”

PROMETHEAN CIRCLE
Sinister Greetings!
Announcing the birth of a new magazine, dedicated to spreading the Satanic Word, the path of the strong, and the dark side of the human psyche. You are invited to present your ideas and principles through our pages. Please send materials and articles, we will publish original as well as reprints. Thanks in advance.

MIGHT IS RIGHT.
HAIL SATAN!
JOHN HOTELLUS, GEORGE ZARAROPOULOS
EDITORS
PROMETHEAN CIRCLE
P.O. BOX 79006
17202 HIMITOS
ATHENS, GREECE
Dark Reflections

Unaffiliated bimonthly zine for the intellectual Satanist, issued by Jeffrey Deboo: Satanism without fascist/racist/authoritarian nonsense.

Four-issue subscription (un guaranteed) $16.00

Single issue $4.00

All orders must be accompanied by signed age statement (over 18)

US funds only, payable to:

Jeffrey Deboo
1442A Walnut Street #44
Berkeley CA 94709

ESSAYS ON SATANISM

by Jeffrey Deboo

The First Satanic Sin ($1): Tirade against stupidity

The Magic of the Will (revised, $2): Magic as an extension of conscious will

Nazism, Racism, and Satanism ($1): Against the fascist blight on the face of Satanism

Satan's Purge ($2): How Nature will resolve the problem of human overpopulation — if we let it

Some Thoughts on Satanic Ethics ($1): Self-interest, Social Darwinism, and amorality

Some Thought on the Riots ($1): What do the LA Riots say about American society?

Order from/payable to:

Jeffrey Deboo
1442A Walnut Street #44
Berkeley CA 94709
DUELING DUALITIES

OR CENTURIES, Western society has been dominated by a philosophical system that can be described as antagonistic dualism, the belief that the world is comprised of pairs of irreconcilable opposites. Under this system, we are reduced to a series of either/or choices. This worldview is so pervasive that it provides the basis of most of the philosophies which provide the foundations of modern western culture. Since this philosophy touches upon virtually every fact of modern life I will not be attempting a comprehensive look at it in this article. Instead I will touch upon a few examples of the results of such ideas, and touch upon the origins of this inauspicious philosophy.

The roots of antagonistic dualism go back some 2500-3000 years to ancient Persia. It was there that the Zoroastrans developed what was probably the first religious/ethical system based upon the idea of a metaphysical struggle between good and evil. Today, thanks to the Zoroastrians, people tend to think of good and evil as fixed absolutes, causes rather than effects, but this was not always the case. Many ancient societies thought of this dichotomy quite differently. Generally, good was whatever was beneficial to you, your family or your tribe/sation. Evil on the other hand was simply whatever was harmful to these same groups. Good and evil were seen as effects and not causes. Antagonistic duality lies behind this inversion of ideas. Consider the Greco-Roman, or Germanic-Celtic mythologies. You'll find no such notions of ethical dualism as you find in Zoroastrian or Judaic mythology, you simply cannot compare a figure such as Zeus, or Odin to an Ahura-Mazda or Yahweh. Contrary to the conventional opinions however, the leap from the Greek of Oedipus to Jesus; and his ilk is hardly an advancement; it is instead a great leap backwards. The ancient all recognized the duality of nature but they did not attach any moral values to such things, they were simply recognized as counterparts in the overall scheme of things. Antagonistic duality, as manifested first among the Persians and later among the Jews, was bad enough but it was primarily concerned with good and evil. After the idea spread to the decadent philosophers of the late Hellenic period, such as Plato and Socrates, it broadened its scope to include almost all of the world in its pointless divisiveness.

Today, these dichotomies can be generally divided into two categories. The internal dichotomies are the first group and would include such things as good vs. evil, intellect vs. instinct and reason vs. passion. The second group, the external dichotomies would include such things as civilization vs. nature, life vs. death and male vs. female. It is with these dichotomies that I will be concerning myself hereafter.

The idea of good vs evil has a long history in the world, and is central to the Judeo-Christian ethic which has so polluted the world. The idea of this group I have already dealt with, so I will not repeat all of that. The other internal dichotomies are very similar to the good vs evil dichotomy in many respects. Each is characterized by a refusal to recognize the totality of man's inner makeup. And each of these groups of people are prone to the same adverse effects which derive from this self-imposed internal conflict.

One of the most common internal dichotomies today is intellect vs. instinct. There are some who believe that the only knowledge of any value is intellectual or nature, learned knowledge. These people do not believe that instincts, instinctive understanding of any value, in fact there are some who deny that man has any instincts. To be sure, man's instincts are not so absolute as the instincts of insects or birds but it would be a mistake to claim that man is devoid of instinct. As a prime example, man has a fairly open-ended set of instincts, which leaves a great deal to be learned. There are however deeply felt drives which are inborn. There would be no conflict between instinct and intellect were it not for man's tendency to build up unnatural institutions to make the world more amenable to his overdelicate sensibilities. When an instinctive drive runs counter to the rules man has established, a new action is taught to replace the instinctive act in the individual's mind. To claim that all intellect is without value is less prevalent, but equally erroneous. These people follow the naive, naive doctrine of the noble savage. The error of these people lies in the fact that the human animal does not come with a complete program as does a bee, or ant. A human being must acquire a certain degree of intellectual learning in order to survive. Anti-intellectualism may be rooted in a reasonable distrust of inordinate intellectualism, but it goes too far in the other direction. Just as the ultimate end of the intellectualism is a world where everyone does precisely as he has been taught to do, a world where every move is analyzed and spontaneity is a thing of the past, the end of the anti-intellectualism is a world of ignorance, and mutiny of any learning.

A very closely related conflict is reason vs. passion. The Wordworkers of reason regard reason as the be-all and end-all of human existence. These people fail to recognize that reason is only a tool. This overemphasis on reason goes back to Greece, notably the philosopher Aristotle. The ideal of such people is a being that is totally dominated by reason. A being that is not swayed by passion. These people are continually stressing that man is not "just an animal." Their passions remind them of their animal nature and must therefore be done away with. As I see it, their ideal is a bloodless machine. Ultimately, by their very nature these devotees of reason will fall into the same trap as the overly intellectual. Once again the other side is equally mistaken. Traditionally, artists fall within the category of those who stress the passions over reason. The virulently anti-rational are a minority in this group. Those who reject reason, and are totally ruled by passions are not taking advantage of some of the unique characteristics of the human animal. These slaves to their passions will often drift aimlessly through life. They will follow their feelings even if they lead to their own destruction.

