Introduction

In The Marvelous Land of Oz (1904) L. Frank Baum had his imperiled hero Tip (the future Princess Ozma) tie together two sofas, palm branches, and the stuffed head of a gump (in Oz an elk-like creature) with rope and clothesline, sprinkle it with magic powder to bring it to life, and then use it to fly away to safety.¹ Nevertheless, as evident from the improvised haste of its assembly, the gump was sorely wanting in aerodynamics, and only barely brought its passengers to a landing before falling apart. Tip granted its wish to be disassembled, though the stuffed head remained alive and continued to startle bystanders with comments throughout, presumably, the rest of the thirteen original Oz books.

The Church of Satan, founded in 1966, was a bit like Baum’s gump. It was also thrown together in improvised haste from a variety of vaguely- or un-related concepts and then used to transport its riders on an unpredictably soaring, plunging, and haphazard journey throughout the next nine years until its own catastrophic crash in 1975. Like the gump, it did complete the journey; also like the gump, it is something of an amazement that it got off the ground at all, much less flew as long and as far as it did.² The story of this “long, strange trip” is told in The Church of Satan, my companion history to The Temple of Set.

I make this point because the Temple of Set, when it was founded in 1975, was an entirely different phenomenon. Organizationally it had the benefit of the entire experience of the Church of Satan upon which to draw: to improve in part, to discard in part, and of course to disregard when building anew. Even more crucially the Temple had from its inception a crystal-clear definition and understanding of its metaphysical authenticity and license. Its evolution over the next quarter-century would see refinements in the organization and increasing exploration and enhancement of the philosophy, but the original bases of both would never change.

The differences between the two organizations will also be mirrored in the contrast between The Church of Satan and The Temple of Set. The former is a roller-coaster ride of alternately serious, philosophical, humorous, tragic, ironic, heroic, embarrassing, frightening, and startling personalities, concepts, and events. “If I hadn’t lived through it myself,” more than one old Satanist has remarked to me upon reading The Church of Satan, “I would have found it almost too bizarre to believe.”

The Temple of Set will not be such a rollicking reading experience, though I daresay it will be a substantially more searching and informative one. Its purpose is first to explain what the Temple is and how it came into being, then to show how its many Initiates have all contributed to the strengthening and refinement of that vision over subsequent years.

Certainly it has not all been a smooth, steady, unified climb to the stars. Both senior and junior Setians have had their flaws and failings as well as their talents and strengths, and as a consequence the Temple has had its share of failures along with its successes. But without exception each difficulty has been honestly confronted as a learning experience; the result has consequently been an institution that much more substantial and resilient.

An additional distinction between the two books is that while the former can indeed claim to embrace the entire history of the Church of Satan, this book could never hope to fulfill a similar goal with regard to the Temple of Set. The Church of Satan was a fairly simple, linear story, to which a relatively small number of individuals made specialized contributions over a brief period of time. The Temple of Set may be more likened to an explosion within the heads of a great many individuals of rich and diverse backgrounds, yielding a mix of ideas that would constantly be shared, reconsidered, and compounded.

² Arguably its stuffed head - an Anton LaVey fan club using the Church’s name - has also remained “alive and commenting” since the authentic Church’s 1975 conclusion.

The extent of this corpus of knowledge is already staggering, and of course still continues its exponential growth throughout a variety of communications and records systems. Among these are the Jeweled Tablets of Set standing reference volumes; the archives and continuing issues of the Scroll of Set newsletter; the Temple’s Internet public website and private “Intranet”; the documents and periodicals of the Temple’s many Orders, Elements, and Pylons; Temple and specialized reading lists, international/regional/local conclave events, and the overwhelming amount of personal and interpersonal workings and dialogues involving individual Setians.

When I undertook to write this Temple of Set, therefore, I knew immediately that its focus would need to be more a personal perspective, more an overview of what during the adventure of the Temple to date has seemed to me to be particularly notable: not just because of drama or colorfulness, but because it played some necessary or significant part in the unfolding of the adventure. It will, I think, also be my initiatory testament.

As a comprehensive history, The Church of Satan can be read by anyone - Setian, Satanist, or profane - and be expected to reasonably communicate its story in proportion to the intelligence of each such reader.

The Temple of Set presents a somewhat different problem. While I intend that this book be as direct and unambiguous as possible, Setian philosophy requires “initiatory consciousness” - not only an interest in the subject matter but both the intellectual and metaphysical capacity to comprehend it in its ultimate sense. Within the Temple, persons possessing such capacity are referred to as “Elect” and are deemed to have potential for initiation. Those lacking it, best intentions notwithstanding, would find the initiatory experience bewildering, frustrating, and meaningless. Accordingly the Temple endeavors to not admit them, or to disaffiliate them as soon as possible if accidentally admitted.

It is much the same with this book. There are aspects of it that may either enter your mind like flame or just leave you confused and annoyed. My pleasure in the former case; my apologies in the latter.

[Non]finally, The Temple of Set, like The Church of Satan for many years/editions, will be a “living book”, subject to any number of changes, additions, corrections, and updates as various knowledgeable readers comment upon it and/or I refine my own information and opinions. Check “www.xeper.org/maquino” occasionally for updated drafts/editions.

The Church of Satan was not made available as a printed/.pdf ebook until it was a completed project [which took several years]. I have decided to handle The Temple of Set a bit differently. It will be uploaded to my webpage in .pdf format in successive piecemeal drafts until the whole thing is finally there. Along the way I will probably be updating, correcting, and revising earlier parts as appropriate. Accordingly I welcome readers’ questions, suggestions, and comments - though I must plead in advance that I may not be able to answer each personally. I can promise that each will be carefully read, and if appropriate used to improve the next update. Please send comments to me at:

Chapter 1: The Final Conflict

As is detailed in The Church of Satan, three tensions and dilemmæ inherent in that institution came to a boiling point by early 1975. Among these:

1. Was the Church of Satan theistic or atheistic?

   (a) Did it believe in Satan and his fellow dæmons as actual intelligent, active, willful entities extant in time and space? Or did it disbelieve in the existence of such beings [along with the Judæo-Christian God], and just use them for spooky window-dressing in rituals that were merely imaginative psychodramas?

   (b) In this same vein, was there perhaps a “two-tiered” attitude within the Church, whereby its High Priest and Priesthood indeed privately believed in Satan and other dæmons, while at the same time presenting to the public an attitude of atheistic satire? Per this interpretation, ordinary members of the Church were initially/generally treated much as the public, yet selectively introduced to the deeper, true metaphysics as they might show themselves capable of understanding and accepting it.

2. The original Church of Satan in San Francisco had been inaugurated, part seriously, part whimsically, by Anton Szandor LaVey in 1966 as largely a personal vehicle for advertisement and profit, based upon his colorful personality, extensive knowledge of the Black Arts and occultism generally, and atmospheric house in which to give lectures, hold meetings, and perform rituals. However, as over the years the Church expanded beyond San Francisco, through individuals and groups having little or no direct exposure to these specific original allures, it began to become more of an impersonal institution united by common beliefs and ideas. Its focus was indeed Satan; Anton was revered as his High Priest and Earthly deputy only. Correspondingly the decentralized Church behaved more like a nonprofit organization than a profitable business.

3. The more the Church grew, and the more Anton himself became a well-known popular icon, the more withdrawn and private he became. In part this was understandably a reaction to years of being iconized, lionized, media-exploited, and sometimes threatened. He simply became weary of it, exhausted by the demands of having to constantly keep up his Mephistophelian glamor-image. Unfortunately this reclusiveness also extended to the Church of Satan itself beyond his old, familiar entourage in San Francisco. He gradually avoided direct contact with the more distant membership, which had the dual consequence of forcing them to rely more on their initiative and increasing his suspicion of their uncontrolled independence accordingly.
These factors culminated first in Anton’s “Phase IV” policy paper to the Church, in which the formal standing and authority of non-entourage Church officials and groups were weakened in favor of an informal “Movement” whose preferential membership and influence would once again be Anton’s sole decision. His next, and as it turned out explosive action was to attempt to destroy the independent significance and structure of the Church’s initiatory degree system, by also making both the definition and the bestowal of such titles merely his personal whim.

In terms of my personal involvement, The Church of Satan culminated with my June 10, 1975 letter to Anton and Diane LaVey rejecting what I regarded as their critical corruption of the Church of Satan, and simultaneous letter to the Church membership announcing my disavowal of the organization controlled by them. These were followed by many other Satanists’ resignations, either immediately or after days/weeks/months of waiting to see if Anton LaVey could or would explain and/or correct his startling policy decisions and announcements.

As copies of these resignations continued to pour into my mailbox, I realized that I was being looked to to provide some sort of corrective/alternative course of action. Frankly I felt both ill-qualified and ill-disposed to do this.

For the past six years the Church of Satan had seemed not only unique but indeed metaphysically sacred to me. I had never regarded it as “just an organization” alongside which other, similar Satanic churches could just as validly exist. Correspondingly I did not regard Anton LaVey as simply a charismatic individual or even genius, but as the anointed personal deputy of Satan himself. I had now spoken in my Magisterial capacity to deny both of these legitimacies henceforth, but that was not at all the same thing as proposing to personally replace them.

Beyond that I was grappling with intense personal shock and heartbreak. My association with Anton and Diane LaVey had become almost as close as to my own parents, and quite obviously the affection had been mutual. I was bitterly angry and depressed at the circumstances which had now shattered this relationship. I could only hope that at some, probably distant future time the LaVeys might come to understand my plight and decision, and even see it as the most constructive course for the legacy we had all worked so hard those many years to build.

Nevertheless I had to begin thinking about some sort of “reformed Church of Satan” to replace the corrupted one. To other Satanists I referred to the concept as a “Second Church of Satan”, although this was only a descriptive term.

And of course the central question remained unanswered. If the Devil had indeed consecrated the original Church of Satan [and its High Priest], how was I or anyone else to conclude that he would now transfer this authority to a successor Church?

During my tenure in the Church I had of course practiced both Lesser and Greater Black Magic, the latter much less frequently but also on at least two occasions - the 3 Appendix #116, The Church of Satan.

4 Chapter #35, The Church of Satan.

5 Lesser Black Magic (LBM) is the influencing of beings, processes, or objects in the objective universe by the application of obscure physical or behavioral laws. Greater Black Magic (GBM) is the causing of change to occur in the subjective universe in accordance with the will. This change in the subjective universe may cause a similar and proportionate change in the objective universe. GBM involves the summoning of both intensively rational (dianoia) and consequently intuitive (nœsis) concentration of thought.
Workings of the Diabolicon and the Ninth Solstice Message - quite overwhelmingly. Yet beyond a basic conviction that there was thus something indeed to be said for GBM as a technique, I had by and large not aggressively explored it. Most of my Church time had been taken up with purely-administrative responsibilities. On the magical side of things I had indulged myself only in occasional LBM experiments and some philosophical/historical/theoretical writings in the Cloven Hoof and personal correspondence.6

In March 1975, however, after being advised of its existence by Priest Robert Ethel of the Washington, D.C. Asmodeus Grotto, I tracked down a copy of Meric. Casaubon’s John Dee’s Actions With Spirits, a 1659 facsimile reprint, at a little occult store in San Pedro, California. The book looked just like every magician wants a grimoire to look: big, thick, heavy, and leather-bound. I could hardly wait to “take the original Keys out for a test drive”, and did so that very evening at one of the old artillery batteries at Fort MacArthur where I had conducted many a Call to Cthulhu during Army Reserve weekends with the infamous 306th Psychological Operations Battalion.7 The result was nothing short of astonishing. The following day, March 9th, I jotted down the results:

For the first Working I decided to pronounce the 19th Key, invoking ZIM (the 13th Æthyr). Cornu required twice before any response.

Then the result: I recall coming, under hazy circumstances, to a large wooden-beamed hall in which were seated a number of men around a table. I knew them to be the “Secret Chiefs” of the “White” tradition of whom Aleister Crowley and others have spoken.

I suggested that I might be allowed to join them, sensing that they did not immediately perceive my identity as a Magister Templi of the Left-Hand Path. But there was some dissent, as though some of them were wary of me.

Finally I revealed myself as a Magister Templi. They reacted more negatively than before, donning robes of various colors. I responded by donning my own black/blue robe, whereupon there was a reaction by them of even stronger dislike. I responded with anger in turn.

There was a violent conflagration, the hall collapsed, and I recall nothing further.8

This was no mere dream, since I did not fall asleep, nor was it the type of hallucination which may follow from fatigue, self-hypnosis, or other “bewilderment” to the mind. It was a rational experience, perfectly clear to my normal senses. It was very “crude”, but then I hardly expected anything polished to come of a first Working with a new magical system. I drew no particular meaning from the sequence itself; what was significant to me was the sharpness and clarity of the entire experience - far more so than Workings conducted with the Crowley Keys in the Equinox or the LaVey Keys in the Satanic Bible.

I decided not to immediately mention this to Anton LaVey. It was hardly politic to recount such an experiment to the author of the Satanic Bible, at least not until I had explored and understood it better. Robert Ethel, who himself possessed a copy of the Casaubon volume, would be a more suitable correspondent. Upon returning to Santa Barbara I wrote him:

In case you thought I passed right over your discovery of the Casaubon reprint mentioned in your December letter, I did not. But it has taken me this long to locate a copy, inspect it for accuracy, and form some preliminary conclusions concerning it.

6 This is fairly extensively documented in The Church of Satan.

7 See Chapter #31 of The Church of Satan.

From what I have read in the book so far - coupled with results I have obtained from an experimental operation with one of the Keys - it is a tremendously powerful text. The secret to its proper use lies, I believe, in the disassociation of its implications from hybrid/Cabalistic jargon. This includes the pronouncing of the Keys themselves (which, from Mathers’ time onward, have been spoken per the letters of the Hebrew alphabet and not according to the simple phonetics implied by each letter in the text).

There are two general points to be considered. The first is that which I brought out in the “Caucus Race” article in the Hoof, i.e. that Dee, Kelley, and Casaubon would have been playing with fire [at the stake] had they not bent over backwards to couch their texts in “good Christian” terminology. [One could say much the same for John Milton, whose Paradise Lost is an excellent example of such lip service.]

The second point is that Dee and Kelley were themselves necessarily of a Judaic/Christian educational background. They would have been inclined to interpret extraordinary contacts in line with the myths and legends most familiar to them. In going through this reprint of Casaubon, I have attempted to evaluate each “Angelic” incident in a more empirical frame of reference. A pattern is emerging that I find very exciting, but I must proceed further with the correlation before I commit myself to conclusions.9

I had then relegated Mr. Casaubon to my bookshelf against some presumed future leisure time for such enjoyable explorations. I took him out just once again that spring, to activate a GBM working recorded as The Sphinx and the Chimæra (Appendix #1).

This working was quite spectacular as an experiment in formalized rational and intuitive thought. Scholarly research preceded the working; then GBM was used to overlay it with enlightened awareness. [This concept will be discussed at greater length in Chapter #8.]

As the Church of Satan’s 1975 crisis began to unfold, I attempted to comprehend and address it reasonably and practically through correspondence and discussion. But as the situation worsened, I felt increasingly the need to seek guidance from the authority of the Church’s very existence, Satan himself. It seemed to me that if the Church were authentic and, for that matter, ultimately so beyond Anton LaVey’s current representation of it as merely his personal creation and vehicle - the Prince of Darkness would have to step in. As the senior Master next to Anton himself, I concluded that the responsibility to seek such a GBM resolution fell to me.

One of the distinguishing characteristics of a Master IV° [as beyond a Priest III°] in the Church of Satan was Familiarity with [or, as Aleister Crowley might have put it, “Knowledge and Conversation of”] the essential Powers of Darkness themselves, including their primal energizing source, Satan. The Priesthood of Mendes III°, by contrast, could perceive and represent these Powers, but not consciously meld with them. Perhaps the most famous modern example of the facility of a Master in this regard is Crowley’s Liber 418: The Vision and The Voice, in which his own initiation at this level is recorded.

I chose the night of June 21-22, X/197510 as an appropriate occasion for the working. The time/events following my June 10th letter to Anton and Diane had suggested to me that an ordinary solution was increasingly improbable, and that evening - as the Summer Solstice and anniversary of my own ordination to the Priesthood five years previously - seemed “traditionally” respectful. I cannot recall the date having any other significance to 10 Internally, per a passage in the Book of Coming Forth by Night, the Temple of Set has continued to use the annual dating system which, in Roman numerals, commenced from the founding of the Church of Satan in 1966 (as the year I Anno Satani). However the Temple changed that “AS” to “ÆS” (for Æon of Set) after June 22, X/1975. For ease of reference in this ebook, all years are indicated in profane (CE = Common Era) numerals, i.e. 1975, unless there is a magical reason for using the ÆS system.

At midnight I was alone in my home at 302 East Calle Laureles, Santa Barbara - save only for my beloved Irish Setter, Brandy. As was my habit with GBM workings, I put a phonograph record on the turntable and set it to endlessly repeat. I chose a selection which I had never used before [and, out of personal regard for the result, have never used since]: Ralph Vaughan Williams’ Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis.

My altar was located in the living room of the house. I opened the working in the traditional Satanic Mass, then spoke aloud the First Part of the Word of Set.\(^{11}\)

I felt an impulse to enter my study - “the Sanctum” as I nicknamed it - and with Brandy curled up at my feet, sat down at my desk and took up pen and paper. Then, over the next four hours, I wrote down the words of The Book of Coming Forth by Night.

The experience was neither one of “dictation” [as in Aleister Crowley’s Book of the Law working] or of “automatic writing” after the spiritualist fashion. The thoughts, words, phrases seemed to me indistinct from my own, yet impressed me as both unique and necessary, as though no other sequence would do. Frequently I paused for a time, waiting for what might occur next. Three times I got up from the desk entirely - once to find a small book by Wallis Budge, Egyptian Language, and leaf through it until I found the sentence that had gnawed at me, copying its hieroglyphs into my writing; once to trace an exact copy of a scrawled passage from the Book of the Law into the narrative; and finally, at its apparent end, to place a small piece of my own artwork (which I had done sometime previously, merely on a meditative whim) as a “seal”.

By about 4 AM the document was completed, and I was mentally and emotionally exhausted. I did not formally close the working [though I did stop the endlessly-cycling phonograph], and simply fell asleep until the late morning of the 22nd, when I first read through the complete text and tried to collect my thoughts concerning it.

\(^{11}\) See Appendices #3 and #4 for the text and discussion of the Word of Set version of the “Enochian Keys”.
Chapter 2: The North Solstice X Working

The Greater Black Magical working record The Book of Coming Forth by Night was not only a revelation to and reorientation of myself personally, but also the founding authority and philosophical cornerstone of the Temple of Set.

Appendix #2 contains the text of the working, followed by my most recent analysis and commentary concerning it in Appendix #3. [As a separate ebook I plan to make available a photofacsimile of the actual original document, which would consume too much memory for practical inclusion in The Temple of Set.]

In this chapter, however, I would like to consider the phenomenon of the working per se. What was it? What sort of validity, if any, can be assigned to it? Should this be different for others besides myself? Should it be regarded as a time-specific document or as something with “timeless” relevance and application?

In Chapter #1 I said that there was nothing overtly sensational, supernatural, or melodramatic about the Book of Coming Forth by Night working. I simply sat down and wrote it. It was not dictated to me by a materialized Egyptian god, nor did the words burn themselves into the pages like the fabled Hebrew Ten Commandments. The thoughts were “comfortable” ones, comprehensible to me within my preexisting frames of reference.

What, then, distinguished the Book of Coming Forth by Night from a mere meditation or exercise in creative writing? No more and no less than a sensation I had then, and conviction ever since, that something beyond Michael Aquino was generating it.

In his excellent work The Psychology of Anomalous Experience, Graham Reed (Professor of Psychology at York University, Canada) surveys the many types of human thought-experiences beyond the ordinary emotional or rational. “Anamolous,” he begins, “means irregular, distorted, or unusual”. He goes on to note that these classifications may be in the individual’s own opinion, or in that of parts or the whole of his surrounding society. While some such experiences may indeed be symptoms of various forms of mental illness, others are quite routinely a function of healthy thinking and are not at all pathological.

We are all familiar with AEs such as dreams/daydreams, “trick of the mind” visual/audible/conceptual illusions [as in stage magic presentations, paradoxes, distortions of perspective, etc.], memory surprises, and déjà vu. None of these are cause for concern unless they become unusually frequent or otherwise overwhelm “ordinary” thought.

The area into which The Book of Coming Forth by Night falls, however, has to do with what Reed calls “experience of self”. It is:

... fundamental to the whole of the individual’s psychic life. It underlies, determines, and colours all other experiences. Like other critical aspects of mind, we take it for granted and are only aware of it when it is disturbed in some way. It is almost impossible for a person in normal health to imagine what it would feel like not to be experiencing oneself as oneself. This is doubtless because imagining, like all other mental activities, normally occurs in the context of self-experience.

Clearly the experience of self is inextricably involved in all other cognitive activities and states because it underlies them and acts as a selector, integrator, and synthesizer. In a sense all the experiences we care to discuss affect, or are affected by, this central experience. So it would be possible to discuss it partially in terms of, for example, attention, registration, memory, thinking, or emotion. Being oneself determines how we attend and to what we pay attention. It is a product of all our stored experiences, and it determines our emotional responses. At the same time the idea “me”

Reed delineates four different types of anomaly from this normal, comprehensive “me”: (1) inability to distinguish oneself from one’s environment, (2) attribution of personal thoughts/imagery/actions to external forces, (3) experience of a detachment or separation of the self, and (4) concern that one’s experience of self/reality is not in fact valid.

The first - the “blurring of ego boundaries”14 - is characteristic of clinical schizophrenia, but in a contrasting and even highly-respected sense also encompasses the dissolution of the self into the “higher unity” of the cosmos as, for example, in nirvana.

The third - detachment or separation of the self - also takes a variety of forms, from the dream “out of the body” experience to the more elaborate, subtle, and metaphysical concepts of “astral selves”, the Egyptian ka, the sinister Doppelgänger, and in general the soul/mind/body distinction.

The fourth - doubt of the experience of reality - raises the question in one’s mind whether his entire experience of being, and that which is outside it, is truthful. Most recently this theme was dramatically romanced in the Matrix series of movies.

As for the second, it is in many respects both the most extraordinary and the most troublesome of the four. Here we find people who are convinced that they [or others] have been “programmed” by the government or aliens to think or act in certain ways, from sex slaves to “Manchurian Candidates”. Some may feel that their own thoughts are being sucked away by “thought vampires”, or that other people or beings are able to “tune into” their privacy just as on a radio channel.

The second type also embraces, however, metaphysical or religious experiences of a “revelation” nature. These may range [as historically in various religions] from possession or incarnation to prophecy, “channeling”, or simply perceiving one or more Great Truths. Far from being regarded as psychopathic maniacs [although they might well have been in their own day!], such representatives as Abraham, Moses, Jesus, Mohammed, the Buddha, Joan of Arc, the Mahdi, and Joseph Smith are popularly regarded with superstitious awe. Their less-successful competitors throughout the ages, of course, remain recorded as only heretics, weirdos, frauds, or madmen/women.

There are two other interesting features of most “revelations”:

First, as they are presumed to spring from a supernatural, all-knowing source, they are [at least by believers] not subject to the usual sort of factual questioning or analysis. They are to be accepted as an act of faith. Inaccuracies or inadequacies in them are ignored or assumed to be “revealed in their truth and understanding” at some divinely-determined future time.

Secondly, some adherents rely upon a steady stream of such manifestations to keep the belief-system going. Hence the series of Hebrew prophets, the visions and miracles throughout the New Testament, and of course the “Book of Revelation” telling Christians how the whole show is eventually going to climax.

The Book of Coming Forth by Night fits Reed’s definition of an “experience of self/second type/revelation anomaly”, but does not exhibit or depend upon the two sub-features described above. It has been extensively and exhaustively examined, and compared to other perspectives on reality, by many Setians [and nonSetians] over the decades - and again here in Appendix #3. Also it has apparently passed well the test of time as a stand-alone document, requiring neither sequel nor supplement to retain its usefulness and relevance to Setian philosophy.

Now perhaps I may productively return to my own sensation, reaction, and opinion the morning of June 22, 1975.

Frankly I didn’t know what to make of the Book of Coming Forth by Night. It was certainly not at all what I had expected [although I hadn’t known what to expect the evening before]. Obviously it contained elements of ancient Egypt, Aleister Crowley, and the Church of Satan. But it mingled these in what was to me an odd and unfamiliar way. In some ways it seemed ancient, in other ways futuristic. It seemed to be speaking to me personally, but also to as-yet-unidentified others. It contained cosmology, philosophy, magic, evolution, cryptography, promises, and threats. Summarily it pretty well upset my entire applecart.

I did, however, have two immediate impressions: one, that it was authentic - what it claimed to be - a communication from the Egyptian god Set; two, that I myself must take it wholly and sincerely to heart. Even today, after all these years of examination of and reflection upon the Book of Coming Forth by Night, I cannot explain or defend these convictions, but simply recall them.

In his “Preliminary Remarks” to his Book 4, Part I, Aleister Crowley discussed at some length the ecstatic vision which each founder of a religion seemed at one point in his life to experience:

> Finally something happens whose nature may form the subject of a further discussion later on. For the moment let it suffice to say that this consciousness of the ego and the non-ego, the seer and the thing seen, the knower and the thing known, is blotted out.

> There is usually an intense light, an intense sound, and a feeling of such overwhelming bliss that the resources of language have been exhausted again and again in the attempt to describe it.

> It is an absolute knock-out blow to the mind. It is so vivd and tremendous that those who experience it are in the gravest danger of losing all sense of proportion.

> By its light all other events of life are as darkness.15

For me the Book of Coming Forth by Night was something like that. I might try to discuss it theoretically and practically with others, but beyond and beneath any and all such sensible courses of action, the thing had somehow seared me to the heart of my soul. Henceforth visualizing existence without this as its centerpiece would be quite inconceivable.

But on the morning of June 22, I did not pursue such an ominous course of reflection. More important to me at the time was that I had asked questions about the crisis in the Church of Satan, and they had been answered. It was now time to share that answer with others, which led in due course to the [re]founding of the Temple of Set.

It later seemed to me that there might be much more to the Book of Coming Forth by Night than just its reading. In this, admittedly, I had the model of Aleister Crowley’s attitude towards the Book of the Law, which he approached as a complex puzzle to be deciphered and analyzed - and so he did, over the years and in several editions of commentaries.

My first detailed examination of the Book of Coming Forth by Night was a 10-page letter to the Priesthood of Set III°+ on September 6, 1975. This was eventually followed by a 22-page one the following year and a 26-page one in 1985. That was included for a time in the Crystal Tablet of Set (the Setian I°/introductory volume of the Jeweled Tablets of Set), and later was moved to the Adept II°+ Ruby Tablet. Appendix #3 of this *Temple of Set marks its first [and possibly final, at least by me] revision since then.

As mentioned at the beginning of Chapter #1, the Church of Satan had struggled for the entire decade of its existence with the central, inevitable issue of the reality of the supernatural, or more precisely the metaphysical. The puerile myths and images of the world’s conventional religions we had long since dismissed as worthless nonsense - indeed, as pertaining to their devils and demons, the stuff for amusing, spooky psychodrama, sarcastic lampoon, and occasionally Lesser Black Magical control of gullible minds still psychologically enslaved to superstition.

Yet within carefully-crafted magical ritual environments, some Satanists had also sensed a reality beyond that apparent to the ordinary senses. This was an entirely new and positive form of “Satanism” that had almost nothing in common with traditional “Devil worship” except the preliminary seriousness of formal atmospheres. It was a chill that went up one’s spine when commencing, then culminating a Black Magical working. We were not just play-acting; we had really opened, or at least begun to open a door which profane humanity had only vaguely imagined to exist. What we would see when we got it fully open we did not know; we only sensed that, for all of its faults and failings, the Church of Satan had somehow managed to discover its key.

For me, the Book of Coming Forth by Night was the event that flung that door wide open. I now knew of a certainty that there was a reality beyond the four-dimensional, and that within it existed the actual centers of consciousness which mankind had dimly imagined as “gods”. Pythagoras and Plato had come closer to them as Forms or Principles, and the ancient Egyptians closest of all as neteru.

This realization forever transformed the core of my own consciousness, of course, as I’m sure it would that of anyone else undergoing the same shock. I knew now that physical extension in time/space was merely part of a much greater whole whose Mysteries awaited beyond.

I simultaneously realized that, as Crowley had observed in Book 4 above, such an illumination - there is no better word for it - cannot possibly be described or explained to intellects as yet within the purely-material realm of consciousness. It would be futile, even dangerous to try, as in H.G. Wells’ famous parable of The Country of the Blind.

There was, however, another aspect of the Book of Coming Forth by Night which was both communicable and practical. It pointed the way to a unique path of self-realization and ennoblement that any suitably-intelligent individual could decide to pursue. It was not necessary to comprehend its origin or ultimate implication - just its existence and availability. The Grail was now there to be grasped and drunk from, for any with the awareness, courage, and resolve to do so.

And so it has been these thirty years hence. Many thousands of humans have undertaken the adventure invited by the Book of Coming Forth by Night - some with more success than others, but all, I think, awakened and energized by their encounter.

There is, unfortunately, a less-pleasant side to this phenomenon. Some aspirants have found themselves unprepared to step beyond a purely-conventional frame of intellectual existence. In such cases the strengthening of consciousness can evoke, as in the science-fiction film Forbidden Planet, “monsters of the id” capable of psychological harm to themselves or others. As it has learned more about such dangers over the years, the Temple of Set has endeavored to dissuade such personalities from seeking initiation, or shortstopping an effort that seems to be miscarrying in ominous directions. I daresay this will remain one of the Temple’s more important and compassionate responsibilities as long as it exists.
In my essay Black Magic, the introduction to the Crystal Tablet of Set, I wrote:

This text was so meaningful to me that I have since ordered my life and philosophy by its principles. The other founders of the Temple of Set accorded it a similar trust and respect. Even though they had not participated in the working itself, many remarked, they felt that the text itself carried its own aura of authenticity and conviction. In the years that followed, countless others have been moved by it in a similar fashion.

When I accepted the Book of Coming Forth by Night, it was in a deliberate, reflective way - with a resolve to undertake the creation and care of the Temple of Set proper, and to patiently allow history to validate or disprove any principles that the Temple might propose or practice. This has remained my attitude ever since that serene and sublime experience.

As for the text itself, I am content to comment upon it as best I can, then let others judge it as they will. For me it is now, as then, a simple, beautiful, and purposeful statement from the sentient being whom mankind has loved, hated, worshipped, cursed, praised, and reviled as the Prince of Darkness. To echo the words of G.B. Shaw in The Devil’s Disciple: “I promised him my soul, and swore an oath that I would stand up for him in this world and stand by him in the next.”

This remains my oath today.
Chapter 3: Khemistry

Confronting Ancient Egypt

The Book of Coming Forth by Night, among other things, retired the iconography of Judæo/Christianity in favor of that of ancient Egypt. This resolved the Church of Satan’s perennial problem of being cast by others, if increasingly not casting itself, into an image of “anti-J/C” [and presumably the “good” values J/C claims to represent].

A focus upon ancient Egyptian philosophy, religion, and culture, however, presented the fledgling Temple of Set with a different, and equally formidable array of problems.

The topic of ancient Egypt generally has been one of both exhaustive examination by and contentious debate between conventional Egyptologists and independent investigators. The former group generally agree that Egypt was simply an agricultural society comparable to that of other Mediterranean/Near-Eastern cultures of the time-period. It was notable for its enigmatic hieroglyphic writing system, odd-looking formalized art, peculiar massive building projects, and morbid, animal-totem religious cultism.

The latter group, while differing in the details, see Egypt rather as a remarkable, indeed startling exception to its primitive neighbors. It was uniquely a civilization and repository of great sophistication and wisdom - in some respects so much so, indeed, that the very ability of the Egyptians themselves to have generated such utopian wonders is called into question in favor of Atlanteans, extraterrestrial visitors, and/or incarnated gods.

Each camp routinely ridicules the other. The conventionalists denounce the independents as unscientific dreamers and “pyramidiots”. The latter are equally contemptuous of the former, considering them as merely a brittle academic self-protectorate afraid to violate modern taboos.

And there are two taboos in particular which institutional academia does not dare to transgress - or even openly acknowledge as taboos.

First, modern [Western] civilization is assumed to be at the zenith of human sophistication in all respects. It has been steadily improving over the last five thousand years (after recorded history officially began ca. 3000 BCE). Since the passage of time mandates social evolution and improvement, it is heresy to suggest that an ancient civilization, particularly one at the very beginning of this progression, could actually have been superior to its successors, including those today, in some if not all respects.

Secondly, the world today is divided into three major monotheistic religions: Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. All, even in countries where they have become largely propaganda devices for the control of the lesser-intelligent masses, are as exclusive and intolerant as politically permitted. Despite their doctrinal differences, however, they are all agreed that there exists but one God - the Hebraic JHVH. Thus all polytheism, whether new or old, is false and fictitious. It follows that any such fiction cannot possibly be as, much less more sophisticated than Hebraic monotheism [as triple-modified]. Egyptian religion may be studied, exploited for artistic purposes and horror movies, but never actually believed in.

The Church of Satan had been accused by its critics of championing the worship of evil. Not so: What it actually did, as exemplified in the Diabolicon, was to maintain that “God” was in fact evil and “Satan”, as a repudiation of that evil, was truly good. This was a new interpretation of “evil” as human denial of personal responsibility for moral decisions, as well as hypocrisy in the executing of such moral decisions as were ventured. True goodness was accordingly to be found in genuine personal responsibility and full acceptance of the consequences of one’s decisions. This is what made the Church of Satan, despite its bizarre facade, feel so refreshingly virtuous next to the repulsive, corrupt Hebraic monotheism it rejected.

Now the Temple of Set was challenged to take one step beyond. The entire Hebraic monotheism, to include even its Satanic reinterpretation as the actual benchmark for evil, would be thrown into the dustbin. JHVH, Satan, Moses, Christ, Mohammed - collectively discarded in all of their social, physical, or metaphysical contexts and pretensions.

In their stead would arise not a mere revival of polytheism per se, but a polyfaceted divine individualism, in which the energy of each such personal consciousness is realized to derive from a Universal inspiration: Set.

This was a Set far more subtle and complex than the superficial character described by the Egyptologists. Just how much so it would take the Temple of Set many years to discover; in many regards it is still doing so.

The other Egyptian “gods” were also reperceived. In conventional Egyptology they too, like Set, were merely two-dimensional dolls in a hodge-podge of folktales and parables. Now the individual human consciousness, each as energized by Set, was seen to be capable of seeing past the physical surface of natural phenomena, into the living essence underlying each. These are the Forms described by Plato in his Dialogues, and more originally the true neteru comprehended by the priesthods of ancient Egypt.

To the extent it has been noticed by conventional society over the years since its [re]founding, the Temple of Set has occasionally been maligned and attacked on various alarmist prettexts: “Satanism”, “cult”, “political extremism”, “mind control”, etc. All such nonsense serves merely to illustrate how ignorant such critics are of the actual distinction and significance of the Temple as summarized here. It is nothing less than an entirely new way of looking not just at self-conscious humanity, but at the physical and metaphysical realities beyond that humanity.

Egyptian History

Let us now review those aspects of ancient Egypt on which most scholars, the academic and the arcane, might be expected to find some common ground.

The earliest existing evidence of human culture in the Nile valley dates to more than 250,000 BCE, as the remnants of handaxes and other stone tools have been uncovered 50-100’ below the Nile’s silt terrace.

Sometime between 10,000 and 7,000 BCE, according to conventional archæology, a most important event took place - the domestication of the wild African goat and the subsequent freedom to begin cultivation of grain. This effectively heralded the beginning of human civilization, as for the first time primitive man was free to turn his thoughts to matters other than a constant search for food.

By the same consensus, it was in the pre-dynastic Gerzean period (commencing about 3600 BCE) that the first communities of the future Egyptian nation came into existence. A great war of unification commenced in approximately 3400 BCE. After more than two centuries of intermittent conflict between Upper and Lower Egypt, the land was finally united under Menes (or Narmer), the first pharaoh of the I Dynasty.16

Inhabiting a land characterized by the regularity of the elements (behavior of the winds, the Nile, the climate, the Sun, and the skies), the Egyptians sought perfection in stability, harmony, symmetry, geometry, and a cyclical [as opposed to progressive or linear] concept of time.

In modern culture we take progressive/linear time for granted. It is as inevitable and inexorable as the hands of the wristwatches to which we are gently, yet firmly manacled. We see our lives, and indeed the entire known universe, as a terrible struggle against entropy, ending ultimately in the death, decomposition, and obliteration of each separate person or thing.

It is further this perception, and the fear of it, which has lent Hebraic monotheism a vampiric persistence far past the 17th-18th Century “Enlightenment” which, intellectually at least, exposed it as a sham. For the Christian and Muslim versions, if not the Jewish, promise continuation of the same life after physical death, albeit with dire punishment specifically for not believing in and obeying them now.

The Egyptians, however, envisioned neither themselves nor the world about them to be entrapped in such a fearsome forced-march. They saw the Sun, Moon, and firmament behaving in recurring cycles, as also the rise and fall of the Nile, the regular seasons, plantlife. If humans and other animals were born, lived for a time, and died, it stood to reason that they too participated in an eternal cycling of a more subtle color. Egyptian records would accordingly document specific personalities and events, but without any particular attention to related change or innovation. Harmony with the cycles of things, not defiance of them, was the Egyptian ideal - which explains why the essential character of Egyptian society remained little changed, except to meet external intrusion, for thirty dynasties extending over 3,000 years.17

Former Director of Cairo’s French Oriental Archaeological Institute Serge Sauneron comments:

To understand the attitude of the Egyptians, it is necessary to emphasize the striking contrast between their view of the world and ours. We live in a universe which we know is in perpetual movement; each new problem demands a new solution. But for the Egyptians this notion of time which modifies the current knowledge of the world, of an alteration of factors which forces a change in methods, had no place. In the beginning the divinity created a stable world, fixed, definitive; this world functions as a motor well oiled and well fed. If there are “misfires” - if the motor fades, if one of the parts making it up is worn out or broken - it is replaced and everything starts off again better than before. But this motor would always remain the same; its mechanism, its appearance, its output would always be identical.

If some problem intrigues the mind, therefore - if some serious event arises to disturb the customary order of things - it could not really be new; it was foreseen with the world. Its solution or remedy exists in all eternity, revealed in a kind of universal “manner of use” that the gods defined in creating the universe itself. What is necessary, therefore, is to find in the ancient writings the formula that foresaw such-and-such a case. Before a given event - a physical phenomenon, a catastrophe striking the whole country - the scholar would not seek to discover the actual causes in order to find an appropriate remedy. Rather he would examine with scholarly ardor the volumes of old writings to find out if the event had already occurred in some moment of the past, and what solution had then been applied to it.18

In accordance with their cyclical perception of reality, therefore, the Egyptians’ achievements tended to be in “timeless” areas such as astronomy, mathematics, medicine, and architecture. These, along with Egyptian religion and art, are often oversimplified in many modern treatments, due in part to the absence of verifiable data in later history until the deciphering of hieroglyphics by Champollion in 1822. Because of the destruction and 17 The XXX Dynasty is generally considered to be the last native Egyptian one. Subsequently there was a Persian one (XXXI) and a Ptolemaic Greek one (XXXII), ending with the death of Cleopatra VII and Roman rule in 30 BCE.

despoliation of ancient Egyptian records and works of art by religious fanatics of later eras, it is estimated that modern archaeologists have at their disposal less than 10% of that country’s cultural creations from which to reconstruct its values.\footnote{Cf. Fagan, Brian M., \textit{The Rape of the Nile}. New York: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1975.}

Egypt was divided into 42 nomes (provinces), each dominated by the priesthood of one or more \textit{neteru}. A particular priesthood might also influence more than one nome. The monarchy was closely controlled by the various orders of priesthood, with the pharaoh acting as an Earthly deputy of and interpreter for the \textit{neteru}.

Governmental, judicial, and political systems were responsible for their ethics to the \textit{neteru}, not to the people. Justice was meted out by viziers (internal roving ambassadors of the pharaoh) and nome governors according to the \textit{neter} of justice, Maat, on an individual-case basis. There was no concept of individual rights against the government, because government was viewed as a system imposed from without by the \textit{neteru}. Similarly each Egyptian, whether high- or low-born, participated in this system. Crime and corruption were of course possible, but inadvisable because of the conviction that viciousness, callousness, or cruelty would be punished severely after Earthly death.\footnote{Wilson, John A., “Egypt” in Frankfort, Henri (Ed.), \textit{Before Philosophy}. Baltimore: Penguin Books, 1946.} \[It is of note that such posthumous judgment focused upon individual virtue/vice rather than, as in later Christian/Islamic doctrine, upon mere orthodoxy and obedience to religious institutions.\]

Old Kingdom Egypt was largely insulated from foreign invasion or conflict, hence Egypt spent its early years as a peaceful culture with no standing military. Egypt is credited with invention of the alphabet, as well as the use of currency as a medium of exchange. It is noteworthy for having produced the first national (as opposed to city-state) political system, as well as the most enduring one in recorded history (more than 3,000 years). There was no caste, racial, or sexual discrimination; foreigners were considered “less than human (=Egyptian)”, but could remedy this misfortune simply by moving to Egypt and adopting Egyptian culture.

Egypt was ultimately destroyed by foreign conquerors (Persia, Macedonia, Rome) and by her inability to adapt to the continuing competition of foreign cultures. Her New Empire of the Setian (XIX-XX) Dynasties was a protectionist backlash rather than an effort to “civilize” or create a permanent empire [after the fashion of Persia, Macedonia, or Rome].

\textbf{The Neteru}

The Egyptians perceived the Universe as actively controlled by conscious, natural principles (\textit{neteru}) of which Sir E.A. Wallis Budge remarks:

The word \textit{neter} has been translated “god-like”, “holy”, “divine”, “sacred”, “power”, “strength”, “force”, “strong”, “fortify”, “mighty”, “protect”; but it is quite impossible to be certain that any word which we may use represents the meaning of \textit{neter}, because no one knows exactly what idea the ancient Egyptians attached to the word. The truth is that the exact meaning of \textit{neter} was lost at a very early period of Egyptian history, and even the Coptic does not help us to recover it.\footnote{Budge, E. A. Wallis, \textit{The Book of the Dead}. New Hyde Park: University Books, 1960, page #99.}
To the Egyptians, all of “nature” (derived from neter) was alive and the direct consequence of the wills of the neteru. Nature was intelligible not just through inanimate, automatic, general regularities which could be discovered via the “scientific method”; but also through connections and associations between things and events perceived in the human mind. There was no distinction between “reality” and “appearance”; anything capable of exerting an effect upon the mind thereby existed. Hence a dream could be considered just as “real” and thus significant as a daytime experience.

Egyptian art, literature, and science looked for beauty and symmetry (felt to be indications of divine perfection), rather than for cause-and-effect relationships. Hence Egyptian thought is sometimes called “geometric” as opposed to the “algebraic” thought of Hellenic and later logicians.

Since impressions and appearances substantiated reality, the Egyptian emphasis on portraits and statues of the neteru was not merely decorative, metaphorical, or symbolic. Rather an image was a medium whereby the neter in question could make an actual appearance in the material world.22

Similarly part of something could substitute for the whole as long as the mind completed the connection. Mental imagery created by viewing the portrait of a dead relative, for example, brought that relative to true life.

Persons unfamiliar with the ancient Egyptian culture often assume that the Egyptian religion, like those of later Mediterranean civilizations, consisted of a single, integrated pantheon of anthropomorphic gods and goddesses. It is rather the case that the earliest Egyptian neteru were provincial, being patrons of individual cities and districts (nomes). Nor, despite their famous human/beast composite appearances, were they mere “supernatural persons” in the later Greek, Mesopotamian, or Roman mold. While popular stories were woven about them - presumably for popular consumption - the hieroglyphic treatment of the Egyptian neteru suggests that they actually represented various aspects of existence - the “Forms” or “First Principles” discussed by Pythagoras and Plato in a more abstract manner.23

Intriguingly the neteru may have had a physical presence as well. The 30-Dynasty dating system most archaeologists use for ancient Egypt comes from Manetho, an Egyptian priest at Sebennytos in the Nile Delta ca. 280 BCE. Manetho’s dynastic list extends backward before Menes and the I Dynasty date of 3100 BCE: 350 years Thinites; 1,790 years other Memphite kings; 1,817 years other kings; 1,255 years “Heroes”; and before that 13,900 years in which the neteru reigned physically on Earth.

Obviously this chronology would conflict with the “accepted” prehistory of Egypt as summarized at the beginning of this chapter. Conventional Egyptologists are comfortable only with a “civilization began suddenly in 3100 BCE” scenario, hence Manetho is relied upon very strongly after that date, but swept under the rug prior to it.24

Commerce, protective alliances, cultural contact, and finally the unification of the entire nation ca. 3100 BCE resulted in the gradual incorporation of local neteru into regional groups, and then into a loosely-knit national pantheon. Local and regional cult centers

continued to hold their respective patrons in especial regard, however, and so the character and role of a specific neter might vary remarkably from place to place. Individual dynasties also tended to be oriented to particular cult centers, and so the neteru in question would be elevated - at least for a time - to the status of national patrons.25

The information concerning these cults which is available to modern Egyptologists is both sparse and confusing. Since a given neter could be portrayed in a number of different ways, identifying the “core neter” is difficult. The images and inscriptions concerning a neter were often altered or appropriated by cultists of rival neteru. In Christian and Islamic times all “old gods” were considered blasphemous, and monuments to them were regularly defaced and destroyed. By the end of the fifth century CE, knowledge of hieroglyphics had died out, not to reappear until the nineteenth century; meanwhile many “useless” records perished through neglect.

For two reasons the cult of Osiris (Asar) and Isis (Asa) has been emphasized in modern literature: First, it was the last cult to dominate the entire Egyptian nation. Thus it was in a position to do a “final editing” of non-Osirian manuscripts and monuments. Secondly it was described in detail by Plutarch, permitting its study long after the hieroglyphic records of the other cults had become unreadable.26

Set

No records of the ancient Priesthood of Set survived the Osirian-dynastic persecution and later the more general vandalism of the Christian/Islamic eras. We know of it only by its reflection, both in the character of Set as he was portrayed symbolically and mythologically and in the nature of Egyptian priesthoods in general. Three significant facts are known about the Priesthood of Set:

(1) Together with the Priesthood of Horus [the Elder], it was the oldest of the Egyptian priesthoods. If we date it to the earliest predynastic images of Set found by archaeologists, we can establish an origin of at least 3200 BCE. Working with the Egyptians’ own astronomically-based records, we may approximate 5000 BCE.27 If we are to assume the final eclipse of the Priesthood at the end of the XIX-XX [Setian] Dynasties ca. 1085 BCE, we are looking at an institution which existed at least two thousand and possibly as many as four thousand years. “In the early dynasties,” observes Budge:

Set was a beneficent god, and one whose favor was sought after by the living and by the dead, and so late as the XIX Dynasty kings delighted to call themselves “Beloved of Set”. After the cult of Osiris was firmly established and this god was the “great god” of all Egypt, it became the fashion to regard Set as the origin of all evil, and his statues and images were so effectively destroyed that only a few which have escaped by accident have come down to us.28

One may note that Set was by no means the only “fabulous” creature ever portrayed by Egyptian artists. But he was the only one represented as a principal neter, as opposed to a purely-animalistic monster of the Tuat.

(2) Set was the neter who was “different” from all of the others. Too often this is simplified into his being the “evil” slayer of Osiris, hence the personification of “evil”; yet any but the most cursory study of Egyptian religious symbolism is sufficient to dispel this caricature. He was rather a neter “against the neteru”: the entity who symbolized that which is not of nature.

This is a very curious role for a neter in Egyptian cosmology: to be a presence and force which alone could not be apprehended by perceptions of the natural senses. Set thus represents the nameless “thing” whose existence we know of by the shadow it casts on things apprehended and things perceived by it: the non-natural “presence of self” in individual intelligent life.

We have generalized the vehicle by which this presence is manifest as the ba, spirit, psyche, or soul, but increased precision is possible. We must subtract from the psyche what is “life force”, and focus our attention on that which remains: the very awareness of self. In doing so we have in one sense retraced the path of Descartes to the cogito ergo sum proposition. Unlike Descartes, however, we see this phenomenon to be a “thing totally apart” which is not an extension of “God” or anything else. Set is the conceptualizer of this principle: the designer. To rewrite the crucial sentence in the above quote from the point of view of a neter: “A thing created in the mind thereby exists.”

This is delicate ground to tread, so much more so for an ancient Egyptian civilization whose entire “natural” cosmology was based upon the perfection and harmony of the Universe.

(3) Despite this unique and disturbing image, or perhaps because of it, Set became the patron of the two most powerful dynasties in Egypt’s long history, the XIX and XX. Herein there is an interesting “theological succession”:

The early XVIII Dynasty (ca. 1580-1372) was that of the great Amenhoteps, during whose reigns the Priesthood of Amon at Thebes was preeminent. The dynasty disintegrated during the “Amarna period” (ca. 1372-1343) of Akhenaten, during which the solar disk of Aton was considered supreme if not indeed all-inclusive of the neteru. When the new XIX Dynasty arose under Rameses I and Seti I, the state role of Amon was restored - but the pharaohs directed much of their efforts towards Set. Recounts Sauneron:

The new dynasty in power, careful to appear to be “restoring everything to order”, had many reasons for mistrusting the Amonian priesthood. Descendants of a military family of the eastern delta, the new pharaohs were traditionally devoted to a god little esteemed by the masses because of the role that he had been assigned in the death of Osiris. But they preserved nevertheless, here and there, the temples and priesthoods of the god Set.

The Amarnian experience had demonstrated the cost of too abrupt a break with the beliefs central to the entire nation, and of entering into open warfare against a priesthood practically as powerful as the throne itself. Thus the politics of Seti I (1312-1301) and of Rameses II (1301-1235) were infinitely more subtle than those of their predecessors. There was no rupture with Thebes; the constructions continued, and magnificent edifices were raised to the glory of Amon at Karnak, Gourna, and Ramesseum. But it was from the [Osirian] center of Abydos that Rameses appointed the High Priest of Amon. Then he installed two of his sons, Merytum and Khamuast, as the High Priests of Ra at Heliopolis and Ptah at Memphis, and demonstrated by further monuments and political favors his public support of these gods. But finally, wearied of Thebes and its ambitious priests, he departed to build a new capital, Pi-Rameses, in the eastern delta - where he could quietly worship the god dearest to him, with Amon occupying a secondary prominence.

The provincial cities where Set had been worshipped from all eternity - among them Ombos, Tjebu, and Sepermeru - gained new preeminence from the favor accorded by the Ramesside leaders to the god of the Eastern Delta. Above all, Pi-Rameses, the new capital, brilliantly restored the worship that Set had formerly received in the Avaris of the Hyksos.29

During the Setian Dynasties - most probably during the reign of Merenptah - the revolt and “exodus” of a number of nomads (hieroglyphic habiru) living in Egypt’s Goshen province occurred - or at least did so in Jewish legend. Although “Old Testament” lore states that the original Hebrews were a unified, foreign culture which entered Egypt during the time of Rameses I, there are no Egyptian records substantiating this. It is more probable that the actual participants in any “exodus” were people from a variety of ethnic backgrounds.30 Possibly the Hebrews’ hated “Satan” derives from one of the honorific titles (Set-hen = Eternal Set) accorded the state deity of the regime they were fleeing.

Following the passing of the two Setian dynasties, the increasing influence of a priesthood not courted by the Ramesside pharaohs - that of Osiris - boded ill for the Priesthood of Set. The Osirians recast Set as Osiris’ treacherous brother and mortal enemy of Osiris’ son - for whom they appropriated the neter Horus. Not content with attacking Set personally, they further appropriated his consort and son from the original triad of his cult - Nepthys and Anubis - whom they now described respectively as a concubine of Osiris and a son of Osiris by Nepthys. Comments E.A. Wallis Budge:

Between the XXII and the XXV Dynasties, a violent reaction set in against this god [Set]; his statues and figures were smashed; his effigy was hammered out from the bas-reliefs and stelae in which it appeared.31

Various reasons for this reaction have been proposed by Egyptologists. It is been suggested that Set fell into disrepute through being associated in the popular mind with the Sutekh of the invading Hyksos. Possible, but improbable, as the Hyksos invasion occurred prior to the XIX-XX Dynasties when Set was preeminently in favor - and the presiding neter over Egypt’s greatest period of imperial glory.

Set’s eclipse may well have been due to a more subtle, yet pervasive sentiment sweeping Egypt. As Sauneron and many other Egyptologists have acknowledged, Egyptian philosophy was based upon a millennia-old conviction of the absolute presence and influence of the neteru, and in the virtue of a social system in which the preservation of cyclical harmony was all-important. While the New Empire of the XIX-XX Dynasties extended Egypt’s influence to Palestine and Mesopotamia, it also made the Egyptians aware that there were many other functioning cultures in which the neteru were unknown [at least by their Egyptian names]. Moreover the concept of Egypt as just one among a number of nation-states competing for power and influence in the Mediterranean, rather than as the one civilization at the center of existence, must have been a most unsettling one to this ancient culture - which previously had been able to discount its neighbors as mere uncultured, barbarian tribes.

Egypt’s solution to this problem was to turn gradually away from a glorification of this life and towards an orientation on the afterlife, where such disturbing dilemmas could be assumed not to exist. This would explain the growing influence and popularity of the Osiris cult during the post-XX Dynasty Egyptian decadence, as Osiris was a neter of the afterlife.

As the Osiris cult portrayed Set as Osiris’ nemesis rather than an independent and pre-existing neter with no particular interest in Osiris, this would also explain the simultaneous wave of Setian persecution described by Budge. It was characteristic of ancient Egypt that each new dynasty, in an attempt to establish its own “timelessness”, often doctored monuments and records to eliminate inconvenient inconsistencies. Presumably the Osirian dynasties followed suit, defacing or rewriting all references to Set that did not support their portrayal of him as a “Devil”.\(^{32}\) And that was the distortion of Set which survived in later Mediterranean legend - principally through Plutarch, who described it in some detail in his Moralia.\(^{33}\)

Commencing in 1975, therefore, the Temple of Set sought to return to an original, undistorted apprehension of Set. In keeping with our modern levels of knowledge, of course, this image has been both enhanced and refined. Enhanced in that we now understand better than the ancient Egyptians how the material universe functions, refined to exclude facets of the human personality that are natural, externally-controlled functions.

At the same time, contemporary civilization’s impatience and superficiality - its restless inability to study anything metaphysical in any depth - have tended to condense the delicate, complex study of Egyptian cosmology into a crude caricature capable of being digested by modern minds in a few hours at most. Initiates of the Temple of Set must resolve to take the time to apprehend and appreciate Set - and the other Egyptian neteru - in the same contemplative, reflective, and above all unhurried fashion that their ancient predecessors did. Only then will the magnificence, subtlety, and depth of this metaphysical system be realized and appreciated. Only then can its principles be applied meaningfully within our current environment.

In the first few years of the young Temple of Set, we weren’t quite so clear about this. We duly plunged into many works of conventional Egyptology, some of the more useful of which are still included in the Egypt/Historical and Egypt/Philosophical categories of our Reading List. Various Setians contributed some research articles of this genre to the Scroll, Ruby Tablet, and Order & Element publications. But it soon became clear to us that, absent an empathy for Egypt - a sensation of its innate soul, as it were - all such studies were sterile and lifeless exercises.

The greatest breakthrough for us came in our encounter with the writings of René Schwaller de Lubicz and his wife Isha. Indeed the lion’s - I should say lioness’ - share of the credit goes to her, because much of René’s work is highly technical. Isha was able to synthesize its elemental themes into her highly-readable “novel” Her-Bak, being the story of a young Egyptian’s journey from ordinary peasant to initiated priest.\(^{34}\) For many Setians, once they were exposed to the basic structure of René’s thought through Her-Bak, his more complex works were soon unlocked.

And suddenly ancient Egypt came wonderfully, vibrantly to life before us. Now, knowing what to look for and what to do with it once we found it, the Temple of Set discovered no end of wonders over the years, as of course we continue to do today.

\(^{32}\) Ions, op.cit., pages #72-78. The Osirian legends on this subject are treated comprehensively in J. Gwyn Griffith’s The Conflict of Horus and Seth (Chicago: Argonaut Publishers, 1969).

\(^{33}\) Plutarch, Isis and Osiris, Volume V in Moralia.

René’s initial realization came from his study of hieroglyphs: that in addition to their convenience for mere alphabetic, they embodied symbolic principles apprehensible to both the rational and the suprarational intelligence. [His methodology is thus often termed “Symbolism”.] Gradually he extended his awareness of this key to Egyptian culture into its architecture (as in his magnum opus examination of the Luxor temple complex, Le Temple de L’Homme) and pre-Pythagoreanism.

Of the various works examining René’s ideas in the Temple’s Reading List, I think I would recommend John Anthony West’s Serpent in the Sky as the most “immediately-intelligible” introduction. It is at least better-suited to the impatient modern reader than the Her-Bak we earliest Setians strolled patiently, if pleasantly through!

Another very capable presentation is Egyptian Mysteries by Lucie Lamy, René’s longtime student and the talented illustrator for both his works and Isha’s.

Beyond these two introductory works [and of course Her-Bak if you have a peaceful disposition and plenty of contemplation-time], I need say nothing. Once the door opens for you, you will see, well, “wonderful things”!

You will suddenly understand the Pyramids. You will suddenly understand the Temples. And of course you will meet the neteru. Not the two-dimensional, comic-book simpletons cherished by profane Egyptologists, enmeshed in tawdry tales of sex, violence, and meaningless ritual. But the beautiful, wonderful weavers of the most delicate webs of the Objective Universe itself. In their presence, severally and collectively, the awakened Initiate will confront an eternity of discovery and synthetic creativity.

And yet the most difficult neter to meet is Set. Because to apprehend all of the others one need only look outward, through the lenses you have learned to fashion for your enlightened vision.

But where are you going to place your lever, direct your lens, focus your attention, to see into the nucleus, the central fire, of the thing that is your own conscious self?

For that is the mirror through which Set will gradually become more and more distinct, to those with the intelligence, discipline, determination, and initiation to see him. And when and if you achieve this, you will simultaneously - and necessarily - experience a wonder equally as sublime: you will behold your own true, complete, ultimate divinity.

In the original Stargate motion picture, the Great Pyramid of Giza was revealed to be nothing more than a crude, ritualistic imitation by fearful protodynastic Egyptians of the gigantic, pyramidal starships in which creatures beyond their comprehension had come to Earth; the stone coffer in the “King’s Chamber” a similar rough image of the wondrous machine in the starships with the power to literally bring dead bodies back to life.

In that film, as well as the elegant television series it subsequently inspired, the alien “gods” were not quite the neteru they pretended to be - simply an advanced species using “divine” imagery as a means of psychological domination of others as well as for their own exotic pleasures. Nevertheless these Goa’uld almost uncannily demonstrated the relationship which ordinary humanity has with its perceived “God/gods” - and why it is quite fulfilled by such a relationship, false and oppressive as it may be.

In world after world, civilization after civilization, it is ever the same; and when a Goa’uld is exposed or killed, the result is always chaos and uncertainty, with the “liberated” peoples slipping down into aimless, tedious tribalism. The wanton terrors of the Goa’uld are gone - but so are the great, gleaming Pyramidal starships, the technology to instantly heal all injuries and even restore bodily life itself, and the ecstatic experience of interacting with the “gods” face-to-face. It is now, again, the Fourth Age of Middle-earth.

Stargate leaves its audience with an even more tantalizing mystery. If the Goa’uld borrow their personae from real neteru whom they have used advanced technology to imitate, how did they originally come to know them?

Which leads to my central question about the ancient Egyptians: Why didn’t their culture “develop”? I believe that the evidence shows that their arts, sciences, mathematics, technology, techniques of warfare are all there complete from the beginning. What I want to argue here today is that the Egyptians of the pre-Old Kingdom era somehow “inherited” all these arts and sciences. Then after a short “getting acquainted” period, we see the full flowering of what we call ancient Egypt ...

Chapter 4: 22nd and Kansas

On the morning of June 22, 1975 I felt less like a magician and more like the victim of a mugging. I had undertaken what I had anticipated as a Greater Black Magical working to place the recent critical events in the Church of Satan in some sort of constructive-repair context. Instead the entire structure had been discarded and its patron, Satan, remorphed into an ancient Egyptian god. The previous six years of my initiatory life, from the time when I had joined the Church, had in the space of a few hours become obsolete.

Named a Magus and charged to [re]build a Temple of Set, I considered that I knew nothing about being a Magus, little about ancient Egypt generally, and less about Set in particular. Not to mention that beyond the walls of my study, my initiatory colleagues from the Church of Satan quite understandably still considered themselves Satanists and believed in the metaphysical basis for, if no longer in the organizational ruins of the Church.

Well, I had to start somewhere. I telephoned Lilith Sinclair at her home in Summerland, a wooded suburb of Santa Barbara, and asked if I could visit to show her the record of last night’s GBM working. She read through it silently, then somewhat to my surprise simply nodded her assent. The Book of Coming Forth by Night had instantly struck her as authentic, beyond necessity for explanation, substantiation, or argument. This was a phenomenon which, to my fascination, was to accompany the document henceforth - not for every reader, but for those who, as it turned out, were consciously or unconsciously looking for the kind of initiatory “lens” that the Temple of Set turned out to be.

The following day I made thirty photocopies of the text and sent them to the Priesthood and Regional Agents of the Church. One of the first replies came from Warlock William Murray of Winnemucca, Nevada:

> What can I say about the Book of Coming Forth by Night? It is awesome. A Revelation. The true Mandate of the Dark. Holy Hastur, did it clear up a lot for me! Believe it or not, I knew these things - but, as has happened in the past, could not give voice to them, even in my own mind.37

And that too proved to be a characteristic of the Book of Coming Forth by Night over the years: that upon reading its statements, potential Setians did not consider them “new”, but rather as truths which they had personally sensed, yet never quite given their own voice to previously.

But generally the sentiment of recipients of the initial thirty copies was, as I had expected, more one of “wait and see”. The recent shocks and surprises concerning the Church of Satan had been unsettling enough; a purported revelation from a god would have to wait its emotional/rational/critical turn.

I turned my attention to the structural and operational design of the new Temple of Set. In this I realized I was very much on my own. Not only was I the most senior official of the Church - the only one of the IV°+ to have disavowed it - but none of the other Satanists who had also resigned had any concept of or experience with organizational mechanics. Bringing the membership into the Temple’s functioning would be essential to its future viability and survival, but that would have to happen later. I would need to do the initial work myself.

The Church of Satan had been a California for-profit corporation with Anton and Diane LaVey as its sole members. Membership in the Church as a religious affiliation had not carried with it corporate membership, even at the Priesthood level. Thus, when Anton decided to corrupt the degree system in 1975. Church members had no legal interest or recourse. The Church’s for-profit status [as a “business”] had also kept it from qualifying for federal or state tax-exempt status as a religious institution.

These I would remedy. The Temple of Set would not belong to myself, but collectively to the Priesthood of Set (III°+) as members of its corporation. And that corporation would be a California non-profit corporation organized as a church. Federal and California State tax-exempt status as a religion would be sought, establishing the Temple’s [and all Setians’] full right to First Amendment Constitutional recognition and protection.

Thematically I thought the Temple should continue/evolve from the Church, so that it would include an initiatory degree system, a national [later international] office, and local groups. The formal Priesthood was clearly to be continued, and the concept of a High Priesthood and a Council of Nine seemed essential as well. Beyond these very general assumptions, the sheet of paper was clean.

