Anton Szandor LaVey & Blanche Barton proudly announce the birth of Satan Xerxes Carnacki LaVey shortly after midnight on Halloween of XXVIII.

Please join us in wishing congratulations to our High Priest & High Priestess on this joyous occasion.
May Infernal blessings be upon their son and heir.

Hail Anton!
Hail Blanche!
Hail Xerxes!
Hail Satan!
TIME TRAVEL - CHEAP AND EASY
BY PETER H. GILMORE

IN THE LATE 20TH CENTURY we are enmeshed in a society which has cast off sublety with a vengeance and has increased the pace of daily existence far beyond the norm of biological cycles. The Hopi word Kwaametieq (life out of balance) is precisely apropos and do see the film—a very magical amalgam of images and music with Satanic insights. We Satanists find this constant barrage to be particularly aggravating since we cultivate sensitivity as a value (important for all who would be magicians of any sort). Thus we retreat from the clangor and clamor to our dark retreats wherein we may contemplate and experience choice items culled with care from the cross offered by mass production and enforced homogenization. That is the nature of a "Satanic bunker."

Nausea should be a working term in every Satanist's vocabulary. If you wish to gain expertise in both Lesser and Greater Magic, then you must be hyper-aware of subtle shadings in all of the aspects of your endeavors. The insatiable herd has been battered into a bumbling state that makes them even less perceptual than their limited intellectual and emotional capabilities would allow—even at their greatest level of development. The Satanist who cultivates his sensitivity becomes the one-eyed man in the kingdom of the blind. As you advance your magical skills, you then open both eyes—and as you attain Mastery, you augment these natural (though oft undeveloped) perceptions with the magical equivalents of telescopes and microscopes.

Time travel is a wonderful exercise to stretch your magical muscles and sharpen your perceptivity. The methods I am about to discuss were surprisingly crystalized with great accuracy in Richard Matheson's romantic novel Bad Time Return. In this magical book, a writer wishes to travel to a past era to treat a woman with whom he has become obsessed. He reads, B. Priestley's Man and Time (a book long recommended by Dr. Lavey) and immerses himself in a total environment embodying the era he wishes to visit. With the help of a recording of the final movement of Mahler's Ninth Symphony, he actually accomplishes the physical transportation. Thus he joins the ranks of Pygmalion and other such Magi with his successful working. I strongly suggest you seek out both Matheson's novel and Priestley's book. The latter is often available as an oversized hardcover in chain bookstores. The Matheson may be more difficult to come by (it was made into a rather weak film starring Christopher Reeve. Passion here was depicted as mere sentimentality—a pity).

While I cannot guarantee your actual physical transport to another epoch, you can, with a bit of effort, make an interior journey that should have an equal emotional weight. In fact, it is quite a "real" experience in your Subjective Universe. For starters, I suggest that you attempt to "return" to the time and place of your gestation/birth. Since that is recent history, there is much material upon which you can draw to base your contemplation/recreation. First of all, select music from that period, from whatever type of music (popular/serious) which with you can find an affinity. (With greater experience, you might choose period music or a type for which you don't have an affinity, as this can broaden your sensitivity, and thus comprehension, of that time.) Select films that date from this period (there are plenty of filmographies that list year of making/release). Go to the library and seek out synchronic periodicals for further images (advertisements often serve well) so that you can recreate an awareness of what might have been the general concerns—what did the world's denizens worry about at the time? Now, here comes the real fine detail: use your memory, or that of relatives, to uncover personal data concerning your parent’s emotional tenor at that time, add to this knowledge of local happenings/events/personages to give depth and uniqueness to the evocation. Get pictures out of the family albums. If you can include appropriate scents, or food and drink, so much the better.

I have, in the course of my experiments, identified a Principle of Resonance, one that is of supreme importance here. Being a musician, I often define much of my experience in a musical sense. Since music is a particular range of energy vibrations (given structure and thus meaning by a human agent) which we perceive as sound, it follows by analogy that vibrations on a “higher” level will perhaps behave in similar fashion, though with variations germane to that vibrational rate. Resonance is defined as a state wherein sound oscillations are reinforced, and thus sustained, because the natural frequency of the resonator is the same as that of the sound source. Magically speaking, you must assemble your evocative devices for this time period so that they reinforce and sustain each other's vibrations, actually magnifying the result so that the sum is far greater than the components. These “time travel talismans” must be consonant with each other—in the same key, so to speak. This is more complex than simply matching frequencies, for chords that derive from a key organize the many frequencies of the possible tones and their resultants into functional relationships that establish a progression. You are creating, in effect, a symphony of sympathetic vibrations whose structure will serve as the vehicle for your excursion while it is playing in the resonant hall of your consciousness. (It is the ubiquitous dissonance which characterizes today’s culture that causes a general malaise, softening the audience (victims) so that they are far more easily programmed.)

When you have completed your research and assembled your materials, close yourself into a proper chamber wherein you can be completely undisturbed by the outside world and let this past epoch come alive again. For ritual garb use clothing from that era. Let your senses be stimulated by your talisman and take your psyche for a ride. Perhaps enact a scenario using your various historical devices. Making your chamber into a total environmental replica of a room from the target time is an excellent means for “setting the stage.” If you do your work well, you will find yourself transported to another era. Savor this period, let yourself breathe the air, think and feel as a denizen of that period, fully engaging both your emotions and intellect. If your working is strong, this will “set” in your memory as an interior landscape to which you can return with greater ease the next time. When you have experienced complete saturation, and thus emotional and physical exhaustion, consciously pull yourself back to the present. This can be eased by having some object concealed in the chamber that is quite evidently NOT of the time period of your journey. By then exposing it to your perception, you will be jolted from that past era. An anachronistic piece of music can be introduced and this will have the same effect. For a smoother transition, you can have recordings of music-play in ascension that ease you from the past into the present. You will probably regain full temporal awareness during this accelerated forward motion before the sequence has fully deployed.

At first, practice traveling to time periods for which you can find media documentation. As your skills advance, you will find yourself able to make the journey with far less an assemblage of “talismans.” This is crucial, for when you attempt to experience eras more distant in time, you will find that there is far less material to utilize.

History is generally a chronicle of the individuals, activities, and events of a past period that are most memorable to the succeeding generations who create these records. Such documentation is thus highly subjective and should not be construed as an objective portrait of “what happened.” The most difficult information to obtain is often the details of the day-to-day existence of most inhabitants of these past periods.
With this general blank area on the map of history, it thus becomes difficult to enter into the consciousness of the people who existed then, particularly when you are dealing with cultures that are remote in time and geography, and who spoke languages that formed particular shadings of perception that are truly alien to our cultural milieu.

When you have mastered this art, you will find trips to museums and to sites of ancient architecture to be highly rewarding experiences. The mere contemplation of a single artifact will fill you with a sensibility of its creators, while being enclosed in the total environment of a complete structure will constitute an epiphany of major significance.

The real purpose of time travel experimentation is to develop a sense of perspective, so that you rise above the confines of the two-dimensional plane of contemporary existence and grasp its various cultural, political, sociological,
and anthropological mechanisms from a third dimension.
From this vantage point you will have won the wisdom of Clarity—a very precious price.

You will never again let past orthodoxies be forgotten and you will be far better equipped to deal with the tribulations of making your way in the current hurried environment. You will also be contributing to the future, for you will be able to embody and advance the best elements selected from the past for synthesis into a truly Satanic society, one that is environsing and stimulating rather than exhausting and frenetic—life in balance. From out of our darkened, intimate chambers shall dawn a new order to sweep the globe that can proudly be called, without exaggeration or apology, a “civilization.”
THE WAR ACCELERATES. Self-imposed quarantine and isolation are the best protection. Popular attitudes are transmitted by PEOPLE. Each human "being" is a carrier, can be identified as such, and monitored. I have no problem with that. Saying "no" is not enough, difficult as it seems. There are ways of getting around that. The physical effects seem to be caused by certain levels of LIGHT. A breakdown of IONS occurs and physical symptoms present themselves.

"Mad dogs and Englishmen go out in the noontday sun." Now, it's not the actual sun, but the GLARE of the day. DOR rides on GLARE—assaultive, painful, GLARE. Sunglasses are not enough. Each pore is a little eye. Protection is best effected through shielding. If Alpha and Delta radiation can be interrupted by a sheet of typing paper, staying indoors is wise. But first generation TV is as deadly as bright daylight. Once reduced to VCR playback, second generation TV can defuse the bomb. LCD screens must be turned down enough to be safe. Computers are as devastating as any other TV, if networking is employed. Contagion could be eliminated by filtration of computer generated GLARE. That would necessitate second generation readout by way of VCR playback. Funny thing; mass market computer monitors have no simple ports for recording to, or playing from a VCR. Advanced technology?

The assaultive nature of TV pacing and programming is like the assaultive nature of pervasive music. It is the sound of the world. Its level is comfortable enough to be unnoticed by those born into it or contaminated into acceptance of it. They do not run from it, because to them, there is nothing abrasive or threatening to run from. They are lemming-conditioned. They run to the GLARE, as they do to the BLARE.

When a multi-billion dollar mainstream illicit drug culture was invoked in the sixties (in the guise of neo-prohibition and fake revolt), it brought about pleasingly assaultive saturation-level desensitization. BLARE (repetitive high-decibel level monosonic music) and GLARE (psychedelic imagery) soon reached unnoticed default levels. The outcome was frenetic complacency. The basic ingredients are all essentially around, but not all-pervasive. Now, during wartime, the contagion of herd values and priorities, to those not yet sufficiently inculcated, strikes a significant psychological blow. The ensuing zeitgeist is emotionally demoralizing and confers ready susceptibility to physical disease. Now, destructive atmospheric changes and viral contamination can actually be effected and exacerbated. The weaponry of war is BLARE and GLARE borne.

Gamma and Roentgen (X-ray) radiation protection requires massive lead insulation, or an equivalent. It is readily detectable. Current warfare radiation is unrecognized because it is unnoticed. Hence, it is readily smokescreened by misdirection. The bumper-sticker that once read, "Suppose they gave a war and nobody came." should now read, "Suppose they gave a war and nobody knew." Today's bomb shelter need not be an underground concrete bunker, but only dense and thick enough to insulate oneself from BLARE and GLARE.

Take a tip from Dracula: shun the light, live by night, listen to beautiful music.
The Newe Englande Orange Powder Company, Inc.

Presents the Artwork of Timothy Patrick Butler

"...the foremost Satanic artist and illustrator in America today..." — Bob Larson, Host of Talk-Back

Original limited edition serigraphs, signed and numbered by the artist.

$35.00 each dimensions: 25" x 15"

...Also Available...

T-Shirt
"Land Carnivore"
Black Shirt $17.00
White Shirt $13.00
XL ONLY !!!!!

(Not shown. See the Vol. 4
#5 584: pp. 10 for image.)

"Arsenic, Brimstone, Lye"
Black on white stock with graded red to orange symbols

"Banbury Cross"
Black on pinkish ground on white stock

Prints mailed in tubes. Please add $5.00 per order for prints, $3.00 per order for shirts to cover shipping & handling. Make check or money order (U.S. funds only!) to: Timothy Patrick Butler, c/o N.E.O.P.Co. & U.W.& L., Inc., P.O. Box 642712, San Francisco, CA 94164-2712. Please allow 6-8 weeks for delivery. Please include signed age statement with your order. Please take a bath, for Christ's sake!
O KNOW HIM, you love him, you can't live without him. Bob Larson is arguably the Fundamentalist world's most colorful broadcaster. Realizing as he does that his audience's capacity for nuance is negligible at best, Bob fearlessly (sometimes foolishly) goes where more timid Christians fear to tread. He has a thing for exposing "evil" wherever it may be, and has given many Church of Satan members a chance to be heard as guests on his nationally syndicated radio show, TALK-BACK. The results are often hilarious, sometimes sappy, and unless he's saving the soul of a wayward metalhead, never dull.

Bob Larson agreed to be interviewed by me for publication in The Black Flame, provided that his answers not be edited or amended. Well, here ya go—Bob Larson, uncutored!

Just so that The Black Flame readers have some sort of framework in which to put you, please tell us anything you like about yourself and your ministry.

I'm 49 years old and was born in California. My childhood and teenage years were spent on a farm in Nebraska. During my late high school and college years, I was a rock and roll musician, fronting a band that performed in the Midwest. While attending college, I accepted Jesus Christ as my Lord and Savior. After my conversion to Christianity, I left the University of Nebraska and for several years traveled for professional lecture agencies. Then I began writing Christian books and eventually got involved in full-time ministry. During those years, I traveled to 70 countries and spoke in churches of most major denominations. In 1983, I launched the nationally syndicated, live-by-satellite talk show TALK-BACK. I am the author of 22 books, including several that deal with the subject of Satanism. Unlike many ministries which "preach to the choir," our purpose is to confront the non-Christian with the truth of God's Word and the hope of Jesus Christ. Our ministry motto is "Hope for the hurting and help for the helpless."

You signed a letter that you sent to me, "Yours for the hurting, Bob Larson." Is this how you typically sign your correspondence, and if so, why?

The correspondence you received with the closing "Yours for the hurting," was actually an error. I do sign ministry-related mail that way when the person receiving the letter is a Christian who identifies with our mission. Otherwise, I simply say "Sincerely." Somehow the person doing my dictation didn't realize the letter was going to a Satanist and offered a Christian-closing. The closing "Yours for the hurting" is in reference to our mission of helping those who often have nowhere to turn and those individuals at the bottom end of society, who are not inclined to visit a church or turn to a counselor for help. Our talk show and ministry is often their last resort.

I have your set of "Bob Larson Speaks Out!" pamphlets, and I think that most Satanists would oppose some of the same things you do (i.e., marijuana, suicide, alcoholism, Jehovah's Witnesses, et cetera), albeit for different reasons. Would you comment on that? How would you say that we are fundamentally different, and where do our philosophies overlap, if they overlap?

It is interesting you've noted that evangelical Christians and Satanists do oppose some of the same problems in society. Obviously, we have different philosophical perspectives for doing so. The Church of Satan's perspective seems to simply be a social agenda concerned pragmatically with the hierarchical functioning of civilization devoid of any desire to please transcendent moral objectives. Don't they want to please Satan? In contrast, the Christian purpose is to facilitate peace on earth and social order among men by restraining those immoral conditions which would lead to social decay and injustice.
You offer Christian "grindcore" and heavy metal tapes to young people who call your show. Please elaborate on why you think uninitiated grieving and white noise about secular subjects is "satanic," but similar noisemaking in the name of Jesus helps your mission. I can't understand what's being said most of the time in either instance.

The essential difference between Christian and non-Christian music doesn't have anything to do with the sound of the music or the unintelligible expressions of the lyrics. The biggest difference between satanic death metal music and Christian grindcore is the motivational intent of the artist, which influences his or her image and public performances. Because young people idolize rockstars, they may emulate the philosophy held by that musician. Consequently, someone like King Diamond or Glenn Benton of Deicide represents evil imagery and gives further reinforcement to a young person's spiritual rebellion against God. Additionally, even when the lyrics are sung in an unintelligible manner, they are understood. I've been in many secular satanic death metal concerts, and most of the kids know the lyrics and lip-sync along with the performers. They've picked up the lyrics through constant repetition of the songs, or through printed versions of the lyrics available in fan magazines or on the CD inserts. Thus, they are philosophically influenced by what the songs say, even though the lyrics may not be decipherable in a concert setting.

What do you do for fun, and how do you reconcile it with your Christian beliefs?

I have a wide variety of recreational pursuits. I enjoy many sports. In addition, I enjoy the theater and musical concerts. Physical recreational activities have no spiritual component to them, so they represent no possible conflict. Other forms of amusement may artistically represent viewpoints I disagree with. I would not submit myself to an environment in which I would be unduly influenced by the evil presented, such as spending an evening at a gay nightclub or attending a pot party to be part of the festivities.

You present your material masterfully, with great bombast and perfect timing. What role does your technique of speaking and communication play in the success of your ministry?

Thank you for the compliment regarding my gifts of communication. However, I acknowledge these gifts have come from God. I am sure they have an impact on the success of our ministry since its achievements are attributable to God's blessings, as well as my diligent application of skills. Those skills did not come by human training. Nothing in my educational background or academic experience prepared me for what I do. James 1:17 tells us, "Every good gift comes from God." I believe the talents I have were divinely inspired, and it's up to me to make the wisest use of them. I try to do that every day and blend skill with spiritual purpose to achieve my goal.

If God loves us and created us, why will He send us to Hell for following our natural instincts, instincts that He ostensibly gave us? On a related bent, if the Devil is at fault for our sin, shouldn't God bear responsibility for this, since He made the Devil? If God is omniscient and benevolent, why did He allow all of this to happen? Can God make a stone so heavy that He cannot lift it? Aren't these inconsistencies in your religious system?

You make an assumption when you suggest that the immoral vices touted by Satanism are our "natural instincts." Some of these vices are instinctual as part of man's fallen nature. However, man is also a noble creature, according to the Bible, "made a little lower than the angels." Man yields himself to compassion, trust, honesty and benevolence, which are also natural instincts. The issue is not what is innate, but what conscious choices are made to either rebel against God's divine purpose or live in harmony with his interest for humanity. He doesn't condemn us for instinctual responses, but for willful rebellion against his stated divine purpose. Yes, God did create the devil but he didn't create him in an evil state. Quin the contrary. Satan was a highly moral exalted being in the beginning but like all of his creatures, God made Satan, like you and I, with the power of choice. Unfortunately, Satan used his choice to evil. Frankly, I don't think myself or any other theologian has a satisfactory answer as to what appears to be a contradiction between this and the omniscient knowledge of God. What we do know is that God created a moral universe, he created beings of choice and emotion, and has allowed us to decide whether or not we will serve him or rebel against his purposes. When you ask a question about God making a stone he can't lift, you commit the error of trying to use human examples to interpret divinely infinite truths. Omniscience and omnipotence are beyond human comprehension and it's futile to attempt to confine God, who has normally existed in the past and always shall exist in the future, into a human construct of finite comprehension.

What's Hell like? Are there sides?

Outside of scriptural statements, I have no idea what Hell is like. Even then, the picture is unclear. We know that it is "outer darkness" (Matthew 8:12). What is meant by "outer" I'm not certain except to say that it is apart from God and totally alienated from his presence of love and mercy. It is dark. I'm confident that you won't see anyone else in hell, nor even your own mirrored image. It is such torment that there is "weeping and wailing" (Matthew 8:12). Revelation Chapter 20 also tells us that it’s eternal. When conducting exorcisms, demons have pleaded with me not to be sent there. If a vile and perverted demon doesn’t want to be there, as a moral being I certainly wouldn’t want to end up there. To me, the issue isn’t how bad hell is but how wonderful heaven is, and I don’t want to miss that after all its trials in this life. When you choose death over life, there is only a one-way ride through the tunnel of death to the blackness of the abyss where there is no sound but your own grieving and where there is no sight, comprehensible to vision, and no benevolence or nobility reside.

Although you claim that Satanism and animal sacrifice go hand-in-hand, I know of no one in the Church of Satan who has performed any sacrifices. In fact, most Satanists I know have more than one pet, and generally love animals more than they do humans. How do you explain this? What are your views on animals? What about hunting? Do you have any pets?

Let me answer your specific questions first. My wife and I own a dog and a cat. I’m not a hunter, and never have been. I don’t object to others hunting, but I have some problems with the idea of sport hunting unless such activities are used to supply food and provisions. Regarding the issue of Satanists and animal sacrifice, you make the common mistake of assuming that “religious” Satanists such as those affiliated with the Church of Satan represent the entire scope of Satanism. Actually, your brand of Satanism is a very small representative of those committed to this philosophy. Your Jungian archetypal approach to evil is a minority viewpoint among Satanists. Most believe that Satan is a real creature who is appeased by the shedding of innocent blood. A helpless animal suffices in most cases. In a larger context, even your satanic philosophy implicitly justifies such practices, no matter what your specific edicts declare. Read pages 88 through 90 of The Satanic Bible and interpret that hateful exposition in the mind of a vengeful, dysfunctional person who is looking for a reason to justify harming another creature. The Church of Satan and The Satanic Bible provide the framework for people to codify their impulses of anger. Then you cleverly step back from the scene while they do the dirty work and you wash your hands as Pilor did. I think you are being intellectually dishonest about what your satanic philosophy may compel others to do in the name of Satan.

You have called The Black Flame a “perverted periodical.” It looks okay to me. How, specifically, is The Black Flame perverted, in your opinion?

You’ve listened to the show, so you know how much I appreciate alienation. That’s part of the reason behind calling The Black Flame a “perverted periodical.” It is perverted in that it convolutes all the moral thinking that undergirds civilization and spiritual values. It’s a perversion to say that hate, lust, greed, and uncontrolled sexual impulses are admirable characteristics. It’s perverted to suggest that hitting your enemy, rather than allowing good to overcome evil, is a proper ethic to live by.

You often cite refugee camps and homeless shelters as ideal arenas for the demonstration of Christian love and compassion, but it seems to me that a person’s real ability to love and have compassion might be better evidenced in other areas of life—i.e., personal relationships, marriages, concern for animals, etcetera. Explain how “mass love” is possible, and why it is preferable to love everyone generally instead of loving a carefully chosen few with intensity.