All of these groups are united in their desire to tax themselves into two parts. Whether that division is between good/evil, reason/passion, or instinct/intellect is ultimately irrelevant. They can all be roughly divided into two types, exterminators and suppressors. Those I call exterminators are driven to purge themselves of every trace of whatever undesirable element they find in their nature. The other group, the suppressors, are less driven. They usually understand that they will never purge themselves entirely of the offensive element and so they are satisfied in supressing it as much as possible. These types often believe that in time these offensive traits, if suppressed, will atrophy and die. While both groups are fighting futile battles against themselves, battles which they are doomed to lose, the suppressors can usually come through with fewer of the more unpleasant side-effects. The worst that will befall a suppressor is, more often than not, a few neurones of varying degree. It is another story with the exterminators. With each failure to destroy the bred element of their nature they will grow more single-minded and fanatical. It is from the ranks of the exterminators that all of the inquisitors, puritans and witch-hunters have come. While the suppressor will avoid the middle ground of balance, the exterminator will find it so repulsive that he will go to any extreme, even the opposite extreme to avoid it. This is reflected in the well-known fact that the quickness to convert to any extremist philosophy is in those who, until recently, adhered to the oppugning doctrine. Until an exterminator breaks away from his position, which is usually a very sudden decision, they will almost certainly be unwilling to consider any other opinion. It is a fool's errand to try to reason with an exterminator, even those who have had a reason.

The extermination dichotomies cannot be divided into exterminators and suppressors because they operate in a very different way. These are not stragglers of man vs. himself. The extermination dichotomies are a manifestation of man's struggle against the world around him. These struggles are the same as the internalized ones in this regard, though they are equally pointless. A good example of the kind of idiotic conflict that falls under this heading is civilizing vs. nature. The forces of civilization are responsible for the continuing deforestation of the Earth, the extermination of wild animal species to make room for human consumers and other domesticated animals, and a general preference for the artificial to the natural. On the other side are members of Rousseau's disciples. These people would delight in restoring an age of innocence which they believe existed in the long ago dim past. They yearn for a return to the garden of Eden, but would only accomplish a return to the cave. While no one can argue that all of the so-called advances of modern civilization are in fact advances, it should be obvious that it is not in our interest to throw it all away in pursuit of a golden age that never did, and never will, exist.

Another of the extermination dichotomies is life vs. death. Today there is a widely held belief that there is an innate sanctity in human life, and that life, at any level, is better than death. As a direct result of this idea, the human population of the Earth is escalating at an ever increasing rate. As a natural consequence of this overcrowding, famine and pestilence occasionally break out and natural disasters such as earthquakes, hurricanes, and flooding wreak greater havoc. When things are bad, they are vital elements of nature's population control system, are violations of man's rules. Whenever nature intervenes with a famine or some other measure, it comes as a flood of "humanitarian" aid - food, clothing, and medicine - in an effort to thwart nature's design. If mankind does not change course, nature will change it for him. You cannot circumvent nature indefinitely. Like it or not, man will have to start playing by nature's rules. On a more personal level, it is not unusual to see people who will cling to life, even a broken limb dependent upon machines, rather than accept death and go out with a little dignity. What sane person can say that it is better to live a frail, semi-literate shadow of their former selves than to die when they have reached the logical conclusion of their lives?

Another product of this worldview is the "battle of the sexes." It has promoted a useless divisive outlook which has done nothing except create unwarranted hostility and pointless bickering. Each side argues over which sex is superior. You might as well argue over whether a saw is a better tool than a hammer; it is certainly true that nowhere in nature is equality to be found, but inequality does not follow gender lines. We are individuals and must be judged as such. A division of the human race into two uniform gender blocs is ridiculous. It is true that some women are utterly worthless for anything other than childbearing, but there are some that are superior to many men. I've known people who are useful only for mindless menial labor. No, ultimate gender is not a valid factor in establishing the social hierarchy. Even more insure than the exterminating of either male or female is what passes for a moderate in this issue. These people would destroy the unity between the sexes. We are all supposed to be equals. We are supposed to establish an androgynous, unisex world where the same differences between the sexes are supposed to be neutralized through socialization and "test-tube" reproduction. The solution to the problem brought about through antagonistic division is not to be found in the pursuit of a thoroughly unnatural state of affairs, it lies in an understanding of the fact that despite their innate differences, the sexes are not bound into an adversary relationship; an understanding that it is possible to view them as complimentary halves of a larger whole.

Ultimately, though the mind perceives the duality inherent in nature, it seeks to restore a unified whole. Antagonistic dualism, in all its varied forms, believes that only one side of the duality is natural. They believe that the rest is a sort of canonical growth which must be excised. Their ultimate goal is a world torn in half, a barren monotonous life free of the inner conflict that they themselves have promoted. It is one for a restoration of that older, healthier view that there is a balance in nature between the duality's halves, a recognition that all art is necessary in their place. A good illustration of this is found in the symbology of the sign of Baphomet. As Dr. LaVey has stated in The Satanic Bible, the horns of the goat symbolize duality. Each horn is separate and distinct from the other, yet both are a part of the goat. Since the goat is a symbol of carnality, and that of nature, it is therefore seen that everything is part of nature and that to exalt some part of nature above the whole is foolish. It should be obvious to everyone that only by recognizing the totality of nature, including human nature - despite what superficially appear to be contradictions, can life continue in any worthwhile sense. The road which this western culture is presently traveling leads only to destruction. Until mankind no longer feels compelled to engage in "counterproductive" struggles with himself and nature there can be no real progress. This Persian monster, and its offspring, must be destroyed. If we do not destroy them they will certainly destroy us.

OCCULTIC HAVEN

OCCULT BOOKS & SUPPLIES

LEFT HAND PATH CATALOGUE AND MAGAZINE IN ONE!

SEND 2.00 TO OCCULTIC HAVEN

P.O. BOX 110

JOHNSON CITY, TN 37605

11 AM TO 8 PM MONDAY-SATURDAY

(615) 928-0277
EW THERE ARE WHO HAVE SUCCEEDED in passing the Barrier to the twilit groton that shines beyond. For know ye well, that the dwellers in the Abyss hunt souls like unto thine to hold in their thrall.”
Anton Stanord LaVey,
"Die Elektrischen Vorspiele," The Satanic Rituals

We are all familiar by now with the use of alienation in Satanism. The writer of evocative literature is fond of using as being a magician. The American Gothic literary genre has produced such marvels as Nathaniel Hawthorne, E.A. Poe, and H.P. Lovecraft. Few in the world of those Without would understand why these writers might be considered Satanic magicians. Yet each of their stories has exerted a diabolic influence on their readers’ imaginations, creating “rifts” in mass consciousness. As for “fiction” as their writings are said to be, indeed they have opened the Gates—have they not? Every story can be seen as an exercise in indulgence, each indulgence being a magical Working in its own right.

Geometry, landscaping and weird imagery in the modern horror tale have been used to great effect to create states of alienation within their readers. The Law of the Trapsoid refers to more than just the strange angles of architectural structures. In a literary context this would refer to the bizarre room of Keziah Mason’s house in H.P.L.’s “Dreams in the Witch House.” The “Law” also includes geographical areas and landcascapes. This was discussed briefly by Dr. LaVey in his most recent work The Devil’s Notebook.

This article will focus on landscaping and its power to alienate the literary character, as well as the reader. This alienation makes the character the other, whereas it is usually assumed that the “alien beings” of Lovecraft’s Mythos are the Outsiders. The protagonist, in fact, becomes alien through a paradigmatic shift. This can be seen as a type of gnostic or “enlightenment.”