I had had the benefit of six years’ supervisory work with the Church, and prior to that my personal involvement with various nonprofit organizations such as the Knights of Dunamis (Eagle Scout honor society of the Boy Scouts of America) and Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity. I had been National Commander of the former in 1965 and the University of California, Santa Barbara Chapter President of the latter in 1967. In both I had worked extensively on their internal design.

A Temple of Set presented several new and unusual challenges and requirements. As indicated in the Book of Coming Forth by Night, it was essential that it support initiation as a uniquely individual experience. Thus it was to be an “organization for individuals”, something of a tension if not outright contradiction. [The ominous metaphor of “herding cats” came to mind!]

The Church of Satan’s initiatory degree system had worked well enough, particularly as it had been regularly reworked and refined over the years. But by Temple of Set requirements it was unacceptably vague, limited in scope, and symbolically obsolete. It had been loosely modeled on the grade structure of Aleister Crowley’s A.'.A.'. the predecessor most familiar to Anton LaVey. I went back into the documents of the A.'.A.'. and its own predecessor, the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, to study the rationale behind those grade systems. While both were loosely linked to the Hebrew Cabalistic “Tree of Life” then fashionable among European occult societies, I saw threads extending from them through the Church of Satan that were indeed suitable to these latest, most advanced requirements of the Temple of Set.

The Church had had two participant (Satanist I°, Witch/Warlock II°) and three Priesthood (Priest/ess of Mendes III°, Magister IV°, Magus V°) degrees. The I° signified only formal affiliation. The II° represented passage of a fairly simple written test based upon the contents of the Satanic Bible. The III° and IV° were conferred by Anton LaVey, based in part on a more extensive written/essay examination and in part on his personal evaluation of the individual. The V° remained, as of 1975, a designation for Anton’s own initiatory standing as distinct from his High Priesthood office. The Magister IV° was subdivided into -Caverni IV°-I', -Templi IV°-II', and -Magnus IV°-III', with the intent that they function administratively similar to bishops, archbishops, and cardinals once the Church eventually grew to require same. [A detailed description of the Church’s degree system, and its somewhat confusing dual names, can be found in Appendix #39 of my Church of Satan.]

I rethought all of this comprehensively.

It did not seem to me that a person could properly claim to be an “initiate” simply by expressing a desire to become one and paying an affiliation fee. The Temple of Set’s I° must identify formal affiliation and appreciate the individual’s desire, yet stop short of representing him as someone actually initiated. Per the guidance of the Book of Coming Forth by Night, I determined that the I° [as well as all affiliation generally] should be called “Setian”, and should be regarded as a transitional phase between ordinary existence and initiation. For that reason, instead of the red I° Baphomet of the Church, the medallion of the Setian I° would be white.

The Witch/Warlock II° of the Church had signified the passage of a basic test. In the prior organizations, past the “entrance grade”, there had been a long ladder of knowledge-grades to climb, signifying laborious accumulation of useless/trivial occult obscuring. The most general prefix for these stages had been “Adept”, and that sounded correct enough providing that the recipient was indeed adept at being what he was supposed to be, in our case a practitioner of Black Magic. So our II° would be “Adept”, and it would signify precisely that. The Church’s II° Baphomet had been white; our medallion was therefore red, the color of Set in ancient Egyptian imagery.

The Priesthood III° required only a name-change: from “of Mendes” to “of Set”. The former, within the Church, derived not from any intended Egyptian association but rather from one of the Devil’s traditional titles as the “Goat of Mendes”.

Things got more complex beyond the III°. In the same sense as in the Church, the Priesthood of Set was the essential distinction between skilled-individual and deputized-individual, so to speak. Hence “higher” degrees in the Temple should properly be considered “aspects” or “enhancements” of the Priesthood.

In the G.'.D.' and A.'.A.' (which, as non-religious entities did not have priesthoods per se), initiation beyond the highest adeptship (Adeptus Exemptus) involved a formal rite of passage “across the Abyss” [separating individual consciousness from that partaking of God/YHVH]. The G.'.D.'., indeed, regarded such transition as so profound as to be attainable only by disincarnate “ascended Masters”. In Crowley’s A.'.A.' crossing of the Abyss could be done by incarnated humans (as exemplified in his The Vision and The Voice record), but still denoted an evolution from human to divine consciousness.

My first premise was that if the Temple of Set’s degree system were to be purely initiatory, none of its designations should be confused or “dual-hatted” with administrative or organizational functions. Additionally the threefold subdivision of the Church’s IV° had no initiatory significance.

Our IV° would retain the title of “Magister/Magistra Templi”, as a “Master (in the sense of a sage) of the Temple [of Set]”. There was no reference to a Cabalistic “Abyss”, and there was no essential metamorphosis of consciousness, as that has already occurred at the III°. So what does change at this level of initiation? The Book of Coming Forth by Night had identified an “Æon of Set” as a unique perspective on existence characteristic of Setian initiation. The Magistry, it seemed to me, should properly identify those individuals who, beyond their Priesthoods, had become so aware of, attuned to, and harmonized with the atmosphere of the Æon that its representation had become their “center of gravity”, their accustomed mode of existence. Yes, that sounded appropriate - even setting aside for the moment the inconvenience that I had yet to grapple with what the Æon of Set was all about!

The V° of Magus seemed easier. Anton had been one, I was now one, and because each of us had started an initiatory organization, yes? In his case possibly, since he had taken on that title as a symbolic borrow from Crowley; he occasionally used a longer variation, “Satanic Master”. But here again the Book of Coming Forth by Night went into somewhat more detail concerning the term, including its context as “Magus of the Æon of Set”. This fulfilled Crowley’s definition of a Magus as the announcer or formulator of an
æon. It also complemented our IV°: A Magus apprehended a new æon; a Master comprehended it.

I carried over the colors of the III° to V° that I had recommended and Anton approved for the Church: black, blue, and purple. Black represented the Prince & Powers of Darkness. Blue I had taken from the robes of history’s most famous ancient sages, the priest-kings of Plato’s Atlantis. And purple from its royal connotation, and from the Book of the Law’s reference to the Magus’ “purple beyond purple” magical eyesight.

In 1975 I left unaddressed, as had the Church, any state of initiation beyond Magus. The G.'D.'. and A.'A.'. both included an ultimate grade of Ipsissimus, but were equally vague concerning its characteristics. Evidently someone so thoroughly initiated could hardly be described at all!

Having conceptualized these degrees, at least so far as was possible a priori in 1975, I turned to the task of how to properly entitle them to individuals. In the Church all such designations had been determined personally by Anton LaVey, who was responsible only to his own integrity, and as was taken for granted to Satan, for such decisions. While this had worked well enough for nine years, we had all seen the disastrous consequences of his abrogating those two responsibilities in 1975.

Nor, of course, did I envision the Temple of Set as an institution of which I would be the permanent and only High Priest.

The solution seemed inherent in the characteristics of the degrees. A III° should, with the perception and authority of the Priesthood of Set, be able to recognize an Initiate who had become genuinely adept in the application of Black Magic. And yes, recognition was the proper term too, in an environment wherein initiation was inescapably individual.

Similarly a Master should be able to recognize a Priest of Set within the Æon.

Recognition of a Magus past the Book of Coming Forth by Night was again a challenge. Characteristic of a Magus is Utterance of a Word (creation of a philosophy) beyond what is conventionally or currently known. A Master “within” in an æon cannot be expected to be able to recognize something “without” it. But a college of æonic Masters might conceivably agree on both the current æon’s limits and the initiatory substance of a philosophical concept beyond it. I decided to proceed from this assumption.

While for the sake of simplicity here I have used the masculine degree-titles, it was always understood that the Setian initiation system applied equally to women as Priestess, Magistra, and Maga. In the Church no women ever advanced past the III°, and the elder initiatory organizations tended to be male-exclusive past the Adepti grades. The Temple of Set’s initiatory and official gender-indifference has remained axiomatic throughout its history.

Now came the administrative structure of the Temple. I knew what I didn’t want: a one-man dictatorship as in the Church. Again that had worked well as long as Anton had exercised his authority wisely and benevolently, but when he hadn’t, it disintegrated. Drawing on my Knights of Dunamis and Alpha Phi Omega experience, I resolved to design an organization with cooperative, interlocking, and authority-sharing branches. I had also the convenient model of the United States Constitution, with its balance-of-power divisions of the executive, legislative, and judicial.

Like the Church, the Temple of Set would have a High Priest and a Council of Nine. Unlike the Church, the Temple’s Council of Nine would be collectively superior to the High Priesthood, with the power of appointment and removal. This would be codified in a California nonprofit Articles of Incorporation (Appendix #7 [original]) and By-Laws (Appendix #8 [current 2006]), and the degree system would be included in those same By-Laws beyond alteration by either the High Priest or the Council.
Finally to counterbalance the executive power of the High Priesthood, two additional offices, also corporate, would be created: Executive Director (to oversee all Temple administration) and Treasurer (to oversee Temple finances). The Treasurer would respond to the Executive Director, who would respond to the High Priest, in routine matters; but all three officers would be individually accountable to, and appointed/removed by, the Council of Nine.

Underlying these formal organizational arrangements was my intention that they should be as “invisible” as possible in the normal course of Temple affairs. The focus of the Temple’s attention should be upon magical, philosophical, and initiatory matters, not administrative ones. The legal structure and its By-Laws should properly be in the background as a consensual framework, coming to notice only as a specific situation might require.

I thought that I had worked all of this out pretty well, and over thirty years later I can say that both the degree system and the organizational structure of the Temple of Set have stood the test of time very satisfactorily. Along the years we have adjusted, improved, and refined both as necessary or desirable, but those basic 1975 premises and principles have all remained.

The next step was to fill the initial offices, of which that of Executive Director was easily the most crucial. This person (required to be III°+) would be at the nerve center of all Temple administrative communications and operations. While there were many Priests and Priestesses from the Church who could have taken on the job, I was looking for someone who would enjoy and thrive in it - who was naturally involved with everyone and everything everywhere. One name came instantly to mind - Bill Murray.

As documented in The Church of Satan, Warlock William F. Murray had been a Regional Agent of the Church in Winnemucca, a small town hundreds of miles from anywhere else in the middle of the Nevada desert. [Winnemucca’s one bank has a plaque boasting that it was once robbed by Butch Cassidy and his Wild Bunch.] Whatever Warlock Murray lacked in group contact, however, he made up for in a flurry of correspondence, telephone calls, and his Regional Agent/Carpathia Chapel newsletter Children of the Night. So central a crossroads had he become by 1974 that the LaVeys, as also recounted in COS, began to become alarmed; if for some reason he became disaffected, he could conceivably cause quite a widespread chain-reaction throughout the Church. They ordered him to restrict his contacts to his Regional Agency, but a short time later the crisis of 1975 overwhelmed that attempted clampdown.

Just how much of a clearinghouse Warlock Murray had become by then can be illustrated by just one of a number of his letters to me at the time (Appendix #9).

Bill Murray might have been the bane of an authoritarian system seeking to keep its extensions isolated from one another, but he was exactly what the Temple of Set would need in its Executive Director. I asked him if he could drive to San Francisco, and I would come up from Santa Barbara so that we could talk things over. We met at my mother’s house on Saturday, June 28th and spent the next day going over my ideas for the new Temple. On Sunday, to clear our heads, we went out for a drive around the city, and when we happened to pass the obscure intersection of 22nd and Kansas Streets over on the Potrero Hill, Bill finally said yes, that he would take on the Executive Directorship.

Constituting the first Council of Nine was another interesting challenge. What I finally decided to do was to invite three of the most senior Priests as initial members, ask them to unanimously select a pro tem Chairman from among themselves, then to nominate/vote in a fourth, then for those four to nominate/vote in a fifth, and so on until the full nine initial Councillors had been elected. Then they could formally vote on a first regular Chairman.
This arrangement worked very well. On the auspicious date of July 4th - the same day I finalized the Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws - I invited Dale Seago from Los Angeles, Michael Grumboski from Detroit, and Robert Ethel from Washington, D.C. to be the first three Councillors. When the first Council was finally filled by December 1975, it consisted additionally of Thomas Huddleston of Dayton, Ohio; Ronald K. Barrett of San Francisco, California; Lilith Sinclair of Santa Barbara, California; Jinni Bast of Spotswood, New Jersey; Ann DeCecco of Framingham, Massachusetts, and Margaret Wendall of San Jose, California.

Also on July 4 I sent copies of the initial Articles and By-Laws to the former Church officials and Agents who by then had endorsed the idea of the Temple of Set: Adept Tom Bari, Adept Ronald K. Barrett, Priest Robert DeCecco, Priest Robert Ethel, Priest Michael Grumboski, Adept Thomas Huddleston, Adept William Murray, Adept Stuart Munro, Priest Michael McQuown, Adept Lynn Norton, Priest Dale Seago, Priestess Lilith Sinclair, Priestess Margaret Wendall, and Adept Arthur Zabrecky.

Legally the original Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws were signed on July 29, August 1, and August 7 by the three “filing” directors, Bill Murray, Dale Seago, and myself. They were officially approved by the California Secretary of State on October 23 and filed in Superior Court on October 28, 1975.

One Section of the initial By-Laws authorized the High Priest to make initiatory degree determinations prior to the By-Laws’ official adoption, and to communicate all such determinations to the Executive Director and Council of Nine not later than October 31. On July 15, in one of my letters to the II°+, I wrote:

To date I have exercised the right of recognition only three times - each an instance of an imbalance that should have been corrected long ago [in the Church of Satan]. These three elevations were those of Stuart Munro of Ottawa to Adept II°, William F. Murray of Winnemucca to Priest of Set III°, and Ronald K. Barrett of San Francisco to Priest of Set III°.

My original intent was to make no IV° nominations until the first Council of Nine was selected and operational. My reasoning was based upon two factors: (1) According to the By-Laws, IV° nominations must be approved by a majority of the Nine before taking effect. (2) IV° nominations by me prior to the selection of the entire Council might be viewed as a means of influencing the composition of the Council.

But a problem has arisen that has caused me to rethink this. The problem is as follows: The Council must consist of III°+ individuals. If we simply use existing Church of Satan degrees for qualification, the potential number of persons who can be considered for Council membership is quite limited. Furthermore we are aware that the impartiality and effective international geographic coverage of the C/S degrees were breaking down long before now. I personally know of several II° individuals who may very well deserve the III°. And yet I do not know them well enough to make a decision on the matter as thorough as a proper III° recognition should be.

I have decided to resolve the matter in a fashion which I trust will reflect the Will and Mandate of Set.

At this time, prior to the formal implementation of the By-Laws, I am naming five ladies and gentlemen to the IV°. Without exception they are well-known throughout our entire fellowship as Priests or Priestesses of long standing, high reputation, and distinguished achievement. In addition it is my considered opinion that each one of them possesses the initiatory qualities indicative of a Master of the Temple of Set. Put as directly as possible, these qualities involve an intrinsic and proven capability to make decisions and take actions representative of the Prince of Darkness without an intentional effort to do so. From a magical standpoint this is the primary distinction between the III° and the IV°, inasmuch as the Priest or Priestess III° has access to this power when consciously and deliberately seeking it.

In the name of Set, therefore, I now recognize as Masters of the Temple IV°: Robert Ethel, Michael A. Grumboski, L. Dale Seago, Lilith Sinclair, and Margaret A. Wendall.
“Behold, it is I who call you, because you are the guardians of the Æon of Set, zealous in what you do.”

August 21 marked the first of my High Priesthood bulletins to the Priesthood of Set. At the time these were casually called “Xerox letters”; eventually they would be formalized into the Priesthood newsletter Hieroglyphs. #III-1 went through five pages of general founding details, from which the following is particularly noteworthy:

“Pylons”: I have had several inquiries and ideas concerning the name that would be used for local units of the Temple. Neither “coven” nor “grotto” seemed appropriate. Priest Ronald Barrett came up with “Pylon”, and everyone who has heard of it so far has been sitting up and barking. So Pylon it is. The reference is to the great trapezoidal pylon gates of major Egyptian temples. Barrett’s idea is that each Pylon of the Temple of Set is in one sense a “gate” to the entire Temple.

Magistra Margaret A. Wendall has accepted Editorship of the Scroll of Set. She will have a 100% free hand on all contents, so I can’t tell you exactly what will appear in the first issue. But, if it’s anything like her famous Magic Cat, I’m sure we will not be disappointed. The first issue should be out next month. I hope you will give her as much feedback and assistance as you possibly can. Remember that the Scroll is the only regular means via which we can reach out and touch isolated I°/II° members, so it has a mammoth job to do.

Two subsequent events marked the completion of the Temple of Set’s initial organization process. The first was a letter from the State of California Franchise Tax Board, exempting the Temple of Set from State taxes as a religious corporation. The second was a letter from the United States Internal Revenue Service, exempting the Temple of Set from Federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. Both represented months of correspondence between myself and their respective offices, providing extensive and detailed answers to their questions concerning the corporate organization and religious principles of the Temple. We were now, as far as the United States of America was concerned, fully and formally credentialed.

Magister Dale Seago had served as Chairman Pro Tem of the Council of Nine during the several months of its initial formative nomination/voting process. When in October all seats were filled, lots were drawn to establish initial terms of office, with one expiring each year, thus setting up overlapping nine-year terms. Then in December 1975 the Council elected its first full Chairman, Magister Robert Ethel. Dale Seago remained a Councillor, of course, as well as the Temple’s corporate Treasurer.

“Well,” as the Founding Fathers are rumored to have said at the completion of the United States’ Constitutional Convention in 1787, “now that we’re organized, what do we do next?”

40 Letter, Albert D. LeBel, Supervisor, Exempt Organizations to Temple of Set, October 17, 1975.
By the close of 1975 the Temple of Set had completed its initial identification and organization processes. With an initial membership of about one hundred, most veterans of the Church of Satan, it was ready to move forward. So where was “forward”?

The Left-Hand Path of least resistance, it would seem, was to continue along much the same activity as the Church, merely exchanging Judæo-Christian dæmonic symbolism for ancient Egyptian. But numerous problems with such a casual approach quickly became apparent.

The Book of Coming Forth by Night, of course, clearly called for not just a reformation of the Church of Satan, but an entirely distinct orientation for Temple-affiliated individuals. But apart from this a number of inadequacies and inconsistencies in the Church had been becoming steadily more visible, and uncomfortable, during its decade of maturation.

The “founding theology” of the Church had been easy: Christianity derided and lampooned, through the use of imagery which it itself had created to scare its own followers into obedience. As there was plenty of corruption and hypocrisy to be found in Christian institutions, the Church of Satan’s program here was easy indeed. However it was a “denunciation” that, once made, really did not need endless repeating, particularly among Satanists themselves. O.K., so Christianity is childish, hypocritical, and corrupt: point made and taken. So where do we go from here?

Satanists inevitably, if reluctantly realized that their own deity, Satan, was a Judæo/Islamic/Christian myth-image every bit as much as YHVH. Generally Satan simply stood for whatever God either didn’t like/permit, or wasn’t willing to be blamed for. It is true that various iconoclasts and poetic heretics throughout history - Milton, Blake, Twain, et al. - had shocked and tantalized their audiences with varying heroic/romantic spins on the Devil. But invariably it all came back to the same consensual baseline: Satan was bad, harmful, false, and evil.

Satanists generally grappled with this in two ways. First, they affected their alliance with the spooky, scary Devil and his dæmonic entourage; this impressed and intimidated many mainline religionists. Secondly, if somewhat inconsistently, they asserted that Satan was really not that reprehensible a fellow after all; he had just been the victim of a propaganda smear campaign by his enemies.

By 1975 the limitations of this essentially defensive and negative posture had become more and more apparent. Satanists had made it clear that they didn’t like Judæo-Christianity. They had insisted that its version of the Devil was also all wrong, at least where obviously vile attributes and practices were concerned. But beyond these positions - which, in America’s overwhelmingly Christian culture, took seemingly endless reexplanation and reaffirmation - they had nowhere else to go. As noted in The Church of Satan, Anton LaVey ultimately disengaged from the dilemma, turning his personal “Satan” into a narcissistic and sentimental nostalgia for the underbelly of 1940s’ society. His personal charisma and artistic talent enabled him to indulge in this reorientation more extensively and intriguingly than just about anyone else could have, and it certainly carried his glamor along, at least among society’s alienated marginalia, until his death.

However other Satanists, myself included, were not in the least interested in similarly crying into our beer. For us the Church, and the confrontation of Satan and Satanism, had been an ever more electrifying and exhilarating adventure. We had taken a stand, the most daring stand, against the “norm” not only of society, but of the very universe itself. We took fierce pride in being “ultimate heretics”, the more so because after our affirmation of such heresy, here we still stood, unassailed, unpunished, and unrepentent.

I saw a shape with human form and face,
If such should in apotheosis stand;
Deep in the shadows of a desolate land
His burning feet obtained colossal base,
And spheral on the lonely arc of space,
His head, a menace unto heavens unspanned,
Arose with towered eyes that might command
The sunless, blank horizon of that place.

And straight I knew him for the mystic one
That is the brother, born of human dream,
Of man rebellious at an unknown rod;
The mind’s ideal, and the spirit’s sun;
A column of clear flame, in lands extreme,
Set opposite the darkness that is God.42

Perhaps this may explain to the yet-confused why Anton LaVey’s 1975 abandonment of his own commitment to this vision so dismayed and angered Satanists to whom it had become that “column of clear flame” in their lives.

Nevertheless Anton was gone, and now the Book of Coming Forth by Night was saying that, this departure notwithstanding, the entire conceptualization of Satan, the Church of Satan, and indeed the entire Islamic/Judaeo/Christian theological edifice underlying them, were all wrong, “useless lumber and wreckage” to be thrown on the trash-heap of our previous education and experience.

This, I hardly need observe, was a tall order.

Jettisoning the Church of Satan - all that we had been studying, exploring, and refining for the past ten years - was daunting enough. But the established conventional religions of the world had, like it or not, been responsible for the prevalent shaping of human self-perception over the last two thousand years. Even in post-Enlightenment Western cultures, Christian assumptions and habits remain the baseline of society. For one hundred ex-Satanists to venture out into a world, a cosmos in the utter absence of such an accustomed frame of reference seemed nothing short of lunatic.

Or it would have had we then taken the time to really confront the implications of what we were then setting out to do.

Pathetic earthlings - hurling your bodies out into the void, without the slightest inkling of who or what is out here. If you had known anything about the true nature of the universe, anything at all, you would’ve hidden from it in terror.43

As discussed in Chapter #3, ancient Egypt proved to be the gateway to the void, in a sense and sophistication that in 1975 we had no way to anticipate. Its academic/archaeological image at the time was [and in those same professional circles remains today] that of a mere basic agricultural society with an animal-totem and death-fixated mythology. For the Great Unwashed it was the stuff of Hollywood mummy horror movies and sword-and-sandal epics, habitually (as in The Ten Commandments) as the bad guy threatening virtuous Jews and protoChristian monotheists.

To date Egypt had fared little better within organized occultism. Its mystery had made it attractive to individuals and organizations selling exactly that, so Egyptian art, costumes, Aida-processions, and talismans were a staple of Freemasonry, Rosicrucianism, Illuminism, and any number of greater or lesser imitators, all the way down to Laurel and Hardy’s Sons of the Desert farce (to which Anton LaVey scornfully compared the Temple of Set once he learned of its Egyptian interests).

So had Egypt been a purely arbitrary choice for us, it would have seemed a foolish one, carrying way too much sillified baggage along with its apparently meager historical significance. What overruled all of this - initially for myself and later for a great many others over the decades to follow - was direct contact with one of Egypt’s supposedly false and nonexistent “gods”, Set.

That pleased Conchis. He sat back and smiled.
“My dear Nicholas, man has been saying what you have just said for the last ten thousand years. And the one common feature of all the gods he has said it to is that not one of them has ever returned an answer.”

Only in this instance an answer had been returned, and that mere fact made everything very different indeed.

Historically humanity has developed its base of knowledge by three means: observation, reasoning, and belief. The first, especially since its release from dogmatic constraints upon the Enlightenment, has today matured into the well-known “scientific method”. The second originally enjoyed prominence dating from the logical discourses of Socrates and his Greek colleagues, but except in acknowledged matters of opinion has generally given way to science.

The third - belief - is neither scientific nor logical, indeed emphatically and sometimes combatively so. This is the realm of religion, of superstition, of mere feeling. It can range from the staid dictates of organized churches in the name(s) of their God/gods, to a simple, gnawing personal conviction that, scientific evidence and/or logical reasoning notwithstanding, the truth is otherwise.

As conventional religion, particularly in the West, has degenerated into little more than unthinking social rote-participation, the average person’s experience with belief-knowledge is perhaps more easily exemplified by phenomena such as romantic love, which is an emotion or sensation neither scientific nor logical. It is also present in situations of trust, in which a child, student, subordinate, or disciple accepts something as true because of trust in the source so stating.

In the case of the fledgling Temple of Set, the premises of its identity and authenticity were clearly in the realm of belief: mine in the truth of my own apprehension of the Book of Coming Forth by Night, and other Setians’ in trust of that belief of mine, at least until such time as they might experience comparable direct apprehensions of Set. For now the tacit consensis was to give Magus Michael Aquino plenty of time [and rope] to resolve this mystery of Greater Black Magic, and in the meantime to see how this new Temple of Set might exercise its talents in the less-ethereal pursuits of its Lesser cousin.

Lesser Black Magic as defined by the Church of Satan referred to the use of obscure laws of nature, and/or clever manipulation of situations or perceptions, to facilitate or achieve the magician’s purpose. Thus it was an extension of stage or “carny” magic at its most simple, and the control of entire populations at its other extreme. Until fairly recently in history LBM had been practiced only at a modest, localized level, and then as an implicit personal skill rather than as a deliberate, scientific system of power and control. It was as such a skill that it was explored by scholars such as Niccolo Machivelli in The Prince.

The Church of Satan’s membership interest in LBM had never gone much beyond impressing/manipulating the opposite sex or nudging a job promotion. Anton LaVey liked to claim dramatic control-workings for himself, the shock-and-awe of which escalated after 1975 until he was grappling with a DERO-like conspiracy of opponents worldwide.

It was apparent to me that the Temple of Set would, in the normal course of its future, be taking a far more methodical and sophisticated interest in LBM than had heretofore been the case. That raised the question of ethical guidelines. If we intended to teach new Setians the principles of LBM and encourage them to apply those principles without the Temple, some self-conscience of rightness/wrongness was essential. Ordinary human societies have laws, mores, and customs to pre/proscribe specific types of behavior. Since the principles and techniques of LBM are generally unknown by those societies, however, there are many gaps in existing law, and socialization generally, capable of addressing them.

During 1974-76, as it happened, I was pursuing a Master’s degree in Political Science at the University of California, Santa Barbara. One of my specialty fields was Political Theory, which involved numerous seminars in philosophy. This could not have come at a more fortuitous time, as it sensitized me to ethical issues and options in a variety of social contexts.

Two of my professors, William Ebenstein and Raghavan Iyer, were especially influential. Ebenstein, a student at the University of Vienna and the London School of Economics, had gone on to a distinguished teaching career first at Princeton and then at UCSB. Over the years he had authored several benchmark works in political theory, several of which remain influential today.

Ebenstein liked my work in his seminars, but was clearly distressed over my refusal to agree with him that philosophy began with the Greeks. By late 1975 my own research had convinced me that Egypt deserved this honor, which I argued in more than one graduate paper. We finally reached an amusing but acceptable compromise: He introduced me to Henri Frankfort’s Before Philosophy (RL#2B), which paradoxically surveyed “pre-philosophy philosophies” throughout many pre-Greek civilizations of antiquity. [Frankfort also wrote another work, Kingship and the Gods (RL#2Q), which provided important linkages from Plato’s philosopher-kings to the governmental principles of Egypt.]

Raghavan Iyer had journeyed from his native India to England, where he took his doctorate in philosophy at Oxford University before assuming a professorship at UCSB. Also the author of several brilliant textbooks concerning Gandhi, Plato, and both theoretical and applied politics, he was also a revered sage in the Theosophical Society, for which he had written many esoteric papers. [Many of these can be found today on the Internet at http://theosophy.org.]

Iyer and I hit it off almost immediately insofar as both of us were fascinated with political science in both exo- and esoteric contexts. During many of his seminars, and the informal coffee-house gatherings that often followed them, he and I would argue passionately about the music of the spheres, immortality/transmigration of the soul, and Atlantis while other students just gazed at us and shook their heads in bewilderment.

Iyer certainly did not doubt the existence of pre-Greek philosophy - he and Ebenstein maintained a respectful professional distance in the Department - but it vexed him a good deal that I had been suckered in by the teachings of that disreputable occult charlatan and crank Anton LaVey. I on the other hand made no secret of my consternation that he had been suckered in by the teachings of that disreputable occult charlatan and crank Helena Blavatsky. This resulted in a steady stream of “A-” grades for me throughout my studies with him. He once remarked that any other student turning in work of my quality would get straight “A”s, but in view of my initiated potential he felt honor-bound to goad me with that “-”. So I took it as a compliment, and indeed would have been alarmed if at some point it had disappeared.

As Ebenstein had guided my research into ancient political and philosophical thought towards careful, painstaking standards, so Iyer introduced me to the metaphysics and cosmology underlying that same field of study. Both, of course, I took back with me to the Temple of Set, which I increasingly saw as a Pythagorean/Platonic academy destined to go far beyond conventional social and organizational limits. We would not only undertake true initiation as individual Setians, but the Temple itself would become a metastructure both to enhance our personal efforts and to etherealize its own metaphysical reality.

The resultant ethical considerations and guidelines for the Temple I would ultimately assemble into Chapter #5 of Black Magic, an introductory essay for new Setians at the beginning of the Crystal Tablet of Set, that component of the Jeweled Tablets of Set provided to Setians of all degrees. It is included here as Appendix #10.

Meanwhile in the ordinary world outside these ivory towers, other influences were at work in society which would also shape aspects of the fledgling Temple of Set. If the 1950s had been a decade of Eisenhower-era conformity to traditional American values, the 1960s had ruptured this comforting norm with the twin shocks of the John Kennedy assassination and the Vietnam War. Disillusionment and social alienation led to mass movements of popular rebellion and revolution, which seemed for a brief time to actually be changing the Old Order for a more peaceful and loving New Age. But that in turn lost its energy and innocence with the assassinations of Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King, and the ultimate hippie nightmares of Charles Manson.

By the 1970s many visionaries and utopians had given up on Earth’s human civilizations altogether and were looking for another Way Out - which turned out to be a Way Up, to outer space. George Lucas’ 1977 Star Wars arrived just in time to touch a match to this escapism; the movie became a worldwide phenomenon like nothing before or since. In addition to re-energizing its predecessor Star Trek, it also jump-started real interest in space colonies and emigration, through such cooperatives as the L5 Society and the World Future Society [in both of which I held academic-level membership].

L5, named for the 5th Lagrangian libration point of gravitational equilibrium between Earth and the Moon, was thought to be the ideal location for a permanent human space colony. The Society, founded in 1975 just two months after the Temple of Set, took its inspiration from the space-colonial writings of Gerard K. O’Neill, most notably The High Frontier. As at the same time America’s new space shuttle was popularly regarded as the precursor to openly-available civilian space transport, L5 seemed entirely reasonable and practical. [Twelve years later the political paranoia of the 1980s, with its militarization of the space shuttle and other space efforts, doomed L5. It disintegrated into the National Space Society45, an Earthbound NASA fan club, which it remains to this day. Like the decaying bride in Great Expectations, the NSS still speaks wistfully about space colonization, but the excitement that it was really soon to happen is gone.]

1975 also marked the revival of one of San Francisco’s most famous Haight-Ashbury era rock bands, the Jefferson Airplane - now, in synch with space, the Jefferson Starship. Like the Temple of Set, it seemed mesmerized by the significance and power of that year, celebrated in its songs such as “Ride the Tiger” and “War Movie”. I had sent one of the thirty original copies of the Book of Coming Forth by Night to the Starship’s Paul

45 http://www.nss.org
Kantner, commencing a friendship and exchange-of-vision which has endured to this day. [Some sparks of this, originally published in the Scroll of Set and Order of the Trapezoid’s Runes, etc. appear here as Appendix #11.]

Over the Halloween weekend the first of what were to become a spectacular series of international conclaves of the Temple of Set was held in Santa Barbara, as recounted in the December issue of the Scroll:

Friday evening (Halloween): Those who had arrived by Friday evening were treated to dinner and a reception at our High Priest’s home. Wall certificates were presented to those who attended. Those who were not present Friday evening were invited to lunch with the High Priest on Saturday, and received wall certificates at that time.

Saturday afternoon (November 1): The highlight of the discussion period was the presentation of the final papers which make the Temple of Set a non-profit, tax-exempt California religious corporation. The High Priest explained that federal tax-exempt status should now be easily obtained.

Also of note during this session was the choosing by lot of the terms of office of the Council of Nine, which are as follows: Priest Thomas S. Huddleston - 9 years, Priest Ronald K. Barrett - 8 years, Magistra Lilith Sinclair - 7 years, Priest Amn DeCecco - 6 years, Priestess Jinni Bast - 5 years - Magister Michael A. Grumboski - 4 years, Magister Robert Ethel - 3 years, Magister L. Dale Seago - 2 years, and Magistra Margaret Wendell - 1 year. It must be noted that these people do not automatically leave the Council at the end of these terms. They will be reconsidered at that time. If their continued service on the Council will benefit the Temple of Set, they will serve another nine year term.

Saturday evening (November 1): The Conclave Banquet was held at Squire Richard’s Pub in a truly Old English setting, with “wenches” serving table and a minstrel who sang to us.

Saturday evening Ritual (November 1): The Conclave Ritual was held at 11 PM. A specially-made candelabra, with a candle representing each degree of membership in the Temple of Set, was lit. Those members of the Council of Nine who attended were presented with insignia of office (Tcham scepters handcrafted by Priest Murray). The highlight, however, was the presentation to the High Priest of a sword, the Double Crown, and a crook and flail.

Sunday morning (November 2): Breakfast at Squire Richard’s Pub at what must be one of the minor disasters of Santa Barbara history! Each person ordered something different, and a fuse blew, throwing the toaster, the coffee maker (and probably the cook) out of order for awhile. All felt the waitresses could have charged us an “entertainment tax” for the way they kept their composure and even joked with us about the breakdown “we” had caused.

Much important business was accomplished; Setians who had been corresponding with each other for a long time had a chance to meet face-to-face. New friendships were formed, and all who attended left with a feeling that the Temple of Set is truly a Brotherhood.

Thanks are due first to Magistra Sinclair, who coordinated the conclave; to the High Priest, who so graciously opened his home to us; to Priest Murray for the rite observed and long hours making the candelabra, pentagram and insignia; to the motel personnel who made the stay pleasant; and to the staff of Squire Richard’s who made our meals together most enjoyable.

Among the topics of discussion and speculation at this initial conclave was the meaning of the further human evolution as implied by the Book of Coming Forth by Night. Was this to be understood and interpreted as a purely initiatory development of consciousness, or as a physical change of some sort, or as a species-migration phenomenon [as into space]? Until we resolved this, Setians decided to look into all three options. On the South Solstice of 1975, I sent the Priesthood some thoughts of my own on the issue: Setamorphosis [Appendix #12].

Setians responded very positively to this rather extraordinary prospectus, indeed more so than I had frankly anticipated. By the Vernal Equinox of 1976 there had been such a flurry of organizational developments, to say nothing of brainstorming, that it was time for an update, and so I sent the Priesthood Setamorphosis II [Appendix #13].
Looking back on these documents and the escapist-fantastic visions they express, it may seem, from a perspective thirty years later, that the Temple of Set was off to a spacecrazed start. Well, it simply did not seem that way in the mid-1970s. Public access to space, consequent to the successful invention of the space shuttle and the appearance of several non-governmental space companies such as the West German OTRAG, seemed both practical and excitingly imminent. And the prolific, space-colonization literature lent serious depth to such speculations generally. 2001: A Space Odyssey, with a Hilton Hotel on its spectacular space wheel, was just around the corner - inevitably a site for a future Setian conclave! [Such dreams, incidentally, have persisted to this day among the more visionary elements of humanity, resulting in efforts such as Space Adventures Ltd. (http://www.spaceadventures.com/). We may have that orbital/Lunar conclave yet!]

But in 1976, while we waited for OTRAG to start selling tickets, the Temple had other concerns and interests here on Earth. We had by now completed most of the original administrative tasks - elegant fire-enameled Pentagram of Set medallions from the Wolf-Brown Company, courtesy of Setian Robert Moffatt; public information/membership brochures; a dazzling 3D-effect membership card created by Bill Murray, etc.

The Scroll of Set was purring along monthly, under Magistra Wendall’s Editorship, ably assisted by Priest Michael Waters, Adept Alan Sturrock, and Setian Patricia Turner of the Bubastis Pylon in San Jose, California. Content was kaleidoscopic: Setian yoga, religious/legal issues, ritual magical theory, poetry, Egyptian studies, personal artwork, book reviews, reports from various officials, conclave invitations and summaries, comparisons of Setian philosophy with that of other occult systems, and even a commentary on the American Bicentennial celebration and its nation-touring “Freedom Train”. Honorary Setian Forrest J. Ackerman contributed an article explaining why he ever got started collecting science fiction.

Concerning the more permanent literature of the Temple, there was initial consensus that it should be private to the membership, not commercially published like the Satanic Bible and Rituals. One of the more famous repositories-of-wisdom in traditional occultism had been the mythical Emerald Tablet of Thoth, so why not a Ruby Tablet of Set [reflecting his totem-color] in reality? Magister Robert Ethel volunteered to undertake it as a project. Eventually the Ruby Tablet would become the II°+ component of an entire Jeweled Tablets of Set series, extending from the Crystal Tablet of the I°+ to the Topaz Tablet of the VI°.

As of July 1976, presented at the First Eastern Conclave of the Temple in Washington, D.C., Ethel’s original draft of the Ruby Tablet was 41 pages long. Today it has mushroomed into the multi-thousands, to the point where it can only be Internet/CD-based. Prior to the arrival of the Internet, Adepts ordering the RT would be startled to see a huge stack of fat red binders awaiting them at the post office or conclave.

Beyond the Temple’s internal literature, of course, there was a good deal of information of interest to us in the commercially-published realm. A Reading List seemed like a good idea, and I took that job on myself; I would keep it until 2003.

Since joining the Church of Satan in 1969, I had become a voracious occult- and outré-book devourer and collector. My bookshelves overflowed into my closets, and the makeshift shelves therein were ultimately packed three-deep with the Good, the Bad, and the Arguable. This was both useful and problematic for a Temple of Set Reading List. Useful because over the years I had pretty much zeroed in on the best stuff. Problematic because some of that best stuff wasn’t readily available in normal bookstores, or was comparatively expensive when it was. In my RL introduction, accordingly, I encouraged Setians to make the acquaintance of old-book stores, book-search services, and the interlibrary loan services of community and university libraries. Back then that took a good deal more dedication, perseverance, and time than today’s instant Internet quests!

The categories of the Reading List upon which I decided reflected the wide range of interests of the Temple of Set. They have remained unchanged in the subsequent three decades, except that I and others have added some items and - following the revival of the Order of the Trapezoid - a category on the ancient north European runic arts & sciences was created.

The Reading List appears herein as Appendix #14. Within the context of this memoir I am including it as one of the best ways to illustrate both the wide-ranging interests of the Temple and the focus & depth of resultant investigations. [Note also that passages of this narrative, and within various other Appendices, make reference to Reading List entries by their code number.]

By now it can be seen that the Temple of Set’s approach to individual initiation, as well as to its own identity as the Temple of Set, was far more multifaceted than most nonSetians [and many shellshocked new Setians] appreciated. As can be seen from the contents of the Jeweled Tablets, the collected issues of the Scroll of Set, and the numerous papers of the Temple’s Orders, Elements, Pylons, and individual Initiates, the Reading List was appropriately a point of departure, not an end in itself.

That departure was made easier by Priest Ronald K. Barrett and his Anubis Pylon in San Francisco, who inaugurated the Ap-uat Library Project (ALP) to further identify, track down, and either acquire or otherwise make available to Setians for specialized learning and research. Wrote Barrett in the October 1976 Scroll:

> The Anubis Pylon has been organizing a new element for the Temple of Set which includes book research, data bank, and experimentation coordination. This new element is designed to assist individual Setians, pylons, and other elements by collecting and providing information that will save footwork, effort, and time.

> Starting 1 October XI ALP will be able to provide upon request book lists by subject matter or author which may include [but not be limited to] the High Priest’s reading list. These book lists are for informational purposes only and will not carry a recommendation. Book reviews sent to ALP by members of the Temple will be included in the ALP Newsletter.

> It will also be possible to order some books directly from ALP, as some publishers are offering discounts to the Temple. Magistra Sinclair in Santa Barbara will be in charge of the book orders, but all orders must be sent initially to ALP in San Francisco for processing and paid in advance. Details will be provided in the newsletter, as they are too involved to include here.

> Another function of ALP is assistance in coordinating research and experiments by recording who has knowledge of what, who is doing what, who wants to research what, who can help whom, etc. The effectiveness of this depends equally upon the input and output of information. You will greatly enhance the potential of this program by writing out your answers to the questionnaire below and mailing them in to ALP. All answers will be kept confidential, and only your names and interests will be used for referrals.

> The newsletter mentioned above will be a summary of accumulated general data, book reviews, special reports and articles, etc. There will be no regular publishing date for the newsletter - neither will there be a standard rate of subscription. The price will be based on 10 cents/page and announced in the Scroll when each new issue is ready. The first issue is now in process and should be available around November 1st.

> Send any inquiries, requests, book reviews, comments, etc., and your answers to the questionnaire to Priest Ronald K. Barrett, Anubis Pylon, San Francisco, California. All information and/or inquiries will be handled on an individual basis.

What have been your past fields of study (formal and/or informal)?
What are your current fields of study (formal and/or informal)?
What subjects do you prefer for casual reading?
Please state the nature of any experiments you have conducted or participated in and the outcome, if known.
Please state the nature of any experiments and/or research you might like to conduct.
Please list any periodicals, magazines, etc. that you feel would be beneficial for a library of the Temple of Set to subscribe to, and explain why.
What books, articles, etc., would you recommend to other members of the Temple of Set?
Please include all pertinent information: title, subject matter, author, publisher, etc.
Please state any ideas or suggestions you might have for this project.
May we refer you to other members whose interests parallel your own?
How might this project best serve you?

Thus, a year after its founding, the Temple of Set was off to a pretty energetic start, as I recounted in my first annual report to the membership in the June 1976 Scroll (Appendix #15). One sign of our success that gave me particular pleasure: at our first annual membership renewal date we lost only one Setian I°. During its lifetime, by contrast, the Church of Satan had experienced roughly a 50% annual turnover rate.46

Despite all of the organizational work, Setians actually found some time to just get together for socializing, dining, and even a little Black Magic. Over the South Solstice 1976 weekend in December, for instance, another conclave was held in San Jose, hosted by the Bubastis Pylon. A very pleasant day was devoted to touring the Rosicrucian Park headquarters of the AMORC, a remarkable complex of ancient Egyptian architecture, somewhat incongruously right in the midst of residential neighborhoods.

At this time the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art had also negotiated the most impressive exhibition of artifacts from Pharaoh Tutankhamen’s tomb ever to tour the United States. As it traveled around the country to various museums, groups of Setians met to attend and admire it. For those who for reasons of budget or distance could not visit the Tut Show in person, the Temple of Set purchased and circulated gratis a complete set of color slides of all the exhibit artifacts, along with an audio narrative of them by the Metropolitan Museum’s Director.

Somewhat less successful, commencing in mid-1976 and continuing for the next year (as best I can make out from the documents in question) was one of the Temple of Set’s two comic pratfalls in its ancient Egyptian explorations. Magistra Margaret Wendall, a devotee of Egypt’s calendar, proposed that the Temple of Set adopt it instead of the conventional Gregorian one. Well, why not? It sounded like fun, and might have the added benefit of keeping nonSetians in the dark about the scheduling of Temple events.

Unfortunately the new/old system of days and months (“7 Pharmuthi XXI”) also managed to confuse all of us to the extent that we didn’t know what was happening when either! Some months later - however long it really was no one knows for certain - we slunk grouchily back into Gregoriana.

At one of our first conclaves we also experimented with Egyptian eye-makeup - the heavy, black extended outlines that one sees on ancient statues, wall-reliefs, and Hollywood monster movies. As part of a total appearance makeover, I daresay, it might look impressive. Mixed with any elements of modern attire, mustaches & beards, Afro- or other 1970s- hairdos, 5 o’clock shadows, etc., the effect was beyond hilarious. [I will give the Setian ladies credit for doing a better job of their makeup, but of course they had a head start (no pun intended).] Only a few slapstick photos have survived, and no, one is not going to be included in the Plates section of this memoir! Well, maybe ...

Chapter 6: The King in Yellow

I’m a man in search of his true self. How archetypically American can you get?

Everybody’s looking for his true self. We’re all trying to fulfill ourselves, understand ourselves, get in touch with ourselves, get a hold of ourselves, face the reality of ourselves, explore ourselves, expand ourselves.

Ever since we dispensed with God, we’ve got nothing but ourselves to explain this meaningless horror of life. We’re all weekending at est or meditating for forty minutes a day or squatting on floors in a communal OM or locking arms in quasi-Sufi dances or stripping off the deceptions of civilized life and jumping naked into a swimming pool filled with other naked searchers for self.

Well, I think that true self, that original self, that first self, is a real, mensurate, quantifiable thing, tangible and incarnate. And I’m going to find the fucker!

  Altered States (RL#F19B)

Within the first year or so of its founding, the Temple of Set had accomplished a good deal in terms of its structure and purpose. A viable organizational design had been implemented, and the Lesser Black Magical aspects of our raison d’etre had been roughed out - some extracted and polished from the Church of Satan’s experience, some taken from profane art & science, and some created or synthesized by Setians themselves.

This was only half the challenge, however. The other, and arguably much more significant half had to do with Greater Black Magic, or initiation: knowledge and practices effecting elevation and transformation of the self from ordinary human consciousness to “something higher”. What exactly was that, and how would we know when we attained it [if such attainment were indeed possible]?

The Book of Coming Forth by Night had referred to Setians as the “Elect”, an obscure term with multiple meanings both ordinary and esoteric. Its basic meaning is “chosen”, but by whom and to what end are later questions.

In the context of the Temple of Set, we assumed that an individual’s choice to approach it was the result of both hazard (accidental exposure to the existence of the Temple) and a personal resolve to pursue the adventure of initiation offered by the Temple. From the very beginning we felt it wrong to advertise for or invite membership. We could explain ourselves and be there for suitable individuals to find, but any decision to actually enter the Temple must be utterly and emphatically personal.47

The concept of an individual’s confronting a “threshold of consciousness” is among the most ancient of recorded human experience. In various cultures and countries it has been known as “initiation”, “enlightenment”, “illumination”, “awakening”, etc. [This is not the same thing as bodily “rites of passage” involving puberty/admission to an adult community. Those of course happen to all in that community; by contrast only a relative few encounter and confront initiation.]

Human consciousness consists of both self-awareness and the sensation of phenomena that are “not the self”. At the most base level, these are little more than instinct and stimulus/response. An individual can [and many do] go through an entire physical lifetime in this mode of dull relaxation. In Book VII of his Republic Plato symbolized this as a “cave” in which ordinary humanity is “chained facing the inner wall, on which only faint reflections can be seen”. The initiate (Plato’s “philosopher”) breaks free or is freed by an initiator. What he then confronts and experiences is the challenge, ordeal, and promise of initiation, as summarized by Raghavan Iyer in his Parapolitics:

The upward ascent, which involves pain and struggle, will only be valid because of an exact correspondence between levels of reality, modes of knowing, and states of being.

Who a man is reflects and determines what he really knows, which is connected with what he regards as real.

Man determines what and to what degree things, objects of desire, and values will be real for him. To this extent it is tempting to agree with Protagoras that “man is the measure of all things”.

But as a reality-assigning agent, man is confronted with the philosophical question which Protagoras, a sophist and epistemological relativist, did not face: What is it about the world of nature that allows the existence of such a reality-assigning agent?

There must be a sense in which there is a reality independent of individual minds and wills. There is also a subtle interplay between the reality that cannot be wholly grasped by the individual, and his own capacity to make that reality come alive through the self-conscious exercise of his reality-assigning function. He is able to grow in a direction that is in harmony with the whole of nature.

If a man truly embodies what is implicit in the ascent from the Cave, he must realize the extent to which time and nature are on his side. He must prevail, but this idea of prevailing is much subtler and more elusive than any crude conception of survival or power.

His moral growth is marked by an increase in the intensity and potency of his power of thought and ideation. The crucial assumption is that the mind of man, at any stage, is engaged in a mode of participation in planes of awareness divided into objects existing in relation to interdependent categories of space, time, and perception.

There are four stages of cognition on the “divided line” [between intellectual and sensory knowledge] that may be viewed in this way.

At the lowest level of eikasia are instantaneity and localization, the prison of the “here and now”. To be caught up in them is to be so lacking in critical distance from a given setting that nothing else can be seen.

This mole-like life is restless, fantasy-ridden, and competitive in the extreme. It is often characterized through analogies with rodents or insects. At this level of existence we engage in activities demeaning to the human status and even abdicate the privilege of being human.

Such analogies usually tend to malign animals, because people cannot do what animals do with the natural precision of instinct. Nonetheless this stage of consciousness is quite recognizable.

Above it lies a second stage, pistis, which is much more dangerous than the first because it is the realm of pseudo-absolutization. It is characterized by opinions and ideologies that are only relatively true and therefore relatively false.

The knowledge gained by comparison and contrast is contingent and not necessarily true. Many questions relative to space and time arise. Suppose someone advances the view that it is human nature to be selfish. One might ask what makes him say this? Where did he pick it up? What does it mean to him? How does he interpret it? Such questions begin to bring out the relativity of such assertions.

Human beings at this stage, however, do not like the relativity of their opinions to be shown, and tend to convey their assertions without qualification as if they were totally true. They are made to look like immutable maxims, although if they were they would give strength and enable individuals or societies to maintain themselves without need of constant reinforcement. They would not leave people afraid of questions, or unable to consider the possibility of other ways of formulating similar truths. But pseudo-absolutization goes with dogmatism of the most insecure kind, which must be reinforced from outside by polls and by power, by this, that, and the other.

In the third stage, dianoia, there are still limitations of space and time, but with a relative freedom from the “here and now”, and a cleaving to universal generalizations of given axioms.

The supreme example is mathematics. Yet even the most central axioms in mathematics are conventional, and are based upon apparently arbitrary assumptions.
In the third stage the degree of freedom from the relativities of space and time may be secured at the cost of being unaware of lurking presuppositions which can act as mental blinders. This problem can be mitigated by critical distance wherein assumptions serve as aids to further questioning, leading to their step-by-step removal by treating them as hypotheses and stairways of ascent until the fourth stage is reached, or at least sensed.

The fourth stage is noesis, in which there is almost total freedom from the ordinary limitations of space and time.

There is a need to be flexible in formulation to progress beyond the third stage. But once the fourth stage is entered, there is a ready recognition that what is true without qualification can only be incompletely articulated or partially intimated at lesser levels. It can be embodied, but only imperfectly. Stenzel has described how “just as in the strict sense there cannot be an appearance of the Good, so in the end there cannot be opinion about it; the true Good can never become an object of opinion because it is an unconditional final end”.48

Magister Bruce Ware of the Temple of Set has succinctly summarized Plato’s “Pyramid of Thought” thus:

In his quest to define a Philosopher-King, Plato must necessarily define wisdom, and it is this effort of definition that generates the Platonic epistemology consisting of the Forms, the four types of cognitive capabilities (also called the faculties, or in Greek “dynameis”) and their fields of objects.

For Plato the highest and most fundamental faculty was noesis (sapience); its field of objects was of the Forms themselves. For humans noesis is “the capacity for knowing” (Aristotle, Nichomachean Ethics, 1170a 16). “It is satisfactory to call science and reasoning (episteme and dianoia), taken together, knowing (noesis)” (Plato, Republic 533e).

Noesis is the full exercise of all the faculties of the reasoning mind. It comes intact from the Greek, where it means “thought”, based on the verb noein (to think). The Latin equivalent may be “cogito” or “sapientia”. Note that this word usually is translated as “intelligence”, but I have determined that the word “sapience” is closer to what the various writers were referring, while “intelligence” seems to have become a rather vague term in recent years.

Dianoia (thinking) is the second faculty, reasoning, especially practical thought; the Latin equivalent is “ratio” (meaning something closer to “calculation”). Its field of objects is the human mind’s capability of generating conceptual definitions of the Forms. Plato: “The converse of the soul with itself, without speech, is what we called thought (dianoia).”

In the analogy of the Divided Line, Plato explains the difference between noesis and dianoia:

But you want to distinguish that part of the real and intelligible which is studied by the science (episteme) of dialectic as having greater clarity than that studied by what are called “sciences” (technai). These technai treat their assumptions as first principles and - though compelled to use dianoia and not sense-perception in surveying their subject matter, because they proceed in their investigations from assumptions and not to a first principle - they do not exercise noesis on (those technai), even though with the aid of first principles they are intelligible. And I think that you call the habit of mind of geometers and the like “dianoia” but not “naes”, meaning by “dianoia” something midway between doxa (accepted opinion) and naes. (Plato: Republic, VII, 6, 511c-d).

Pistis (belief) and eikasia (conjecture = a conclusion arrived at from evidence that has grounds for reasonable belief) have for their fields of objects the individual and particular instances which manifest the Forms, and imitations or reflections (paintings or sculptures for example) of instances manifesting the Forms, respectively. It is very important to note and remember that these two dynameis are considered by Plato to be cognitive activities, activities of the mind, of the philosopher, particularly in this time when ideas surrounding “faith” (implied in “belief” and “conjecture”) are derided as non-rational.

Plato describes a process through which one becomes capable of nœsis: first one begins by contemplating the physical manifestation of the Form Beauty: a beautiful body. Then through dialectical discussion and the full activation and use ("energia") of all the faculties, the Philosopher-King candidates finally learn to apprehend the Form of Beauty itself. This is a process, a way of knowing or a way of thinking. Each faculty has its own way of knowing, or process of thinking, and thus generates its own way of behavior.49

Hence the challenge facing a new initiate is not simply the absorbing and accumulation of new information, but an entirely new way of approaching that information - indeed the awareness and selection from among several new modes of addressing it.

In 1934 Peter D. Ouspensky, that brilliant student of Gurdjieff, referred to this same initiatory process as “the psychology of man’s possible evolution” and summarized it in a series of five lectures. He began with perhaps the most irritating [to the noninitiated] question: Why cannot all people become authentic initiates? Why only the Elect few?

His answer, blunt in its simplicity: Because most people don’t want it. They don’t want it because it is incomprehensible to them from the outset, it doesn’t promise anything of material/tangible value, and finally it is frankly frightening. Ordinary people prefer their thoughts, like their physical lives, to be comfortable, reassuring, predictable, and peaceful. They do not want to venture into any kind of “unknown darkness”.

Unsurprisingly, and as needs little exemplification here, they also view with mistrust, suspicion, and occasionally outright alarm and hatred those who do so venture.

Ouspensky divided human consciousness into four “states”, which he called sleep, waking sleep, self-consciousness, and objective consciousness:

Sleep is the purely passive and automatic state in which the human body functions [whether biologically awake or asleep] without any mental awareness or effort. In ordinary humans this is routinely interrupted and augmented by waking sleep, what most people are when they consider themselves “awake and conscious”. Comments Ouspensky:

> It is necessary to understand here that the first state of consciousness, that is, sleep, does not disappear when the second state arrives, that is when man awakes. Sleep remains there, with all its dreams and impressions. Only a more critical attitude towards one’s own impressions, more connected thoughts, more disciplined actions become added to it.

> Because of the vividness of sense impressions, desires, and feelings - particularly the feeling of contradiction or impossibility, which is entirely absent in sleep - dreams become invisible exactly as the stars and Moon become invisible in the glare of the Sun. But they are all there, and they often influence all our thoughts, feelings, and actions - sometimes even more than the actual perceptions of the moment ...

> The second state is less subjective. Man already distinguishes “I” and “not I” in the sense of his body vs. objects different from his body. And he can to a certain extent orientate among them and know their position and qualities.

> But it cannot be said that man is “awake” in this state, because he is very strongly influenced by dreams and really lives more in dreams than in fact. All the absurdities and all the contradictions of people, and of human life in general, become explained when we realize that people live in sleep, do everything in sleep, and do not know that they are asleep.50

To this point Ouspensky’s “unawakened man” does not advance past Plato’s eikasia, since his “waking sleep” is merely a more sensory-aware state of responsive behavior.

What happens when Ouspensky’s man “awakes” [through an initiatory school], however, is in somewhat different focus than that of Plato. Plato’s dianoia is characterized by rational reasoning concerning all phenomena, but Ouspensky first requires man to develop a coherent realization of himself. Only then can he reliably turn his new vision outward towards the objective universe:

These two states, sleep and waking sleep, are the only two states of consciousness in which man lives. Besides them there are two states of consciousness possible for man, but they become accessible to a man only after a hard and prolonged struggle.

These two higher states of consciousness are called self-consciousness and objective consciousness.

We generally think that we possess self-consciousness - that we are conscious of ourselves, or in any case that we can be conscious of ourselves, at any moment we wish. But in truth “self-consciousness” is a state which we ascribe to ourselves without any right. “Objective consciousness” is a state about which we know nothing.

Self-consciousness is a state in which man becomes objective towards himself, and objective consciousness is a state in which he comes into contact with the real, or objective, world from which he is now shut off by the senses, dreams, and subjective states of consciousness ...

Another definition of the four states of consciousness can be made from the point of view of the possible cognition of truth.

In the first state of consciousness, sleep, we cannot know anything of the truth. Even if some real perceptions or feelings come to us, they become mixed with dreams, and in the state of sleep we cannot distinguish between dreams and reality.

In the second state of consciousness, waking sleep, we can only know relative truth, and from this comes the term relative consciousness.

In the third state of consciousness, self-consciousness, we can know the full truth about ourselves.

In the fourth state of consciousness, objective consciousness, we are supposed to be able to know the full truth about everything; we can study “things in themselves”, “the world as it is”.

This is so far from us that we cannot even think about it in the right way, and we must try to understand that even glimpses of objective consciousness can only come in the fully developed state of self-consciousness.

In the state of sleep we can have glimpses of relative consciousness. In the state of relative consciousness we can have glimpses of self-consciousness. But if we want to have more prolonged periods of self-consciousness and not merely glimpses, we must understand that they cannot come by themselves, they need will action. This means that frequency and duration of moments of self-consciousness depend on the command one has over oneself. So it means that consciousness and will are almost one and the same thing, or in any case aspects of the same thing.51

The Temple of Set had clearly undertaken to function as one of Ouspensky’s initiatory schools, an academy for Plato’s philosopher-kings. Further we had committed ourselves to the most rarified, extreme, exclusive, and unprecedented curriculum of such initiation - that of the Powers of Darkness, existence and energies apart and distinct from the objective universal order of nature.

This conceptualization as an initiatory school was yet another way in which the Temple of Set departed from the Church of Satan, which had been conceived to celebrate humanity as it naturally was, not to transform, improve, or evolve it in any way. If anything the Church had held in amused contempt the efforts of all such existing institutions, from Freemasonry to Rosicrucianism. They were, in Anton LaVey’s bluntspeak, “occult pornography” - just another way to fool and frisk the gullible. When he realized that the new Temple of Set had begun to comprehend itself as an initiatory school, he was quick to lampoon it in the Cloven Hoof as “Egyptoids who’d be better off

As Shriners or in Laurel & Hardy’s Sons of the Desert.52

We were, of course, well-aware of the legacies, for better or worse, of history’s many initiatory schools. Some, like the ancient Egyptian priesthoods and the academies of Pythagoras and Plato, were highly accomplished and distinguished. Others such as the Knights Templar, the Illuminati, and the original Rosicrucians, had murkier, more controversial records. We would have to study as many of them as we could, learn from [and ideally improve upon] the good while discarding the not-so-good.

This was not an easy or quick undertaking. The first four Categories of the Temple Reading List (Appendix #14) provide some idea of the vastness of this subject area, and indeed the topics involved pretty much encompass the entire Reading List! So the Temple’s structural and academic development has been a careful and constantly-evolving process over the decades, not an instantaneous 1975 design.

As the Temple of Set brought its identity increasingly into focus, so did its initiatory degree system become more meaningful. As discussed in Chapter #4, this fell almost surprisingly neatly into place concerning degrees I°-V°, each of which had its appropriate initiatory significance and function. By 1979 I finally felt that I had not only fulfilled the initiation of a Magus V° as the Utterer and articulator of an æonic Word, but that the initially-vague and elusive concept of a “magical æon” had finally resolved itself as well.

As far as most occultists are aware, references to æons began with Aleister Crowley’s much-advertised Æon of Horus, which he proclaimed to have followed first the Æon of Isis (roughly pre-Christian paganism) and then that of Osiris (roughly 2,000 years of Christianity). Since Crowley’s understanding of Egyptian mythology was essentially that of the Osiris/Isis/Horus trinity, this tied Western civilization up into a nice, neat package.

Not only was Crowley responsible for bringing about the Æon of Horus, we are told, but that of Osiris as well - in a previous incarnation as the High Priest of Osiris [and Priestess of Isis] Ankh-f-na-khonsu. The detailed story of this is told in his memoir of that incarnation, “Across the Gulf”, in Equinox #I-7:

But Thoth the mighty god, the wise one, with his ibis-head and his nemyss of indigo, with his Ateph crown and his phoenix wand and with his ankh of emerald, with his magic apron in the three colors; yea, Thoth, the god of wisdom, whose skin is of tawny orange as though it burned in a furnace, appeared visibly to all of us. And the old Magus of the Well, whom no man had seen outside his well for night threescore years, was found in the midst; and he cried with a loud voice, saying, “The Equinox of the Gods!!”

And he went about to explain how it was that Nature should no longer be the center of man’s worship, but man himself, man in his suffering and death, man in his purification and perfection. And he recited the Formula of the Osiris as follows, even as it hath been transmitted unto us by the Brethren of the Cross and Rose unto this day ...

In his own writings Crowley does not indicate where he came by this concept of “æons” or exactly what is meant by it. A little detective work, however, takes us back to the days of the Golden Dawn and the writing of a book entitled Egyptian Magic (RL#10I) by Florence Farr, Scribe of the G.’D.’, in 1896. This book, part of a 10-volume series Collectanea Hermetica edited by W.W. Westcott, contained a very interesting chapter called “The Gnostic Magic of Egypt”, from which the following quote:

Let us first consider the essential principles of Gnosticism, which are briefly as follows:
First - A denial of the dogma of a personal supreme God, and the assertion of a supreme divine essence consisting of the purest light and pervading that boundless space of perfected matter which the Greeks called the Pleroma. This light called into existence the great father and the great mother whose children were the æons or god-spirits. That is to say from the supreme issues the nous or divine mind and thence successive emanations, each less sublime than the preceding. The divine life in each becoming less intense until the boundary of the Pleroma, or the fullness of God, is reached.

52 LaVey, Anton, “Church of Satan, Cosmic Joy Buzzer”, Cloven Hoof #VIII-2, March-April 1976.
From thence there comes into being a taint of imperfection, an abortive and defective evolution, the source of materiality and the origin of a created universe, illuminated by the divine but far removed from its infinitude and perfection.

Now the Gnostics considered that the actual ruler and fashioner of this created universe and its beings good and evil was the Demiurgos, a power issuant from sophia or wisdom. By some it was said that the desire of souls for progression caused the origin of a universe in which they might evolve and rise to the divine.