You miss the whole point of Christian compassion. Nowhere in the Bible is any sense of mass compassion continued to be a substitute for tenderness, intimacy, and selflessness in deeply personal relationships. The Christian does the Satanist one better. You may choose to love those who love you. We also do that, but we go beyond and love those who may have no capacity to love us. We extend our benevolence to them when they may never know who helped them and return the favor. The Bible puts it this way, “For what glory is it, if when you are buffeted for faults you take it patiently? But if you do well you suffer for it, you take it patiently, this is acceptable with God” (Peter 2:20). To a Christian, compassion is to be both indiscriminate and indiscriminate, specific and general. It is to be purposeful with intent, and unconditional in all circumstances.

Please give examples of music, art, movies and literature that you enjoy.

I enjoy a wide variety of music, art, movies, and literature.

Music—Rock to Bach; Art—Anything except the surrealistic, the abstract, and the horrific; Movies—That’s tough, because there aren’t many good ones. Most horror flicks are demonic, action films are too violent, and serious drama is in short demand. I recently enjoyed Remains of the Day, and The Age of Innocence. Literature—mainly non-fiction. The two favorite books I’m currently reading are The Guinness Book of Answers and The Evolution of Useful Things (these satisfy my quest for practical knowledge).

Here’s your chance to say anything you wish to a concentrated group of dedicated Satanists. What, in closing, do you have to say to this dark, frothing throng?

Satanists need to be more intellectually and emotionally honest. Most Satanists I’ve talked with are in a state of emotional denial about past hurts and disappointments.
Satanism is a convenient outlet to structure their frustration and vent their outrage. Instead of dealing with a problematic past and addressing the specific issue of who wronged them, they depersonalize their anger and make the whole human race their target. Satanism gives them a rationale to hide their true feelings and develop a "we versus they" mentality by aligning with a dysfunctional elite group who are likewise in a state of denial. Intellectually, Satanists don't really fully comprehend the nature of evil. Instead of overcoming evil with good as Christ commanded, they acquire to evil. They integrate it into their philosophical scheme and make it the friend rather than the enemy. In doing so, they feel a sense of comfort by ignoring the truly complex questions regarding love, compassion and the meaning of human existence. Love is one thing Satan doesn't understand and can't cope with. Instead of explaining its historical necessity in society, all motives of altruism and nobility are dismissed summarily by the Satanist. In doing so, they are the losers. By failing to take the risk of loving, they avoid rejection but also miss out on the opportunity for life's most fulfilling essence—the love of Christ as revealed by his death on the cross.

↓ ↓ ↓ ↓ ↓

(That was the unspurgated Bob Larson. Now for some Satanic TALK BACK by Peggy Nadramia, as Mr. Larson has made some statements that require clarification, especially for those reading this interview who are not Satanists.)

About midway through his interview Bob makes an assertion which is integral to the rest of his arguments and which we, as Satanists, must point out as fundamentally incorrect. Bob says, "You make the common mistake of assuming that 'religious' Satanists such as those affiliated with the Church of Satan represent the entire scope of Satanism. Actually, your brand of Satanism is a very small representative of those committed to this philosophy."

This idea serves Bob very well, in that it makes it easy for him to sidestep the rational arguments put forth by the successful, likable people who represent the Church of Satan. And it is wrong on several levels. Firstly, we will define what a Satanist is, not Bob Larson or any other outsider, Christian or otherwise. We are the first group of people in human history who have come together under that title and taken it for ourselves; we are the archivists of Satanic history and the caretakers of Satanic philosophy, and we will not have others defiling, delimiting or categorizing Satanists or Satanism. If Bob has to use a few extra words when he's writing or talking about Christian heretics or aged cat-killers, then that's his problem. Secondly, we also refuse to accept his false assertion that we are a minority in the "entire scope of Satanism." As Satanists we have a great deal more contact and experience with our own than Bob ever will, and he in no position to judge, based on the desperate calls from Christian basket-cases that come in over his lines, what most Satanists believe, or whether ours is the "minority viewpoint." Desperate people, particularly the young, quickly learn what to tell their "counselors" to get the special attention they crave, and if they're saying they worshiped Satan to keep Bob on the line, that doesn't mean it's true.

In the same area of his interview, Bob again brings up his oft-repeated idea that the Church of Satan is being somehow "crafty" or "deceitful" about the effects our philosophy may have on dysfunctional people—be thinks we enjoy having the nut-jobs of the world do our "dirty work," when the truth is that we don't care. Anton LaVey presents a philosophy of responsibility to the responsible, one that advocates live-and-let-live ethics. We can't be blamed when a reader of The Satanic Bible does what the book specifically says NOT to do. And of course, much "dirty work" has been done throughout history with the inspiration of the Holy Bible; I'm sure Bob is not advocating that we stop publishing that gristy tome.

When discussing the way Satanists and Christians oppose some of the same problems in society, Bob asks facetiously of Satanists, "Don't you want to please Satan?" Comment Bob, you know better than that. And it's even more interesting to hear Bob state that "the Christian purpose is to facilitate peace on earth and social order among men by restraining those immoral conditions which would lead to social decay and injustice." I'd respond that is the Satanist's purpose to facilitate peace in his own life, and to accomplish this there must be true social order among men, one brought about by removing the restraints on natural conditions such as stratification, and justice. The real "social decay" we all have to deal with was brought about by Christian egalitarianism and its secular sister, humanism.

Satanists don't deny that man is capable of the "angelic," as well as the beastly. Bob, no one whose heart has soared at the strains of a Beethoven symphony, or delighted at the sight of a painting by Michelangelo, can deny that. What we do deny, is that this "higher" nature is somehow "better" than that of other animals. We are intelligent enough to take over this world, but not smart enough to keep it alive for our own benefit. Sure, compassion and benevolence are natural to us, as well as anger and hate. Hunter-gatherers living in clans needed each other for survival and to keep their gene pool strong. What's not natural is the idea of sacrificing the goods of one's own tribe to benefit a weaker, alien tribe, simply for the transcendent Christian reason that this is "good."

You put us at loggerheads when you say that Satanists need to be more intellectually and emotionally honest, because we say the same of you. We believe Christians are fundamentally dishonest about man's real impulses, and more often than not, specifically dishonest when they solicit funds. We feel Satanism is the religion of ultimate intellectual honesty, because it is the first one to accept man as he really is. In our practice of Satanic magic and in our daily lives, we again have need of ultimate emotional honesty—those who can’t identify their true feelings, or who try to force their emotions into some sort of intellectual paradigm, are just spinning their wheels, ineffectual, impotent. As for the nature of Evil, we don’t believe it Evil in it’s own right. If you’re in Missouri watching your house float away, rain is evil; if you’re in Iowa watching your corn shrivel up, rain is good—the same rain.
We feel the same way about circumstances and events that others classify as “evil” or “good”. We don’t “acquiesce to evil,” only acknowledge our real impulses, and work to gratify them, or expunge them if we believe that they may be destructive or harmful to ourselves and those we love. You are in no position to say how a Satanist derives comfort; you are merely projecting here. And you are wholly in the realm of the imagination when you assert that “Love is the one thing Satar doesn’t understand and can’t cope with.” (See my essay in the last issue of The Black Flame entitled, “My Dark, Satanic Love.”) It is because of the passionate love Satanists feel for themselves, their loved ones and this beautiful planet that they oppose so viciously and militantly that which would destroy it—and we truly believe that Christian principles compounded by human stupidity pose an ultimate threat to ourselves and our environment.

Join our Infernal Legions!

ORDER OF THE EVIL EYE

Send $1.00 and a S.A.S.E.
To
Order of the Evil Eye
Official Headquarters
P.O. Box 272929
Tampa, Fl, 33688, U.S.A.
HE TIME HAS COME to deal head-on with the "fascist word. Modern Satanism is being increasingly infiltrated with the symbols, philosophy, and worldview of a specific political ideology: fascism. I am not referring to cases in which 'fascist' is thrown at us as a slur (a standard rhetorical practice of the intellectually bankrupt Left), but rather to those in our own ranks who claim the term. "Fascism," like "Satanism," is used in different senses by different people, but the fact remains that it has a very clear-cut meaning—one whose implications seem to elude some of us.

First, a statement of purpose. It is not my intent here to point the finger at anyone and say, "Your interpretation of Satanism differs from mine, therefore you are not worthy to call yourself a Satanist." My aim is to explain why the ideology of fascism seems to me to be absolutely irreconcilable both with our rational self-interest and with the core principles of our philosophy. The argument given here is my own, and I speak, for one or two. However, I believe that it is a solid one which demands to be put forth, and I feel I am as well suited as anyone to do so.

This being said, I will proceed to the matter at hand. In the Spring/Summer XXVI Black Flame,Nemo (whose words are consistently the most insightful to appear on these pages) pointed out that our proper relationship to our metaphorical deity is one of emulation, not worship. "What would Satan do?" is the question we should ask ourselves, not "What would Satan command us to do?"

Well, let's take it a step further: What did Satan do? Satan rebelled. He rose up against Jehovah, the supreme ruler of the Judeo-Christian cosmos, and utterly rejected that ruler's claim to any legitimate authority over him. This revolt against authority lies at the heart of the whole concept and mythology of Satan. Unlike most deities, Satan is not visualized as a sovereign figure issuing irresistible commands to man, but rather as a tempter, an enchanter of others into "sin" and rebellion (remember Eve and the apple!), a teacher and senior partner of those who reject the stifling moral paradigm of Christian society and embrace the darkness. Jehovah symbolizes absolute authority; the Christian believer embodies submission to that authority; Satan personifies revolt against it.

As I stated, "fascism" is a term with a clear-cut meaning. We know the theory behind it and we've seen it at work in practice—in Germany, Italy, Spain, and many other lands. Of course, there are always those people who know little of such history and like to throw around emotive words or stick a swastika on their stationery as an easy way to shock the grown-ups, but if they do this, they must and will be held accountable for what those things actually mean.

What does fascism actually mean? It means concentration of power in the hands of the State. It means extending the reach of this power into realms of society far beyond the bounds of the purely political, as the authority of the Church pervaded all areas of life centuries ago. It means the subordination of society and man to a Grand Vision of what both should be like—not the individual's vision, but that of those in authority over him. It means the bestowal of privilege on an artificial class consisting of those in favor with the rulers, as opposed to true Social Darwinism, in which superior beings rise to the top by their own efforts. It means the eradication or co-opting of rival concentrations of power within society which might challenge the State—including quasi-socialist control of business, albeit via strict regulation rather than outright nationalization. It means the disempowerment of the individual (fascist rulers are generally not too keen on private gun ownership). It means the suppression of dissent and independent thinking. One cannot proclaim oneself a "fascist" without embracing the above, to do so would be violating the integrity of our language.

To those Satanists who advocate fascism, I have the following to say: I really don't see what I would have to gain if some bizarre turn of events brought you to power (aside from a lot of sharp-looking occult symbolism on the flag and on public buildings), but I've got a pretty good idea what I'd stand to lose. Societies constructed on the basis of somebody's Grand Vision are invariably regimented, conformist, hostile to personal freedom, and exasperatingly boring to live in. They are the kind of societies which end up having to build walls around themselves to prevent all their independent thinkers from escaping to the society next door, where there is no Grand Vision and everyone does things his own way and minds his own business. Your "Satanic" fascist utopia would be no different. It would then be against your authority that all true individualists would be revolt, and they would therefore be the real Satanists, the true bearers of the torch of the Deity of Rebellion. And what would that make you? A true fascistIDGET? I would think not, and it's probably not the problem—the problem is authority itself.

Contrary to popular rhetoric, the United States is not a pure democracy—if it were, the foolishness of the masses would long ago have run it into the same ditch where the Weimar Republic ended up. The glory of the United States resides not in its democracy, but in the philosophy embodied in its Bill of Rights—in its Decalogue of freedom which, in dramatic contrast to that of Moses, addresses its "I-thou-shalt-nots" not to the individual man, but to the State which would otherwise grind him under. It is this restraint on centralized authority that protects our freedom, not some mystical wisdom residing in those (including the masses) who share in guiding that authority. And so it is this protection which the authoritarianists of both left and right have been trying for decades to undermine and destroy.

Yes, our present social order is depressingly conformist—but why try to replace it with fascism, which would be even more so?

To me, the only truly Satanic social order is an anarchist/libertarian one (the polar opposite of fascism), wherein personal freedom is at a maximum and authority is dispersed and decentralized, wherein Stratiification takes place via individual achievement rather than via selection from on high. Only thus can we truly vanquish the Jehovah archetype, as opposed to accepting its mantle. Only thus can we avoid turning into the very thing we were fighting against, and facing the absurd consequence that only those who oppose us will be able to claim genuine inheritors of our tradition.

Only thus, too, can we reinvigorate natural law and natural selection. Nature is anarchist, not fascist. No higher power picks and chooses superior species and grants them the right to survive, consigning others to evolution's dustbin; instead, types, small groups, and individual beasts compete, the unfit die out or are driven into marginal ecological niches, and the strongest and smartest and best-adapted prevail and flourish—until the next battle. Primate social groups usually have dominant individuals (as any small group of humans will tend to be dominated by one or two members by force of personality), but even these are constantly defied and challenged, and cannot long hold their position against a stronger claimant—there is no such thing among non-human animals as institutionalized authority. The only form of organization in nature resembling a fascist system is the ant colony, and even this similarity is only superficial since the controlling "authority" resides not in a supreme Führer-ant but in non-conscious programmed behavior patterns. In any case, the ant colony's uniformity as a model for a society of Satanic seems to me to be self-evident.

I don't need to be given authority as a member of an artificially privileged class—I manage quite well on my own, thank you very much. I want there to be no authority, beyond the bare minimum needed to defend our own interests and to prevent the human garbage from running riot and turning the entire country into South Central L.A. Of course, last April's rioting showed us once again how pathetically inept the bloated behemoth State is at performing the latter function (see my article in the Spring/Summer XXVII issue). What really saved this was individual self-defense, while the State authorities did nothing until it was all over anyway, and then immediately started beating about gun-control to prevent individual self-defense next time.

If you want security, don't look to the State; all it is good for is telling you that you cannot buy this gun, you cannot fuck that person, you cannot do this, that, and the other thing, et cetera ad nauseam.

Self-proclaimed Satanic fascists: Please learn some history. The State is both dangerous and useless. It is inherently an enemy of personal freedom and an incompetent protector. It cannot be trusted. Ever. Anywhere. This problem cannot be resolved by seizing control of the State in the name of Jesus Christ or The People or even Satan. It can only be resolved by getting rid of the damn thing. Since the masses are probably not mature enough for society to function stably without some sort of government, and since (to the author's knowledge) no practical method of privatizing national defense has ever been devised, the problem cannot really be resolved at all. But it can and must be minimized—by restricting the power of the State, by stopping and rolling back its growth, by slashing to the bone its ability to vamiprise the productive citizen through taxation, by resisting its every attempt to intrude further upon our lives through its malignant plalanx of gun-control laws, etc. which are constantly metastasizing into new areas of the body politic. That is, by fighting back against its inherent tendency toward fascism.

Authoritarianism seeks comrades in an individualist movement like Satanism are really looking in the wrong place. After all, there is a genuine fascist movement in the United States, even though it does not (yet) call itself by that name. It is large and powerful. It has infiltrated and essentially taken over the Republican Party. It has an agenda to concentrate State power and use it to transform and reshape and control society every bit as profoundly as did its spiritual predecessors in Berlin and Moscow and the Vatican. It is called the Christian Right, and millions of glassy-eyed, sexually-repressed zombies stand ready in suburbs from coast to coast to rally at the call of its scowling, Bible-beating leaders. Fascism fits the Jehovan paradigm perfectly, after all. All power to the Almighty! Obedience as the greatest virtue, rebellion as the very embodiment of evil! All this ranting about sin and morality and Traditional Values attracts control-freaks the way manure attracts flies. It is like that, rest assured he is reviving himself up to try and ban something.*

*So, fascists, if my words here have annoyed you, take heart. Your unacknowledged fellows may yet prevail, and the

In my opinion, the fact that the Christian Right flaunted its control of the Republican Party so ostentatiously (at the Houston convention and in the party platform) was part of the reason for that party's recent loss of the White House. As I write this, it is too early to tell whether this defeat will inspire the rational elements within the party to try and regain control (or perhaps form a new party).
Pacifist Utopia will arise at last. Prayer and creationism will return to the schools. All those ubiquitous people who talk to you by having different opinions, or by following some lifestyle which you find offensive, will have to shut up and keep it under wraps. And there will be strict laws against abortion, homosexuality, adultery, promiscuity, pornography, flag-burning, interracial sex, naughty rap lyrics, and anything else which someone on the Central Committee happens to dislike. Against Satanism too, of course, but you know what they say about onions and eggs.

Re-read the Infernal Diarist, Chapter II. God damn! Could this slashing repudiation of the very concept of orthodoxy have been published, under the Nazi regime, to denounce the "established sophisms" and "embroidered lies" of the Nazi ideology? Could it have been addressed, in the late unlamented Soviet anthill, to the "haughty moral dogmas" of Marx, even after they had been "proven by results," in the form of decades of economic disaster, "to be but empty fiction?" When all ideas can be freely expressed, survival of the fittest will ultimately lead to the triumph of the best ideas. I am fully confident that the Satanic philosophy embodies the best ideas for the next phase of human development. It is only those who lack such confidence in their philosophy who feel the need to impose it by force and fear.

Satanism must not be allowed to degenerate into another tiresome exercise in creating a monster to protect us and then discovering that we have nothing to protect us against the monster. Countless ideologies and religions and political systems have already done that. Satanism is about self-reliance. A true Satanic society means a population of free-spirited, well-armed, fully-conscious, self-disciplined individuals, who will neither need nor tolerate any external entity "protecting" them or telling them what they can and cannot do. Such a society can arise only after we have expunged the herd-consciousness and submissiveness to authority which lie at the root of both Christianity and fascism.

Witches! Have you been touched by Satan?...

...Or perhaps another supernatural or alien being? If so, I'd like to hear from you. I'm researching a new book on true womanly power, contemporary sexual mythology, and connections with Satanism and Evil. I'd like to get some frank answers from women who haven't had a chance to voice certain dark thoughts. Anonymity is assured -- names will not be required, but honesty is essential. To receive a questionnaire, please send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to:

Blanche Barton
Post Office Box 710082
San Francisco, CA 94121

FROM THE PIT
A QUARTERLY SATANIC PUBLICATION

SINGLE ISSUE $5 / $4 OUTSIDE US
ONE YEAR SUBSCRIPTION: $12 / $16 OUTSIDE US

ALL PAYMENT MUST BE IN U.S. FUNDS
MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO MICHAEL ROSE

SEND TO:
MICHAEL ROSE
P.O. BOX 143
DECATUR, AL 35602-143 USA

Dark Reflections
Unaffiliated bi-monthly zine for the intellectual Satanist, issued by Jeffrey Deboo: the Satanism of Indulgence and Individualism, without fascist/racist/authoritarian nonsense or "unholier-than-thou" one-true-way-ism

Within USA:
1 issue $4.00, 6-issue sub $20.00
Outside USA:
1 issue $5.00, 6-issue sub $25.00

All orders must be accompanied by signed age statement (over 18)
US funds only, payable to:
Jeffrey Deboo
1442-A Walnut Street #64
Berkeley CA 94769
A 5 ORGANIZED SATANISM becomes more and more equipped to deal with the challenges of the future, it is not surprising that many on our side have adopted a progressively uncompromising stance. Certain members of the Satanic community cannot come to terms with this development, and are disturbed at its reception with key aspects of traditional Fascism (for it is "occult" or political) and National Socialism. It is, however, a perfectly natural evolution. The present world is one in which extreme situations increasingly demand extreme solutions. It is not a time for cowards. The shrill whine of the contemporary "victim culture" has replaced most all forms of true culture. Given the preponderance of this victim culture—glorifying the lowest and holding no one accountable for his or her actions—a heroic Fascism in a pure form would be a welcome antidote. The same can be said for many of the tenets of National Socialism, including the dreaded "Holocaust" (which in the future will have far less stringent entrance requirements).

Fascism means many things to many people, just as Satanism does. I see no point to endless discussions of what Fascism or Satanism may or may not be. Frankly, those of us who actually create things of value don't have the time to waste on these debates. By accepting the title of Satanist one does not necessarily endorse the ideas or behavior of others who also call themselves Satanists. Still, an intelligent person realizes that by adopting an image or title you will probably be taken to task for some of the less-than-intelligent activities of others who adopt the same image. That's life, and shouldn't deserve anyone of strong will from using the tools and symbols they want to use, for their own reasons, without apology.

I have heard many a sniveling whine that the U.S. Government is "Nazified," the Christian Fundamentalists are "fascist" and so on, ad nauseam. I've heard it argued (usually by pagans) that National Socialism was somehow an outgrowth of Hitler's Catholicism. People who are usually omitted to their own bizarre opinions, but instead of asking them at their word, I prefer to go to the source: Hitler's Reich Minister, Martin Bormann, proclaimed in 1942 that "National Socialist and Christian concepts are incompatible." The most influential philosopher of Fascism and post-war right-wing extremism in Europe, Julius Evola, stated definitively in 1928: "The identification of our tradition with the Christian and Catholic Church is the most absurd of all errors." Now, who do you want to believe?

I have no interest in presenting a defensive argument of my position according to the terms of weaklings who want to wrangle with semantics. All of this smacks of the victim culture which I abhor. Instead of belaboring the question of whether Satanism is inherently Fascist (the answer seems quite obvious to me), I think it may be more enlightening to approach these matters from an entirely different angle. What follows is an essay presenting the argument that Fascism (and National Socialism) were, at their core, invasively Fascist—in essence, Satanic. This article was originally presented as a term paper for a course on the history of the Faust movement at the University of Colorado at Denver in the Spring of 1973.