Within the context of this article ‘landscaping’ shall mean any geographic area, its size, dimension—any feature, future, atmosphere, or phenomenon connected with that area. Also, landscaping refers specifically to nature and its peculiar manifestations.

The use of weird landcascapes, unlike the convention of ‘Gothic architecture’ as found in Walpole’s The Castle of Otranto (meaning the geometry of the physical structures within the stories), deserve more attention than they have received.

Author T.E.D. Klein, former editor of The Twilight Zone magazine, works on a somewhat “Lovecraftian” base. In his short story, “Black Man with a Horn,” from Dark Gods (1982), he draws mostly on the Mythos. However, in The Ceremony (1984) he borrows concepts from Arthur Machen’s short story “The White People.” Machen was one of H.P.L.’s literary influences. In both of Klein’s works there are liberal doses of weird landcascapes. In the “Lovecraftian” tradition, images of dark twisted trees, menacing forests, blasted wastelands, whispering lonely fields, as well as savage jungles, frozen arctic environments, and other forlorn extreme manifestations of nature assoil us. A heath of odd squating hills, such as in H.P.L.’s “The Whisperer in Darkness,” or Machen’s “The Great God Pan,” and all such stimuli jar our senses because of their alienism. One does not have to travel with his head disconnected to black Yuggoth to find the kind of strangeness which can be found on Earth.

The rough, wild, feral quality of Lovecraftian nature, and indeed, within all Gothic traditional depictions of nature, serve to alienate the reader from the common, to set them up for the story’s awful culmination. Within these environments those caught up in them are transformed. Perhaps it can be better said that they adapt to their environment. One example which comes to mind is the goat-like Wilbur Whately in H.P.L.’s “The Dunwich Horror.” Dunwich is supposed to be an all-around disconcerting place. It disturbs or adversely affects the protagonist.

This type of imagery is nothing new as a convention in the American Gothic genre. Hawthorne utilized such images as in “Young Goodman Brown,” where the Witches’ Sabbath takes place in a fiery pine forest. Here the Devil Himself is met on lonesome country roads near the midnight hour. H.P.L.’s “The Colour Out of Space,” and “The Shadow Out of Time,” present us with places of mystery, darkness and especially of geographical isolation.

It might be said that this proliferation of isolation-imagery in the American Gothic genre comes from the nature of early America itself. America was a vast wilderness at one time (before we “became fruitful and multiplied,” that is). It is reasonable to assume that this exerted a sizeable influence on writers up until the recent time of mass urbanization. Currently, the horizon story tends to focus itself on the ‘concrete jungle,’ such as in T.E.D. Klein’s “The Children of the Kingdom,” and many of us know of H.P.L.’s loathing for New York City. While the city streets have apparently become the new forum of literary alienation, the city environment is still safe. It is predictable because it is a human fabrication. Nature, even unto this hour, remains unconquerable, it is an unknown.

Weird, isolated geography also includes the Nebraska countryside of Stephen King’s “The Children of the Corn,” and the rural neighborhood in Carl Jacobs’ “The Ungleanness at Carver House.” Now consider, in light of the above, the influence of nature/landscape on the psyche in Esther Forbes’ A Mirror for Witches (1928). Louis Grue, author of Redefining the American Gothic, gives us a sample of this:

The forest is a place of dark evil for the village, [in Forbes’ novel] and as the dwelling of the Indian, a habitation for Satan and his followers. What can be said about the above discussed process of alienating nature? By shifting the perceptual ground upon which we have built our notions of reality, writers like H.P. Lovecraft have raped our tunnel-realities by displacing our familiar world, and thrusting us not into an "Abys," but into a world we never understood in the first place. One might say that the Akoreys and Robert Blake have their reality-filter lenses removed and become alien beings to the world. Robert Price, author of "Lovecraft's Artificial Mythology," tells us that, His [Lovecraft’s] claim was not to make the reader feel that supernatural entities (i.e. gods) exist. Such is the misunderstanding of many readers of Lovecraft. Rather, he sought to stimulate the removal of natural limits on human perception so as to provide a full view of the horror-ly empty (naturalistic) cosmos.

According to Price, Yogi-Soothothing, Chihuahua and the gang are supposed to be "the aliens." The essence of what he is saying, as this author interprets it, is that the Old Ones are no mere anomalous disturbances, but are the true inhabitants of a sphere we never really owned (i.e. "the Domain of Man"). We become alien creatures in an existential universe to which we are rudely awakened. The long forbidden realities of this world have turned hostile and demonic through centuries of denial. Stefan Dakowiczowski, author of "Outsiders and Aliens: The Uses of Isolation in Lovecraft's Fiction," backs the observations put forth so far.

This telescoped point of view [referring to the existential quality of H.P.L.’s works] presents an image of mankind as an isolated presence on the “black seas” of an indifferent cosmos, a figure dwarfed into insignificance by the vastness of the universe.

The Gothic genre (or general), being a product of a predominantly Christian culture is going to reflect its anti-nature bias. All horror attributed to the natural world have, in the past, made stillizing reading for proper Victorian ladies who were in need of a polite, socially acceptable catharsis—or exorcism, however one cares to look at it.

It is the psychodynamic quality of these works which exert their Satanic influence. As acts of ‘black magic’ these above-mentioned works and countless others have served to disturb the complacency of readers, leading them down the Left-Hand-Path. Those less sensitive readers will undoubtedly shrug off the exigency of an H.P.L. work as “just a scary story,” denying any heuristic value therein. For those who are not disturbed by what may come to them in the middle of the night, on some lonesome beach (perhaps through a shining trapezohedron?), the goal of the working is revealed:

Each of us must find our own way through the wilderness, and like Nietzsche's Zarathustra, must imbue our lives with personal meaning and power. No god, avatar, president or pope will do it for us. We, in fact, must recreate ourselves as the Old Ones. In The Satanic Rituals Dr. LaVey tells us that, One can not help speculating upon the reality suggested by the fantasy — the possibility that the Old Ones are spectres of a future human mentality. But for that to happen, we must first AWAKE.

Notes
A S WE WORK THROUGH THE third decade of modern Satanism, we often find the Devil's "unlearned wisdom" obscured by a veritable blizzard of superficially similar imitations using His name but playing an altogether different game. Like marketing consultants stuck with pushing a dull product, these hang out on try to flog some tired, unimaginative belief system by scooch-cape-ing an ill-fitting inverse pentagram over it to give it that "alluringly evil" cachet which could not even emanate on its own. Among these are a specific subcategory which I call "herd-elite" ideologies.

There is no shortage of people and groups with impeccable Satanist credentials, if by elitism we mean any assertion that certain specific people are distinct from, and superior to, the rest of humanity. What distinguishes a herd-elite ideology from a Satanist one is its criterion of superiority; rather than judging each individual independently as superior or inferior on the basis of that individual's unique qualities, the herd-elite assigns superior or inferior status to people based on their membership in a category. Everybody who happens to fall into Category X is superior, while everyone in Category Y (which usually, though not always, includes everyone not in Category X) is inferior - disregarding, in both cases, the individual attributes of each person being assessed.