The Gnostics definitely believed in the theory of cycles of ascent and return to the evolutionary progress of worlds, ages, and man; the ascents & descents of the soul; the pre-existence of all human souls now in worldly life; and the surety that all souls that desire the highest must descend to matter and be born of it. They were the philosophical Christians.

The rule of the Christian church, however, fell into the hands of those who encouraged an emotional religion, destitute of philosophy, whose members should be bound together by personal ties of human sympathy with an exalted sufferer and preacher rather than by an intellectual acceptance of high truth.

The Gnostics dissented from the creed then being taught, on the ground of the inferiority of the hero-worship of Christ to the spiritual knowledge of the supernal mind, which they considered he taught.

The Gnostics were almost universally deeply imbued with the doctrines of Socrates and Plato; and a religion of emotion and reverence, combined with moral platitudes, did not seem to them of a sublimity sufficiently intense to be worthy to replace the religious mysteries of Egypt, India, and Persia, the theocracy of the Jews, or the sublime truths hidden in the myths of Greece.

In Religion in Ancient History (RL#3A) S.G.F. Brandon comments:

In his “First Epistle to the Corinthians” Paul had occasion to contrast his teaching with that of other systems known to his readers. In so doing he was led to give this significant account of his own: “Howbeit we speak wisdom among the perfect: yet a wisdom not of this world, nor of the rulers of this world, which are coming to naught: but we speak God’s wisdom in a mystery, even the wisdom that hath been hidden, which God foreordained before the worlds unto our glory: which none of the rulers of this world knoweth: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory” (ii. 6-8).

In our official English translations the proper meaning of this passage is obscured at two crucial points. The Greek word translated as “world” here, severally in its singular or plural forms, is aion, does not mean this physical world or Earth, but “time” or “age”.

Paul’s use of aion here accordingly shows that he was thinking in terms of an esoteric system of “world-ages” that probably derived ultimately from Iranian and Babylonian sources, and that in various forms was much in vogue in current Graeco-Roman thought. Next the words translated as “rulers of this world” (archontes tou aionos toutou) do not refer, as is popularly supposed, to the Roman and Jewish authorities who were responsible for condemning Jesus to death. They denote dæmonic beings who were associated with the planets and believed to govern the lives of men on Earth.

As Farr and Brandon both go on to observe, Gnostic Christianity was regarded as a very serious threat to the Christian church and was intensely persecuted. Had it become prevalent, the 2,000 years might have evolved very differently in Western civilization - with a very intellectual, philosophical, and initiatory religious climate instead of the intolerant, ferocious, and ignorant horror of dogmatic Christianity.

Now we are beginning to see this term Æon in a new light, if I may be excused the expression. The Æon of Horus is not just a period of time when ideas symbolized by Horus are dominant. Rather it is a Ding an sich, a noumenon: something of purely rational apprehension, not perception by the senses.
Thus in what I might term the LBM sense, an æon is simply an attitude which one chooses or is conditioned to adopt. This is what I mean when I say that different people “exist in different æons”: that is a Jew, Christian, or Moslem exists in the Æon of Osiris; a Wiccan in that of Isis; and a Thelemite in that of Horus.

Accordingly, while I consider æons “pyramidal” in sophistication, after the fashion of Plato’s “pyramid of thought”, I see no reason to consider them time-sequential, with each new one superseding and obliterating the one before it.

In an LBM sense, therefore, the population of the world continues overwhelmingly in the grip of the Æon of Osiris, the best intentions of Aiwass notwithstanding. The Æon of Isis is the next influential, followed by that of Horus. The Æon of Set, highest on the pyramid and most difficult to comprehend and indwell, is the most precarious and exclusive of all.

As with the Setian degree system, it would be very difficult if not impossible to spend all of one’s time in a “higher æon”. When we go about our affairs in the profane world, we are usually Osirians, peering with curiosity and vague alarm at ecological activists (Isis) or avant-garde artists (Horus). Yet we experience periods of Isis and Horus too - and, when we wish to, that very rarefied and mysterious Æon of Set.

Aleister Crowley, who suggested that æons were periods of time in “catastrophic succession” - I presume in order to more forcefully advance the cause of his Æon of Horus - predicted in the Equinox #I-10 that following the ÆH “will arise the Equinox of Ma, the goddess of justice. It may be a hundred or ten thousand years from now (1913), for the computation of time is not here as there.” In 1921, in his “new comment” to Liber Legis, Crowley speculated that the next æon would be that of Thmaist, third officer in the G.'D.' Neophyte ritual. On the other hand, he continued, “It may be presumptuous to predict any details concerning the next æon after this.”

That is essentially my attitude as well. As Magus of the Æon of Set, I am an Eye in that particular Triangle [or Shining Trapezohedron], as it were. The only one who knows for certain what the next-conceived æon will be, if indeed there should be one, would be the Magus or Maga who Utters its Word.

Above I made reference to æons “in an LBM sense”. Is there a “GBM sense” as well? Indeed there is, but - like Her-Bak - you are going to have to reflect very carefully upon it to apprehend it.

Seen through the lens of GBM, an æon is in fact a living entity, in which its initiates are “cells”. This is the secret which the Gnostics brought from antiquity, and which so frightened the Christian dogmatists. The “god” of an æon is thus a creature of the total magical and philosophical energy of material beings who are initiates of that æon, i.e. who are aware that they are “components of the god”. [Are you now beginning to see the ancient origins of Hegel’s concept of an “overmind”?]?

Understood in this sense, a GBM Working is a way of the “part’s” reaching out to contact, experience, and/or express the “whole”. This is why true GBM is not even remotely like “prayer” as the profane practice it. Nor is it mere meditation, in which the mind of the meditator merely extends to its own limits. This is rather the greatest secret, and the greatest fulfillment, of unique existence.

Once an æon is apprehended in this way, a great many veils fall away, a great many mysteries of what magic is/why it works are revealed, and indeed the entire “why” of human consciousness is explained. All one needs is the noesis to perceive it. “Don’t be concerned if you don’t attain such noesis the moment you finish your first reading of Black Magic,” I wrote in the Crystal Tablet of Set. “It is there; and when you are ready for it, It will be ready for you.”
In 1979, correspondingly, I finally realized not only the significance but what James Thomson in his City of Dreadful Night so magnificently named the “necessity supreme” of the degree of Ipsissimus VI°.

The Utterance of a Word of a Magus, by introducing a principle beyond the universe known to the Masters of the Temple, creates a situation of disequilibrium and kinetic energy. As the Utterance continues, so does this destabilization of the magical and philosophical environment. Left unresolved, this atmosphere can result in the extremes of either the complete overwhelming and suppressing of the status quo [as for example in history’s most drastic revolutionary episodes] or in growing resistance to the “irritation” and its sometimes-violent rejection and suppression.

What is needed, therefore, is a perspective and influence beyond that of a Magus, with the purpose of blending and synthesizing the old and the new into a harmonious and viable whole. In this sense the initiation of an Ipsissimus is the resolution of the tension between the initiation of a Master of the Temple and that of a Magus.

Just as the other degrees of initiation had within the Temple of Set evolved significantly from their Church of Satan and earlier definitions, so it was now with this one.
“Ipissimus”. It was originally nothing more than a superlative of the early Latin pronoun ipsus (“self”), which as ipsissimus would approximately mean “utmost self”.

In the 19th century this curious term was adopted by Britain’s Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn to replace the original name (“Jesus”) of the eleventh degree of its predecessor organization, the Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia. Presumably the G.’D.’. thought “Ipissimus” a bit less blasphemous, while still implying that such an individual, associated with the highest of the Sephiroth of Kether (“Crown”) on the Jewish Cabalistic “Tree of Life”, could have attained a sort of “supreme selfhood”. Since none of the organization’s original members claimed any grade beyond that of Adeptus Exemptus (7)=[4], they felt no need to discuss it much beyond founder W. Wynn Westcott’s official History Lecture:

... But the highest of all in this ancient scheme are the Great Rulers of the whole system who severally govern and sustain the Third Order, which includes three Magic Titles of Honour and Supremacy. These represent the Supernal Triad of the Sephiroth and are shrouded and unapproachable to the profane and to all others but the Chiefs of the Adepti ...

When Aleister Crowley adopted the G.’D.’. grades for his successor A.’A.’., he endeavored to make “Ipissimus” somewhat more explicit. In One Star in Sight he wrote of this (10)=[1] grade:

There is also an account in a certain secret document to be published when propriety permits. Here it is only said this: The Ipissimus is wholly free from all limitations soever, existing in the nature of all things without discriminations of quantity or quality between them. He has identified Being and not-Being and Becoming, action and non-action and tendency to action, with all other such triplicities, not distinguishing between them in respect of any conditions, or between any one thing and any other thing as to whether it is with or without conditions.

He is sworn to accept this Grade in the presence of a witness, and to express its nature in word and deed, but to withdraw Himself at once within the veils of his natural manifestation as a man, and to keep silence during his human life as to the fact of his attainment, even to the other members of the Order.

The Ipsissimus is pre-eminently the Master of all modes of existence; that is, his being is entirely free from internal or external necessity. His work is to destroy all tendencies to construct or to cancel such necessities. He is the Master of the Law of Unsubstantiality (Anatta).

The Ipsissimus has no relation as such with any Being: He has no will in any direction, and no Consciousness of any kind involving duality, for in Him all is accomplished; as it is written “beyond the Word and the Fool, yea, beyond the Word and the Fool”.

The problem with this definition is that it cancels itself out, making “Ipsissimus” a meaningless term and/or state of personal being. Indeed associating it with the Buddhist anatta (“no-self”) removes any sort of individual, personal identity altogether.56

The most that can be said for the Golden Dawn/Crowley approach is that in discussing the “Third Order” (the three highest Sephiroth) they assumed that they were talking about initiated beings progressively closer to the universal mind and oneness of [the Hebrew] God; and the closer you get, the more your personality dissolves into his. Theoretically this is in keeping with the goal of the “Right-Hand Path” of initiation.

But according to Setian “Left-Hand Path” philosophy, such dissolution of the psyche is not only undesirable but impossible, because there is no universal consciousness such as YHVH; there is only nonconscious universal existence, balance, and consistency. Thus to us the three highest degrees of initiation have a distinctly different, and very real, significance.

It is the initiation of a Master of the Temple (Magister/Magistra Templi IV°) to gain an Understanding of the universe of conscious thought as it presently exists. Magically this is referred to as the current “æon”, being the most sophisticated and comprehensive of a continually-unfolding series of philosophical perspectives on reality. Once attained to this Understanding, the Master can then guide less-advanced initiates in ways along their personal quests that are enhanced, not obstructed by the overall environment.

Occasionally beyond the initiation of a Master is that of a Magus/Maga, who is characterized by the introduction of a new factor into this existing philosophical universe, sufficiently potent and significant as to evoke change to its very core. In traditional magical terminology the Magus “Utters a Word” to set this dynamic in motion; although the full factor requires often quite detailed explanation and elaboration, it can be encapsulated, symbolized by a single term - such as Agape, Anatta, Agathon, Thelema (of the Æon of Horus), Indulgence (of the Age of Satan), and Xeper, Xem, Runa, Remanifest, and Arkte (of the Æon of Set to date).

So intensely and obsessively does the Magus identify with the Uttered Word that it in effect becomes a personal universe, outside of which reality is unintelligible and inadequate. To others a Magus driven by this vision may seem inexplicable, irrational, even insane. This phenomenon is “the Curse of the Magus” - that is not to be Understood even by nearby Initiates of Understanding!

It is into this conflict that the initiation of Ipsissimus/Ipsissima becomes not only necessary but, in Thomson’s phrase, supremely so. It is the function of an Ipsissimus to comprehend the greater synthesis of an Uttered Word with the æonic totality preceding it, and to delicately encourage and enhance that synthesis. Characteristically this is undertaken 56 Anatta is one of the more elusive and controversial concepts in Buddhism. Generally-accepted definition of it tend to leave the reader even more confused! I would summarize it as the proposition that there is no isolate, unique, and immortal psyche such as the Egyptians, Plato, and the Temple of Set postulate. Rather, so the Buddha said, what people think of as their “soul” is an ever-changing “rain” of impressions upon their bodily senses from within and without the physical body, creating the illusion of a self. Thus there is no conscious immortality, although there is natural, all-inclusive perpetuity.

with such subtlety that the will and action of the Ipsissimus pass completely unnoticed, and this is as it should be if the harmonizing is to be perfectly fulfilled.

Beyond this the Ipsissimus also confronts the still-intersecting “ripples” of many æons activated at various points in history, and performs workings to enable them to complement and improve, not clash with and destroy one another.

Did I realize all of this on the Ides of March XIV/1979 when I took the Oath of Ipsissimus? Not at all. I sensed only that I had fulfilled my Task and withstood my Curse as a Magus, yet was compelled further into the initiatory unknown. There was something else, something more that I now had to do, and part of that was discovering just what that “something else” was. It took me many years as an Ipsissimus to begin to apprehend it, and in the greater sense I’m still doing so today.

And now we are in a position to address the original question of this chapter: the ultimate significance and goal of Greater Black Magic. It is easy for the initiate to see and [at least for Masters of the Temple] to articulate. But it has proven just as difficult for noninitiates still chained in Plato’s cave to grasp, despite its sublime simplicity. What Ouspensky said still holds true for so many: They just don’t want to know.

This Grail, this Philosopher’s Stone, this ultimate truth, the sucker that Dr. Jessup was so determined to find, is the immortal, isolate, unique essence of the ba, the psyche, the soul. Further it is not something unattainable except by a privileged few; it is innate to every conscious being, human and nonhuman. It needs only to be recognized and appreciated for what it is.

This startling, almost deceptively-simple principle is at the heart of all of history’s most profound myths, legends, and artistic visions, from Wagner’s Parsifal to Tolkien’s Lord of the Rings, from Vaughan Williams’ symphonies to Kantner’s Planet Earth Rock and Roll Orchestra, from Doré and Parrish to Beardsley and Breker. Wherever the core of divine consciousness breaks through into glorious, eternal, excruciating, and overwhelming awareness.

The path to this awareness lies not in the flimsy, foolish arguments for conventional religion, but rather in the real, observable phenomenon of humanity itself. We perceive something in our own state of being that does not seem to be explainable in terms of the objective universe. We are not satisfied that we can be explained or defined merely in terms of electro-chemical equations, even very elaborate ones. There is, we feel, something else within us - something unique to each being and ultimately more essential than our objective, physical substance. First identified as the ba by the ancient Egyptians, it became the psyche of the Greeks and eventually the “soul” in modern language. From Webster’s International Dictionary:

- ba: The living, immortal, eternal, and ultimately divine living soul in Egyptian religious belief represented as a bird with a human head and believed to leave the body at death and return eventually to revivify the body if it is preserved.

- soul: (1) The immaterial essence or substance, animating principle, or actuating cause of life or of the individual life. (2a) The psychical or spiritual principle in general shared by or embodied in individual human beings or all beings having a rational and spiritual nature. (2b) The psychical or spiritual nature of the universe related to the physical world as the human soul to the human body.

Note the connection which is presumed or postulated to exist between the human soul and the Universe. This connection has also been referred to via the term logos. Again from Webster’s:
logos: (1) Reason or the manifestation of reason conceived in ancient Greek philosophy as constituting the controlling principle in the universe: (a) A moving and regulating principle in the universe together with an element in man by which, according to Heraclitus, this principle is perceived. (b) A cosmic governing or generating principle according to the Stoics that is immanent and active in all reality and that pervades all reality. (c) A principle that, according to Philo, is intermediate between ultimate or divine reality and the sensible world ...

Atheists and agnostics - including sub-species such as logical positivists, materialists, humanists, etc. - are uncomfortable with the religious connotations of the term “soul”. They usually refer to the same phenomenon as “self”, “ego”, “mind”, or “consciousness”. Within the Temple of Set all words referring to the phenomenon are used more-or-less interchangeably, with distinctions being made in specific cases as necessary.

Essential to the notion of the soul is the sensation that it is somehow alien to the physical body - a passenger in a vehicle, so to speak. It is the “ultimate you” that, through the machinery of your physical brain, moves your arms and legs, sees through your eyes, hears through your ears, and in other ways interacts with the objective universe. If you lose 20% of your body in an accident, however, you do not lose 20% of this soul. Is it simply a freakish by-product of the brain’s natural functioning - an illusion or delusion incidentally caused by interactions of electrochemical energy? (RL#19G) True, when damage is done to the brain, the consciousness fragments. This is also true when the brain deprives itself [through sleep] (RL#19E) or is deprived of [through sensory deprivation] (RL#19N) contact with the objective universe.

Many efforts to prove that the soul is not a mere function of the material brain have centered around ideas of reincarnation, ESP, out-of-the-body (“astral”) travel, hauntings, and the like. The idea is to demonstrate that the consciousness can and does exist apart from the physical brain. Such efforts range from the serious and sophisticated (RL#18D, #19H) to the ridiculous. Fear of death motivates many such efforts and colors the results; we seek reassurance that our being will not vanish with the death and decay of our physical body. (RL#18A) But the search can also be motivated by honest curiosity, and that is the raison d’être of the Temple of Set.

The key which we apply to this problem is what Eric Hoffer refers to as “the unnaturalness of human nature” (RL#17D). The soul or self does not behave as though it were merely a “sum total” of the brain’s sensory and manipulative capacities, combining and recombining inputted information as though it were an “organic” electronic computer. It has a sense of identity, a sense of uniqueness, a sense of distance and differentiation from everything else that exists. It has characteristics which are something more than instinctive and something less than logical; these are called “emotions”.

Most significantly, perhaps, are the creative soul’s thought prerogatives and dispositions. We don’t just think to survive or to react to external stimuli, B.F. Skinner notwithstanding. We think creatively, spontaneously, abstractly, and aesthetically. We conceive, design, and construct non-natural concepts, arguments, processes, and objects. And we can distinguish between the natural and the non-natural - something that would be a logical impossibility if the consciousness itself could not extend beyond the natural.

To demonstrate this capacity to yourself, consider something as simple as a Möbius strip. Your consciousness rebels at a phenomenon which it perceives as “against the law”. As a matter of fact, the various Möbius phenomena are not “against the law”; there is an entire field of mathematics - topology - which is concerned with the properties of geometric configurations subjected to various transformations. But here it is not the phenomenon itself but rather your reaction to it which is significant. The revulsion you feel is a manifestation of something in you which possesses the power to view the order of the objective universe from outside. (RL#20H).

The philosopher Immanuel Kant approached this power of the soul from a somewhat different angle. He referred to it as humanity’s ability to assign meaning to natural phenomena - to recognize, appreciate, define, categorize, rank, and otherwise determine the importance, relevance, and significance of an event or object in nature. “Objects of experience,” he said, “are never given in themselves, but only in experience, and have no existence outside it.”

Schopenhauer went a step further, holding that the individual will is the source of causality itself, of which space, substance and time are mere derivations.

Friedrich Nietzsche discussed the power in terms of the higher intellect’s ability to build horizons for itself beyond mere recombinations of the known (RL#16B). Plato defined this suprarational quality of the mind as nēsis and held that it was capable of perceiving the eternal, transcendent principles of all existence beyond even the most rigorous reasoning (dianoia): the Forms or First Principles (RL#12C, #16F).

This power of the soul is thus both apprehensive [reaching beyond the limits of the objective universe] and creative [enabling one to generate meaning, to initiate existence]. This creative aspect may be called the subjective universe to distinguish it from the objective universe.

The subjective universe and the objective universe contain mutually-incompatible elements of definition, but they also blend into one another. For example, we use the subjective universe to assign meaning to the objective universe, and we regularly rely upon our knowledge of phenomena in the objective universe to give us “building blocks” to construct objects in the subjective one. [Many “fantasy creatures”, for example, can be broken down into “parts” of natural animals.]

The ability of any intellect to generate and operate the subjective universe is not automatic [beyond the level of ordinary imagination]. It must be deliberately learned and exercised. The experience of such perspective and power can be exhilarating and stimulating; more often - to those unprepared for the sensation and psychologically unable to accept it - it has been frightening.

Man does not like the idea that he doesn’t fit wholly and completely into the natural scheme of things. Hence he has sought an ally in a personalized “God” that created him as a wholly natural pet project [for example, pre-“fallen” man in the Garden of Eden]. He has invented religious and social codes that give him a sense of conforming to the natural order of the objective universe. He has built cathedrals and monuments to reassure and reinforce this sense, and he has even had his dead body buried with rites commemorating his inclusion in it. These very acts, ironically, expose his secret dread that his conscious self - his soul - does not belong to it. When that part of him which does belong to it - his physical brain and body - separates from his consciousness and remains purely a component of the objective universe [through physical death], he fears that his consciousness, unlike his physical shell, will not obey the [objective universal] law of conservation of matter and energy. Rather it will cease to exist.

While fearing the death of his self-consciousness, ironically, man has also sought to punish it for its existence. He has mythologized it as devils or, in Western Judeo/Christianity as the Devil (RL#3A, #3B) He has tried to drive it out of his mind through psychological coercion (RL#14E, #19L) as well as through physical punishment ranging from simple fasting to the torture of the Inquisition. And of course he has tried to pretend that it is really not there at all - that any activity by the soul which is not harmonious with the objective universe is simply disease: madness and mental illness.
Nonetheless the soul endures. It has survived all efforts to destroy, distort, disguise, or sublimate it - for none of these efforts has ever actually succeeded in touching it. At most they have succeeded in damaging only the physical medium for its expression.

And now we turn to the immortality of the psyche.

Perhaps the most important contribution of the original Church of Satan (1966-1975CE) was its focus upon and glorification of the conscious self, even though its original ambition was to downplay that concept in favor of mere fleshly gratification.

As we Satanists explored the implications of Anton LaVey’s initial, dramatic statements in the Satanic Bible, it gradually became evident that any focus upon oneself presupposes the separateness of that self from everything else. Flesh is found to consist of natural substances, and most of our lower-level thought processes - what Plato would class as pistis and eikasia - are similarly found to be little more than conditioned responses to external stimuli. As the Satanist continued his search for the “thing that was exclusively himself”, he was forced to increasingly more complex introspection, resulting ultimately in a philosophical and metaphysical crisis that would only be resolved in the more precise philosophy of the Temple of Set.

In the Temple the psyche became the acknowledged focus of the Setian’s initiatory quest. The logical mind and the fleshly body were not disdained, but seen rather as interpretative and communicative devices both between the psyche and its existence in a material universe, and between various psyches (i.e. between individual Initiates). Subsequently this led the initiated psyche to confront the implications of an existence which is radically distinct from the material. The existence of the psyche as something not the product of natural forces - created and energized by Set - necessitates comprehension of its future beyond finite interface with the natural/material.

Historically the issue of the psyche has been gradually oversimplified into a “this-life-only” (TLO) vs. a “life-after-death” (LAD) debate. As the debate has raged throughout many ages and mythologies, these two alternatives have tended to become mutually exclusive.

The TLO proponents have passionately denied that anything of “this life” can continue past the destruction of the fleshly shell, even though they have no positive proof of the simultaneous extermination of the psyche. Since they can no longer detect its presence through their own fleshly interfaces with material existence (the five senses), they presume that it no longer exists. When challenged on this over-extension of logic, they retort that the burden of proof is on the challenger ... to prove that a posthumous psyche exists by establishing a material/5-sensory channel of communication with it.

Most publicized efforts to do exactly that have been predictably ludicrous at best and fraudulent at worst: seances, reincarnation fantasies, and “ascended master” rubbish. Materialists have felt secure in ridiculing such antics, and one cannot entirely blame them for claiming that their own position has thus been validated by default. By strict scientific and logical criteria it has not.

At the other extreme are the LAD advocates. They have faced the interesting problem of trying to make a convincing and attractive case for something whose existence they cannot demonstrate to any of the five senses. Rather than address that challenge directly [as the Temple of Set does], they take the easy way out and sell their product by attacking the TLO competition. They portray “this life” as merely a test of obedience, on which the individual will be judged at the point of transition into LAD - which they hold to be far more important because it is eternal.
Since uninitiated humans fear the unknown and prefer to be safe rather than sorry, the LAD merchants have been able to use fear and threats as effective propaganda devices. Although they are in effect “selling a totally undetectable and unverifiable product” for the greatest price the customer can conceivably pay (a lifelong abstinence from various pleasures) they have been generally successful - as is attested to by the unbroken grip of LAD religions, from Osirianism to Christianity, on the bulk of humanity throughout its recorded history.

Within the Western cultural tradition it is rarely realized that its two major religions - Christianity and Judaism - are actually at extremes apart on this issue. Christianity in all of its many forms upholds LAD as reason for abstinence in “this life”. Judaism, on the other hand, insists upon TLO and absolutely rejects justification for human behavior on any grounds other than YHVH’s direct instructions to living humans. Comments Arthur Schopenhauer in Parega #1, 13:

> The Jewish religion proper, as described and taught in Genesis and all the historic books until the end of Chronicles, is the crudest of all religions because it is the only one which has no theory of immortality - not even a trace of it. Every king and every hero or prophet is buried, when he dies, with his fathers, and there is an end of the matter; no trace of any existence after death; indeed, as if intentionally, every thought of this sort seems to have been removed.

Schopenhauer is only partially correct. The ancient Hebrews drew no distinction between human souls and the animating force common to all animals (nephesh). Although some part of this animating force was thought to survive the destruction of the body, it was regarded with superstitious terror and referred to ambiguously by the terms elohim and rephaim. By the 2nd century BCE Hebrew doctrine had changed to include the revivification of the material body, but Hebrew theologians never extended this principle to the Pythagorean/Platonic concept of an independently-surviving psyche.

Not surprisingly the original Christians continued this Jewish tradition of corporeal revivification, using the Greek term psyche to mean much the same thing as the Hebrew nephesh. In Matthew 10:28, where the soul is mentioned as distinct from the body, their posthumous reunion is promptly suggested. The most conclusive example of this doctrine, of course, is that of Jesus’ own material resurrection [as in Luke 24:36-43], but by the time of Paul the distaste with which sophisticated Greeks regarded this “animation of corpses” (anastasis nekron) induced that apostle to modify Christian teachings in the direction of Pythagoreanism. Paul was further aware of - and presumably sought to overcome - the challenge of Gnostic and Hermetic Christianity, being a blend of basic Christianity with various Egyptian and Hellenic mysteries.

[The 1945 discovery of thirteen original Gnostic codices at Nag Hammadi in Upper Egypt has shed much light on the ideas with which Paul had to compete. The codices themselves date to 350-400 CE but are probably copies of 2nd century CE originals.]

In I Cor. 15:35 and II Cor. 5:1-2 Paul offers a mixture of Pythagorean and Hebrew ideas, whereby the posthumous soul is given a “spiritual body” (soma pneumatikon) which nevertheless requires a bodily form. Despite Paul’s efforts, Christianity has never succeeded in breaking free from the notion of reanimation of the original corpse, which at least has been grist for the mill of horror-film producers.

Since humans are accustomed to considering Judaism and Christianity as slight variations on a single theme (monotheism with humanity as a slave or pet), this actual chasm between the two belief systems has usually been overlooked, leaving Christians and Jews somewhat confused as to why they don’t get along with one another very well. They have tended to persecute one another for all sorts of stupid reasons, century after century - when they weren’t temporarily distracted by crusades against the “infidel” Moslems or extermination campaigns against “heathen” Aztecs and Incas.

The crude anti-Semitism of Nazi Germany is notorious, but what is not so well-known is that its roots could be found in a far more subtle comment on Schopenhauer - by Dietrich Eckart, initiate of the Thule Gesellschaft and mentor to Adolf Hitler and Alfred Rosenberg. In 1919 Eckart wrote:

It is now evident that a people which completely denies the existence of life after death must limit all of its thoughts and endeavors to the present world, to earthly existence; it has no other choice. But a people can only grow up with such an emphasis on worldly matters if it fundamentally lacks any need for immortality, which in turn is possible only if there is no trace of feeling in its basic character for the eternal in mankind. Wherever the soul manifests itself, no matter how faintly, a sense of immortality necessarily follows. The individual is not always consciously aware of this; indeed there are many who refuse to understand it - who are so ignorant concerning the concept of immortality that they habitually denounce it, even while their unselfish actions clearly reveal that each one of them senses the soul and therefore eternity within himself.

Although Pauline Christianity attempted to appropriate the Pythagorean/Platonic concept of the “soul distinct within and ultimately freed from the body”, the new religion proved unable to sustain this concept without the conceptual vehicle of the body. Christian artistic representations of posthumous Paradise are invariably sterile and dull, while wicked souls’ adventures in Hell are usually twisted and tortured fantasies caricaturing the most desirable pleasures denied in this life. It will be recalled that Christ’s ultimate promise upon his Second Coming was to reunite all souls with their ex-bodies, so that they would once again enjoy their original corporeal shells.

The Christian concept of “Satan”, being as it was a crude scarecrow of everything Christianity didn’t like, was thus as “confused in reverse” as Christianity itself was. This is clearly evident in Anton LaVey’s Satanic Bible, wherein Satan is said to stand for indulgence in fleshly life and rejection of posthumous judgment. As Anton plagiarized from Ragnar Redbeard’s Might is Right:

Life is the great indulgence - death the great abstinence. Therefore make the most of life - here and now! There is no Heaven of glory bright and no Hell where sinners roast. Here and now is our day of torment! Here and now is our day of joy!

Viewed in this context, the Church of Satan’s initial Satanism was, in effect, Judaism with a YHVH who would let you do anything you wanted rather than one who was a vengeful sadist. Yet both systems - the nice (Satanic) one and the vicious (Jewish) one - came to a screeching halt at the grave. [Anton explained the many memento mori decorations of his home as reminders of death’s being just around the corner, hence of the need for Satanists to get as much out of life as possible.]

Elsewhere in the Satanic Bible, however, Anton made a statement which, while largely neglected during the Church of Satan’s span of existence, is one of the more crucial in his entire philosophy:

If a person has been vital throughout his life and has fought to the end for his earthly existence, it is this ego which will refuse to die, even after the expiration of the flesh which housed it ... It is this vitality that will allow the Satanist to peek through the curtain of darkness and death and remain earthbound.
Here Anton’s concept of life was still the TLO one common to Judaism and his original Satanism. In wishing to live rather than die, he could conceptualize immortality only in terms of an extension of TLO through force of will. He likened it to the refusal of a child to go to bed when there is something exciting going on; in this sense it was a denial that there could be any kind of life for the psyche other than “earthbound life”. To “go to bed” is not to move into another mode of existence, but simply to cease to exist. Anton’s original Satanism thus combined a “friendly YHVH” (Satan) with the promise of endless material existence for the psyche - providing that the psyche could project the strength and coherence of will necessary for that existence.

As discussed at length in my Church of Satan history, Anton LaVey and the Church of Satan were never able to resolve the dilemma of Satan’s actual existence: Was he real or just symbolic? If he were real, it would seem to open the door to the entire Christian concept of the universe. If on the other hand he were merely symbolic, then he didn’t really exist as a self-conscious, willful force which could actualize Satanists’ ritual-magical desires or which could even care about the existence of the Church of Satan. In that case magic would be reduced to mere stage-trickery, and the Church itself would be nothing more than a club for spooky psychodrama.

The Temple of Set resolved this dilemma in 1975 CE by asserting the actual existence of “Satan” (as Set - the original, pre-Judæo/Christian entity) while at the same time removing the concept of his existence entirely from the Judæo/Christian tug-of-war.

The essence of the psyche, stated Set in the Book of Coming Forth by Night, is such that its existence is neither dependent upon the material nor imprisoned in it for testing or task-fulfilling purposes. Rather the physical body provides a vehicle in which the psyche can become aware of itself and then reach out towards the limitlessness of its conscious existence. [It is this process which the Temple defines by the hieroglyphic term Xeper.] “This life” may be likened to a springboard or launching-pad towards the psyche’s ultimate Self-awareness and state of Being.

As for Set, he neither cracks a whip over humans in TLO nor sits in judgment over them in LAD. Rather he is understood as the source of the potential for Xeper in each conscious animal. Whether or not each individual recognizes this potential and takes steps to develop it (what we mean by “initiation”) is not Set’s prerogative, else his own psyche would simply displace the one within each self-aware human.

In conceptualizing the existence of the psyche in a non-physical environment, let us reflect first upon the wisdom of ancient China. The Secret of the Golden Flower (T’ai I Chin Hua Tsung Chih) (RL#19S) is the principal philosophical text - in its oral-tradition origins - of the religion of the Golden Elixir of Life (Chin Tan Chiao) which developed during the T’ang Dynasty in the 8th Century CE. Its reputed founder is the Taoist philosopher Lu Yen, student of the Master Yin-hsi (for whom Lao Tzu is supposed to have written the famous Tao Te Ching).

Tao the undivided, Great One, gives rise to two opposite reality principles, Darkness and Light, yin and yang. These are at first thought of only as forces of nature apart from man. Later the sexual polarities, and others as well, are derived from them. From yin comes K’un, the receptive feminine principle; from yang comes Ch’ien, the creative masculine principle. From yin comes ming (life); from yang comes hsing (essence).

Each individual contains a central monad which, at the moment of conception, splits into life and essence (ming and hsing). These two are super-individual principles and so can be related to eros and logos.
In the personal bodily existence of the individual they are represented by two other polarities, a p'o soul (or anima) and a hun soul (or animus). All during the life of the individual these two are in conflict, each striving for mastery. At death they separate and go different ways. The anima sinks to earth as kuei, a ghost-being. The animus rises and becomes shen, a revealing spirit or god. Shen may in time return to Tao.

If the life-forces flow downward - that is, without let or hindrance into the outer world - the anima is victorious over the animus; no “spirit body” or “Golden Flower” is developed, and at death the ego is lost. If the life-forces are conserved and made to “rise”, however, the animus is victorious and the ego persists after death, attaining shen.

Such illumination was not limited to the orient. It was attained by the initiates of the Western world as well. As so carefully illustrated in Her-Bak (RL#2L), it was one of the central secrets of the ancient Egyptian Priesthoods:

What is life? It is a form of the divine presence. It is the power, immanent in created things, to change themselves by successive destructions of form until the spirit or activating force of the original life-stream is freed. This power resides in the very nature of things. Successive destruction of forms, metamorphoses, by the divine fire with rebirth of forms new and living is an expression of consciousness. It is the spiritual aim of all human life to attain a state of consciousness that is independent of bodily circumstance.

What I have just said concerns the living spirit bestowed on the man already quickened, like every living thing, by a rudimentary soul, which makes of such a man a creature superior to the animal-human kingdom. He who recognizes the divine meaning of life knows that knowledge has but one aim, which is to achieve the successive stages that liberate him from the perishable. For things die only in their body; the spirit, the divine Word, returns to its source and dies not. Unhappy is the Ka that fails to recover its soul.

This Egyptian wisdom survived the destruction of ancient Khem in the form of the Pythagorean/Platonic doctrine of transmigration of the psyche as evidenced by anamnesis:

SOCRATES: Those who tell it are priests and priestess of the sort who make it their business to be able to account for the functions which they perform. Pindar speaks of it too, and many another of the poets who are divinely inspired. What they say is this - see whether you think they are speaking the truth. They say that the soul of man is immortal. At one time it comes to an end - that which is called death - and at another is born again, but is never finally exterminated. On these grounds a man must live all his days as righteously as possible. For those from whom

Persephone receives acquittal for ancient doom,
In the ninth year she restores again
Their souls to the Sun above.
From whom rise noble kings
And the swift in strength, greatest in wisdom,
And for the rest of time
They are called heroes and sanctified by men.

Thus the soul, since it is immortal and has been born many times, and has seen all things both here and in the other world, has learned everything that is. So we need not be surprised if it can recall the knowledge of virtue or anything else which, as we see, it once possessed. All nature is akin, and the soul has learned everything, so that when a man has recalled a single piece of knowledge - “learned” it, in ordinary language - there is no reason why he should not find out the rest, if he keeps a stout heart and does not grow weary of the search, for seeking and learning are in fact nothing but recollection. - Plato, The Meno
When most people think about “immortality”, they imagine a simple continuation of their immediate, conscious perceptions and impressions. That is, the moment-to-moment “reinforcements” that we all experience daily, and which - by being “not ourselves” - continuously form a kind of propping-up wall enclosing (hence “defining”) that amorphous feeling we are accustomed to calling “ourselves”. It is this “self” that most people fear to lose in the event of bodily death. They simply don’t know how else they could know themselves to exist. Take away the reinforcing “hits” from the outside, material universe, and the “amorphous feeling” evaporates into nothingness, they fear, like going under a general anesthetic (which also, but temporarily, “removes all hits”).

The Initiate is challenged to find, in the words of Dr. Raghavan Iyer,... not the shadowy self or false egoity which merely reacts to external stimuli. Rather there is that Eye of Wisdom in every person which in deep sleep is fully awake and which has a translucent awareness of self-consciousness as pure, primordial light.

This is accomplished through reflective, non-reactive thinking. Thus the individual becomes aware of his authentic self (psyche, soul); and upon activating this as the locus of his consciousness, looks outward at phenomena at the same depth. In other words, the superficial “self” looks out at its level and sees natural events - like bodily pleasure/pain, blue sky, ringing telephones, time defined by clocks and calendars, and so forth. The core or true self, however, exists as a neter and, when looking outward, sees a universe not of the works of other neteru, but of those neteru themselves. One “machine” sees other “machinery”; one “creator/operator” sees other “creator/operators”.

The anamnesis or “remembered knowledge” experienced by the slave boy in the Meno is perhaps more accurately described as the superficial mind reaching in to the core mind for bits of its immortal, eternal wisdom. But this is akin to reaching for a coal in a hot fire. It is distressing to do, and the result can be held only for a fleeting moment without further distress. The superficial self, which through material “hits” continuously reassures itself that it is the only self, is shaken by exposure to its falseness, its nothingness. It backs away from such “close encounters”, dismisses them as “illusions”, “fantasy”, “imagination”, etc., and hastens to rebuild its fortress of material-sensation “walls”. [The fright felt by the superficial self at threats to its authenticity results, among other things, in the lashing-out of neoskepticism. It is an axiom of the neoskeptics that the superficial self of stimulus/response is and must be the only self.]

Immortality of the self is. Your ability to align your consciousness with your neter, rather than your superficial, animal, illusion of “self” is Xeper.

These ancient initiatory keys to immortality were energetically attacked and suppressed by Christianity, as that cruel religion correctly perceived that fear of death was one of the most powerful weapons it could use to enslave humanity. It was important that death be taught as something hideous and final, from which the only escape was surrender to Christ - by which, of course, Christian churches really meant themselves. Those areas of non-Christian Europe which had escaped, at least for a time, domination by this numbing propaganda, continued to preserve the truth. In For Freedom Destined (RL#14U) Dr. Franz Winkler observes:

In ancient times the secrets of man’s true nature, and of the forces that determine his fate, were contemplated in the great temple universities of paganism all over the civilized world. Though men were fully aware of the important role that heredity plays in the shaping of the physiological and psychological organism of a human being, they did not think that the innermost core of the human being was the product of purely biological forces. This innermost core, called by the Greeks the entelechy or daemon of man, was credited with qualities unique to the individual, apart from the characteristics of the body he inhabited. The concept of entelechy corresponded roughly with the Judaeo-Christian concept of an immortal soul.

Most pagan creeds held that the human entelechy neither begins nor ends with life on Earth. Man’s “mortality” referred merely to the fact that his self-awareness ceased with the death of his body. The immortal gods differed from mortal man by the continuation of their consciousness. Since ancient ideas on the mystery of birth cannot be separated from pagan philosophies about the soul’s supersensible existence, certain concepts generally accepted in the pre-Christian era should be mentioned. According to pagan theology, consciousness after death could reach one of three levels. The first level was the one allotted to the average man: dreamlike, with almost complete absence of memory and self-identification, called Hades in Greek, Hel in Germanic mythology. The second was accessible to the true hero, the man whose deeds of courage and creativeness distinguished him from ordinary mortals. The Greeks called this state of consciousness the Elysian Fields, the Germans Walhalla. The third level was reached by those who could soar beyond the narrow limits of Earth-bound consciousness and thus bring new impulses into the world. Already while they still lived in a mortal body, their awareness had assumed divine status. Their souls after death, in the language of mythology, were lifted to the stars.

Is attainment of the immortality of the Ba or psyche a technique which the individual has to “learn”? Must one hurry to do so, lest one’s body expire before the trick is mastered? Quite the contrary, as the sage in Her-Bak emphasized, this immortality is innate in all conscious beings. You have it already, by evidence of that same consciousness which enables you to read and comprehend these words. It is nothing which the Temple of Set “confers” on you; rather it is something which conventional churches have tried to trick you out of, and which materialistic science has denied simply because it is an aspect of existence which transcends science [hence is not subject to “scientific proof”]. Further from Winkler:

Life’s appearance as “meaningless” stems basically from man’s materialistic concept of himself. If his innermost nature were merely biological, complete fulfillment of his appetites and the acquiring of wealth would satisfy his longing for happiness. Since they do not, an atmosphere of hopelessness is enveloping our generation, especially our youth. In an affluent society where all material ways out of such frustration have been found wanting, drugs, perversions, and the thrills of crime are now being used as desperate means of escape from the intolerable boredom. Well-meaning efforts on the part of the authorities to stem the tidal wave of juvenile delinquency and drug-addiction will therefore bring scant results, until the following simple truth has been fully accepted by parents and teachers:

Happiness, love, and compassion are spiritual faculties that during centuries of neglect and misunderstanding have withered and grown weak. Unless they are nursed back to health, man will despair of life and eventually throw it away in a mass suicide by nuclear destruction. But how can we care for what we no longer comprehend? Modern science, admirable in its achievements on a material plane, has proven ineffectual in the understanding of intangible values. This limitation, while freely admitted by the small number of truly creative scientists, seems to elude the average intellectual. And the failure to recognize this limitation adds to the delusion that natural science in its present form can be the judge of religious or spiritual truth.

Making modern man’s plight even more serious is the fact that his materialistic delusion of himself not only deprives him of wisdom and happiness, but acts also as a pattern in whose dreary image he tends to reshape his nature. Consequently more and more personalities emerge who think and act virtually like robots. They know no happiness and have no perception of objective morality.

We have grown wise in the analysis of the material world, have expanded the scope of our perception to outer space and to the world beneath the atom. But objective inner experience has faded almost entirely away, and it has left us groping in the dark for the true image of ourselves.
It is the function of the Temple of Set, as of the ancient Egyptian priesthoods, the Pythagorean Brotherhood, and the Platonic Academy before it, to inspire its Initiates to awaken to that knowledge which is latent within their consciousness and needs only to be appreciated as such. Winkler rightly points out that, the more highly initiated one becomes, the more one can experience such prerogatives of Xeper. But this is a matter of perspective and proportion, not of the quality of immortality itself.

It is all too easy to perceive “life” as only the active functioning of one’s material body. Such an attitude fosters a disease of the psyche far worse than any of the body. It numbs you to that immortality which is inherent in the Gift of Set, and it makes you the prey of everyone who, in the profane world, seeks to control your life by threats against your body.
Chapter 7: Night of the Jackal

Brien’s First Law: At some time in the life cycle of virtually every organization, its ability to succeed in spite of itself runs out.

Brontosaurus Principle: Organizations can grow faster than their brains can manage them in relation to their environment and to their own physiology; when this occurs, they are an endangered species.

From its very beginning the Temple of Set was much more than the extended vision and/or philosophy of a single individual. Initially, of course, it consisted of those Initiates of the Church of Satan who, like myself, had rejected Anton LaVey’s May 1975 decision to commercialize the Church; and who, after reading the Book of Coming Forth by Night, had decided that the concept and orientation of the Temple of Set resonated with them.

Such resonance, however, took as many different forms as there were individuals.

- Some saw the Temple as essentially a continuation of the previous Church’s Satanism, albeit re-tinted to ancient Egyptian hues.
- Some saw it as a rejection of Satanism altogether in favor of a reach-back to ancient Egyptian mythology and philosophy.
- Some saw it as an entirely new vision of the future, borrowing only such trappings from Satanism and/or ancient Egypt as might be useful or artistic for illustrative purposes.
- Still others had no preconceptions or agendas, and were content to let whatever-this-thing-might-be just simmer in the frying pan until it began to smell and taste good.

This heterogenous, collegial, unhurried, and pleasant atmosphere set the tone for what the Temple of Set would generally continue to be to the present day, and I think goes a long way towards explaining why it has not fallen victim to either Brien’s First Law or the Brontosaurus Principle. Where the Temple has occasionally sailed through rough seas has usually resulted from, or at least been catalyzed by some individual’s or group’s desire to create a narrower, more uniform focus. Such ambitions have generally arisen with the best of intentions: a wish to energize the Temple more, to see all Setians of all degrees as exemplars of excellence, to accentuate the Temple as an occult institution or as a social presence. Unfortunately for such crusaders, yet I think fortunately for the Temple’s underlying authenticity and substance, efforts to marshal Setians are rather akin to herding cats.

The first year in particular of the Temple was marked by regular and abundant dialogue among the founding Masters and Priests as to just how this new approach to initiation could be defined, measured, evaluated, and administered. An entirely free-form, anarchic approach would render any kind of collective degree-system confusing at best, incoherent and meaningless at worst. It was easy enough to establish ordered procedures for initiatory degree-recognitions; the hard part was ensuring a standard of integrity and quality whereby an Adept, say, recognized for demonstrated competence in one “universe of interests” could be seen on a par with another of quite different experience and abilities.

Indeed the five original Masters of the Temple exemplified such divergent perspectives:

Margaret Wendall was a practical, no-nonsense personality with interests in scientific fields such as modern & ancient astronomy, [the then fledgling field of] personal computers, and medieval Russian mythology. Throughout the years of the Church of Satan, she had gained a national reputation for being among the most stable, level-headed, and rational of the Priesthood. Her Bubastis Chapel in San Jose was similarly mature, tranquil, and common-sensible, as was her long-running newsletter The Magic Cat. In 1975 she promptly volunteered her editorial and professional-layout skills for the creation of the Temple’s Scroll of Set newsletter, establishing a standard of excellence and aesthetics for that publication which has continued ever since.

Robert Ethel of Washington, D.C. was a charming, ebullient artist whose Asmodeus Grotto had attracted Satanists of a similarly eccentric, bohemian verve. He was also a seasoned and widely-read occultist of “the old school”, whose opinions and judgments reflected what he saw as the best mixture of many approaches to wisdom. An amateur ichthyologist and owner of his own aquarium business, his home was almost as exotic as Anton LaVey’s, presided over by his gorgeous white cockatoo.

Michael Grumboski of Detroit had come to national notice in the Church of Satan by being a strong advocate for integrity and “constructive repair” in first the Wayne West/Babylon Grotto and then the John DeHaven/Stygian Grotto crises [see my Church of Satan]. Looking rather quaintly like Walt Disney’s Ichabod Crane, “Shai” was modest, unassuming, and invariably polite-to-a-fault. He shared Margaret Wendall’s interest in computers, though on mainframe instead of personal hardware.

L. Dale Seago, most recently of Los Angeles, was the adventurer of the group. Previously a Marine Corps NCO in North Carolina and a martial arts Black Belt, he had moved first to Texas, then to Los Angeles, where his Yuggoth Grotto had attracted a colorful collection of old-guard Church-of-Satanists as well as avant-garde artists, entertainers, and magicians. Strongly principled and fiercely loyal to causes that inspired him, he moved to Santa Barbara shortly after the Temple’s founding to complete a Master’s degree in Political Science from the University of California, along with a commission as a Military Intelligence officer in the U.S. Army. His essays about the more complex issues and applications of Black Magic in the Scroll could always be counted upon to raise the bar of research precision and intellectual excellence.

Lilith Sinclair had soared to prominence as the darkly-beautiful and fiery Priestess of New York City’s Lilith Grotto, famous both for her Grotto’s dramatic activities and community presence and for her own public personification of the Church of Satan, which had led one Pennsylvania cultural magazine to dub her “the occult superstar of the east”. Moving to Santa Barbara in the early 1970s, she had gone on to become a major national influence in the Church, particularly in its developing inter-Grotto and regional programs. She brought to the Temple of Set a deeply intuitive and romantic conviction that invariably lent a richness and depth to what could otherwise have been a rather too-cerebral atmosphere.

Individually and cooperatively these founding Masters established a climate of encouragement of and respect for personal idiosyncrasy in Setian initiation. They proved that it was indeed possible to have widely-alien talents, interests, accomplishments, yet respect one another fully and sincerely. In this Setians of today owe a debt to these original Masters that can scarcely be overstated.

Quickly emerging in this rich new garden of initiation were the initial Priests and Priestesses of Set. As in the old Church, these individuals were at the nerve center of all interactivity between the Temple as an institution and the I°/II° membership. Each Priest, each Priestess became in effect the “personification” of the Temple of Set to these affiliates. They were living examples of what it really meant to come into being as an awakened child of Set.

Easily the most well-known and flamboyant was William F. Murray of Winnemucca, Nevada, whose affable gregariousness throughout the Church of Satan had first amused, then alarmed the LaVeys. In designing the Temple of Set, I had created the office of Executive Director as chief administrative officer, to complement and counterbalance the High Priest as chief executive officer. Bill slipped into the EDship as naturally and effortlessly as though it were an old pair of Levis. He quickly organized, delegated, and coordinated the Temple’s several organizational services: publications, records, communication networks, finances, calendars, and programs. All this from a modest little white house in Winnemucca, itself a modest little waystop in the middle of the Nevada desert. Indeed a local visitor to Bill’s house would have noticed nothing unremarkable about its Norman Rockwell-homespun decor - unless he happened to be invited into the basement, where the Twilight Zone prevailed: the ED office, a bewildering workshop of implements and artifacts from the mundane to the Lovecraftian, and a ritual chamber with the greatest and wildest assortment of electronic and mechanical special effects I have ever seen. If Priest Beauclerk of Carpathia (Bill’s magical persona) needed the clash of a gong or a lightning-flash outside the [artificial] window, the flick of a hidden solenoid switch beneath the arm of his throne sufficed.

By day Bill was a welfare investigator for the State of Nevada, crisscrossing the desert, scattered small towns, and Indian reservations in his bright yellow Volkswagen “Thing” (a recreation of the World War II Wehrmacht Kübelwagen). Unsurprisingly his visits were not always welcome; he was regularly shot at, as was his house. In time-honored Nevada tradition, I gather that the aim was always deliberately high so as not to actually hurt anyone. Winnemucca’s principal landmark and major claim to fame remained a plaque in front of its sole bank proudly commemorating that Butch Cassidy and his Wild Bunch had robbed it in 1900.

Priest Robert “Jzamon” DeCecco was a cheerful Italian living in Boston, Massachusetts, whose Amon Pylon became the focus of Setian activity in New England as had its Satanic predecessor the Cavern of Amon. Warm, hospitable, and dashing, Jzamon would go on to an enduring presence throughout the Temple as a later Master and member of the Council of Nine.

Dayton, Ohio was home to Priest Thomas and Priestess Colleen Huddleston, also Church veterans, and well-known throughout the Temple for Tom’s experiments with unusual and remarkable musical instruments such as the theremin and the moog. Colleen was a talented painter, whose Setian portraits, composites, and Tarot cards quickly became legendary, and the two of them collaborated in magnificent illuminated calligraphy as well, which they brought to bear upon various ritual working documents and records.

Priestess Jinni Bast of New Jersey and Priest Tom Bari of Pennsylvania were both alumni of New York’s old Lilith Grotto. They went on to introduce the Temple of Set in their respective locales, and Jinni served several years as a member of the Council of Nine.

But easily the most dramatic, charismatic, and creative of the original Priests of Set was Ronald K. Barrett, who a short time before the 1975 disintegration of the Church of Satan had moved from New York City, where he had been a principal personality in the Lilith Grotto, to San Francisco. There he founded his own [aptly-named, as it turned out, being the final Grotto of the Church] Twilight Grotto, which in 1975 became the Anubis Pylon of the Temple of Set.

Ron, or “Anubis” as everyone came to call him, looked as though he had stepped right out of a Frank Frazetta poster: lean, muscular, with a Mephistophelian face that could instantly switch between horror-movie glower and friendly laughter. If the LaVeys had feared Bill Murray for his roughshod-overrunning of communications barriers, they disliked Barrett - particularly once he arrived in San Francisco - for possibly another reason: he was easily as personable, dramatic, and artistically talented a Satanist as Anton himself.

In the new environment of the Temple of Set, Anubis established an early reputation as one of the most serious and dedicated scholars of Egyptian initiation. Introduced to Isha Schwaller de Lubicz’ Her-Bak by two of his Adepts, Lindajean Parrinello (later Reynolds) and Alexandra Sarris, he quickly became focused upon Isha’s and her husband Rene’s “symbolism” approach as the most accurate and effective key to Egyptology, and delved into its study with the same energy that characterized all of his passions.

Most original Setians, as in their Church of Satan past, “didn’t give up their day jobs” while pursuing their initiation. We had all become accustomed to, experienced in, and admittedly resigned to balancing dual identities as ordinary “working stiffs” in conventional society and as Initiates among our fellows behind the closed doors of the sanctuary. Not so Ronald K. Barrett: His journey was complete, uncompromised, and all-consuming. If that meant that he lived in isolation and near-poverty, so be it. Perhaps no occultist since Aleister Crowley’s teacher and Buddhist monk Allan Bennett has exuded such a singular, pure, and driven dedication to achieving his divinity. And, ultimately, he almost did it.

In this the Temple of Set both aided and impeded him. It opened unlimited vistas before him and encouraged him to ravish himself within them; simultaneously it frustrated his desire to take others with him into what was necessarily a unique and personal experience. A Black Magician par excellence he was; a herder of cats he discovered he was not.

Within a year after the Temple’s founding, Barrett decided that the “arid wilderness of steel and stone” that was San Francisco was woefully inadequate for the initiatory environment he deemed essential for himself and his students. He and his companion Adept Ricco Zappitelli looked around for a suitably sacred site and found it atop a wild mountain near the northern California town of Potter Valley. XemSet he named the small plot of land they bought there, and over the next several years, and with the added arms, backs, and perspiration of visiting/volunteering Setians, gradually began to carve it into a magical sanctuary. There was a small cabin for themselves and visitors; there were outdoor meditation areas; there was a winding path up the hill to a hidden ceremonial court suitable for nighttime pageants and magical workings under the stars. Far away from the lights of any city, enveloped by the utter silence of the backwoods, XemSet was indeed a beautiful and magical place, wherein very little of humancraft was either needed or wanted. Nevertheless the tireless Barrett continued to accent it with thrones, standards, portals, and altars, all handwrought and exquisitely painted.

Barrett devoted no less attention to his personal ceremonial and religious attire, which again was all handcrafted to the admiration of other Setians. And at least once with slapstick results: After being Recognized as a Master of the Temple in August 1977, he proudly arrived at a Priesthood dinner in San Jose wearing the blue clerical collar insert to which he was now entitled. Except that he had accented it with blue glitter. Bill Murray glanced at the sparkling item, swished over to him, shook his hand limply, and in his best drag-queen-caricature lisps gushed, “Ron – it’s just you!” The meeting exploded in laughter, and so, after first going beet-red, did the new Master of the Temple.

New Setians continued to enter the Temple in a steady stream, and predominantly these were now individuals who were not long-term Church of Satan alumni. They were on the whole not interested in that organization or in Satanism per se; they were attracted purely to the message and invitation of the Temple of Set, which they saw as a darker, more glamorous and serious alternative to the numerous fluffy-bunny occultisms that had proliferated in the New Age atmosphere of the 1970s. These newcomers didn’t arrive with blank, gullible minds; they were already hardened philosophers who had put conventional wisdom to the test and found it inadequate to deal with the greater realities of existence they had come to confront.

This “second generation” of Setians took the Temple of Set not on its terms, and not on the coattails of any lingering Church of Satan momentum, but on a pragmatic basis. If it proved to indeed facilitate their personal adventure into the Mysteries, they would stay with it. If not, they would continue their search elsewhere.

This rationale was respected, indeed cultivated by the Temple itself, which gradually configured its I° entry degree into what Her-Bak termed a “peristyle” or “courtyard” of mutual acquaintance and evaluation. New Setians I° were given a maximum of two years to qualify for Recognition as Adepts II°; if they did not meet this deadline, their affiliation was discontinued. Two years was not only plenty of time for a reasonably-intelligent individual to develop basic Black Magical skills (which II° Recognition signified); it was also amply sufficient for nonSetians to realize that they were in an incomprehensible or otherwise unsatisfactory environment and thus leave on their own. [This is a policy which the Temple has continued to the present day, generally with mutual benefit.]

In contemplating this memoir I have wondered how best to remember and illustrate the intellectual, initiatory, and organizational contributions and influence of those Setians in our early years who shaped the Temple’s design, outlook, and overall flavor. I could cite personal memories and anecdotes, of course, but this would be necessarily subjective and selective. What I have decided to do instead is to append a selection of representative articles from the Temple’s Scroll of Set newsletter. These will appear as appendices, and are grouped therein corresponding to the chapter(s) of this memoir to which they align in time. See from these founding years Appendices #15-47.

During these same four years I myself was driven by two primary interests where the Temple was concerned: first to design and shape it into the most interesting, efficient, and above all authentic Temple of Set I could envision; and second to complete the Utterance of my Word Xeper. By 1979 I felt that I had accomplished both. The Temple had its Articles of Incorporation, By-Laws, and federal & California state recognitions as a religious institution. The other founding members, most essentially the Magistry and the Priesthood, understood how to operate this machinery smoothly and cooperatively; everyone was enjoying the Temple and initiatoriily profiting from exposure to it.
Where Xeper was concerned, I felt that from my research into both its ancient Egyptian meaning and its modern evolutionary implications, I had indeed explained it both to myself and to others. In my personal case this culminated in my Ipsissimus initiation as recounted in the previous chapter. In the case of other Setians, the influence of Xeper was wonderfully apparent in the strength and diversity of the talent and genius the Temple was clearly awakening in them [of which the aforementioned Scroll articles are just one example].

One of my core concerns was that the Temple of Set establish and maintain its organizational identity beyond any individual; it was not to become a “personality cult” of myself or anyone else. Further, its focus necessarily needed to be on each initiate’s experience, not on the institution itself. Hence my often-invoked metaphor of the Temple of Set as “merely a toolbox” whose tools were available to each Setian to assist in his own, unique initiatory adventure.

In keeping with this, I felt that it was important for the High Priesthood of Set to be established as an office to be held by whichever Setian seemed to be most attuned to it at any particular time. It should not be a lifetime enshrining of any person, as for instance the Roman Catholic Papacy or Anton LaVey’s Satanic High Priesthood.

Thus in 1979 the time appeared right to commence this tradition, and it seemed to me that the appropriate combination of dedication, energy, vision, and responsibility was most conspicuously coalescent in Ronald K. Barrett, as is apparent from a biographical profile of him in the May 1979 issue of the Scroll of Set (Appendix #48). Just as importantly, his own initiation had taken the momentous step of transition from Magister Templi IV° to Magus V°.

On June 22, XII/1977 then-Priest Barrett had performed a GBM working atop his mountaintop retreat which resulted in his awareness of and subsequent focus upon the Egyptian hieroglyphic term Xem (the Xem Working: Appendix #49). In a 11/22/78 letter to the Priesthood of Set I said:

> In III°-65 I mentioned, among other things, that I had some further thinking to do about the ritual held in San Francisco this past spring. At that ritual Magister Ronald K. Barrett formally proposed a new concept embraced by the word Xem, roughly as follows:

> Xem historically has been associated with the ancient Egyptians’ identification of their geographical territory, in much the same way as we use the terms “England”, “France”, etc. Barrett suggests that this use of Xem is erroneous - that in fact it encompasses a far more complex phenomenon. Xem as understood by Barrett refers to the collective initiatory environment of the ancient priesthoods - sort of a “boundary of higher consciousness” rather than a political/geographical border in the profane sense. Xem may have come into vulgar usage as a political/geographic term, of course, and that would account for its subsequent translation by archaeologists.

> But, continues Barrett, Xem possesses additional significance. It is subject to another translation: “the Coming Into Being of the gods”. In this sense it refers to “gods” in the precise sense as “Forms” - derived not from the governing principles of the mechanical cosmos, but from “expansions” and “specializations”, one might say, of the primal non-natural Form of Set.

> This, suggests Barrett, would account for the actual origin of the ancient Egyptian gods other than Set [and perhaps other than HarWer, and other than corrupted, imported gods such as Osiris]. It is not so such that the earliest initiates of the Set-cult “fell away” from that cult to worship natural-animal-headed conventional gods, but rather that certain initiates were able to use their conceptual powers to create other Forms emphasizing certain characteristics. [This would explain the somewhat mystifying statement in the Book of Coming Forth by Night that “all other gods have been created by men”.

> The perfected magician, then, actualizes his or her perfection by the magical act of creating a god or goddess. Presumably there are various ways in which this may be undertaken. The act of creation may be metaphorical (i.e. the definition or introduction of an evolutionary principle) or it may be actual (i.e. the magical genesis of a “higher self” possessing the will and the characteristics of the god/goddess ... for example Aiwass, Aleister Crowley’s “higher self”/“Holy Guardian Angel”).

Magister Barrett had been considering aspects of this theory for some time prior to the spring conclave in San Francisco. I can recall his discussing the basic concept with me during some of my first visits to the Anubis Pylon headquarters in S.F. after the crisis events of 1975 had brought a new focus upon and interest in the “gods of Egypt”. What happened at the spring 1978 conclave was actually twofold: First Barrett felt that the hypothesis had been sufficiently developed to merit its being formally enunciated as a comprehensive theory, and secondly the magical workings of the conclave ritual seemed to substantiate, if not altogether confirm the theory.

A west coast III°+ meeting was scheduled for 11/11-12 in San Francisco and Oakland. A few days prior to the meeting, Barrett inquired if he could meet with me in Santa Barbara to discuss an urgent matter. He was, as it turned out, “obsessed” with the theory, feeling a consuming need to explain it and promulgate it. He asked my interpretation of this obsession and my advice concerning it.

I suggested to him that the elements of his theory, the dynamic essence of his Utterance of the Word Xem, and his compulsion to implement that Word were characteristics of a Magus V°. Consider the following quote from Aleister Crowley’s Magick:

The essential characteristic of the Grade is that its possessor utters a Creative Magical Word, which transforms the planet on which he lives by the installation of new officers to preside over its initiation. This can take place only at an “Equinox of the Gods” at the end of an “Æon”; that is, when the secret formula which expresses the Law of its action becomes outworn and useless to its further development ...

This does not mean that only one man can attain this Grade in any one Æon, so far as the Order is concerned. A man can make personal progress equivalent to that of a “Word of an Æon”; but he will identify himself with the current word and exert his will to establish it, lest he conflict with the work of the Magus who uttered the Word of the Æon in which he is living.

The Magus is preeminently the Master of Magick, that is, his will is entirely free from internal diversion or external opposition; His work is to create a new Universe in accordance with His Will. He is the Master of the Law of Change (Anicca).

Consider further this quote from Liber B vel Magi:

Let Him beware of abstinence from action. For the Curse of His grade is that He must speak Truth, that the Falsehood thereof may enslave the souls of men. Let HIM then utter that without fear, that the Law may be fulfilled. And according to His Original Nature will that law be shapen, so that one may declare gentleness and quietness, being an Hindu; and another fierceness and servility, being a Jew; and yet another ardour and manliness, being an Arab. Yet this matter toucheth the mystery of Incarnation, and is not here to be declared.

Now the grade of a Magister teacheth the Mystery of Sorrow, and the grade of a Magus the Mystery of Change, and the grade of Ipsissimus the Mystery of Selflessness, which is also called the Mystery of Pan.

Let the Magus then contemplate each in turn, raising it to the ultimate power of infinity. Wherein Sorrow is Joy, and Change is Stability, and Selflessness is Self. For the interplay of the parts hath no action upon the whole. And this contemplation shall be performed not by simple meditation - how much less then by reason? - but by the method which shall have been given unto Him in His initiation to the Grade ...