THE FAUSTIAN SPIRIT OF FASCISM FROM OSWALD MOSLEY TO OSAWALD SPENGLER

"Only a sufficiently extensive area on this globe guarantees a native freedom of existence...we are placed in this world on condition of an eternal struggle for daily bread, as beings to whom nothing shall be given and who owe their position as lords of the earth only to the genius and courage with which they know how to struggle for and defend it."

Adolf Hitler, Mein Kampf

"I work that millions may possess this space, if not secure, a free and active race. Here man and beast, in green and fertile fields, will know the joy, that new-reared region yields. Here wisdom speaks its final word and right None of freedom or life deserving Unless he daily conquers it anew ."

Goethe, Faust Part Two

Fascism as a political ideology has, since its general demise in the West following the Second World War, become symbolic of "evil" for many commentators and historians, particularly when contrasted with the so-called freedom-loving (hence, "good") ideals of democracy. In many ways this stigma is quite apt, as a little known inspiration for many "Fascist" ideologues and politicians came from the characteristic of the Satanic magus Faust by Johann Wolfgang von Goethe. Many of the prominent thieves from Goethe's masterpiece were also central to leftist thinkers spanning from Nietzsche and historical philosopher Oswald Spengler, to National Socialists such as Alfred Rosenberg and even Hitler himself. The direct line of "Faustian" politics was later spoken up specifically by the English leader of the British Union of Fascists, Sir Oswald Mosley, who was a disciple of Spengler, as well as being powerfully inspired by the literature of Goethe. In this essay I will attempt to illustrate this line of thought from the early Nineteenth Century up to its present ramifications.

In many ways Goethe's drama Faust could be said to embody the Zeitgeist of Western man from the time it was published, as well as being a prophetical look into the future. The dominant themes of man straining to obtain the status of a god on earth and the disregard for the heavenly rewards of Christianity can be seen reflected in the rapid industrialization of the Nineteenth Century and the increasingly scientific outlook of many philosophers. With the publication of Darwin's theory of evolution, the concept of mankind's divine creation as put forth in the Bible began to appear unlikely, if not altogether false. In the realm of philosophy, Friedrich Nietzsche (1844-1900) most forcefully elucidated the concept of man ascen to godlike form, embodied in his term the "Ubermensch" ("superman") or "overman," At the same time Nietzsche violently vilified the tenets and practices of Christianity, which he detested as the hallmarks of a religion fit only for slaves. A clear advocacy of aristocratic conquest and rulership, also espoused by Faust's pronouncements at the end of the drama's Part Two, can be seen in the following lines from Nietzsche's philosophical novel, Thus Spake Zarathustra: "O my brethren, I consecrate you to be, and show unto you the way to a new nobility. Ye shall become progenitors and breeders andowers of the future.

"Your children's land ye shall love (be this your new nobility), the land undiscovered in the remotest sea for it I bid you sell and seek!"

While Nietzsche speaks here in a more metaphorical sense, much like Faust himself in the earlier sections of Part One, on many occasions he did specifically refer to politics in a similar manner. Much has been made of the Nazis' implementation of Nietzschean ideals into the real world of social engineering, and many modern day scholars (in particular the late translator of Nietzsche, Walter Kaufmann) have tried to argue that Nietzsche never means his ideas to be taken literally, in a political sense. However, it is not at all difficult to locate many quotations which support the case that Nietzsche did await an age of uncompromising power politics, which would certainly live up to most people's conceptions of Fascism, and in fact as entire book has been written on the subject, strongly refuting the claims of many Nietzsche "apologists." One typical quote sufficient to illustrate the point can be found in Section 208 of Beyond Good and Evil: "...the opposite would be more after my heart—I mean such an increase in the menace of Russia that Europe would have to resolve to become menacing, too, namely to acquire one will by means of a new case that would rule Europe, a long terrible will of its own that would be able to cast its goals millennia hence—so that the long drawn out comedy of its many splinter states as well as its dynastic and democratic splinter will come to an end—and then politics is over; the very next century will bring the fight for the dominion of the earth—the compulsion to great politics."

Regardless of whether or not Nietzsche himself would have approved of the consequences the general aims of National Socialism, along with the entire Fascist axis, can easily be seen to correspond with such a scenario even down to the unification of Europe to fight against a Russian menace— the central idea behind Hitler's pan-European military force, the Walhalla S.S. So, while Nietzsche does not refer by name to a "Faustian" impulse in his writings, in many ways his philosophy bridged the gap between such an impulse and its later application by the National Socialists and Fascists.

The philosopher of the Twentieth Century who did specifically incorporate the idea of "Faustian" Man into his writings, and who exerted a strong influence on many aspects of Faustic thought, was Oswald Spengler (1880-1936). Most famous for his massive interpretation of history entitled The Decline of the West, Spengler posited an argument that civilizations are organic entities and thus, like other living organisms, have a cyclical existence of birth, acme, decline, and eventual death. Spengler then interpreted the achievements of different cultures as falling into three general phases, which he named after the seasons: Spring, Summer, Fall, and, exceptionally, final dissolution. Winter. Strongly influenced by Goethe and Nietzsche, Spengler outlined various ideas from both men, which he fused into his own outlook on history. His indebtedness to Goethe, and to Faust in particular, is evident in his terming Western man and civilization as "Faustian" in nature. This spirit embodied the notion of ceaseless striving, he is for knowledge, territory, empire. In his later work Man and Technics, Spengler relates the relation between Faustian Man and technology with the quest of perpetual motion: "This last idea (perpetual motion) never thereafter let us go in his hold on us, for success would mean the final victory over "God or Nature," a small world of one's own creation moving like the great world, in virtue of its own forces and obeying the hand of man alone. To build a world of steel to be used by God—that is the Faustian inventor's dream, and from it has sprung all our desiring and re-creating of machines to approximate as nearly as possible to the work of the limit of perpetual motion. The booty-idea of the beast of prey is thought to us is logical and Not this or that bit of the world, as when Prometheus stole fire, but the world itself, complete with its secret of force, is dragged away as spoil to be built into our Culture. But he who was not himself possessed by this will to power over all nature would necessarily feel all his desire, and in fact men have always regarded machines as the invention of the devil—with Roger Bacon begins the long line of scientists who suffer as magicians and heretics."

Although Spengler gloated in this Western "will to power," his greater concept of the cyclical destiny of all civilization meant that the present age, beginning approximately at the onset of the Nineteenth Century, was doomed as the "Winter" period of inevitable decline and eventual collapse. As the commentator on Spenglerian theory elaborates on the signs of this dissolution:

"Spengler dated the Decline of the West as early as 1880, the onset of the winter period. Decline in any culture occurs when there is a widespread feeling that the existing institutions and ideals are no longer viable. In the life history of every culture, there comes a point when its original validity has been dispelled—when it is experiencing either a profound "failure of nerve" or bureaucratic decadence. This "failure of nerve" manifests itself as a loss of faith and instinct as intellectualism pure and simple. In a declining culture, Spengler observes, "the brain rules because the soul abdicates."

Along with Oswald Spengler, the predominant ideological figures of the National Socialist movement in Germany in the 1920s and 1930s also exhibited a strong inspiration from the idea of a "Faustian" spirit inherent to European culture. In a similar situation to that with Nietzsche's philosophy, the Nazis took this concept and applied it in practice, often with overwhelming results. In a sense this translation of concept into reality is itself inherently "Faustian," as Nazi philosopher Alfred Rosenberg draws attention to in his huge work The Myth of the Twentieth Century:

"Goethe spent much of his creative energy in promoting the virtues of intellectual activity. The greatest hymn to human activity is his Faust. After the exploration and penetration of all science, of all love and suffering, Faust is liberated through the deed, i.e., action. To his powerful spirit which sought always to comprehend the infinite, ...thought was the most useful faculty for the man, the final sense of life, the tool to conquer the unknown."
In the last two sentences of the above quote, it would be easy to see the same Hitler substitutted for that of Goethe, and such sentiments appear often in National Socialist texts. Seen by many Germans of the time as a god-like creature sent by Providence to rescue the nation, Adolf Hitler in many ways fulfilled the role of a modern day Faust, who attempts to become a "lord of the earth" through the means of action, "the deed." Baldur von Schirach, the leader of the Hitler Youth, voiced this thought when he said, "Faust, the Ninth Symphony, and the will of Adolf Hitler are eternal youth and know neither time nor transience." Indeed, the resemblance between certain words spoken by Hitler in Mein Kampf and those of Faust at the end of Part Two is uncanny. During the draining of the swamp just before Faust's death at the age of one hundred, he states, "None is of freedom or life deserving / Unless he daily conquers it anew." Rephrased by Hitler in his chapter on "Nacion and Race," the same idea is conveyed: "He who wants to live should fight, therefore, and he who does not want to battle in this world of eternal struggle does not deserve to be alive." There are likewise strong parallels between Faust's determination to create new living space for his people as a final, ideal act and Hitler's persistent theme of additional Lebensräumen which it was the Germans' destiny to obtain at any cost. While in agreement on the basic concept of unceasing struggle and innovation, Spengler and the Nazis differed strongly when it came to an outlook toward the future. Spengler, as stated earlier, believed that the fate of the West was preordained and unchanged, leading to imminent collapse. The Nazis, on the other hand, saw themselves, and Hitler in particular, as figures of regeneration which would lead Europe toward a rebirth and the founding of a "thousand year Reich." It is in this dedication to their goal that they went even further than that of the Faust. During Faust's program of creating a new area of living space, Mephistopheles and The Three are asked to move an old couple from their home to make way for the construction effort. The couple are killed as a result, which angers Faust and causes him to shout at Mephistopheles, "My curse on this exploit of yours! Now take your share of curse and go!" In contrast, the unceasing attitude toward such casualties that was accepted and amplified by many of the Nazi leaders is expressed in the lines spoken in the Chorus at this point: "You serve the mighty with a will / Let you be brave where knocks are brisk / And house, and home and life you risk." The furthest extreme of this sentiment, and the darkest reflection of Spengler's idea that "the world itself, complete with its secret of force, is dragged away as spoil to be built into our Culture," is expressed bluntly and callously in Heinrich Himmler's October 4th, 1943 speech to a meeting of SS major-generals, referring to the casualties of war in Russia: "We must be honest, decent, loyal and combatively to members of our own blood, but to nobody else.... What the nations can offer us in the way of good blood of our type, we will take, if necessary by kidnapping their children and raising them here with us. Whether nations live in prosperity or starve to death interests me only in so far as we need them as slaves for our Kultur; otherwise, it is of no interest to me. Whether 10,000 Russian females fall down from exhaustion digging an anti-tank ditch interests me only in so far as the anti-tank ditch for Germany is finished...."

It is here at this point, when Faustian conquest assumes purely racial grounds, that Spengler would have found it reprehensible. It is certainly the case that Spengler himself did not see Hitler as any kind of embodiment of Faustian Man, and this is evidenced by his remarks after they met and talked with one another: "Silent next to him, one did not gain the slightest inkling that he represented anything significant." Another Faustian leader, far less extreme than the Nazis but just as influential by the Faustian ideal, was the Englishman Sir Oswald Mosley (1896-1980). After an involvement in various political groups, both Conservative and Labour, he moved further and further towards an openly Fascist organization, inspired by Mussolini's successes in Italy. In 1932 Mosley officially founded the British Union of Fascists, who were also known as the Blackshirts. After enjoying a growing mass of followers and a certain amount of influence, Mosley and other British Fascist leaders were imprisoned in internment camps during the war, as the government considered them a potentially subversive force. Mosley was deeply indebted to Spengler for providing a foundation for the ideology with which he would attempt to guide the B.U.F., and he referred to him in an early speech as "the great German philosopher," who had "probably done more than any other to paint in the broad background of Fascist thought." Despite such public pronouncements, Mosley was unable to fully embrace Spengler's interpretation of history as a philosophy in and of itself, for exactly the same reasons as the National Socialists. The thrust of Fascism, as a force that intended to rejuvenate a decayed West suffering from the symptoms of democracy and Rousseau-inspired humanism, couldn't accept Spengler's dire predictions of an unalterable, organic, final end. For the Nazis the Faustian force which would turn the tables was Hitler, while for Mosley it was scientific technology. In his words, Spengler had failed to properly take into account "modern scientific and mechanical developments: if you look through the Spenglerian spectacles you are bound to come to a conclusion of extreme pessimism because they obscure the factor which for the first time places in the hands of man the ability to eliminate the poverty problem." Although he saw a means to regeneration through the diligent application of science to the problems of modern life, Mosley also felt himself to be one of the new breed of Fascist men who had the vision to recognize such solutions. As his biographer, Robert Skidelsky, writes: "Of all the things he read in prison, Goethe's Faust made the most profound impression on Mosley after the war, he published an English translation, with an introduction by himself. He identified his own destiny with that of Faust: which in turn made that destiny more conscious..."

Mosley elaborated on his own particular interpretation of this destiny in his book The Alternative, published in 1947, after his period of imprisonment. As he eloquently states: "When all illusions have been destroyed we still return to the basic question—it is likely that anything so complex as the Universe, and so profound as the evolution of man...can have lacked purpose and design?" Even the paradox of evil, which long appeared to contravene the presence of any beneficent or creative providence, takes its place in the pattern of things as an agent which stirs from lethargy, and demands the answer of a new energy that carries men forward.... Nature drives man until he is sufficiently developed to advance under his own power, when the flame of the spirit is ignited.

...the purpose of life is not self-development, but the development of the self in Achievement, as an artist in action and life, who creates, also, for humanity. The proud words, 'I serve,' see in each man also the highest expression of self-development. He serves the purpose of God in assisting the emergence of higher forms of life. No mechanisms of Society or of Government can function unless we can produce more such men, and serve are the lights of humanity.

That Mosley here is calling for a new breed of Faustian Men in whom to invest the fire of Europe is quite clear. It is in such men, ceaselessly striving and yet willing to sacrifice themselves for the greater good, just as Faust attempted to do before his death, that both Fascism and National Socialism placed their ultimate faith.

These leaders come in their assessment of the West. This is a question that remains to be answered once and for all. Certainly, during their active years those who dared alike themselves with Fascism were the object of antagonism from the agents of democracy, who stopped at nothing to remove them from the world's stage. The current, status quo position on both Fascism and National Socialism as political creeds is no less tolerant, and if anything has become even more heatedly illiberal towards the philosophical underpinnings of these movements. In light of this, it could be said that the idea of the "Faustian spirit," when translated into politics, has herefore been unacceptable and irreconcilable with the dominant forces of democratic idealism. But while the Fascists of the last century may have been discredited by the powers-that-be, the more all-encompassing Faustian concepts of Oswald Spengler have waxed. Although he is largely ignored and forgotten, Spengler's predictions continue to be vindicated in many ways. Perhaps Western Man is unable to alter the course of decline, and here is where the Faustian politicians deluded themselves with self-historicized visions. The continued acceptance of an altruistic, democratic worldview may merely be, as Spengler thought, a sign of the decay, a symptom of the "Winter" of Western Civilization. Grim and politically incurred as they may seem, historicominous concluding words in Men and Technics ring with a chilling note of truth:

"The other have caught up with..."
SECRET AND SUPPRESSED edited by Jim Keith (Peral House, Portland, Oregon, 1995; 315 pages, $12.95, trade paperback).

A compendium of conspiracy theories, subtitled Beardless Ideals and Hidden History. As the editor observes, "America's electronic and print media are simultaneously 'free' and heavily controlled." As more and more subjects become objective to the special interest groups who are gaining a stranglehold on free speech, you can expect more such "secrets" information to enter the rumor mills. Objective reporting has gone the way of all things and you'll need sources like this to get any idea of what's happening out there.

Chapters include, "My Father is a Clone," "Remote Mind Control Technology," "The Masonic Ripper," "Why Waco?" and "Secrets From the Vatican Library." A fascinating survey that will keep you up nights and have you looking over your shoulder. Don't miss the "secret message" on the book's cover. Editor Jim Keith is looking for more, and includes his contact address. See Peral House's ad elsewhere in this issue.

THE RAVEN, edited and published by Grotto ODM, P.O. Box 163, Stratford, CT 06497-0163. $3.00 per issue, inquire about subscriptions.

The Raven takes everything with a grain of salt, this is the Satanist journal of humor and good living, just comforting, fun stuff. Nevertheless, the layout is crisp, neat, lively and interesting. Each issue is 8.5" X 11.5" with dark-blue Wexler cover.

Vol. 0, No. 1 (January 1993) is the "Witches and Wiccan" issue. Targets of the Raven's barb include Wiccans and new Agers. There's a recipe for "Wiccan Chicken," a very funny strip-up of Chinese Restaurants, and the "Rantin' and Raven" column includes some movie reviews.

The Halloween issue was subdued to a re-numbering, and so is issue #6. Issues include "Why You Shouldn't Watch TV" (about the H&S Special on Satanism), Catholic Ritual Abuse, a new definition of "woman,” "Sexual Harassment in the Workplace," and "True Stories of the Tender Sex," which really makes you want to punch a feminist. There's also a critique of women's clothing trends, a recipe for BoBo Cake, and a survey about whisky.

Issue #8 celebrates the Winter solstice with a letter from "Fr. Guido Sarlucchi," a treatise on Xmas that begins, "I could just pulse," how "bitching" works in a Satanic groto, an O. Henry pastiche, "My Trip with The Devil," "Consumer Reports" on fast food, and my favorite piece, "Interview with An Ashhole," in which one of Raven's editors interviews his incredibly dense, Fundamentalist boss. There are also some amusing news items and some bowdy solstice songs. There's also a recipe for cheesecake and some yummy winter drinks, and an imaginary interview between Bob Larson and Aleister Crowley. And much more! This issue is dedicated to the late Vincent Price.

Issue #9, Valentine's Day, includes Words for Today, in which the editors re-define a few things, the amazing story of a ponedled Aleister Crowley button, a wonderful poem by Neil Smith, a recipe for "Pir," a survey about champagne, and an interesting translation (from the Italian) of an old Jesuit book that gets very specific about Satan and Hell. Includes another installment of the comic strip, "Dogman," by a very young Satanist.

A wickedly funny view of airline food begins Issue #10, and Loki of Hell's Kitchen goes on to give an example by including a recipe for USAir Chicken. This is the Travel issue, and it discusses luggage handling, shows various members of the Grotto ODM in appropriate traveling attire, describes "punitive seating" (why you should be nice to ticket agents) and contains much, much more.

The Raven and Grotto ODM represent Satanic diversity at its best.

DARK REFLECTIONS, a journal written and published by Jeffrey Deboo, 1442A Walnut St., #64, Berkeley, CA 94709. Each issue is $4.00 US/$5.00 foreign, and a six-issue subscription is $20.00 US/$25.00 foreign. Each issue is about 32 pages, 8.5" X 11.5" with dark-red folio covers.

Issue #2 begins with an excellent "Opening Reflection," includes "Sex Gone Sour (guesting Groto)," "Heaven and the Body" (compares the physical needs of ancient man with today's obsession with "fittin'"), "The Great Divide" (illustrating "multi-culturalism"), and the main article, "Aids and the Neo-Puritans." Each issue is rounded out with quotes and reviews of the typewriter-typing is clean and eminently readable, and editor Deboo is careful to include sharp graphics and artwork wherever he can.

Issue #3 is a special issue concerned with Japan, "The Real Pagan Superpower." The opening essay is excellent. Other pieces include one on Shinto, Japanese porn (illustrated with actual comics), and a comparison of views between Islam, the West and Japan. Also an interpretation of what the Bill of Rights means today.

Issue #4 begins with an interesting column of "Random Thoughts," then continues with a thought-provoking essay that attempts to answer the ever-present question, "Why Satan?" "Dumbing Down" examines our culture's ever-declining standards for cultural literacy. There's a piece on "Our True Way-ism in Satan," an essay on the "Tyranny of the Weak," and wonderful creatures drawn by Timothy Patrick Bolder.

"Justice Without Morality" in issue #5 reveals that Deboo opposes the death penalty, surprising for a Satanist, but his reasons are well-presented. It makes me wonder if he ever threw a curve, and how he would feel if he later found out that his object didn't really deserve it. Hmmm. Another piece talks about the "dualism" in Christianity, namely, their two Gods, Jesus and Jehovah. A hilarious jab at "The Satanic Pent" follows, along with a feature of this journal, "Human Nature Watch," wherein Deboo briefly observes a phenomenon from a Satanist perspective. Reading through all these issues one can quickly learn that the editor's pet peev is with the Satanic community is factionalising, finger-pointing, "I am but you ain't a Satanist." So his interesting when, in "Satan's Dilemma," Deboo has to confront another Satanist tribalism (in case, Joe Auffricht and his mag, Revenerations) and hurl himself publically.

In issue 6, we hear about the "colonization" of all our cultures, worldwide, by Christianity and/or Islam. Satanism represents a de-colonization process. There's a letter to Joe Auffricht (see above) and a piece on Indulgence. Deboo says therein, "I would never have thought it Order of Dionysus/Sabazios, P. O. Box 711, Lukewood, OH 44121. Single issue is $4.00 US/$5.00 foreign. Four-issue subscription is $16.00 US/$20.00 foreign. Digest-sized, usually about 30 pages, with the ever-present red cover!