Herd-elite ideologies differ from one another mainly in how they define Category X. Some examples:

- Racism: To the white supremacist, a white person, even one devoid of talent or achievement, falls within the definition of the "superior race" and is thus a higher type than any non-white person, even if the latter happens to be of exceptional individual ability. There are also black supremacists and people who confer elite status based on various other permutations of skin color and facial features, whose beliefs could be equally well described by the preceding sentence with the appropriate terms or terms replacing each occurrence of the word "white."

- Racist fringe elements have traditionally been associated with hard-line fundamentalist Christianity or with even more sinister derivatives thereof, such as the subgroups who hold that the Anglo-Saxons are descended from the Lost Tribes of Israel. However, remnants of their twisted simplistic and ungrammatical rhetoric are now available with an alleged "Satanic' imprimatur. The assumption, presumably, is that we individualists will fall for this particular form of group identity just because it happens to be socially unacceptable.

- Ethnic nationalism: Similar to racism but based on cultural groupings rather than physical characteristics. The adherent will point to the glorious achievements of his nation, ignoring the fact that these are actually achievements of a small number of individuals who came from that nation. Isaac Newton's accomplishments prove that he was a man of exceptional talent; they prove nothing of the sort about any other randomly selected person who happens to have also been born in England.

- Culturalism: In this category I would put all the innumerable (usually tiny) organizations who, de facto, define the elite as consisting of those who are members of the organization. Members gather together to measure each other of their superiority and to loathe at those who are not members of the cult. The arrogant disdain is aimed not at the social mainstream but at those who, instead of belonging to the Cult, belong to some rival cult which in fact is hardly different. Most pseudo-Satanic groups fall into this category, each a small, insular knot of people with little in the way of a philosophical stance except repeated assertions that they are the Real Thing and that all the other similar groups are phonies.

- Arbitocracism: In most medieval societies, there was a hereditary nobility which wielded power and considered itself superior to the masses, with whom it refrained from intermarrying. Most noble families were descended from some individual founder whose genuine strength and ability enabled him to secure power and wealth and bequeath them to his descendants. Unfortunately, although there is indeed a large genetic/heredity component to most forms of talent, mere descent from a great man is a rather poor predictor of quality. Scores generations later, most hereditary aristocracies quickly degenerated into inbred collections of houseboats, protected by an aura of superiority rather than its substance. The ostensible character of most European and Mideastern political leadership in the Middle Ages illustrates this, as does the frequency with which ruling dynasties were overthrown by fresh challengers. The main effect of hereditary aristocracies was to create competitive individuals born to the "lower" social classes - part of the true elite, from a Satanist viewpoint - from achieving their potential.

As I discussed earlier in The Black Flame (see "Nazism, Racism, and Satanism," Volume 3, #1 & 2), herd-elite ideologies have a natural appeal to inferior people. It is the person without talents or accomplishments of his own who needs to shore up his ego by focusing on his membership in a supposedly superior race, or by joining some organization made up of a few fellow pretentious losers with a secret handshake among whom he will bear the title of Grand Kolossal Kosmic Supremo. The creative and successful person is secure in the knowledge of his own individual superiority and has no need for such crap.

The Satanist identifies fellow members of the elite by their individual qualities and achievements - not by their race, nationality, group affiliation, descent, or any other categorical criterion. There is no form of "hypocritical self-deception" more insidious than thinking oneself Satanical merely because one has joined a small herd which is not in favor with the big one.

---

Vampires Exist! Join Us!

For complete information on the Living Cult of the Undead

The Name of B.R.

The Western B.R.

The Babalon* B.R.

Temple of the Vampire

3582-TF

Lacey, WA 98503
Photo Portrait of Anton Szandor LaVey

At last you can own a beautiful, black & white poster of the founder and High Priest of the Church of Satan.

Photographer Nick Bougas has captured LaVey and his serpentine friend Boaz in a moment of Satanic communion. At almost life size, this 23" x 29" print is on heavy, glossy poster stock, replete with the High Priest's name in large type across the bottom.

No Satanic lair should be without this handsome item!

Carefully packaged in a crush-proof mailing tube, the poster is only $20.00, plus $5.00 shipping & handling. (Outside the U.S., $20.00 plus $10.00 shipping & handling).

Make checks, money orders or bank draughts in U.S. funds out to: Hell's Kitchen Productions P.O. Box 499, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10101-0499, U.S.A.
VITAL INDIVIDUALS MAY BE REGARDED AS representing the ascending or descending line of life. When one has decided which, one has thereby decided a canon for the value of his offspring. If he represents the ascending line he is in fact extraordinary — and for the sake of the descending line he, with him takes a step down, the care expended on his preservation, may even be extreme. If he represents the descending development, decay, chronic degeneration, sickness — then he can be accorded little value.

Nietzsche, Twilight of the Idols

Eugenics: Upbreeding through genetic selection.

Dysgenics: "Everying a detrimental effect on later generations."

Nature, left to its own devices, is "ludicrous. Nature's impregnation is to tempered form higher forms. Darwin showed that species evolve by selecting those who are of higher quality to survive and thus perpetuate their genes.

Evolution is a struggle for survival - genetic survival. As an organism survives largely on the basis of the quality of its genetic inheritance. Those organisms of lesser genetic inheritance fail to find a mate, fall to predation, are too weak to withstand harsh environmental conditions, and therefore their genes are not passed on to future generations. Nature, through a combination of factors, weeds and cultures genetically. This is the basis of evolution, or natural selection.

The same principles apply to human kind. -Primates social species continue to be subjected to genetic selection in much the same way as other organisms. However, as a population gene pool is subjected to the laws of genetic selection, and as it thereby reaches higher biological levels, so naturally does its culture. As a culture develops, a paradox rises a culture, particularly if it rises to a level called "civilization," increasingly eliminates the struggles for survival through its advances in technology and manorial comfort. The mentally and physically impaired no longer die soon after birth, as they would in a raw state of nature. They are more likely to survive and in turn breed, thus passing on their genes to future generations. A civilization may reach a stage where the selection mechanism is completely reversed: the most intelligent and creative have fewer or no offspring, and are taxed to support the increasing proliferation of the least intelligent and creative.

Nature's eugenics imperative is replaced by a man-made system which is dysgenic. This situation may continue until there are no longer sufficient numbers of intelligent and creative people to sustain a civilization and it collapses. This is the view of Dr. Elmer Pendell, a foremost population expert. In Why Civilization Self-Destruct (Howard Atkin, Florida 1977), Pendell writes, "To understand who were deprived of direct descendents by early death we must first look at human beings in a state of nature, when each individual had to provide for himself in much greater measure than now. Those with fewer of the favorable traits, or more of the unfavorable traits, were much more likely to die - and die before they themselves reproduced... Death not only removed a deficient individual from a blossoming society, but it removed his genes from the gene pool of his tribe. Consequently, the tribe and the species were both improved by nature's program of "negative eugenics.""