In ritual I explored Barrett’s state of being by means of the Fourth Æthyr of The Vision and The Voice and by means of IV° analysis, for:

By a Magus is this writing made known through the mind of a Magister. The one uttereth clearly, and the other understandeth; yet the Word is falsehood, and the Understanding darkness. And this saying is Of All Truth.

Nevertheless it is written; for there be times of darkness, and this as a lamp therein.
It was then evident to me that Ronald Barrett had in fact Come Into Being as a Magus V° in the precise sense. He and I discussed some of the implications of this:

For one thing, it seemed that his V° was somewhere “in between” the alternatives described by Crowley. His Word was more an evolution of Xeper than a destruction and replacement of it. So it did not seem to either of us that the Æon of Set was to be superseded, but rather that it was to commence a more elaborate stage of development. Nor did Barrett's magical progress simply equate to mine [per Crowley’s second alternative]; he was not merely identifying himself with Xeper but rather Uttering a new Word containing implications beyond Xeper.

Then there were issues bearing directly upon the Temple of Set. Per the By-Laws, of course, a Magus V° Must be confirmed as such by unanimous approval of the Council of Nine. The intent of this provision, as with those relating to other degrees, was to establish orderly analysis of the degree-progress and to safeguard the degree-system against possible abuse.

The defect of the V° provision, as is also the case with the IV° provision, is that - at least in the Temple’s formative years - the Council of Nine includes III° as well as IV° Councillors. The IV° is distinguished from the III° by [among other things] the quality of Understanding in a magical sense ... being a sort of total awareness of the substance and implications of a Word. Hence a IV° Councillor may consider a IV° or V° nomination according to this sort of awareness, while a III° Councillor considers the same question according to inductive/deductive reasoning, i.e. consideration of specific propositions and issues formulated during the Council’s discussion of the nomination.

My original intention was to communicate my V° nomination for Barrett to the Council of Nine in advance of any general discussion within the III°+ as a whole. This notion was preempted by the events of the III°+ ritual at the 11/11-12 meeting in San Francisco, wherein Set came forth to declare the Coming Into Being of Barrett as a Magus.

The events of that ritual have since been discussed by many of the Priesthood who were there, and so it seems appropriate to make the formal nomination of Ronald K. Barrett for the V° to the Council per this III° letter. Perhaps this is also correct from a magical standpoint, since the confirmation of a Magus is a development which will have a major impact upon the entire Priesthood and Temple of Set.

How may the Council evaluate such a nomination? The salient characteristics of a Magus have been defined both here and in other documents of the Temple - such as the “Book of Coming Forth by Night Analysis & Commentary”. Concerning the 11/11 ritual, Councillors may wish to ask the impressions of those who were present: Seago, Sinclair, Sarris, Reynolds, Thomas, Waters, Moffatt, and Zappitelli. And of course the comments of Barrett himself may be sought by any Councillor who wishes to do so. [I understand that Barrett will be preparing a statement of his own for consideration by the Council.]

Unquestionably this is an event of major importance for the Temple and for the Æon. It is also the first occasion on which we have been able to use the deliberative processes for a V° evaluation established under our By-Laws. I am looking forward with the utmost interest to the outcome.

On the South Solstice of 1978 the Council of Nine voted its unanimous approval of Barrett’s Recognition as a Magus V°. During the following year he refined his Word into a series of five “Keys” comprising what he entitled the Book of Opening the Way (Appendices #50-54). Despite this effort, Xem would continue to be criticized for its vagueness as a magical concept, though its essential meaning never seemed all that mysterious [or impractical] to me (Appendix #55).

As discussed in Chapter #6, it was subsequent to the 11/11/78 Priesthood working that I came to realize that my own Task as a Magus had been fulfilled, and that final initiation to the as-yet-nonformalized degree of Ipsissimus now faced me. Coincidentally came a conviction that both Barrett’s V° Task and my henceforth initiatory focus necessitated the conveyance of the High Priesthood of Set. On the Ides of March 1979, when I took the Oath of Ipsissimus, I wrote to the Priesthood:
From Magus Ronald K. Barrett I have just received a copy of the first two Keys of the Book of Opening the Way. I have considered them carefully and would now like to share my thoughts with the Priesthood of Set.

From an account by Priestesses Linda Reynolds and Alexandra Sarris of the Working of November 11, 1978:

Magus Aquino raised his hood and moved before the pentagram, then turned to the Priesthood. Before he spoke, it was clear to all that Set had manifested himself in his High Priest and Magus. In fact Magus Aquino’s face was no longer apparent - there was a darkness within the cowl [later Anubis said that he saw a brief something changing within, but wasn’t sure what]. He turned and very slowly looked at every one of the Priesthood.

Set: “Never before have I stood in the midst of such majesty. The majesty of these young gods and goddesses. You are the Children of Set ... [and he listed the names]. I have lived through the pain of the Æon of Horus, and the pain and pleasure of the Age of Satan, and this is my Æon ... has passed - a bridge ... For my Temple that was dust (?) is dormant (?) no longer. Before me I see the Black Jackal, he who has opened the way for me ... and from the desert ... he who lurked ... And I have raised him up so that all may see.”

What we can remember is the gist of what was said: that first Set spoke as Set and talked about the æons and the Coming Into Being of Anubis, who was the Opener of the Way, and hinted at the coming of something more ...

But it was Ra-en-Set who proclaimed the words that he would nominate Ronald K. Barrett to the Council of Nine as Magus V°. And the new Word is Xem. He also said that “the body is weary” and swayed perilously as if he would fall. “My limbs are brought back together and I am made whole ...” He was supported immediately by NeXbet and Sesheta, who created a circle of energy around him. As he spoke, the Priesthood stretched out their arms to send him energy, and then touched and hugged him with support, care, and great love.

When Set came to Anubis and put his hands around Anubis’ head and called him by the name of Anubis, [he said]: “... What you have seen and what I have spoken ... [a reference to Xem] ... Upon your head, then, do I place my charge. Do not let what has happened to them (the ancient Priesthood) happen again. Do not let Anubis minister to the dead ...”

Then Anubis spoke to the Priesthood: “Two lands ... invisible world ... world of darkness and the world of light ... Xem being fused ... the time of the great fusion. It is rightly written that this is the time of the Coming Into Being of the gods ...”

During the speech Medu felt the gathering of the entities to share in this event, and within their midst, like a pillar of black, was Set, sharing with his Children this night. Anubis also had a sense of there being more than the Priesthood in the room. He also felt a sense of “Here we go ... again!”, and the feeling was optimistic - that after 5,000 years we have the chance to make it.

Later Ra-en-Set said that if this be truth, let it be known. At that point NeXbet sensed before her the grey lady of Maat with her feather, and NeXbet stepped forward and said, “Give me your hand,” and Ra-en-Set raised his left hand. She took it and said that Maat was before him and held a feather for him, for his words were true. Then Ra-en-Set and Anubis clasped hands and stared into one another’s eyes. Anubis had the distinct feeling of being able to speak to Magus Aquino - one Magus to another - on the big things - they have their own level of communication - like a father and grown-up son.

And the scales were balanced.

Anubis turned to the pentagram and said, “The gates have been opened, and they shall not be closed again!”

I myself am not in a position to add to this account of that ritual, because my mind rejects analysis of it, just as it rejects analysis of other rituals in which Ra-en-Set Came Into Being. But I do remember quite well the moment of placing my hands on the shoulders of Anubis, because it was as though some unique “energizing force” passed from myself to him.
Since that time I have felt oddly “uneasy”, as though there were now a magical imbalance in the Temple of Set, and today, as I read the Keys of the Book of Opening the Way, I finally understood why.

I quote from my letter to the II°+ membership of the Church of Satan (6/19/1975):

The ancient Chinese once said that the Emperor obviously held the “Mandate of Heaven” to retain his throne as long as all was well with the country. If things were not going well, it would be assumed that the Mandate had been lost, and thus it became acceptable to replace the Emperor without insulting the throne or the country. As I employ the term, the “Infernal Mandate” is carried by whoever best represents the true will of the Prince of Darkness at a given point of time. The new organization will be designed so that it will be possible to reassign this Mandate where it is believed appropriate without scrapping the entire organizational machinery.

After reading and considering the initial Keys of the Book of Opening the Way, I am convinced that the “Infernal Mandate” has now passed. Accordingly I now formally request the Council of Nine to entrust the High Priesthood of Set to Magus Ronald K. Barrett. Xeper has been Uttered, and it is now the time for the Coming Into Being of Xem.

As High Priest since June of 1975, I have seen the Temple of Set grow from magical and philosophical infancy to become an institution the like of which has not been known on this planet since the days of ancient Xem. We have explored the potential of our kind to an almost inconceivable degree, and we have understood the forces of existence in this universe with crystal clarity. We have taken the pitiful fragments of the ancient knowledge which came to us through the crucible of the Age of Satan, and we have reforged them, like Siegfried's sword, into the essence of their original power. We have also come to know one another with extraordinary empathy, seeing past the vehicles of our earthly flesh to the Black Flame that burns within us. All these things and more we have done, and now they have brought us to this new Opening of the Way.

What are my own feelings upon this realization? I sense only a quiet pleasure at having, as I understand it, fulfilled the Task given to me by the Book of Coming Forth by Night; and a great anticipation concerning what will now come into being. I will of course remain an active initiate and will do what may be within my power to further the Æon; and no doubt you will probably continue to be pestered from time to time with my singular opinions. But the impetus of the Æon of Set is now in the care of another Magus. And so another magical question seems to be answered; for I suspect that the “nineteen parts of the Word” which eluded me are now commencing to come into being as the Book of Opening the Way.57

To all of you, the Priesthood of Set, there are no words that I can say to express the love and respect in which I hold you, as well as the honor it has been to serve as High Priest. We shall understand such things, I am certain, without further comment.

I, Ra-en-Set, lift up my voice and swear that I myself have been brought hither by Set, the Prince of Darkness. After that I had attained unto the Knowledge and Conversation of him by virtue of the Diabolistic, and of this Ritual that I bestow upon Setians my fellows, and most of his great love that he beareth to me, yea, verily, he led me to the Age of Satan; he bade me fling away all that I had and all that I was; and he forsook me in that hour. But when I came beyond the Age of Satan, to be reborn on the North Solstice X, then came he unto me by the Book of Coming Forth by Night. Also he made me a Magus, speaking through Xeper, the Word of the new Æon, the Æon of Set. Thus he fulfilled my will to bring full freedom to his gifted race.

Yea, he wrought also in me a work of wonder beyond this, but in this matter I as sworn to hold my peace.58

57 In this I was mistaken on two counts: The Book of Opening the Way ceased with five Keys, and I subsequently undertook and completed the Word of Set working based on John Dee's original “Enochian” manuscripts.

58 These last three paragraphs were inspired by a reflection of Aleister Crowley's concerning his own “knowledge and conversation of his Holy Guardian Angel [Aiwass]” and the initiatory adventure which ultimately led him to his own initiation as an Ipsissimus (10)=[1]. It is appended to Liber Samekh in the 1973-restored edition of Magick.
The Council of Nine and Priesthood of Set subsequently took up the question of a formal VI° within the initiatory structure of the Temple of Set, decided that it was appropriate, and amended the By-Laws accordingly. Both the succession of the High Priesthood and my formal VI° Recognition occurred at the Temple of Set’s first International Conclave (Set-1), held that summer as recounted in the August 1979 Scroll of Set:

Set-I International Conclave is Accomplished
- by Constance Moffatt II°

“A major step in the evolution of the Temple of Set as a whole, something that has been a long time in the coming, something we all felt instinctively was vital, has been accomplished,” stated Magus Ronald K. Barrett, High Priest, during an interview following the conclusion of Set-I, held in Windsor, Canada July 12-15, 1979.

“A bond has been established in helping to connect all of the Elect so that there is no separation of purpose and direction. In the two workings I felt a very strong drive to unite the Order of Set (III°+) with an essence that we all knew was there, but when geographically separated seems difficult at times to feel,” continued Magus Barrett. “During the Conclave working there was a new bond of understanding extended from the Order of Set to the lay membership. The obvious advantages of the Conclave are the getting to know the different Initiates on an individual basis. Thus when we see a name in the Scroll or in correspondence, we can connect the essence of the individual to that name. A deeper sense of trust and love, that could not have occurred by any other means than the Conclave, has begun due to the personal contact and interrelations with our Setian brothers and sisters.

“Another major advantage of the Conclave is the fact that we have witnessed the Temple of Set function on both its administrative and magical raison d’etre. The lay membership has been able to see the various aspects of the Order of Set in motion, such as the Council of Nine and the High Priest determining policy change in keeping with the growth of the Æon, as well as observing the Recognition - the Coming into Being of a new Master of the Temple, Magister Lynn Norton.

“Initiates, normally scattered and isolated throughout various parts of the continent, had the opportunity to experience, in rituals, the essential, magical core which is, of course, communication with the Set-entity. This witnessing should open doorways for them into their own magical evolution in terms of personal relationship with the Prince of Darkness.

“The conclave had a variety of types of experiences, ranging from highly-charged ritual atmosphere to fun & laughter and everything in between. It is really too soon to be able to assess any but the obvious effects that Set-I will have upon the Temple of Set. Perhaps at this early stage, though, it can be summarized by saying: ‘Set, we have gathered your great nobles unto you, and we have felt you pass near to us.’”

The Ipsissimus Has Evolved
- by Robert H. Moffatt III°

What is an Ipsissimus? The Collins Latin Gem Dictionary translates it as “His very own self”. The ending “-issimus” is grammatically the superlative degree of “ipse”, meaning “self”; or closer to Latin thought “he who is himself the most”. There is no concise English equivalent to “Ipsissimus”. The Temple of Set, however, has Recognized that Michael A. Aquino is an Ipsissimus.

High Priest Ronald K. Barrett hailed this Recognition under the stars on the 30th of June XIV as a highlight to the III°+ working at XemSet, and again at the opening of the Set-I Conclave by adding to the costume of the Exalted Man a medallion made of a disc of solid gold with a sterling silver pentagram prominently overlaid. The beautiful piece was paid for by the Priesthood and remains the property of the Temple of Set.

These events were charged with an indescribable degree of emotion that could not be augmented by any amount of fanfare or ceremony.

59 Insofar as the Understanding of the Masters of the Temple extends to the existence, if not the essence of Ipsissimus.
The Ipsissimus was obviously deeply touched and at a loss for words to express his emotions at the moment. "There are some experiences which cannot be described in words," he said slowly. "This medallion is not only ceremonial. It is not beautiful solely for the metals and craft which compose it. It is meaningful because of the knowledge and the love with which the Temple has seen fit to bestow it. I will never cease to respect it thus, and after my time has passed, it will be returned to the Temple. The very ability of the Temple to Recognize such a degree evidences our evolution since 1975. The work of the Temple has been like the splitting of the atom, the opening of a whole sphere of existence, an arrival at intellectual activity on the level of Plato.

“For myself the degree of Ipsissimus is an initiatory state of being that is very personal. No matter what you do, no matter where you go, whom you know, what success or failure you experience - that part of yourself you bring out through being, becoming - the thing called ‘initiation’ - makes a difference in you, not as an animal but as an intelligence unique in the universe.

“This is true divinity. The recognition of this makes us a new breed of atomic scientist. But this is not like a new scientific discovery. This Æon is alive!”

Magus Barrett read the new By-Laws providing for the VI° and told of one of his workings several months back when he heard Michael Aquino hailed as “the Exalted One, to be cherished - a living symbol for us all”.

Before the medallion presentation and after the High Priest had opened the conclave, Ipsissimus Aquino had remarked that: “The changeover of High Priests highlights this conclave. What comes out here will be a foundation for the future. John Fowles’ reaction to the cliché ‘No man is an island’, was ‘Rubbish! Each man is an island.’ We are like returning comets, gods and goddesses, come hence to drink of each other’s universes in more vivid color. Here there are no leaders, no followers. Everyone is a star.”

Ronald K. Barrett’s High Priesthood, which was to continue for the next two years, was one of the most intensive, experimental, inspiring, and controversial experiences for the Temple of Set. This revolved around two passions of his: the exploration and promulgation of his V° Word Xem and the climate of initiatory dedication and advancement within the Temple. He saw the two as interrelated, and his own office as High Priest a responsibility to advance them.

Barrett would later be [and still is] criticized for being intolerant and authoritarian: a High Priest who used his office to create and enforce a sort of “initiatory totalitarianism” in contrast to the individual-initiative climate characterizing the Temple previously and subsequently. I think this misses the mark in two respects. First, his intentions were altruistic and heartfelt; he wished nothing but to improve the Temple and the initiatory validity of each Setian. Secondly, the Temple was then, as it continues today, very much an experiment-in-progress. At any one moment one could not say how the current mix of ideas might work out, and the general practice has been to give them their best opportunity for success. So it was with both Barrett and the other Setians around him.

Barrett’s first major policy change was announced in the April 1980 Scroll of Set:

Lay Member Renewals Now Require Endorsement
- by Ronald K. Barrett V°, High Priest

If you are I° or II°, you may have noticed recently an attempt by your III° pyramid officials to open communications with you. So that you will better understand why, let’s take a look at the Temple of Set communications pyramid and its functions.

The pyramid came into being as the answer to the question of how the Temple of Set can best serve the needs of Initiates both personally and comprehensively. While this does not mean that we have [even remotely] adopted a spoonfeeding technique of initiation, it does mean that initiatory guidance will be available on a more individual basis to those Initiates who truly apply themselves.

Through the pyramid the I°/II° have direct access to a Priest or Priestess of Set who is willing and able to assist them in finding answers to questions about magic, the Temple of Set, etc. The Temple will also have a better perspective of the entire membership [even isolated Setians], and this will help in making due Recognitions and in assessing the progress and needs of aspiring Setians. The design of the pyramid ensures that everyone is heard and informed according to his/her initiatory status and ability to understand. And of course the pyramid will necessarily clear out the deadwood.

The pyramid requires the cooperation and participation of every member of the Temple of Set. For a III° to assist or guide any lay Initiate, there must be some communication between the two. It must be realized, however, that it is the responsibility of the I°/II° to initiate and then maintain this communication. The Priesthood is quite willing to respond, but no III° is going to waste valuable time and effort trying to prod the complacent or apathetic. Those who receive guidance from the Priesthood will be those who are actively working toward magical evolution.

It is assumed that every Setian desires to aspire to the heights of his initiatory potential, or he would not be a member of the Temple of Set. Not one of our Setian degrees is Recognized as the end of magical evolution, and therefore any sense of “having made it” is false. The end of any phase of initiation is merely the beginning of another, thus “creation and change are exalted above rest and preservation”.

If one understands this, one should also understand why inactivity is intolerable in the Temple. To allow an individual who has succumbed to the siren of contentment and do-nothingness to enter or to remain among us would indicate that the Temple of Set had placed emphasis on quantity rather than quality, and that most certainly is not true. Instead it is most important to know and understand the above, because the pyramid is now in effect, and with the pyramid comes the elimination of any trace of stasis together with the requirement of demonstrated effort to evolve.

This does not mean that all Setians must become gods overnight, or that flags should be waved every time a magical insight is had, or that a letter a day keeps an expulsion away. It does mean that every Initiate must actively engage in Xeper, and to do so will require some occasional [at least] guidance, point of reference, and higher perspective which are available from the Priesthood.

Keeping in mind that magical/philosophical discussion is filtered as appropriate to each degree, it seems only logical that all Setian Initiates should desire Recognition if for no other reason than to have access to higher information. As stated above, the desire for personal evolution is already assumed through affiliation with the Temple. To make a true Recognition, however, the Priesthood must have an ongoing knowledge of the evolutionary progress of the individual concerned, and this can occur only through contact whether that contact is through letters, Pylon meetings, or private discussions.

A I° has basically two years to Become and to be Recognized Adept II°. This means that within two years the I° must become demonstrably knowledgeable and skilled in the White magical arts. If valid reasons or circumstances prevent a I° from accomplishing this, then an extension beyond the two-year period may be granted [pending approval of the III° pyramid official], but this will be a true exception and not the rule. Again, for Recognition to occur, the Setian I° will have to establish an initiatory relationship with his/her pyramid officials.

A variation on this same principle applies to II°s. Recognition to the III° depends initially upon two factors: (1) the individual Adept’s evolutionary quest into the Realm of Darkness, and (2) the Gift of Set being given to the magician by Set himself. There is no time-factor imposed during which this must occur, however, so a magician can remain II° indefinitely and still remain a member of the Temple of Set, so long as that same magician can demonstrate that he/she is working toward continuous magical growth and mental evolution (Xeper). The keys here are will, aspiration, and application. Remember that a magician is one who works magic, and if one is not working magic, then one is not a magician/Adept. In short, the red medallion is no license to relax.

Only a Master of the Temple can Recognize that an Adept has “Come Into Being” as a Priest or Priestess of Set, but II°s are assigned to III°s (not IV°s) in the pyramid. The only way that an Adept can be Recognized to the Priesthood is through the intuitive recommendation of the III°s to their own assigned Masters. It only makes sense that if the II° does not communicate what is going on inside of him to his III°s, it is highly unlikely that any evolution is going to be noticed.

Another reason for I°/II°s to keep in touch with the Priesthood and to remain active in their efforts to evolve concerns the annual renewal. Let it be emphasized again that the Temple of Set is progressive, evolutionary, and anti-static. All Setians who are active-status members of the Temple are truly “active-status” or they are not Setian. Everyone who joins the Temple of Set joins it 100%, and that includes the Temple’s creative and changing motion. Anyone who has joined for “kicks”, or for social reasons, or on a whim has joined for the wrong reasons. No one will remain a member who does nothing, and if there are any among us who have joined for the wrong reasons, or are doing nothing, the pyramid will very soon remedy that. This is because, with the now effective pyramid, the I°/II° will be expected to produce appropriate evidence that they are aspiring to Xeper forthrightly, or they will not be permitted to renew their membership. The Executive Director has been instructed that, effective immediately, renewals will be accepted from I°/II°s only when that renewal has been endorsed by the representative pyramid officials. Special slips will be sent to the appropriate officials at the same time that the gold renewal slips are mailed to the members whose renewal time is approaching.

Obviously any official who is asked to endorse a I°/II° is going to want some valid evidence that the member is worthy of that endorsement, but it will be the responsibility of the lay member to provide that evidence - not the responsibility of the official to “dig it out”.

Another important point: When an official of the Temple takes the time and effort to sit down and write out a letter that requires an answer, it’s safe to say that the letter was not written just because someone needed some finger exercises. There is a perfectly good reason for such a letter, even though it may not be immediately apparent to the recipient. That being the case, all lay members will be expected to respond to correspondence which they receive from Temple officials. It’s the courteous, respectful, and responsible thing to do.

To summarize, let me say that the pyramid is a tool of great precision and utility to the Temple of Set and its entire membership. It ensures that every Setian has access to as much initiatory guidance as he or she can possibly use. Through its use, the pyramid gives the Temple an accurate view of itself so that no strength or weakness goes unnoticed. The pyramid also serves to filter out the lazy, the idly curious, the incompetent, and any other kind of deadwood. In this way we may look upon each other with a profound pride and respect in knowing that every Setian among us is aiding in the forward thrust toward Xem.

Any questions that there might be regarding the Temple of Set pyramid should be directed to your assigned officials, who will be only glad to answer them for you.

I think the pyramid is a great thing, and I think you’re going to appreciate it too - so “go for it”! Xeper ir Xem.

The “pyramid” to which Barrett refers here had originally been conceived by Executive Director William F. Murray as a way of ensuring efficient initiatory dialogue within the Temple. The idea was that each Setian would be assigned one contact of a higher degree and two or more of a lower degree. They would be expected to keep at least occasionally in touch, and to serve as “first resources” in cases of questions & answers on Temple matters. Bill’s good intentions and meticulous administration of the pyramid notwithstanding, it was not much utilized in an atmosphere in which individuals went right on communicating [or not] as the direction and mood moved them.

By tying annual membership renewal to endorsement by one’s pyramid-senior, Barrett sought to force it to function as intended, force each junior-contact to do and be able to report some personal initiatory progress, and force each senior-contact to devote some attention and guidance to juniors. Not an unreasonable or oppressive set of expectations, it seemed; what no one anticipated was the lack of response to it in practice, which immediately began to reduce membership renewals.

Also evident in this article, though not generally perceived at the time, was Barrett’s re-conceptualization of all of the initiatory degrees as a continuous I°-V° “ladder” up which each Setian was expected to climb. Pre- and post-Barrett the I° was considered to be an initial-exposure/mutual evaluation degree, the II° a recognition of full suitability as a Setian and competence as an adept Black Magician, the III° as a uniquely-occurring metaphysical relationship between some Setians and Set, and the IV°+ as specialized variations of the III°. Under this original system, it was expected that most Setians attaining the II° would remain there indefinitely, with of course limitless opportunity to exercise and extend their “Adeptitude”. Barrett saw this as simply too vague; he wanted a more structured measured progress of personal progress, so he chose to redefine the numbered-degrees accordingly. Such a redefinition was not formally announced as such, nor clearly/uniformly perceived throughout the Temple then or later in Barrett’s tenure, and this confusion proved to be at the root of much of the later stress.

On July 19-22, 1980 the Temple’s Second International Conclave (Set-2) was convoked atop the XemSet mountain in northern California. Every bit as productive and popular as its predecessor, Set-2 generated several noteworthy articles in the August 1980 Scroll of Set, reprinted here as Appendix #56. But it was a year later, at the Set-3 Conclave in San Francisco, that Barrett introduced his new membership and degree policies. As recounted in the July 1981 Scroll of Set:

AlXemical Definition of Setian I° & II° to be Ensured

- by Ronald K. Barrett V°, High Priest

Up to now the qualifications for recognizing a Setian I° to Adept II° have been somewhat non-specific. They were primarily based on the Temple’s endorsement of a Setian’s membership by observing individual motivation as well as through observed “Elect” potential.

In my efforts to guide the Elect to Xem, I have become increasingly aware that the magical expertise and understanding of several II°s has been insufficient to comprehend/accomplish the work which lies ahead of us. Awhile back and in response to this awareness, I introduced “Definition by Degree”, which redefined each of our initiatory degrees as appropriate to Xeper ir Xem. Response to this was positive, as was response to the reactivation and emphasis on the Pyramid Project.

Now that these are basically understood and active, it is time to formalize an actual policy to ensure proper magical initiation and evolution appropriate to the work under the current magical formula. This new policy is designed to maximize the magical education and skill of each I° initiate to the peaks of individual potential and ability. This policy (henceforward incorporated into and called “Definition by Degree”) enforces and ensures the alXemical definition and purpose of Setian I° and Adept II°.

Setian I°:

The individual holding the I° is one who has entered the Setian Temple of initiation. A Setian of any Temple degree is an individual who is aspiring to the knowledge of Set and to becoming a god in his own right, and the I° is at the first stage of this process which is called Xeper ir Xem. This process, however, will not just “occur”. It must be willed, and the degree of will used will determine both the rate and extent of this unique evolution. The will of which I write is magical will, and is not merely wishful thinking, ambition, or even aspiration by themselves. It is a force of immense power, and its mastery must make of it an exacting science as well as a fine art.

The I° is a phase of initiation during which the Setian must learn magical theory and practice, must gain a wide spectrum of knowledge and influence in as many areas of his life as possible, and must become a true master of will. When the Setian has become such a master of the magical will, he will have an understanding of the Word of the Æon of Horus, which is “The-lema”. He will embody the principle of “Do What Thou Wilt”, for this is the whole of the law of the I°.

Adept II°:

One who has mastered the magical will is then qualified to be Recognized as Adept: one who is an expert, a master of an art. A master of a specific art is in a position to apply his skills and understanding in a multitude of ways including experimentation, invention of new techniques, exploration etc.; and all because he has the necessary knowledge/ability to use the principles involved.

A true master is far more than a technician; he is an artist. Anyone can learn to paint-by-numbers but only a true artist can produce a masterpiece. This is no less true in the magical arts, and for this reason the Word governing the II° is “Indulgence” - just as it was the Word of the Age of Satan. Only a master can fully indulge in the whole of whatever art he has mastered, and only an Adept can fully indulge in the magical arts. Further only those who are able to explore the far reaches of magic are able to open the Gates to the Dark Realm and to fully master the Black Flame.

Army of Adepts:

The Army of Adepts will be composed of masters of the magical arts (II°s) in the first stages of guardianship of the Æon of Set and the oncoming Æon of Xem. It is these Adepts who will wield their skills to protect the new ones who are even now coming into being.

This is not an army in the normal sense of the word, but rather a force of magical beings united in the purpose of guarding the higher aspects of initiation. None may pass by without Becoming.

Revised Qualifications for Recognition to II°

- by Ronald K. Barrett V°, High Priest

The new policy: To make a reality of all this, it is necessary to revise the qualifications for Recognition to II°.

The first new qualification will come through a required reading list. This list is made up of carefully-selected books which will offer the Initiate a wide variety of magical information. The information acquired from this list is not only useful but necessary for successful initiation within the Temple of Set. For this reason and effective immediately, no Recognition of a Setian I° as an Adept II° will occur prior to the Setian’s having read and digested every book on the list.

In addition to the required reading list, a recommended reading list has also been prepared to cover a wide range of subjects which either directly or indirectly aids magical initiation. This list is intended to complement the required list while leaving the I° the option to pursue the varied subjects according to individual interest and initiative.

Since the recommended list contains no claim to being a complete list covering all subjects of interest, Setians should feel free to extend their studies beyond the list. If a text not included on either list is found to be of particular worth, I suggest that the text(s) be brought to the attention of the entire Temple of Set via the Scroll or through Pyramid officials.

Testing will also become a necessary part of the new II° Recognition process, and will cover both information that the Setian should gain and practical application of that acquired knowledge. Here is how the testing and resulting Recognition will work:

When a Setian I° is felt to be adept in the magical arts, an appropriate official will discuss the matter of administering the test with the I°. If the Setian desires to take the test, it will be arranged. Testing will not be administered under any circumstances until the entire required reading list has been studied by the I°.

Under the new policy the I° may also present himself to an appropriate Pyramid official and ask that the test be administered. The decision on the request will be made by the official.

The written test will be extensive and will include (a) multiple-choice questions, (b) essay questions, (c) fill-in questions, and (d) essays on various subjects. The test will contain mostly questions taken from the required reading list, but it will also contain questions taken from books on the recommended list - at least one question from each book. This will be primarily to determine the personal initiative of the I° to study/learn beyond just what is required.

Only when the Setian passes the written test will the next part of the test be taken. The second part of the test will be to determine the Setian’s practical magical abilities, and will include written construction of at least three different types of rituals and actual performance of no fewer than two of these rituals in the presence of an evaluating Temple official. The official will judge (a) the overall effectiveness of the ritual, (b) the display of magical expertise, and (c) the actual application of valid magical principles. The written rituals will be submitted prior to performance of the rituals for evaluation, and so the official will know what to expect.

A fee of $10 will be charged for testing to cover the expense of the paperwork involved and to cover the cost of the red Pentagram of Set medallion. If the test is failed, the cost of the medallion will be returned. Copies of the test will be mailed by the Setian to both Pyramid officials for grading.

When the test has been passed, the testing official(s) will make the final decision of Recognition based on the personal qualities of the Setian, including attitude, initiative, lifestyle, etc. Following this final evaluation, the Recognition may occur as prescribed in the Temple By-Laws.
The new Adept II° will then be truly qualified to proudly bear the title of Adept, master of the magical arts, and to wear the red Pentagram medallion as exactly what it symbolizes. The Adept will also then be ready to begin the next phase of personal initiation.

To be fair, and in order that the II° does not have a double standard, all currently-Recognized II°s will likewise be expected to undergo this testing process [without fee]. Although this new program is in effect as of this date, currently-Recognized II°s will be given until the South Solstice XVI to prepare for testing, which must occur at some time between then and the Vernal Equinox XVII. Adepts who pass the test will bear a new mark of distinction and honor. Those who do not pass, or who do not take the test by the deadline date, will be returned to I° status until such time as they can meet the qualifications prescribed in this new policy.

Testing already Recognized II°s is also necessary because of the next part of the new policy, which involves the Pyramid Project.

Immediately after Vernal Equinox XVII, the Executive Director will release a new Pyramid roster which will assign II°s as magical advisors to I°s. This advisory capacity is only for the sake of assisting I° Initiates to become adept in magic, and carries no official Temple of Set authority. It does, however, give an opportunity for II°s to assume some degree of responsibility, and to exercise the full scope of their knowledge. From this perspective it now becomes quite feasible for II°s to form and lead Pylons [as prescribed in the Ruby Tablet of Set] if a II° desires to do so.

If a II° magical advisor feels one of his assigned I°s has become qualified for possible II° Recognition, the II° should bring the Setian to the attention of the appropriate official, who will in turn determine whether or not to administer the testing process. Magical advisors might also be consulted by the Pyramid officials in making annual renewal evaluations of I°s.

Consider with me now the caliber of magical Initiates that shall result from this new policy, tough as it is. We can easily predict a new measure of strength rising into the Elect of Set which will benefit us all in our work to Xeper ir Xem. Magical evolution is the fundamental process through which Xeper can occur. We shall behold upon the path to Xem magicians whose beings are magical - not merely beings who do rituals. Of such beings are the seeds of the gods to come. Listen. Listen very closely, and you can hear them breathing all around you.

In theory there was something to be said for Barrett’s new approach to II° Recognition. He was concerned that [at least some] Setians I° were being Recognized as Adepts II° without really becoming knowledgeable in and accomplished in the application of magic. By instituting a literary study curriculum (Appendix #57) and requiring the passing of a written test based upon it, he thought to solve this problem. But complications and confusion soon arose. Many of the required [and recommended] books were expensive and/or unavailable. The books were not mutually-supportive and, with few exceptions, were not designed as instructional textbooks. Some were scientific and carefully-argued; others were speculative and occasionally incoherent.

Hence a Setian I°, even if managing to acquire the required books, was at something of a loss as to what he was expected to glean from them, much less to apply it. Existing Adepts or Priests would not be of much help here, since none of them had been subjected to this new curriculum or passed a test based upon it.

Barrett’s solution to these impediments was characteristically methodical: He would grade all of the tests himself, and he would require existing Adepts II° to take the test as well. If they failed it, they would be returned to I° until they passed it.

Over the next eight months no one passed the test. On 3/8/1982 a frustrated Barrett wrote to the Priesthood:

There seems to be some confusion within the Priesthood regarding the test, and so I would like to take some time to clear up the confusion so that we can get back to the reason for its existence, i.e. magical initiation.

At the Set-3 Conclave I formally announced that the infamous [now] test was to be regarded as policy for Recognizing a Setian as II°. O.K., that seemed to be understood by all present and then later by all recipients of the Scroll. So well received was the new policy that the Priesthood III° committed itself [in front of the entire membership attending] to taking it also, by saying that it would need to be proficient in the same knowledge that it requires for Setian Adepts.

So I worked and worked for four months putting together a magical test that would be the envy of every magical order/coven/society/system of the 20th Century CE. I carried the damned thing to my job, read and thought and took notes everywhere - all the while trying to cover as much significant & comprehensive ground as was reasonable and necessary. By All Hallow’s it was all but done and, then out it went for circulation to the Priesthood.

Now I was hot to get it out because I wanted the Priesthood to have time to take it and be finished with it before the Adepts’ tests started coming in for evaluation around Vernal Equinox of this year. Then it occured to me that your own tests, evaluated and commented upon by me, when returned would be an excellent guide for you to use in evaluating the tests over which you would be officiating. Then the Magick - Not Without Tears began to rain on the test. It is now less than three weeks until Equinox and not one III° has sent in the test for evaluation. This is in spite of the fact that you have had it since November 1981.

And then the real confusion set it in a tizzy. Everyone (except a few concerned II°s) forgot that testing was to occur between the South Solstice 1981 and the Vernal Equinox 1982, which is the deadline for already-Recognized Adepts. That deadline means that the test must be in our hands and completed for evaluation. Per my instructions that went out with the test, the allotted time for taking the test is 90 days, and 90 days before the Vernal Equinox is the South Solstice!

So why is it that some II°s have only recently received their tests, while others still do not have them? Granted I am partly at fault for not mapping out the exact procedure of whether the Adepts should ask for the test or whether it should just be sent to them. My intention was that it just be sent in time for them to start on the Solstice, and the confusion over this was only made known to me ten days ago. So why didn’t someone ask?

Anyway what it boils down to is that you were evidently waiting for them, and they were waiting on you; and now I am stuck resolving the problem. So here is how I am going to resolve the entire problem:

(1) Except in very unique instances (such as I have already been met with), the deadline still holds. Any II° who was too unconcerned to ask for the test or at least to question you and who now does not have enough time to complete the test, must send in what he has completed. No special allowance will be made in evaluation, and if someone fails, he will be reduced to Setian I°.

(2) All III°s who have II°s will instruct them to send their tests directly to me, postmarked no later than midnight 3/20/82. I will personally evaluate each test and then return it to the III° official who issued the test for either continued testing or for reduction to I°.

(3) Since we all agreed that the test was such a good idea [and it is], and since we agreed that all members of the Priesthood should be able to discuss the information therein, i.e. have knowledge of White Magic, magical symbolism, and magically-related subjects, I am now issuing the directive that all members of the Priesthood III° must complete and pass the test by 4/15/82. Failure to comply with this directive will be in direct violation of §5.01 of the Temple of Set By-Laws. While it may seem like Anubis is being unnecessarily rigid about this, remember that I have a rather awesome responsibility to guide the Elect to Xem. Neither Set nor I take it lightly (no pun), so if it is getting too tough, maybe it’s time to reconsider your priorities and Path. If a written test is too much for you, I can guarantee you'll never accomplish the Great Work. Q.E.D.

On that happy note, I will close for now, but with the promise that you will soon be hearing from me again with - you guessed it - a brand new policy. And yes, I do other things than sit around dreaming up new policies. For instance I ... I ... er ... uh ... and then ... or ... Well anyway ...
Whatever additional new policy Barrett may have had in mind, he evidently thought better of it, and suddenly, on 5/31/82, sent the Priesthood a brief letter resigning the High Priesthood, the Priesthood, and the Temple of Set; and recommending Magus Lynn Norton as his successor. He concluded:

Please honor my desire for an honorable, quiet, graceful, and quick exit by not attempting to contact me, as it will only be futile, since I am absolutely resolved about this course of action. I am equally resolved not to discuss this further than saying, “This is my will!”

To the entire Temple of Set, including myself, this came as a complete surprise and shock. On 6/1/82 the Council of Nine unanimously voted me back into the High Priesthood to deal with the situation, and on 6/10/82 I sent a letter to all Setians with my initial thoughts (Appendix #58).

Indeed since relinquishing the High Priesthood to Barrett in 1979, I had largely retired from active involvement in Temple affairs - both because I didn’t want to “step on the new High Priest’s feet” and because I was immersed in two major research projects: my Ph.D. dissertation for the University of California and my memoir/history The Church of Satan. So I had not been paying much attention to Barrett’s drastic new policies or their effects upon the membership until 6/1/82, when I suddenly found myself once again in the High Priesthood and trying to get a grip on the situation.

In his resignation letter Barrett had recommended Magus Lynn A. Norton as his successor to the High Priesthood. Norton had been Recognized to the V° by Barrett at the Set-3 Conclave upon his Utterance of the Word Per-t during the main working. It would, he promised, be explained in detail at the next (Set-4) Conclave beginning 7/1/82 in San Francisco.

On 6/1 & 6/3 I telephoned Norton in Michigan to discuss the High Priesthood with him. I saw no reason not to go along with Barrett’s recommendation, particularly since Norton was the Temple’s newest, and presumably most “current” Magus V°. However, I said, I was concerned about how Barrett had arbitrarily revised Temple administrative structures and procedures, as well as the degree-system itself. Before passing along the High Priesthood again, I first wanted to get things stabilized, and to propose revisions to the By-Laws to prevent a future “runaway High Priest” recurrence.

What it took me a little longer to realize was that Norton liked Barrett’s stringent and autocratic revisions just fine, and indeed was counting on them to be there for his own use upon becoming High Priest. As a result of this the imminent Set-4 Conclave turned into a veritable soap opera of maneuverings attempting to remove me from the High Priesthood and install Norton in it before the By-Laws, or any of Barrett’s High Priest policies, could be changed. In the August 1982 Scroll I summarized the surprising, traumatic, and exhausting outcome (Appendix #59).

What was the extended aftermath of Ronald K. Barrett’s High Priesthood? Initially a great shock to the Temple, which in the last year before the Set-4 Conclave had almost disintegrated from several hundred Initiates to a mere 31. Several of the Temple’s most senior, veteran, and accomplished Initiates had either resigned in protest against Barrett’s policies, been expelled by him, or resigned/were expelled during the stress, confusion, emotional pain, and disillusionment surrounding Set-4. Among the departed [in various of these categories] were Masters Margart Wendall, Linda Thomas, Dale Seago, Lynn Norton; Priests/Priestesses Colleen Huddleston, Linda Reynolds, Alexandra Sarris, Ricco Zapitelli, Robert Brink, Corey Cole, Philp Folkler, Amber Seago, Michael Waters, and Alan Sturrock. Except in terms of “experience and lessons learned”, the Temple of Set... was smaller and weaker than at any other time in its history.

Those of us who survived and remained were determined to rebuild the Temple, and this time to expand and strengthen its By-Laws to prevent such a disaster from recurring. How we went about that is the subject of the next chapter.
Chapter 8: Remanifestation

The fall of 1982 saw the Temple of Set catching its breath after the series of surprises and shocks accompanying the end of Ronald K. Barrett’s High Priesthood. Much as in the summer of 1975, I sensed curious eyes on me as once-again High Priest: What was I going to do now? In a 10/5/1982 letter to the Priesthood, I said:

I have done quite a bit of reflection on the phenomenon of the Temple of Set recently. My conclusion is that it is high time for us to get our shit together. We have spent seventeen years generating sane really good, creative, sophisticated, and conceptually advanced material in a wide variety of forms and contexts. It is far better than anything the “outside worlds” of academia, the occult, conventional religions, and/or conventional philosophies have to offer. In fact it is so damned advanced that I am still astonished at it every time I ponder it.

Its one defect is that it is still largely fragmented and disorganized. We need to clean it up, polish it, integrate, evaluate, and interrelate it. Then, as we really begin to get it together, we need to apply it in an extremely intelligent and evolutionary manner. [For you “old-timers”, this is what I was getting at in very rudimentary way in my original concepts of Setamorphosis; see relevant III° letters from my original High Priesthood]

The Church of Satan project and the Jeweled Tablets of Set project are all aspects of this “bringing together” of the significance of the Temple and Æon of Set. If we do this successfully, the results will be nothing short of titanic. If we drop the ball without doing it, it’s kind of like flying the Enterprise on impulse power: It’s O.K. as far as it goes, but it just isn’t the same as warp drive!

As you can see from something like our reading list, the scope of the Temple and Æon goes far, far beyond what is generally considered “the occult”. It reaches out to the most ambitious frontiers of existence - and aspires to go beyond. This is why I am so disappointed and frankly contemptuous of those who tried to relegate the Temple to an introverted, inconsequential, and incoherent little pageant concerned only with Aleister Crowley, Tarot cards, and Her-Bak. I am fond of all three subjects myself - but in proportion and only insofar as they contribute to the far greater magical and philosophical reach that is the true justification and glory of the Temple of Set.

A few days ago Lilith Sinclair and I spent a most interesting evening with an old friend, Dr. Richard Sutter, whom you know as “Imperial General Tharrud Terclis, STF” in The Dark Side. Dr. Sutter has never joined the Temple of Set, nor have I ever offered him honorary membership, for much the same reasons that Terclis would not/could not become a Jedi in The Dark Side Yet, also like Terclis, he is more sensitive to the significance and consequence of the Temple than many who are formally affiliated with it.

His evaluation of the events surrounding Set-IV was blunt and candid: merely the failure of inferior intellects and characters to continue maintaining the strain of a false image of excellence. Further their resentment of and antagonism towards those whose excellence is neither artificial nor an image.

I might add that, several years ago, Sutter predicted such a crisis for the Temple down to extremely specific details - based upon psychological probabilities of the sort that became the basis for The Dark Side’s MindWar concept. [I told him he was certainly mistaken.]

Our General Terclis would like to see this Jedi Order actualize its stated reasons for existence, yet believes that its premises are too idealistic, too visionary to succeed for more than a brief minute in the fabric of time and space. The Universe in which he has chosen to live and work is a duller, darker, more pessimistic one than that of the Jedi; but in it he has extended his own philosophy to remarkable limits.

Like Darth Vader and Obi-wan Kenobi, I am of the opinion that our Larger Universe is valid, and that the initiatory process of our Jedi Order, imperfect though it may be, has something supremely precious to impart to those whose Will it is to attain it.

So General Terclis and I disagree ... but I have learned much from our continuing dialogue.
Structurally the Temple of Set was sound enough with its legal credentials and operational By-Laws (which had indeed been crucial in bringing the organization safely and intactly through the RKB/Set-IV crisis). The Scroll of Set and the Ruby Tablet of Set were under competent Editorship and had already built up substantial bases for their continuing development.

What was needed, however, was a clearer general/introductory “statement of initiatory purpose” for Setians, and I felt that the Crystal Tablet of Set was the place to do this. It should become a kind of “handbook” primarily for new Setians, but also for continuing ones as a “backbone” reference document.

I took on the CT Editorship personally, and recreated it entirely into the collection of documents it would retain throughout my High Priesthood to 1996, and generally subsequently as well.

Its opening document is my multi-chaptered essay (arguably a book-within-a-book) entitled Black Magic, which I envisioned as a sort of update of/improvement upon Aleister Crowley’s Magick in Theory and Practice and Anton LaVey’s Satanic Bible. But in the writing it quickly became very much its own animal, taking the new Setian on a sort of “guided tour” through the Temple’s history, predecessors, and initiatory ideas. There were how-to-do-it chapters on Greater and Lesser Black Magic [and eventually a blend of the two: Medial Black Magic]. There were discussions of cosmology, ethics, Egyptology, and the existence of the metaphysical Set and other neteru. Throughout the text I sought to emphasize that all of this information should be digested into each Setian’s personal quest for comprehension of reality and willed-self-evolution (= initiation).

The balance of the Crystal Tablet is most easily glimpsed through its Table of Contents. As indicated here, many of these were variable, updatable, and some eventually obsolete as newer technologies and means of inquiry made them unnecessary:

Black Magic - by Michael A. Aquino VI°

The V° Words [Essays concerning the various Words Recognized by the Temple of Set as V°-significant, written by their Utterers.]

Remanifestation: The Word Explained - by James Lewis VI°

Runa - by Stephen E. Flowers V°

Xeper: The Eternal Word of Set - by Don Webb V° [I was the original Utterer of Xeper, but in a novel development Don Webb chose to reUtter it for his V° initiation.]

Essent Into Essence: A Brief Overview - by Robert W. Robinson V°

Officers of the Temple of Set [Identification of the Chairman & Councillors of the Council of Nine, High Priest of Set, Executive Director, Treasurer, Editors of the various Temple publications, and electronic communications coordinators/later Internet & Intranet webmasters.]

Protocol - by Robert Menschel IV° [Traditions and etiquette among Setians, both formally and informally.]

Setian Initiation and Recognition: The I° and II° - by Robert Menschel IV° [This and the following article were designed to guide the new Setian I° along the path to eventual Recognition as an Adept II°.]
The Degree of Adept II° - by James Lewis VI°

AMER Guide to Handling Religious Harassment at Work
- by the Alliance for Magical and Earth Religions

During the 1980s “occult” religious beliefs could still cause an individual difficulties at his place of work. AMER was a St. Louis, Missouri-based group of many such religions, and granted the Temple of Set permission to include this very practical and helpful guide.

II° Recognition and the Ruby Tablet of Set [The Ruby Tablet of Set is the second volume of the Jeweled Tablets of Set series, and is available to Adepts II° upon their Recognition. Much larger than the introductory Crystal Tablet, it is more of a compendium of many different Setian writings. This article tells the Setian I° about it and what to expect from it.]

The Scroll of Set [The Scroll of Set is the monthly newsletter of the Temple. This article discusses its function, Editorial policies, and how to make submissions to it.]

Pentagram of Set Medallions [A description of the identifying initiatory medallions and their common design significance. Appendix #6 of this Temple of Set.]

Inter-Member Communication Roster [In the decades before the Internet, Setians around the world needed a means to introduce themselves to one another, to cite their interests, and to engage in correspondence and personal contact. The ICR, which operated by means of initially-forwarded mail through the Temple office, made this possible without compromising personal privacy. It would later be moved to the Temple’s private Intranet, then be retired altogether as the Internet superseded it.]

Pylons [Local-community groups of the Temple of Set, with their guiding officials (“Sentinels”) named for contact, along with descriptions of their interests. There are also non-local “correspondence” Pylons designed to focus more on a shared interest than on a geographic locality. Sentinels are either a Priest III° or an Adept II° sponsored by a Priest.]

Orders [Highly-specialized and advanced organizations within the Temple, often with their own initiatory characteristics. Orders are Grand Mastered by Masters of the Temple IV°. Herein are detailed essays concerning the various Orders, for which II° Recognition is a prerequisite.]

Elements [Special-interest or -project groups, either permanent or temporary, which do not meet the criteria for either Pylons or Orders. Unlike Pylons and Orders, Elements may be extended to nonSetian membership. The criteria for creating and heading an Element are generally the same as for a Pylon.]

Glinda [In the earliest days of the Internet, Glinda was the Temple of Set’s Bulletin-Board System (BBS), named in honor of Glinda the Good, the Royal Sorceress of Oz whose Great Book of Records kept magical track of everybody and everything everywhere of interest. For the ten years of her Setian incarnation (1990-2000), Glinda resided in an Apple Color Macintosh (the last “toaster Mac”) in my living room. All of her systems and files were then phased into the new Temple Intranet.]

Internet Mailing Lists - by John Youril III° [Also from the early days of the Internet, this and the following article dealt with how to communicate effectively on the new medium. In that uncertain time of black CRT screens with green-letters-only, this was more formidable than can be imagined today!]

Electronic Mail
Since 1982 the Crystal Tablet has remained essentially thus, although its various articles have all been expanded and updated as need and lessons-learned dictated. For decades the CT was mailed out to new Setians as a printed loose-leaf document; in the 21st century it has evolved into a CD, in which format it is both more quickly searched and more easily updated by download from the Temple’s website.

With the Crystal Tablet now in place, the Temple of Set then turned its attention to the other volumes of the Jeweled Tablets of Set. The basic concept was this:

When we [re]created the Temple of Set in 1975, we thought that it should have both temporary/periodical and permanent/reference publications. The Scroll of Set newsletter took care of the former, and has amassed a vast amount of articles, essays, art, news, Order/Pylon/Element reports, conclave pre/post-discussions, etc. since then. In this Internet age all of the back-issues are downloadable by all Setians.

The Jeweled Tablets got their name-inspiration whimsically, as a take-off on the fabled, forbidden, and funky Emerald Tablet of Thoth, in which all great occult knowledge was supposedly contained. So we decided to do a real set, as it were, but designed to complement our initiatory degree system.

The Crystal Tablet (gem color of the I°) would be provided to all Setians, and issued to entering Setians I°. It would serve as an introduction to and summary of Setian philosophy and metaphysics, explain the various administrative systems and functional groups comprising the Temple, and discuss opportunities for each Setian to undertake personal initiation. As it is the Temple's “common reference document”, its contents are relevant to all Setians, not just the I°. And, like all of the *JT*s, it is constantly updated. Through the 1980s it was mailed out as a looseleaf binder; since then it’s a CD, and all of its contents are also in the Temple’s Intranet.

The Ruby Tablet (gem color of the II°) would be available to Adepts II°+, and would be a repository of the Temple’s more extensive and permanent documents than would normally be found in the Scroll of Set newsletter. Since most of the Temple of Set’s information is intentionally for the benefit of all Adepts, the RT would be the largest, and “backbone”, volume of the Jeweled Tablets. And so it has been. By the mid-1980s it was already about 6 large red binders in size, and was rapidly becoming cost-daunting even at nonprofit. Happily it too has been rescued by the Internet, and is now wholly searchable & downloadable there. [And I cannot possibly continue further here without mentioning, with the utmost admiration and frank awe, the years of intensive, exhaustive, and perfection-obsessed work that Magister Robert Menschel, as Ruby Tablet Editor, invested in that publication to transform it from a bare-bones idea to an encyclopedia of staggering dimensions and unsurpassed quality. If a massive meteor were to strike the Earth and obliterate all traces of the Temple of Set except for one slightly-charred copy of the Ruby Tablet, I daresay that everything could be reconstituted from that alone.]

The RT’s contents are of equal significance to all the II°+ and are contributed to by all of them as well.
The reason the \textit{RT} is not available to the I° is twofold:

(1) The I° is a “mutual evaluation” degree, wherein both the individual and the Temple have an extended [up to 2-year] opportunity to decide if they are suited for one another. Some join the Temple for the wrong reasons, or decide after contact with it that it is not after all their cup of tea. And from the Temple’s perspective, some I°s simply don’t have the aptitude, intelligence, or interest to become Black Magicians, which is what II° Recognition is all about. So during their I° time, Setians are expected to familiarize themselves with the Temple, its ideas, its tools, and flex their mental & magical muscles accordingly. Think of it somewhat as the “general education requirements” of a university, with entry-level/familiarization courses offered by the various departments.

(2) The material in the \textit{RT} is specifically written for Setians who have “passed the I° test” and shown themselves to be competent enough to handle it. Essentially we trust Recognized Adepts II° to use this information wisely and responsibly. We do not trust the Great Unwashed [public] to do so, and entering I°s need to get their “sea legs” first.

The \textit{Onyx Tablet} (gem color of the III°) is available to the Priesthood of Set III°+ and contains documents specifically pertinent to the Priesthood as a personal initiatory and consecrating experience. [General material about the III° is contained in either the \textit{CT} or \textit{RT} as appropriate.] Thus the \textit{OT} is written by III° Initiates for other III°s. Articles have to do with the essence of the III° and how it may be Recognized in Adepts.

There are two general reasons for the \textit{OT}’s III°+ restriction:

(1) The authentic III° is a uniquely individual initiation if & when it occurs. If non-III°s read existing III°+ reflections on the Priesthood, they may be tempted to artificially imitate others’ initiation. The Priesthood of Set is not and cannot be a “standardized office”.

(2) The Priesthood of Set is the consecrated core of the Temple of Set, and as such desires to preserve its privacy and serenity.

The \textit{Sapphire}, \textit{Amethyst}, & \textit{Topaz Tablets} are all accessible to the Masters of the Temple of Set IV°+. Their distinction is simply that each contains material and commentaries specifically pertinent to the IV°, V°, and VI° respectively; and again this is only material that, for sound reason (such as the initiatory capability to understand it in proper context, and again deterrence of “initiatory imitation”) should not be in the \textit{CT}/\textit{RT} (wherein again the vast majority of documents pertinent to the IV°+ are contained).

Incidentally the IV°+ access to the IV°/V°/VI° volumes reflects the principle that the IV° is the Æonic level of individual initiation. The V° and VI° are “specialized variations” of the IV°, and are thus fully comprehensible by it. Nor are we concerned about V° or VI° imitation, because the very nature of such Recognitions is antithetical to this.

So if you were to put all the \textit{JT}s side-by-side, you'd find the \textit{RT} to be huge, the \textit{CT} to be a sort of “Boy Scout Handbook”, and the other four to be very slim indeed. The main “push” in our magical & philosophical material is always to the \textit{RT}, because there it is available to all adept Setians II°-VI°.
This structuring of the *JT*s’ contents and access also reflects a fundamental principle of Setian initiation: One’s Recognition to a specific degree of initiation denotes the capacity, not the continuity of being present in and manifesting what is signified by that Recognition. Most adept Setians, myself included, function 95% of the time as Adepts II°. Only in certain instances where the unique characteristics of another degree are called for does it arise in consciousness.

I should perhaps take note in passing that today there are pirated *JT*s all over the Internet. [There is pirated everything all over the Internet!] Can’t help that. Because all of the *JT*s are being updated all the time, though, the pirated versions usually incomplete and obsolete; and as you can see here, the OT, ST, AT, & TT are relatively obscure without synchronization to individual initiation at related levels.

In Chapter #7 and Appendix #58 I discussed High Priest Barrett’s concept and introduction of what he termed “Order Without Law”. This was a system of initiatory Orders within and subordinate to the Temple of Set proper. All I°-III° Setians were required to be “apprenticed” to one of these Orders, each headed by a Master of the Temple IV°, and would henceforth work primarily, if not exclusively within it. One of the consequences of this, unfortunately, was that such Orders, most conspicuously Barrett’s own Order of Anubis, simply became cliques concerned with their own members and interests, not with the Temple of Set and all Setians generally. By the Set-IV Conclave, members of the Order of Anubis knew more about Barrett’s policies and priorities than did the Council of Nine.

On resuming the High Priesthood, therefore, I discontinued “Order Without Law” immediately, but the basic concept of specialized Orders within the Temple was a valuable and viable one. In the Crystal Tablet I outlined how the Order system would function henceforth:

Within the Temple of Set there exist a number of specialized Orders, each supervised by a IV°+ Initiate as Grand Master of that Order. To contact a specific Order, communicate with the Grand Master of that Order as listed in the Order Directory in this Crystal Tablet.

Perhaps the best way to visualize the Temple of Set’s concept of Orders is to think of the Temple as a university, with the Orders as the various academic departments. Students at the university, in the course of their general education, may sample subjects at appropriate introductory levels in various departments. Upon completing their general education, students with an interest in or aptitude for a particular department may “major” in that department and possibly go on to graduate work in that field. Nonetheless all the departments cooperate in the operation of the university as a whole, and its general academic environment lends a sense of perspective to the various departments - so that their faculty and students can relate to a world beyond their field of specialization.

1. Only a IV° Initiate may establish an Order within the Temple. This has been the traditional prerogative of this degree since the time of the G.’D.’. and the A.’A.’.

2. An Order is characterized by special interests and emphases, which may be formalized by special introductory and ritual procedures within that Order. Such interests and emphases may not clash with those of the Temple of Set as a whole, and an Order’s initiatory system must be subordinate to and supportive of the system of the Temple as a whole.

3. The Grand Master (presiding IV°+) of each Order exercises complete authority over that Order, subject to the review of the High Priest of Set.

4. Subject to exemptions approved by the High Priest, Orders will accept only II°+ Setians as Initiates. This is based on the premise that I° Setians should concentrate on their “general magical education” prior to specializing within a particular Order.

5. While an Adept II° may specialize indefinitely, a Priest or Priestess of Set III° must possess a high level of general knowledge. IV°+s who are Grand Masters of Orders will not Recognize new III’s solely on the basis of their competence within a particular Order, but rather according to their broader skills and State of Being within the Temple and Æon of Set.

6. The fruits of an Order’s work must actively extend beyond the Initiates of that Order to the Temple of Set as a whole. The only exception to this is that initiatory ceremonies within an Order may be private to that Order, per the magical principle that uninvolved observers at such ceremonies can impair their effectiveness.

7. Normally a Setian may belong to only one Order within the Temple of Set, on the premise that personal efforts would otherwise be diluted. On the same premise, personal movement between various Orders is not recommended. Aspirants are advised to interview and correspond with various Orders before making a personal commitment to any one in particular. A Setian may belong to more than one Order only by first obtaining the approval of both Order Grand Masters.

8. Within a year of being Recognized to the II°, Adepts of the Temple are normally expected to affiliate with an Order. There is no penalty for not doing so, but Adepts will find that an increasing amount of Temple activity beyond the I° takes place within the Order system.

9. Setians of all degrees may freely visit activities of all Orders, except as noted in #6 above.

10. There is no required or standard internal design for an Order, save that each be headed by a IV°+ with the formal title of Grand Master.

11. Order insignia may be worn either together with Temple of Set insignia or alone. When it is worn with Temple insignia, it must not conflict with, cover, or displace it.

12. Priests and Priestesses of Set III° will be encouraged to involve themselves with specialized concerns of an Order only after their Priestly affairs are amply in hand. In all cases this means active involvement with potential Setians and I°/II° Setians who are working to become fully Adept at the Black Arts at a personal level. In many cases it further means the establishment and leadership of a Pylon of the Temple. [The effect of this provision is that an enthusiastic II° member of a particular Order will have to resolve to put Order-specific interests on the back burner should he or she be Recognized to the Priesthood of Set. Active work within Orders will be done mostly by II° and IV° Initiates, with III°s contributing only after their more general responsibilities within the Temple are fulfilled. Hence II°s who are intensely interested in a particular Order should consider this provision before aspiring to the III°.]

13. Orders’ areas of focus may be historic, philosophical, geographic, psychological, or almost anything else that does not conflict with the Temple of Set’s basic ethical guidelines.

Accompanying this Introduction in the Crystal Tablet are general statements from the various Orders. Some are currently active, some are temporarily inactive, and some are historically dormant. Check the “Orders” Directory file to see which ones are currently active. If you are curious concerning one or more of the other Orders, many of which have a rich legacy of contribution to the archives of the Temple of Set, examine the InterCommunication Roster to see if Initiates involved with them are included. Also examine the Back-Issue Collection of the Scroll of Set for Order-related articles.

In 1982, however, the Temple of Set did not yet have a functioning model for this new generation of Order. That was about to change, far away in Germany.
Chapter 9: The Wewelsburg Working

On November 8, 1982 I wrote to the Priesthood of Set [and thereafter to all Setians in the February 1983 Scroll of Set]:

The Wewelsburg Working - Background

The reason for my silence during the past month is about to be explained; I have been out of the country. During the first part of October I participated in a series of tours of NATO installations in England, Belgium, and Germany arranged through the World Affairs Council.

I haven’t been to London and Brussels since 1958 or to Germany since XIII, so it was interesting to see the changes and non-changes that have occurred. It was surprising to discover that London, which I had supposed to be a nerve-center of occultism, has only one tiny bookshop - “Atlantis” - dealing in the Black Arts. It is perhaps 1/4 the size of Gilbert’s in L.A. or Weiser’s in NYC, and I made no discoveries within its shelves. The owner was pleased to display a stock of our informational pamphlets, however.

On the next block I bumped into the London office of E.J. Brill, the Dutch publishers who once published Seth, God of Confusion hardcover and expensive. For many years it has been out of print; now it is back in print softcover and less expensive (48.00 Dutch Gld.). we will explore ways to order this unique volume at minimum inconvenience to Setians.

After the conclusion of the NATO tours, I was able to undertake a long-awaited personal quest. In “That Other Black Order”, an article on Nazi occultism which I wrote for Cloven Hoof #IV-4 (April VII) [The Church of Satan Appendix #40], I recounted that Heinrich Himmler had appropriated a Westphalian castle, the Wewelsburg, and had modified it for ritual and Black Magical activities of the SS. The more I tried to obtain details concerning the Wewelsburg, the more frustrated I became. It was soon apparent that author after author had simply recited the half-paragraph’s worth of rumors first published in the mid-1950s. No one had troubled to visit the castle [if it still existed] nor photograph it.

Until this last month, therefore, I had no idea whether the Wewelsburg still existed and, if so, whether the chambers in question had been destroyed, remodeled, or simply sealed.

Tourist guidebooks of Germany made no mention of the castle; it was only with the aid of a large-scale map of Westphalia that I found the initials “Schl”[oss] next to the tiny village of Wewelsburg. It as the better part of a day’s drive on the high-speed autobahn from Frankfurt on 10/19, then a zig-zag course through a thick forest on a small back road into the town, which looked as small and sleepy as any other German town. Still no castle to be seen.