You've gotta be amused by a mag that calls itself a "zine right on its own cow." Aufricht is concerned mainly with sexuality and youthfulness. He is not only interested in spending time with young people (he is 32) but in somehow recapturing his own youth and reviving himself through another "allowing" him to be playful and zitty. What has this got to do with Satanic Y-25 girls is as good as mine. I suppose Aufricht could be responding to what is known about the natural magic in children and the young in The Satanic Bible, but he doesn't make that clear. What he does do is ramble on, arguing for the "freedom of trend" and generally whining about whatever crosses his mind. Aufricht reviews heavy metal groups exhaustively, and includes personal ads, some of which are soliciting relationships that are illegal in some states.

Issue #7 includes "Nice Christians My Ass!" and a piece wherein Joe points out that Freudian psychology was founded by Freud—thinks, Joe! The ed. also takes on "the True Origin of Rock Music" and "Stoners."

Issue #6 discusses Family Values, an explanation of the Order of Dionysus/Sabazios, "Dentz Need Counseling," (uh-huh), "Shyness," "A Calling," Mark Twain, having your cake and eating it, too (Joe informs us that you do this by cutting the cake in half—why didn't I think of that?) and "Romantic Love for Teens," which reveals Joe's view of romance as being about the depth and breadth of a Paul Anka song.

Hit Hot with Issue #5 Joe has thrown out Jimmy Olsen's typewriter and claimed access to a better one. He discusses "true Satanists" in opposition to the other kind (yawn). Also included is an article by "Hermes" on man/boy love, and why it should be okay for boys 13 and up to have relationships with men; Hermes goes on to describe a Satanic grimoire devoted solely to such relationships. It's fantasy, but you'll have to pardon me while I HEAVE over this one. Aufricht outlines the recent verbal bashing he's received from other Satanic publishers who have pulled their ads from his publication. There's a terrible poem on the back cover, and an ad that is headlined, "Kids Pack Too?" We were willing to give Joe some rope, but it looks like he's used it all up with this last issue—I'm not sure you'll see anymore TFB ads in Repercussion, either.

On to THE HERETIC, like a breath of fresh air after the above. Published and edited by R. Bolton, P. O. Box 38262, Petone, Wellington, New Zealand. Overseas to the US is $10.00 for four issues, $15.00 air. Good deal. Each issue has 24 very packed digest-sized pages. Make any checks going to this address payable to Realist Publications.

Issue #7 includes news on the Ritual Action Group, a view of the various books and items available now, a review of global events, pieces on Evoking the Dark Goddess, De Baakkerjedik, Pride of Lucifer, Sinistra Vivendi, and more jive at the Temple of Set. Also included are poems, reviews, letters and columns from other officials in Bolton's Order of the Left Hand Path—recently reconstituted as the Orden Sinistra Vivendi.

Issue #6 begins with a piece on a new book by the New Slovenian Knutt, the art collective most distinguished by its musical arm, Lab LIC. The philosophy here is that true art is made by individuals within a national tradition and identity, "politicized, ideological art." While this sound too fancy for some of you (and maybe even for me) it's interesting to note that the outcome is rather good music and beautiful visual art—say, you examined an expensive hardcover book with color plates that documents the NSK's museum installations, and I was impressed. There's an announcement that Magister Bolsos has handed over the reins of the Orden Sinistra Vivendi (formerly the Order of the Left-Hand Path) to Print Herri Boteen. "The Inner Meaning of the Seven-Fold Way" details the O.N.A.'s initiatory practice, and there's also an interview with O.N.A.'s Chariton Bean. Also interviewed is Ray Forrest, leader of the Church of the Final Judgement, this group takes their inspiration from the words of Charles Manson, and Charlie is the subject of their discussion. The usual news, reviews, and a concluding essay with bite.

Operating at the same address in New Zealand is the Black Order. Their aims: "To (a) Study the esoteric current behind

First of all, this little group is NOT the Church of Satan, thanks. Their publication is an energetic mixture of Satanic clip art, ads for "swingers," desktop-produced "certificates" for membership in their Order (just fill in your name and "martial status" on the application provided) and lots of interesting articles reprinted from other publications. Many ads and contact addresses for other Satanic-oriented publications; the Satanic seal here is infectious, and this one may improve when the editor focuses himself and includes more original writings of his own.

SERPENTINE, Issue #1, Jan/Feb '94, edited and published by Vinny Polite, P.O. Box 612, Westwood, NJ 07675. $5.00 US, $6.00 elsewhere, full-sized, stapled-on-side, 17 pages plus neon pink cover.

The editor tells us that "this is the issue of a lifetime! Finally a premiere zine [sic] that will show people what the world of Satanism is really about! Okay... A very difficult-to-read typeface here, and it's used in all-caps. Essays include "Through the Eyes of Reality, "Exposing the Deception of the Church," and "Satanic Sex," dealing with overpopulation. There are reprints of articles from other publications and ads for other Satanic forums. I think this one's way overpriced for what you're getting, but Vinny is enthusiastic and I'm looking forward to his second issue.

On the other hand, we've got THE BLACK PUNK-KIN, Vol. 1, No. 1, the Newsletter of the Infernal Garrison, "Toronto's Base in Satanic Awareness," edited by Doug Richards, P.O. Box 59049, 7250 Government Dr., Mississauga, Ontario, Canada L4T 4J1. Full-sized, spiralled bound on orange paper with blue covers, 50 pages, $10.00 US, $7.00 US for members of The Infernal Garrison.

Chock-full of many and various Satanic cartoons, poems, essays and artwork, this is a delightfully nasty first issue. Firstly, their "Black PUNK-kin" logo is nicely rendered and cute without being sickening. "Jesu is a psychotic megalomaniac" steals one essay, while another concerns itself with "The Death Cult—Christianity." Particularly strong was a prose-poem, "Welcome to Hell," and a Bogsue cartoon depicting activities in one castle's dungeon. There was also "The Witches Corner" by Marguerite Thompson, featuring Loki the Cat, a Satanic "Dear Abby" praised over by Jack O. Lantern and Iona Witch, a piece on "My Satanic Baptism," Satanic weddings and funerals, and much, much more. This one is definitely worth your dollars.

THE BURNING GROUND, Volume 1, Issues 1 and 2, edited and published by Ray H. Williams, The Beheren Temple, Wotan Templeworks Ltd, 5 Rue Gabriel Perret, 57000 Metz, France. Digitized, about 20 pages with self-cover, white paper, nearly typset with clean graphic style, $3.00 for single issue, $12.00 for four-issue subscription. These are US prices and the entire magazine is in English.

Billing itself the "quarterly magazine of Satanic Propaganda, exploring the implications and applications of Alien Theism, Syncretic Eclecticism and Manonthropic Cynicism," this publication makes use of several good pieces by Jeffrey Deboo and Michael Rose, reprinted from other magazines. Also extensive reviews of musical music groups and interviews with same conducted by editor Williams. French Satanism is off to a good footing with this one.

Dr. J. KURUK, MD, sends out a sheaf of articles and a letter of introduction to whomever he thinks may be interested. Dr. Kuruk bills himself as a doctor of metaphysics, a "fallen angel," who acknowledges at last both his dark and light sides: "I feel he has found too many Wiccan/Pagans/New Ager to be too Feminist, too Bickering, too Backstabbing, and especially, too Ontenastic [sic] of their personal selves. Therefore, while I feel [his new magical name] continues to live in a positive life style during the day, he shall become the Mr. Hyde of his own nature by night, and practice the religion of Satanism." His articles include a fantasy ritual of himself as a thirteen-year-old boy, getting peed upon by black hooded figures (gheg), and a fantasy of a "Satanic egg." There's also an essay dealing with Anton LaVey, whom he acknowledges as the true Magus of Satanism, for recognizing the balance of good and evil in the work. If you're interested, send Dr. Kuruk a couple of bucks or something of your own creation, to 6221 Holabird Ave., "P," Baltimore, MD 21224.

ONSLAUGHT, Vol. 4, No. 3 and 4, edited by Draconius Undoomed, published by the Luciferian Light Group, P.O. Box 7207, Tampa, FL 33673. Single issue: $5.00, yearly subscription: $25.00 US, $30.00 elsewhere. Full-sized, stapled-on-side, 24 pages plus contrasting cover (neon pink and "parchment," respectively.

The LLG is that group that believes "that the Aryan people are the true children of Satan and the rightful masters of the world." Issue #4, 32 pages, contains two pages of an editorial by Undoomed, two pages of "Dastine Hell," a feature reviewing news articles around the world, and the rest is ads, reviews and information about affiliating with LLG, taking their "doctrinal course," and ordering their merchandise. Issue #4 is similar, bumped up to 32 pages with a four-page editorial, a four-page "Dastine Hell," and a two-page essay by Jack Grimes, director of the Aryan Racial Loyalist Party. Undoomed also includes one of the more powerful sections of Might is Right. The rest is contact addresses, instructions for joining the LLG and ads. The review section has expanded into the area of heavy metal bands. The all-caps, typewriter typeetting is readable but not particularly attractive.

THE UNHOLY, Issue #1, edited and published by Chad Miller (he's back), P.O. Box 998, Stewart, BC, Canada, V0T 1W0. Two pieces of 8.5" X 11" paper, neatly typset on both sides, consisting entirely of Might is Right. If you want this, I'd send a couple of bucks—their's post-office box and all. Chad's accompanying letter, for those of you following his saga, says he's left the Temple of Set and now considers most Satanists to be "sharks," and will now "follow [his own] satanic philosophy in [his] day-to-day life, unprompted by idées or psychs." So if you're one of the above, don't write to Chad.

Issue #3 has two pages. The first contains a quote from Hitler and a couple of short essays: "A Satanic Confession," about carnality, and "Signalling," about how to identify Mersson at a Satanic event. The second page is a two-column list of Satanic contact addresses. Issue #4 is considerably longer, six double-sided pages, including the more often-scarred piece of artwork in Satanism, the Baphomet by Eliban Levi.
THE BLACK FLAME 22  VOLUME S, 1 & 2

by Lemonheads (talk about Mannon).

AZURE PLUME, issue #4, PO Box 3142, Champaign, IL 61826. Single issue: $2.00 US. Digest-sized, 20 pages, pale blue cover concrete. Spot-dot matrix typography.

Includes a lengthy interview with a writer, and a sidebar defining occult terms. "Dedicated to diversity."

HANGING AROUND, issue #5, edited and published by Patrick Calvin, Hummertime 11, 5374 34 Karlshamn, Sweden. No price given. Full-sized, 66 pages plus red (sigh) cover, messy computer-wheel typography, often in all-caps.

It's in Swedish, okay? But it includes articles about Giger, Manon, Bukowski, Crowley and lots of bands.

GREY AREAS, PO Box 808, Bromall, PA 19008-008. Single issue: $7.00 US (first class)/ $9.00 elsewhere (air mail); subscriptions: $26.00 US/ $34.00 elsewhere. Full-sized, 130 pages, full color, slick covers, glossy interior stock, professional (but very tiny) typography and graphics.

Vol. 2, Issue #3, contains an interview with Ivan Stang of the Church of the SubGenius, Tales of an LSD Eater. A Day With the R.K.S., and a ton of reviews. These people review everything, at length: books, t-shirts, audio, video, software, concerts and catalogs. Vol. 3, Issue #1, deals with prisons, smart drugs, an X'mas dominatrix, and more.

The editors take their inspiration from The Grateful Dead, but don't focus on the band; rather, they have moved out into the mainstream. There's a hacker flavor here, too obvious in the editors' insistence on listing every piece of software and hardware that went into the manufacture and production of the magazine.

In #24, extended interviews with a number of musicians Deborah Harry, Lydia Lunch, Electric Hellfire Club, more. In #25, interviews with H.R. Giger and Lairs In-Wait are random in another full issue. George Petrov (of EXIT) is an editor here.

SEPULCHRAL NOISE, issue #7, edited and published by Cuthocan, Box 489, 1501 Saarbrueck, Norway. Single issue: $8.00 US cash only, Full-sized, stapled on the side, 44 pages including cover, computer-wheel typography improved with creative page design and lots of line drawings.

"Road to Nowhere: The Occult Viking Way" shows the cover, sporting a j Shipman heaving a goat. Among the many discussions of bands and their music are sandwiched articles about the Lucioperceptor Light, Balder, the OTB and Nonodium.

BATTLE OF BETHWICKTON, edited and published by Robert Hög, Kungsgatan 248, S-651 30 Uddevalla, Sweden. Write for price, or send something of your own for trade. Full-sized, 26 pages with reduced computer-wheel setting, hard to read, B&W covers.

There's definitely a Satanic bent here, although the focus is on heavy metal music. Issue #1 includes an interview with Vincent Crowley of Acheron, some cool pictures, and talks about other bands like Behemoth, Therion and Impaled Nazarene. Issue #2 discusses Necromancia and The Affiliated.

PREACHER: BLOOD FOR THE BLOODGOD, a comic book written and illustrated by Juho Vuonna, Merikankoski, 128 34, 90260 Oulu, Finland. 5.00 US. Comic sized, 26 pages with glossy B&W covers, send on the GM West, this action adventure shows Christianity as the Monster. Skillful drawings, and climaxes with the "hero" thinking, "You can't escape the hate of God!" The Epiclog warns against the Death Cult, Christianity (actually, a reprint of a Strey put out by Realtar Publications).

GUEST REVIEWS

THE OCCULT HISTORY OF THE THIRD REICH, 4 VHS video tapes, 50 to 65 minutes each, Military Heritage Video Collection, 100 Fusion way, Country Club Hills, IL 60418, 800-959-0061, $99.95 each or $99.92 for the complete series.

Walter J. Gallis, reviewer.

"Those who see in National Socialism a political movement know scarcely little of it." One of the more ironic quotes from the narration of tape #3, Adolf Hitler.

When I first saw this series advertised in the Military Heritage Video Collection my initial reaction was one of surprise. Having never seen this topic addressed in a mainstream/mass market format (and not one, but count 'em, four videos) my curiosity got the better of me.

Judging from the packaging and the subtle and effective opening sequence (a la the Batman music video) credit someone has put a lot of effort into this series and am sure with some very mixed results.

Himmmler The Myth #87/#92 is a case in point. By far the best in the series, this video exemplifies the problems/benefits of viewing these documentaries. The basic ground covered; there is mention of The Edda Society, Karl Willigun, the Weewsburg castle—but here it is, if any, new material for the advanced student. One notable exception is the Weewensburg material. We are treated to scenes of the renovation, some interesting shots of the interior when under construction and the "Eternal Flare" and the "Crypto." This alone is worth the price of this video. The advertisement cites "weirdly discovered footage," action of "totally Nazi, the Rastafarian, and the Cachin American Bund, which are interesting but not relevant to the topic at hand. The viewer also has to wade through much filler material (SS adventures into Poland and Russia) to get at the occasional "pearl."

The other four are similar calibre. Tape #1 (5737), The Enigma of the Swastika, has some interesting background on the topic for those unfamiliar with it, but overall is very basic material.

The third in the series (5739), Adolf Hitler, contains little information on the occult—much filler material aboundes with recapitulation of clips used in the prior video. An inordinate amount of time is devoted to "the Final Solution."

In The SS Blood & Soil (5740), #4, we have again much of the filler material seen on the previous videos; Madam Blavatsky's "Hidden Elect" are mentioned and Aleister Crowley makes a brief cameo. There is also a rather simplistic evaluation of the SA/SS rivalry which again has little to do with... Serious students of this topic are referred to The Occult and the Third Reich by Augsburger, The Spear of Destiny by Xavierrocof, Satan and Swastika by King, and Occult Reich by Brennan. There is little here of substance and few points to provoke thought. Archival footage is presented haphazardly, with no intelligible sequence and no proper conclusion. This series is strictly for the completist collector.

SATAN'S TAROT, Occultic Haven, P.O. Box 257, Johnston City, TN 37765, USA; Black & White Edition $39.95, Special Full Color Edition $175.00.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

Here's something you don't see often, a newly redesigned Tarot-type deck of 78 cards completely based on Satanic concepts. Gone are the major and minor Arcanas. Instead we have 19 Keys, 9 Satanic Statements, 7 Deadly Sins, 9 Gates of Hell, Gates of the Eternal Void, Gods of Light, Forces of Darkness, the 26 Selected Powers of Hell and finally five cards embodying the 10 Alphabets of Desire. Each card is a generous 3 1/2 x 6 inches wide by 5 inches tall. The reverse of each has a Baphomet sigil with a Steve Ditko-esque framing design. The images on the cards themselves are quite striking—many were conjured from dreams dedicated to the concepts behind each particular card. There is a preponderance of sex and violence in these images, letting them the quality of explicit archetypal experiences. While the technical level of the drawings is not advanced (like many Tarot decks), this is certainly compensated by the uniqueness of the visualisations.

Particularly striking are Key 15—showing those who reenact to the Dark Force on one side of an Abyss, across which the White-lighters lie in death or insanity (some plunge into the void) while in the background the sheets of Black Flame beyond which is a mask of the Levi Baphomet, with a face wreathed from the Black Flame. Key 6—showing a near naked triumphant woman before a Baphomet sigil, right hand raised in the omens style, left dripping a dagger while Christ clings to her left leg and Cthulhu holds his vacant Tar-crown. Two demons are in attendance and a Saturn mask holds the hammer and nails and finally Key 3—showing a vision of Dr. LaVey clutching the Earth and breathing his influence in the form of Devils upon the surface of the globe.

This deck comes with a 40-page digest sized booklet which explains the cards significance and gives instructions for how to use them. This is a truly new approach to the Tarot, and if working with such cards has any interest, you will want one of these decks for your personal experiences and meditation.

SATAN'S CALENDAR, 1st Edition of Evil (28-29), Occultic Haven, P.O. Box 257, Johnston City, TN 37765, USA; From November 1, 1993 to October 31, 1994, $14.95.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

This calendar has color images from the above described Satan's Tarot. Each page is 8.5 x 11 vertically laid out and each is covered with a plastic sheet for protection. If you enjoy the cards, you'll also like to have these large versions to spend each month in your view. Minimizers of the cards are also available for $11.95 each (padded 11" x 14"). Do send for our Occultic Haven's calendar of merchandise, as they are Satanic specialists (the proprietors are Satanists) and can get you anything you might require for your ritual activities.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

Here is a book which attempts to bolster the Christian fostered "Satanic Panic" by collecting various ill-researched entries into the format of an encyclopedia, no doubt to add apparent weight to its flimsy credibility. While entries on Anton LaVey, The Church of Satan, Michael Aqquino, and The Temple of Set aren't too off-base, numerous other articles are written from the same vantage point (I can pull many of his sources off my shelf and know them for the dated works they are). Apparently in his rush to get this "important document" into print, Newton didn't take the time to fact check or update his material. There's a great deal of polemical bluster format pieces on criminals who can only be typed as "satanic" by the Christian cops who seek to support the conspiracy thrive. The illustrations for this biased tome consist mainly of mug shots of the jailed white trash which the author claims "satanic criminals" plus some demonic sigils from grimoires, as well as some ill-drawn symbols alleged to be "satanic" by the Christian anti-Satanist propagandists. All in all, a truly laughable effort in the eyes of anyone who knows anything about the subject. Don't waste your money unless you think it's something you collect.
If you missed the Rolling Stone interview with Dr. LaVey, an expanded version of it is part of this book which includes "attacks" by this author upon five other contemporary religious leaders, including Marilyn Murray O'Fair who is given particularly poor treatment. In his piece on Will Campbell, Wright is made to confront his own motives for seeking out these leaders and the following is rather revealing. "I... had wanted to be the assumed one, the one who had the message, who had looked inside himself and found the answer and now brought it forth to the hungry masses. That is why I chose to write not about religion but about religious leaders— it was not just their beliefs I was drawn to but their role.

...there was more here than the mixture of images and envy that a reporter might feel around a politician or an athlete. There was savage, unfeigned longing. This has must have been the source of that rage I discovered in myself when I entered the church in Dallas, a rage that I carried in different degrees throughout my life. Oh, the yearning, the aching, famished need to believe! That was what powered me as I ransacked other people's beliefs, looking for something I could swallow, something unshakable, something defensible to believe. But there had never been anything there I could accept, no coat of faith that was tailored for me.

And how cruelly perceptive of Hall to see that gap inside me, which would envy spiritual leaders, and which would even labor to bring them down, but which prevented me from ever actually taking their place. I could only destroy. I couldn't proclaim my own beliefs or finally even know them... At least I knew now what I was up to."