Surveying a number of civilizations, Pendell states, "Why did Egypt's Old Kingdom, a magnificent civilization, "deplete the dust to the bettering of humankind?" Very simply, the less capable had the most offspring and a high degree of social organization permitted this offspring to survive and produce offspring of their own."

This hypothesis on the fall of civilizations is plausible for us today, not only due to the present knowledge of genetics and evolution, but because we can observe the dysgenic impact on Western Civilization before our eyes. Indeed, as our civilization becomes increasingly more technically specialized that it is an increasing number of unemployables being subsidized by a dwindling number of technocrats and other professionals. Western Civilization will shortly reach the point of collapse as have other civilizations.

As Pendell observes in his remarks to the contemporary USA: "There is no deadlier form of self-destruction than forcing the worthy elements of a civilization to become servants of the crew." "Unless we rev our attitudes towards the "right" of those who are dragging us under the USA will soon follow the pattern set by two earlier - and exact - Western Hemisphere Civilizations - the Mayan and the locus.

In fact, the population problem is not only with Western Civilization, but on a wider scale than hitherto in history, in the form of the West's subsidisation of the proliferating Third World (many of whose nations are themselves pitiful vestiges of ancient civilizations which collapsed through dysgenics e.g. India).

Pendell's answer to the self-destruct mechanism of civilization is for man to intervene where nature no longer can, by means of sterilization of the lowest genetic specimens, marriage licensing based on eugenic considerations, and State Human Genetic Boards authorizing quotas of children for couples on the basis of IQ.

The only country with the farsightedness to adopt eugenic social measures is Singapore. Several years ago the then Japanese Prime Minister observed aloud that the reason for the USA's declining economic performance is the decline in the quality of its population. Speaks of protest from outraged liberals in the USA expressed an apologia from him, but did nothing to change the facts.

Unless current population trends are reversed the Western industrial nations will soon become the bower of wood and drawers of water for more realistic societies, such as Japan, whose national IQ average has been increasing steadily over the past 50 years.

The Welfare State should start functioning in reverse, in the form of tax incentives and disincentives applied to those who are the most intelligent and creative to see larger families, while encouraging the curtailing of the numbers of the lower level of society. Sterilization [which could also be encouraged with financial incentives] and surgically-applied abortion, should also be utilized. Of course such realistic propositions seem utopian so long as the West is dominated by the moral shack of Christianity and liberalism. The battle first has to be fought and won on the ideological front.

"Now it is the higher man's role to produce the children of the future. Quality is now more important than quantity."

PRINTS OF DARKNESS

BAPHOMET SHIRTS

Black shirt with Baphomet sigil in white, either large and centered or small on left breast. Sizes SM, M, L, XL, XXL.
T-Shirt: $15.00, Sweatshirt: $25.00, Hooded Sweatshirt: $30.00

BAPHOMET BANNER

20 inches in diameter. White or "Blacklight Red" on Black cloth. Suitable for rituals and rallies!
Only $8.00

TRAPEZOID CANDLE HOLDER

7 x 7 1/2 inches. Hand-crafted base of marble and granite with brass cap to hold candle base. A handsome accessory for your altar!
$35.00

Send checks, money orders, or bank draughts in U.S. dollars to:

Hell's Kitchen Productions
P.O. Box 499, Radio City Station,
New York, NY 10101-0499, U.S.A.

Overseas orders add $8.00 for shipping and handling, per item.
(NY residents add 8.25% sales tax)

Please allow 10 to 16 weeks for delivery.

SEND S.A.S.E. OR 2 IRC'S FOR A COMPLETE LISTING OF HELL'S KITCHEN PRODUCTIONS MERCHANDISE.
I like to think of Washington D.C. as an apocalyptic city. It is, in a sense, an end times city, with all the turmoil of conflicting doctrines and political tempers a last days preacher could imagine. Our nation’s capital is a kind of modern day Rome: complaisant with Emperor (President), sercents, wealthy parasites on the take and the plebeians who ride on their coattails, not to mention the masses of the unemployed and homeless. The architecture speaks for itself.

One might even stretch the analogy further by pointing out that America’s Rome seems to have its mystery cults and underground societies. Like their ancient counterparts, there are many here who loyally and sometimes desperately cling to their religions or political causes of their forefathers. With rare exception, most of these Romans heed their party line handed down to them a silver platter from above and in some cases even a lead slate will do. The faithful followers were their egs with that smug self-assurance which comes with “getting involved” or “fighting the power.” The leaders of their egs with the gratification which comes in having control and influence over others and taking credit for their organization’s accomplishments. Whether it comes from the theologically correct (TC) right wing or the politically correct (PC), left wing, the rhetoric, speeches, tactics and thought molding are basically the same.

So what has all this to do with the price of Smirnoff tea in China? As a Satanic I take a sort of detached interest in activism and politics. Why not? One ever knows when one might be forced into the arena to face a TC lion or a PC tiger. A sure method of self-defense is to know one’s enemy. I try to attend as many demonstrations as possible and to keep at least a modest file on the various local activist groups in D.C.

My favorite forager of Satanic espionage is Operation Rescue (OR). Of all the crusading organizations which I despise (and being politically incorrect I despise them all), OR is the one group I deem most worthy of my mischievous prying and monkey wrenching.

OR is truly an ironic phenomenon. It used to be, in the good old days of pagan Rome, that the Christians were the ones led to the lions. Now, in the days of Christianized Rome, the Christians are the lions who devour women of desperate circumstances and rape victims. If you haven’t seen an OR “rescue” with your own eyes, highly recommend that you do so at least once in your life. Take pictures so you can show your grandchildren when they ask you if such someone actually occurred in your day. You’ll need proof.

So what does a spy see upon attending an OR rally/”rescue”? In the D.C. area it usually starts off with a pre-action meeting held on a Thursday or Friday evening, about 7:30 pm. This will be a kind of religious pep rally. I put on my best suit and fix “a Jesus is Lord” pin to the lapel. A Bible in hand will lend more credibility as I mingle with the sheep. The more you can look and speak the part the more chance there is of getting them to take you into their confidence. The rally site will probably be a church, one sympathetic to OR’s cause. Once inside, it is sometimes required to surrender one’s drivers license, a security precaution of theirs. It will be returned on the way out. I always take a seat near the front. This reduces suspicion and there is a better chance of overhearing something important from one of their leaders who sit in the front pews.

Here is a world where all of history, philosophy, science, everything, are interpreted by a first-century standard. Here is the world of either/or, where the sons of light) struggle against the sons of darkness. These stormtroopers of righteousness have a mission— to save this wayward nation from the likely wrath of their fanatical and angry God by putting it back on the proper course— theology.

The church soon fills up and the born again frenzy begins. The typical rally starts out with the singing of hymns which can become quite lively with people clapping, swaying from side to side and some are weeping. Others are uplift their hands to heaven with eyes closed, their faces testifying to the close kinship between religious ecstasy and a good orgasm. The songs sometimes sound like battle hymns, for instance: CHORUS: Lift high the banners of love, Hallelujah! Sound the trumpets of war. Christ has given us the victory, Hallelujah! Jericho must fall.