Then a directional marker (“Zum Schloss”) pointing down a back alley, with more twists and turns, and then: Castle Wewelsburg, apparently intact and perfectly preserved, and virtually invisible even from the town because of the surrounding forests and terrain. As seen from above it is in the shape of an isosceles triangle, with the keep at the north apex and the other two towers at the southwest and southeast corners.

Passing the small guardhouse (with a defaced but still legible “SS” stone emblem atop), I crossed the bridge to the main entrance in the east wall, entered the courtyard, and knocked at the door of what was evidently a small museum of the castle’s medieval history. In answer to my questions, the elderly curator politely informed me that the two ritual chambers were very much intact. Would I like to see them? Indeed I would, thank you!

The Wewelsburg is used [except for the museum and the two ceremonial chambers] as a youth hostel. Entering the North Tower from the courtyard brings one to the “Marble Hall”. This circular chamber is completely unfurnished, save for two black floor-candleholders with red candles by one of the doors. Into the center of the red marble floor is set a rune-wheel made of green stone, with the central disc of black marble. Each rune points to one of 12 green sandstone columns, forming cross arris vaults above 12 windows also framed in green sandstone. The chamber’s only other decoration is a roughly-hewn block of stone above the door with the black candleholders.

To give you some idea of the wild distortions that have been published concerning the Wewelsburg, the following is quoted from Francis King’s Satan and Swastika:
The center of the castle was the great banqueting hall, furnished with a gigantic table around which were placed large wooden chairs almost thrones upholstered with pigskin and with the name of the rightful occupant inscribed on silver plates. In these chairs Himmler and his favorite subordinates would sit both for conferences concerned with mundane matters and for group meditation - long hours of silence in which the participants were supposed to strengthen their ties with the “Race Soul”. Besides Himmler himself, never more than 12 SS men were allowed to sit down at the table; the reasons for this are not clear, but it is possible that he was either blasphemously parodying the Last Supper or seeing himself symbolizing the Sun surrounded by the 12 signs of the Zodiac.

Above the banqueting hall were Himmler’s own rooms ... Below the hall was the crypt, the ‘realm of the dead’, in which 12 unoccupied pedestals were placed around a stone hollow. On the death of each of Himmler’s chosen 12, his coat of arms was to be burned, and the ashes placed in an urn on one of the pedestals ...

In actuality the floor emblem and other architectural features of the Marble Hall make it clear that the chamber was never designed to contain a central table, nor do the original SS plans (which I examined) show it ever containing one. The conference hall in the west wall held a large, but not “gigantic” table and approximately 30 - not 12 - of the large leather - not pigskin, nor with silver nameplate - chairs referred to [I tried one out].

The dining hall was a third, smaller hall located in the south wall. Himmler’s own rooms were not above any of the three halls; they were in the southwest tower. Neither the library nor the weapons museum were in Himmler’s rooms; they were in separate rooms on different floors.

The recurring 12s of the Marble Hall probably have a solar/cosmic significance rather than a personal/human one. There were 12 central SS offices, each headed by an Obergruppenführer (Lt. General). [A 12-seat table would have excluded the 13th: Himmler himself!]

The Hall of the Dead is located directly beneath the Marble Hall in the North Tower. To enter it one must go outside the castle and down to the base of the North Tower. A stone stair leads down to the Hall.

The Hall of the Dead is domed; at the apex of the dome is a rune-accented swastika. Four holes in this emblem have encouraged the popular idea that there was a concealed smoke vent in the ceiling; this is not the case.

The four large windows opening into the Hall from the exterior of the tower argue against the Hall’s being designed as a tomb, nor are the 12 pedestals high enough or protected enough for funerary urns. They are platforms for either statues or live individuals.

The acoustics of the chamber are such that, standing upon a pedestal, one can be heard in a whisper in any other part of the room.

The central pit is not designed for bonfires. Its purpose became clear to me as soon as I descended into it; it places an individual at the acoustic focus of the chamber, as well as at the converging focus of the light channeled from the four 5-foot window passages. The effect is devastating. One shimmers with light from the Sun, Moon, or stars in an otherwise shadowed and darkened chamber; and one’s voice whether lowered to a whisper or raised to a shout is magnified and multiplied and mirrored back to the focus.

Upon returning to the medieval museum rooms with the curator, I enquired whether I might be able to spend some time in the Hall of the Dead alone. To my surprise he assented, providing that I sign in the logbook for the key. I did so, returned alone to the Hall, locked myself in, and undertook what I shall henceforth refer to as the Wewelsburg Working. It is discussed in a separate paper.

Late in the afternoon I closed the chamber, returned the key to the curator, and departed for Frankfurt and the rest of the World of Horrors.

Subsequently I had the opportunity to visit the Obersalzberg complex. Having written about it in Secret of the Lost Ark, I was frankly curious to see if my description squared with reality. I am pleased to report that it does.

Adolf Hitler’s own house - the Berghof - is now so completely overgrown with forest that it’s impossible to find it unless you know where to look. [It took me a half-hour’s plunging around in the underbrush]. On Walpurgis 1952 the ruins of the Berghof were dynamited by the German government; only one partially-underground room remains.

Back in San Francisco I am now recovering from jet-lag, reading mail, and pondering many things.
The Wewelsburg Working

Date/Time: October 19, XVII/3:00-4:30 PM.
Location: Hall of the Dead/Walhalla, North Tower, Wewelsburg Castle, Westphalia, Germany.
Key: 19th Part of the Word of Set, Æthyr LIL.

Purposes:

- To obtain a full Understanding of the significance of the crisis that befell the Temple of Set in June-July XVII.
- To energize the advent of the Working Year XVIII.
- As the Wewelsburg was conceived by Heinrich Himmler to be the “Mittelpunkt der Welt”, and as the focus of the all of the Dead was to be the Gate of that Center, to summon the Powers of Darkness at their most powerful locus.

Results:

What emerged from this Working was not a written text, such as the Book of Coming Forth by Night or the Word of Set, but rather a two-fold sensation: First, the suction-like impression of the inflow of certain realizations and kinds of knowledge (accompanied by an almost “electrical” sort of exhilaration), which seemed to have “remained dormant” pending an “activating” Working of this sort. Second, an extended “reverberation” or “echoing” of the focus of this Working within the Walhalla, culminating in its sending-forth into the material world.

The central features of the various principal occultisms of the 19th and 20th centuries CE ran through my consciousness almost as a pageant. I understood the object of this to be an exposure of contrasts, inaccuracies, and inconsistencies a vast, spiraling dialectic designed to clear away the debris of sectarianism and superficiality in the search for the key principles of the true Powers of Darkness.

Concepts of “will”, “intelligence”, “self-consciousness”, “initiation”, and “magic” appeared in turn and fell aside as well; I saw them as useful, but still, surprisingly, peripheral to the central concept being approached. When at last all veils had been removed, and that concept was revealed, it was so simple as to seem at first anticlimactic and almost disappointing. It was: the phenomenon of life.

Instantly I regretted my impatience and arrogance, my lapse into easy disappointment. Too many doors had been opened, too many forces unlocked and unleashed for this to be the ultimate impact of the Working. Then it was as though a “test” were passed: The basic concept of “life” became a sort of focal point, like that of a refractor telescope, through which the energies of the Working passed. The initial “dialectic” had reduced all to a pinpoint of fact, and now that fact, unencumbered, was expanding to full significance.

Human beings are accustomed to thinking of “nature” as including all animate and inanimate life forms, themselves included. It was the approach of the Church of Satan, and later of the Temple of Set, to single out self-consciousness as the characteristic feature of That which stood in contrast to the harmony of the natural cosmos. In fact all life has some degree of intelligence [not to be confused with self-consciousness], and somewhere within that intelligence is a subcomponent of self-consciousness, which only becomes evident when the level of basic intelligence is relatively high.

The error in any operation designed to strengthen the self-consciousness necessarily follows from the fact that self-consciousness is a function of the core intelligence, and there are many other functions of intelligence as well. Initiation thus treats a “symptom”, not a “cause”; this leads the “cure” in unanticipated directions.

The Church of Satan and the Temple of Set have grappled with this problem for all the years of their existence without recognizing its actual depth. Strengthen, exalt, and encourage the willful self, and you cannot avoid strengthening the natural instincts as well. No human being is free from these; they may be kept in check for years, but in eventual moments of stress, weakness, or stimulus they will break free. They may be either creative or destructive; this is not a mere “Jekyll/Hyde” scenario.
All initiatory efforts that are not deliberate frauds from the most childish to the most sophisticated are conceits of the self-conscious intellect. Those that profess to be natural, universal, nirvanic, or otherwise “Right-Hand Path” are ultimately exercises in self-delusion, if in fact the adherents actually believe in their own rhetoric. Sooner or later the masquerade becomes tiresome, the daydream boring, and the devotee discards it in favor of other sensory stimuli.

The anti-natural systems of the “left-Hand Path”, on the other hand, think to suppress some aspects of the intellect while strengthening others. What results is a condition of strain which, should the tension become too great, will snap back to an equilibrium which may be more or less viable than it originally was.

The intelligent mind cannot be “escaped” so easily. If it is argued, convinced, threatened, hypnotized, drugged, or diseased into non-rational channels, then its self-consciousness will merely reassert itself in some other form. This, I understood in the Wewelsburg, was the “magical epitaph” of Nazi Germany: That, in fighting against certain features of the mind, it had seemed at first to succeed but then had thus unleashed other, even less desirable features of that same mind which had previously remained in some rough degree of socially-controlled equilibrium before this ultimately disastrous experiment in “conscious evolution” was attempted.

The chamber in which I stood, I now realized, was nothing less than an SS laboratory for experiments in “conscious evolution” - a sort of “Krel machine” without computerized, science-fiction accouterments. It was not designed to teach or educate, rather to mirror and enhance thoughts and impulses already in existence. Hence its effect on the consciousness could be devastating for better or for worse.

The 18-year experience of the Church of Satan and Temple of Set now began to appear in a new perspective. Anton LaVey had thought to enhance conscious evolution by freeing the mind from self-imposed emotional prisons. He did so, enjoyed a measure of success, yet saw to his increasing dismay that new and more uncontrollable prisons were erected in their place.

Whereas the initial ones had been socially imposed, however, resulting in minds more or less tractable in society, these replacements were the product of random, unforeseen, intellectual imbalances. In a few cases the results were those of at least temporary genius. More often, however, the results were tragically self-destructive.

Anton LaVey erred in blaming the organization of the Church of Satan for this. That organization per se was not at fault; if anything it was a stabilizing influence. When he decided to exploit the organization in 1975, those working coherently within it felt wronged, said so, and formed the Temple of Set.

The Temple of Set was intended to be the perfect initiatory organization. It exploited no one; it offered every conceivable opportunity to everyone. Its most valuable inheritance from the Church of Satan was a commitment to the rejection of nonsense, occult or otherwise. The future, it seemed, was a banquet of intellectual evolution at which to feast.

Yet the Temple too began to suffer shock after shock, as often as not caused by senior Initiates. At first these were explained as freak events and blamed upon the inadequacies of the individuals in question. But as the phenomenon happened again and again, this seemed more an excuse than an explanation. Finally, in the summer of XVII, a conspiracy by several senior Initiates to pervert and degrade the Temple was only barely exposed and stopped in time. But the damage was devastating, if not indeed fatal - not to the structure itself, but to the assumptions concerning initiation which had formed the basis of that structure.

The Temple of Set’s soaring hopes for the perfect initiatory medium, it seemed, had been dashed. In curing the symptom which Anton LaVey had attacked, it had thought to solve the essential problem. But, just as he had focused his anger and contempt on the wrong thing, so the Temple had poured its trust and confidence into an improvement of that same wrong thing. The actual culprit - the disproportionately “evolved” intellect - escaped the clear comprehension of both.

The forces that would lead to the destruction of the Church of Satan in 1975 were not set in motion by Wayne West in 1971; they were activated on Walpurgisnacht I. Similarly the Temple of Set, thinking that it had destroyed those forces in 1975, had succeeded only in closing certain doors to them so that they would have to find other means of manifestation. After an initial delay, they did.

Now, in the Hall of the Dead, I sought a solution to the dilemma of the 18-year Working. Is the lesson of I-XVIII ultimately that there is no way out - that all initiation is merely Russian roulette in fancy dress?
But here the Understanding that had so far come so powerfully and clearly failed me. It was as though the Wewelsburg, having discharged a “battery” that had remained charged for 40 years, had no more current to provide.

Having drunk at this magical fountain of youth, however, I myself felt energized as I had not since the North Solstices of V and X. The Hall of the Dead now seemed an insulation against random discharge of this energy. Action must now give way to reaction; how should I direct this reaction?

In considering this, my attention came to rest on the concept of the Order of the Trapezoid. As will be recalled, this concept as employed by both the Church and the Temple has gone through many adjustments and redefinitions over the years. Yet it has endured and attracted because it seemed to “say something” that the Church and the Temple could not. What might this be?

During those periods when it was not employed as a synonym for the Priesthood, the Order has been used as a talisman to evoke a kind of diabolical Schadenfreude, a grim enjoyment of the predicament of self-conscious humanity. “Here you are in a state of Satanic self-awareness,” it seemed to say. “You cannot escape it; you cannot change it for the better or for the worse. Therefore: Experience it; savor its taste, sense its exquisite pain and pleasure. Do not wallow in it like an animal in warm mud; rather cut it as you would a fine gem, and behold the brilliance of its facets.”

When singing this song of Lorelei, the Order has seemed oddly antithetical to the Church of Satan and Temple of Set, both of which incorporated the premise of self-awareness but which then promised different types of escape, change, and improvement [thus the justification for affiliation, as well as the success-barometer of the degree system]. As an “Ur-Doppelgänger” of these creative institutions, however, the Order’s name and presence has waxed with their setbacks and waned with their successes. It is not an “evil antithesis” as much as it is a mirrored image - an alternate setting for the Graal of the Prince of Darkness.

Here in the Hall of the Dead, Heinrich Himmler’s Sanctum Sanctorum and “Mittelpunkt der Welt”, was the Earthly focus of That which has been thus symbolized by the Order of the Trapezoid. The reality of this chamber rushed in upon me. This was no Hollywood set, no ordinary room painted and decorated to titillate the senses. 1,285 inmates of the Niederhagen concentration camp died during the reconstruction of the Wewelsburg for the SS. If the Marble Hall and the Walhalla were memorials to a certain unique quality in mankind, they also serve as grisly reminders of the penalty which mankind pays for that quality.

I saw before me the sigil of the Order of the Trapezoid as originally designed by Anton laVey: the pentagram within a trapezoid extending slightly below the two lower points, the three curved 6s, the trident rising from the flames of Hell. I saw its later design in the Church, the 6s and the flames now gone. I saw its first design in the Temple of Set: the Tcham scepter with the head and forked tail of Set replacing the Satanic trident. I saw Ronald Barrett’s subsequent concept: a simple pentagram with the four upper points connected.

So now the principle should be completed - the Law of the Trapezoid finally and completely fused into its emblem. There appeared then the Sigil of the Order as reproduced here. It is a return to the initial Sigil, with the following changes: The curved-line fires of Hell are replaced by the Black Flame, whose emanations are rays, not flickering tongues. There are nine rays, each in strict mathematical proportion to the pentagram or trapezoid. The source-point of the Black Flame completes the pentagram, as called for in the Book of Coming Forth by Night. Two of the rays of the Flame complete the inverse pentagon about the pentagram, creating a total of nine Golden Section trapezoids in the entire sigil. The three 6s are restored, but with no curved lines. The Set-headed and -tailed Tcham scepter of ancient Khem rises from the Black Flame, its head at the center of the pentagram. Its tail, against the three central rays of the Flame, forms a “W”, denoting the “Walhalla” or Hall of the Dead at Schloss Wewelsburg, the Great Gate of the Powers of Darkness in our Time.

The direction of the Working’s reaction seemed clear before me; I thus cast forth the full existence of the Order of the Trapezoid into the world. After 18 years the Key has been forged in the Word of Set, and the Gate of the Wewelsburg is opened.

Where the Church of Satan and Temple of Set have appeared, so has the shadow of That signified by the Order been reflected. Now it has been loosed in its full force. Whether or not the sacred Priesthood continues to exist, the Order will do so: for its release is an inevitable legacy of the I-XVIII Working. Mankind received the utopian visions of the Church of Satan and Temple of Set only as it strived to be worthy of them; it will continue to receive them only as it continues to prove itself so worthy.

But the Order of the Trapezoid, whether known by its true name or by countless others, will always exist - not as a visible institution, but as a principle in the intelligent mind. Anton Szandor LaVey’s Law of the Trapezoid will endure as well: Those who recognize the principle will be able to turn it to their deliberate use [whether to their ultimate benefit or detriment]; those who do not will nonetheless be subject to it [whether to their ultimate benefit or detriment].

So It Is Done.

Soon thereafter I announced the reformation of the Order of the Trapezoid in the Crystal Tablet of Set:

![Order of the Trapezoid]

When once the restraining talisman of the Christian cross is broken in Germany, then the fury of the ancient warriors, the berserk rage of which the Nordic poets sang, will surge up again. The old stone gods will rise from long-forgotten ruins and rub the dust of a thousand years from their eyes; and Thor with his giant hammer will leap up and smash the Gothic cathedrals. And when that crash comes, it will be like nothing heard before in history. - Heinrich Heine, 1834

The “mainstream” of the Western magical tradition may be said to have a Mediterranean origin: Egypt, Mesopotamia, Greece, and Rome - and the later syntheses of these ancient cultures through the Medieval, Renaissance, and Enlightenment eras.

In marked contrast to the Mediterranean tradition is the school of thought which originated in the northern areas of Europe and Scandinavia: the Nordic or Germanic tradition. Most notable in this tradition, of course, is its lack of features either derivative of Judaeo/Christianity or prior to and prototypical of it. The Germanic metaphysics developed in an alien environment, remained largely isolated from the Mediterranean influence during the Roman Empire, and were suppressed rather than assimilated during the Christian centuries which followed.

It was in the late 19th century CE that this ancient Germanic tradition returned to play more than a mere mythological part in European affairs. It is perhaps not surprising that it surfaced during the Second Reich of Kaiser Wilhelm I and Otto von Bismarck. Until their unification by Prussia, the Germanic states had been weak and unstable in comparison to the larger nation-states of the continent. Periodically ravaged by foreign armies, Germany had earned the unenviable title of the “battleground of Europe”.

The 19th century heralded the onset of a new movement in European culture: Romanticism. It was a reaction to and a rejection of the methodical, practical - but just as often frustrating and stifling - scientific materialism which had resulted from the industrial revolution. In its original, more transcultural sense, Romanticism implied uninhibited individualism. In German, however, it gripped the imagination to a somewhat deeper degree. Gustau Pauli, in Dehio’s Geschichte der deutschen Kunst (1919-1934), states:
Romanticism is Germanic and reached its purest expression in those territories which are most free from Roman colonization. Everything that is regarded as an essential aspect of the romantic spirit: irrationalism, the mystic welding-together of subject and object, the tendency to intermingle the arts, the longing for the far-away and the strange, the feeling for the infinite and the continuity of historic development - all these are characteristic of German Romanticism, and so much so that their union remains unintelligible to the Latins. What is known as Romanticism in France has only its name in common with German Romanticism.

Crucial also to German Romanticism were the concepts of dynamism and life-worship. The former term represents an urge towards constant movement and evolution, whether intellectual, artistic, or social. It differs from the Setian concept of Xeper in that Romantic dynamism is non-Platonic; it is supra-rational rather than guided by logic, ethics, and naetic apprehension.

German Romantic life-worship was not love and respect for the phenomenon of life per se, but rather a compulsion to exercise one’s own life - to “really live” rather than to simply exist. Again this is commendable, but as with dynamism it can be dangerous in excess - when one’s “rage to live” interrupts and consumes the lives of others.

The uncanny attraction of the Third Reich - Nazi Germany - lies in the fact that it endorsed and practiced both dynamism and life-worship without restraint and to a world-shaking degree of success. In The Revolution of Nihilism (1939), Herman Rauschning said:

This irrational element in National Socialism is the actual source of its strength. It is the reliance on it that accounts for its “sleepwalker’s immunity” in the face of one practical problem after another. It explains why it was possible for National Socialism to attain power almost without the slightest tangible idea of what it was going to do. The movement was without even vague general ideas on the subject; all it had was boundless confidence: things would smooth themselves out one way or another ... Its strength lay in incessant activity and in embarking on anything so long as it kept things moving ... National Socialism is action pure and simple, dynamics in vacuo, revolution at a variable tempo, ready to be changed at any moment.

Similarly the life-worship of the Third Reich was not what the “Mediterranean” mind understands by this term. The “life” is the life of the state, or more precisely the Volk (perhaps best translated as the “soul of the people”). The individual achieves self-realization as, through his efforts, he contributes to the strengthening of this “soul”.

Just as the Third Reich’s dynamism got out of hand, leading it to embark on irrational and destructive foreign invasions, so its life-worship - which could have been a truly evolutionary synthesis of the most sublime concepts of Hegel and Nietzsche - became perverted into crude xenophobia, hatreds built upon superficial notions of “race”, and ultimately a maddened stampede towards a Wagnerian Götterdämmerung in defiance of a return to rationalism. Said Heinrich Himmler on April 21, 1945:

We have made serious mistakes. If I could have a fresh start, I would do many things differently now. But it is too late. We wanted greatness and security for Germany, and we are leaving behind us a pile of ruins, a fallen world ...
Lineage of the Order

The O.Tr. was founded as an informal Order within the Church of Satan by the authority of Anton Szandor LaVey as High Priest. Its existence was first announced in the December V/1970 Cloven Hoof:

The O.Tr. is the “board of directors” and security staff of the Church. Its functions are many, and its members are chosen by appointment, according to the special abilities and attributes of each. All Priests and Priestesses are automatically admitted into the Order, although the identities of most members of the Order are unknown even to each other. Members of the Governing or Grand Council of the Trapezoid are known only to the High Priest, who solicits their aid when required.

There was a strong Germanic element in the rituals of the early Church of Satan, deriving from the musical imagery of Richard Wagner and from the visual imagery of Weimar-era Expressionism (Max Reinhardt, Hans Poelzig). The significance of the trapezoid itself came from its suggestion of perspective and the distortion of that perspective in such UFA films as The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari and The Golem. From ritual use of similar angles and planes in such ceremonies as “Die Elektrischen Vorspiele” [in The Satanic Rituals], Anton LaVey made observations culminating in his “Law of the Trapezoid”:

All obtuse angles are magically harmful to those unaware of this property. The same angles are beneficial, stimulating, and energizing to those who are magically sensitive to them.

In the December V/1970 Cloven Hoof article, five literary sources for this principle were identified: William Mortensen’s The Command to Look, Louis McCarty’s The Great Pyramid Jeezeh, Sheila Ostrander & Lynn Schroeder’s Psychic Discoveries Behind the Iron Curtain (Chapter 27), Frank Belknap Long’s The Hounds of Tindalos, and H.P. Lovecraft’s The Haunter of the Dark. The Council of the Trapezoid, alternatively identified as the Council of Nine, was in fact an informal, unofficial cabinet without fixed membership, terms, functions, or binding authority. In X/1975 it attained formal status as the corporate board of directors and supreme executive body of the Temple of Set.

Apart from early Council meetings, which ceased ca. late 1970, no Order meetings or functions distinct from those of the Priesthood were held in the Church of Satan. In VI the Order was officially defined as comprising the III°-V° initiates within the Church, i.e. the collective Satanic Priesthood. In 1973 Anton LaVey again reconstituted the Order, this time to identify significant contributors to and representatives of the Satanic tradition, within or without the formal Church and Priesthood. Again there were no meetings, functions, or publications of this Order.

From 1975 to 1979 the Order was again used as an alternate designation for all degrees within the Priesthood of Set, and at the Set-I Conclave in 1979 the Council of Nine replaced the Satanic trident in its emblem with the Tcham sceptre of Set. At the Set-III Conclave in 1981 the Order was once again reconstituted, this time as an honorary designation for all present and past members of the Council of Nine, and its emblem was condensed to a pentagram within a trapezoid.

In the Walhalla or “Hall of the Dead” at Castle Wewelsburg, Westphalia - the subterranean sanctum sanctorum of the German castle which Heinrich Himmler had reconstructed for his own Workings in the Black Art - Michael A. Aquino VI°, High Priest of Set, conducted a Working on October 19, 1982. One of the results of this Working was the reconstitution of the O.Tr. as a truly functioning Order under the authority of the Temple of Set.

The O.Tr. is an Order of knighthood characterized by strict personal honor and faithfulness to the quest for the Grail. The Order is a knighthood in that its members are pledged to the traditional chivalric virtues as appropriate to each situation encountered. By honor is meant a sense of justice, ethics, and responsibility prior to personal comfort, convenience, or advantage. This honor is known by one’s faithfulness to the Quest for the Grail, which is the self, soul, or psyche made perfect through conscious refinement and exercise of the will. Attainment of the Grail results in transformation of the individual into a state of dynamic existence energized by the psyche, not by the physical body derived from the objective universe. Hence the O.Tr. is the gate to psychocentric immortality beyond physical death.

The insignia of the O.Tr. is an inverse pentagram whose four upper points define the limits and angles of a phi-trapezoid. From the nethermost point of the pentagram radiates the Black Flame of Set, whose nine tongues signify the Council of Nine and complete the angular relationships of the pentagram and trapezoid. Rising from the Black Flame is a Tcham sceptre, symbol of Pharaonic authority in ancient Egypt, bearing the head and forked tail of Set. The sceptre faces to the left, symbolic of the Left-Hand Path of Black Magic. The space between the Black Flame and the Tcham sceptre forms the letter “W”, signifying Walhalla. This is both the name of the chamber in the Wewelsburg, Westphalia wherein the Order was consecrated; and the famous hall of eternal life to which ancient Teutonic heroes were brought by the Walkyries and admitted by Wotan. Thus the letter “W” has a fivefold meaning (including the Motto of the Order) in addition to its primary reference. In the topmost three gaps between the pentagram and the trapezoid are the numbers 666, symbolic of the Prince of Darkness and of the First and Second Beasts revealed of him. The three sixes add to XVIII ÆS, the first Working Year following the creation of the Church of Satan, and the year in which the O.Tr. was returned to life. In the entire emblem there are no curved lines, signifying the Black Magical power of angular relationships and the Law of the Trapezoid. It is further mathematically keyed to the phi-ratio.

Admission

Admission to the O.Tr. is by invitation only. To be considered, one must first achieve the degree of Adept II° in the Temple of Set, and evidence a sufficiently comprehensive involvement in the Temple as a whole to preclude over-concentration in the magical philosophy of the Order.

As a general policy Oaths of the Order will be administered in a lodge setting, either at Conclaves of the Temple of Set or at lodges of the Order presided over by the lodge-master or a Master of the O.Tr. Masters of the O.Tr. may authorize special alternative arrangements as necessary.

RUNEG

Temple of Set

Runes is the newsletter of the O.Tr. It is named in honor of the Runen newsletter of the Germanen Orden, an esoteric society in pre- and post-World War I Germany. The Fenris Wolf on its masthead comes from ancient north European mythology. Fenris was one of the demonic offspring of Loki, and the brother of Hel and of the Midgard Serpent. Growing up in Asgard among the gods, he eventually became so huge and fierce that the gods decided to bind him. The only cord which could hold Fenris was made of the elements of the Earth by the dwarves. It was said that at Ragnarök, the end of times, Fenris would break free. According to the Völuspa (ca. 9th century CE), a text from Norway and Iceland:

The chains that hold the Fenris Wolf are rent asunder, and the Wolf courses about. Brothers shall fight and slay one another; sisters’ sons shall break the bonds of kinship. It shall fare hard with the world: great whoredom, an axe-age, a sword-age, shields shall be cloven, a wind-age, a wolf-age, ere the world sinks in ruin. No man shall spare the other.
Fenris as Runes’ masthead thus symbolizes the Powers of Darkness temporarily constrained by the objective universe. It is also a reminder that the price of loosing the Wolf - to energize evolutionary consciousness in humanity - is to risk chaos in the natural order by lesser humanity’s misuse of its power over nature. This is the Æon of Set, when the human psyche can soar free of its animalistic fetters; but it is also a wolf-age in which much of the planet suffers through human carelessness and callousness - the result of corruption of the powers of high intelligence. The O.Tr. seeks to allow Fenris to run free in his magnificence - as the Prince of Darkness created him - but further to show that his freedom through initiation of the Will will exalt, not debase mankind. The artistic rendition of Fenris is reproduced from the cover of the August 1941 issue of Germanien, official journal of the Ahnenerbe, the elite section of the SS concerned with the theory and practice of the Black Arts.

Let none who fears
The spear of Wotan
Adventure across this fire!
- Richard Wagner, Die Walküre

If the scope of the Temple of Set weren’t already broad enough, I think it can be seen here that that of the O.Tr. added several more extensions and dimensions to it. [And this was just the first of many new and highly-sophisticated/highly-visionary Orders.] Whereas the cultural and iconographic orientation of the Temple had previously taken its inspiration from ancient Egypt, the O.Tr. had now opened the door to the equally vast, and in many ways even less-studied and more-obscure metaphysics of ancient northern Europe. Particularly ominous in this was that Nazi Germany, and especially its feared SS, had also taken especial interest in this same area of archæological, philosophical, and magical research, and it was obvious that the O.Tr. would be reopening some of the same doors that had been slammed shut by the rest of the world on Walpurgisnacht 1945.

Well, until this problem could be carefully and constructively addressed, the Order had plenty of other avenues of interest to explore and enjoy, among these scientific magic (including mad scientists and their mad laboratories), architectural magic (haunted houses and Lovecraftian geometry), and artistic magic (particularly in such fields as Expressionism, noir, and Art Deco). This was going to be fun, not just for the Order, but for the whole Temple! Runes spent its initial years as a Temple-wide newsletter, mailed out on alternating months from the Scroll, and a sampling of some of my articles for it during that time appears here as Appendices #60-68.

As interesting and entertaining as such an Indiana Jones romp through the Twilight Zone might be, it was also conspicuously clear that this new Order of the Trapezoid’s Germanic-lore roots were very shallow, extending back little farther than the Romanticism of Wagner and the Art Nouveau/Deco/Expressionism of the early 20th century. I tracked down and combed through a good deal of Ahnenerbe-SS documents in the Library of Congress and the U.S. National Archives microfilm files, but exclusive reliance on Nazi research into Germanic antiquity was precarious. The SS obviously had an ideological agenda to maximize and glamorize the “Aryan” myth, and Ahnenerbe historians and archæologists who wished career advancement knew what they were expected to find. [This of course is the same in any other community wishing to polish its pedigree, but Heinrich Himmler was pushing against 2,000 years of Judæo-Christian worldwide indoctrination, and a mere 12 years (the last half of which was complicated by World War II) was not enough to break through even the less-factually-based bastions of “established” academia.]
More than once in the odyssey of the Temple of Set [and indeed the Church of Satan before it], an individual, event, or circumstance has appeared at precisely the moment it was needed. “Once,” said Auric Goldfinger to James Bond, “is happenstance. Twice is coincidence. The third time it’s enemy action.” In our case it might not be “enemy” action, but as such catalytic phenomena have continued to proliferate to our furtherance and improvement, one might well appreciate in them the hand of the Prince of Darkness.

On January 13, 1984 the Temple of Set received the following letter:

Order of the Shining Trapezoid
Austin, Texas

Hail Keepers of the Temple!

Recently a relatively small but dedicated circle of people here have begun a semi-formal Satanic working group. Our basis has generally been the system of the Church of Satan, of which I have been a member. However the particular constellation of elements which seem to be present in the workings of the Temple of Set are very interesting to me - especially since I have extensive knowledge of and experience in various schools of German occultism [and I have also been a member of the Armanen Order in Germany].

Information that you could send us would be appreciated. I am sure that we have information in which you would probably be interested, but at this point we are mainly intrigued by the system of the Temple of Set with an eye toward perhaps joining and aiding in its development. We are looking forward to hearing from you, and anticipate the day when we can begin to work together in earnest.

Heil Satan-Wotan!
Polaris

Our information was duly sent, and on February 2 Polaris (Stephen Edred Flowers) replied:

Dear Priestess Ford, Executive Director,

First let me thank you for your prompt reply of January 20th to my letter, and for the impressive material you sent. I and my closest associate here were both very excited by the nature of the work of the Temple of Set and Order of the Trapezoid.

In view of the quality of the work, we have decided to disband the Order of the Shining Trapezoid and to plight our troth with the complex represented by the Temple. I am very much looking forward to learning from the Temple as well as contributing to it.

With this letter and enclosure I formally seek admittance into the Temple of Set. My personal philosophy, and that which I have always espoused is now, and shall ever be, in true harmony with the Setian stream and that of Wotan-Satan. As to my background notes, I have tried to summarize them in the various enclosures: (1) a regular academic viæ, (2) a chronological run-down of periods in which studies in occult/magical disciplines were undertaken, and (3) a brief statement of philosophical positions with regard to Setian philosophy and Wodenism and their synthesis. This makes clear my reasons for wanting to join the Temple of Set.

As soon as I receive confirmation of my acceptance, I will begin sending along some other material as a start on my contribution to the information-base of the Temple and the Order of the Trapezoid. I think that this will be vast enough that it must be approached on a systematic basis (how Teutonic!). The first step in this process should probably be an annotated bibliography of the relevant books and other materials in my archives. From this you can cull what you think of use, and we can work on ways of making this available to you. Also I will of course make available to you all of my own works (some of them unpublished) ...

With best wishes,
Polaris
On March 26th I responded:

That bibliography you sent is certainly a gold mine! I doubt that San Francisco’s Goethe-Institut library will include anything so esoteric, but U.C. Berkeley’s library - where I periodically go book-hunting, having faculty stacks privileges - offers better prospects. [It was there that I came across Michael Kater’s 1966 CE Heidelberg thesis Das “Ahnenerbe” der SS 1935-1945: ein Beitrag zur Kulturpolitik des Dritten Reichs (Stuttgart, Deutsche Verlags-Anstalt, 1974), which has been no end of help to me in untangling the rather bewildering history of that organization.]

I expect to be in Washington this June, hence will also be able to hit the Library of Congress. [As soon as I become really good at teleportation, I intend to move it to San Francisco.]

I am frankly astonished [and pleased, because of the opportunities thereby created] at how many of the works on your list I haven’t read! Some of this material is criss-crossed, I presume, by various works on the Temple of Set Reading List, but obviously primary sources are far better to work with. I agree with your assessment of Satan and Swastika, which accounts for its absence from the Reading List. There were one or two articles concerning the Externsteine in the Germanien issues I perused in the L.C. during my last Washington trip, but I didn’t happen to Xerox them. [I did make copies of other Germanien articles for possible O.Tr. use, together with quite a few papers and articles from the Ahnenerbe microfilm in the National Archives. But the microfilm printing machines in the N.A. are in such terrible shape that the Ahnenerbe material, which is already in less-than-ideal condition, came out only barely readable. As I have a chance to make some sense of the reams of thermofax (ugh!) which I did produce, it will be surfacing in Runes.]

I found the Phelps article on one of my raids in the U.C.B. library, and agree that it is a gem. [No thanks to the confusing volume-numbering system of the Journal of Modern History!] Sebbotendorf’s Bevor Hitler Kam itself was not in the stacks, so I have coasted on Phelps’ summary in that particular area.

Otherwise your list looks so terribly fascinating that I’m not quite certain where to dig first. Your suggestions as to priorities would be welcome.

I further admired Runa #1-1 and thank you for sending it. You write with a most unusual mixture of high scholarship and applied-magical motive, which is very refreshing and stimulating to readers who are both scholars and magicians. But I miss my guess if you didn’t scare off both non-scholarly magicians and non-magician scholars with this unique approach. In the O.Tr., hopefully, you will find a medium receptive to and appreciative of both qualities. And I’m certain your own influence in the Order will help it to become even more sophisticated in that sense.

I look forward to the MS of your Primer of Rune-Magic and of course to your Futhark, which I anticipate will fill a great need in this particular area. From my comments in Runes to date, I expect you’ve deduced my general disappointment with the existing works on runes. Some are fairly good, but none really deals with the subject comprehensively, yet in a way which is intelligible and interesting to the lay reader ...

Just what sophistication Stephen Flowers (who shortly thereafter received his Ph.D. in Germanic History from the University of Texas) brought to the Order of the Trapezoid’s Northern-European lore aspect can be glimpsed from Category 24 “Runic Arts & Sciences” of the Temple of Set Reading List (Appendix #14). He succeeded me as Runes Editor in 1986, then as Grand Master of the Order of the Trapezoid in 1987. As can be imagined, the focus of the Order duly sharpened towards Northern esotericism, Runic lore, and a more traditional approach towards its chivalric dimension. My wide-ranging Runes investigations into the more obscure, suppressed, and startling areas of technomagic and fringe science were, perhaps thankfully, a relic of the past.

The Order of the Trapezoid has continued to the time of this writing as one of the most prolific Orders of the Temple of Set, both through Runes articles and numerous symposia, presentations, and workshops both separately and together with Temple conclaves. Today, under its current Grand Master Sir Eric Kauschen, the Order has expanded to an international presence, with an Internet presence, lodges, and activities in many countries.
It has undeniably set a new standard for the concept of a religion-based order of knighthood in terms of the depth and intensity of its esoteric and initiatory focus. Nothing like it has been seen since the days of the original Knights Templar.

As for the Wewelsburg Working, not only did it recreate the Order of the Trapezoid, it also inspired renewed interest in the Wewelsburg by many other occult organizations as well. In her article about the Order of the Trapezoid in the definitive 2009 anthology Die SS, Himmler und die Wewelsburg Daniela Siepe, Historian of the official Kreismuseum Wewelsburg at the castle, commented:

Since the Temple of Set there have been many other groups interested in the Wewelsburg, most with teachings of wholly different interpretations. The Church of Satan claims to have had a “Totenkopf Grotto” focused on the castle 1995-1996. In the Ruhr region there exists a local Circle of Hagalaz Coming Forth, an informal association without activities at the castle. In Switzerland there is the Black Order of Luzifer, which views the Wewelsburg as the “schwarzmagische Gralsburg (Black Magical Grail Castle)”, devoting considerable attention to folkish ideas. Outside the [now permanently locked] entrance to the Gruft (the Walhalla) was once found the remains of a ritual - bread, water, a floral bouquet, and a candle - alluding to a seasonal ritual of nature-worshipping neopagans. Finally, in esoteric guidebooks such as Magisch Reisen Deutschland from the renowned Goldmann-verlag publishers, interested persons can learn about the esoteric reasons why the National Socialists chose buildings such as the Wewelsburg at special “points of energy” to draw in magic to the entire area. But it is only possible to know which visitors to the castle are attracted by this when they provide written records to the Wewelsburg, or appear to be performing a ritual there.

In 2010 the Kreismuseum contacted the Temple of Set concerning a new exhibition on the history of the Wewelsburg since 1945, to include the Wewelsburg Working and the Order of the Trapezoid. It appears that the castle and the Order have a continuing friendship into their mysterious and magical future.
Chapter 10: The Orders, the Pylons, and the Elements

The Orders

The Orders of the Temple of Set which came into being along with that of the Trapezoid were no less remarkable and creative. Indeed it is no exaggeration to say that many of them became as strong, active, and both magically and philosophically challenging as the entire Temple of Set had been during its first decade.

The genius behind, inspiration for, and guiding hand over each Order has been, of course, the Master of the Temple IV° who is its Grand Master. The concept for a specialized initiatory Order being a characteristic of this degree specifically dates back to Aleister Crowley’s Liber 418: The Vision and The Voice series of workings, in which the “Cry of the 13th Æthyr” of December 4, 1909 set forth the work of this initiatory state of being. It was this vision with which Anton LaVey ritually formalized the IV° of the Church of Satan, and which I carried forward thus for the IV° of the Temple of Set:

And now there cometh a Daimon into the garden, but he hath not any of the attributes of the former Daimons, for he is like a young man, dressed in robes of blue.

And I said: Pleasant indeed is the garden, and light is the toil of tending it, and great is the reward.

And he said: Bethink thee that NEMO hath beheld the face of Set.

And I said: Are all gardens like unto this garden?

And he waved his hand, and in the Aire across the valley appeared an island of coral, rosy, with green palms and fruit-trees, in the midst of the bluest of the seas.

And he waved his hand again, and there appeared a valley shut in by mighty snow mountains, and in it were pleasant streams of water, rushing through, and broad rivers, and lakes covered with lilies.

And he waved his hand again, and there was a vision, as it were of an oasis in the desert.

And again he waved his hand, and there was a dim country with grey rocks, and heather, and gorse, and bracken.

And he waved his hand yet again, and there was a city, and a black house therein, enclosed by walls. This time the house opens, and I see in it a man in red and black, sitting in a silent and secret chamber. His eyes are closed, yet he readeth from a great book, constantly. I hear what he is reading: “The words of the book are as the leaves of the flowers in the garden. Many indeed of these my songs shall go forth as maidens, but there is one among them, which one I know not, that shall be a man-child, whose name shall be NEMO, when he hath beheld the face of the Prince of Darkness and Become as his Eye.”

So we enter the Earth, and there is a veiled figure, in absolute darkness. Yet it is perfectly possible to see in it, so that the minutest details do not escape us. And upon the root of one flower he pours acid so that the root writhes as if in torture. And another he cuts, and the shriek is like the shriek of a mandrake, torn up by the roots. And another he chars with fire, and yet another he anoints with oil.

And I said: Heavy is the labor, but great indeed is the reward.

And the young man answered me: He shall not see the reward; he tendeth the garden.

And I said: What shall come unto him?

And he said: This thou canst not know, nor is it revealed by the letters that are the totems of the stars, but only by the stars. The man of Earth is the adherent. The lover giveth his life unto the work among men. The hermit goeth solitary, and giveth only of his light unto men.

And I ask him: Why does he tell me that?

And he says: I tell thee not. Thou tellest thyself, for thou hast pondered thereupon for many days, and hast not found light. And now that thou art called NEMO, the answer to every riddle that thou hast not found shall spring up in thy mind, unsought. Who can tell upon what day a flower shall bloom?
And thou shalt give thy wisdom unto the world, and that shall be thy garden. And concerning time and death, thou hast naught to do with these things. For though a precious stone be hidden in the sands of the desert, it shall not heed for the wind of the desert, although it be but sand. For the worker of works hath worked thereupon; and because it is clear, it is invisible; and because it is hard, it moveth not.

All these words are heard by everyone that is called NEMO. And with that doth he apply himself to Understanding. And he must understand the virtue of the waters of death, and he must understand the virtue of the Sun and the wind, and of the worm that turneth the earth, and of the stars that roof in the garden. And he must understand the separate nature and property of every flower, or how shall he tend his garden?

Initiation to the IV° is characterized by what Crowley termed “entry into the City of the Pyramids”, an awareness and appreciation of the entire scope of the initiatory environment (æon). The disposition of the Master becomes one of inherent enhancement of the æon generally, but also as the interpreter of a unique perspective concerning it: the “tending of a garden” - which within the Æon of Set became the creation of an Order.

And indeed the post-Set-IV atmosphere of a Setian Order was intended to be garden-like. Adeptis II°+ cultivated them, planted and nourished workings within them, then freely distributed their fruits throughout the Temple of Set generally. As their extent and sophistication increased, Orders generated their own Masters, some of whom would eventually become their successive Grand Masters [or, if coincidentally attaining IV° initiation, alternatively envision additional Orders].

Collectively all of the Orders of the Temple of Set began to “add flesh to the bones” of the Æon of Set: to reveal its implications and dimensions through images in many different mirrors. Yet each Order also developed and refined a unique identity of its own, which it is doubtful that the Temple of Set generally could have formulated absent that particular Master of the Temple.

Each Order introduced itself to the Temple as a whole with a Statement in the Crystal Tablet of Set, and those of the twenty-two Orders during my High Priesthood are included here as Appendices #69-90. Each Order went on not only to hold its own activities, but to publish periodicals and anthologies often extending to library-scope. Some of this material would be reprinted in the Scroll of Set or the Jeweled Tablets, but for the most part it was simply made available to all Setians with a particular interest in the work of a given Order.

The Pylons

In 1975, as part of the changeover from the Church of Satan, almost all of its local Grottos transitioned into the Temple of Set. The Satanic term “Grotto” (chosen by Anton LaVey to depict a part of the “great underground cavern of Hell”, so to speak), was obviously no longer thematic. After some discussion we settled on the term “Pylon”, after the great trapezoidal-pillared gates to ancient Egyptian temples. As our local groups would in effect be “gateways” to the Temple of Set as a whole, this seemed both appropriate and aesthetic.

The old term “Grotto Leader” also went by the wayside. In keeping with the individualistic emphasis of the Temple of Set, Setians weren’t to be “led” anywhere by anybody. We decided upon “Sentinel” to designate the Priest or Adept to whose guardianship each Pylon was formally entrusted.

Pylons were originally conceived to be geographically localized, and most of them have been. But as individual membership in the Temple of Set grew worldwide over the years, and particularly upon the appearance of the Internet, it was soon apparent that some Pylons, based upon shared interests and/or friendships, were going to extend as well. So there were “correspondence Pylons”, originally and most famously/enduringly the Gates of Hell Pylon, and eventually just about any combination-of-factors Pylons imaginable. Their one common feature, besides II°/III° Sentinelship, was simply the desire of the Setians involved to collaborate over an extended period of time, either generally or on topics of especial interest.

So numerous and multifaceted have the Pylons been over the years that a detailed description of each one would double the size of this ebook, so I’ll just mention their names through my High Priesthood: Ab Anpu, Amon, Antewey, Anubis, Apeti, ArchDaimon Infernus, Asmodeus, Babalon, Ba-Neb-Tett, Bifrost, Black Diamond, Black Flame, Black Lotus, Black Phoenix, Black Ring, Black Runa, Black Sun Rising, Blazing Star, Bull of Ombos, Canis Prometheus, Chaldean, Cirith Ungol, Dakshineshwar, Dark Crescent, Dark Star, DracoNis, Eternal Flame, Eye of Erbeth, Fallen Angel, Fenris, Folkvangr, Gates of Albion, Gates of Ganzir, Gates of Hell, Hades, Hlidhskjalf, Infernus, Kalevala, Kali Yuga, Lapponia, Legion, Luciferian, Magog, Melek Taus, Metropolis, Mut, Nan Madol, Nephlim, Nephren-Ka, Nuit’s Arch, Nyarlathotep, Obsidian Gateway, Pan, Pesh-Khent, Prometheus, Prometheus (Germany), Prometheus (Oregon, USA), Rising Force, Sa en Ankh, Sekhmet’s Oasis, Set Amentet, Seven Stars, Silver Spear, Smoking Mirror, Tower of Belial, Tuatha de Danann, Tuonela, Ultima Thule, Ur, Urorm, Venificoperae, Victory, Xem, Xronos, and Yidniminkani. The descriptions and histories of these are generally found in the Crystal Tablet of Set and the Temple’s various Internet resources; and of course many of them contributed to the Scroll of Set and published their own newsletters and papers as well.

The Elements

The term “Element” originated somewhat humorously. By the 1980s the Temple of Set had settled into its Orders and Pylons subsystems comfortably enough, but eventually a need was perceived for “something” that on one hand was neither as formal and initiatory-focused as an Order, nor on the other hand as compact and collegial as a Pylon. There were some specialized areas of interest, not necessarily derivative of the Temple or Æon of Set per se, in which some Setians just felt like cooperating. And since such non-initiatory interests were just as comprehensible to nonSetians, why not invite their participation as well?

These “nameless things” were originally termed “Elements” by me just because of my military background: In the U.S. Army the various organizational structures - squad, platoon, company, battalion, regiment, division, etc. - are collectively called “elements”. So until a more imaginative alternative presented itself, these were “Elements”. The name stuck, and so to this day the Temple of Set officially includes Elements alongside its Orders and Pylons.

While once more a detailed discussion of each current Element would overwhelm this ebook, here they are with at least a capsule description:

An Bradán Feasa: Transforms itself from its precursor, the Oghamic Studies Group, into an Element dedicated to the examination, exploration, and application of the magic of the Gael. This includes the three nations of the Goidelic branch of the Celtic language family in guises ancient, modern, and all that lies in between, from within the Æon of Set.

Apsû: Dedicated to the exploration and application of Mesopotamian magic and myth as magical tools to Xeper.

Arkte: Named for the ancient Greek bear-goddess symbolizing protection of non-human animal life, it exists for the defense & protection of animals, and for the bringing to justice of those who harm them in any way [including “research & experimentation”].

Black Muse: Looking into the wonderful, strange, and magical phenomenon that is the art of the muse - music.

Black Quill: Dedicated to writing subjective occult practical manuscripts as well as dark-theme fiction or poetry to be copyrighted and self-published.

Coll-Kenaz: The visual Black Arts: creates space for Setian artists to discuss, conceptualize, and showcase original art work[ings] that are both a record and a process of the Black Flame.

Dance: Explores the application of rhythm and dance as magical tools.

Dream Warriors: Dedicated to exploring and utilizing the dreamscape as a means to Xeper. We create elaborate, shared dreamworks & group dream activities.

Fear: Develop the arts of creating change and making decisions as well as techniques to effectively yet safely work the primal instinct of fear.

Guild of University Students: For Setians who are university students, faculty, and/or those who have undergone the Xeper specific to students & teachers. Its goal is to provide a place in Setian culture for them and to create a large body of academic articles and works in our archives for Setian use.

Griffin Phyle: Provides a focusing tool for scholarly, artistic, and magical work with the Greek magical papyri, the voces magicae, operative phonology, and other related topics. By name, image, and definition we have a strong interest in the mysterious power (sekhem) of the griffin.

Hawk-Faced Lord: For those who wish to study the Word of Thelema in the context of Setian practice.

House of Eridug: To establish a knowledge of the cuneiform system and work within one of the traditional fields of Mesopotamian magical scholarship: ashiputu, kalutu, and barutu.

House of Surt: A group of disciplined Black Magicians who are in the process of transforming our particular martial arts into an individualized magical tool of self-mastery and transformation, and the casting of spells used in the World of Horrors to manifest our desires through our true will.

Infernal Southern Crux: Devoted to consecrating the night sky by taking the Southern Cross and making it our own, a symbol of the crossroads of being & becoming, the mysterious crossroads where the Devil is invoked at the midnight hour.

MetaMind: Speculative, theoretical, experimental, and practical investigation into the extent, power, and potential of the conscious mind.

Nietzsche Project: Nietzsche in his various social, philosophial, and metaphysical aspects.

Padmasambhava: Not to encourage its members to surrender to the tenets of some exotic philosophy, but rather to provide an opportunity for those individuals to integrate the more useful aspects of Tibetan Buddhist thought & practice into their initiatory work in order to achieve a clearer understanding of the nature of their mind and the motivations which guide their every thought & action.

School of Life: Inspired by the third degree of the old German organization Fraternitas Saturni: “A grade bestowed upon those who have demonstrated immunity to the suggestions of mysticism or spiritualism. They are down-to-earth, with a sense of beauty and harmony; they must be motivated to become expressive personalities and to master life in all its forms.” (Flowers, Fire and Ice)
Sixth: About yoga. As with Set’s Pentagram, yoga affords the Initiate with an unlimited initiatory path leading toward immortality. There are many flavors of yogic initiation. Throughout approximately five centuries of recorded history, yoga continues to flourish as a means toward the higher self.

Soa-Gild: To provide new Setians with a forum in which to learn and ask questions about the fundamental aspects of the Temple of Set.

Soul: The history, concept, and mysteries of the soul.

Throne of Azathoth: Studying chaos as it is understood in physics, mathematics, statistics, and other such fields providing tools for working on it. The goal is in applying the findings to help the Initiate gain better control of the chaotic aspects of the objective universe as well to enhance personal initiation in the subjective universe.

Trident: Dedicated to the exploration and application of Eastern initiatory technologies from a Setian viewpoint.

Xibalba: To train and educate tlamatini (philosophers) of the Mesoamerican Mysteries, not only for the sake of each individual’s own quest but also for the remanifestation of the Mysteries themselves in our world.

Retrospectively the experience of the Temple of Set with its Orders, Pylons, and Elements has been a positive and productive one. Each such group has commenced to meet a perceived interest or necessity, and has either continued or eventually closed according to the same criteria. Characteristically the Temple of Set has never been particularly concerned with the question of orthodoxy where such explorations have been concerned; it has been assumed that if Setians are interested in it and it’s not prima facie illegal or dangerous, it’s just another expression and extension of Xeper.
Chapter 11: The Magi

The true nature of what is spiritual and what is merely nonsense is hard to agree upon. A precise line cannot be drawn between faith, superstition, and science. All we can say without argument is that there is a larger reality which is beyond our comprehension. We don’t have a name for it, but we know it exists. In practice we find ourselves breaking through, at times, to an expanded reality in which we are able to perceive a whole new set of mysteries which were formerly invisible to us. Then we discover the limitations of this new awareness and must break through yet again. This process is, as far as I have been able to discern, endless.

Ultimately no amount of study will lead us to the whole truth. Even if we work continually for a lifetime, we will never come to the end of our explorations about truth. This is where faith comes in. We accept the truth of theories we cannot prove, and in that way perceive the whole picture, though its complete structure is beyond our understanding.

- David Carradine, The Spirit of Shaolin, 1991

As recounted, the Temple of Set’s original approach to its initiatory degrees, and indeed to initiation generally, was to carry forward what we had been accustomed to in the Church of Satan, minus Anton LaVey’s 1975 attempted corruption. The more we came into our own identity, of course, the more the degrees evolved from their Satanic/anti-Judeo/Christian context into a territory uniquely their own. By the end of the Temple’s second decade, we had refined them into definitions and functions with whose substance we finally felt satisfied. To elucidate this it is necessary to review some background detail.

The Concept of Initiation

Individuals who find their way to the Temple of Set are known as the Elect. This term has a subtle significance of its own. It means “chosen” - but it does not identify the chooser. That chooser may be Set; it may be oneself; it may be pure hazard60. Nor does it imply privilege, aristocracy, or guaranteed success. It is, simply, an acknowledgement that the aspirant stands at these gates which only a comparative few have encountered. Like Wagner’s Parsifal61, Jonathan Harker62, Her-Bak63, or Nicholas Urfe, the aspirant either steps forward into the Temple - or turns back into profane existence.

60 The concept of “hazard” was particularly important to John Fowles, author of The Magus in which British schoolteacher Nicholas Urfe accidentally finds himself entangled in initiation. In his Aristos Fowles comments: “The purpose of hazard is to force us, and the rest of matter, to evolve. It is only by evolving that we, in a process that is evolving, can continue to survive. The purpose of human evolution is therefore to recognize this: that we must evolve to exist.”

61 “A long era in the history of human consciousness has come to a close. Taking advantage of the privilege only the great artist can claim, Richard Wagner at the end of the second act of his drama abandons the medieval, semi-historical setting of eighth-century Christianity, and on the wings of genius transports us into the far future of man’s endless journey of moral evolution.” - Franz Winkler, For Freedom Destined

62 “Welcome to my house! Enter freely and of your own free will!’ He made no motion of stepping to meet me, but stood like a statue, as though his gesture of welcome had fixed him into stone. The instant, however, that I had stepped over the threshold, he moved impulsively forward, and holding out his hand grasped mine with a strength which made me wince, an effect which was not lessened by the fact that it seemed cold as ice, more like the hand of a dead than a living man. Again he said, ‘Welcome to my house! Enter freely. Go safely, and leave something of the happiness you bring!’” - Bram Stoker, Dracula

“Initiation” is the term used to describe the experience of an affiliate of the Temple of Set. Since the term is very easily misunderstood and misused, its usage within and by the Temple deserves careful explanation.

In its traditional sense, initiation is induction into the membership of a secret society, hence being entitled to successively more exclusive secrets as the level of initiation rises. There is usually a good deal of occult hot air mixed in with this, in that the candidate is exhorted concerning the excellence he has had to display to be worthy of the honor, the sublime dignity of the initiation itself, and the fearful consequences should he betray its secrets.

Many initiatory societies are little more than financial rackets, while others are more or less sincere in what they are trying to do. Most esoteric knowledge imparted under the guise of initiation is not very useful. Rather it is vague, theatrical, mystical, and inconclusive: obscurum per obscurius (“explaining the obscure by means of the more obscure”). The new “initiate” is left with a tremendous feeling of self-importance, but he is unable to explain why this should be the case. Nor can he do anything particularly important with his new knowledge.

True initiation is not simply the acquisition of specific knowledge or skills; it involves a certain approach to the challenges of existence in general. An initiate, like a cat, must learn to land on his feet in any situation in which he may find himself. He does this by the acquired and applied technique of “stepping back to view the situation from outside himself”. He assigns relative importance to it, estimates his options as an actor within it, and seeks to actualize the most enlightened option. He may make mistakes due to lack of information, but he rarely errs on the basis of what he does know. His sense of intuition, moreover, will warn him whenever a situation is not whatever it immediately seems to be. He can then avoid premature conclusions and impulsive actions.

In 1923 the German scholar Dr. Ernst Schertel argued that all of reality possesses not only a physical, four-dimensional existence, but an innate, essential, metaphysical presence as well. This mana, as he termed it after the Polynesian, radiated an influence beyond its ordinary phenomenon, exerting subtle change that modern science and scientists have blundered blindly past in their simplistic, materialist focus. So they have become very good at answering the little questions, and very inept at explaining why the whole is often so much greater than the sum of its chemical jigsaw parts.

The true magician, said Schertel, bears no resemblance to the fictional stereotype of a superstitious fool. He is rather someone who has learned to recognize the mana of things, then to take it into account in his use of them. Moreover, Schertel continues, the magician perceives within himself nothing less than the ability to create mana, and to artfully communicate an ecstatic, subliminal reaction to it in others.64

The Temple of Set conceives the process of initiation as a Socratic refutation of confused, imprecise, and unsubstantiated information and thinking. It is the imparting of truth as much as we know it to be, and even more importantly it is the imparting of the ability to pursue truth and to recognize it when it is found.

64 Upon the publication of his book Magic: History, Theory, & Practice, Schertel sent a gift copy to the then-unknown Adolf Hitler, who annotated it extensively and retained it as the sole “occult” book in his personal library. As an example of the text which Hitler highlighted: “All men of genius possess this strength, and all peoples whose history did not just ‘happen’ but virtually condensed into a ‘myth’ possessed it. With this diffuse determination of fate, the supernatural (demonic) forces are indeed harnessed and assimilated, but apart from that they are unleashed in order that they may operate autonomously. This may cause misery and misfortune, but inexorably leads to a most profound ultimate consequence.” Despite, or perhaps because of Schertel’s impact upon Hitler, he was sent to a concentration camp in Nazi Germany.
Wisdom - knowledge of truth - cannot be taught to stupid intellects. A love of and insistence upon the truth cannot be taught to unethical individuals. Hence initiation is not something that can be “done to” someone merely by subjecting him to a series of classes, examinations, and ceremonies. All that the Temple can do - and all that it tries to do - is to spread out its banquet of truths, probabilities, hypotheses, and speculations before aspirants whom we suppose to be reasonably sincere. They must utilize it, together with such other resources as they may have, to achieve wisdom. Thus do they initiate themselves.

By its membership and degree system, the Temple merely formalizes the demonstrated levels of this achievement. This is why initiation within the Temple of Set is referred to as a process of Recognition.

The term “degree” is used because initiation itself is a constantly ongoing and expanding process. Hence one never attains initiation per se; rather one attains a particular “degree of” initiation.

The parameters of each Setian degree also expand as the Temple as a whole increases in wisdom and sophistication. This is in keeping with the principle of Xeper (“becoming”), which identifies the process of constantly-expanding personal evolution. “Science is not; it is becoming,” wrote Bakunin [in God and the State, 1882 CE]. “The learned man of today is but the know-nothing of tomorrow. Let him once imagine that he has reached the end, and for that very reason he sinks beneath even the babe just born.”

Within the Temple one does not become party to the “secrets of a degree” by first being appointed to that degree. Rather one, through his pursuit of wisdom and truth, gradually acquires those “secrets” through his own efforts, within and without the research systems of the Temple. If it is perceived that he has reached the level of wisdom and skill appropriate to a higher degree, he is Recognized as being entitled to that degree.

There are no penalties for revealing “esoteric secrets” in the Temple. We exist to promote knowledge of truth, not to conceal it. Setians should understand, however, that some of the truths known to the Priesthood of Set can be dangerous to oneself or others if misapplied, just as a loaded gun in the hands of a child is dangerous. Be careful what “guns” of your acquired knowledge you place in the hands of profane “children”.

It is impossible to overestimate the importance of the concept of truth to the raison d’etre of the Temple of Set. In the last analysis the Temple is a tool to uncover truth, and a vehicle for its application. Initiatory systems have failed to the extent that they have subordinated it to anything else - impressiveness, wealth, power, luxury, laziness ... the list of excuses, apologies, and rationalizations is endless.

The Temple agrees with Pythagoras and Plato that truth is an absolute Form or First Principle, which may be apprehended in specific instances through a combination of intellectual effort and enlightened intuition. Rigorous examination of the intellectual process - such as takes place in the Platonic Dialogues - is prerequisite to such apprehension. Thus it is important to educate oneself in what is known, as well as to develop one’s analytical and critical abilities, before attempting to apprehend the unknown.

Intuition - the power or faculty of knowing things without conscious reasoning - is an essential attribute of the initiate. Neither reasoning nor intuition alone will suffice; each must be used in conjunction with the other. Intuition alone can easily become mere fantasy and mysticism, while inductive reasoning can produce “logical” conclusions which are simply wrong.

Initiation, like wisdom and resourcefulness, is an intangible. As the initiate becomes fluent in the language and skills of Black Magic, so it becomes increasingly possible to recognize fellow initiates of the Art when encountered. And vice-versa.
The Two Paths

The terms “Left-Hand Path” (LHP) and “Right-Hand Path” (RHP) are used in different and often incompatible ways by various occultists. Reportedly the terms originated in Tantrism, a school of Mahayana Buddhism in northern India which taught that Buddhahood can be realized through various theurgic practices. For mantra and mudra ceremonies the female was positioned to the right of the male; for erotic rites she was positioned to the left. Theosophy’s H.P. Blavatsky felt sex-magic to be immoral and perverse, so she subsequently employed the term LHP to characterize the magical systems she didn’t like, and the term RHP to characterize the ones she did, i.e. Theosophy. Post-Blavatsky the terms have been expanded through popular usage to refer generally to what the Temple of Set defines as white magic (RHP) and Black Magic (LHP).

Most popular-occult organizations, to be sure, use the two terms simply to identify their moral biases. What they consider “good” is RHP, and what they consider “evil” is LHP. After Aleister Crowley left the Golden Dawn, he portrayed it as a “Black Lodge” and his own A.'.A.'. as the “Great White Brotherhood”; while on the other side of the fence W.B. Yeats and other G.'.D.'. leaders considered Crowley to be the Black Magician.

To further complicate the matter, there have been some deliberately criminal “Satanic” organizations which have avowedly followed the LHP as defined by those who consider it synonymous with degenerate and destructive practices. Such episodes have of course served to reinforce the conventional religious image of Satanism and Black Magic as nefarious practices.

So enduring was this stereotype that the Church of Satan found it very difficult to break free from it during the entire decade of its existence. All sorts of creeps, crackpots, criminals, and cranks pounded on the door of the Church, assuming that it would excuse and encourage whatever social shortcomings they embraced. The Temple of Set has avoided this problem, presumably because “Satan” is popularly associated with “evil” while “Set” is largely unknown outside of Egyptological circles.

The Temple of Set’s LHP orientation is, as noted above, a function of its definition of Black Magic. No moral or ethical stances are implied by the terms LHP and RHP per se, since they refer to techniques and systems rather than to the ends to which they are applied.

As defined within the Temple of Set:

- The Left-Hand Path (LHP) involves the conscious attempt to preserve and strengthen one’s isolate, psychecentric existence against the objective universe (OU) while apprehending, comprehending, and influencing a varying number of subjective universes (SU).