And so do we. What a fine example of a Thesaurus personality, what some would call a Klipoth. Avoid this vampire and his poisoned writings.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

Here we go again. Yet another "expert" enters the fray with a volume that covers topics that have been dealt with in greater depth and with keener insights by others. In his introduction, Parker debunks the ritual abuse scare for the farce that it was—well and good. He moves on to discuss neo-paganism and has information regarding Chris Bragg and his battles with the fundy-influenced media. In this section he also discusses some material from The Satanic Witch, basically to illustrate the reader. In this same chapter "A Darker Calling" he also explores the alleged "pagan vampires" and states that "The use of blood in many occultic rituals is common...", quite debatable at the vast number of such rituals now in print call for no such thing. A very few call for the use of drops of the practitioner's own blood, or other bodily fluids, but he has truly exaggerated here. Next he discusses ceremonial magicians and Crowley, finally moving on to a discussion of Satanism. Here Parker's penchant for sensationalism isando is given full reign. He states on page 242, "While the mainstream and 'official' cults deny the charges of sacrificial ritual and bloodlust, there are many less formal coverings of worshippers and pseudo-satanic sects, some returning to a kind of ritual—which I shall show—that provides the blood, sex and disgust that the detractors of satanic worship insist is prevalent, and on that point alone I must agree with the opposition... It is a lot of old. Conversely, it would be clearly very wrong to indicate that satanism are all bloodthirsty, child- molesting monsters." Well Mr. Parker, it would not only be wrong to make the claim in the final sentence quoted here, but legally actionable! Parker provides no evidence that there is "a lot of such illegal activities practiced by anyone. Thus he perpetuates the fundamentalist Christian myth that there are these so-called 'cult leaders' grouping about and actually committing the act that they dare not accuse the real Satans of performing. He goes on to mention many of the actually existing Satanic groups, but often has skewed facts about them.

There are some interesting rare photos to illustrate the text, but Parker's intent is to present some reality while filling in the cracks with unshareable assertions that he hopes will thereby gain credibility. That kind of volume is in reality a propagandist blatant misrepresenting as a work of scholarship and erudition. Don't waste your money.

If you got worn. Let's quote the disclaimer that starts the book: "The authors in no way endorse, advocate or recommend any practices in this book which are illegal. For those who wish to practice making pacts with demons in a knowledgeable logical way to accomplish the practices described in this book without breaking any legal boundaries. It seems clear that they are going to present illegal practices; for historical interest, to be sure. This deadly tome, filled with second-rate art by Black, is basically a condoned history of Black Magic and so-called Satanic practices. This part isn't badly done, but quite superficial as it has been handled better elsewhere. Then they move on to the "practice" half of the book which consists of some of the historical primers edited for comprehensibility, ready for those youthful dabblers to take out for a ride. I failed to mention that the authors both believe in the existence of demons and thus that they can be contacted (they detail their supernatural experiences to lend support to this position).

Here is just the volume that the misguided devil-worshipers are looking for—rituals for contacting demons and making blood sacrifices. They do suggest that substituting one's sexual fluids is a legal alternative, but suppose those meat-based dabblers want to be authentic? Now they won't try to resist to blame The Satanic Bible anymore as this book will do the trick. Thanks guys! I can't wait 'til Gerald holds up a copy when the next drug crazed teen kills a cat (or worse) then gets caught. The authors will deserve the attention they will garner.

This volume is dangerous for what it might generate. We've gotten flack for our Bible which rejecting sacrifice. Don't they think they'll get flack for a book which gives instructions for sacrifice, though it is to tell you there are alternatives? It looks like the pseudo-Satanists of the Shadow Temple (could both Black's be coincidentally?) would be in good company with the fans of this travesty. Trees died in vain for this book.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.
DEATH-MAINISTRY published it was quite funny to read that "each assailing" sword-bladin' issue would git Satan's Face into the grit and smear in his worm-en-shells' So they paraphrased Redbeard in the service of their queer daze. Even funnier is the cover image with the nine title composed of worms (barely readable as a most lethal-mold-ep balloon with the interior explanation stating that these letters "symbolise us in comparison to Goddess Almighty. We are nothing more than wretched wrinkling worms, unworthy of existence..." We'll take them at their word. This is really just like a typical metalhead music tape, but the badly rendered cartoons depict various devils in defeat. There's a letter exchange between Vincent Crowley of Acheron and the editor, various band reviews, "Chick Trick" style comics, oddities and interviews. The height of religious debate seems to be "My God's better than your Devil, 'cause he says so in his scriptures." Kind of like arguing with a Christian Power Human. Not very sophisticated, but then what can one expect from someone who believes that he's the literal word of God in his hand!

THE ATLANTIS PROJECT, 4132 So. Rainbow Blvd., Ste. 388, Las Vegas, NV 89103

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

Here's something you don't see everyday, an organisation that's trying to launch a new country—this time in humanly-constructed floating cities functioning as a confederation. Or better be to be a laissez-faire capitalist heaven, with great opportunity for those who like to make their own way in this world. If you enjoy the exploitation of possible utopias, then check out these folks.

THE ART OF EVIL, Avast of Satan, P.O. Box 4026, Central Station, Portland, OR 97207-4026 USA.

Peter H. Gilmore, reviewer.

At long last you can finally purchase photographic prints of two pieces by that Satanic master of the airwaves, Diabolik Rex. These are limited edition, signed and numbered full-color photos of paintings that are produced in actuals in and of themselves. "Spirit of Apocalypse" (which can be seen on the cover of this issue) is a flying red phantasmagoria of The Beast. "Satan III" (look for the advertisements) a subtle earth-toned image of the Prince of Darkness. They are not priced, but large (60" X 20"), high quality color photographs whose surface is as deep and shiny as glass. Just put them in a frame and they'll adorn your powerful presence to your chamber ($125 each or $725 for both).
all seems to stem from his misdirected youth wherein his desires never led to his satisfaction.

This tape is a monologue with some musical selections wherein Aufricht presents reminiscences of his youth-as-a-loser that may have a cathartic experience for himself. He tries to sing, to do impressions of folk he remembers, and act as a narrator, but fails. Such monologues are often performed with success by comedians like Gene Phillips, but Aufricht seems to think this is some model for others to follow rather than a comedy act. During the course of this 90 minute tape, Aufricht exposes himself and it is not a pretty sight. I would think that this tape might be of use to some therapists who want to make a case study of Aufricht’s type, but otherwise it is a tedious and pathetic waste of time and money. There is nothing either Satanic or eccentric about this for the listener, though it may have seemed both to Mr. Aufricht.

STAR WARS TRILOGY. John Williams, 4 CD boxed set, Arieta Records, 6 West 57th Street, New York, NY 10019.

If you enjoy the bombastic, energetic work of John Williams—particularly the wonderful, integral scores that he wrote for Lucas’ STAR WARS trilogy—then this is the set for which you’ve been waiting. The first film in this series heralds a return for the symphonic score to Hollywood that had been swamped with inanely vacuous song scores since the 1960s. Within the four story of this set you will find the complete music for these films in a dramatically logical sequence (one disc per film), with tracks never before released, while the final disc presents music recorded but not used in the film cut and previously unreleased. Three discs are art relating to the films embodied therein, while the fourth disc has a picture of the composer conducting the orchestra. This is truly a feat of well-crafted music packaging is a format that is both intelligent and tastefully dramatic. Plenty of good stuff here for ritual use.

SATANIC CINEMA

By Peter H. Gilmore

There have been a couple of films out since our last issue which I’m certain that our readers will find to be of interest.

THE NIGHTMARE BEFORE CHRISTMAS continues Tim Burton’s exploration of the outsider who thinks that he wants to be part of the world of the “normal” but then discovers through traumatic interaction that his nature is not compatible with theirs. Jack Skellington, the Pumpkin King of Halloweentown, stumbles upon the world allowed to Christmas, and decides to understand it by doing it better. So he kidnaps “Sandy Claws” and makes the various monstrous denizens of his holiday world turn their talents toward Christmas production, with amusingly disastrous results. This animated film is amazingly rendered in technology updated technique mastered by George Pal in his puppeteons. There is a European sensibility of Gallician angles and Cow-like characters that is nothing short of stunning. Danny Elfman has woven a great score with delightful songs (he is quite wonderfully an Jack’s role here).

Particularly nice is the "Making Christmas" song with its Dixie melodic refrain. This should probably prove to be a new classic that will make an appearance every Hallowen.

Also weirdly strange was the ADDAMS FAMILY VALUES sequel to the fun first film. Here, the Addams’ truly take the plunge into promoting their Satanism in the face of a dreary world of normalcy. In the opening credits Morton gives birth to a little boy named Pubert (hinting that a certain Satanite little boy made his debut in this world at the same time). When asked whether the child was male or female, Gomez replied, “It’s an Addam’s!” We are born different! This movie has much fun for Satanism, as the Addamses live a Satanic existence, promoting their tribe over that of the herd. There is a truly funny (and amusingly Satanic) sequence wherein Wednesday and Pugsley are sent to a particularly egregious summer camp populated by ultra-PC WASPS who do their best to love-bomb the own Addams children into submission. What is amusing is that the script reveals the real hatred that underlies the efforts of the Christian-types in their professed loving behavior. Fear not, as the Addams young are more than capable of turning the tables in a climatic “Thanksgiving pageant”.

There’s Satanic humor aplenty with our values and aesthetics being championed by the Addamses at every turn. I don’t know what the herd folk would like about this film, as it shockingly shows their Theistic-oriented selves as they try to trash those who differ. I also suggest that you seek out the various anthologies of Charles Addams’ original cartoons as they are classic of black humor that set Satanic standards that still hold true.

These are both films that you might want to rent or purchase on video to share with your children, as they will provide material for discussion and a positive depiction of the role of the Satanic outsider and how they deal with the mediocrity dominated world.
SATAN III (above)
From an evocation of the 19th Enochian Key comes this mysterious image of the Lord of Darkness in one of his Klippothic manifestations (16 x 16 inches). Price $125.00

SPIRIT OF APOCALYPSE (on the cover of this issue)
Measuring 16 x 20 inches and painted in dazzling blood reds, this unique work portrays the ravaging beast of the Apocalypse as envisioned through a blood rite of resurgent atavism! Print number one of a forthcoming portfolio, the A.O.S. is making this work available for the first time. Price $125.00

BOTH PRINTS CAN BE HAD FOR A TOTAL PRICE OF $225.00

Send checks, money orders, or bank draughts in U.S. funds to:

ASYLUM OF SATAN
P.O. BOX 40361, CENTRAL STATION, PORTLAND, OR 97240-0361, USA

[Don't miss Diabolos Rex's work in the "Cult Rapture" Show, Seattle Center of Contemporary Art, September 15 - October 31, 1994.]
ANIMATE ALL WHO FIGHT AGAINST SERVITUDE. The heroes and martyrs of liberty and progress in every age have drunk of very spirit. I inspire the revoler, the sorer, the skeptic, the satirist. I still distribute the tree of knowledge. I am the soul of the world. I am the lightning of the human mind. I loosed thorns and sars and annihilate binding customs. With a good of rentless aspirations I urge men on until they outgrow faith and fear, until the slave stands before the tyrants on his own."

These words were written in 1869 by an Italian revolutionary named Carducci and the god of rebels he was paying homage to was Satan. Over a century on and we no longer have any need for these medieval devils, demons and hunky bogeymen. Or do we? Despite the best efforts of the progressive Church and rationalizing atheists to exorcise him for good, the Devil continues to haunt not just theological debate, but tabloid headlines "Rape Hell in Satan's Coven," "Satan perves e habes." Thus, and a thousand other horror stories like them, are peddled to a sensation-hungry public by the yellow press across the Western world. But just what is the connection between Carducci’s Hymn to Satan and the tidal wave of sexual violence and murder some say is engulfing our society under the banner of Satanism?

The simple answer is that there is no connection. The myth of Satanic child abuse and murder that has seeped in the public consciousness bears no resemblance to any historical Satanist tradition, or the published doctrines of any established modern Satanist. A San Francisco conference of the world’s leading criminologists in 1991 concluded that there wasn’t a "shred of evidence" to back up the Satanic child abuse and murder stories. That they were indeed a "collective hysteria on both sides of the Atlantic." This is an opinion echoed by secular law enforcement authorities and academic experts across the world.

But the myth survives. The "no smoke without fire" thesis has lodged in peoples’ minds, and those that have fostered and provoked this destructive rumour, continue to promote it. They are in a symbiotic relationship with the popular press. For the Satanic panic-mongers it makes their own radical Christian faith seem more real, creates a climate of suspicion around those holding alternative beliefs and attracts the attention at sympathy their flawed personalities crave. For the media, any story featuring Old Nick sells papers. The collapse of the Satanic abuse trials and exposures of the hypocrisy and dishonesty of the Satanist myth’s propagators is not considered so newsworthy. So the innocent families suffer while the myth grows, and, in some cases, those guilty of crimes are freed as the cases are tainted by imaginary stories of Devil worship by the myth-mongers with their twisted, hidden agendas.

So where do these stories—that Satanists eat babies, that there are Satanists in the Royal Family—come from? Interestingly, the most common Satanic charges are not new. The Jews have been persecuted throughout history for their supposed habits of eating Christian babies, drinking blood and poisoning wells.

Before them, in a delicious irony, the Christians were persecuted by the Romans for cannibalism, sexual depravity and doing terrible things to children. Today’s radical Christians recognize that, after World War II, persecuting the Jews is rather bad form, so they invent a new bogeyman to justify their paranoia and extremism.

That bogeyman is Satanism. And the charges! Well, think of the most awful things a person might do—murder, cannibalism, snuff films, child pornography—and that (for no discernible reason) is what we are told Satanists do. They present no evidence. You’ve just got to trust these people. Don’t. There’s no tradition of Satanists murdering children, though a quick flick through the Bible reveals Abraham required to sacrifice Isaac, his first-born son, by the Christian God in the book of Genesis. The same God sacrificed his own son, Jesus Christ. There’s no evidence to suggest Satanists have any interest in the disgusting crime of molesting children.

But, too-searching within Christian Churches has revealed this as a real problem amongst the innocent-faithed clergy. As for cannibalism—the magical transformation of wine and bread into human flesh and blood for consumption during Christian communion is pretty suspect.

Satan is seen by some occultists as God's shadow. In the same way, these radical Christians are seeing dirt reflections of their darker side in the Satanists they have created. They are barking at their own shadows. Aside from the terrible damage to innocent families and individuals brought about by the spurious charges of Satanic abuse generated by the myth’s creators, there is always the horrible likelihood that someone will imitate the Satanist stereotype the radical Christians have invented. The longer irresponsible Christians keep floating their idea of Satanism, the more likely it becomes that some sick, alienated individual will try to live up to their twisted invention. And the responsibility will sit squarely on the shoulders of the Christian fundamentalists.

So, if they don’t spend their lives perpetrating "evil," what do Satanists do? True Satanists follow a philosophical, rather than religious or magical path. They don’t worship or believe in gods or devils. They don’t simply reverse all Christian moral doctrine.

They reverse one, that of faith. Faith, the pillar of any religion, translates into believing in something you have no evidence of whatsoever. The Satanist believes in knowledge over faith. The nobility of standing up against orthodoxies and oppressions you know to be wrong, regardless of the pressures to conform and obey around you. Lucifer, the symbolic first rebel, stood against the ultimate symbolic threat, God. This is the noble tradition which Carducci followed all those years ago and remains a position worthy of respect. In the words of George Bernard Shaw, "All great truths begin as blasphemies," and the Satanist as a blasphemy in himself. We must stop burning our heretics and start listening to them.

[This article originally appeared in Saltmag and is reprinted here by permission of the author.]

STRANGE MUSIC
Anton LaVey

10' EP (vinyl only)
7 songs, 25 minutes

NOW AVAILABLE
$10.00 postpaid
(To Canada/Mexico, $11.00 ppd.
All other countries, $13.00 ppd. U.S. Funds)

Make money order or check payable to Gregg Turkington

Amarillo Records
P.O. Box 24433
San Francisco CA
94121 USA

LUCIFER RISING
A BOOK OF SIN, DEVIL-WORSHIP, AND ROCK & ROLL
by GAVIN BADDELEY
(ISBN 1 897465 55 6 - £13.59/$20.00)
A4 Selbacard with rare illustrations

Lucifer Rising is an attempt to present a true picture of Satanic tradition as manifested in history, on the modern occult scene, and in popular culture—particularly rock music. Here you will find a work which translates the heretical energy of the Infernal spirit into cracking text and darkly dazzling imagery. Impeccably researched, conversely approachable and startlingly irreverent.
Lucifer Rising is no mere petty blasphemy nor history of a fringe cult. In its pages is Western civilization's hidden history, a tradition thrown into shadow by the State and Church, but to this day erupts into popular culture and private belief by virtue of the Satanic archetype's virality and potency. Lucifer, God of rebellion and Lord of the forbidden, is new.

Contains extensive interview material with Anton LaVey, as well as many prominent Satanists from both sides of the Atlantic, and candid material from Black Metal's most influential and extreme existents.

AVAILABLE IN BOOKSTORES IN JUNE (UK), JULY (US).
HKP MAY ALSO STOCK THIS TITLE. SEND A SELF-ADDRESSED STAMPED ENVELOPE FOR ORDERING INFORMATION TO:

HELi'S KITCHEN PRODUCTIONS
P.O. BOX 499, RADIO CITY STK, NEW YORK, NY 10101-0499 USA
CHRISTIANITY, JUDAISM AND ISLAM have their social, cultural and political agendas. As the carnal discourse concerned with the real world, it's more than fitting the satanic should also be a part of the social, cultural, and political realms. If we accept that Satanism is the Quest for human excellence, for continuing human ascent, then it follows that Satanism is a resistance to tendencies of stagnation and decadence and an advocate of alternatives that seek to elevate Man.

We shall here suggest a Satanic perspective for several issues based on the principle of balance via sinister dialectics.

ART

Many self-styled "Satanists" can be found in the ranks of those perpetrating cultural forms which appeal to the lowest denominator, which are aimed at the mass consumer market, and are generically called "popular culture." Such people are not promoting Satanic aesthetics but are instead rushing to the trough of the marketplace to provide the herd with its gutter entertainment. The pseudo-Satanist is unconscious of what he is doing, and is indeed merely himself a product of mass society, taking his cue from Christian definitions of Satanism.

The genuinely Satanic artist can work on two opposite levels: 1) He can promote art which is truly reflective of Satanic aesthetics; or 2) he can consciously perpetrate decadent art forms which he purposely contrives to undermine the status quo.

What distinguishes the second type from the pseudo-Satanist is that he pushes a sinister dialectic while remaining detached from the herd, while the pseudo-Satanist unconsciously remains a part of mass society. The genuine Satanist knows that his real art and talent lies in playing to the herd as a means of manipulation.

Examples of societies reflecting the Satanic aesthetic of excellence would be those of Hellas and the Renaissance City-States. Modern examples of how the traditional can be synthesized with the innovative would be the painting of Salvador Dalí, the poetry of Ezra Pound. A glimpse of what form the "popular culture" may take in a future social order which incorporates the Satanic cultural aesthetic is given today in some of the creations of the young musician/composer Michael Moynihan (Blood Axis) whose latest release "Lord of Ages" (a tribute to Mithras, as god of the Roman Legions) and "Electricity" (a tribute to strength and action inspired by Richard Strauss) are a synthesis of the traditional and the innovative.

Such is a blend of the classical and the futuristic is the application of a dialectical process. A balance is struck between the conservative, necessary for establishing an artistic criterion to ensure quality, and the progressive which is required to counter the tendency of stagnation. The two polarities are a synthesis:
minimizing stagnation and decadence while ensuring quality and vibrance in the cultural organism.

An example of a conservative society ending in cultural stagnation is the Chinese. An example of the "progressive" repudiation of tradition resulting in decadence is the mass culture of contemporary Western society, starting circa 1900.

ABORTION

This social issue has been chosen because it's one that many Satanists take an unSatanic position on simply because they are once again rearing against Christian initiatives rather than postulating their own position on Satanic terms.

Those who adopt an unqualified pro-abortion stance do so on the grounds of individual choice and sovereignty over one's own life. This position can be identified with both the liberal left and the libertarian right. Christians, on the contrary, oppose abortion because they hold all human life to be sacred. Pro- and anti-abortionists actually start from the same premise, although they arrive at different conclusions; they view the idea of the individual per se as sacrosanct: on one side, the sanctity of the individual as an adult; on the other, a fetus.

Surely the logical Satanist position transcends both, and is based on a Nietzschean perspective of the hierarchy of human worth?

"Every individual may be regarded as representing the ascending or descending line of life. When one has decided which, one has thereby decided a canon for the value of his egoism. If he represents the ascending line his value is in fact extraordinary—and for the sake of the life-collective, which will take a step FORWARD, the care expended on his preservation, may even be extreme... If he represents the descending development, decay, chronic degeneration, sickness... then he can't be accorded little value." (Nietzsche, "Twilight of the Idols")

Thus, Nietzsche, the greatest champion of the individual, nevertheless talks of the "life-collective." The individualism he embraces is far removed from the petty individualism advocated by both liberal and libertarian, which is really a trivialization of life. The Satanist position on abortion should be based on whether a birth contributes to or hinders human ascent. With modern technology and the ongoing discoveries of genetics it can now be fairly accurately predicted what worth an unborn child will potentially be in relation to the ascent of the "life collective."

The world is awash with those of very low calorie, breeding others of their kind without hindrance other than when these nasty old devils of famine and plague catch up to thin their populations, and then in the face of determined resistance from humanitarians.

The Satanic principle on abortion surely is based on regenetics.

On a broader scale, the whole liberal moral system needs to be replaced with a new ethos propagated throughout society, which would include a recognition that the siring of healthy, intelligent and creative children is among the most honourable of callings. The new, heretical scientific synthesis of sociology shows us that all of life is permeated with an instinctive drive on the part of the individual organism to perpetuate its own genes, or alternatively those of its closest kin, and that this drive even overrides that of individual survival in life-threatening situations. Where this imperative is lacking there is something drastically wrong with the social organism. In this Judeo-Christian society the instinct is repressed.