1. The body of Christ is an army, fighting powers unseen, bringing captives to freedom, in the name of Jesus the King. CHORUS: Brothers, are you sure of your calling? Will you fight for Jesus the King? Are you prepared for this battle, to lay down your lives for your friends and on it goes. There will also be prayers, of course. If fortune favors me, these will be led by the OR leaders, if not, then the congregation will break up into groups of five to eight. This is the most difficult part of the night. Each person will be expected to take a time at a long, drawn out prayer of repentance and calling on God. This is a true test of any would-be spy’s acting ability and knowledge of fundamentalist theology. Fortunately for myself, I come from a religious background and have a degree in theology which helps me to speak the born-again jargon and fake the prayers to righteous satisfaction. It always provides me with a certain amount of amusement when the sheep are instructed to turn to a particular passage in their Bibles. Now I can see if any of the people sitting next to me are spies from one of the local pro-choice organizations. They’ll be the ones who take the longest time to find the text. A dead giveaway to the pro-life sitters next to them when they refer to the table of contents to get to the gospel of John. After the hymns and prayers will come the lively and charismatic speeches by the OR leaders. If it is going to be a major attack the following day, then there will be big name speakers, Randall Terry (founder OR), Rev. Pat Mahoney (Vice Pres. Christian Defense Coalition), Carroll Everitt (former abortion clinic owner turned crusading Christian bich), and any “pro-life” politicians who wish to add their two cents worth, i.e. representative of Arizona congressman Chris Smith, etcetera.

The mood of an OR rally can vary greatly. Some are terribly serious as the lambs of God prepare themselves to suffer in the following day’s activities. Others are little more than comedy acts by Terry and Mahoney as they spend their entire speech time making jokes from the pulpit. To give credit where due, I must say they can really be quite funny at times, like two stand up Christian comedians. Occasionally there will be shown video tapes of Christians being arrasted by the police for blocking the clinic door. The purpose is to make all potential pop talk and indignation encourage the brook to "Fear God rather than man" and risk arrast to save "the unborn children."

Finally, after the crowd has been whipped into its usual psychological state of righteous indignation over the "sin of child killling" and given a hardened resolve, Dawter is destined necessary to end arrabtion, the time and place of tomorrow's gathering will be announced. The army of God then breaks up into groups according to to function. Now the atmosphere becomes that of we - onward Christian soldiers!
This is the time when the barratons are to be formed. The main body will spearhead the attack. They consist of the hardcase members, who have been arrested again and again in the past, and however many first-timers who have been sucked into the ghastly enthusiasm at the moment.

Veterans may be asked to bear the brunt of the arrast. Another battalion is comprised of women acting as "counter wreckage" (lawmocons). The activities are of psychological warfare as any abortion bound woman trying to enter the clinic. These flare examples of Christian womanhood
(protesting) which all look like Saturday Night Live's "Church Chat" (daily) are there to "help" her choose live for her "unborn child."

As in the army, there are the support troops. These are the "prayer warriors" who stand watch at the clinics for those Christians being "brutalized" (arrasted) by the police "for simply praying on the sidewalk" (blocking the entrance to a building and terrorizing those trying to get in). The prayer warrior's job is to incessantly call upon the name of Jesus and in general make a grand display of repentance for the six o'clock news.

I once posed as a prayer warrior with an elderly couple who were kind enough to take me on a tour of the 13th century. After a seemingly endless round of prayers for the success of the nation and forgiveness of their "pro-aborer" enemies, the weary couple pulled out a piece of paper and read it from an inscription. So there we stood, the three of us "cursing out abortion devotions" from the clinic. And here I thought all that Linda Blair stuff was just a movie! Later in the day's festivities I saw this same woman weeping and wailing hysterically. She and several other handmaids of the Lord had fallen to the ground in prayerful agony.
Another woman behind me was speaking in tongues (babbling in a foreign language one has never learned). The actual wording which she repeated over and over again were lke this, "Shum da la ta ta ta ta." I've studied quite a few languages in my time but I have no confidence I don't recognize this one; must be an inarticulate language - Archaeogreek?
I don't know. Christians claim themselves the salt of the earth; small wonder the planet suffers from hyperactivity.

The remaining support troops will consist of legal observers and those with video cameras for possible use in court.

With the order of battle established, the troops turn in for a few hours sleep.
The time is usually about 10 or 11 pm. At this point I deliver any pertinent information to my cohort and best friend who then informs his political contacts among the political operators of OR. The crucial task of any spy here is to gain as much information about the next day's tactics as well as obtain names and memories faces. Some of these yahooos are out of state and have outstanding arrast warrants or injunctions still in effect on them. The more one learns about the enemy the greater the chance of gzessing their next move or pursuing legal action against them.

The next day's attack begins early.
about 6am. The inquisition gathers at the appointed place. Already there are several "pro-choice" shockers pacing about with walkie-talkies in hand, ready to report on enemy troop movements. The prayer warriors begin their inarticulate mumblings, others are softly singing alyptic hymns.
Some have brought their invalid relatives and friends, paraplegics and quadraplegics in wheel chairs. Some are near mental vegetables who can do little but gweat and unimelligly. See how doornred life is?

Then the general arrives and God's mosh gets under way. OR has its chain of command, with the leader giving orders and the mosh following without question. Only outside at the top the location of the client to be attacked. The rest are kept ignorant of any battle plans. Usually there will be a ride on the metro (subway) and then they hit the streets. A fast attack might be staged by a smaller group at another site in order to draw the opposition from the intendent target.

The pace quickens as the main body approaches its destination. The clinic defenders will consist mostly of members of the Washington Area Clinic-Defense Task Force (WACDTF) along with members of smaller, less effective organizations as well as a few revolution-mongers from D.C.'s Revolutionary Communist Party (RCP).

Some of these left-wing self-appointed "defenders of individual liberty" wouldn't know what to do with themselves if they didn't have a cause to fight for. I dare say that if the state were magically transformed into a utopia overnight, these "politically awake" individuals would have to create a whole new set of socialills just so they could have something to fight against in the morning.

The mayhem begins with OR's arrival.
Clinic defenders lock arms, form a human barricle and brace themselves for the incoming holy solace. Shouting and chanting soon fill the air. The modern day crusaders assail the infidel forces by sitting as close as possible to the entrance in an attempt to shut down what they call an "abortion mill."

There will be some stoning and surreptuous pushing as well as the occasional arrest for assault.

After the authorities have dilly-dallied for a spell, they then begin their legal manuamarations which consist of giving OR members several warnings to vacate the area and the reading of any existing arrastwarrants. Finally they put the taxpayers' money to good use and begin to haul them away.
Don't think that you've only the last of them though; OR chapters in some other areas of the country the "rescuers" here pay the steeper fine and come right back in.

Eventually a path is cleared and the clinic is reopened. Each side claims victory with the defenders boasting that all the patients got to in their appointments and the attackers bragging that X number of "mothers" chose life for their "unborn child."