- The Right-Hand Path (RHP) involves the conscious attempt to dissolve or merge the self with the objective universe (OU).

To the Setian, the LHP is neither “good” nor “evil”; it is merely an avenue towards knowledge and power. While he may consider the RHP fruitless and even ridiculous, he likewise forbears to pronounce moral judgments concerning it. Indeed, some of the Temple’s most valuable information comes from individuals and institutions who are/were thoroughly convinced that they are/were treading the RHP.

Followers of the RHP are those whose stated goal is egocentric merger with the objective universe [which they confuse with the Universe as a whole]. They wish to harmonize their actions with it, attune their intellects to what they consider the God-intellect of the Universal Consciousness, and thus partake of the immortality and divinity presumably characterizing that Consciousness. This is the theoretical nirvana of the Buddhist, the Jainist, and the Hindu; the “salvation/grace/redemption” of the Christian.

The dilemma, of course, lies in the problem of “destroying” the ego and then continuing to prance about the Earth thinking, talking, writing, and acting as an obviously still-egocentric being who is just as obviously not One with the objective universe. The classic example of this is once again Aleister Crowley, who defined the grade of Magister Templi (8)=[3] to identify an initiate who had successfully achieved this objective-universal merger of consciousness, then went on to define the higher grade of Magus (9)=[2] as characterizing a magician of sufficient will and power to force a change in the state of being of that same universe. This is a conceptually impossible achievement if one is already identical with that universal state of being.

Hence it is a postulate of the Temple of Set that the attainment of Magister Templi (8)=[3] is the end of the line for a true follower of the RHP. If he truly destroys his psychocentric consciousness and attains nirvana, he becomes something akin to the prototypical Tibetan or Christian monk - a simple, childlike, unemotional, unegotistical animal who no more thinks of disturbing the objective universe than does an otter or a Sequoia redwood.

Those who claim attainment to Magus display either (a) a fall-back to a state of psychocentrism, hence a lower RHP grade, or (b) their de facto adherence to the LHP. Since the object of the LHP is to strengthen and exalt the psychocentric consciousness as something distinct from the objective universe, the characteristic action of a Magus V° is indeed a mark of supreme initiatory success.

Similarly, a Magister Templi IV° of the LHP is one who gains total Understanding of the objective universe from an external, personal point of perspective - and who complements this with a similarly-total Understanding of his own subjective universe.

Self-proclaimed gurus of the RHP are not usually inclined to adopt simple, pastoral, self-effacing, redwood-tree lifestyles. Rather they preen themselves by assuming regalia, offices, and wealth dazzling to the ego - while insisting that such luxuries are their rightful due precisely because they have set such a good example in no longer caring for them.

When confronted with the glaring hypocrisy of such positions, they retreat behind a smokescreen of religious mystery, mystical ambiguity, and “initiatory” secrecy. If in positions of sufficient power, they persecute, imprison, torture, and/or kill their critics. It is one of the more contemptible curiosities of human history that such snake-oil salesmen are never at a loss for wide-eyed, worshipful, stupefied followers.

The RHP societies which are of interest to the Temple are those which, whether accidentally or deliberately, have widened the knowledge-base of Black Magic. Almost every conventional religion of serious historical consequence falls into this category, as each has worked out various psychological approaches to the “human equation” to explain it, indoctrinate it, and/or control it. The Setian is accordingly invited to approach the subject of comparative religious philosophy as a most useful tool. (Reading List Category #3)

Certain religious or philosophical bodies took a more-or-less deliberate jump in the direction of magic. Some of the more notable of these - professing the RHP - are discussed in Categories #4, #9, and #10 of the Reading List. One does not have to be an expert on any of them to be a competent Black Magician, but should know enough about their particular fields of research to consult their histories, writings, and records as they may be useful to one’s own interests and endeavors.
Does the Temple of Set view itself as being in competition with or in diametric opposition to the RHP? No. We consider ourselves as magicians who have a clear understanding of what we are doing, why it works, and where we would like to go with it. We assess the RHP as being at best innocently confused and at worst hypocritically deceitful on all three counts. It is a behavioral phenomenon of natural humanity. It is not dangerous because of its esoteric wisdom, but rather because of its occasional, animalistic fits of exoteric unwisdom. The Black Magician treats it as one does any other dangerous, primitive, emotional animal; he views it from a distance, where he may learn from it and appreciate its beauty while remaining prudentely out of reach of its teeth and claws.

Initiatory Degrees of the Temple of Set

The Temple of Set defines initiation in terms of six formal degrees. They are: Setian I°, Adept II°, Priest or Priestess of Set III°, Magister or Magistra Templi IV°, Magus or Maga V°, and Ipsissimus or Ipsissima VI°.

This is not a simple progression for the “typical” Setian to use as a barometer of success. While each degree has certain connections with the others - which accounts for their integration into a single system - each degree is also a thing unto itself: a state of being highly distinct from those above and below it. Hence a Priest III° is not simply “3/4 a Magister IV°”, nor can the IV° be attained merely by becoming very good at the work of the III°.

Here the parable of the horse and the cart may be cited: One cannot fix on the “glamor” of initiation - the formalized degree - as a goal and expect to get anywhere. Even if the trappings are acquired through “ticket-punching” and the projection of an artificially-impressive image, both the individual and the awarding agency will ultimately feel contempt for the farce in which they have been participating.

Rather the individual must strive to awaken to, comprehend, and actualize all of the powers latent within his intelligence and psychecentric being. As he accomplishes this, true initiation takes place - whether or not it is formally recognized by an outside agency. Because the Temple of Set is composed of initiates who understand this principle, however, true initiation is recognized and formalized by official designations on a Temple-wide basis. Hence the term “Recognizing” of degrees rather than “awarding” or “confering”.

Ancestry and Evolving Definition of the Grade>Degree Titles

The titular structure of the Temple of Set’s degree system dates back to the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, a turn-of-the-century Cabalistic/Egyptian magical society that flourished in Britain.65 [See Reading List Category #10.] The grades (as they were then called) of the G.'.D.' were: 65 Priest Leon Wild notes that the Golden Dawn’s grade titles were adapted by one of its founders, Dr Wynn Westcott, from the elder Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia (founded by Robert Little in 1866), which in turn had adapted them from the Gold und Rosenkreuz, a Prussian occult society (founded 1757?). Cf. Christopher McIntosh, The Rose Cross and the Age of Reason: Eighteenth-Century Rosicrucianism in Central Europe and Its Relationship to the Enlightenment. Brill Academic Publishers, 1997, ISBN: 9004095020.

This elevenfold system was keyed to a Hebrew Cabalistic concept known as the “Tree of Life”. According to the Cabala, the Universe and all of its contents derive from a manifestation of God termed Ain Soph Aour, the Infinite or Limitless Light. Issuing from this source are ten emanations or Sephiroth, being progressively coarser or more materialistic manifestations of God. As the G.'.D.'., initiate ascends from one level of mental existence to another, then, he supposedly is that much closer to the purely spiritual existence of God.

The G.'.D.'.' grades of Zelator through Philosophus were concerned with an understanding and mastery of the “elemental” forces governing the physical plane. The three Adeptus grades - which collectively comprised the Second Order of the G.'.D.'., (the Order of the Red Rose and Golden Cross) - raised the initiate to spiritual levels of apprehension. The grades of Magister Templi through Ipsissimus were considered Astral grades beyond incarnated human manifestation; hence none of the three G.'.D.'.' leaders (Westcott, Mathers, Woodman) professed a claim to them. As Dr. F.I. Regardie observed in The Golden Dawn (RL #10B):

> It is impossible for the ordinary individual to understand those above the grade of Adeptus Minor, and individuals who lay claim to such exalted grades, by that very act place a gigantic question mark against the validity of their attainment. He that exalted is humble. And to have tasted that which is conveyed by the Adeptus Minor grade is so lofty an experience that few in their right minds, unless they were extremely saintlike in character, would consider themselves as having passed officially to a higher spiritual state.

It is perhaps more to the point to say that the criteria for advancing even to the Second Order were such a confusing and inconsistent mixture of Cabalism and Osirian Egyptian mythology that any sort of objective evaluation of one’s initiatory level became impossible. Grade-promotion within the G.'.D.'.' thus became largely a matter of politics and personal favoritism, with the undergoing of initiatory rituals and the memorizing of corresponding esoteric trivia being a secondary consideration (RL #10F, #10G).

After breaking with the G.'.D.'., Aleister Crowley determined to purify its grade system in his Astrum Argentum ([Order of the] Silver Star). He described the A.'.A.'.' system in an appendix to #9K entitled “One Star in Sight”. It was a change from the G.'.D.'.' concept only insofar as it was redesigned to coincide with the concepts of initiation set forth in the Book of the Law. Certain grade names were added or altered, and there was a general lessening of “pure” Cabalistic emphasis:

The Order of the Star called S.S. is, in respect of its existence upon the Earth, an organized body of men and women distinguished among their fellows by the qualities here enumerated. They exist in their own Truth, which is both universal and unique. They move in accordance with their own Wills, which are each unique yet coherent with the universal will.

They perceive (that is, understand, know, and feel) in love, which is both unique and universal. The order consists of eleven grades or degrees and is numbered as follows. These compose three groups: the Orders of the S.S., of the R.C., and of the G.D. respectively.

THE ORDER OF THE SILVER STAR
Ipsissimus (10)=[1]
Magus (9)=[2]
Magister Templi (8)=[3]

THE ORDER OF THE ROSY CROSS
(Babe of the Abyss - the link)
Adeptus Exemptus (7)=[4]
Adeptus Major (6)=[5]
Adeptus Minor (5)=[6]

THE ORDER OF THE GOLDEN DAWN
(Dominus Liminis - the link)
Philosophus (4)=[7]
Practicus (3)=[8]
Zelator (2)=[9]
Neophyte (1)=[10]
Probationer (0)=[0]

(These figures have special meanings to the initiated and are commonly employed to designate the grades.)

The general characteristics and attributions of these Grades are indicated by their correspondences on the Tree of Life, as may be studied in detail in the Book 777 (#9M).

Student: His business is to acquire a general intellectual knowledge of all systems of attainment, as declared in the prescribed books (Appendix 1 of #9K).

Probationer: His principal business is to begin such practices as he may prefer, and to write a careful record of the same for one year.

Neophyte: Has to acquire perfect control of the Astral Plane.

Zelator: His main work is to achieve complete success in Asana and Pranayama. He also begins to study the formula of the Rosy Cross.

Practicus: Is expected to complete his intellectual training, and in particular to study the Qabalah.

Philosophus: Is expected to complete his moral training. He is tested in devotion to the Order.

Dominus Liminis: Is expected to show mastery of Pratyahara and Dharana.

Adeptus (without): Is expected to perform the Great Work and to attain the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

Adeptus (within): Is admitted to the practice of the formula of the Rosy Cross on entering the College of the Holy Ghost.

Adeptus (Major): Obtains a general mastery of practical Magick, though without comprehension.

Adeptus (Exemptus): Completes in perfection all these matters. He then either (a) becomes a Brother of the Left Hand Path or (b) is stripped of all his attainments and of himself as well, even of his Holy Guardian Angel, and becomes a Babe of the Abyss, who, having transcended the Reason, does nothing but grow in the womb of its mother. It then finds itself a -

Magister Templi (Master of the Temple): whose functions are fully described in Liber 418, as is this whole initiation from Adeptus Exemptus. See also “Aha!” His principal business it to tend his “garden” of disciples and to obtain a perfect understanding of the Universe. He is a Master of Samadhi.
Magus: Attains to wisdom, declares his law [see Liber I vel Magi], and is a Master of all Magick in its greatest and highest sense.

Ipsissimus: Is beyond all this and beyond all comprehension of those of lower degrees.

The grade system of the A.'.A.'. was the one known to Anton Szandor LaVey when he instituted the degrees of the Church of Satan. Following the founding of the Church, he had assumed the degree of Magus, but it was not until the year V/1970 that a full, formal system was introduced.

As will be clear from a reading of my The Church of Satan, the Church of Satan rejected the Cabalistic concept of initiation altogether. In VII/1972 and again in X/1975 I wrote the official descriptions of the degrees for the Cloven Hoof newsletter. Abridged from the latter article:

Satanist I°: When the Church accepts an applicant, it permits the extension of its power, influence, and reputation to that person. Because the majority of Satanists pursue personal interests not directly connected with the Church organization, the I° - which grants membership benefits but entails no reciprocal responsibilities - is ideal for them. In this context it is an end in itself and should not be regarded as merely a “training” degree. The title of the degree serves to emphasize this; one is either a Satanist or one is not.

Witch or Warlock II°: While the I° implies the Church’s acceptance of endorsement by a certain individual, it does not certify the Church’s reciprocal endorsement of that individual as an effective and accomplished Satanic magician. When we do make such an evaluation and decide that the Satanist in question is adept at comprehending and utilizing the contents of the Satanic Bible, the II° is granted. In one sense the II° is the highest recognition possible within a true Satanic order, because Satanism is characterized by diversity of individual technique. Once the Church is satisfied that a certain member is a capable magician, that is all that need be said.

Priest or Priestess of Mendes III°: In other churches the priest or minister is simply a semi-professional or professional organizer, demagogue, and ringmaster. He is also considered to be a shepherd, charged with the moral and spiritual guidance of his flock. The Satanic Priest is altogether different in concept. He is chosen for ordination not by other humans, but by the Powers of Darkness, who accentuate his characteristics and achievements in such a fashion as to identify him as Elect to the Council of Nine. Once declared Elect by the Nine, an individual has the choice to accept or reject formal ordination. If he declines, he retains full control of his Will and continues normal existence. Should he accept, he will find that his life will be warped in unforeseen and often strange directions, as the Powers of Darkness actualize the Will of Our Lord Satan through him. Simultaneously he will come to wield powers that will permit no obstacle to stand before him. The Satanic Priesthood takes its name from the ancient Egyptian Priesthood of Set, which was centered in the vicinity of Mendes (Ba-neb-tett) and Tanis during the latter days of the empire.

Magister IV°: This degree is conferred by the High Priest in one of three designations: Master of the Cavern (Magister Čaverni), Master of the Temple (Magister Templi), or Grand Master (Magister Magnus). The degree and its designations refer to the recipient’s expertise and scope of magical influence.

Magus V°: This is the highest degree conferred within the authority of the Mandate of the Church of Satan, reflecting the Will of the Prince of Darkness himself. Presently it is held only by Anton Szandor LaVey. Like the IV°, the V° is a measure of an individual and not the designation of an organizational function.

My first policy statement as High Priest of Set concerning the degree system of the Temple of Set was contained in a July 15, X/1975 letter to the founding membership, abridged as follows:

As I have said or written to several of you individually, the true degrees are properly neither “rewards” for past achievements nor “incentives” for future ones. Rather they are a form of recognition of an individual’s position at a point in time. This concept applies to all five degrees.
In the Church of Satan degrees I°-III° were conferred by Anton Szandor LaVey, either with or without the aid of a formal, written test or questionnaire. The IV° was conferred by him without any guidelines at all. The V° he assumed, being justified in doing so by the Infernal Mandate.

The Temple of Set will operate differently. It is my feeling that any person who is rightfully a III° has the judgment to recognize a I° or II° individual, and therefore should be empowered to do so. Persons may join the Temple as Setians I° directly through the Executive Director, but no I° will be able to advance to II° unless he has interacted with a III°+ and demonstrated to that official that he is deserving of the higher degree.

The same holds true for the III°, except that it will now be IV° officials who perform the evaluation. A IV° should be able to recognize a person who is Elect to the Priesthood. The criteria are both too complex and too subtle to be encapsulated into any written examination.

The same again holds true for the IV°, with one difference in that the High Priest, upon making a IV° Recognition, must secure confirmation from the Council of Nine.

The concept of the I° today is the same as it was in X/1975. Such information and resources as the Temple has to offer are placed at the disposal of the new Setian, and using both these and other tools he or she is expected to take the initiative to become an Adept in the Black Arts. No standardized criteria are used by the Priesthood in performing II° evaluations, since “every man and every woman is a star” and thus will apply the Art in a different manner.

It remains necessary for an aspiring Setian to seek out compatible contacts from among the Priesthood, so that his or her achievements can be known and appreciated for what they are. Here the initiative for contact is decidedly the responsibility of the I°, and III°s will expect to be contacted for advisory and evaluative purposes. Priests and Priestesses III° who are available for contact are included in the Temple of Set Intercommunication Roster in the Crystal Tablet of Set.

An Adept II° is Recognized by the Temple of Set as a competent Black Magician. This statement is never made lightly. Like an academic or professional degree, the II° signifies not so much the passing of examinations as the “licensing” of the recipient to practice the Art in a knowledgeable, ethical, and professional manner. Unlike the I°, in which one may remain no longer than two years, there is no time limit for II° Temple affiliation. It is expected that the majority of Setians will hold the II° for Earthly life.

II°s, like I°s, partake of the benefits and services of the Temple and have no reciprocal obligations save to respond promptly and courteously to contacts from the Priesthood. The Temple of Set remains committed to individualism, and it deliberately avoids intrusions into the prerogatives, interests, or privacy of the I°/II° membership. Reciprocally it is assumed that I°/II° Initiates will conduct their lives and personal affairs in such a way as not to jeopardize the dignity and ethical reputation of the Temple.

When constructing the Church of Satan’s degree system, Anton LaVey deliberately opted for the medieval-sounding “Witch/Warlock” designation for the II° rather than the more esoteric-sounding “Adept”. Part of the reason for this was LaVey’s preference for the colorful imagery of traditional Satanism, but he was also wary of being tainted by the goody-two-shoes/Cabalistic connotations of white-light “adeptships”.

The Temple of Set, in searching for the single term most descriptive of the II°, ultimately concluded that “Adept” was it. Like the Church of Satan, we see no reason for half-a-dozen variations on this title; one either is Adept in the Black Arts or one is not. Thus you could say that, as compared to the A'. A'. system, the transition between the Temple of Set’s I° and II° would correspond to a transition between the (1)=[10] and (7)=[4]. Obviously this is not a sudden transition, but the Temple of Set feels that any sort of graduated subdivision of the process, as in the G'. D'. and A'. A'., is not helpful in our particular situation. As Adeptship in the Black Arts is non-standardized, there is no one path toward it to be incrementated.

As was the case during the Age of Satan (I-X), the III° is the most essential and significant distinction recognized by the degree system. The I° and II° are intellectual measurements and so constitute a strengthening of the purely human mind to its maximum potential as such. The III° identifies a transition from a human state of being to that of a divine being - ordained by, consecrated by, and sacred to Set. The IV°-VI° are characterized by certain additional attributes, but none of them approaches the III° distinction in essential sublimity and sanctity.

Just as the II° represents the height of personal identity, and glory to be taken in that identity via application of the Black Arts, so the Priesthood involves the opening of a very special kind of door: the merging of the consciousness, indeed the personality, with that of the Prince of Darkness himself. In this Working the Priest or Priestess in no sense loses personal identity or self-awareness; rather one’s consciousness is augmented, energized, and strengthened by that of Set. Hence the Priest or Priestess - when acting as such, for “Priesthood” is a deliberate act, not an “office” - is something more than human, something more than the individual whose human visage appears before onlookers. At such times he or she is not “possessed”, but is rather become a veritable living Temple indwelled by the presence of Set.

It is impossible to overemphasize how alien this concept of Priesthood is from that of conventional religions, in which it is merely a paid profession and/or bureaucratic function for the promulgation of various institutions calling themselves “religions”. As Black Magic is merely a tool for use by magicians, so the Temple of Set as an institution is ultimately a vehicle for the identification and formalization of the Priesthood of Set, through whose souls flow the current of the Æon of Set. Each Priest and Priestess of Set is a Temple of Set: a psyche so purified, educated, consecrated, and initiated that it has become a fit medium for the Prince of Darkness. Nowhere is this more succinctly illustrated than in the ultimate admonition of the Egyptian sage to Her-Bak, at the culmination of the latter’s initiation as a Priest [in Reading List #2L]:

O Her-Bak. O Egypt. You are the temple which the Neter of Neters inhabits. Awaken Him ... then let the temple fall crashing.

It is difficult to describe degrees beyond the III° for those not of the Priesthood without resorting to specialized terminology intelligible primarily within the Priesthood. Ultimately, to fully Understand one of these degrees is to be deserving of Recognition to same. Some general characteristics, however, may be discussed.

As the Priesthood constitutes a merging of the individual soul with that of Set, so the Magistry constitutes an expansion of that merger to a full apprehension of the Æon of Set. The Master knows not only the consciousness of Set, but the reach of that consciousness and the resultant view of creation and existence it embraces. All particular phenomena are evaluated, placed, and balanced within the continuum of the Æon by the Master, and such adjustments in events as the Master makes are for Æonic purposes - some of which may be obscure or even imperceptible to those below this degree.

Setians interacting with Masters of the Temple are tempted to assess them merely as “senior Priests or Priestesses”, and indeed every Master is first and foremost an Initiate of the Priesthood, invariably with a long and distinguished III° record. But the IV° is neither just an administrative promotion nor a reward for distinguished service; it is an initiatory state of being in itself. Others - and Masters themselves - lose sight of this at their peril.
Aleister Crowley, who felt that the grade of Magister Templi (8)=[3] was indeed attainable by incarnated humans, suggested that such attainment - the successful “crossing of the Abyss” - necessitated the annihilation of the personality and one’s absorption in the Universal consciousness. The fallacy of this, of course, is that an (8)=[3] continued both a particular existence and a particular perspective. The initiate might insist that he possessed no further separateness from the cosmos, but the very act of insistence necessitates the sensation of such a distinction.

The degree of Magus - V° Temple of Set/Church of Satan, (9)=[2] A.'A./ G.'D.'. - identifies a Master who has “stepped outside” the totality of the existing Æonic formula to alter it in an evolutionary way. Such alteration may result in the inauguration of a new Æon, or it may result in an improvement in or strengthening of the current Æon. The change itself may be massive or subtle; but it will invariably be alien to the existing Æonic formula, and will thus tend to be viewed skeptically or suspiciously. Implementation of the change is spoken of as the Task of a Magus, and undertaking of such a Task amidst the resistant inertia of All Else is called the Curse of a Magus.

The degree of Ipsissimus - VI° Temple of Set, (10)=[1] A.'A./G.'D.'. - was treated evasively by Aleister Crowley, most probably because his claim to the lower grade of Magus had already caused him such difficulty. [Initiates of higher degrees soon learn to their annoyance that a proportionate percentage of their time is devoted to defending their suitability for such exalted titles. The temptation is to refuse to admit to them altogether, so that one may get on with one’s Work unpestered.] In any case, an Ipsissimus is preliminarily a “successful Magus”: one whose Task is complete.

Inherent in such completion, however, is a unique perception of the new Æonic inertia which has resulted, placing the Ipsissimus at once within and without the Æon itself. To function as an Ipsissimus, he must work to perfect and harmonize not only the created or modified Æon, but also its entire relationship with preexisting and potential æons. Thus he enhances the Work of the Magi; thus he ensures that the Understanding of the Masters of the Temple is not futile because of factors beyond the æon in which they tend their gardens.

It is the Curse of a Magus not to be Understood, in that he has set out to define and promulgate something alien to the existing inertia of magical philosophy. It is the doom of an Ipsissimus to Understand a great many æons simultaneously: to see how they may be exclusive yet complementary, independent yet interrelated, sequential yet coincidental.

The Initiates of any degree of the Priesthood (III°-VI°) may function in a lower degree than the highest one attained, and in fact usually does. About 90% of all Priesthood functions take place at the III° level, with most of the remaining Work characteristic of the IV°. V° Work is sharp and “surgical” in nature, and that of the VI° is usually - but not always - too subtle to be noticed.

Of all the difficulties encountered by the Temple of Set - and its predecessors - since its inception, none has caused greater damage to both the institution and the individuals involved than abuses of the degree system: generally the result of rash, egotistical lunges towards what the ambitious person perceives simply in terms of increased social status. As I would hope this discussion points out, such efforts by the unqualified merely result in a handful of air insofar as the individual is concerned - but accompanied by the very real hazards of trying to function in a hyperdemanding capacity without the necessary skills to do so if one somehow succeeds in pro forma Recognition.

It is the sacred purpose of the Temple to Recognize each of its Initiates carefully, responsibly, and appropriately - and to encourage each and every Initiate to attain to his or her greatest potential. One intentional symbolism of this is that all medallions - from I° to VI° - are identical save in background color. No Setian is “better” than any other Setian by virtue of holding a particular degree - only more well-traveled along certain kinds of paths. The more Setians perceive one another as fellow-travelers with meaningful experiences to communicate, the more they can maximize the very real benefits of the degree system as it was conceived to function.

The Setian Magi

We come now to the focus of this chapter, which is the degree of Magus/Maga V° as it is realized, Recognized, and activated within the initiatory environment of the Temple of Set.

At the commencements of both the Church of Satan and the Temple of Set, the V° seemed ostensibly ex officio significant to those foundings. Arguably that was indeed the case with the Church, which did not institute its formal I°-V° structure until 1970, four years after it had begun. A V° was appropriate to set what Anton LaVey had done above and apart from the other Masters of the Church.

But, the Book of Coming Forth by Night notwithstanding, the V° was not so simple in the context of the Æon and Temple of Set. We appreciated, not just from refinement of the Church of Satan over the years, but from previous Western initiatory traditional definition, that this degree is, as summarized in Chapter #6:

... characterized by the introduction of a new factor into this existing philosophical universe, sufficiently potent and significant as to evoke change to its very core. In traditional magical terminology the Magus “Utters a Word” to set this dynamic in motion; although the full factor requires often quite detailed explanation and elaboration, it can be encapsulated, symbolized by a single term - such as Agape, Anatta, Agathon, Thelema (of the Æon of Horus), Indulgence (of the Age of Satan), and Xeper, Xem, Runa, Remanifest, and Arkte (of the Æon of Set to date).

So intensely and obsessively does the Magus identify with the Uttered Word that it in effect becomes a personal universe, outside of which reality is unintelligible and inadequate. To others a Magus driven by this vision may seem inexplicable, irrational, even insane. This phenomenon is “the Curse of the Magus” - that is not to be Understood even by nearby Initiates of Understanding!

The V° Recognition of Ronald K. Barrett in 1978 was our first venture into the concept of an Æon-enhancing V°. But by 1996 the consideration of Magistri Don Webb and Robert Robinson for Recognition as Magi raised fresh issues concerning just what the V° is, including its relationship to the Temple of Set as an institution and the Æon of Set as an environment. We had all experienced the evolution of the I°, II°, and IV° from their 1975 definitions; only the III° - as the sacred Priesthood of Set - remained eternal and sublime in its definition. That we had not devoted more thought to the V° is understandable, since there hadn’t been too many V°s in the Temple’s history - and those who did appear seemed embraceable by the 1975-vintage definition of this degree.

With the V° Recognition of Stephen Flowers we introduced the notion that V° initiation occurs not merely within the environment of the Temple of Set proper, but also through other media (such as Stephen’s independent runic activities, the Rune-Gild, the Ring of Troth, etc.). The V° thus evolved into a level of initiation bridging the Temple per se and simultaneous/coincidental influences within the Æon of Set.

This in turn forced us to look more closely at just what our current Understanding of an “æon” was. Ca. 1975 it seemed fairly easy: The Æon of Set was a “magical & philosophical climate” of which the Temple of Set was an organizational [re]manifestation.
As the Temple became more complex and diversified over the years, however, it was more difficult to pin down “where it ends” in Initiates’ lives and something “climatic” persists.

In 1975 we had already modified the preexisting Crowley definition by postulating that an æon is not a sequential chunk of historical time [including all events therein]. Rather, we said, it is a unique level of philosophical perspective: a way of looking at things and behaving with regard to them. Hence Setians might see about them some people existing in the Æons of Isis, Osiris, Horus, or Set - more often situational combinations of these. Thus the Æon of Set did not replace its predecessors as much as provide an additional alternative to them.

We retained the Crowley notions that a Magus either (a) announces a new æon or (b) enhances an existing/prevailing one. But did these options give the degree sufficient flexibility for the multitude of ways in which it may manifest itself, especially in light of its being by definition something unexpected, unprecedented?

Should æons be envisioned as things in an evolutionary “hierarchy”, like Plato’s Pyramid of Thought, with the simple at the bottom and the complex at the top? Or are they just different?

The danger on the other side of “all this” was that, if we were not careful, we could very easily destroy any framework for making sense of magical philosophy (which æons are) simply by introducing endless exceptions (which would inevitably appear). We needed to keep the concept of an æon useful as it had been, but allow it to sensibly evolve as we developed increasingly sophisticated means to define and appreciate it.

For instance the 1996 Don Webb V° Recognition introduced the proposition that two Magi can Utter the same Word (Xeper) in different ways. That was something new and fascinating.

Simultaneously the proposed Robert Robinson V° introduced a Word (Being) which is seemingly two contradictory things at once. On one hand “being” has been opposed to “becoming” as stasis vs. evolutionary change. On the other hand, Robert appeared to envision “being” as a transcendent identity necessarily resulting from the dynamics of Xeper, Remanifestation, et al.

That in turn begged comparison of Being to Ronald K. Barrett’s Xem, which was a conceptual “focus” of Xeper. One might differentiate the two by saying that Xem is a kind of “Xeper gunsight” for the Initiate to use in process, while “Being” is a theoretical or actual state of transcendence resulting from Xeper. But this is just an example. Ultimately the definition, significance, relevance, and application of “Being”, like any other æonic Word, comprise the Task/Curse of the Uttering Magus to actualize.

This all comes down on the Masters of the Temple, who through their Understanding have a responsibility to “anchor” definitions and concepts relevant to Setians, such that all of us can speak a common language concerning them.

The statements of the Recognized Setian Magi since Ronald K. Barrett (whose Xem has already been discussed in Chapter #7) appear as Appendices #91-95. consensus seems to be emerging, a formal Council nomination can be made. Then the nominee undergoes extensive examination by all Councillors, and only if there is unanimous approval is the V° Recognized.

Unlike the I°-IV°, however, V° Recognition is not a definitive certification by the Temple of Set. Indeed by the very definition of the V° it cannot possibly be. It may more accurately be thought of as a formal license to undertake the Task and overcome the Curse of a Magus; the High Priesthood, the Council, and the Masters of the Temple are saying that they think such a magical adventure is warranted and the new Magus or Maga capable of it.

The validation of this approach to the V° may be seen in the success of those so Recognized since the Temple’s founding. Even the two Magi who subsequently departed the Temple - Ronald K. Barrett and Robert Robinson - stayed long enough to see the Utterance of their Words have profound and wide-reaching effect upon many other Setians, extending long after their departures.

As those who have also experienced it would, I am sure, agree, V° initiation is neither something to be sought after nor pleasant if it does occur. It is like being dragged from the cozy, relaxing library of a contented Master of the Temple and shot out of a circus cannon. More traumatic than this abrupt change of environment is the obsession that accompanies an authentic V° initiation: One cannot do otherwise than pursue it with all of one’s energy and fervor. The Magus not only Utters his Word; he becomes a living embodiment of it. Setians thus apprehend such individuals as Magi; in profane society they might be vaguely, and mostly mistakenly, revered or reviled as prophets, visionaries, mystics, or madmen.

But what the true Magi have really done is to each unlock one more door to the Setian’s attainment of personal divinity.
Chapter 12: Beyond the Seas

Interest in and development of the Temple of Set in countries other than the United States, and the continuing internationalization of the Temple.
Chapter 13: A Tree in the North

The “Satanic crime” urban myths and hysteria of the 1980s in the United States and elsewhere.

The impact of this climate upon the Temple of Set, its public posture, Initiates, and observers/critics.

The Presidio of San Francisco “Satanic ritual abuse” scam against Lilith and myself, including the resultant investigations, lawsuits, media treatment, and after-effects.

Legacy of the witch-hunts generally upon the viability and public nature of Left-Hand Path religion in this and other countries.
Chapter 14: The Cybertemple of Set

The introduction, growth, and eventual extensive use of computers, cyberspace, and the Internet by the Temple of Set and individual Setians & groups.

Glinda, my 1976 PolyMorphic 8813, who would later Remanifest as the Temple’s ten-year BBS system during the 1990s.

Magister Michael Grumboski’s original use of mainframes to keep Temple membership records.

Magistra Wendall’s early computer work and chip-creation during her original Scroll Editorship.

Electronic, artificial music, and “mad lab” experiments by Magister Whitaker & others. Die Elektrischen Vorspieles raised to new heights of voltage, wattage, and mania.

Entrance of the Temple into the jungle of the Internet and websites, guided by Magister Robert Menschel, Priest John Youril, Magister Douglas Pridgen, Magister Eric Kauschen, Magistra Patty Hardy, and other mad scientists.

The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly: Is the Temple of Set in danger of being sucked into an electronic mode of existence, a la Tron? Will this augment or harm its initiatory function? Should lines be drawn, and if so where?
Chapter 15: A Passing-By

In 1996 I finally laid down my High Priesthood of Set, whereupon Set entrusted it to Magus Don Webb.

In this chapter I will summarize, as did Joseph Curwen in his journal, “of Whither He Voyag’d, Where He Stay’d, Whom He Sawe, and What He Learnt”. What has my long journey through initiation done to and for me, and to others? What have I discovered concerning my identity? What have I been here to do, and how well have I done it? What do others think of me for good or ill, and why? How may I be remembered or forgotten?

Also in this chapter my unique relationship with Lilith: how we have come to know and to regard one another over the years, and what our future together portends.

There came a time when they were not content
To shriek against the portals and the shrine.
They crushed the silver gates, and in they went,
Hot-handed, on a search for the Divine.

And the white portals opened ceaselessly,
And the great purple curtains flapped and fell,
And the great mass of people swept to see
Naked Untruth, but how they could not tell.

Still they found nothing godlike, but a throne
Empty and time-worn, in an empty hall,
And a white heap of manuscripts, alone,
And the Sun’s rays that fell, nor ceased to fall.

And, in one sheltered crevass they went by,
A flight of stairs that wound into the sky.

Chapter 16: Uncle Setnakt

An overview of the Temple of Set during the High Priesthood of Magus Don Webb 1996-2002. While I could undertake to write this chapter myself, it may be co-written with Ipsissimus Webb, or even solely by him. We’ll see what he thinks as this book begins to come together, whether his time/interests permit, and so on.

How did the Temple change and why from its 1975-96 posture? Successes? Failures? Surprises?

How did the experience of being High Priest affect Don Webb personally and inititorily? His Recognition as Ipsissimus VI°.

What are the legacies of the Webb years that will most strongly endure into the future of the Temple and the Æon?
Chapter 17: Zeena

In 2002 Magistra Zeena Schreck was chosen by the Council of Nine to be the next High Priestess of Set, to formally take office at the International Conclave in 2002. Unfortunately a short time later she resigned the office and departed from the Temple.

This chapter will treat her personal Odyssey to this highest office of the Left-Hand Path, including her Satanic Baptism by Anton LaVey, rise to be the eventual public representative of the post-1975 Church of Satan, rejection of the Church, independent work with Radio Werewolf, the Werewolf Order, Wolfs Lair, Hell House, etc.

Her encounter and relationship with Magister Nikolas Schreck, and his interests and influence within the Temple.

Her and Nikolas’ international travels, influence, and interests.

How she came ultimately to be selected by the Council for the High Priesthood [and the first High Priestess] of Set.

Why this failed.

As with Chapter 16, this chapter may be co-written with Zeena or written by me, depending upon time/interest, etc. We’ll see when we get there!
Chapter 18: Starry Wisdom

Following the departure of Zeena Schreck in 2002, the Council of Nine selected Magistra Patty Hardy to be the High Priestess of Set, assuming office in 2004.

Magistra Hardy brought to the Temple of Set not only a comprehensive grasp of Setian initiation generally, but exceptional personal experience in, and wisdom concerning the archaeoastronomical bases of ancient Egyptian metaphysics. Her High Priesthood promises to develop such concepts to unprecendented levels of sophistication.

This chapter - which will necessarily have to be written with her tolerant oversight! - will introduce her adventures, explorations, and theories to date. I find it both pleasing and exciting that it will, probably through all future editions of The Temple of Set, remain “unfinished”.

After its “long, strange trip” of 30 years “and counting”, what shall we say of the Temple of Set? What has it meant to the thousands of persons whose lives have touched upon it over the years? Is it beneficial to external society? To itself internally? Has it successfully avoided the trap of becoming “a bureaucracy for its own sake” and managed instead to focus on the enhancement of each individual Initiate’s experience?

Where best has it succeeded and why?
Where has it failed and why, and has it learned from those failures?
Can it survive amidst the world’s current and apparent future social climates?
To what if any extent can it, and should it, attempt to compensate for failings in society, as for instance inadequate education, courtesy, etc. of individuals who approach it?
What are valid reasons and qualifications for persons coming to the Temple?
Why should others not be?

What should we envision for the Æon of Set? Should we see it as finite, and if so with what theoretical boundaries or eventualities? Will there be a subsequent æon, and how might we [or others] conceptualize it?

What of the eventuality of the Order of Horus becoming a Temple of Horus, and a new sam-taui of Set and Horus returning to Earth?
What?
Who?
When?
How?
Why?
To what beginning?
Appendix I: The Sphinx and the Chimaera

- a conversation recorded & annotated by Michael A. Aquino IV°
May 30, 1975

In this Greater Black Magic working, a sphinx and a chimæra were evoked to manifestation in order to explore certain magical implications of the Dialogues of Plato. Placed upon the altar: The Collected Dialogues of Plato, Hamilton & Cairns (Ed.), Princeton University Press, 1961 CE.

The Sphinx: I think it essential to preface any discussion of a single Platonic dialogue with two major qualifications. The first is that, to be treated without distortion, Plato’s philosophy must be appreciated in its entirety. Emphasis upon any single dialogue or group of dialogues carries with it a certain unfairness to the author.

The Chimæra: Yet our span of materialization is limited, and we cannot hope to treat the entire range of Plato’s thought in the time available to us.

The Sphinx: True, and so let us focus first upon The Sophist, which illustrates many of the points most important to this investigation.

The Chimæra: But what is your second qualification?

The Sphinx: There is the problem of understanding what Plato “really meant”. This is an issue against which I am powerless to defend myself. I am of Khem and not of Hellas; I am bilingual only in English and hence must depend upon my understanding of Plato as he is translated into the English language. The dialogues center much of their discussion around terms whose final definitions are elusive at best, even in conversations carried out at intellectual planes below that of Plato. Then, too, there is always the spectre of imprecise translation from the Greek to the English. And Plato himself could not anticipate this.

The Chimæra: Your qualifications are entirely acceptable. Proceed.

The Sphinx: The initial question raised by The Sophist is its raison d’être. Why should Plato have felt it necessary to include such a dialogue as this in his philosophy at all? Was it truly because the included lines of argument required exposure? Or did Plato intend the document rather as a gauntlet of sorts to be flung before the Sophists themselves?

The Chimæra: I sense that the editors of this book ventured one explanation. Grasping it with a forepaw, he turns to page #958. Yes, here it is:

The argument is hung on the figure of the Sophist quite arbitrarily. No real picture is given of the men who were the professional instructors of Greece for many years. All Plato does is ascribe to them every notion he disapproves. He detested the whole band of Sophists. To him they were shallow-minded, pretentious, superficial, mercenary - they were really doing what Socrates was charged with, corrupting the minds of the young.
And this appears to be reinforced by the dialogue’s concluding statement, which seems to be little more than an outright vilification of Sophistry. *He turns to page #1016 and quotes:

The art of contradiction-making, descended from an insincere kind of conceited mimicry, of the semblance-making breed, derive from imagemaking, distinguished as a portion, not divine but human, of production, that presents a shadowy play of words - such are the blood and lineage which can, with perfect truth, be assigned to the authentic Sophist.

The Sphinx: Obviously that is not an objective philosophical statement. It is a deliberate insult reached through a dialectical process which, in retrospect, seems a transparent parody of Plato’s more serious argumentative style. In most of the Platonic dialogues one feels that Socrates is not “managing” the conversation towards an end that he has conceptualized beforehand. But every twist and turn of The Sophist is designed only to channel the conversation into providing a part of that final statement.

The Chimæra: But how would you have Plato compose such a definition, save by a summary of the component arguments preceding it?

The Sphinx: I quarrel not with the final assembly process, but rather with the fashion in which the components themselves were forged. For, you see, there are many ways along which each of those component arguments could have proceeded. Each, however, consistently follows a path derogatory to the Sophists. If the Sophists were in fact personifications of all that is erroneous and destructive in teaching, all possible paths would lead to the same conclusion, i.e. one derogatory to the Sophists. But this is not the case at all. See - He takes the book from the Chimæra and turns to page #973:

STRANGER: They cross-examine a man’s words, when he thinks that he is saying something and is really saying nothing, and easily convict him of inconsistencies in his opinions; these they then collect by the dialectic process, and, placing them side by side, show that they contradict one another about the same things, in relation to the same things, and in the same respect. He, seeing this, is angry with himself, and grows gentle towards others, and thus is entirely delivered from greater prejudices and harsh notions, in a way which is most amusing to the hearer, and produces the most lasting good effect on the person who is the subject of the operation. For as the physician considers that the body will receive no benefit from taking food until the internal obstacles have been removed, so the purifier of the soul is conscious that his patient will receive no benefit from the application of knowledge until he is refuted, and from refutation learns modesty; he must be purged of his prejudices first and made to think that he knows only what he knows, and no more.

THEÆTETUS: That is certainly the best and wisest state of mind.

STRANGER: For all these reasons, Theætetus, we must admit that refutation is the greatest and chiefest of purifications, and he who has not been refuted, though he be the Great King himself, is in an awful state of impurity; he is uninstructed and deformed in those things in which he who would be truly blessed ought to be fairest and purest.

THEÆTETUS: Very true.

STRANGER: Well, what name shall we give to the practitioners of this art? For my part I shrink from calling them Sophists.
THEÆTETUS: Why so?

STRANGER: For fear of ascribing to them too high a function.

THEÆTETUS: And yet your description has some resemblance to that type (the Sophist).

STRANGER: So has the dog to the wolf - the fiercest of animals to the tamest. But a cautious man should above all be on his guard against resemblances; they are a very slippery sort of thing.

Now let me rewrite the latter part of the dialogue. In doing so I shall move to eliminate the stranger’s instinctive or preconceived notion of what Sophists actually are. The Sphinx gestures at the page, and the wording changes:

STRANGER: Well, what name shall we give to the practitioners of this art?

THEÆTETUS: The characteristics you have enumerated are those the Sophists use to describe themselves.

STRANGER: But I fear this ascribes too high a function to them.

THEÆTETUS: To say that individual Sophists may not achieve the standards they have set for themselves does not disprove the nobility of their goal, nor their right to claim it as a standard and hence an identifying characteristic of their profession.

STRANGER: I cannot find fault with that. But let us examine the Sophist from some other vantage-points.

The wording reverts to normal, and the Sphinx closes the book.

I do not say that the dialogue should have proceeded in a different direction. I merely demonstrate that it would have been possible. This fact - that it is possible - testifies to the looseness of Plato’s logic in this instance. Rather than refining the definition of the Sophist by the careful elimination of inconsistent characteristics, Plato simply ignores implications which do not support his preconceived notions.

The Chimæra: I’m beginning to see what you mean.

The Sphinx: There are other examples which I could take from the text. But I think this demonstration sufficient proof of the principle involved. The entire dialogue is not an attempt to understand what a Sophist is. It is an attempt to denigrate Sophists. As such it is of no value as an exercise in logic or in the true process of reduction.

The Chimæra: But now we are back where we started, enriched only by an irony of Socratic logic: We know what The Sophist is not, but we don’t know what it is. So we must consider why Plato felt it necessary to attack the Sophists at all. Why did he not feel it possible merely to coexist with them in friendly competition for men’s minds?

The Sphinx: Here we must depart from the dialogue as a universe in itself. We must try to place it in context amidst a larger and more complex universe. The reason for doing this is that, viewed in isolation, The Sophist is logically invalid; this we have just proven. Seen against a larger background, however, it may indeed be significant. We attempt, like Archimedes, to move a world. For a place to stand we have the existence of The Sophist; for a lever we have its bias. The world need move only a little, and we who push against the lever may count ourselves satisfied.

The Chimæra: I follow you, but beware of unsubstantiated speculation

The Sphinx: The proponent of a viewpoint who feels secure in his position will not find it necessary to attack the mere existence of opponents. He may point out the fallacies in their arguments in an effort to hasten their understanding of his “correct interpretation”. But he will not see their “incorrect” views as a threat to the truth of his own. An attack against the very existence of competition is mounted when one is uncertain of the invulnerability of one’s own position. Permitted to exist, competition might pose a mortal challenge. Hence it must be destroyed without delay. Such a preemptory strike is justified by the rationalization that, while one has glimpsed an ultimate truth, more time is needed to refine the ideas to a form which may be understood by those of lesser intellectual acumen.

The Chimæra: You are suggesting, then, that Plato may not have felt secure in his philosophy - that he feared the axioms upon which he based his logic to be false?

The Sphinx: Let us not say that he feared them to be false. It is enough to say that he may not have been completely certain of their truth. Had he been, he would have ignored the Sophists.

The Chimæra: Why should Plato have attacked the Sophists in particular? Was it simply because they were his only Athenian competition? That would make his motives rather materialistic.

The Sphinx: Here we should bear in mind that we have no precise catalogue of individuals whom Plato considered Sophists. At various times he took issue with the ideas of Heraclitus, Parmenides, Zeno, and Protagoras, to name but a few theorists.
Whether he considered the Sophists as comprising only specific individuals, or whether he considered Sophism more broadly to be composed of all challengers to his own philosophy, is an issue we cannot decide. If we are to look through Plato’s eyes via The Sophist, we can establish only that the Sophists were guilty of teaching according to methods too close to those of Plato himself.

The Chimæra: You mean, I take it, by the process of cross-examination described by the stranger in the passage we considered earlier?

The Sphinx: Precisely. I ask you to consider both the praise that the stranger accords the system itself and his unsubstantiated reluctance to credit that system to the Sophists.
History contains many examples pointing to the fact that the most dangerous threats are those akin to the favored philosophy in all ways save one - which is considered to be crucial. Wars have been fought simply because men were unable to agree upon one name for the same god, or, later, because they could not agree upon the same meanings for words such as “freedom”, “democracy”, and “equality”.

The Chimæra: Only two wars that I recall strike me as having made any sense: the Trojan War, which was fought for sex, and the Carthaginian Wars, which were fought for money.

The Sphinx: Very funny. But to return to the issue at hand, we have the evidence of that passage in The Sophist to substantiate this point. Plato regarded the process of teaching through cross-examination to be a standard of excellence in itself. Its use to teach anything other than pure philosophy, accordingly, would have been intolerable to him. Hence his extraordinary anger at the Sophists.

The Chimæra: But we do know more about the Sophists than that. Even if we limit our scope to the school of Protagoras, we know that Sophistic thinking disavowed absolute knowledge. Despairing of attaining such knowledge, they regarded even its pursuit as worthless. So they taught a sort of relativistic pragmatism as the only sound basis for human affairs. Hence Protagoras’ famous statement that man is the measure of all things.

The Sphinx: That is right. And we know that Plato was firmly opposed to this view. Perhaps our most convincing evidence of this is the inscription above the entrance to his Academy: Let no one ignorant of mathematics enter here.

The Chimæra: I thought it was “geometry”.

The Sphinx: Unfortunately for purists it has been recorded both ways. But either serves to illustrate the point. Plato saw in mathematics unshakable evidence that there was an absolute standard for the Universe. And where one such standard existed, it was logical to assume that there were others. Today humans regard mathematics principally as an applied science, but in Plato’s time it was considered by the Pythagoreans to be “pure”, having nothing to do with the gross and imperfect everyday world.

The Chimæra: I presume that Plato would have been somewhat upset to learn of the Theory of Relativity, which is inconsistent with the notion that mathematics adhere to a fixed standard. But do I understand you to say that Plato was a Pythagorean?

The Sphinx: Not in the sense that he had any connections with one of the Pythagorean schools as such. He was born in Athens in 427 BCE, and he was a disciple of Socrates from 409 to 399. Following Socrates’ execution in that year, Plato traveled abroad, absorbing Pythagorean doctrines in many of the Greek cities located in Italy and Africa. It was not until 387 that he returned to Athens to found his Academy.

The Chimæra: That is interesting, but it does not constitute evidence that Plato endorsed the views of the Pythagoreans.

The Sphinx: No, and for that one must turn to the Timeæus, wherein Plato presents his concept of the Universe. Here he describes the five possible regular solids - that is, those with equivalent faces and with all lines and angles equal. Four of those represented the four elements, he said, while the dodecahedron represented the Universe as a whole. He also postulated that the various stellar/planetary bodies move in exact circles (the perfect curve) along with the crystalline spheres (the perfect solid) holding them in place. All of these theories were originally Pythagorean, as one may see from the writings of Philolaus and other avowed Pythagoreans. But we wander too far afield. Let us return to Plato’s conviction that the Universe was based upon absolute, not relative standards.

The Chimæra: I presume that the Sophists did not consider mathematics as an invalidation of their relativism.

The Sphinx: Whether the issue centered around mathematics or not is something we cannot know. We do know that the Sophists considered whatever evidence Plato offered insufficient to dislodge them from their position. From their point of view, the Sophists were champions of logic. They based their arguments upon what they understood to be “obvious” realities. And they drew “common sense” conclusions. What so antagonized Plato was not that they held different views than his concerning the primal forces of the Universe. Rather it was the intolerable insult - in Plato’s eyes - that they were not interested in that topic as a field for rational inquiry. Plato must have felt somewhat akin to Noah building his Ark in the midst of an ignorant and unconcerned society.

The Chimæra: The Noah legend is not in our myth-cycle, if you please.

The Sphinx: My apologies.

The Chimæra: And so Plato wished to identify the primal forces of the Universe. This resulted in his famous Theory of the Forms, if I am correct. But I sense a weak point here. Plato was a finite being, and yet he desired to comprehend Universal absolutes. As perfect standards they would necessarily be infinite, since any measure of perfection must extend in all dimensions without limitation. It would be possible for a finite entity like Plato to comprehend the infinite without distortion only if the infinite reveals aspects of itself to and through the finite. But the finite must have faith or trust that the aspects are undistorted in their presentation.

The Sphinx: Precisely, and now we are getting to the crux ansata of the matter. For, you see, assumptions based upon faith or trust are logically indefensible, otherwise there would be no need to base them upon faith or trust to begin with. Plato, being a man of no mean intellect, was certainly aware of this. He feared that an intelligent Sophist might see it as well and proceed to attack the foundations of his entire philosophy as illogical. And so, in the dialogues, he constructed a very elaborate defense of his concepts according, apparently, to the most rigorous standards of the cross-examination system of the Sophists.

The Chimæra: Statements like that are liable to get you into a great deal of trouble, I hope you know.

The Sphinx: Only with those who underestimate Plato and interpret this as a slur against him. Quite the contrary, it is all the more indicative of his brilliance. The entire process of “logical reasoning” is ultimately circular. What humans loosely term “cause and effect” relationships are not really that at all. They are rather observations of phenomena believed to occur consistently under identical environments. But logic cannot explain why electrons circle protons, or why the color red and the color blue are distinct, or why the Universe exists at all. Yet every one of our senses tells us that these things are so, and if we, as Descartes, deny the validity of our sensory input, we resign ourselves to insanity. Plato’s faith derives from no greater and no lesser observation that things are what they seem to be. Once that consistency is granted, all else follows.

The Chimæra: If that is so, why should Plato have gone through all the trouble to create the dialogues? Merely as a blind for Sophist critics who might have interfered with his Academy or accused him personally of being irrational or illogical?

The Sphinx: Again the explanation is not that simple. The dialogues may indeed have served as a blind for the Sophists, inasmuch as they defend Platonic principles according, apparently, to Sophistic logical criteria. But the dialogues would thus serve only a negative function, and that hardly seems to justify the obvious effort of their preparation. Plato was first and foremost a teacher, and he would have designed the dialogues to teach.

The Chimæra: That appears to run afoul of your previous statement that faith and reason are mutually exclusive. If Platonic students studied the dialogues only to become skilled at the Sophistic argumentative procedures employed therein, they would complete the Academy only as skilled Sophists.

The Sphinx: We are at something of an impasse. I confess that I cannot resolve this evident inconsistency. Let us seek fresh counsel.

Quite suddenly there materializes a Gryphon.

The Gryphon: The dilemma can be resolved, but it is so constructed that it defies resolution by Sophistic logic. And that is precisely the trap into which the two of you have fallen. Indeed the dialogues are there to teach, but the student must put forth the effort to see past the Sophistic teachings to those of Plato himself.

The Chimæra: But the argumentative pattern of the dialogues is Sophistic, and any connection between Sophistic logic and Platonic faith cannot exist. Do you think to pursue me?

> SOCRATES: Those who tell it are priests and priestesses of the sort who make it their business to be able to account for the functions which they perform. Pindar speaks of it too, and many another of the poets who are divinely inspired. What they say is this - see whether you think they are speaking the truth. They say that the soul of a man is immortal. At one time it comes to an end - that which is called death - and at another is born again, but is never finally exterminated. On these grounds a man must live all his days as righteously as possible.
For those from whom
Persephone receives requittal for ancient doom
In the ninth year she restores again
Their souls to the Sun above
From whom rise noble kings
And the swift in strength and greatest in wisdom,
And for the rest of time
They are called heroes and sanctified by men.

Thus the soul, since it is immortal and has been born many times, and has seen all things both here and in the other world, has learned everything there is. So we need not be surprised if it can recall the knowledge of virtue or anything else which, as we see, it once possessed. All nature is akin, and the soul has learned everything, so that when a man has recalled a single piece of knowledge - learned it, in ordinary language - there is no reason why he should not find out all the rest, if he keeps a stout heart and does not grow weary of the search, for seeking and learning are in fact nothing but recollection.

The Chimæra: You imply, then, that it is not the object of the dialogues to “teach” at all - but rather to expose Plato’s students to demanding mental gymnastics which will inspire them to recollect knowledge of the Forms.

The Gryphon: You have recollected admirably. The Gryphon dematerializes.

The Sphinx: Is it not interesting that the example given by Socrates in the Meno employs mathematics and geometry? That ties in rather neatly with the inscription over the entrance to the Academy. To the Platonic philosopher, then, that inscription would have meant something more than mere ability to calculate areas of triangles. In effect it would say: “Let no one ignorant of the recollective basis of knowledge leave here.”

The Chimæra: Harking back to what you said concerning Plato’s exposure to Pythagorean concepts, it is quite appropriate. Mathematical consistency was Plato’s “foot in the door”, so to speak, where the Forms were concerned. Yet, in view of relativity, does not that door slam shut upon us?

The Sphinx: That’s the Hades of it; it doesn’t. Or rather it does, but another one opens simultaneously.

The Chimæra: Do you mean that relativity provides access to another Form similar to mathematical consistency, upon which a modern Plato could base a Theory of the Forms?

The Sphinx: No, not really. But what relativity has done has been to turn the Meno inside-out. Look here: Socrates proves the immortality of the soul by demonstrating its intrinsic grasp of mathematics, which he considered a Form. Pause here and consider: What, precisely, is immortality?

The Chimæra: I should say the continuous existence of the mind or soul.
The Sphinx: That would be the case if there were no such thing as relativity. But there is. So let us say rather that immortality is the ability of the mind or the soul to exist unbounded by time, i.e. the fourth dimension. Mortality is measured according to the notion that time is a constant. But relativity disproves this, showing that time may be retarded, hastened, stopped altogether, or, presumably, raised to infinity. Thus the prison of a so-called temporal span of existence is no real prison at all. It is only imagined as such by a mind untrained in fourth-dimensional movement. The mind that is immortal is one that breaks free of time, not one that merely plods along within it as it ticks off the æons.

The Chimæra: And so the same principles of relativity that destroy Plato’s first-known Form now open the door to the very immortality which he sought through knowledge of the Forms. Fascinating.

The Sphinx: Now we must consider the implications of this as applied to the notion of recollection of knowledge. When Socrates used the term in the passage cited by the gryphon, he meant it of course in terms of a fixed fourth dimension. He visualized the soul as plodding along through the æons, “seeing all things” along the way. Thus, by the time it reached incarnation in Greece circa 400 BCE, it had completed some 9.5 to 10.5 billion years’ “sightseeing” since the last Universal concentration of radiation underwent transformation into matter and antimatter, making it possible for existence to displace vaccuum.

The Chimæra: Just out of curiosity, how do you come up with ten billion years?

The Sphinx: Simply by dividing the distances of the known galaxies from the calculated metagalactic center of this expansion cycle by their speeds according to the Red Shifts, then taking an average. But we digress again. We must still work out the nature of the acquisition of knowledge.

The Chimæra: If the invalidation of time as a constant has been shown, then the mind or soul could not have acquired knowledge via an æonic sightseeing trip such as Socrates describes. But the mind possesses the capability to cast itself forward and backward through time, since time is not fixed.

The Sphinx: Correct. The process is to imagination what directed thinking is to unconscious dreaming. It is something like the Raja-Yoga technique of uniting the mind to a single idea through force of will, or like corresponding ceremonial magic techniques.

The Chimæra: But I thought that the object of Yoga is to break the cycle of birth-death-rebirth through union of the soul or mind with the whole of existence. To one who achieves the eighth stage, samadhi, the concept of knowledge - itself a relative measurement of that which is known versus that which is not known - would be meaningless. All would be known, or, to use a more precise term, realized. Nothing would remain to be “learned”.

The Sphinx: Indeed.
The Chimaera: I think I am beginning to see your point. There is an identity between the state of samadhi and the innate condition of the mind or soul as Plato perceived it. Both exist in a state of absolute awareness, including, presumably, the freedom to move through all dimensions including that of time. Thus they break the bonds of both a finite period and a finite path of existence, achieving true immortality. Earthly incarnation becomes a prison in terms of both time and space, and it is the incarnated mind’s ability to travel within time that allows it to break free from this prison. The ambition of Plato, like that of the Yogi, was to regain the freedom of mental movement through all dimensions of existence - which, of course, would provide access to knowledge of the Forms.

The Sphinx: That is right. And the final proof of this is that Adepts in all cultures and all ages have inclined towards this same realization, no matter what exploratory methods they may have used and what linguistic terminology they may have employed. “Proof” in the scientific sense is the achievement of identical results under identical circumstances by independent researchers. Our comparison of just two initiatory systems - that of Plato and that of Yoga - meets these criteria exactly, given that the “identical circumstance” in this case is Earthly incarnation.

The Chimaera: Similar evidence could be obtained from additional case studies of other initiatory systems. But one substantiation suffices for our discussion.

The Sphinx: And now, I think, we are finally in a position to understand Plato’s distinction of the work of a true philosopher from that of a sophist. Let us return to The Sophist. He turns to page #998:

STRANGER: Well, now that we have agreed that the kinds stand toward one another in the same way as regards blending, is not some science needed as a guide on the voyage of discourse, if one is to succeed in pointing out which kinds are consonant, and which are incompatible with one another - also, whether there are certain kinds that pervade them all and connect them so that they can blend, and again, where there are divisions [separations], whether there are certain others that traverse wholes and are responsible for the division? ... And the man who can do that discerns clearly one form everywhere extended throughout many, where each one lies apart, and many forms, different from one another, embraced from without by one form, and again one form connected in a unity through many wholes, and many forms, entirely marked off apart. That means knowing how to distinguish, kind by kind, in what ways the several kinds can or cannot combine.

The Chimaera: I am well satisfied. Now that we have resolved the questions raised by The Sophist, it seems necessary to consider The Statesman as well.

The Sphinx: We know that The Statesman was written as a sequel to The Sophist - that Plato intended his ideal statesman to be antithetical to the “worst possible kind” of Sophist. Observe: He turns to page #1074:

STRANGER: Therefore all who take part in one of these governments - apart from the one based upon real knowledge - are to be distinguished from the true statesman. They are not statesmen; they are party leaders, leaders of bogus governments and themselves as bogus as their systems. The supreme imitators and tricksters, they are of all Sophists the arch-Sophists.
YOUNG SOCRATES: It seems to me that the wheel has come full circle, now that the title of Sophist goes to those who most deserve it, to the men who get themselves called political leaders.

The Chimæra: That may be nothing more than another of Plato’s invectives against the Sophists in general - a bit of name-calling without real substance. Such seems to be the opinion of academic critics, who are prone to ignore this exchange. But let us reexamine Plato’s alienation from the Sophists. As I said earlier:

Even if we limit our scope to the school of Protagoras, we know that Sophistic thinking disavowed absolute knowledge. Despairing of attaining such knowledge, they regarded even its pursuit as worthless. So they taught a sort of relativistic pragmatism as the only sound basis for human affairs. Hence Protagoras’ famous statement that man is the measure of all things.

The Sphinx: We then considered the Pythagorean precedents for Plato’s conviction that the Universe adheres to absolute and not relative standards. But how does this tie in with The Statesman?

The Chimæra: The connection seems to be that Plato considers statesmanship also to be absolute and not relative. Observe the following key passage: He turns to pages #1051-2.

STRANGER: Must we not do now what we had to do when discussing the Sophist? We had to insist then on the admission of an additional postulate, that “what is ‘not x’ nevertheless exists”. We had to introduce this postulate because the only alternative to asserting it which our argument left us was to allow the Sophist to escape definition altogether. In our present discussion too there is an additional postulate on which we must insist, and it is this: “Excess and deficiency are measurable not only in relative terms but also in respect of attainment of a norm or due measure.” For if we cannot first gain assent to this postulate, we are bound to fail if we advance the claim that a man possesses statecraft, or indeed that a man possesses any other of the special forms of knowledge that function in human society.

YOUNG SOCRATES: In that case we must certainly follow the precedent and admit the additional postulate in our present discussion too.

STRANGER: Our present task is greater than our previous one, Socrates, and we can hardly have forgotten what a very long time that took us. However, while discussing these problems, there is one thing to be said at the outset that it is perfectly right and proper to say here.

YOUNG SOCRATES: What is this?

STRANGER: That when one day we come to give a full exposition of true accuracy in dialectic method, we shall find the need of this postulate concerning the due measure which we have just enunciated. However, the statement in the form we have made it and with the demonstration - adequate for present purposes - which we have given of it, is a very great help to us, or so it seems to me. For it shows that two propositions stand or fall together. The first is that the arts exist; the second is that excess and deficiency are measurable not only relatively but in terms of the realization of a norm or due measure. Thus if measure in this second sense exists, so do the arts, and, conversely, if there are arts, then there is this second kind of measurement. To deny either is to deny both.
The Sphinx: That “existence of ‘not x’ postulate”, as I recall, left something to be desired in terms of logical integrity. The point hinged upon things that were not themselves “existence” being able to exist. In distinguishing them from “existence”, Plato treats “existence” as an entity. But, when saying that certain things “exist”, he treats “exist” as a quality. That is inconsistent and hence inconclusive. He glances at page #1003 indignantly, then turns to pages #1050-1. And what sort of demonstration of this second postulate does he offer?

STRANGER: On the other hand, will we not also be ready to assert that we do in fact hear words spoken and see acts done which at one time exceed the essentially right measure and at another time fall short of it? Is it not just this matter of attaining the due measure which marks off good men from bad in human society?

The Chimæra: That’s not much of a proof. The words or actions that impress one observer as ideal may strike another as excessive or inadequate. Similarly “good” and “bad” are subjective terms. Plato is guilty of a non sequitur.

The Sphinx: True. If the stranger had been talking with someone like Protagoras instead of the docile young Socrates, The Statesman would have floundered [and foundered] right there.