Despite its anti-abortion stance, Christianity is the epitome of anti-life dogma, a revolt against the instinctual. It’s a paradox within the System. But if we turn to the Christian scriptures we find Jesus praising those who become “enuchs for the kingdom of heaven’s sake,” and Paul calling marriage an unfortunately necessary institution because of those who cannot “contain themselves” and who “must thereby avoid burning in Hell for “fornication.” The whole Christian creed is based on preoccupation with death, not with the continuation of life. The anti-abortion stance is merely reflective of the belief that only God can take life away (or alternatively, those he savons on earth as His holy killers).

RACE

...A burning issue in many societies. Satanists do not generally apply racial restrictions on membership. The Satanic tradition itself can be found throughout history among many if not all cultures, and is universally applicable.

People prefer associations with their own kind, and this usually implies an ethnic-kinship factor. But wouldn’t the Satanist feel more kinship with a fellow Satanist of another race, than with a Christian of his own race? I believe this is so, because Satanists themselves form a culture unto themselves, a distinct folk one might say. It stands in contradistinction to the rest of society. A parallel: the Jews as a distinct people/culture both universal and nationalistic, comprising a variety of races, but bound by common traditions, history, culture and an aloofness from outside society.

But, while Satanism is universal in scope, this should not imply an acceptance of any cosmopolitan creed which, like Christianity, liberalism, Marxism, capitalism, etc., rejects the significance of racial and cultural diversity—the products of millennia of evolution.

"There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor freeman, there is neither male nor female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus," Paul, Gal. 3:28.

While the Satanist cosmology is necessarily universal—reflective of Life itself—it recognizes the diversity within the cosmos—again a synthesis of two concepts.

What about "multi-culturalism?" Couldn’t this be described as a dialectical interaction of cultures leading to a higher synthesis—what in advocates term "cultural enrichment"? I don’t believe it. History shows that multi-culturalism causes factionalization rather than a transcendent synthesis. It tears asunder the foundations of a culture as an organism. The wholesale importation of alien cultures into a cultural organism results in what the Spenglerian philosopher Tocqueville termed "cultural distortion" and "cultural retardation." (Tocqueville, Imperialism). In the context of the Western culture, an example of culture distortion would be the influence of "Dada" art in, circa, 1900—largely the product of Jewish Nihilists and Bolsheviks. An example of culture retardation (i.e., the derailing of a culture from its Heptah/deity) would be the redaction of funds from the U.S. space programme several years ago, to subsidize ghetto-breeding.

A genuine cultural dialetic where "cultural enrichment" can occur is through a process of what Spengler himself called "pseudomorphism." (Spengler, Decline of the West). The process is one in which a culture is absorbed and adapted in accordance with the imperatives of the recipient culture; e.g., the adaptation of gunpowder as a Chinese invention of mere entertainment, to the service of the West’s "faustian" Will-to-Power.

An additional factor in the rejection of any cosmopolitan creed is the Satanic principle of individual pride. Such pride best proceeds from a sense of one’s self-worth in knowing one’s origins and inheritance stretching back beyond human memory, a surer guide to who one truly is than any attempt to impose "loyalty" toward and identity with that nebulous mass called "humanity"—whether in the name of a god or of a U.N. resolution.

Thus, I suggest, the Satanic position, whether applied to art, society or politics, is essentially a dialectical one—a dynamic interaction of polarities leading to a higher synthesis—the balance of the human application of cosmic law.
H ere are some of my prime gripes regarding modern life and the genera current flow of things. I don't just gripe for the Hef of all time. Sometimes it is also nice to be able to offer some Satanic answers to get through this Dark Age of precession on Earth.

The phrase you have to understand... No you don't! You don't have to understand anything at all. I sometimes just play stupid when confronted with this demand on my thinking. After all, what if I don't understand? Did I have to anyway? And if 99% of the human sheep out there can't understand, why must I be required by one of them to understand anything at all?

A human life is a precious thing. Anything has value in direct proportion to its uniqueness. Maybe a truly unique human being has value but if four billion humans dropped dead tomorrow there are probably no trite important problems facing the world today which wouldn't be immediately solved (except for the bad smell of all those rotting cadavers, of course). As I see it, most human life now actually has negative value as part of the problem, not part of any solution. On my wall I have a postcard sent by an accuse Satanist depicting a figure trying to attract the attention of a hovering UFO while screaming, "Take me! Take me!" with the UFO replying, "No! You're ugly!" That's how I see it also.

Gun control. If you want to see civilization, gentlemanly behavior, go where everyone carries a handgun. If you want to see insanity, go to New York, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, Washington D.C.-- anywhere with strict gun control. The history of human civilization in terms of personal freedom is the history of the availability of personal violent power for the individual. Women got the vote in the Wild West first because that's where the new invention of the handgun was first able to get into their (comparatively) soft little hands. Guns make it possible to do push buttons (read pull trigger) killing. Killing the individual influences his behavior, usually for the better.

Life sentences for three-time felons offenders. In Washington State last November, the voters passed a proposition which forces the judge to put a felon in the slammer for life (no parole) on the third offense. I would prefer instead to see what I call Proposition 22: Take any idiot who is given a life sentence and pump a few cheap .22 caliber bullets into his head, then grind up the body for fertilizer. Why the Hell pay to support some fool for the rest of his life because you haven't the guns to fit him for a coffin.

We must not cut money to the public education system. Of course, no one seems to remember that most of the high school graduates of the wonderful public school system can't read. Hell, we ought to simply shut down the whole damn thing and let the kids who want to learn go ahead and do it, and let the other cannon fodder kill each other off in the streets. (Remember again that the real problem is too many people.)

Speed limits. Twenty years ago, Nixon shut off the lights in America and got the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit put on freeways that were engineered for 75 mph speeds. Then the same folks approved truck loads beyond the tolerance levels for the national highway system. So now we have speed limits that we can drive around better if we followed the speed limits-- which you can't without getting killed by all the idiots who insist on driving at 65 mph anyway. To add to this we have regular patrolling of the traffic stream by police who go slowly coming to doing nothing all day by handing out speeding tickets. Thirty years ago Germany had radar stations along their highways that would photograph your license plate if you were speeding and then mail you the ticket. Everyone (except, I am sure, the power elite) who speeds gets a ticket. It's not a koro. It is 100% justic. Not only does that make the speed limit real, it also makes you responsible for your car. If someone else speeds in your car, you get the ticket.

Abortion clinics. Protests. They march right in front of a clinic I drive by regularly. I keep feeling this almost uncontrollable urge to jump the curb and help them to see Jesus. Personally, I favor post-natal abortion even more--especially for them.

"For your convenience"-- never let a man inside the lobby of a local bank that reads: "For your convenience the night drop window is outside, on the other side of the building." Think about that one! Brain transplant, anyone?

Income Taxes. I would gladly pay 50% more taxes into the federal black hole if they would just take it and let me quit wasting three months out of the year acting as an au pair accountant. At least with new computer programs I can do a little bit easier, but then the dying U.S. government changes the rules as fast as I learn them anyway! I understand that the coming computerized cash with prime-number encryption codes will destroy the income tax system in about five years, but that's still fifteen total months of more accounting even if the computer whiz kids are really right after all.

People who ask why Satanists don't worship Satan. Remember what I said about overpopulation being the problem? Remember what I said about most graduates not being able to read? I've gotten to where I usually just don't answer them at all. Why bother? Nobody's home in those roginers anyway.

Daylight Savings Time and time zones in general. Some states go on Daylight Savings time and some don't. Guess which ones? Flip a coin. Good luck! This particular piece of nonsense came out of last century's agricultural society so that the boys in school could get more done close on the farms. Beyond this one colossal example of wasted effort and disturbed sleep patterns nationwide, we have time zones. Based on the defunct British Empire starting at Greenwich, you can guess that if it's 6 pm in California then it's 9 pm in New York. Of course the answer is to dump this whole mess and go to a twenty-four hour worldwide "time zone." If it's 1300 hours in Tokyo, it's the same in London. Very quickly, any being with an ounce of brains will associate the local events of the day or night with the 24-hour clock. It gets dark around 2100 hours in California or 1800 hours in New York. Big deal—and you just know it won't happen. It makes too much sense.

"The AIDS virus." This is a double bitch for me. First, because the unfortunate reality is that there is no AIDS epidemic to help wipe out all this excess population. Obviously, the various world governments have known this from early on (except Cuba, it would seem) because the various health departments as well as the World Health Organization have never instituted the normal quarantine procedures which are standard for any infectious plague. Dr. Peter Duesberg, a molecular biologist and a top world expert on retrovirology, blew the whistle several years ago by asking where there was any scientific evidence to link the HIV virus to AIDS (there is none), since there is plenty of evidence to indicate that HIV can't "cause" AIDS. The last painful word from Dr. Duesberg was that he now feels certain that even AIDS is not infectious, but that AZT and the other powerful chemotherapeutic treatments offered are what is actually killing off HIV-positive patients. Sad, but true, it seems that HIV is actually benign and the pharmaceuticals are now the culprit.

My other bitch about this issue is simply that my tax money is being poured into the gunner on a disease that doesn't exist (Want to not "get" AIDS? Don't destroy your immune system by using pooreful drugs and regular anal sex [which causes an immune-suppressant effect in monkey studies]. Want to not die of AIDS? Don't poison yourself with AZT trying to kill a benign virus which may be present in all higher mammals, anyway?)

Better communication will solve any problem. Gags just got into my small-sized community about two years ago and our first gag murders got going last month. (Even gag members seem slow these days!) So, the City Council had a big "Community Town Hall Meeting" (read cluster fuck) and decided to hold regular communication classes for kids in school, kids on the street, parents hiding at home, etc. Ever "communicate" with a Kramer? I recommend a 357.

The problem with a list like this is that just as soon as I finish it, I remember another bunch of items that bear inclusion. So, don't hesitate to add your own, or see the offer more in a future writing. Hail Satan!

Photo Portrait of Anton Szandor LaVey

At last you can own a beautiful, black & white poster of the founder and High Priest of the Church of Satan.

Photographs by Nick Bogas. Captured LaVey in his apartment and Boaz in a moment of Satanic communion. At almost life size, the 22 x 28" print is on heavy, glossy poster stock, sealed with the High Priest's name in large type across the bottom.

As Satanic lab should be without this handsome item!

Carefully packaged in a crush-proof mailing tube, the poster is only $20.00, plus $5.00 shipping & handling. (Outside the U.S., $25.00 plus $10.00 shipping & handling).

Make checks, money orders or bank drafts in U.S. funds out to:
Heida's Kitchen Productions
P.O. Box 499, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10010-0499, U.S.A.
T
HE SUBJECT OF RACE seems to occur with some frequency in the discussion of Satanism. I live in a black neighborhood in San Francisco, but I am not black myself (with a name like Timothy Patrick, you can be a non-black African, rite?) and thus I feel that I've got a certain amount of perspective when it comes to this issue.

By and large, my neighbors are difficult to tolerate. Many of the "families" in my building have far more children than someone with twice their income could reasonably handle. The heavily-bombed, heavily-above my apartment has five children in a one bedroom apartment. Many of the tenants in my building are avid narcotics aficionados and tend to invite their acquaintances to consume their drugs in the common hallways of the building. The dog of choice is apparently crack. Even though the building has a workable security system, some of the residents render it useless by leaving the outside doors ajar, so that absolutely anyone with the inclination can gain access to the interior (presumably for drug-dealing or burglary purposes). It is well known among the tenants (and others) that the building manager is away on the weekends (I don't blame him), which means that littering, graffiti-making and public urination may begin on Friday at 5:00 pm. Lazy tenants leave their garbage in front of the garbage chute, even if it is not blocked. Etcetera.

Outside, people can be seen hanging about store fronts with nothing better to do. Many black males in the neighborhood drink thirty-two ounce bottles of King Cobra while their wives or girlfriends (alternately, "bitches" of "ho's") go to work so that their husbands or boyfriends (alternately, "niggas") may continue in this fashion. It is not unusual to see school-age children riding their bicycles during school hours. Obese old women hobble to the fire-and-brimstone Baptist church next door every Sunday, as San Francisco Police officers have the double-park that occur every week on my street. (It is apparently okay to double-park for church activities throughout all of San Francisco, even though the California DMV handbook states that..."double parking is always illegal...") Etcetera.

Okay—so the people in my neighborhood suck. Hard to believe. The question is: why? It is undeniable that black Americans have, in general, embraced a way of life that upholds laziness, self-pity and an apparent need to be victimized. Is this, however, very much different from the way many Hispanics, feminists, gays, lesbians, elderly, handicapped people, Wiccans, American Indians or Christians act? Yes, black culture is irritating. So it is practically everything that any mass of people agree upon.

Let's not forget that the herd cultures of racial groups in (economic) power—Jews, Italians, the Irish, Germans, Japanese, Arabs—are just as annoying. Even though these groups are often more successful, most of these people have not earned their superiority. It is usually handed down to them. Those that have what they do so because of their own efforts and abilities are few and far between indeed, ethnicity notwithstanding. Anyone who uses his race or gender or preference or religion or personal problem as a crutch is despicable.

As a witch or warlock, I believe you to see the world "unvarnished". I may use Magister Calcnon's term. Remember that lack of perspective is a sin. It is just as foolish to underestimate someone because of his ethnicity as it is to overestimate him because he belongs to an "oppressed" group. You cannot manipulate someone if you cannot be objective. Knee-jerk reactions are unacceptable, and rather stupid. Do not put yourself at the mercy of someone you cannot perceive properly.

Sure, not all blacks are Wymon Marsali. Not all Germans are Nietzsche, either. Don't forget the concept of atavization.

Never let your guard down.

Footnote: No, I am not a masochist; I am planning to move from this neighborhood as soon as I can. Yes, I am armed.

I MAINTAIN THAT every race is composed primarily of garbage. I don't care if there are differences between the races (and there most certainly are)—they're all terrible, horrible, naff, and rotten. Whichever race you belong to is included.

Go fuck yourself.

There is a high probability that whomever you are, I won't be able to stand you. I hate you if you're a greedy Spaniard, a bugging Greek, an oily Italian pride, a beer-soaked German, a whisky-soaked Irishman, a hones-faced Brit, a chicken-eating Negro, a penny-pinching Jew, a book-nosed Arab, a slant-eyed Chinaman, a convenience store owning Pakistani, an ugly Slav, a beret-wearing French faggo, a smellly Canadian lumberjack, or a fat Catholic Fillipinowith coke-bottle glasses. You all make me sick.

One hears a lot about "race loyalty." I have but one thing to say to my racial "brethren": FUCK YOU.

Are the Aryans really so superior? Why does no-one ever mention the idiotic hypnotized states of the people of Germany during the grandiose patriotic speeches of der Führer? That Hitler had a talent for holding the masses in thrall is undeniable—what is seldom said is that the Germans were like so much putty in his hands. The Third Reich could have begun anywhere, when one considers the vast malleability of
CLOISONNÉ BAPHOMET MEDALLIONS

1 7/8 INCHES IN DIAMETER—SILVER SYMBOL BACKED BY ENAMEL IN BLACK, RED, OR PURPLE.
ONLY $30 EACH
ADD $5 EACH OUTSIDE U.S.
SEND CHECK, MONEY ORDER OR BANK DRAUGHT
IN U.S. FUNDS TO:
HELL’S KITCHEN PRODUCTIONS
P.O. BOX 499, RADIO CITY STATION
NEW YORK, NY 10021-0499 USA

WOLF-AGE MAGAZINE
OUT NOW

Volume 1, Issue 1
This is the revised version of the debut release. It features articles by Reverend Vincent Crowley, a Satanic Ritual by Peter H. Gilmore and Nemo, artwork by Timothy Butler, and all kinds of other interesting items.

Volume 1, Issue II
This issue features articles by Reverend Vincent Crowley, Deacon Troy Beffert, Michael Rose (From the Pit). It also contains artwork from Timothy Butler, a Sumerian Destruction Ritual by Reverend Vincent Crowley, a song by Chad Kelly (Underworld), and questions from our readers answered by Peter H. Gilmore (The Rack Flame). Along with all sorts of other great stuff.

$4.00 USA or $5.00 FOREIGN PER ISSUE
All Checks and Money Orders must be made payable to
Rev. Vincent Crowley

(Official Forum of The Order of the Evil Eye.)
ARLY IN THE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF SATAN, Anton LaVey saw that this institution would inspire an entire movement. His Church would remain the center, the focal point of the ever-evolving organism. The original chartered grotto structures, established as experiments, gave us the necessary information and were discarded. Stratification inevitably continued and we could with increasing ease identify those who were truly committed and those "galadys" who had great need of a ready-made identity.

Satanism encourages its adherents to fulfill their needs, and those who wish to find satisfaction in grotto activity can consider our past efforts as blueprints for their own explorations. Satanists are expected to have the wherewithal to get out in that world-scene and make a go of it, with anything they would attempt. It is crucial that one learns from the doing, so that future endeavors may be based on increasing wisdom. That, however, is up to the uniquely developed potential of each individual Satanist. There are no guarantees.

The current Satanic movement is broad based, with Dr. LaVey's seminal literature available world-wide and serving as the thematic basis for all variations, whether they be consonant or dissonant. As you have seen in THE ODITORIUM, there is a veritable explosion of Satanic publications, and these help enrich the movement by providing varied perspectives that compete in the philosophical Colosseum of theory vs. practice.

However, in this age of instantaneous communication a new form of parachoralism has emerged: the computer BBS. There now exist grottos of narrow-focused Satanists who seem to think that their activities on computer services are the most significant fields to be cultivated— with their "magical" computer skills. While these are indeed avenues that shall eventually reach millions, this has yet to happen. As computer prices drop there will be more and more people tapping in, proving that the hackers of today really don't have any arcane knowledge that can't be easily mastered by anyone who seeks to try their hand. If you peruse these bulletin boards, you'll find that they can be fun—though often when avowed Satanists appear there are Christians and other people who simply want to waste your time with mundane questions/assertions. Remember that these networks are now but a very small venue for spreading your ideas. Their reality is still virtual. That will change, but the printed media still reach more people and put artifacts into readers' hands (books/magazines) which have a concurrence that still counts.

Real Satanists cherish objects and have not succumbed to the ephemeralism of today's disposable society. Experiencing through meditation is the couch potato's credo; the Satanist gets his hands dirty in the real world.

Let us now go on to explore some further examples of grottos and groups that are currently active.

We begin with a warning. Recently we received material from a new organization calling itself The Shadow Temple (P.O. Box 624, Allston, MA 02134). The package included several pamphlets, a monograph "What is Satanism?" by Joseph Black (founder of this group), several sheets delineating the "Philosophy and Structure of The Shadow Temple," an advertisement for their proposed magazine Infernalu, and finally an application form. All the material is nicely lettered, though the pentagram-in-circle cover logo is rather off color (where have I seen that look before?). It is only when one starts to look closely at this stuff that serious questions arise. This group wants to proselytize and seeks members from fringe groups such as God-types and vampire aficionados. They wish to be an umbrella organization that includes Satanists, Setians, Voodoo practitioners, Black Witches, ceremonial magicians, and Santerians. The discussions in the pamphlets seem to take the Satanism founded by Anton LaVey as a given, as if it were a natural resource just laying around waiting to be exploited by Joseph Black, though no credit or acknowledgement is given to the man and organization that launched contemporary organized Satanism. Perhaps there is some excuse if Black is quite young and thus the CO's and its philosophy has been around before his birth, giving it the appearance of an eternally existing resource.

Worse than this basic rudeness is the fact that Black then starts to twist Satanism to include belief in external entities (demons, incubi, succubi). Even worse, they state in their "Satanism" pamphlet that "While some black magic rituals do require animal sacrifices, such animals have to be specially raised. Pets simply aren't special enough to be sacrificed". Whoa! Hold the phone! Here we have direct advocacy of sacrificial rites which counts among the main points forbidding such activity in THE SATANIC BIBLE. The "black magic" embraced by this Temple are the rites created by Christian Inquisitioners to damn their victims and Christian heretic sorcerers who used Jalweh to force demons to behave, then propitiated them with ritual murder of innocent creatures. Could not the above quoted statement be misconstrued to include a human infant bred specifically for sacrifice? They do claim that their members should obey the laws, but they seem to have opened the door to highly questionable activities.

Remember that wacky cover pentagram I mentioned above? Well, where I have seen it before is in Christian anti-Satanic propaganda books and pamphlets. And the Christian world-view is about the only position that would consider Satanists, Setians, Voodooists and so on as somehow related—yeah, they're all devil worshippers to a Christian! Indeed, the practitioners on their list of compatible religions would never equate each other. Next we look at the application form which has such nifty questions as "Can you think of a circumstance in which you would break a civil law?" or "Would you be willing to lie to attain a goal?" Can you imagine being pointed out to be the local police as a Satanist, being accused of some sort of so-called "satanic" vandalism (probably done by metalheads) and having the answers to these questions being brought up at your trial? My feeling about this organization is that it is a front group for Christians who want to foster the kind of bogeyman that they’ve been claiming to exist for years—an extended umbrella organization with "covens" in many locations that unites those various devil-worshippers and animal sacrificers. Perhaps Joseph Black is sincere in his foolish eccumencial approach and really isn’t some plant setup by a ministry to manufacture evidence in an attempt to outlaw these various religions, but is sure looks that way to me, and to various scholars as well to whom I’ve shown this material. They proselytize (like a Christian ministry), we don’t, believing one is born a Satanist. We oppose the ruling that lets the various Afro-Catholic syncretistic religions legally perform animal sacrifices. Don’t support a group that would undo the work we’ve done for years. Animal sacrifice is not Satanic, it is something that does fit into a Christian framework (from the tales of Abraham’s almost sacrifice of his son, to Jahweh’s legendary sacrifice of his incarnated son, Jesus). Bottom line recommendation: have nothing to do with this bunch as they offer nothing new except that which real Satanists revile.