As a result of their righteous intervention.
For myself, I retreat back into my Medmenum library and add any new information into my slowly growing files.
So why bother with all of this? It enriches my life, simply this and nothing more. For all I wish to do is to first hand what others can only glimpse on their TV screen. The news media is a unreliable source of information and incapable of giving the viewer anything but a portion of the events. Deeper intricacies are usually mised. Therefore I investigate these matters myself. I am, in a way, my own news service. In my political directory are the necessary phone numbers to find out which of the major activist groups are doing what and when.

In the second place it amuses me. I enjoy taking a stroll through the human zoo which politically correct people term a "democracy." A democracy is a sort of free range game preserve where a professional such as myself can study the habits of nature's most awkward and embarrassing ape.

Thirdly, I wish to provide an intelligence service to the opposition groups presently fighting the fundamentalist wing. My best friend and I have a moto to champion our goal - "We take fun out of fundamentalism." Timely reporting on the activities of the inquisition can give the liberal opposition a headstart in making their counter battle plans.

But don't think for a moment that I'm into crusading or idealism or PC. My reason for activism is pure self-interest and revenge. It's in my self-interest to throw a monkey wrench into the Judeo-Christian machinery whenever the opportunity presents itself and it is also a form of revenge for what these increasingly "concerned" Christians have done to this world and their far-reaching impact which inevitably contaminates the quality and/or quantity of life for us all. They wish to pry into our private lives. Fine, we'll pry into theirs.

The PC left-wing is a certain useful in providing a counter-balance to the PC right-wing. But no self-respecting Satanist wants to live in a society built by the feeble hands of hippies, yuppies, pacifists, yuppies, mentally castrated males, testosteronized feminists or any other genetic mutation resulting from nature's failed philosophical experiments.

And when does the battle end? It doesn't. It goes on and on. War is in its own nature. Think about one possible future for a moment. If the conservative Christians could be ousted from power then the victorious liberals would become the new and dominant species of herd mentality. Therefore the new enemy. Today's allies, tomorrow's enemies, and vice versa. Thus the importance of keeping informed on everyone's political progress - everyone's.

Until the realization of the Satanic Empire, I shall continue to play my game of "Deacon Brodie" (Brodie was the real life character upon whom Robert Louis Stevenson based his novel Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde). My best friend and I shall play up to anyone, repeat any party line, play any political ploy so long as it benefits the Satanic lifestyle and our lifestyle. Until the earth is once again green and free, as the Hymn of the Satanic Empire states, with a place for you and a place for me, when the shadow of the cross no longer obscures and darkens the natural life, when PC and TC are sent away to wander in the desert regions of humanity's intellect, then to die of thirst for the vital waters of recognition; then and only then will I cease my endless flow of cynicism and misanthropy.

Finally, I seek to perfect the art of Satanic espionage because it enriches my life intellectually and culturally. Networking in the political arena has provided some interesting contacts and resources. This avails the fringe benefits of obtaining greater access to hard-to-find books, alternative information, rare music and the underground arts. Building a Satanic library can become an engrossing and rewarding life's passion.

By remaining true to the Renaissance lifestyle, we remain true to life's highest fulfillment and goals. Let the commoners swear and toll to build a cathedral for their clergy masters while we question the flannel of the earth and forge trade routes to Chintal. Life was meant to be lived - for oneself! Not to be impaled upon the enemy's bayonets for the sake of any "cause." Martyrs never live to see the bronze monument erected to their memory, if one is ever raised at all.

Nietzsche knew it well, that spirit of the dialectical, when he wrote, "Man is a bridge to the Overman." It is not that the mindless masses have no purpose. They serve their purpose in that they provide the mud and filth from which the genius may arise and shine forth so brilliantly.

The Christian holds the Truth and the Truth has set him free. Give to the Christian his Bible, that he may war himself with the dying embers of his faith and in his blind rapture, bless you with the kindness he thinks he owes you. But beware his "love" for in such a "love" there is venom enough for all his enemies.

And give to the addict his heroin, that he may sleep in narcotic bliss and not rob you. And humor the lunatic who fancies himself Emperor, for he will treat you to a royal feast someday.

For those of you who enjoy the sword-play between the various political gladiators there exists here in Rome a kind of circus, and as long as there is the Circus Maximus, I'll be here, either in the grandstands spectating or trying my luck in the arena. We who are about to LIVE, shite you! Rejoice, Satanist! Long live LaVey! Hail the Satanic Empire!
RECENTLY MY COUSIN FOUND OUT that I was a Satanist, and it came as quite a shock to her; after all, I’m an "A" student, hold a lofty position at work, and am a fairly nice chap. Unfortunately, she sent a copy of an unnamed Christian hysterical account of Satanism to, of all people, my parent. I read the book, and was amazed at how sick-minded these Christians are to come up with these deluded fantasies.

So, I sent a letter questioning her antics. She told me to read Revelations, that her prayer group was praying for me and my family (oh, how nice!), and told me basically to blindly follow Jesus if I wish to accomplish anything! This from a person who leads a tremendously screwed-up life!

So, after reading this unreadable book, a thought occurred to me: "Have they ever considered the fact that they may actually have their wishes fulfilled?" I mean, if they remove real books on Satanism (which I’ve noticed in my area: just try to get one of Dr. LaVey’s books here) from the shelves and put these books up for people (kids as well), the thought of what could happen is scary. Hell, these book’s covers look more fascinating than any real Satanistic books. If a kid (or adult, for that matter) is turned off by Christianity, as was I, and is looking into Satanism as an alternative, and the only example he can find is in these paranoid books depicting the killing of animals and babies, if he’s quite unstable he may well do it.

After all, these are Satanistic experts, aren’t they? They must know the truth! If they didn’t make this stuff up, kids or adults could read something sensible, i.e. The Satanic Bible. But then, how would the poor Christies survive?

Then I decided, "What the Hell, I’ll read Revelations again, after all, it is a good fictitious book!" In it, it states that when the Beast rises that every man must take the Mark of the Beast to buy, sell, trade, own property - basically, just to survive. Will the Christians take the Mark? Why of course, I forgot that they already had! They all have Social Security numbers - for you can’t legally do any of the aforementioned activities here in the US without it. Your Mark. Which just goes to prove on a theological level (not that need be one) that we are indeed living in the midst of the Satanic Age.

Also, in this nifty little book of Revelations, it seems as if God has something against every tribe. And God has all these creatures around his throne which are described as basic lycanthropes: all are were-beings of one type or another. What fanciful literature! It also shows that sacrifice in a physical sense is definitely a Christian deed, not Satanic.

Yet I’m implying in any way that anyone should believe the words in Revelations; in fact, quite the contrary. One can look back in history, at any time or place and see these prophecies of Revelations in full sway somewhere. My hope is if there is any one truth to the Bible it is thus: that the Rapture will come, the Christians will disappear, and the Satanist shall rule the Earth.

But, one way or another, this shall happen. Lex Talionis!

THE ULTIMATE EXPLANATION

After a long and hair-raising excursion upon our fair freeways, I was struck by diabolical inspiration. In a single devilish moment, I perceived The Ultimate Psychological Explanation of Modern America. I have distilled Paul Fussell’s Class and the writings of Albert Ellis to their essence. Following are the essential philosophical statements of the various classes, revealing The Ultimate Psychological Explanation of Modern America.