The Chimæra: Note that, immediately after making that statement, Plato tries to reinforce it by denying that statecraft - or any other art - can exist without it. Thus he assumes that statecraft has already been proved to be an absolute standard, when in fact it has not. Two unproved statements cannot be used to prove each other, and so Plato is guilty of a second logical fallacy, generally known as interdependence.

The Sphinx: Since the rest of The Statesman hinges upon young Socrates’ blind disregard of these two fallacies, is there a point in our discussing it further? What we have uncovered here is not some relatively-unimportant digression. The subsequent structure of The Statesman is one of peeling away inadequate manifestations of statesmanship, leaving, theoretically, the Form itself at the core. If there is not an agreed-upon Form, then the peeling-away process is pointless.

The Chimæra: To be fair to Plato, let us examine his idea of the Form of statesmanship. He turns to page #1077.

STRANGER: If you will view the three arts we have spoken of as a group with a common character, you will be bound to see that none of them has turned out to be itself the art of statesmanship. This is because it is not the province of the real kingly art to act for itself, but rather to control the work of the arts which instruct us in the methods of action. The kingly art controls them according to its power to perceive the right occasions for undertaking and setting in motion the great enterprises of state. The other arts must do what they are told to do by the kingly art ... It is a universal art, and so we call it by a name of universal scope. That name is one which I believe to belong to this art and this alone, the name of “statesmanship”.

The Sphinx: On the whole, that’s not a bad definition. And, I might add, there is nothing in it which necessitates the existence of an absolute standard for statesmanship. A statesman can simply be a person who is relatively skilled at emphasizing, directing, and applying the various arts and sciences of a state or community.
The Chimæra: So it would seem. In view of Plato’s attack on “arch-Sophists” as being the leaders of all but the perfect [Form] government, one might suspect that he insisted upon an absolute standard of government just so that he could attribute everything less than that to Sophistry. Having delivered such an uncomplimentary blow to both Sophists and politicians, Plato could quietly abandon the notion of an absolute governmental standard. In fact, the definition that I just quoted is thoroughly relativistic and cannot be applied in terms of absolute standards.

The Sphinx: And just how do you draw that conclusion?

The Chimæra: If each subordinate art in a community possesses its own standard of absolute perfection, a raising or lowering of the application of that art by the statesman would cause excess or deficiency in the art itself. For example, the military art involves winning battles and wars. If the statesman, for the good of the entire community, prevents the military from conducting battles or wars, the military art itself experiences a deficiency. At a later date, if the military does go to war, that deficiency will be evident as inexperience in combat. Similarly, if the statesman orders the military to fight too many battles or wars, excess will occur. The military will become inefficient through demoralization and attrition. To permit the military to function at an ideal level, a statesman would have to allow a level of continuous or intermittent warfare. This, obviously, would not be ideal for the state as a whole.

The Sphinx: Your point being that the ideal level of a subordinate art as a thing in itself is at odds with its ideal application by the statesman’s art.

The Chimæra: Yes, and there’s more to it than that. If there is an ideal standard or level for both component arts and the statesman’s art, then the maintenance of that standard or level over a period of time should ensure continuous and ideal prosperity for the state as a whole, correct?

The Sphinx: Theoretically, yes.

The Chimæra: But conditions outside that state will vary. A neighboring state may go to war against it, for example.

The Sphinx: That would necessitate an alteration of certain component arts - such as materiel production, resource allocation, and military activity - by the statesman, if he is to perform his ideal role.

The Chimæra: But this means exceeding or falling below the ideal standards of the individual component arts. In other words, the ideal standards of a component art by itself and the ideal level of that art as a factor in the overall community do not coincide. Therefore, if Plato insists upon absolute standards, he places his statesman in the position of having to continuously violate the absolute standards of component arts for the sake of his own art.
The Sphinx: I suppose Plato would argue that the ideal standards of the component arts would include consideration for the proper level of those arts within the community as a whole.

The Chimæra: That still begs the question. The posture of the community must change as its external environment changes. Therefore the component arts will be subject to continuous revision of their levels of activity and emphasis. They become factors relative to the community, just as the community becomes a factor relative to its external environment. Q.E.D.

The Sphinx: So Plato’s definition of statesmanship is valid only if both that art and the subordinate arts are assumed to be variable and relativistic. How intriguingly Sophistic!

The Chimæra: ... All of which brings us back to the basic “relativity vs. absolutism” issue between [what Plato would call] Sophistry and Philosophy respectively. In a purely practical sense we cannot continue to use those terms as Plato did, because “sophistry” now conveys the image of charlatanism, while “philosophy” embraces relativistic as well as absolutist theories.

The Sphinx: True. The basic issue still remains, but the old labels are no longer accurate. Why do you suppose Plato felt so strongly that absolute standards (Forms) existed?

The Chimæra: It probably started with what he believed to be common sense. Our senses seem to tell us that the world around us is made up of reliable and permanent phenomena. A chair can be counted upon to remain a chair, a desk a desk. The Sun and the planets behave regularly. Relativism carried to its logical conclusion would deny these things. How could the Sophists say that “man is the measure of all things” as they walked about on the solid and permanent ground of Greece? Man cannot decide that the ground will be there one minute and transmute into water the next. Plato must have felt that he was arguing a case for the way things actually are, even if he encountered difficulties in justifying that position logically.

The Sphinx: To be quite precise, a chair does not remain a chair or a desk a desk. Both are undergoing continuous molecular breakdown, which is not apparent to humans because they normally experience sensory input at a relatively swifter rate. Nor are astronomical bodies truly constant; they only seem that way, again because of the relative differences in their rates of change and in human perceptive powers. At the other end of the scale, there are phenomena that occur too swiftly for human senses to register them. So they seem “instantaneous”. So how dependable is Plato’s “actual world”?

The Chimæra: I am tempted to say that, relatively speaking [from the human point of view], the world appears to adhere to absolute laws.

The Sphinx: Now that is an interesting statement! You mean that the human ability to perceive relative change exists in a comparatively small range, and that phenomena changing at rates beneath or above that range appear to be instantaneous or permanent, as the case may be.
The Chimæra: I suppose so.

The Sphinx: Can we not identify anything that is truly permanent? That is in fact absolute and not relative?

The Chimæra: That was Einstein’s problem. He was able to postulate only one thing that was absolute - the speed of light. But in that he was wrong.

The Sphinx: Wrong? Kindly explain!

The Chimæra: We run the risk of straying rather far from The Statesman.

The Sphinx: But not from our ultimate topic. Remember that we are trying to get a grip on true conceptual analysis, and to do that we had better resolve this relative/absolute issue once and for all. According to the Platonic school of thought, political science has an absolute standard, just as physical laws do. That is the argument of The Statesman. So now we have said that Einstein reduced physics to only one absolute - the speed of light - and you dispute even that. I for one consider a resolution of this germane. If you destroy absolutism in the physical world, then the basis for attempting to parallel the “absolute physical world” with an “absolute political world” disappears altogether. So proceed.

The Chimæra: All right. According to Einstein’s second fundamental postulate of the Special Theory of Relativity, the velocity of light is always constant relative to an observer, no matter how fast the observer and the light source may be separating or converging. A derived equation states that, when an object is moving with respect to an observer, the mass of the object becomes greater, the amount of increase depending upon the relative velocity of object and observer. As the mass of the object increases, its length along the axis of its direction will decrease. At the speed of light, the object’s mass becomes infinite, and its length shrinks to zero. Since an infinite-plus amount of energy would be required to raise the speed of an infinite mass beyond the speed of light, such hyper-light speed is not possible.

The Sphinx: So states the Special Theory.

The Chimæra: Now, internally the Special Theory is consistent, because it treats the speed of light as a constant and incorporates a series of equations which rely upon that constant and are consistent with one another. As the Special Theory applies to phenomena which are substantially below the speed of light, it is practical. The interrelationship of mass and energy relative to 186,000 miles per second (the Einstein speed of light constant) has been formulated as \( E=mc^2 \) and put into practice through nuclear fission.

The Sphinx: Where, then, lies the fault?

The Chimæra: The Achilles’ Heel of the Special Theory is that, while applying the principle of relativity to everything else except the speed of light, it thereby treats the speed of light as an exception to the rule. An exception to a rule of physics is an indication that the rule is inadequate to cover all known phenomena. Einstein’s decision to treat the speed of light as a constant was based upon the difference between the speed of light and non-light-wave-related phenomena being so vast as to make sub-186,000 mps light speed impossible to detect; and also upon the inability of science to detect anything traveling faster than 186,000 mps.

The Sphinx: Why this emphasis upon the word “detect”?

The Chimæra: Detection and existence are two different things, and that difference is crucial to my argument. Now consider this hypothesis: If light waves from a stationary source travel at 186,000 mps, and those light waves are the only means an observer located elsewhere has for detection of that source, what would happen if the source were to begin moving away from the observer at 186,001 mps? Those light waves that are the sole source of the observer’s information would no longer reach that observer. The waves are now receding from him at 1 mps. As far as the observer can detect, the light-source vanished when its speed exceeded the speed of light. But did the source in fact cease to exist? It did not. [And its presence may be detectable by observing warps in radiation waves and emissions affected by it - a possible explanation of the “black hole” phenomenon.]

The Sphinx: What about light-sources that are proceeding in directions other than diametrically away from an observer?

The Chimæra: As for an object approaching an observer at 186,000+ mps, it would arrive before it could be detected at any distance as a moving object, because humans do not possess instruments that can identify approaching light speeds in excess of 186,000 mps - which would be the only means of identifying the object’s approach. If the source were to proceed at a tangent to an observer, it will seem to compress as it approaches the speed of light. The explanation for this illusion is more complex, but I may approximate it by saying that the lateral movement/oscillation of the emitted light waves is less detectable as the lateral speed of the object approaches 186,000 mps. At 186,000 mps the waves are no longer detectable as waves - merely as radiation; hence the illusion that the source has transmutated from matter to energy.

The Sphinx: In fact, then, the Special Theory contains its own invalidation. It states that everything is relative, but it cannot exist as a formula without at least one absolute constant - which, upon examination, proves to be relative itself. Which leaves only one question: If it is wrong, why does E=mc² work?

The Chimæra: Because the values which are plugged into that formula are so far below 186,000 mps that the speed of light might as well be treated as a constant. For equations that include values closer to 186,000 mps, the formula becomes increasingly less accurate. Hence the preposterous calculation that a mass at 186,000 mps becomes infinite. That is simply the result of the formula’s intrinsic distortion.

The Sphinx: This is all very unsettling. So everything is relative?

The Chimæra: Let’s not jump to conclusions. Remember what we decided concerning Plato’s own proof of absolute Forms?
The Sphinx: Yes. I referred to the Platonic Academy’s inscription Let no one ignorant of mathematics enter here, and then I said:

Plato saw in mathematics unshakable evidence that there was an absolute standard for the Universe. And where one such standard existed, it was logical to assume that there were others. Today humans regard mathematics principally as an applied science, but in Plato’s time it was considered by the Pythagoreans to be “pure”, having nothing to do with the gross and imperfect everyday world.

The Chimæra: Would you care to elaborate upon that?

The Sphinx: The best thing to do is to quote directly from Thomas Stanley’s 1687 account of the Pythagorean doctrines, which draws its material from Porphyrus, Iamblicus, Strabo, etc. The Stanley text materializes, and the Sphinx turns to Part IX page #522. Consider the following: [sic]

The mind being purify’d [by Discipline] ought to be applied to things that are beneficial; these he procured by some contrived ways, bringing it by degrees to the contemplation of eternal incorporeal things, which are ever in the same state; beginning orderly from the most minute, lest by the suddenness of the change it should be diverted, and withdrew itself through its great and long pravity of nutriment.

To this end, he first used the Mathematical Sciences, and those Speculations which are intermediate betwixt Corporeals and Incorporeals, (for they have a Threefold Dimension, like Bodies, but they are impassible like Incorporeals) as Degrees of Preparation to the Contemplation of the things that are; diverting, by an artificial Reason, the Eyes of the Mind from corporeal things (which never are permanent in the same manner and estate) never so little to a desire of aliment; by means whereof, introducing the contemplation of things that are, he rendered men truly happy. This use he made of the Mathematical Sciences.

These Sciences were first termed Μαθυματα by Pythagoras upon consideration that all Mathesis (discipline) is Reminiscence, which comes not extrinsecally to souls as the phantasies which are formed by sensible objects in the Phantasie; nor are they an advantageous adscititious knowledg, like that which is placed in Opinion; but it is excited from Phænomena’s, and perfected intrinsecally by the cogitation converted into it self.

The Chimæra: How very interesting. It would seem that the recollective basis of knowledge, heretofore assumed to be a Platonic concept, is in fact Pythagorean.

The Sphinx: And the use of mathematics as a key to this particular sort of knowledge, i.e. of the Forms.

The Chimæra: Who is this Stanley, and how reliable can he be considered to be?

The Sphinx: Thomas Stanley graduated from Cambridge at age 16 as a Master of Arts. He practiced law; was fluent in French, Italian, Spanish, and the Classical languages; and issued the first volume of his famous History of Philosophy when he was only 30. The three paragraphs cited above are all footnoted to original Greek sources.

The Chimæra: So Plato used mathematics as a “place to stand”, in an effort to make the Universe intelligible by reason alone. And Platonists tend to emphasize this, shielding Plato from the despised title of “mystic”. See here: He indicates page #xv in the Collected Dialogues.

[Huntington Cairns:] But the difference between Plato and the mysticism that has attached itself to his philosophy is essential. Plato’s aim is to take the reader by steps, with as severe a logic as the conversational method permits, to an insight into the ultimate necessity of Reason. And he never hesitates to submit his own ideas to the harshest critical scrutiny; he carried this procedure so far in the Parmenides that some commentators have held that his own doubts in this dialogue prevail over his affirmations. But the beliefs of mystics are not products of critical examination and logical clarification; they are, on the contrary, a series of apprehensions, flashes, based on feeling, denying the rational order. The mystic’s reports of his experiences are beyond discussion inasmuch as they are subjective and emotional; they must be accepted, by one who wishes to believe them, as a matter of faith, not knowledge. Plato’s view of the world is that of an intelligible system that man can know by disciplined intellect alone. He was, in fact, the founder of logic, a logician and a poet, but he was not a mystic, he never exalted feeling above reason.

The Sphinx: Well, well. What do you think Cairns would say to the following quote from The Statesman? He turns to page #1082.

STRANGER: When there arises in the soul of men a right opinion concerning what is good, just, and profitable, and what is the opposite of these - an opinion based on absolute truth and settled as an unshakable conviction - I declare that such a conviction is a manifestation of the divine occurring in a race which is in truth of supernatural lineage.

YOUNG SOCRATES: It could not be more suitably described.

The Chimæra: (dryly) He would probably say that, since sphinxes and chimæras do not really exist, nothing we say is to be taken seriously.

The Sphinx: So, where Plato is concerned, a great deal hinges upon the basis for mathematics itself. Is it acquired through reason or through mystical vision, so to speak?

The Chimæra: This is rather curious. Plato actually sets his dialectic process in contrast to mathematics, almost as though the object of the Dialogues is to arrive at a Form greater than that of mathematics. He turns to page #746.

I understand, he said, not fully, for it is no slight task that you appear to have in mind, but I do understand that you mean to distinguish the aspect of reality and the intelligible, which is contemplated by the power of dialectic, as something truer and more exact than the object of the so-called arts and sciences whose assumptions are arbitrary starting points. And though it is true that those who contemplate them are compelled to use their understanding and not their senses, yet because they do not go back to the beginning in the study of them but start from assumptions you do not think they possess true intelligence about them although the things themselves are intelligibles when apprehended in conjunction with a first principle. And I think you call the mental habit of geometers and their like mind or understanding and not reason because you regard understanding as something intermediate between opinion and reason.

The Sphinx: It’s all very well for Plato to say that, and I’m sure that dialecticians are not displeased to consider themselves more intellectual than mathematicians. Yet we have found, in both The Sophist and The Statesman, that Plato cannot proceed with his arguments unless he assumes the divinely-inspired ability to perceive not only greater, but absolute perfection when he is confronted with it. That is not reason; it is revelation. Plato does mathematics an injustice: While mathematicians openly admit that their conclusions are originally based upon assumptions (axioms), Plato pretends that his are not. And of course they are. Just as Einstein required a concrete assumption - a constant speed of light - upon which to build his mathematical philosophy, so Plato must have an assumption - the ability to recognize absolute perfection - upon which to build his dialectic philosophy.

The Chimæra: Plato seems to be caught in a trap between the relativistic Sophists on one hand - who denied the reliability of intuitive assumptions - and the Pythagoreans on the other - who permitted original assumptions via revelation/intuition. Plato rejects the notion that axioms are necessary for reason, yet he cannot reason without them. No wonder he was so touchy about the Sophists.

The Sphinx: Note the very precise manner in which the Pythagoreans discussed the original assumptions of mathematics: Again he indicates page #522 of the Stanley text.

The whole science of Mathematicks, the Pythagoreans divided into four parts, attributing one to Multitude, another to Magnitude; and subdividing each of these into two. For Multitude either subsists by itself, or is considered with respect to another; Magnitude either stands still, or is moved. Arithmetick contemplates Multitude in itself: Musick with respect to another: Geometry, unmoveable magnitude; Sphaerick, moveable.

These Sciences consider not Multitude and Magnitude simply, but in each of these that which is determinate: for Sciences consider this abstracted from infinite, that they may not (in vain) attempt in each of these that which is infinite. When therefore the wise persons say thus, we conceive it is not to be understood of that multitude which is in the sensible things themselves, nor of that magnitude which we perceive in bodies, for the contemplation of these I think pertains to Physick, not to Mathematick. But because the Maker of all things took Union and Division, and Identity, and Alterity, and Station and Motion to compleat the soul, and framed it of these kinds, as Timæus teacheth, we must conceive that the Intellect, consisting according to the diversity thereof, and the division of proportions and multitude, and knowing it self to be both one and many, proposeth numbers to it self, and produceth them and the Arithmetical knowledge of them. According to the union of multitude and communication with it self, and colligation, it acquireth to it self Musick: for which reason Arithmetick excels Musick in antiquity, the soul it self being first divided by the Maker, then collected by proportions. And again establishing the operation within it self, according to its station, it produceth Geometry out of it self, and one figure, and the principles of all figures, but according to its motion, Sphaerick: for she is moved by circles, but consists always in the same manner according to the causes of those circles, the straight and the circular: and for this reason likewise Geometry is precedent to Sphaerick, as Station is to Motion.

But forasmuch as the Soul produced these Sciences, not looking on the excitation of Ideas, which is of infinite power, but upon the boundure of that which is limited in their several kinds, therefore they say that they take infinite from multitude and magnitude, and are conversant only about finite: for the mind hath placed in her self all principles both of multitude and magnitude, because being wholly of like parts within her self, and being one and indivisible, and again divisible, and producing the world of Ideas, it doth participate essential finiteness and infiniteness from the things which it doth understand: But it understands according to that which is finite in them, and not according to the infiniteness of its life. This is the opinion of the Pythagoreans, and their division of the four Sciences. Hitherto Proclus.
The Chimæra: In the final analysis, whether Cairns would enjoy the idea or not, Plato must be classed with the Pythagoreans as a “mystic”, in that he assumed that humans possess a supernatural power beyond reason to recognize perfection/absolute Forms.

The Sphinx: Yes. The Sophists were the only ones who could claim to be “non-mystics”, because they would not admit to revealed accuracy of any sort. Plato tried to strike a balance between the Sophists and the Pythagoreans, but there is just no halfway position that holds water. The Pythagoreans would have been amused by Plato’s laborious argumentative process, holding it to be a waste of time, in that the final answer to a given problem could be known only by revelation/recollection. As for the Sophists, they would have faulted Plato’s arguments by denying the primary assumptions/revelations in them.

The Chimæra: All of which leaves us where?

The Sphinx: Well, I think we have pretty well finished with The Statesman. But our discussion concerning the Pythagorean aspects of “Plato’s” philosophy raises yet another question: To what extent was Plato an original thinker?

The Chimæra: On that thorny little problem I will let you take the lead.

The Sphinx: I think we would be wise to start with some observations about time - not just the way most humans regard it, but the way Plato himself perceived it. I recall a pertinent comment of G.J. Whitrow’s in his book The Nature of Time:

The first question to consider is the origin of the idea that time is a kind of linear progression measured by the clock and the calendar. In modern civilization this conception of time so dominates our lives that it seems to be an inescapable necessity of thought. But this is far from true ... Most civilizations, prior to our own of the last two or three hundred years, have tended to regard time as essentially cyclic in nature. In the light of history, our conception of time is as exceptional as our rejection of magic.66

The Chimæra: Well said. Modern academicians are conditioned to an essentially Newtonian attitude towards time. They regard it as a simple progression of events. The past may be referred to, and visions of the future may be projected, but neither past nor future has any intrinsic effect upon the present - nor do they exist objectively at all.

The Sphinx: In a cyclical system of time, by contrast, past, present, and future would all be part of a single continuum. This wouldn’t necessarily mean that “history repeats itself” either. Rather the components of fourth-dimensional existence would continue to exist, although they might be undergoing periodic rearrangement and recomposition. One might draw an analogy to the interchangeability of matter and energy; a seemingly-endless variety of transmutation takes place, but the “sum of the whole” remains the same.

The Chimæra: Take the Platonic notion of the transmigration of souls. It wouldn’t make much sense if entirely new souls could come into being “out of nothing”, would it? Yet the transmigration theory has been ridiculed on the grounds that (a) world population is expanding, and (b) past incarnations have not been recalled to standards of scientific proof. If “the stuff of which souls are made” can transmutate from other components of a unified time-continuum, then the first objection disappears. And limited recomposition [short of transmutation] would account for the second.

The Sphinx: And this would put the concept of the recollective basis of knowledge in a new light as well. Instead of knowledge being cumulative or progressive [again a purely-linear concept] with the linear “passage” of time, it can be considered “circular” - rearrangements and recombinations of certain all-inclusive principles which are part of the cyclical continuum, i.e. “timeless”.

The Chimæra: A provocative way of approaching the Theory of the Forms

The Sphinx: Let us try to “clear the air” of modem presuppositions and place ourselves in the time-environment that Plato himself perceived. As he looked at the world around him and observed changes taking place, wouldn’t linear time have seemed obvious to him? Within the scope of his own consciousness, for example, he could tell that things “weren’t the way they used to be” and that new events were regularly taking place.

The Chimæra: On a small scale, yes. But, seen at the “Forms level”, various events could be viewed as modifications of a single Form of political behavior or as more complex combinations involving more than one Form. Thus the conquest of Athens by Sparta or the conquest of Sparta by Athens were essentially variations on the same Form [of conquest], distinguished by variable applications of other Forms [such as economic pressures, military power, political imperialism, etc.]. Viewed in this context, events could indeed be considered cyclical.

The Sphinx: Well, have we justification to presume that Plato truly thought in that context? After all, it is a perspective so broad that it could have been attacked as useless for concrete applications. In point of fact this was the basic Sophist criticism of Plato - that his philosophy, while it might be true on a macrocosmic scale - was of no help to people who were trying to solve immediate problems. So the Sophists advocated problem-solving techniques that ignored macrocosmic Forms.

The Chimæra: In the Republic, Laws, arid Statesman we have three attempts by Plato to make his political philosophy relevant. But it would be a mistake to say that he merely attempted to “scale down” this Form or that Form to a problem-solving level, in order to compete with the Sophists. A Form is not that sort of “thing”; it is not an axiom which can be applied to various problems. Rather it is a sort of sum-total of identifying characteristics in various phenomena which relate them, as sphinxes and chimæras are variations of the Form “mythical beast”.

The Sphinx: Speak for yourself. But we have now reached a point where we can explore the development of Forms-theory prior to Plato’s time ... excuse me, Plato’s point of focus in the continuum. Because the Forms - and especially the ones that were applicable to statesmanship - weren’t all that nebulous. In fact they were the guiding principles of the most ancient civilization in the Mediterranean -and the one with the most highly-developed political system as well. I am talking, of course, about Egypt.

The Chimæra: The most highly-developed political system? You’re going to get some objections on that score. The accepted impression of Egypt is that it was a simple military monarchy, reinforced by a death-obsessed religion, which cared nothing for philosophy. I quote Bertrand Russell:

Philosophy begins with Thales, who, fortunately, can be dated by the fact that he predicted an eclipse which, according to the astronomers, occurred in the year 585 B.C. Philosophy and science - which were not originally separate - were therefore born together at the beginning of the sixth century.67

The Sphinx: Bertrand Russell was ever quaint. “Sixth century” my claw! For thirty recorded centuries before Thales, Egypt had existed as a national system - not a mere city-state or even federation of city-states. It was older to the Greeks than the Greeks are to present-day humans. Scientifically it developed architecture to a precision unapproached again until the present century [and in some aspects still unequalled].68 It developed elaborate, codified medical skills [including that of open-skull brain surgery] which were used with a high measure of success.69 It possessed the only accurate calendar in the entire Mediterranean until the time of Julius Caesar [when Caesar introduced a modified Egyptian calendar to the Roman Empire]; the Egyptians’ own records date back to 4241 BCE!70 And what of the hieroglyphic alphabet, introduced more than seven thousand years ago?71

The Chimæra: I expect that part of the problem lies in the fact that the alphabet you just mentioned was so very hard to read. Indeed it was almost a sort of cipher used exclusively among the Egyptian intelligentsia. Training of a scribe took about twelve years, and even then a scribe was not in a position to understand the significance of most of the philosophical material he was recording. By Plato’s time other, less complex linguistic systems had come into use for both reading and writing, and probably no one in Athens could read hieroglyphic, let alone gain access to philosophical texts hoarded by the Egyptian priesthoods. So it is not so very surprising that Egyptian philosophy was not discussed by the Greeks, except for tourist-type accounts such as that of Herodotus and the Egyptian passage of Plato’s own Timæus.

The Sphinx: The last known use of hieroglyphic writing even in Egypt itself was in 394 CE [on the Temple of Isis at Philæ]. Thereafter all knowledge of the language vanished from human knowledge until Champollion decoded the Rosetta Stone in 1822 CE. And only a small number of Egyptian texts have been translated today - by a smaller handful of people who can read the language. So perhaps Russell’s statement can be partially excused, if not condoned.

The Chimæra: Then, too, Egypt has suffered a savage pillaging over the centuries. As a symbol of “heathen paganism” it was viciously despoiled by the early Christians and their Moslem successors. Countless ancient temples were either appropriated or razed by the Catholics, and thousands of statues and inscriptions were disfigured. In 389 CE a Christian mob, acting on the orders of the Christian Roman Emperor Theodosius, burned the great library of Alexandria to the ground. Even so, millions of book-rolls were rescued or gathered together from other repositories and the library was reestablished - until 636. In that year Alexandria was taken by Omar, the Third Caliph of Islam, who decreed: “The contents of these books are in conformity with the Koran or they are not. If they are, the Koran is sufficient without them; if not, they are pernicious. Therefore let them be destroyed.” They were burned as fuel to heat the city’s baths; it took six months for all of them to be consumed. So it is not too surprising that modern researchers have only a pitiful few scraps of information from previously-undiscovered tombs or overlooked monuments.

The Sphinx: Before we explore the links between the Egyptians and Plato, it may help if we bring out some of the salient characteristics of the Egyptian political system. To begin with, it was cyclic rather than linear. Individual pharaohs and dynasties came and went, but the social system and political structure remained constant. Each successive pharaoh, for example, was merely the momentary personification of a permanent, semi-divine entity that governed Egypt in the name of the gods. The nation itself was not viewed as merely one in a series of political units located in northeast Africa; it had existed as a divine creation before recorded history, and it would continue to exist indefinitely. Various natural cycles and human lifetimes would impact upon it, but the essence of Egypt would remain untouched by [linear] time. Consider, for example, the following hieroglyphic inscription accompanying an image of the scarab-beetle Xepera, principle of cyclical regeneration and immortality:

I was the spirit in the Primeval Waters. He who had no companion when his name Came Into Being. The most ancient form in which I Came Into Being was as a drowned one. I was he who Came Into Being as a circle. He who was the Dweller in his Egg. I was the one who began everything, the Dweller in the Primeval Waters. First the Wind emerged for me, and then I began to move. I created my limbs in my glory. I was the maker of myself; I formed myself according to my desire and in accord with my heart.

The Chimæra: If each pharaoh were held to be divinely-appointed, what was the actual selection procedure? And how could a human-supervised selection procedure retain credibility as a divine process?

The Sphinx: It compares rather intriguingly with the system for selection of philosopher-kings in the Republic. During stable dynasties new pharaohs were selected from among the male offspring of the late pharaoh. There was more latitude in this process than one might think, because (a) pharaohs generally had many wives and concubines, resulting in scores of children, and (b) the education and selection of pharaohs were handled by colleges of priests, themselves detached from the secular government but exercising a sort of guardianship over it. Unsuitable princes were either diverted to harmless careers or simply assassinated. With the exception of a few temporary puppet-kings or usurpers, then, Egyptian monarchs were generally priest-kings [an intentional reference to the Atlantean tern in the Critias] of exceptional calibre. Incumbent pharaohs who began to behave in maverick fashion [such as Akhenaten, the monotheist mystic of the XVIII Dynasty] were also assassinated with the tacit consent of the priesthood. This method of “impeachment” does not seem to have been abused, because an attack on the divine pharaoh for purely-partisan motives would have been thought extremely ill-omened. Only for an obvious betrayal of the pharaoh’s sacred trust - as determined by the priesthood - could assassination be contemplated.

The Chimæra: What sort of legal system did the Egyptians have?

The Sphinx: Now we enter some particularly interesting territory from a Platonic standpoint. As far as can be deduced from surviving records, bureaucratic and judicial affairs were not conducted according to a centralized legal code superior to the judgment of individual officials. Such officials were given a more-or-less free hand within their respective areas of responsibility - contingent, of course, upon the maintenance of order, payment of taxes, and general preservation of a harmonious attitude among the people. There were no legislated standards of good and evil/right and wrong. Justice was meted out ad hoc according to each supervisory official’s concept of fairness and equity. The Egyptians prized this system very highly; it was personified by the goddess Maat. When an Egyptian died, a feather from Maat’s crown would be weighed against his heart to determine whether he would be granted a pleasant repose in Amenti or be torn limb from limb by monsters from the Tuat. I expect that would-be crooks were inhibited accordingly, since the Egyptian religion was taken quite literally. Consider the following inscription, dating from one of the earliest Old Kingdom dynasties of Egypt [and compare it to the concept of Tao]:

> If thou art a leader who directs the affairs of a multitude, strive after every excellence until there be no fault in thy nature. Maat is good, and its worth is lasting. It has not been disturbed since the day of its creator, whereas he who transgresses its ordinances is punished. It lies as a path even in front of him who knows nothing. Wrongdoing has never yet brought its venture to port. It is true that evil may gain wealth, but the strength of truth is that it lasts; a man can say, “It was the property of my father.”77

The Chimæra: A rather interesting contrast to the governments of Mesopotamia, Persia, and Greece, all of which laid stress upon codified law. I expect you are leading up to a comparison to the Republic and Statesman, wherein Plato argues for specially-trained or specially-gifted rulers above the law. Are you going to suggest that Plato took the Egyptian system as an ideal governmental model?

The Sphinx: Let’s not jump the spear on this. I have a few other points to make concerning the Egyptian system proper; then we’ll look into the matter of its actual links with Plato. Again bearing the recommendations of the Republic in mind, consider the following: Almost uniquely within the ancient world, Egypt was free from hereditary caste, racial, or sexual discrimination in political affairs. A social aristocracy was created by property-inheritance, but a scion of poor or even unknown parentage might just as easily rise to high office upon demonstrating suitable prowess. At various times the throne was held by Negros, Persians, Mesopotamians, Greeks, and assorted Asians without racial objections being raised. Women enjoyed the same “citizenship” status as men, including choice of mate and inheritance of property. Queens such as Nefertiti and Ty wielded as much or more power than their consorts, and female pharaohs such as Hatshepsut and Cleopatra ruled Egypt as decisively and with as much popular sport as did male pharaohs. Even in the Egyptian religious pantheon, gods and goddesses enjoyed equal prestige.

The Chimæra: To an observer this extraordinary flexibility and tolerance might well account for the staying-power of the Egyptian system, in spite of the occasional invasions, occupations, and even civil wars that took place there. When the dust cleared, so to speak, the political and social institutions remained intact.

The Sphinx: Precisely. Egypt was no more a utopia than any other human-run society was, is, or will be. There were power-struggles, epidemics of corruption, popular revolts, and all the rest. During the Middle Kingdom (2150-1792 BCE) a pessimistic Pharaoh Amenemhet I advised Crown Prince Senwosret:

Harken to that which I say to thee,
That thou mayest be king of the earth,
That thou mayest be ruler of the lands,
That thou mayest increase good,
Harden thyself against all subordinates.
The people give heed to him who terrorizes them;
Approach them not alone.
Fill not thy heart with a brother,
Know not a friend,
Nor make for thyself intimates,
Wherein there is no end.
When thou sleepest, guard for thyself thine own heart;
For a man has no people in the day of evil.
I gave to the beggar, I nourished the orphan;
I admitted the insignificant, as well as him who was of great account.
But he who ate my food made insurrection;
He to whom I gave my hand aroused fear in my heart.78

The Chimæra: But the institutions survived, and on the whole Egyptians were able to boast of a far more stable, prosperous, and inspiring society than those of the other Mediterranean countries. That is your point?

The Sphinx: Yes. By contrast the Greece of Plato’s time was in pretty sorry shape. The various city-states couldn’t even maintain stable governments of their own, much less get along with each other; Elitist systems such as that of Sparta were vulnerable to tyranny by strongmen; democratic Athens suffered from demagoguery and dictatorships. The much-vaunted philosophers were tolerated only as long as they were not thought to be actual threats. When they were inconvenient, as Plato and Aristotle had occasion to observe, hemlock or banishment awaited. Great principles of religion and/or philosophy were ridiculed in favor of Sophistic opportunism. Yet - and I think this is an important point - the Greeks had demonstrated that they were quite capable of high intellectual achievement. They had produced a number of noteworthy philosophers, artists, statesmen, architects, and military leaders. What they had not produced was a stable cultural environment in which such talent could be nurtured. In his politically-oriented dialogues, therefore, Plato sought a system of government that could achieve this stability without being as dictatorial as, say, the Persian or Assyrian monarchies. In Egypt, if in fact he realized it, he had a near-exact functioning model of his Republic - and one which was working quite well.

The Chimæra: ... If he realized it! So the problem is now to discover what connections, if any, Plato had with Egypt. Are the Dialogues of any help?

The Sphinx: No, they aren’t. There are a very few passing references to Egypt, but nothing of any substance. It would be discouraging if it were not for the fact that the Pythagoreans are similarly ignored. That makes the situation a bit suspect. If Plato’s links with Egypt are tenuous, his links with the Pythagoreans are beyond doubt. The geometric passages in the Timæus are virtually pure Pythagorean doctrine. And, from a political point of view, the Pythagoreans represented the extreme of initiated elitism that Plato juxtaposed to Sophistry. To the Sophists, human values were purely relative to custom, convention, and practical necessity; to the Pythagoreans, values were eternal, unchanging, and universal - the “Platonic” Forms. How is it that the Pythagoreans came to hold this point of view? Let us look to Pythagoras himself for the answer.

The Chimæra: Back to the Stanley text. I see that most of its biographical entries concerning Pythagoras are footnoted to Iamblicus, a fourth-century CE Neoplatonist, and from Diogenes Laertius, writing about a century earlier. Specific passages dealing with Pythagoras’ stay in Egypt are footnoted to Porphyryus and Clemens Alexandrinus as well. In Chapter III “How he travelled to Phœnicia” we read:

He made a voyage to Sidon, as well out of a natural desire to the place itself, esteeming it his country, as conceiving that he might more easily pass from thence into Egypt.

Here he conferred with the Prophets, successors of Mocus the Physiologist, and with others, and with the Phœnician Priests, and was initiated into all the mysteries of Byblus, and Tyre, and sundry of the principal sacred institutions in divers other parts of Syria, not undergoing these things out of Superstition, as may be imagined; but out of love to knowledge, and a fear, lest any thing worthy to be known, which was preserved amongst them, in the miracles or mysteries of the gods, might escape him. Withal, not being ignorant, that the rites of those places were deduced from the Egyptian ceremonies, by means whereof he hoped to participate of the more sublime and divine mysteries in Egypt, which he pursued with admiration, as his Master Thales had advised him.79

The Sphinx: Two rather intriguing points - first that Mesopotamian initiatory priesthoods were thought to be corruptions or derivations of their Egyptian counterparts, and secondly that Pythagoras undertook this quest on the advice of Thales. Thales was reputed to have been born of a Phœnician mother, and it is more-or-less reliably established that he studied the science of geometry in Egypt.80 But please continue

The Chimæra: Here are some extracts from Chapter IV “How he travell’d to Egypt”:

Antiphon, in his Book concerning such as were eminent for virtue, extolleth his perceverance when he was in Egypt, saying, Pythagoras designing to become acquainted with the institution of the Egyptian Priests, and diligently endeavoring to participate thereof, desired Polycrates the Tyrant to write to Amasis King of Egypt, with whom he had friendship (as appears also by Herodotus) and hospitality, (formerly) that he might be admitted to the aforesaid Doctrine. Coming to Amasis, Amasis gave him Letters to the Priests, and going first to those of Heliopolis, they sent him to the Priest of Memphis, as the more ancient, which was indeed but a pretence of the Heliopolitans: [For the Egyptians imparted not their mysteries to every one, nor committed the knowledg of Divine things to profane persons, but to those only who were to inherit the Kingdom; and, of Priests, to those who were adjudged to excel the rest in education, learning, and descent.] From Memphis, upon the same pretence, he was sent to Thebes. They not daring, for fear of the King, to pretend excuses; but thinking, that by reason of the greatness and difficulty thereof, he would desist from the design, enjoyed him very hard precepts, wholly different from the institution of the Grecians, which he readily performed, to their so great admiration, that they gave him power to sacrifice to the gods, and to acquaint himself with all their studies, which was never known to have been granted to any forraigner besides. Clemens Alexandrinus relates particularly, that he was disciple to Sonchedes, an Egyptian Arch-prophet.81

The Sphinx: Again something catches my eye - that comment about Egyptian initiation normally being reserved for the pharaoh and the priesthood alone. In the Statesman Plato writes:

For the priest and the diviner have great social standing and a keen sense of their own importance. They win veneration and respect because of the high tasks they undertake. This is shown in the fact that in Egypt none can be king unless he belongs to the priestly caste, and if a man of some other caste succeeds in forcing his way to the throne, he must then be made a priest by special ordination.82

The Chimæra: Now how would Plato come to know that bit of information, unless he were party to policies within the Egyptian priesthoods?

The Sphinx: It is always possible that he heard it from the Pythagoreans, although it seems only incidental to the sort of doctrines that Pythagoreans would be inclined to discuss. So here we may have a link directly between Plato and the Egyptian initiatory orders. Continue with the material from Stanley.

The Chimæra:

Diogenes saith, that whilst he lived with these Priests, he was instructed in the Learning and Language (as Antiphon also affirms) of the Egyptians, and in their three kinds of writing, Epistolick, Hieroglyphick, and Symbolick; whereof one imitates the common way of speaking; the rest allegorical, by Ænigms. They who are taught by the Egyptians, learn first the method of all the Egyptian Letters, which is called Epistolographick; the second, Hieratick, used by those who write of sacred things; the last and most perfect Hieroglyphick, whereof one is Curio logically, the other, Symbolick. Of the Symbolick, one is properly spoken by imitation, another is written as it were Tropically; another on the contrary doth allegorize by Ænigms. For instance, in the Kyriologick way, to express the Sun, they make a Circle; the Moon a Crescent. Tropically they do properly traduce, and transfer, and express by exchanging some things, and variously transfiguring others. Thus when they deliver the praises of Kings, in Theological Fables, they write by Anaglyphicks. Of the third kind, by Ænigms, let this be an example: All other Stars, by reason of their oblique course, they likened to the bodies of serpents, but the Sun to that of a Beetle, because having formed a ball of Cow-dung, and lying upon its back, it rolls it about (from claw to claw.)83

The Sphinx: Once again there is more here than meets the eye. It is possible that lamblicus or one of the other sources could have made up the other details of a trip by Pythagoras to Egypt, but here we seem to have conclusive proof - both of the trip itself and of Pythagoras’ initiation. For the description given of the Egyptian linguistic system is in complete agreement with what has come to light with the discoveries of Champollion and Young.84 Stanley could not have known this, and it is highly improbable that Iamblicus or any of the other biographers could have known it either. Hieroglyphic writing was a closely-guarded skill in Egypt, and, as we noted earlier, its teaching required many years of study. Pythagoras’ initiation seems all the more probable.

Thus being acquainted with the learning of that Nation, and enquiring into the Commentaries of the priests of former times, he knew the observations of innumerable Ages, as Valerius Maximus saith. And living admir’d and belov’d of all the priests and prophets with whom he conversed, he informed himself by their means accurately, concerning every thing; not omitting any person, eminent at that time for learning, or any kind of religious rites; nor leaving any place unseen, by going into which he conceived, that he might find something extraordinary. [For he went into the Adyta of the Egyptians, (and, as Clemens saith, permitted himself to that end to be circumcised) and learned things not to be communicated concerning the gods, mystick Philosophy.] He travelled to all the Priests, and was instructed by every one, in that wherein they were particularly learned. In Egypt he lived twenty two years, in their private sacred places, studying Astronomy and Geometry, and was initiated (not cursorily or casually) into all the religious mysteries of the gods. Lærtius saith, He made three Cups of silver, and presented them to each [Society] of the Egyptian Priests; which, as we said, were three, of Heliopolis, Memphis, and Thebes.85

The Sphinx: It is perhaps worthy of note that the sources cited by Stanley lived at points of time when the bulk of the material from the library at Alexandria still existed. It is not unreasonable to assume that they would have either taken or verified their accounts from such records as they could read [in Greek if not in hieroglyphic] from that institution. At the time its prominence was unparalleled by any other literary repository in the Mediterranean, and it is hard to imagine scholars - particularly ones dealing with such a subject as this - bypassing it.

The Chimæra: The highly-selective “clubs” or schools which Pythagoras established in Sicily and southern Italy seem to align more closely to the fashion of the Egyptian priesthoods than to schools of the Greek tradition. Stanley, quoting lamblicus, makes this point and hints that Pythagoras’ exacting methods were not well-received:

His country summoned him to some publick employment, that he might benefit the generality, and communicate his knowledge: which he not refusing, endeavored to instruct them in the symbolical way of learning, altogether resembling that of the Egyptians, in which he himself had been instituted. But the Samians not affecting this way, did not apply themselves to him.86

The Sphinx: I think we have satisfactorily established the links between Pythagoras and the Egyptian priesthoods. Now we must determine to what extent the Egyptian doctrines reached Plato, either directly or through the Pythagoreans.

The Chimæra: Stanley quotes the following passage from Porphyry:

Moderatus saith, That this (Pythagorick Philosophy) came at last to be extinguished, first, because it was aenigmatical; next, because their Writings were in the Dorick Dialect, which is obscure, by which means, the Doctrines delivered in it were not understood, being spurious and misapprehended, because (moreover) they who publish’d them were not Pythagoreans. Besides, Plato, Aristotle, Speusippus, Aristoxenus, and Xenocrates, as the Pythagoreans affirm, vented the best of them, as their own, changing only some few things in them; but the more vulgar and trivial, and whatsoever was afterwards invented by envious and calumnious persons, to cast a contempt upon the Pythagorean School, they collected and delivered as proper to that sect.87

The Sphinx: That certainly doesn’t appear to be too complimentary to Plato. Yet the fact remains that the cosmological philosophy in the Timæus is indisputably Pythagorean, yet is nowhere credited by Plato to the Pythagoreans or to Pythagoras himself. What of the Pythagoreans’ political doctrines?

The Chimæra: In The Genesis of Plato’s Thought, Alban D. Winspear summarizes them succinctly, if less exhaustively than Stanley:

It is true that Pythagoras himself seems to have held no elective office in any Greek state. His function was rather to organize political clubs which busied themselves with practical political affairs and developed a general intellectual apologia for aristocratic rule.

[Quoting Iamblicus] The Pythagoreans met in caucuses and gave counsel about political affairs. With the passage of time, it came about that the young men not only took the lead in domestic matters but in public too; they came to govern the city, forming a great political club. For they were more than three hundred in number.

It is in this connection not without significance that Pythagoras himself held (according to one authority) [Stobæus] that all income should come from agriculture. Here we have a hint of that same prejudice against the merchants and the democracy, that defense of the position of the landed proprietor which so constantly recurs in Greek idealistic thinkers.

Once this point is understood, the philosophical teachings of the Pythagoreans become intelligible. A passage in lamblicus (which goes back to Aristoxenus) gives their point of view very clearly, and we must connect it with our previous discussion about the importance of the problem of justice:

Pythagoras thought that the most efficacious device for the establishment of justice was the rule of the gods, and beginning with that he established the state and the laws, justice and the just.

In this interesting passage we have a long step forward in the theologizing of the concept of justice. The contemplation of divine things, thought the Pythagoreans, instructed by Pythagoras himself, was useful for mankind. The reason was that we need a master, some ruling principle against which we do not dare to rise in rebellion, and this is provided by the divinity. Our animal nature, he argued, is subject to hybris and is diverse and chaotic, subject to control by a variety of impulses, desires, and passions. There must be a power which by its superiority and its “threatening eminence (epanastasis)” will introduce prudence and order into chaos.88

The Sphinx: Compare this notion of justice as a divine standard to the Egyptian concept of Maat which we discussed earlier. Here we find evidence of a Form discussed virtually identically by first the Egyptians, then Pythagoras, then Plato. It is something higher than law, higher than human reason or learned wisdom - it is a “god” itself.

The Chimæra: The actual characteristics of what are generally known as the “Egyptian gods” are far closer to the notion of Forms than they are to the later pantheons of pagan cultures such as Greece, Rome, and Scandinavia. A reading of Egyptian texts translated directly from the hieroglyphic will substantiate this. In only a very few legends [such as that of the death and rebirth of Osiris] do the gods assume human behavioral characteristics. In the vast bulk of the existing texts they are far more abstract, having “personalities” that seem to overlap one another and symbolic attributes that are difficult to identify in terms of purely-human desires. Consider the following inscription from the tomb of Rameses VI in this light, noticing the overlap between Truth (Maat) and Ra:

Adoration to Truth. Salutation to thee, this Eye of Ra through which he lives every day! They who are behind the chapel fear her, the Brilliant One. She who comes out from the head of him who made her. On the Head Serpent, who comes out in front of him! Thou art the brilliant eye who leads him, the word of judgment of the One Whose Name Is Hidden, the victorious one before the Ennead, Lady of Fear, great of respect, Truth, through whom Ra is glorified, she who appeases for him the Two Lands by her decrees, she who speaks to the gods and chases away evil, whose abomination is sin, she who appeases the hearts of the gods! Thou art the balance of the Lord of the Two Banks, whose face is beautiful when Ra comes to his Truth, being glorious through her. Those in Busiris praise him through her, litanies are sung to him by the great gods while she adores the powers of the Two Chapels. He is glorious through her, more than the gods, in this her name of the Brilliant One. Thoth

brought her and reckoned her, the Established One, the Brilliant, the Reckoned One, in this her name of the Ipet Serpent. He made her live as a Uræus in this her name of Opener of the Ways, She who leads him on the ways of the horizon, in this her name of Leader of Men. He erected her on his head in this her name of Very Great Crown.89

The Sphinx: A passage such as this is quite impossible to explain in terms of ordinary human conventions and values. It certainly bears scant resemblance to the light, allegorical adventures of later Mediterranean gods and goddesses. Yet to one versed in the language of the Egyptian priesthoods, its meanings are quite clear. If Plato were an Egyptian initiate, one can see why he would dismiss conventional means of reductionist logic as a means for comprehending the Forms.

The Chimæra: We have seen definite evidence of Pythagorean doctrine in the Platonic writings, and at the beginning of this discussion we recounted Plato’s visit to the Pythagorean centers in Italy and Africa from 399 to 387 BCE. But are there any grounds to suppose that Plato received direct initiation at the hands of an Egyptian priesthood?

The Sphinx: There are at least two indications that he did. First there is the following passage from the Prefaces of St. Jerome [circa 340-420 CE], placed by order of Popes Sixtus V [1585-1590] and Clement VIII [1592-1605] as introduction to the Bible:

Pythagoras and Plato, those masters of the genius of Greece, visited as pilgrims seeking after knowledge and as humble disciples the sacerdotal college of the soothsayers at Memphis [Memphiticos vates], preferring to be initiated with respect to the ancient doctrines of that distant land, rather than impose on their country the yoke of their own ideas.90

The Chimæra: At the risk of belaboring the point, I again note that this passage was written prior to the final destruction of the Alexandrian library and [possibly] such references to the matter as it may have contained for scholars of the time.

The Sphinx: For that matter, there may have been other sources available to St. Jerome which, for one reason or another, have not survived to the present day. Our second bit of evidence comes from Proclus, who states that Plato was initiated in Egypt over a thirteen-year period by the priests Patheneitb, Ochoaps, Sechtnouphis, and Etymon of Sebennithis.91

The Chimæra: Again we can indulge in a little detective-work. The names of the first three priests can be rendered precisely in hieroglyphics; that argues for their authenticity. [The fourth can be rendered only approximately and thus is not conclusive.] The “thirteen-year period” happens to coincide with the normal training time for an Egyptian scribe [to achieve full fluency in the hieroglyphic language]. As for Sebennithis, it was the seat of the Egyptian government from 378

90 “Taceo de philosophis, astronomis, astrologis, quorum scientia mortalibus utilissima est, et in tres partes scinditur. το δοκιμα τηνευθόδου, την εμπειριαν. Ad minores artes veniam,” etc. [A. Hyeronimi, Prologus galateatus, in Bibl. saer.].
to 360 BCE under Nekht-Hor-heb I, first pharaoh of the XXX Dynasty. Hence it would have been both relatively secure from a political standpoint and a logical place for Plato to seek Egyptian initiation.92

The Sphinx: Talk about last-minute timing! In 340 BCE, after more than four thousand years of native national rule, Egypt finally fell to a Persian army [which in turn fell to Alexander the Great in 332]. How sophisticated the Egyptian initiatory systems remained under purely-occupational governments is open to question - as would be the willingness of Egyptian priests to initiate foreigners under such circumstances. Even Pythagoras’ initiation many years earlier seems to have occurred only after some arm-twisting by Amasis, himself a native Egyptian pharaoh and thus an initiate in his own right. A Persian or a Ptolemaic ruler would not have had such leverage over the native priesthoods, nor the knowledge to judge whether forced-instruction were in fact genuine. After Pythagoras and Plato the link with the Egyptian priesthoods was broken. [This may very well account for the sharp distinctions between the Pythagorean/Platonic doctrines - with their apparent sophistication and seeming uniqueness - and the decidedly-diluted commentaries (such as those of Aristotle) which trailed along after them.]

The Chimæra: Having come this far, what may we conclude concerning Plato’s legacy?

The Sphinx: He left two memorials: his writings and his Academy. The former contain discussions of Forms [or Egyptian “gods”, if you will!] on an initiatory level, although they are also useful as exercises in ordinary logic. The latter was, in effect, a Pythagorean school minus the strict personal and psychological discipline that Pythagoras thought important [and which contributed directly to the burning of Crotona and the slaying of Pythagoras himself - by outraged ex-students who had failed to withstand the pressure]. Evidently Plato thought that he could transmit the doctrines in an environment more suited to Greece than to Egypt. And he was successful, at least to the extent that the Academy enjoyed a long and productive existence - and to the extent that his own writings were preserved for our consideration at this point in the time-continuum. He may have failed to provide the Greece of his own day with the sort of enlightened government that he might have preferred, but he had seen Pythagorean domination of Sicily and Italy come to grief. So perhaps he was not so anxious as some might suppose to duplicate the Pythagorean experiment in Greece itself. Whereas Pythagoras died a violent death and left none of his personal works for posterity, Plato lived a full life and left a rich heritage for scholars - and Initiates - of the future. That, certainly, is testimony to his wisdom.

Epilogue

Poor men, most admirable, most pitiable,
With all their changes all their great Creeds change
For Man, this alien in my family,
Is alien most in this, to cherish dreams
And brood on visions of eternity,
And build religions in his brooding brain
And in the dark depths awe-full of his soul.
My other children live their little lives,
Are born and reach their prime and slowly fail,
And all their little lives are self-fulfilled;
They die and are no more, content with age
And weary with infirmity. But Man
Has fear and hope and phantasy and awe,
And wistful yearnings and unsated loves,
That strain beyond the limits of his life,
And therefore Gods and Demons, Heaven and Hell:
This Man, the admirable, the pitiable.

Appendix 2: The Book of Coming Forth by Night

The Book of Coming Forth by Night

North Solstice
The Equinox has succumbed to my Solstice, and I, Set, am revealed in my Majesty.

The time of the Purification is past. The fate of my Gifted race rests in balance, and I shall not recant my Word, spoken to my High Priest MehenPetTha in old Khem and now again to you. Proclaim the nineteen Parts of the Word, and vanquish thus the feeble and corrupt Keys of Enoch, which were but a shadow of my true Word and now are an affront to me.

I am the ageless Intelligence of this Universe. I created HarWer that I might define my Self. All other gods of all other times and nations have been created by men. This you know from the first Part of my Word, and from my manifest semblance, which alone is not of Earth.

Known as the Hebrew Satan, I chose to bring forth a Magus, according to the fashion of my Word. He was charged to form a Church of Satan, that I might easily touch the minds of men in this image they had cast for me.

In the fifth year of the Church of Satan, I gave to this Magus my Diabolicon, that he might know the truth of my ancient Gift to mankind, clothed though it might be in the myths of the Hebrews.

Even you, who delivered the Diabolicon from Asia, did not know it for what it was. But he that I had fashioned a Magus knew, and he thought often of the Diabolicon as he guided the Church of Satan.

Upon the ninth Solstice, therefore, I destroyed my pact with Anton Szandor LaVey, and I raised him to the Will of a Daimon, unbounded by the material dimensions. And so I thought to honor him beyond other men. But it may have been this act of mine that ordained his fall.

Were I my Self to displace the Cosmic Inertia, I should be forced to become a new measure of consistency. I would cease to be One, for I should become All.

To make of man a Daimon, then, may be to break his Self-reference to the bounds in which his semblance must exist.
I cannot undo the hurt that has come of this, but I shall restore to Anton Szandor LaVey his human aspect and his degree of Magus in my Order. Thus all may understand that he is dearly held by me, and that the end of the Church of Satan is not a thing of shame to him. But a new Aeon is now to begin, and the work of Anton Szandor LaVey is done. Let him be at ease, for no other man has ever seen with his eyes.

In April of the common year 1904, I came forth in Africa as my Opposite Self and brought into being an Aeon to end the horrors of the stasis of the death-gods of men. This new Aeon was a Purification, to prepare men for that which would follow it.

And Aleister Crowley received the Book of the Law, and my Opposite Self declared him Magus of the Aeon.

But HarWer, my Opposite Self, is a strange and fitful presence. I, Set, am my Self distinct from the Order of the Cosmos, yet am ordered in and of my Self. HarWer I was when I was once part of the Cosmos and could achieve identity only by becoming what the Cosmic order was not. By HarWer I cancelled the imbalance, leaving a Void in which true Creation could take form as Set.

But, as I have said, I cannot destroy the Cosmic Inertia without having to assume its place. And so HarWer must exist while Set exists.

The Aeon of HarWer endured until the Equinox of the common year 1966, when HarWer and Set were fused as one composite being. And so commenced the time of Set- HarWer - known as the Age of Satan - which was to bridge the expiring Aeon of HarWer and the forthcoming Aeon of Set.

Truth there was in the words of my Opposite Self, but a truth ever tinged with the inconsistency and irrationality of which I have spoken. And so the Book of the Law was confusion to all who came upon it, and the creative brilliance of the Magus Aleister Crowley was ever flawed by mindless destructiveness. He himself could never understand this, for he perceived HarWer as a unified Self. And so he was perplexed by a mystery he could not identify.
And I, Set, spoke too in the Book of the Law - Aye! listen to the numbers and the words -

4638 AB cT 2 a AL G nor 3 r
x T 9 P a st o r a l

- What meaneth this, o prophet? Thou knowest not: nor shalt thou know ever. There cometh one to follow thee: he shall expound it.

And many of the Aeon of HarWer sought to read this but could not. Nor could the Magus himself, though he guessed rightly at its simplicity. It was said that every number is infinite - hence each number or sum of joined numbers became merely the corresponding letter.

Even so the sequence remained unknown - and so, after its issue, to me as well. For, while I may pass free of the boundaries of time, memory of the future cannot exist.

Now it has come to pass, and the Book of the Law is laid bare -

Destined First Century heir - Aquino - breaking Keys by doctrines Anton LaVey - great Magus of reconsecration coming Year Xeper - founding his rightful Priesthood - Set - true origin Volume AL.

Michael Aquino, you are become Magus V of the Aeon of Set.

I, Set, am come again to my friends among mankind - Let my great nobles be brought to me.

In Khem I remain no longer, for I am forgotten there, and my house at PaMat-et is dust. I shall roam this world, and I shall come to those who seek me.

Magus of my Aeon - Manifest the Will of Set.

Reconsecrate my Temple and my Order in the true name of Set. No longer will I accept the bastard title of a Hebrew fiend.
When I came first to this world, I gave to you my great pentagram, timeless measure of beauty through proportion. And it was shown inverse, that creation and change be exalted above rest and preservation.

With the years my pentagram was corrupted, yet time has not the power to destroy it.

Its position was restored by the Church of Satan, but its essence was dimmed with a Moorish name, and the perverse letters of the Hebrews, and the goat of decadent Khar. During the Age of Satan I allowed this curious corruption, for it was meant to do me honor as I was then perceived.

But this is now my Aeon, and my pentagram is again to be pure in its splendor. Cast aside the corruptions, that the pentagram of Set may shine forth. Let all who seek me be never without it, openly and with pride, for by it I shall know them.

Let the one who aspires to my knowledge be called by the name Setian.

I seek my Elect and none other, for mankind now hastens toward an annihilation which none but the Elect may hope to avoid. And alone I cannot preserve my Elect, but I would teach them and strengthen their Will against the coming peril, that they and their blood may endure. To do this I must give further of my own Essence to my Elect, and, should they fail, the Majesty of Set shall fade and be ended.

Behold, it is I who call you, because you are the guardians of the Aeon of Set, zealous in what you do.

The Satanist thought to approach Satan through ritual. Now let the Setian shun all recitation, for the text of another is an affront to the Self. Speak rather to me as to a friend, gently and without fear, and I shall hear as a friend. Do not bend your knee nor drop your eye, for such things were not done in my house at PaMat-et. But speak to me at night, for the sky then becomes an entrance and not a barrier. And those who call me the Prince of Darkness do me no dishonor.
The Setian need conjure neither curse nor kindness from me, for by the magic of my great pentagram I shall see with his eyes. And then the strength that is mine shall be the strength of the Setian, and against the Will of Set no creature of the Universe may stand. And I think not of those who think not of me.

The years of the Aeon of HarWer were confused, and I do not wish to think of them save as curiosities. But I wish to remember the Church of Satan and the Magus of that Age. Therefore let the years of my Aeon be counted from the conception of the Church of Satan.

And now, having looked upon the past with affection and reverence, we shall turn our gaze to the times before us. Think carefully of the Word of Set, for it is given in witness to my Bond.

Behold, O West, I have established my Aeon. I punish the enemies who are in it, placed in the Place of Destruction. I deliver them to the examiners from whose guard there is no escape. Lo, I pass near to thee. I pass near to thee!

Affix now my image as it was given to you, so that all who read of these matters may now look upon the likeness of Set.

The Word of the Aeon of Set is

The Ides of March XL ÆS

Introduction

From 1966 to 1975 CE there existed in the United States of America a most singular organization known as the Church of Satan. Founded by Anton Szandor LaVey in the city of San Francisco, it espoused the social doctrine of “Indulgence”, challenging all creeds, cultures, and codes that seek virtue through abstinence from the pleasures of mortal existence.

In its formative years the Church of Satan took an essentially metaphorical approach towards the being from whom it took its name. “Satan” was a term representing, it was thought, simply the principle of carnality. Such rituals and ceremonies as the Church first celebrated, therefore, were conceived as illustrative, inspirational, and allegorical. That, at least, is the way it all began.

“When he is called,” Eliphas Levi once observed, “the Devil comes and is seen.” And in that prosaic statement lies a truth whose implications challenge the rational constructs of the most exacting intellects. The one common feature to all the gods of all the nations of history, it may be said, is that they do not come and are not seen.

Satan, however, did come to the Church of Satan - first as the faintest of atmospheres in its ceremonies, and ultimately as a metaphysical presence whose expression of being was awesome, exhilarating - the very fire of life to those who took his name as a part of their own and called themselves Satanists.

The full history of the Church of Satan is documented in The Church of Satan, which account culminates on the North Solstice of the Satanic Year Ten, the evening of June 21-22, 1975. For the Church of Satan had fallen in ruins, Anton LaVey having corrupted the Priesthood; and it seemed to me, at that time Magister Templi IV° and successor by default to the Satanic High Priesthood, that only direct intervention by the Prince of Darkness himself could provide us with a basis for a viable raison d’être.

Alone that night I called upon him, and he came forth - through a sequence of realizations within my mind that, in a few short hours, I recorded in written text as The Book of Coming Forth by Night.

In its most immediate sense this text brought the Church of Satan to a final, dignified terminus, superseding it with a new initiatory institution - the Temple of Set - whose history to date may be found in its various administrative papers, newsletters, and the Jeweled Tablets of Set. Yet the Book of Coming Forth by Night was to prove a far deeper and richer mine, as again and again I strove to explore its depths. My first comment - a single page (Appendix #4) - was written on the morning of June 23, 1975. Over the following decades gradually-expanding ones were to follow, and finally this one.

Since 1975 the Temple of Set has attained a far richer awareness of its identity. I myself grew to comprehend the full meaning of the Word whereby I came into being as a Magus V°. In doing so I aided others to attune their magical wills to ever more powerful sources of energy and inspiration that had lain dormant within them. Having fulfilled that which was set forth for me to do upon the Earth as a Magus, I myself came into being on the Ides of March XIV as an Ipsissimus VI°.
This, then, is an examination of the Book of Coming Forth by Night from a VI° perspective, encompassing the key magical texts of two Æons and their intervening Age. The Book of Coming Forth by Night is no longer just a call to arms and a charge to the fellowship of the Prince of Darkness; it is a principle which has woven itself into the fabric of existence so thoroughly that it has become an immortal element of mankind’s higher potential. It remains for those who seek the path to that towards which it shows the way to train themselves and refine their states of being until this Grail appears in its truth before them. This commentary is a foretaste of the elixir of the Grail; it is to say that Xeper is also no mere illusion - it too comes and is seen.

To what extent does the text lend itself to objective interpretation? At first reading it is both straightforward and unambiguous. Many of the words and phrases, however, are evidently used in an emphatically precise or unique sense. A magician and philosopher will consider them with corresponding care. Moreover the Book of Coming Forth by Night is not simply a compendium of abstract generalizations; its appearance was keyed to specific circumstances, and many of its passages address them. Thus background information is important, particularly for those unfamiliar with the events and subjects in question.

While the Book of Coming Forth by Night is sufficiently integral to be read and considered as a whole, its statements are best treated in sequence. Hence I begin as the text itself began: with its name.

Xeper.
The Book of Coming Forth by Night (title)

In hieroglyphics this would be Sat Per Em Kerh. It is an evident negation of the name of the Book of Coming Forth by Day, the Osirian funerary text that is popularly known as the Egyptian Book of the Dead.