Next up is a new group founded by Church of Satan members in the Detroit area and declaring its inception on Walpurgisnight XXIX A.S.—The Illuminati of Satan. Not since the early seventies, with the now defunct Babylon and Belphgor Grotto, has there been organized Grotto activity in this vicinity. Let me quote from their statement of purpose to give you a flavor for what they are attempting:

"The I.O.S. is established for the specific purpose of furthering the ideals set forth in The Satanic Bible by Anton Szandor LaVey and to accomplish their goals through the use of lesser and greater magic. Our secondary goal shall be to institute a safe haven of Satanic thought, create an open forum for the expression and education of the Satanic mind, and to seek change to return society to the natural order of Lev Talmud."

There is a solid sense of organization present in their bylaws, as well as in their regulation of development and advancement for their members. The printed material is presented in a professional manner, clearly written and laser typeset. A biannual newsletter, DIABOLICUS, is planned for release quite soon ($4.00 in U.S. funds for sample copy) which will be a forum for the creativity of I.O.S. members. There seems to be real potential for development here and we wish those who participate a more satisfying experience. For further information, send a S.A.S.E. to: The Illuminati of Satan, P.O. Box 53, Allen Park, MI 48101-0053.

Now let us turn to New Zealand and the Ordo Sinistra Vivendi, who are the Order of the Left-Hand Path in a newly constituted form. Founded in January of 1990 by K.R. Bolton, the order has recently been turned over to Harry Baynes as Mr. Bolton is pursuing his activities with his new Black Order, "an esoteric body of men and women, established to present the 'dark' or 'shadow' side of the European unconscious." Here follows excerpts from articles written by Mr. Bolton, that will give you an understanding of this organization.

"The O.L.H.P. has been reconstituted as the Ordo Sinistra Vivendi (Order of the Sinister Way). In so doing we have jettisoned the Oriental dogma that had come to dominate much of the O.L.H.P.'s philosophy, which has no relevance to the realities of the present and future... The Sinister Way is that which sets itself in opposition to the stagnate, and the decay that results. It favours that which renews and revitalizes. It is the accuser of that which stifles evolution through moral, religious and political dogma. In a word, it is heresy.

"From the start, the Order sought to develop a philosophy outside of the Christian context, quite contrary to the stereotype of inverse-Christianity. We synthesized the dark traditions of a variety of non-Christian pagan cultures, adapting them to the realities of the present and the needs of the future... Ultimately we aim to develop a network of Satanists either working alone or in groups, as appropriate."

For further information contact Ordo Sinistra Vivendi, Box 88, P.O. Wellington, New Zealand; The Black Order, P.O. Box 78-262, Ponson, Wellington, New Zealand. The Heretic is still available from the Black Order address.
EAVILY IMPLICIT IN THE PROGRAM of Pentagonal Revisionism is a comprehensive overturning of the prevailing political philosophy of the Western "democracies." This amounts to a total re-alignment of the ideological underpinnings that prop up the decaying "egalitarian" ethos that generally means the "rule of the incompetent" and condemns those with vision and real drive to wallow in the morass of machine politics. This brief piece seeks to draw out a number of these implicit elements and give them concrete form in an ideological and programmatic sense.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, and more importantly, scientifically proven:

That all humans are created unequal, and that this extends to their value in society.

Centuries of empirical examination have shown that any given inherited characteristic of a living thing will follow a normal distribution, or a "bell curve." A few individuals will rate extremely highly, a few extremely lowly, and a majority will be concentrated around the mean. The normative competitive pressures, if left un-tampered with by misguided humans, will lead to all but the best-adapted individuals being annihilated (especially before they can replicate their inferior characteristics in the next generation). It is only the recent impact of those misguided enough to forcibly relax those evolutionary pressures, ensuring the survival of the most genetically impoverished, that has lead to the current crop of programmed drones that constitute the vast bulk of humanity.

That social Darwinism works, despite the aversion of the fair-hearted.

It comes as no surprise to learn that the Christians reacted violently to the advent of the brutal pragmatic philosophy that Charles Darwin enunciated in the mid-nineteenth century. The fit survive and reproduce, the unfit die. Anyone with the most rudimentary understanding of history would realize that this applies to groups of people and to nations. The unfit, non-wealthy and inefficient are destroyed while the resilient survive. Let one immediately be accused of racism or some sort of Nazi (i.e., herd-elite rather than Satanist) eugenics, the point needs to be illustrated with examples. Not all indigenous cultures contacted by the West in the last two centuries "went under"—the disciplined and resilient Japanese threw out the missionaries, modernized, and now poses a serious economic threat to nations who qualified as "would-be colonizers" a century ago. Our reaction to this as Satanists should not be to recite in horror, but to work effectively behind the scenes to promote that vigor and resilience in our society that will ensure its survival. The policies of Lee Kuan Yew's Government in Singapore bear serious study for those looking to chart a long term future.

That classes and groups of people rendered obsolete by technology will go the way of the dinosaur.

This is probably a bit hard on the dinosaurs who would probably "make a go of it" in the current climate of global warming. The history of human society has been the history of changes to the way we generate our food—Marx was right when he implied this. Each time a society makes these changes, some people, usually the least adaptable, are rendered displaced and obsolete. The small farmer of second century (CE) Rome displaced by the move to big estates, the peasant displaced by the enclosure of Western European estates in the eighteenth century and now the manual laborer displaced by the quantum jumps in manufacturing automation all fall into these classes. In the first two cases, the class concerned either adapted, were kicked out (how Australia got started) or died. There has never been a displaced class of this type in history that didn't die out or get thrown out of its society until it succeeded in defining a new role for itself for which the society was prepared to pay (even as charity or protection money).

That the "propping up" of the inferior only leads to a bigger burden in the future.

This is the legacy of the rule of the fool in the guise of the welfare state. Applying the criterions "there but for the grace of God go I" rationale toed by the Judeo-Christian losers, the State apparatus in Western nations has increasingly applied more thorough-going and ingenious ways to artificially support those who lack the personal resources to be viable in our society. In doing so, it has been content to impose often crushing tax burdens, which act to stifle incentive and encourage ambitious individuals of superior capabilities to either get out, or turn inwards upon themselves. One of the more nauseating things I have seen in the hard-oriented media over recent years, have been the "heartwarming" stories of retarded or otherwise diseased couples who have not only been artificially kept alive, fed and cloaked at our expense, but then meet and co-habitate. Even more sickening are the cases where it is taken a step further when "joy of joys," one impoverished strip of DNA finds another and the couple in question procreate. Another non-viable organism enters the biosphere, and another bouncing baby tax hike for the rest of us to "wear"! To call these individuals parasites is an insult indeed to most parasitic organisms, which are generally highly evolved and effective creatures.

Dr. LeVay's observation that "when guns are outlawed, only outlaws will have guns" also applies to procreation and is particularly accurate when one looks at the world today. This pertains not only to cases such as that above but also relates to nations. This year's appeal to save two million non-viable Third World lives, will inevitably lead to the next generation's appeal to save fifteen million even less viable Third World lives. Some old sayings make sense—one of these is, you have to be cruel to be kind.
That "Space Gitanes" are the key to the future, both for the biosphere and for Satanists to fully implement "a total environment of his/her choice."

Late in the third decade of the Age of Satan, we find ourselves in a technologically awkward period. For this is the time in which medical advances and sick Judeo-Christian "ethics" have led to the herd swarming in numbers that would have made Malthus's head swim. This, and the absence of an emphatically dominant ruling class, has led to a quality decline both dramatic and alarming in its proportions. Yet each and every one of this burgeoning human fossil, thinks him or herself entitled to the "best." One thinks of Dr. LaVey's discussion in The Satanic Witch of "charming the 25 watt" boys trying to seduce the 100 watt witch, who thinks himself "entitled to the best." Not only has the "25 watt" declined to about 18 watts in the twenty-odd years since the publication of The Satanic Witch, but he/she has become more insistent on satisfaction of his/her desires by a society to which he or she has made no meaningful contribution.

Sadly, the medical technological advances have not been matched in rapidity by the development of "off-planet" technologies. So while science has delivered millions of non-viable organisms, it has yet perfected the means of getting them out of our (meaning Satanists') hair. In order to resolve this unfortunate imbalance in the technological advancement, one which threatens to crush Western Civilization under the burden of it own mortality, firm and decisive action in a number of governmental and commercial sectors is required.

Interestingly enough, this situation has at least one historical precedent, and one which led to the establishment of the very nation in which I am writing this—Australia. Eighteenth century England paralleled the West in the last twentieth-century (i.e.) technological advances rendering obsolete the swarming agrarian peasantry bequeathed to the nation by its medieval past. The far-sighted and significantly Satanically inspired leadership of England at the time (i.e., Dashwood and his group) found a sound solution to the problem—transportation. While the basis for removal of the century's equivalent of what Dr. LaVey calls "human locusts" was judicial and punishment-based—dealing with "criminals," the real purpose of the exercise was to remove a class of individuals for which the society had ceased to have a use. The English were fortunate enough to have available both open space and the effective means of coercing these people to leave—frequently the choice was transportation or the gallow.

This time round it is clear that the means of persuasion and the "departure" technology will need to be more advanced. There do appear to be some rays of hope on the horizon in the second element—NASA does seem to have made significant advances in the last couple of years. This means that thought will need to be given to the first element—in other words, the marketing of life "off-planet." Dr. LaVey has already flagged the fact that the herd have been softened up to the prospect over the course of the last five decades, and as the means of removal and sustenance of the herd comes on stream, this marketing process will need to move into the more concrete stage.

It is clear that the density of population of our species is the principle threat facing the planet today—more importantly for each of us as individuals, it leads to greater impact of the herd on our lives. In effect, the higher the numbers of "human locusts," the greater hurdle each of us has to overcome (especially financially) to both push the drones away, and to pay for space for our "total environment." Until we can start to get the herd "off planet," I see the price of creation of our personal "island," our own total environment, as continuing to rise. Therefore, the sooner we get the last-highly-evolved portion of our species into a "nice," sterile, regulated, politically correct, colony at L5, or any other location where they won't do any more damage to a magnificent planet they're too crock or dumb to appreciate, the better.

Dr. LaVey's program provides the way ahead for our society, both explicitly and implicitly through further examination of the effects and means of achieving each of the five "points." Inherent in the program is also, I believe, an encapsulant way of Satanists achieving maximum "strength through joy"—seeking the environment most likely to allow us our own satisfying island of existence.
IT APPEARS MORE AND MORE every day that man is no closer to becoming a "human" being than an elephant is a frog. Why is that? Witness the bigotry and lack of understanding nature as it really is, the picketing that is seen at least once a day (whether it be on television or at your local supermarket). These are symptons of the ignorance that is perpetrated and crammed down the throats of we, the few who have passed the embryonic state of mind and have become at one with ourselves. What does all of this mean? That is not a question for the future, but you - the ones who have this lack of understanding and narrow points of view that are readily espoused to those who are just as unintelligent and ignorant as the progenitors of the lie itself.

Upon this bell of dir is the call planet Earth, or better yet "home," there is much improvement needed to cleanse ourselves as well as our environment. We have bigotry that runs rampant, salvation through a pipe dream, love from the bowels and a major case of stupidity thrown in to top the cake. Am I wrong, and if so, why did you judge me wrong? It is because people have a tendency to make up what they see as "right" and "wrong," not caring about the people they judge or the harm it might cause. At the same time, they do not judge themselves by these same criteria. I bow twisted.

I have such contempt for the race of "sewking" and rightfully so. Is the eyes of a realist, one must wonder about the very substance and the basis of the decisions made by parents for their children who are often much smarter than the parents themselves. I say that because children are the most natural-oriented individuals - available to teach the race how to live. Animals do the same for those who understand. Parents do an injustice to themselves and most all of all to these ones who really know, when they prevent the little ones from remaining life-loving persons. They place them in such a mold environment, one that denies them any happiness due to the moral dogmas held over their heads from birth to death. Men are slaughtered every day in this world because of the ideology mandated for the person who is the killer. Man must accept the consequences of his own actions no matter what is taught. Everyone is influenced by someone else, but the final decision and responsibility is for the individual alone.

A few less nuts in this world would suit me fine, but parents are raising more every day (they don't fall far from the tree). We have seen recently the madness of the Florida abortion doctor killer. The person who committed this crime was one of the individuals described previously - a totally dysfunctional creature who was raised in one of these "pipe dream" societies and continues to choose irrational behavior. This person was without doubt a self-styled Christian who just thought the good Lord would be so happy for one less "killer," but winds up becoming in truth a killer himself, though often defined from their point of view as a "soldier for the Lord." Now, I am not saying that I'm pro-life or pro-choice, but I will say that every woman should have a choice in her own decisions. Pro-Lifers stand on the picket lines nearly every day to denounce abortion while at the same time they don't adopt any of these "unwanted" fetuses about to be disposed of when they come to term. If people were forced to fully practice what they preached, then accepting responsibility for these otherwise unwanted children would become a law for this civilization.

Homeless people feed off of programs that never should have been instituted in the first place (Welfare). I do believe in subsidizing those who hit rough spots in their lives, but to live on the dole as a way of life is not going to make it in the future. Laws are becoming stricter and the people who complain about not getting their unearned "fair share" will ultimately be swept under the rug. That will seem a harsh thing at first, but it will in time be the solution to ALL of man's problems.

You might not like what I have written so far but, as always, people demand ties to live on and then complain when they are proven to be just that. If the truth hurts, then so be it. I am not sugar-coating anything just for some "unbegotten" pimple to accept. What I will do is write about the injustices wrought by a nation of "believers." Why not seek facts instead of accepting fiction, or at least question what is fact and what is fiction instead of just creating a cancer that is more dangerous to contend with than a creeping pestilence?

We have seen many instances of rioting for no apparent logical reason, yet when the truth comes out, is it swiftly denounced by the ones responsible. I am talking about the ones who embrace the pleasure-filled life of a "normal" individual, yet teach abstinence as the way to go. Contradictions abound - one follows the next and so on. Things that should be indulged in are taught to be "sin," and these so-called stas lead to compulsion and that is when the riots begin.

The Los Angeles riots are enough, or should be enough to show the picketers (that word to me includes ALL forms of bigotry), what a real mess they can create. After a disaster such as this, they turn around and denounce the things that were championed to cause the mess in the first place. What the hell is going on? Perhaps the lie of two thousand years ago could help with the inquiring mind.

Recently, we saw a man by the name of David Koresh who had taken the message of two thousand years ago and tried to make his vision of it a reality. Thus, with government intervention, much life was lost and more anger fueled towards... uncommon religious sects. Korenh was obviously a nut case, but what about those who follow such people and their together! Extremists are usually Christian oriented and most are truly occultists. These people include in their beliefs "mystical" and "supernatural" entities that have absolutely no factual validation whatsoever. In trying to keep up with the dogmas of their "faith," they see everyone as the "devil" who are not as themselves. Be warned to question all things lest you become involved in a predicament similar to the one which cost the "believers" their lives. They lost what little life they had, in an attempt to be somebody.

Guys in the military: what a senseless issue to be reckoned with. I have absolutely no problems with people being homosexual or anything else they wish to be, but to put their life on the line in a known "heterosexual," "redneck" society and then want equal rights is as ignorant as the women in the world who scream "equal rights!" and when they get them in the fashion that is provided their male counterparts (i.e., a slap in the face, a kick in the shins or whatever else "masculinity" dishes out) then they want to sue to get back at the man who is now her enemy. Why can't people be animals for once and get on with life by living it, rather than being harassed, beaten or killed as martyrs towards altering something that has been, is now and ever shall be! Because we are living in a society that is masochistic and craves this type of punishment at any cost and has no concern for others who are hurt in the process. These so-called "rednecks" and picketers are the ones who usually wind up being in league with a Korenh-type of person. Go beyond the picket lines and other useless shit and get on with life! You'll do what you want anyway, but should be held accountable.

War! A necessity to adjust the population. Tension is growing once again to the point of starting a world war, all because of man not accepting responsibility for his own actions.
Tell me, dear Reader, would eugenics not be a more sensible way of dealing with EVERYTHING? Think about it.

The economy is a great problem in this world and no one can seem to find a solution. Regardless of the efforts taken, we still end up with a loss. The simplest way of solving this once and for all is tax ALL churches for all buildings and property and intake from offerings and businesses. If this were to happen, we would see the National Debe virtually disappear overnight.
People always say "pay your fair share," but send in tax deductible donations in the name of righteousness and
"humanitarian" causes to keep their pockets a little fuller, then complain about a President who is trying to make them live by their stated philosophy. Churches must face up to their responsibility to give as much as anyone else who is "concerned." That is not so bad, is it?

You can keep on gagging at the goats while swallowing camels, or you can be a better being by taking on some responsibility for once in your life. You want to heal the world?
Evaluate yourselves and make the necessary adjustments to straighten out the messes you are responsible for making!
MENTALISM. No other field of conjuring offers more mystery and wonder. Audiences may watch a magician float an object, vanish a person or turn a handkerchief into a dove and dismiss it all as "just a trick." But the mentalist casts serious doubts onto this typical explanation. Notice believers are shaken by what they see. Could it be that this person is really capable of what they say? Could it be that there is something more than just tricks? Could it be...

The nineteen twenties and forties saw quite a few mentalists leave their mark on audiences. Possibly one of the most successful (financially and esteemed by the audience) of the breed was DUNNINGER, who held audiences captive not only in theaters but by radio. This was the man who called the Postmaster at New York City, asked him to obtain a letter from the boss, read the address to himself and (you guessed it) proceed to tell him the exact address he had read to himself!

Yet the man to whom present-day mentalists and conjurers owe the most is THEODORE ANNENEM. Born Theodore Squires on February 22, 1927 in Waverly, New York, he later became Anneman by virtue of his mother's remarriage. Anneman witnessed his first magic performance as a child and was hooked from then on. Such was his passion and thirst for magic that his mother, concerned with his future schooling, burned all of his books and magic props when Anneman was a young teenager.

Theo Anneman slowly turned from the usual tricks of the day to the area of mentalism. This became the main focus of his act. During his early twenties Anneman developed many new techniques for divineing a chosen card, reading sealed messages and all the array of effects that were and still are available to the mentalist. He was extremely prolific, and also refined existing methods of conjuring and mentalism, adding subtleties that astounded and confused even the most knowledgeable magicians of the day. October 1934 saw the first edition of THE JINX come to light. Anneman, editor, writer and creator published this monthly newsletter dedicated solely to mentalism. His mother received a copy of the first fifty issues, with a note reminding her of the books and props she had incinerated! THE JINX flourished, and soon became a weekly publication, five issues going for one dollar, postpaid. But the shows were not as numerous as Anneman would like. As time went on, he became more somber and introverted. His wife left him, some say because his death-defying bullet-catching act unnerved her so. The effect was this: a person was asked to place their initials on a bullet obtained from a sealed carton, the bullet placed in a rifle which had been previously examined. Anneman would back up fifty paces, and the rifle would aim and fire at his mouth! Anneman would spin, hitting the ground, blood trickling from his mouth — along with the initialed bullet!

Anneman married again, but his life was still fraught with difficulties. Several audiences saw him perform under the influence of gin. Even his remarkable exploits in blindfold walking, walking blindfolded through subway stations, buildings, streets) and his apparent feats of telepathy did not bring the bookings and success he craved. His second wife left him, he was falling behind on THE JINX. Even when a close friend tried to help things were not well. We may never know the real reasons for his actions, but on January 12, 1942, Theo Anneman was found dead, a bag secured over his head and a gas pipe attached underneath. For all his knowledge and ideas, for all the methods and effects he created, and for his bullet-catchinc stunt, Theodore Anneman is remembered by present-day conjurors. And if you ever witness a mentalist in action, be assured that the Anneman legacy lives on through him!

SATANIC DOCTRINES THROUGHOUT THE AGES
WESTERN & EASTERN - AN ANCIENT TRADITION

1. Serpent Race vs. Atlantic Race - 3 parts, earliest history. $8.50
2. Western Satanic Roots, Pt. 1: Pythagoreanism. $8.00
3. Western Satanic Roots, Pt. 2: Tenders of the Flame & Xian Racism, the truth. $7.25
4. Sigil of Baphomet: ancient Vedic origins of SATAN and other key words. $2.50
5. Red Witch IRA: Eleusinian Mysteries from the Hellenes to Ireland, teamed with the Goddess, the Scots. $3.00
6. SET: 2 parts - Series and the Egyptian God idea, pyramids, and Naga. $4.25
7. Kaballa: Dark Tradition: includes Obic and Sephiroth (Light Tradition). $7.50
8. Tantra/Vajrayana & Pythagoreanism: same Dark tradition. $6.25
9. Taoism: Dark Tradition, includes FuHsi, NuKwa and the Pythagorean (cast) method. Difficult article. $6.00
10. Package of Satanic Doctrines basics spelled out - origin of "Devil," Satan vs. Lucifer, and much more. $6.50
11. Convivence from Christianity: explains how Xianity is anti-Nature being-state damaging to children. $8.75
12. Satanic Renaissance over 100 pages of Satanic Poetry by those born into Satanism (not anti-Xian diaries). $27.50

$1.00 postage for 1st item, 50¢ each additional. U.S. Dollar only! Send to P. Marsh, P.O. Box 534, Capito Island, FL 33924 USA
HAVING CATHOLICISM INSTILLED in me at a rather young age, I find it highly ironic that I have gone on to become a member of the Church of Satan. To say that I had "my early misconceptions of Satan would be the mother of all undertakings. That has certainly changed. I vividly recall my final attempts at "getting closer to God." I was required to go to confession, a practice I naturally loathed. I knew that this particular session would be a turning point in my life. I chose to face the priest, my "accuser," instead of cowering behind the flimsy partition intended to mask my identity (to ensure the openness of my revelations of sinful behavior), I expressed to him that I had begun to experiment with oral sex, and that I found it rather enjoyable. By his reaction, you'd think that he'd never experienced an erection (though I suspect that the fall collection plates may have stirred him to tumultence). I do believe that I took him by surprise, after all I was only 14 at the time. He proclaimed that I was "behaving like an animal"! Those were the words that God-fearing bastards exact words. Yes, I am an animal—that was the one and only truth that came out of his mouth.