Metaphysics (upon the nature of reality):

- Proles: "I am my car."
- Middle Class: "I am my house."
- Upper Class: "I am my money."
- X Class: "I am!"

Epistemology (upon the nature of acquiring knowledge):

- Proles: "Cause."
- Middle Class: "Cause they say so."
- Upper Class: "Because Daddums says so."
- X Class: "Because it’s there."

Ethics (upon what to do):

- Proles: "Sports is good."
- Middle Class: "Richer is better."
- Upper Class: "Old is best."
- X Class: "What works for me?"

So there you have it, The Ultimate Psychological Explanation of Modern America. What more could you want?

R. Elizabeth Fox
STORM MAIL ORDER

"Supplying the Heretical"

—NOW AVAILABLE—

DEATH IN JUNE SHIRTS

These beautiful new shirts are designed by STORM and based on the cover of the masterpiece LP, BUT, WHAT ENDS WHEN THIS SYMBOLS SHATTERS? Printed on the absolute heaviest, best quality 100% cotton pre-shrunk maroon shirts (like background of album jacket), the stunning front print is in two colors and the back design is printed in black ink. These are the ONLY legitimate Death in June shirts being sold in America, and were produced with the express permission of the band. Limited print run; when these are sold out we will be issuing new designs.

ORDER NOW! Size: Available in XL ONLY.

Price: $14 plus $2.50 p&h in USA/Canadian $3 p&p

OTHER NEW PRODUCTS:

BLOOD AXIS lyric booklet - A limited edition booklet featuring lyrics to the songs on THE LAMP OF THE INVISIBLE LIGHT CD, as well as one song from the forthcoming CD "Storm Songs". Also includes photos, background information and details on upcoming releases. Deluxe presentation, with markers covers; each booklet includes a Blood Axis sticker.

Price: $2 p&p in USA/Canadian $3 p&p

UNGASHED - Two CD's are currently available from these Swedish Odisnian death metal masters. Warning: this is very loud, violent music.

WHERE NO LIFE DWELLS - Their first release, with "Into Glory Ride", "Violent Ecstasy" and 9 other tracks

SHADOWS IN THE DEEP - The second album featuring "The Immortal", "Land of Ice" and 8 other tracks

Price each: $16 p&p USA/Canadian $18 p&p foreign airmail

THE GREEN BOOK by Muammar al Qaddafi. In our search for heretical expressions, we have come across a supply of this notorious work by Libya's leader. A valuable explanation of his anti-Western democracy, tribal social philosophy. Hard to find paperback edition.

Price: $6 p&p USA/Canadian $7 p&p foreign airmail

SIEGE

Also due out in January, at long last, is the book SIEGE by James Mason. This incredible tome of herses has been over three years in the making. Now comprising a massive 400+ pages, it will be one of the final statements on extremism in America. SIEGE represents one man's journey on the farthest fringes of revolutionary ideology, from Hittite National Socialist to the dark thoughts of the world's foremost outlaw, Charles Manson. From a unique insider's perspective it details a philosophy of a truly radical nature, rendering all previous conceptions of Lettish, Rightist and Conservative politics obsolete. Undeniably consistent, SIEGE presents a powerful message of survival, set free from moral constraint and popular delusions. You will never encounter another book such as this in your entire life. STORM is therefore proud to finally issue the first printing of this landmark work. SIEGE has been alternately called "The Aryan Kampf of the 90's" and "The mind fuck of the century"—you be the judge. Sufficient to say, you will not spot this title on the shelves of your local "alternative" bookshop. Why? Because it decisively flies in the face of everything currently held sacred by humanity. Presently being printed, the finished book is a professional production, with numerous rare and unpublished photos, texts and graphics. We are now accepting advance orders at the cover price of $14.95 plus $2 shipping and handling (foreign orders add $5 for surface, or $10 airmail). All orders received before Feb. 30th, 1993 will receive special autographed copies of the book. These special inscribed copies will not be available after that date.

ALSO COMING FROM STORM:

In January 1993 we will finally be sending out our new catalog, so if you are on the mailing list, expect to receive it soon. We will be offering an extensive selection chew t-shirts (Blood Axis, Altered, and much more), as well as new books (Hitosche, etc.) and CDs (Ain Seifh, Bathory, etc.). Please send $1 to be placed on the mailing list, or two first class stamps (1 IRC) outside USA for a sample catalog.

TO ORDER STORM PRODUCTS:

No minimum order required. The only requirements are that we have the item in stock, and include appropriate postage in your order. Retail prices apply; wholesale prices are lower. For wholesale orders please contact us at the above address for further details. We pay for the return of all counterfeit items. REFUND: NO REFUNDS, NO EXCHANGES, NO CASH REFUNDS, EXCEPT FOR ERRORS.

STORM P.O. BOX 13009 DENVER, CO 80218 USA
The Devil’s Notebook
by Anton Szandor LaVey

_The Devil’s Notebook_ is the first original collection of Anton LaVey’s writings to be published in over two decades.

“In a clear polemical style, the good doctor rips into a number of deserving targets ... and imparts wise-ass wisdom that, for me, is worth more than a stack of ancient grimoires. Like _The Satanic Bible_, _The Devil’s Notebook_ is a tome only the clever among us will appreciate.” — The Nose

$10.95 • Trade Paperback • ISBN: 0-922915-11-3

Secret and Suppressed: Banned Ideas and Hidden History
Edited by Jim Keith

A guidebook to alternative views of contemporary events and world history, _Secret and Suppressed_ confronts the reader with disquieting revelations on mind control, secret societies, media disinformation, cults and elite cabals. The hard evidence supplied by many of these articles is startling. Other entries veer into a twilight realm of paranoia, speculation and horror. If you believe that ignorance is bliss, _Secret and Suppressed_ is sure to make you very unhappy.

$12.95 • Trade Paperback • ISBN: 0-922915-14-8

Cosmic Retribution: The Infernal Art of Joe Coleman

This stunningly designed presentation of Joe Coleman’s paintings and illustrations reveals the artist’s obsessive visions of outlaws, madness and distressed religious impuses. Includes 32 color pages, 110 black and white pages and an incisive interview conducted by Adam Parfrey: “Coleman unleashes a hallucinatory violence of image and content that is unrelenting and unforgettable.” — _Arsforum_

$22.95 • Deluxe Paperback Edition • ISBN: 0-922915-06-7

The Secret Life of a Satanist
The Authorized Biography of Anton LaVey
by Blanche Barton

Now available in paperback, this photo-illustrated biography of “the most dangerous man in America” will stand as the definitive portrait of this influential and fascinating genius.

$12.95 • Trade Paperback • ISBN: 0-922915-12-1
$19.95 • Cloth • ISBN: 0-922915-03-2

To order, send check or money order for cost of book(s), plus $1.75 shipping. Send SASE for free catalogue.

Feral House • PO Box 3466 • Portland, OR • 97208