I knew then that I was never going to subject myself to that type of ridicule or degradation again. Not until some years later would I align myself consciously with the Dark Forces, though I was obviously that way by nature.

When I was initially introduced to Satanism, I had no familiarity with Satanic practice or principle. Aside from sensationalistic media accounts, I had slight concerns, although I wasn't a prude! I wanted to be part of this excursion that called out to my true nature.

A friend of mine had been dating a Satanist, so we were introduced. I was really naive, so it took him a while to set me straight on many facts. I wasn't a very easy "student" and, looking back, "should have been labelled a "pain in the ass." Luckily for me, my mentor never gave up, putting me on the path toward an elite existence.

I felt extremely comfortable with The Satanic Bible and Mr. LaVey's perspective on the way of the world. The body of thought appeared to me as self-contained and self-explanatory—no bullsh*t, cut and dried.

I formally renounced Catholicism and its falsehoods. I embraced the philosophy that acknowledged the truth about who I really am. It was not for me to remain mired in the sham that had been foisted on me as a child. The Gods had other plans.

As I travel my path of awareness, I am certain that the "big lie" will be eradicated. It's long overdue!

Hail Satan!

JUST SAY NO! It's the battle cry of the prohibitionists of the latter half of the 20th century. Never has there been such an obvious example of how to reinforce a behavior. The government institutes tax (crime), tax, and social controls through prohibition. This type of prohibition does not work and the government either ignores it, or cannot remember the 1920's 18th Amendment.

The government has no right or responsibility to prevent any adult of legal age from consuming any drug, no matter what the personal detriment is. This freedom to choose a natural human right. Drugs, however, should neither be condoned nor advocated, as they are part of a natural screening process separating the weak from the strong, which greatly contributes to natural selection and population control. Overdose, lack of direction, apathy, listlessness, addiction, and all the other wonderful side effects of drugs allow these individuals to be exploited, for by such behavior they are prey.

Despite the damaging effects of drugs, no rational reason exists for any government to restrict, control, or forbid by force the sale or use of any drug, in any way whatsoever.

The use and sale of drugs contributes to natural selection and therefore "benefits" society. Marijuana can turn ambition into lazy dreams, cocaine turns life into death, alcohol turns "pillars of the community" into D.U.I. criminals, intravenous drugs can give you A.I.D.S., and all drugs can give you an addiction or compulsion. These truths are widely known and only the weak-minded fall victim. However, the strong now suffer for it by paying taxes which, through welfare, support drug buying and which fund the police who fight against drugs. This is now a part of society—the weak keeches "bleeding" off the power of the strong. I say "Let them fall; we don't need them!" And after they die, we will all be better off for it and this insanity will stop.

Morality (like natural law and natural rights, which are specific examples of "moral" ideas) is a myth invented to promote the interests/desires/purposes of the inventors. Morality is a device for controlling the gullible with words.

L.A. Rollins, The Myth of Natural Rights
It seems that nowadays all you have to do to be in fashion is to visit your nearest feed store. No, I'm not talking groceries, I'm talking animal supplies. How is a woman to catch men's eyes if she's wearing burlap bag? It's simple; one can't. Men just don't get excited over the new fashions of today.

The clothing industry has the mistaken idea that women should hide their curves instead of showing them off. Actually, it seems that the blame should be placed on today’s society; for it is for us to tell the industry what to produce, via our purchases. Unfortunately, the beauty of femininity has been swept under the carpet and forgotten as women have willingly bought the proffered "chic" outfits that have turned them into androgynies.

One example of this new look is the tight spandex pants (not bad, but a tight skirt would be much better), worn with a ridiculously large T-shirt or sweatshirt sinfully covering the body down to the knees. What’s happened to the waist and hips? Men want to see curves. They don’t have them, and thus find a woman’s silhouette much to their liking.

Save your sweats and jeans for cleaning the house and other remedial chores. Put your body to work for you. Men are so primal, it’s really quite amazing. Not only does this trait of theirs pay off for us, the feminine, but it’s fun as well. You can confirm your self-image by watching their horny little heads turn as you walk past, displaying your "goods."

So why not get what you can by using the manipulative powers with which you were born? I’m not saying to sell yourself, just use the long-neglected art of body language. However, you can’t use this technique if they can’t see your body! Get my point yet? If not, then perhaps it’s too late for you. With a little practice, you can re-learn how to be a feminine enchantress, and the results will certainly around you!

It’s really quite easy once you get the hang of it. Like riding a bike, you don’t forget how, you just get rusty. Just think of what men want to see. What do they look at when they look at you? Remember, they’re just naughty boys at heart. Now you get it! A V-neck will get more glances (or stares, preferably) than a plain neck line. Instead of pants (which they wear themselves and see on many women every day), a form-fitting skirt will have them drooling. And of course, don’t overlook the natural curvature of the woman’s leg. Accentuate it with heels at least three inches high. (Sometimes a fetish in itself for men.) You might have to train yourself to walk again, if you’re not used to them. Try walking around your house first, until you feel comfortable enough to venture out.

From these basics, you can add to your positives, or subtract from your negatives, as you see fit. For example, if you have knock-out legs, try black, seamed hose for a tantalizing look. Or, on the other hand, if your waist isn’t as slim as you’d prefer, adding a dark-colored belt will fool the eye. (Dark colors have a slimming effect.)

So, with a little common sense, the proper clothes and the right lingo (body in this case), doors will once again be opened unto (and for) you, and things will be yours for the asking, just as long as you’re asking a man!

For advanced studies on the art of manipulation, I highly recommend The Satanic Witch by Anton Standor LaVey.

HELL'S KITCHEN PRODUCTIONS PRESENT

THE CHURCH OF SATAN
BY BLANCHE BARTON

A HISTORY OF THE WORLD'S MOST NOTORIUS RELIGION

$8.95 PLUS $1.50 SHIPPING & HANDLING ($5.00 S & H FOR ORDERS OUTSIDE THE U.S.)

PRINTS OF DARKNESS

BANNERS, T-SHIRTS, SWEATSHIRTS AND HOODED SWEATSHIRTS WITH THE SIGIL OF BAPHOMET

TRAPEZOID CANDLE HOLDERS
MADE OF MARBLE AND BRASS

FOR PRICES, ORDER FORMS AND INFORMATION SEND A SELF-ADDRESSED, STAMPED ENVELOPE TO:

HELL'S KITCHEN PRODUCTIONS
P.O. BOX 499
RADIO CITY STATION
NEW YORK, NY 10101-0499 USA
THE PATIENT SAT in a chair behind a small, plain table, clutching a black book and feverishly muttering a prayer. An orderly in a white hospital uniform stood against the wall watching the praying man without interest, his arms folded across his chest. Both men put their attention to the door when it opened and a kindly middle-aged man stepped in.

"Robert, I’m Dr. Howard. How are you feeling today?" inquired the doctor in a soft tone of voice, taking a seat directly across from his patient.

“I’m feeling fine knowing that I’m saved and going to heaven when I die, how about you?” Robert stared at solemnly as a judge would stare at a jury.

“And what is it that you have been saved from?” Dr. Howard began the routine psychological car-and-mouse game of questions/counter-question.

"Sin.

“What was it you did that was so wrong?” Howard probed with professional interest.

“It’s not a matter of any one thing,” began Robert impatiently, “it’s the state of sin I was born into, that we were all born into. Everyone is born into a state of sinfulness and are condemned to eternal punishment unless they accept Jesus as their Savior.”

“So do I understand it correctly that you are no longer sinful?”

“No, I still sin on occasion but I’m forgiven. Christians are not perfect, Dr. Howard, just forgiven.”

“Do you sin as much as before?"

“The Holy Spirit keeps me from sinning like I used to and it leads me to a more sanctified life.”

“I understand.” Howard leaned forward a bit and asked, “Do you know why you are here, Robert?”

“Yes, I’m imprisoned here for my religious beliefs. I was praying on a public sidewalk and they hauled me away,” said Robert.

“Actually, this isn’t a prison, it’s a hospital,” Howard gently corrected. "The police said that you were blocking the entrance to a women’s health clinic. They said that your behavior was irrational when they took you into custody. You refused to identify yourself and gave them your name. It was your mother who saw you on the news and helped us find out who you were.”

“She doesn’t understand about saving the children.”

“What would you explain what you mean by that, saving children?”

“Those women trying to get into the abortion were going to kill their children, they had to be stopped.”

Howard paused a moment. “You mean the women who were seeking an abortion?”

“Of course.”

“But how is it that they were going to kill their children? They were only a few months pregnant.” Dr. Howard was glad that the orderly was nearby; he had heard of these cases being violent.

“Life begins at conception. A person is a person, no matter how small.”

“Was it this Holy Spirit that led you to save the children?”

“Yes, just as it was the Devil who led those women to suicide.”

“Do you believe in the literal existence of the Devil, Robert?”

“He’s very real and active, especially in the lives of the unused.” Robert’s eyebrows raised a bit with that last remark, indicating it was aimed at the doctor.

“I see, so the Devil leads all non-Christians and the Holy Spirit leads the Christian?“ Howard prompted, wanting to learn as much as he could about his patient.

Robert didn’t reply to the last question but simply sat there and stared, doubting the sincerity of the doctor’s concern.

“Let’s go back to what you were talking about before, the thing about sin. Now you say that everyone is lost in sin, is that right?”

“Yes.”

“I assume this makes God upset.”

“You get it.”

“Now God created everyone, is that right?”

“Right.”

“I’m wondering why He created people so sinful.”

“He didn’t create them sinful,” sighed Robert with exasperation. “He created everyone with free will, with a choice to obey His law or not to obey.”

“I see, then there are perhaps some people who obey God’s law and do not sin.”

“No! For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God.”

“Do you believe the black book in the doctor’s direction.”

“It’s basic human nature to sin.”

“But doesn’t that mean there is no free will? I mean, if we are so naturally sinful.”

“The free will comes in choosing Jesus as our Saviour or rejecting His redeeming blood.”

“What happens to those who reject Jesus?”

“They shall be tormented in Hell for ever and ever.”

“What will happen to you when you die?”

“I shall walk the streets of gold in the celestial city.”

“It must be a really nice place, the celestial city. And you say you’ll be there forever.”

“Doctor, it’s either Heaven or Hell, forever, so I suggest you decide quickly because life is very short.” Robert stared intently at the doctor.

“What will you do there, for the rest of eternity?”

“I shall be with the Lord.”

“Yes, but I’m curious to know what it is that you will do when you are there.”

Robert paused a moment. “Sing His praises and meet with all the others who have made it to Heaven.”

“For all eternity?”

“Yes.” For a moment it seemed that Robert’s self-assurance had faltered.

“What else is there to do in Heaven?”

Howard inquired further.

“Be happy.”

“Be happy about what?”

“Be happy that I’m in Heaven.”

“What is it about Heaven you think you will find so wonderful? There must be something to do for all that time to keep you interested in staying there.”

“It’s a perfect place where there is no suffering, no pain, nothing unpleasant.”

“Do you think that you will get bored?”

After all, eternity is a very long time. When trillions and trillions of years have passed you still have the rest of eternity ahead of you. Do you think people will lose their enthusiasm for hymn-singing and walking streets of gold after awhile?”

There was an awkward silence while Robert thought through his next response and Dr. Howard wondered if his remark probably guilt feelings in combination with involvement in apocalyptic Christianity. Patient appears to have low self-esteem and little esteem for others, having stated that he and everyone else is "sinful." Tolerance and ability to interact positively with others is questionable, patient insists his god Jesus is the only way to avoid eternal torment. Aside from trespassing charges in connection with his blockade of a women's health clinic there seems to be no other indication of any propensity towards criminality at this point, however, certain key words emerged during a free association test which may be cause for alarm. Patient is possibly involved in some sort of Christian cult activity.

Free association test:
Prompt word: Sin.
Patient responds: Sacrifice—Due to the fact that the patient adheres to a faith based on the bloody sacrifice of its own God it is difficult to predict what importance sacrifice plays in his daily faith. This area should certainly be investigated further.
Prompt word: Blood.
Patient response: Communication—Possible points to an involvement in blood-drinking rituals.
Prompt word: Police.
Patient response: Persecution—Patient may have difficulty dealing with authority figures.
Prompt word: Devil.
Patient response: At work everywhere—Further indication of paranoia.
Prompt words: Revenge, Homosexuality.
Patient response: Vengeance is mine sayeth the Lord!
Prompt words: Sex, TV, Theater.
Patient response: Procreation, truth, PG 13 (respectively).—Possible indication that subject is sexually repressed which may augment existing aggressions.

I recommend that Robert Landsers be retained in hospital custody for further observation.

Having finished his report Dr. Howard stuffed it in his outgoing bin. Five o'clock, time to head home. On his way out the building he met up with Dr. Travis for whom he had been making the very same report. As usual, their conversation was work-related.

"Jack! Glad I caught you up on the way out. I've got a new case that I'm referring to your ward seven department. He'll come your way after I've made some follow-up tests. What would be your recommendation for treatment of a patient with religious hysteria?"

"What's the behavior pattern like?" asked Travis.

"Definitely anti-abortion fundamentalist type. Possibly involved in something deeper, maybe Christian cult crime—blood drinking, sacrifice, etc."

"Was he wearing a cross around his neck?" asked Travis.

"Yeah."

"Talk a lot about sin and the Devil?"

"Yeah."

"Sexually repressed?"

"Probably."

"Yeah, we still get a few of those cases now and then, usually there's an increase when the economy is bad. Back in the twentieth century they really posed a problem, committing acts of terrorism and conducting huge harassment campaigns against non-believers. When the government shifted hands it was finally stopped."

"I've always meant to ask you and I keep forgetting," began Howard, "why do they call it ward seven? Seven is out of sequence with the rest of the wards in that building."

Travis chuckled. "Well, it began as a joke. Seven is a sacred number to most apocalyptic Christian cults. Originally it was called Ward 777 when the program was founded; they later dropped the last two sevens."

"Oh, okay." Howard gave a short chuckle. "Would you recommend drug therapy for these patients?"

"No. Absolutely not, it only makes them hallucinate and see Jesus, hear voices from on God and that sort of thing. It's very difficult to treat them for religious hysteria when they are continually hearing voices from above."

"Thank you. See you tomorrow."

"Good day."

The two men parted company. Dr. Howard walking the mile-and-a-half to his home. In the distance were visible the huge skyscrapers of the inner city. Nearby on the left stood the old church, in dark shape...
towering over the surrounding residences. Children were playing in the churchyard.
Howard wished he had his camera.

"What a nice picture that would make," thought Howard. The happy spontaneous dance of the children, towering above them the black gothic walls and spires of the local church, the stained-glass Bapshomiet reflected in the setting sun, and the pitchforks thrusting skyward from the tops of those dark spires had long ago replaced those dodo creases. To think of it! The church that had once cast a menacing shadow over the future and freedom of the young and innocent now cast a protective one, ensuring the continuation of a well-ordered society where religion was no longer a valid excuse for the mentally ill.

SPOKES IN A WHEEL

(DEDICATED TO PETER H. GILMORE AND THE MEMBERS OF THE INFERNAL GARRISON)

AS SINGLE SPOKES IN THE WHEEL OF SATANISM
THERE ARE TIMES WHERE WE MIGHT FEEL THAT THE CONTRIBUTION EACH OF US OFFERS IS INSIGNIFICANT. THIS COULD NOT BE MORE DISTANT FROM THE TRUTH, ALL ONE NEED DO IS JUST STEP BACK.

EACH OF US IS NEEDED TO FORMULATE A
"POSITIVE" POSITION, BY EXTRACTING THE PAIN FROM PLEASURE, AND THEN RELEASING IT AT ANY GIVEN MOMENT. THUS DO WE SEparate "US
FROM THEM." ALLOW IT TO FLOW UNHAMPERED!
THROUGH OUR EVERYDAY ENCOUNTERS WITHIN SOCIETY, THE MANNER OF OUR PROCEEDINGS
MUST BE EXACT, PRECISE, AND TO THE POINT—THUS INSTITUTING THE AROUSAL OF SATANIC OPERATION.

ALTHOUGH OUR BEHAVIOR UPON THE EARTH
SHOULD POSSESS THE EXPRESSION OF A DYNAMIC,
AND AN ENERGETIC LIPPERFORCE, NEVER FORGET WHO AND WHAT YOU ARE—A SATANIST!

EACH OF US IS AN IMPORTANT SPOKE AND INTRICATE PART IN THE COMPLEX WHEEL OF DESIRE, EXISTENCE, AND OF INDULGENCE!

DOUG EDWARD RICHARDS

THE ART OF
JOHN WAYNE GACY

ORIGINAL OIL PAINTINGS
FOR INFORMATION
SEND A S.A.S.E. TO:

Jackai Producciones
1205 Fulton Ave.
Hamlin, MO 63401
FINALLY IN PRINT!
STORM BOOKS PROUDLY PRESENTS: SIEGE
The Collected Writings of James Mason
Edited and Introduced by Michael M. Jenkins

464 PAGES!
TRADE PAPERBACK

HEAVILY ILLUSTRATED!

At last, this long-awaited manual of revolutionary thought is available to the general public. Over four years in the making, SIEGE stands in a category entirely by itself. Alarming, offensive, heretical and sometimes humorous, it is a unique volume which will not allow for passive reading. Culled from six years of James Mason’s hard-hitting SIEGE newsletter, this massive book has been supplemented with numerous illustrations, including never-before-seen photographs as well as many obscure revolutionary leaflets and tracts. Neither Conservative nor Right Wing, James Mason defies political labels and presents his version of the Truth, devoid of all superficialities and romanticism. Not for the faint of heart, SIEGE has been called “the Mein Kampf of the ‘90s” and “the mindfuck of the century”... don’t hesitate to obtain this amazing “bible” of the furthest extremes of radical thought.

AVAILABLE NOW IN LIMITED FIRST PRINTING
TO ORDER SEND $20 PLUS $2 POSTAGE AND HANDLING PER BOOK IN USA. FOR FOREIGN ORDERS ADD $5 PER BOOK SURFACE MAIL OR $12 AIRMAIL. SEND PAYMENT IN CHECK OR MONEY ORDER (FOREIGN ORDERS SEND I.M.O. OR CASH IN REGISTERED LETTER) TO:
STORM P.O. BOX 18009 DENVER, CO 80218 USA
NOTE: we cannot be responsible for books seized by foreign customs.
The Devil's Notebook
by Anton Szandor LaVey

The Devil's Notebook is the first original collection of Anton LaVey's writings to be published in over two decades.

"To a clear polemical style, the good doctor rips into a number of deserving targets... and imparts wise-ass wisdom that, for me, is worth more than a stack of ancient grimoires. Like The Satanic Bible, The Devil's Notebook is a tome only the clever among us will appreciate." — The Nose

$10.95 • Trade Paperback • ISBN: 0-922915-11-3

Secret and Suppressed: Banned Ideas and Hidden History
Edited by Jim Keith

A guidebook to alternative views of contemporary events and world history, Secret and Suppressed confronts the reader with disquieting revelations on mind control, secret societies, media disinformation, cults and elite cabals. The hard evidence supplied by many of these articles is startling. Other entries veer into a twilight realm of paranoia, speculation and horror. If you believe that ignorance is bliss, Secret and Suppressed is sure to make you very unhappy.

$12.95 • Trade Paperback • ISBN: 0-922915-14-8

Cosmic Retribution: The Infernal Art of Joe Coleman

This stunningly designed presentation of Joe Coleman's paintings and illustrations reveals the artist's obsessive visions of outlaws, madness and distressed religious impulses. Includes 32 color pages, 110 black and white pages and an incisive interview conducted by Adam Parfrey. "Coleman unleashes a hallucinatory violence of image and content that is unrelenting and unforgettable." — Artnet

$22.95 • Deluxe Paperback Edition • ISBN: 0-922915-06-7

The Secret Life of a Satanicist
The Authorized Biography of Anton LaVey
by Blanche Barton

Now available in paperback, this photo-illustrated biography of "the most dangerous man in America" will stand as the definitive portrait of this influential and fascinating genius.

$12.95 • Trade Paperback • ISBN: 0-922915-12-1
$19.95 • Cloth • ISBN: 0-922915-03-2

To order, send check or money order for cost of book(s), plus $1.75 shipping. Send SASE for free catalogue.

Feral House • PO Box 3466 • Portland, OR • 97208