Persons unfamiliar with the ancient Egyptian culture often assume that the Egyptian religion, like those of later Mediterranean civilizations, consisted of a single, integrated pantheon of anthropomorphic gods and goddesses. It is rather the case that the earliest Egyptian god-figures were provincial, being patrons of individual cities and districts (Nomes). Nor, despite their famous human/beast composite appearances, were they mere “supernatural persons” after the Greek, Mesopotamian, or Roman fashion. While popular stories were woven about them - presumably for popular consumption - the hieroglyphic treatment of these entities suggests that they actually represented various aspects of existence - the “Forms” or “First Principles” discussed by Pythagoras and Plato in a more abstract manner.

The hieroglyphic term for “god” is neter, of which Sir E.A. Wallis Budge remarks:

> This word has been translated “god-like”, “holy”, “divine”, “sacred”, “power”, “strength”, “force”, “strong”, “fortify”, “mighty”, “protect”; but it is quite impossible to be certain that any word which we may use represents the meaning of neter, because no one knows exactly what idea the ancient Egyptians attached to the word. The truth is that the exact meaning of neter was lost at a very early period of Egyptian history, and even the Coptic does not help us to recover it.94

Commerce, protective alliances, cultural contact, and finally the unification of the entire nation ca. 3200 BCE resulted in the gradual incorporation of local gods into regional groups, and then into a loosely-knit national pantheon. Local and regional cult centers continued to hold their respective patrons in especial regard, however, and so the character and role of a specific god might vary remarkably from place to place. Individual dynasties also tended to be oriented to particular cult centers, and so the gods in question would be elevated - at least for a time - to the status of national patrons.95

The information concerning these cults which is available to modern Egyptologists is both sparse and confusing. Since a given god could be portrayed in a number of different ways, identifying the “core god” is difficult. The images and inscriptions concerning a god were often altered or appropriated by cultists of rival gods.

In Christian and Moslem times the old gods were considered blasphemous, and monuments to them were regularly defaced and destroyed. By the end of the fifth century CE, knowledge of hieroglyphics had died out, not to reappear until the nineteenth century; meanwhile many “useless” records perished through neglect.

For two reasons the cult of Osiris (Asar) and Isis (Asa) has been emphasized in modern literature: First, it was the last cult to dominate the entire Egyptian nation. Thus it was in a position to do a “final editing” of non-Osirian manuscripts and monuments. Secondly it was described in detail by Plutarch, permitting its study.

long after the hieroglyphic records of the other cults had become unreadable.\textsuperscript{96}

Set was a beneficent god, and one whose favor was sought after by the living and by the dead, and so late as the XIX Dynasty kings delighted to call themselves “Beloved of Set”.
After the cult of Osiris was firmly established and this god was the “great god” of all Egypt, it became the fashion to regard Set as the origin of all evil, and his statues and images were so effectively destroyed that only a few which have escaped by accident have come down to us.\textsuperscript{97}

The Osirians recast Set as Osiris’ treacherous brother and mortal enemy of Osiris’ son - for whom they appropriated the god Horus. Not content with attacking Set personally, they further appropriated his consort and son from the original triad of his cult - Nepthys and Anubis - whom they now described respectively as a concubine of Osiris and a son of Osiris by Nephtys.

When the Osirian cult came to dominate Egypt after the XX Dynasty, all traces of the Set cult were practically obliterated. “Between the XXII and the XXV Dynasties,” comments Budge, “a violent reaction set in against this god; his statues and figures were smashed; his effigy was hammered out from the bas-reliefs and stelæ in which it appeared.”\textsuperscript{98} We know of the Set cult through a few archaeological finds that managed to survive both the Osirian influence and the more general vandalism of the Christian/ Moslem eras. Hence it is no small irony that the \textit{Book of Coming Forth by Night} plays upon the title of the Osirian “bible”.

It is also of note that the Osirian cult in particular glorified life-after-death above life-before-death. The \textit{Book of Coming Forth by Day} is essentially a selection of spells and incantations designed to aid a newly-dead person through the perils of the underworld. This preoccupation with death is conspicuously absent from the \textit{Book of Coming Forth by Night}, which is ultimately an incitement to and a challenge for the enhancement of conscious life.

North Solstice \textit{Xeper}

The \textit{Book of Coming Forth by Night} was written during the night of the North Solstice (June 21-22) 1975 (the year X of the Age of Satan, according to the Church of Satan). Here the year is given the hieroglyphic name \textit{Xeper}, symbolized by \textit{Xepera}, the scarab beetle who represents the principle of the Sun’s “immortality” via its transition through the darkness towards another dawn.

As a god of darkness and night, Set was the complement to Horus (\textit{Hor} - god of the Sun and daylight) in predynastic times. So integral was this relationship that the heads of the two gods were frequently shown on a single body (hieroglyphic name: \textit{Hrwyfy} “He with the Two Faces”). With regard to the annual cycle, Horus was thought to govern the waxing of the Sun from the South Solstice, while Set governed the waning of the Sun from the North Solstice.\textsuperscript{99}

In The Dawn of Astronomy Sir Norman Lockyer suggests that “‘Set’ seems to have been a generic name applied to the northern (?) circumpolar constellations, perhaps because Set = darkness, and these stars, being always visible in the night, may have in time typified it. Since the northern constellations were symbolized by the name of Set, the god of darkness, we should take Set-Horus to mean that the stars in the Dragon (Draco) were rising at sunrise.” To support his theory, Lockyer cites the following inscription from royal tombs in the Valley of the Kings:

> The constellation of the Thigh appears at the late rising. When this constellation is in the middle of the heavens, having come to the south where [the constellation Orion] lies, the other stars are proceeding to the western horizon. Regarding the Thigh: It is the Thigh of Set; while it is seen in the northern heavens, there is a band [constellation] to the two in the shape of a great bronze chain.

Lockyer concludes that the constellation Draco, and in particular the star at its head (Gamma Draconis), represented Set. If indeed a single star were so regarded, it was probably Alpha Draconis (or Thuban), the Polar Star at the beginning of the Egyptian civilization.

Due to the Precession of the Equinoxes, Alpha Draconis will return to the celestial pole at approximately 24000 CE. Since its last appearance there ca. 3000 BCE coincided with the unification and development of the world’s first advanced human culture, related calculations based upon the Precession Circle may yield interesting results.

The Equinox has succumbed to my Solstice, and I, Set, am revealed in my Majesty.

The apparent reference is to the North Solstice, as explained above. There may be a second implication: Aleister Crowley identified the events surrounding the inception of the Æon of Horus in 1904 CE as the “Equinox of the Gods”. The Book of Coming Forth by Night heralds the eclipse of that æon in favor of the Æon of Set.

My evocation - an effort to interpret the surprising downfall of the Church of Satan - was addressed to “Satan” (which I believed the proper name of the Prince of Darkness). Immediately, however, he corrects this name to that of Set. The term “Majesty” is also significant; in Egypt this honorific title was accorded only two gods - Set and Ra. In hieroglyphics it is the suffix -hen. A possible phonetic origin of the Hebrew term Satan is thus apparent.

The time of the Purification is past.

This period is not conclusively identified. It may refer to the Age of Satan (Set/HarWer), when all of the Osirian death-worship and posthumous salvation cults have undergone a more-or-less final archaeological exposure and discrediting, despite lingering emotional enslavement to them of primitive intellects. Or it may refer to the Æon of Horus (HarWer), during which time the grip of the old cults on the human mind was gradually broken. Or it may indicate the entire passage of time since the Osirian death-worship cult gained supremacy in Egypt and either absorbed or outlawed the life-oriented cults.

The fate of my Gifted race rests in balance, and I shall not recant my Word, spoken to my High Priest MehenPetTha in old Khem and now again to you.

The emphasized term “Gift” refers to the non-natural expansion of human intellectual capacity that occurred in prehistoric times, as discussed in Black Magic and The Temple of Set. “Word” refers to the Word of Set, discussed below.

There are no records of the ancient Priesthood of Set through which “High Priest MehenPetTha” might be identified, but the name can be rendered in hieroglyphics. Ipsissimus Don Webb has observed:

Mehen is the serpent-goddess whose “hidden” faces are those of Horus and Set. For information on this, see my The Seven Faces of Darkness. She was around from predynastic times, but was only used in personal names during the Setian Renaissance according to George Hart, when her cult gained a status among the tomb workers at S*t Maat - an area known for its Set chaplains and its special devotion to Set Aaphate (“Set Strong of Foreleg”).

Mehen shows up in the funerary decorations of people like Rameses VI and Seti I. Dr. Aquino pointed out to me that she shows up in the Book of Gates after the Slaying of Apep.

The other nouns in the name are a bound genitive (they mean “of”), which is common in a nominative utterance. Pet is pretty simple: Heaven. There are several words that sound like tha. Of the nouns I choose “fire”. My reasons are magical; pursuing Rev. 13:13 will suggest them to you.

So I would say “Mehen of Celestial Fire” is the name.

Proclaim the nineteen Parts of the Word, and vanquish thus the feeble and corrupt Keys of Enoch, which were but a shadow of my true Word and now are an affront to me.

On April 13, 1584 CE John Dee, mathematician and magician to the court of Queen Elizabeth I, undertook a series of Workings in Cracow, Poland. With the assistance of Edward Kelley, he wrote into his diaries a series of nineteen magical incantations in what he called the “Enochian or Angelic language”. With each incantation or Key Dee provided an English translation, also communicated by the angels to Kelley. In 1659 the Dee diaries containing the Keys were published by Meric. Casaubon as A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers 107 “And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on earth in the sight of men.”

The attribution of the Keys or language to Enoch is interesting insofar as he is a remarkable individual in legend. Described in the Old Testament as the seventh master of the world after Adam, Enoch is the Hebrew equivalent of the Phœnician Cadmus, the Greek Hermes, and the Egyptian Thoth. As such he is the reputed author of the Tarot, the Cabala, the Emerald Tablet of Thoth, and the apocryphal Book of Enoch. He receives only a brief mention in “Genesis”, where the fifth chapter recounts:

And Enoch lived sixty and five years, and begat Methuselah: And Enoch walked with God after he begat Methuselah three hundred years, and begat sons and daughters: And all the days of Enoch were three hundred sixty and five years: And Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him.

The Book of Enoch comprises a part of what is generally called Apocalyptic literature. The Apocalyptists were a school of pre-Rabbinical Hebrews who believed that the world was in such a hopeless mess as to be incurable by any of man’s efforts. The name “Apocalyptist” means “reveler”, and this sect maintained that human progress was rigidly mapped by God and was not subject to human will at all. In this the Apocalyptists differed from the other major Hebraic branch, Pharisaism.

The Apocalyptic literature is generally fixed to the period 200-150 BCE, and the Book of Enoch is generally regarded as the oldest such work. It seems to have been written by a number of authors, the earliest being a Hebrew from the Land of Dan in northern Palestine. The original text was probably written in Hebrew or Aramaic, later translated into Greek and Latin. These translations did not directly survive the decline of the Holy Roman Empire. The Greek version had been translated into Ethiopian, however, and an explorer named Bruce brought back a copy of it from Abyssinia in 1773 CE.

The Book of Enoch is sometimes referred to as I Enoch to distinguish it from II Enoch (or The Secrets of Enoch), a later work executed in Slavonic. The Book of Enoch contains six sections: The Book of Enoch, the Parables, the Book of the Courses of the Heavenly Luminaries, the Dream-Visions, the Conclusion, and the Noah Fragments. Most are restatements of traditional Hebraic doctrine, but the first section - the Book of Enoch - includes accounts of Enoch’s visits to certain areas of Earth and Sheol, including the following descriptions of the Palace of the Prince of Darkness:

And I went in until I drew nigh to a wall which is built of crystals and surrounded by tongues of fire, and it began to affright me. And I went into the tongues of fire and drew nigh to a large house which was built of crystals. The walls of the house were like a tesselated floor of crystals, and its groundwork was of crystal. Its ceiling was like the path of the stars and the lightnings, and between them were fiery Cherubim amidst a background of water. A blazing fire surrounded the walls, and its portals were covered with fire. And I entered into that house, and it was as hot as fire yet as cold as ice. There were no delights of life therein. Fear covered me, and trembling gat hold of me. And I quaked and trembled and fell down upon my face.

Shortly thereafter Enoch beholds the Black Flame:

From thence I went to another place to the west of the ends of the Earth. And I saw a burning fire which ran without resting, and paused not from its course day or night but blazed without respite. And I asked, saying, “What is this flame which burns unceasingly?” Then Raguel, one of the holy Angels who was with me, said, “This is the Dark Fire in the West which persecutes all the luminaries of Heaven.”

In the “Conclusion” the coming of a new kingdom is predicted - not in an afterlife, but here on Earth. The destruction of the existing Earth and Heaven is foretold, followed by the institution of a “new Heaven”. The relevance of this Book of Enoch material to the deciphered “Enochian Keys” will become apparent.

The Keys next appeared in 1969 CE, when Anton LaVey took the Cabalistic version from Crowley’s Equinox, replaced references to the Judaic/Christian God with references to Satan, and included the result in his Satanic Bible. The general sensation caused by this book, together with a considerable amount of indignation on the part of old-line Cabalists, eventually inspired a revival of interest in John Dee and his magical diaries. In 1974 CE Stephen Skinner brought out a second (facsimile) edition of A True and Faithful Relation, a copy of which I acquired in March of the following year.

Upon comparing the facsimile Casaubon to the Golden Dawn, Crowley, and LaVey Keys, I realized the extent of the distortion that had taken place. Being familiar with language and cipher construction, I set out to unravel the original Keys to determine their linguistic lineage. After some weeks of work, I concluded that Enochian is not a true language. Rather it is an artificial jargon, i.e. arbitrary words placed together in roughly consistent sequences to simulate a true language. It is so cleverly done that it can fool non-linguists fairly easily:

“… We have here fragmentary pieces of a very ancient tongue - a language which is far older even than the Sanskrit.” - Regardie, Golden Dawn, Volume II, page #266. Immediately after admitting that he is no philologist and is “without the least scientific knowledge of comparative languages”, Regardie offers the above statement about Enochian - which may be discounted accordingly.

The story continues, however: Aleister Crowley included virtually the same sentence in his Confessions (page #612), again with no supporting evidence whatever.

Then Anton LaVey, assuming that both Regardie and Crowley must have known what they were talking about, included virtually the same sentence in his Satanic Bible (page #155).
Later attempts to validate Enochian as a language or to place it historically - Donald C. Laycock’s The Complete Enochian Dictionary (London: Askin, 1978) and Geoffrey James’ The Enochian Evocation of Dr. John Dee (Berkeley Heights, NJ: Heptangle Books, 1984) - have met with similar failure. James, following Laycock, reaches the conclusion that the unpronounceable words and random letter arrangements of Enochian indicate that it was designed for non-material entities [lacking vocal cords]!

The last word was written by Hans Holzer in his The Truth About Witchcraft (1969), in which he called the language “Inelkian” and labeled it “a form of distorted Hebrew”!

It is even possible to “write” in Enochian as Crowley did, altering suffixes to create the impression of declension or conjugation. But a comprehensive grammar, essential to a true written or spoken tongue, is lacking.

For an example of how a jargon may be used, see pages #181-201 of the Satanic Rituals by Anton Szandor LaVey. Some years ago I ghost-wrote the entire section on H.P. Lovecraft - introduction and rituals - for the book. It was the work of about two months to develop the jargon that became the “nameless language” [I called it “Yuggothic”] of the Ceremony of the Nine Angles and the Call to Cthulhu. A word that sounded properly “Lovecraftian” would be constructed arbitrarily: Elaka = world, gryenn’h = [of] horrors. Then the word would be used consistently throughout the text of both rituals. Slight modifications of endings would suffice for different sentence constructions, and there you have a “language” every bit as flexible as Enochian!

Once I realized Enochian to be a jargon, I changed my approach. Now I suspected that it might be some sort of cipher or code, Dee being famous for his use of same. I tested the first three Keys against a variety of code-breaking techniques. Once more I met with no success. I had not held high hopes that I would. The loose alignment of Enochian words to their English counterparts, together with an entirely different frequency of individual letters in the two languages [even cancelling out the most divergent letters], makes cipher improbable.

Only pure code - with Enochian words or letters meaning something not revealed by their internal design alone - remained. To uncover such a code, one would simply have to know the words or phrases in English triggered by a given Enochian word or phrase, unrelated though the connection might otherwise be. [For example, the otherwise random appearance of “vorsg” might be code for “for the Queen’s eyes only”, etc.]

Two avenues of investigation remained. First, if it were true that Enochian were neither language nor cipher, then there was still the possibility that it might be a corruption of a genuine tongue. Regardie [citing Mathers’ method], Crowley, and LaVey had all accepted Kelley’s comment that “He seemeth to read as Hebrew is read”. I decided to eliminate this Hebrew-letter pronunciation entirely, treating each word as a phonetic unity and deemphasizing the vowels. [Thus “vorsg” should be pronounced just that way, rather than “vaoresaji”.]

My test case was the XIX Key, 30th Æthyr (TEX) on the assumption that there might be visual results per Crowley’s experiences in The Vision and The Voice. This time there was a certain success, in that I experienced a sequence of unusual visions and dreams.\footnote{See the record of one such example in Chapter #1.}

Finally, during the evening of May 30, I experimented with the XVII Key and was rewarded with spectacular results - the “Sphinx and Chimæra” Working.\footnote{Appendix #1.}

Then, in the first week of June, something quite unexpected happened. I began to write a text in installments of one or two hours per night. In the same style as the future \textit{Book of Coming Forth by Night}, it declared the Enochian Keys to be a remote corruption of something called the \textit{Word of Set}. There followed two “pure” Keys in English - called “parts” of the \textit{Word of Set}. Before proceeding further I was forced to break my concentration because of the sudden crisis in the Church of Satan, and so the \textit{Word of Set} remained unfinished for the next six years.

As to the “breaking” of the Keys “by the doctrines of Anton LaVey”, therein lies still another tale. Anton’s principal contribution to the Crowley Keys was to render them in what might be called a “Black Mass” form, with Heavenly references arbitrarily changed to Infernal ones. One might presume that this would invalidate the statements of the text. Oddly enough, however, the use of these “Black Keys” by the Church of Satan produced magical results that were, if anything, far more powerful than those of the “pure” system.

In my Working on the \textit{Word of Set}, I used an approach similar to Anton’s, seeking words to express what I seemed to sense the Keys were actually intended to say. In short I was endeavoring to present the Keys in a still “Blacker” version than that which appears in the \textit{Satanic Bible}.

Moreover the North Solstice X Working which resulted in the \textit{Book of Coming Forth by Night} was begun with this new First Part of the \textit{Word of Set} rather than with the First Enochian Key. Such would seem to be the basis for the \textit{Book of Coming Forth by Night}’s reference to the “breaking” of the old Keys.

Six years later the Working of the \textit{Word of Set} was finally completed - on April 13, 1981 (anniversary of John Dee’s initial Working).

In the \textit{Satanic Bible} the Enochian Keys, even in their altered form, are still garbled and unintelligible. Hence Anton felt the need to venture an interpretation of each one preceding its text. These interpretations have no basis in previous documents, and indeed previous commentators - including Dee himself - had been unable to integrate the Keys into a coherent translation.

After completing the Working of the \textit{Word of Set}, I found that the new translation needed no external interpretation - at least not for those to whom it was evidently addressed. Obviously it is idiomatic and not a word-for-word translation - as are all translations from original hieroglyphs.

In 1980, furthermore, I learned that the Casaubon account of the Dee Keys was not as error-free as I had previously supposed. My benefactor was an Initiate of the Temple of Set who kindly provided me with a complete microfilm of the original Dee diary Keys from the British Museum. Hence the “Enochian” text reproduced with the \textit{Word of Set} is an exact copy of the original as John Dee penned it, including capitalization.

As I have noted above, this original does not lend itself to grammatically-based translation or to word-for-word correlation with Dee’s own English “translation”. [The most recent efforts to do so - in Donald Laycock’s \textit{Enochian Dictionary} - resulted in an arbitrary subdividing of the Enochian text and the addition of a modern-English-based punctuation in order to “force” a correlation. The quality of the result is self-evident.]

An “Enochian purist” might question the translation provided by the Word of Set in that it is not the English version recorded by John Dee in his diaries. My answer is simply that I approached the Keys not as a historian seeking to reprint what Dee did, but as a magician seeking to operate the same “magical machinery” that Dee did - and to operate it with greater care and precision than he did.

Hence it is not a case of my “corrupting Dee”, but rather of my uncorrupting something which predated Dee’s own existence, and which was, after all, not of his [or Kelley’s] authorship. Were one to take the position that the Keys are a Dee/Kelley creation, then they would be fraudulent as a GBM Working - and merely an uncommonly-successful LBM stunt which has mystified and obsessed occultists these many centuries.

As it appears here, then, the Word of Set is an eighteenfold sequence of statements addressed to the original (“third ordering”) Initiates of the Temple of Set in ancient times. The 19th Part is not so much a statement as an operative invocation to be used for access to what Dee referred to as the “thirty aires or æthyrs”. Use of this invocation is best described in Crowley’s Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh; see also The Vision and The Voice.

What exactly is an “æthyr”? Cabalistically these are “rings” or “spheres” [of consciousness] progressively closer to the universal godhead. Per Crowley, each æthyr also awakens certain kinds of dispositions and perceptions in a magician who focuses his attention towards it - and may also provide him with access to related magical tools and/or weapons. The æthyrs will stand further exploration, in light of the Initiatory advances of the Æon of Set, and should provide a rich opportunity for Setians to test their GBM sensitivity and skills.

I am the ageless Intelligence of this Universe. I created HarWer that I might define my Self. All other gods of all other times and nations have been created by men. This you know from the first Part of my Word, and from my manifest semblance, which alone is not of Earth.

The Universe as a whole is mechanically consistent, but it does not possess a “God” personality that favors one of its components - such as mankind - above others. The Set-entity, however, is a finite intelligence within the Universe and can draw such distinctions. Set is a being operating independently of the order of the objective universe, not in enforced or unconscious concert with it.

“HarWer” or Har-ur (“Harœris” in Greek) was one of the most ancient forms of the Egyptian god Hor (“Horus” in Greek). [The English translation of Hor is “face”.

In predynastic and Old Kingdom times, Horus was the god of light, complementary to Set as god of darkness. Together the two gods also symbolized the unity and wholeness of the Egyptian nation: Horus as the god of the north (Lower Egypt) and Set as the god of the south (Upper Egypt). This union was represented on monuments by the ritual gesture of samtau, showing Horus and Set binding the heraldric plants of Upper and Lower Egypt around the stem of an AnX, symbol of divine life.

The roles of Horus and Set as the original state gods of Egypt were further emphasized by the pharaohs’ famous Double Crown (SeXet), being a composite of the Red Crown of Horus (Teser) and the White Crown of Set (Het/*Great One of Spells”). And the Tcham sceptre, with the head and forked tail of Set, became a symbol of power and authority for gods and pharaohs alike.

Horus, originally a solar deity, was later adopted into the Osirian mythos as the son of Osiris and Isis. Egyptologists generally distinguish the original and the corruption by the terms “Horus the Elder” and “Horus the Younger” respectively.

HarWer is a form of Horus the Elder combined with Wer (“The Great God”), a transcendent god of light. The Sun and the Moon were said to be the right and left eyes of HarWer, known as the Udjat (“Uræus” in Greek). At the same time the Udjat was also considered to partake of the essence of Set. “This is the Uræus which came forth from Set.” Mounted both on the SeXet and on other national crowns and headgear, the Udjat became another symbol of the pharaoh.

According to the Book of Coming Forth by Night, the dual Set/HarWer entity is the only “god” that possesses intelligence independent of the objective universe. The Universe as a whole is not intelligent, if a requirement of “intelligence” is an active, distinct personality; there is nothing for the Universe as a whole to act upon or be distinct against. [This principle refutes the doctrine of “deism”, in which God is assumed to be identical with the totality of existence.]

The only quality common to the entire objective universe as such is internal consistency [which is not to say that such consistency is a simple thing to incorporate]. And other gods, whether Egyptian or foreign, are derivative of Set or of the human mind. This does not imply that they are “imaginary” in the vulgar sense [except when crudely conceptualized by vulgar imaginations]. The disciplined, educated, and experienced mind is capable of substantive creation; it can give life to stereotypical, archetypical, and/or unique gods and dæmons. This creative ability distinguishes the magician from the superstitious believer: The former conceives and actualizes such entities consciously and deliberately, while the latter is controlled and conditioned by externally-imposed images of them.

The “Set-animal” of portraits and hieroglyphic inscriptions has remained the object of considerable controversy. Its long, curved snout, stiffly-upraised and forked tail, and tall, brush-like ears (?) appear to rule it out of any known animal category. The most extensive and thorough treatment of Set’s image to date is by H. Te Velde in his classic work Seth, God of Confusion.

Among the animals he cites as past candidates for the Set-animal are the ass, oryx antelope, greyhound, fennec, jerboa, camel, okapi, long-snouted mouse, aardvark or orycteropus, giraffe, hog, boar, hare, jackal, tapir, long-snouted Nile mormyr, and the Egyptian Nh-bird. Dismissing each of the above as essentially different from the portraits and statues of Set, Te Velde takes the position that the question cannot be resolved from the information currently available to Egyptologists.

Concerning the hieroglyphic image of Set, Te Velde states that it does not show 123 The “-th” ending is the result of spellings of “Set” using the Greek letter θ. In hieroglyphic writing, according to Budge, the name should be pronounced with a hard “-t” (Egyptian Language, page #53). Similarly I write the name of Set’s divine consort as Nepthys, not the θ-heavy “Nephthys”. It is fair to point out, however, that the name of Set has appeared in phonetic hieroglyphs in at least a dozen variations (Te Velde, op. cit., pages #1-3). The Temple of Set uses the name with a hard “-t”, after the Book of Coming Forth by Night.

the characteristics of an actual, living animal, and expresses doubt whether the hieroglyph can be traced to any animal which ever existed in the area of Egypt.\textsuperscript{124}

In his magnum opus \textit{From Fetish to God in Ancient Egypt}, Sir E.A. Wallis Budge attempts to associate the Set-animal with the Saluki dog of Arabia. By way of evidence he cites the dog’s characteristically aggressive nature, ignoring the fact that it displays none of the aforementioned physical features. Hence Budge’s identification must be rejected.\textsuperscript{125}

In hieroglyphic and pictoral representations, Set was also the only god shown with red-toned skin. Most of the others were flesh-colored, save that Osiris and his principal attendants frequently had pale green complexions (symbolic of corpse-flesh).

One may note that Set was by no means the only “fabulous” creature ever portrayed by Egyptian artists. But he was the only one represented as a principal god, as opposed to a purely-animalistic monster of the \textit{Tuat}.

\textbf{Known as the Hebrew Satan, I chose to bring forth a Magus, according to the fashion of my Word. He was charged to form a Church of Satan, that I might easily touch the minds of men in this image they had cast for me.}

Before proceeding further, I should perhaps at this point address a point of confusion concerning the Set/Satan relationship of particular note to some students of Aleister Crowley:

Kenneth Grant, co-editor of many of Crowley’s works with John Symonds, has repeatedly and exhaustively tried to connect Set with Crowley’s philosophy in general, and with Aiwass in particular.\textsuperscript{126} Crowley’s own writings, however, do not substantiate this. Crowley practically ignored Set, except for an occasional mention of the god in an Osirian-mythos context. In his principal discussion of the Devil on page #296 of \textit{Magick}, for instance, he does not even include the name of Set.

It is obvious that Crowley’s orientation with regard to Egyptian theology was exclusively towards the Osiris-cult mythos. On page #399 of his \textit{Confessions}, while discussing the sequence of magical æons in terms of the Osirian triad (Iśis, Osiris, and Horus the Younger), he emphasizes the position of Horus as the avenger of his father Osiris - a role accorded only the Osirian corruption. Additional confirmations are to be found in \textit{Magical and Philosophical Commentaries on the Book of the Law}, wherein “Hoor-paar-Kraat” is identified on page #94 as the “God of Silence” and “Harpocrates”, both designations of Horus the Younger. On the following pages his position as the son of Osiris is restated. There are plenty of other examples, but the point should be made.

Grant also endeavors somewhat desperately to identify Set with “Shaitan”, whom he states was the god worshipped by the Yezidi in Mesopotamia. The Yezidi religious texts - the \textit{Black Scripture} and \textit{Book of the Revelation} - do not use the term “Shaitan” at all, calling the Yezidi deity by the name of Melek Taus, Taus Melek, or Taus-e Malak. [Only in LaVey’s \textit{Satanic Rituals} - which contains several errors in its Yezidi section - is the term “Shaitain” alleged to be a Yezidi term.] It is probably merely a Hebrew spelling of “Satan”, and the Yezidi \textit{Book of the Revelation} clearly establishes that the Yezidis considered Jews to be “profane”.\textsuperscript{127}

Summarily Kenneth Grant appears to arbitrarily rewrite ancient Egyptian mythology, Yezidi mythology, and the philosophy of Aleister Crowley according to his personal tastes.

As noted previously, the Hebrew term “Satan” is a possible corruption of the hieroglyphic Set-hen. just as the Hebrew “YahWeh” and its derivative Christian trinity are corruptions of the earlier Osirian cult.\(^\text{128}\)

By the end of the XXV Dynasty the Priesthood of Set in Egypt was probably destroyed,\(^\text{129}\) and the subsequent loss of the hieroglyphic language virtually eliminated the original Set from human knowledge. Only the Osirian corruption survived in legend - principally through Plutarch, who described it in some detail in his Moralia.\(^\text{130}\)

The archetypical dæmon most closely akin to Set was the Christian Satan, particularly in his Miltonian representation. See in particular Book I of John Milton’s Paradise Lost. [Some interesting comments are contained in Asimov’s Annotated Paradise Lost by John Milton/Isaac Asimov (Garden City: Doubleday & Co., 1974). Asimov discusses both the role of Satan and the nature of evil itself at some length, and not always to the credit of God.] Set accordingly chose this image as the one most meaningful for post-Egyptian manifestations.

The term “Magus” is used in the specialized sense of Western initiatory tradition. A Magus is characterized by his identification, comprehension, and introduction of a new magical/philosophical principle - a process described as the Utterance of a Word and/or Formula.

For Aleister Crowley’s interpretation of the role of a Magus, see his Magick, page #330. [This is the “One Star in Sight” essay, which may also be found in other Crowley works and is abridged in Black Magic in the Crystal Tablet of Set.] Like a prophet he accomplishes this through a mental “link” with a higher intellectual essence (what Plato termed Nœsis). Such a “link” may be either external (with a separate intelligence) or internal (with the higher sensitivity of one’s own intelligence). In either case it is the results of the experience that are significant.

Unlike a prophet, a Magus establishes such a “link” through deliberate mental focus, and with full comprehension of the result. Hence an essential distinction between magic and [conventional] religion is that philosophical discipline is required for the former, while mental relaxation and abandonment of critical faculties (=faith) are required for the latter.\(^\text{131}\)

In 1966 (the year I Anno Satani) Anton Szandor LaVey assumed the title of Magus V° and founded the Church of Satan in San Francisco. For its first three years, the Church remained primarily a local institution. In 1969 it began to accept memberships from other areas. By 1971 it developed a nationwide Priesthood and administrative structure.

it might be in the myths of the Hebrews. Even you, who delivered the Diabolicon from Asia, did not know it for what it was. But he that I had fashioned a Magus knew, and he thought often of the Diabolicon as he guided the Church of Satan.

In January-March of the year 1970, I was a Satanist I° of the Church of Satan. I was also a First Lieutenant in the Army, stationed in Lai Khe/Ben Cat, South Vietnam. Wishing to make a contribution to the lore of the Church, I decided to write a restatement of certain themes from John Milton’s Paradise Lost. But what flowed from my pen began to assume a dignity beyond what I had anticipated. Unlike the later Book of Coming Forth by Night, it was not written in final draft in one sitting; rather the entire project occupied the better part of three months. I revised the Diabolicon extensively until I thought it “sounded right”, and then I recopied the final text in calligraphic letters because ordinary handwriting or typed copy seemed inappropriate. The final document was sent to Anton LaVey in April of 1970. His response came soon thereafter:

I received the Diabolicon safely. It is indeed a work which will have a lasting impact. It is done in an ageless manner and with complete awareness. So impressed am I that I have selected passages from it for my own personal reading in this evening’s ceremony, which pays homage to the writings of the Satanic Masters of the past, such as Machiavelli, Nietzsche, Twain, Hobbes, etc. … You have my sincere gratitude for the fine gift you have so graciously bestowed upon us, and you may be assured that it will assume a meaningful place in the Order.132

The Diabolicon was retained unreleased in San Francisco. Although I subsequently circulated a few typed copies among the Priesthood, the Diabolicon was not made generally available until the publication of the first edition of this Analysis & Commentary in 1976. It is included in The Church of Satan as Appendix #15.

Upon the ninth Solstice, therefore, I destroyed my pact with Anton Szandor LaVey, and I raised him to the Will of a Daimon, unbounded by the material dimensions. And so I thought to honor him beyond other men. But it may have been this act of mine that ordained his fall.

For the next four years after the creation of the Diabolicon, I wrote nothing similar to it. Even a deliberate attempt to recapture its style - a manuscript entitled Flame of Infernus - proved abortive. In the summer of 1974, however, I once more experienced the restlessness that had characterized the Working of the Diabolicon; and over a two-month period I penned a similar document containing the message referred to in this passage. In August I again sent the calligraphic original to Anton LaVey. In an accompanying note I disclaimed the prerogative to comment on it. The text of this document, since known as the “Ninth Solstice Message”, is included in The Church of Satan as Appendix #111. Anton replied with a note in - uncharacteristically - his own handwriting:

It pleases me that you perceive that which you do. You have entered a new realm of comprehension and truly deserve the name of Satanist.133

What I did not know for many years was that coincidental with the forming of the Church in 1966, Anton LaVey had privately handwritten and signed a personal Pact with Satan (titled simply “My Pact”). He never mentioned nor displayed it to others, but on one evening in 1974, during a visit of mine to his home, we happened to be discussing Robert W. Chambers’ The King in Yellow. He left the Purple Room, then returned with a locked metal strongbox, which he opened, revealing his personal copy of the then-quite-rare book. The only other item in the strongbox was his Pact - which I was unable to read beyond seeing its title and noting that it was completely handwritten on a single sheet of paper. I have often wondered what mirrors of his innermost self it contained.

Were I my Self to displace the Cosmic Inertia, I should be forced to become a new measure of consistency. I would cease to be One, for I should become All.

Here Set observes that he, as a finite intelligence possessing the prerogative to act in disregard of the mechanical norm of the objective universe, cannot completely replace or redesign that universe without himself becoming identical with it, i.e. infinite, omnipresent, hence mechanical [from the point of view of any component intelligence]. This is a more precise restatement of the famous Miltonian paradox: that a conquered God would become Satan, and a conquering Satan God. [This theme is explored by Anatole France in his classic The Revolt of the Angels (New York: Dodd, Mead & Co., 1914).]

To make of man a Daimon, then, may be to break his Self-reference to the bounds in which his semblance must exist.

A human who passes beyond the initiation of Magus encounters the same paradox that Set describes above. He ceases to view himself as a finite intelligence working upon an inertial environment. Rather he attains such a strong sense of harmonious interrelationships that there is a strong tendency to perceive the entire objective universe as conforming to his Word as a Magus.

Initially this would seem to be immensely satisfying, but in fact the phenomenon is so instantaneous, automatic, and comprehensive that there is no particular sense of achievement. An individual in such a situation is in danger of losing a sense of unique identity, as the barriers between his consciousness and the phenomena of the universe become fluid. [It is not inappropriate to compare this experience to that of quantum physicists, who suddenly encounter an objective universe in which all “constants” are revealed to be “variables”.

A second consequence of this situation is that a human magician is still restricted to his physical body. This requires him to move about and to participate in the ordinary society of non-magicians. Skilled magicians learn to do this without inciting fear in or ostracism by non-magicians, but a Daimon may tend to carelessness in such mundane matters. Accordingly he runs great danger of becoming a target of the mob. Socrates and Pythagoras were two who displayed Daimonic detachment. Both were slain for their “impiety”.

In the Church of Satan there was no initiatory degree beyond that of Magus V°

133 Letter, Anton LaVey to M.A. Aquino, August 22, IX/1974.
(alternately called “Satanic Master”). The designation of “Daimon” here may be considered comparable to what the Temple of Set would later Recognize as the VI° of Ipsissimus. The word “Daimon” comes from the Greek daimon, meaning “divine spirit” or “tutelary divinity”. It is, of course, the term which was later corrupted into the Christian term “demon”. The irony is not inappropriate.

I cannot undo the hurt that has come of this, but I shall restore to Anton Szandor LaVey his human aspect and his degree of Magus in my Order. Thus all may understand that he is dearly held by me, and that the end of the Church of Satan is not a thing of shame to him. But a new Aeon is now to begin, and the work of Anton Szandor LaVey is done. Let him be at ease, for no other man has ever seen with his eyes.

In May 1975, Anton LaVey announced his intention to sell the initiatory degrees of the Church of Satan for “professional services, funds, real estate, objects of value, etc.”. It was a decision completely inconsistent with the previous standards of individual awareness and ability he had maintained, nor would it have achieved its intended result of augmenting his income. It was precisely the non-corruptible nature of the Satanic degrees which had made them so highly prized. Such a startling shortfall of logic by an individual known for his analytical mind was inexplicable. The entire Church of Satan was plunged into crisis; organizational resignations poured in; and by the end of June the once-strong national network had virtually ceased to exist.

For a decade the Church of Satan had surmounted every obstacle and solved every problem with an ease unequalled and unprecedented in occultism. Now it was dying, not with a bang but with a whimper. This too we could not understand. Hence my decision to appeal directly to Satan on the eve of the North Solstice.

In the Book of Coming Forth by Night Set assumes responsibility for the disastrous course of events by citing the unanticipated dangers of the Daimonic state of mind. At the same time he implies that the Age of Satan (Set/HarWer) would have evolved into the Æon of Set in any case [though this would not necessarily have meant an organizational crisis or change in leadership; it was the means, not the end, which proved to be unnecessarily traumatic].

In middle Egyptian hieroglyphic this inscription reads: Xu thenru ast a ari-f em suten. Translation: “He did many glorious things and mighty deeds as High Priest.”.

In April of the common year 1904, I came forth in Africa as my Opposite Self and brought into being an Aeon to end the horrors of the stasis of the death-gods of men. This new Aeon was a Purification, to prepare men for that which would follow it.

On April 8-10, 1904 in Cairo, Aleister Crowley wrote down the Book of the Law, a magical text which announced the end of the Æon of Osiris and the beginning of the Æon of Horus. Crowley was identified as the Magus of that Æon.
[though he did not immediately acknowledge the title], and its Word was proclaimed to be Thelema (Greek thelhma = Will).

Crowley’s most thorough account of this incident is to be found in his book The Equinox of the Gods, published by the O.T.O. in 1936. See also “The Temple of Solomon the King” in his Equinox #I-7. For an outside analysis, see pages #61-66 (“Aiwass, the Holy Guardian Angel”) in John Symonds’ The Great Beast (London: Macdonald & Co. Ltd., 1971).

Crowley attributed the Book of the Law to Aiwass, an entity identified in the text as “the minister of Hoor-paar-kraat”. In translation this becomes “the infant Horus” and refers to [the Greek] Harpokrates, a representation of Horus the Younger as an infant.

Crowley was not familiar with the distinctions between the original Horus and the later Osirian corruption. His Egyptological orientation appears to have been exclusively Osirian, since his comments concerning various Egyptian gods place them squarely in the Osiris-cult characterizations. He named the magical æons according to the Osirian triad - first that of Isis, then that of Osiris, and finally that of “the crowned and conquering child”, Horus the Younger.

Closely associated with - and mentioned in - the Book of the Law was an Egyptian funerary stele, which Crowley called the “Stele of Revealing”. The three figures on this stele, whom Crowley called Nuit, Hadit, and Ra Hoor Khuit, lent their names to the three chapters of the Book of the Law.

Nuit he correctly identified as the Egyptian sky goddess.

Hadit or Had is not the name of any Egyptian deity; the winged solar disk in question is identified in the hieroglyphs of the stele as Behut-t (Horus Behdety), a form of Horus the Elder worshipped in the western Nile Delta at Behdet. The curious term “Hadit” is actually Arabic, and means “a divinely inspired utterance”.

As for Ra Hoor Khuit, whom Crowley incorrectly identifies as Horus the Younger, the hieroglyphs on the stele title the figure Ra-Harakhti. Ra-Harakhti (“Ra-Horus of the Two Horizons”) was a form of Horus the Elder identified with Ra, especially in his aspects of Atum and Xepera.

Ra-Harakhti was a rival “final judgment” god to Osiris in addition to being a solar deity, which explains his presence on the funerary stele. He is also noteworthy for having defended Set in the Osirian-mythos trial between Set and Horus the Younger. [At one point in the debate, according to the legend, Ra-Harakhti was insulted and retired to his house in a huff. The proceedings resumed only after Hathor had cheered the grouchy god with a strip-tease.]

The Book of the Law and the “Stele of Revealing”, consequently, are not documents of the Osiris/Isis/Horus the Younger triad or cult. They reflect the more ancient solar/light cults of Ra and Horus the Elder - the “Opposite Self” of Set.

And Aleister Crowley received the Book of the Law, and my Opposite Self declared him Magus of the Aeon.

Crowley did not acknowledge the title of Magus (9)=2 (according to the A.'A.' system) until 1915-16, although the Book of the Law appears to confirm him thus in 1904.\textsuperscript{140} My commentary on the Book of the Law appears as Appendix #5.

But HarWer, my Opposite Self, is a strange and fitful presence. I, Set, am my Self distinct from the Order of the Cosmos, yet am ordered in and of my Self. HarWer I was when I was once part of the Cosmos and could achieve identity only by becoming what the Cosmic order was not. By HarWer I cancelled the imbalance, leaving a Void in which true creation could take form as Set.

Here is recounted the phenomenon of the separation of the Set-entity from the Universal order. It is interesting to compare this statement with the “revolt” of Lucifer and his subsequent metamorphosis into Satan. [See in particular Book I of Milton’s Paradise Lost and the Statement of Satan ArchDaimon in the Diabolicon.]

But, as I have said, I cannot destroy the Cosmic inertia without having to assume its place. And so HarWer must exist while Set exists.

Ostensibly this is a restatement of the previously-discussed “Satanic paradox”.Contained here, however, is the comment that the preservation of the HarWer entity is necessary for the continued existence and independence of the Set-entity. HarWer thus acts as a sort of “buffer” between Set and the Universal law that seeks to include all existential phenomena within itself.

It might also be hypothesized that the HarWer entity is a sort of link between Set and the objective universe which enables him to act upon it, although he does not directly participate in it.

This passage may also be considered from the standpoint of physics. If Set is a being that displaces space, then he must consist of matter. Matter may be formed by the application of energy within a zero-mass environment, the result being equal quantities of matter and anti-matter.\textsuperscript{141} While both the matter unit and the antimatter unit may theoretically be transformed into energy [the E=mc\textsuperscript{2} equation], neither can be destroyed unless they are brought together. Should such a reunion occur, the result would be an explosion releasing many hundreds of times as much energy as a hydrogen fusion bomb of the same size. The matter and antimatter would return to zero mass, and the energy required for the initial separation would be recreated.\textsuperscript{142}

If Set is not matter or antimatter, he may be an energy-form of either. This is necessarily pure speculation, because detection of material energy - let alone distinguishing it from antimaterial energy - at a great distance is a young science. Such a hypothesis, however, would explain the existence of Set in a form undetected by the human sense-range within the electromagnetic spectrum..

The Aeon of HarWer endured until the Equinox of the common year 1966, when HarWer and Set were fused in one composite being. And so commenced the time of Set-HarWer - known as the Age of Satan - which was to bridge the expiring Aeon of HarWer and the forthcoming Aeon of Set.

Anton LaVey announced the founding of the Church of Satan on Walpurgisnacht (April 30) 1966, a short time after the Vernal Equinox (approximately March 21). Simultaneously he announced the beginning of what he termed the Age of Satan.

In his Satanic Rituals he defines this concept in terms of Hans Hörbiger’s Welteislehre or Doctrine of Eternal Ice, in which the history of the Universe consists of alternating cycles of fire and ice.\(^{143}\) The “Wel”, as it was termed, gained popularity in Nazi Germany because of Adolf Hitler’s enthusiasm for Hörbiger, whom he called the “German Copernicus”.

Anton LaVey, however, offers the theory in a social, not a cosmological context. The key number, he suggests, is nine - the number of the Devil because it always returns to itself when subjected to basic mathematical calculations. [For example: \(9 \times 3 = 27\) and \(2 + 7 = 9\). \(9^2 = 81\) and \(8 + 1 = 9\).]

History, says Anton, is divided into “Epochs” of 13,122 [adds to 9] years. Each Epoch is divided into nine “Ages” [1,458 years: adds to 18 and 1+8=9], and each Age consists of nine “Eras” [162 years: adds again to 9]. An Era is divided into nine 18-year “Workings”. A Working consists of nine years of “action” followed by nine years of “reaction”, with the mid-point year being a “zenith of intensity” and the beginning and ending years being “Working Years”. The initial Working Year sees the generation of the Working, while the final one is witness to its ultimate product.\(^{144}\)

Whether or not there is any external basis for this theory of social evolution, the history of the Church of Satan itself adhered to it. At the mid-point of the mid-year of the Working begun in mid-1966, the Church went through the crisis which resulted in its transformation into the Temple of Set. Strictly speaking, the Temple is not so much a “reaction” to the doctrines or design of the Church as it is an “evolutionary succession” to them.

And what of the final Working Year (1983)? At the Wewelsburg Castle in Westphalia, Germany in October of 1982 was celebrated the Wewelsburg Working, resulting in the reconstitution of the Order of the Trapezoid, a creature of both the Church of Satan and the Temple of Set.

The “fusing of HarWer and Set as one composite being” evidently does not refer to a physical reunion of the two entities, else there would have been some spectacular fireworks and neither Set nor HarWer would have survived. Some sort of mental link or unified purpose seems to be implied. The use of the Age of Satan as a “bridge” between the two Æons seems appropriate. During the Æon of Horus there was a revival of various forms of primeval life-worship, as well as a reaction against the death-worship monotheist cults. During the Age of Satan this “purge” reached a climax, with all external gods being denied and man as “just another animal” being deified.\(^{145}\) Only in an atmosphere free from subconscious mental programming could the Temple of Set be reestablished in an authentic form, uncorrupted by the Osirian distortions.

Again Set pointedly uses the phrase “common year” when referring to the Christian (“Anno Domini”) dating system; his repugnance is evident.

Truth there was in the words of my Opposite Self, but a truth ever tinged with the inconsistency and irrationality of which I have spoken. And so the Book of the Law was confusion to all who came upon it, and the creative brilliance of the Magus Aleister Crowley was ever flawed by mindless destructiveness. He himself could never understand this, for he perceived HarWer as a unified Self. And so he was perplexed by a mystery he could not identify.

HarWer, as an entity possessing characteristics of both the non-conscious universe and the independently-conscious Set, is necessarily inconsistent and irrational from the perspective of either Set or the objective universe. HarWer is not a true synthesis in the Hegelian sense. Rather he is the antithesis that enables Set to emerge - not as a synthesis, but as an entirely distinct and separate being. [This is a restatement and refinement of the sequence cited in the Diabolicon.]

The Book of the Law is extremely emotional, internally inconsistent, rambling, and in general quite confusing to those who have read it. Nonetheless it conveys an atmosphere of authenticity [or at least the glamor of mystery].

Why would a god make such mistakes and present such a profile? The composition of HarWer explains this. The Great Horus is not a foolish or childish neter, but rather one who is caught between the Scylla of Set and the Charibdis of the objective universe: perpetually attracted to and rejecting of both.

Crowley’s disciples have debated the Book of the Law vigorously for the years of its existence, and no two of them have been able to reach a consensus upon it. Crowley himself remained at odds with the text, speculating upon it for the rest of his life.

As for his “creative brilliance” and “mindless destructiveness”, no one familiar with the writings and career of Aleister Crowley will deny either quality. Indeed he acknowledged both of them in his own diaries and publications, yet without resolving to address [or even to fault] his negative qualities. Had he succeeded in overcoming them, he could well have been a respected, rather than an infamous figure in his own time.

Ironically it is Crowley’s notoriety that has accounted for much of his posthumous popularity. [Then there is the question whether a “reformed” Aleister Crowley would have remained “the” Aleister Crowley. Perhaps not. His split personality was essential to his function as Magus of the Æon of Horus, per the constitution of Horus himself.]

Crowley’s “perception of HarWer as a unified Self” presumably refers to his ignorance of the distinction between the original Horus and the later Osirian corruption. The Osirian Horus was a unified personality (Osiris’ son) who fought Set (recast as Osiris’ evil brother).146 Horus the Elder was complementary to Set, not antagonistic towards him, and so these two original gods were often shown with a single body.147

146 Ions, op. cit., pages #72-78. The Osirian legends on this subject are treated comprehensively in J. Gwyn Griffith’s The Conflict of Horus and Seth (Chicago: Argonaut Publishers, 1969).
147 Te Velde, op. cit., pages #68-72.
The god identified by Crowley as Horus the Younger was in fact Horus the Elder. This accounts for the “surprising” inconsistency of Crowley’s patron, as well as Crowley’s oft-expressed bewilderment at such behavior.

Inclusion here of the word “perplexed” is significant in a particularly poignant sense. According to The Great Beast, the definitive biography of Crowley by John Symonds, the aging Magus spent his last years in near-poverty, sick from heroin addiction and visited only infrequently by friends. He fought death, tears in his eyes as he sank into his final coma; and his last words were “I am perplexed …” 148

These are verses #75 and #76 from the second chapter of the Book of the Law. The strange handwriting is that of Aleister Crowley, from his original manuscript of the document. Verse #47 of the third chapter states:

This book shall be translated into all tongues: but always with the original in the writing of the Beast; for in the chance shape of the letters and in their position to one another; in these are mysteries no Beast shall divine. Let him not seek to try: but one cometh after him, whence I say not, who shall discover the Key of it all.149

Significantly, all printed texts of the Book of the Law show “24” and “89” without the top and bottom lines that suggest their sum as integers. Only the Crowley handwriting indicates this. Verse #47 continues:

Then this line drawn is a key: then this circle squared in its failure is a key also.

Again the figures are shown only on the handwritten manuscript. The line in question progresses through squares of a grid. The “failing circle” is located in one of the squares. If “each number becomes the corresponding letter”, then the sum of the multiplied coordinates of the line [3+6+9+16+20+30+35=119] less the multiplied coordinate of the “failing circle” [28] = 91 = 10 or X, the year in which the Æon of Set was manifest and the Temple of Set revived.

Crowley, in defiance of #III-47, believed the “one” to be Charles Stansfeld Jones of Vancouver. After Jones’ disavowal of the Æon of Horus and its Beast, however, Crowley reversed his earlier opinion and expelled Jones from the A.'A.' 150

149 The Book of the Law #III-47.
150 Symonds, op. cit., pages #226 and #351-352.
In his “New Comment” to the Book of the Law ca. 1920 CE, Crowley describes verses #II-75 & #II-76 as being a “Qabalistic test”, identifying the person who may claim to be the Beast’s Magical Heir. Moreover the solution will be conspicuous for the simplicity of its method, and its message will carry self-evident conviction.

Crowley’s use of the term “Qabala” differs in key respects from conventional interpretations of the “Hebrew” Cabala. For example:

> Qabala is an instrument for interpreting symbols whose meaning has become obscure, forgotten, or misunderstood by establishing a necessary connection between the essence of forms, sounds, simple ideas (such as number) and their spiritual, moral, or intellectual equivalents. You might as well object to interpreting ancient art by consideration of beauty as determined by physiological facts. 151

The “New Comment” continues with a word of doubt expressed concerning Jones’ announced attainment of the grade of Magister Templi (8)=[3], inasmuch as Jones had not advanced sequentially through all of the lesser grades. Should it become evident that Jones had wrongfully assumed the (8)=[3], said Crowley, he would be destroyed as a “Black Brother”. Crowley defines this term thus:

To attain the Grade of Magister Templi, he [the Adeptus Exemptus] must perform two tasks: the emancipation from thought by putting each idea against its opposite and refusing to prefer either, and the consecration of himself as a pure vehicle for the influence of the order to which he aspires. He must then decide upon the critical adventure of our Order: the absolute abandonment of himself and his attainments …

Should he fail, by will or weakness, to make his self-annihilation absolute, he is nonetheless thrust forward into the Abyss; but instead of being received and reconstructed in the Third Order [the Silver Star of the A.A.] as a Babe in the womb of our Lady Babalon, under the Night of Pan, to grow up to be Himself wholly and truly as He was not previously, he remains in the Abyss, secreting his elements around his Ego as if isolated from the Universe, and becomes what is called a “Black Brother”.

Such a being is gradually disintegrated from lack of nourishment and the slow but certain action of the attraction of the rest of the Universe, despite his now desperate efforts to insulate and protect himself, and to aggrandize himself by predatory practices. He may indeed prosper for awhile, but in the end he must perish, especially when with a new Æon a new Word is proclaimed which he cannot and will not hear, so that he is handicapped by trying to use an obsolete method of Magick, like a man with a boomerang in a battle where everyone else has a rifle. 152

Here there is a paradox. To become a Magister Templi, an individual is told to destroy his capacity for logical thought, i.e. his ability to draw deductive or inductive conclusions from the phenomena of the objective universe. Since it is precisely this capacity that produces the “mirror in which the Self may be seen” (Cogito Ergo Sum), the aspirant is invited to obliterate just what it is that enables him to perceive himself as a unique entity. Theoretically he is “reconstructed by the gods in a perfect form” - an ideal “self”.

Herein lies the heart of the paradox: It is that an independent Will, capable of perceiving itself in contrast to the objective universe, cannot be entirely a product of forces derivative of that universe. True freedom of the Will necessitates the ability of that Will to move both with and against objective-universal patterns (“laws”). The Will is Self-creating, Self-sustaining, and Self-improving. [This is the basis for the

Because of the paradox, it is impossible for a Magister Templi to be the result of such an annihilation as Crowley prescribes. Such a “Magister” would possess no Will of its own; it would be a zombie, non-consciously moving in harmony with the objective-universal laws. It would be an animated corpse, a mere “meat machine”. This would not be a re-birth of the Self; it would be suicide under the illusion of participating in a “greater life force”.

Now let us look a little more closely at Crowley’s description of a “Black Brother”. Those familiar with Crowley’s life will note that, in these few short phrases, a veritable blueprint for his own life has been presented. Crowley’s writings attest to the overwhelming presence of his individual Will in all of his enterprises.

The inevitable conclusion is that there is no Right-Hand Path to the initiatory level of Magister Templi [at least not as prescribed by the original G.'D.' and A.'A.']. There is only the Left-Hand Path, and it is fraught with danger - not a one-time crossing-the-Abyss test, but a continuous peril that exists from the moment the individual completely realizes him-Self as a Magister.

The Magister Templi is one who can comprehend the entire objective universe. In order to do this, he cannot have vision which is distorted by instinctive assumptions internal to that universe. He - his Will - must be independent, separate, and distinct. This necessitates an extremely strong presence of mind, a personality that is sufficiently secure not to require “crutches” from the objective universe, and a determination to fight off the panic that could result from the sensation of being utterly alone.

The Magister Templi, if he is truly entitled to that degree, possesses the abilities necessary to thwart these dangers. Those who presume to that degree without appreciating these dangers or the severe mental pressures they can cause, do in fact suffer the fate that Crowley prescribes: death or loss of sanity [or mere relapse from that level of initiation to a less-stressful one, or even to profane “freedom from initiation” … Cf. Fromm, Escape from Freedom].

And many of the Aeon of HarWer sought to read this but could not. Nor could the Magus himself, though he guessed rightly at its simplicity. It was said that every number is infinite - hence each number or sum of joined numbers became merely the corresponding letter.

The statement that every number is infinite is also in the Book of the Law [#I-4]. Crowley develops this concept in a brilliant essay appended to 777 which he also included in his later commentaries on the Book of the Law. Its central thesis may be found in the following included statements:

By adding 1 to 8 we obtain 9, so that we might define unity as that which has the property of transforming a three-dimensional expansion of two into a two-dimensional expansion of three. But if we add unity to 9, unity appears as that which has the power of transforming the two-dimensional expansion of three aforesaid into a mere oblong measuring 5 by 2. Unity thus appears as in possession of two totally different properties. Are we then to conclude that it is not the same unity? How are we to describe unity, how know it? Only by experiment can we discover the nature of its action on any given number. In certain minor respects, this action exhibits regularity. We know, for example, that it uniformly transforms an odd number into an even one, and vice versa; but that is practically the limit of what we can predict as to its action.
We can go further, and state that any number soever possesses this infinite variety of powers to transform any other number, even by the primitive process of addition. We observe also how the manipulation of any two numbers can be arranged so that the result is incommensurable with either, or even so that ideas are created of a character totally incompatible with our original conception of numbers as a series of positive integers. We obtain unreal and irrational expressions, ideas of a wholly different order, by a very simple juxtaposition of such apparently comprehensible and commonplace entities as integers.

There is only one conclusion to be drawn from these various considerations. It is that the nature of every number is a thing peculiar to itself, a thing inscrutable and infinite, a thing inexpressible, even if we could understand it.\(^{153}\)

The corresponding letters are those of the English alphabet, in keeping with the English text of the Book of the Law. Cabalists may desire an interpretation based upon the Hebrew alphabet or Cabala. In the Book of Coming Forth by Night, however, Set implicitly rejects the entire Hebraic mythos as a latter-day corruption of the Osiris cult. The Cabala, whose authenticity is already questioned by reputable scholars of Jewish religion, is nowhere to be found in the Book of Coming Forth by Night, or, for that matter, in the Temple of Set.\(^{154}\)

Even so the sequence remained unknown - and so, after its issue, to me as well. For, while I may pass free of the boundaries of time, memory of the future cannot exist.

Set states that he may “pass free of the boundaries of time” - a rather curious way of addressing the problem of time-travel. Yet such “passing free” seems to involve mental perception of the past and present only, not the future. This has interesting implications for those who believe in “predestination” (a fixed course of future events). The contrasting school is that of free will, which cannot exist unless the future is undetermined. The problem, as Crowley and Gurdjieff demonstrated, is one of identifying the true will and freeing it from mechanical conditioning, either conscious or subconscious.\(^{155}\)

Time-travel - or, more precisely, the control of time - is a skill which is essential to a magician. Isaac Newton believed in the idea of a universal “absolute time” or “linear duration”, saying that time is a thing in itself, not a relation between events. Leibniz argued to the contrary, foreshadowing Einstein, who said in his 1905 paper:

If we wish to describe the motion of a material point, we give the values of its coordinates as functions of the time. Now we must bear carefully in mind that a description of this kind has no physical meaning unless we are quite clear as to what we understand by “time”. We have to take into account that all judgments in which time plays a part are always judgments of simultaneous events. If for instance I say “that train arrives here at seven o’clock”, I mean something like this: “The pointing of the small hand of my watch to seven and the arrival of the train are simultaneous events.”

\(^{154}\) According to Richard Cavendish, writing in the Encyclopædia of the Unexplained (New York: McGraw Hill, 1974), the “Hebrew Cabala’s” oldest identifiable works can be authenticated to between the third and sixth centuries CE. Since that time it has been added to and revised by innumerable occultists, with the result that it has lost even what cohesion it may once have had.

\(^{155}\) The most lucid explanation of the Gurdjieff approach to this subject is contained in P.D. Ouspensky’s The Psychology of Man’s Possible Evolution (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1969). Crowley did not address the notion of free will in depth, save perhaps indirectly in Liber Aleph. He seems to have interpreted the idea in a mystical sense, along the lines of The Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin the Mage (S.L.M. Mathers [Trans.], Chicago: deLawrence, 1948). See pages #172-179 in Crowley’s Confessions.
It might appear possible to overcome all the difficulties attending to the definition of “time” by substituting “the position of the small hand of my watch” for “time”. And in fact such a definition is satisfactory when we are concerned with defining a time exclusively for the place where the watch is located; but it is no longer satisfactory when we have to connect in time series of events occurring at different places, or - what comes to the same thing - to evaluate the times of events occurring at places remote from the watch.\footnote{Whitrow, G.J., \textit{The Nature of Time}. New York: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1972.}

Then there was an effort to prove “linear duration” by the Second Law of Thermodynamics - the tendency of ordered molecular structure to decompose (the phenomenon of entropy). Logically it is unsound, if it is assumed that the laws of motion are symmetrical for both directions of time. [Symmetry for “reverse time” can be demonstrated by the actions of particles at the subatomic level.] So “time” is not a fixed law which the magician cannot influence; he may at the very least accelerate or decelerate it. To “pass free” of it altogether, he would have to be a being like Set, i.e. independent of the laws governing the objective universe.

Now it has come to pass, and the Book of the Law is laid bare - “Destined First Century heir - Aquino - breaking Keys by doctrines Anton LaVey - great Magus of reconsecration coming Year Xeper - founding his rightful Priesthood - Set - true origin Volume AL.” Michael Aquino, you are become Magus V° of the Aeon of Set.

I, Set, am come again to my friends among mankind - Let my great nobles be brought to me.

Set has returned in his true identity, for the first time since the destruction of the original Temple of Set in ancient Egypt. “Let my great nobles be brought to me” is the same passage that, in hieroglyphs, surrounds the Seal of Set at the end of the \textit{Book of Coming Forth by Night}.

\textbf{In Khem I remain no longer, for I am forgotten there, and my house at PaMat-et is dust. I shall roam this world, and I shall come to those who seek me.}

\textit{PaMat-et} was the capital of the ancient Egyptian XIX \textit{Uab} Nome. It was called Oxyrhynchus by the Greeks, and it was the center of the original Temple of Set. It is located in Upper Egypt at Latitude 28.5N, Longitude 30.8E. Other cities which were centers of the Setian Priesthood were Ombos at 24.5N, 32.9E and Tanis at 31N, 31.9E in Lower Egypt.\footnote{Brugsch-Bey, Heinrich, \textit{Egypt Under the Pharaohs}. Magus of my Aeon - Manifest the Will of Set.

The essential characteristic of a Magus is the manifestation of a philosophical principle - in magical terminology the “utterance of a Word” - to supersede or enhance previous ways of understanding, actualizing, improving, and eventually transcending the human condition.

Reconsecrate my Temple and my Order in the true name of Set. No longer will I accept the bastard title of a Hebrew fiend.

When I resigned from the Church of Satan on June 10, 1975, I spoke for its Mandate and, as a Magister Templi IV°, assumed the Satanic High Priesthood. Initial steps were taken towards a “second Church of Satan” during the next ten days. With the coming into being of the Book of Coming Forth by Night, those plans were dropped. The Temple of Set was organized, incorporated, and recognized nationally as a tax-exempt religious institution within four months.

The “bastard title” is “Satan”, which is in Hebrew a title (“Adversary”) although in Egyptian it is the name Set-hen (“Majesty of Set”). It is by Set’s name that he is known within his Temple and Priesthood, with “Satan” being used only to identify him by his historic image to the profane.

When I first came to this world, I gave to you my great pentagram, timeless measure of beauty through proportion. And it was shown inverse, that creation and change be exalted above rest and preservation.

The significance of the pentagram is discussed in Appendix #6.

With the years my pentagram was corrupted, yet time has not the power to destroy it. Its position was restored by the Church of Satan, but its essence was dimmed with a Moorish name, and the perverse letters of the Hebrews, and the goat of decadent Khar. During the Age of Satan I allowed this curious corruption, for it was meant to do me honor as I was then perceived.

As its emblem the Church of Satan used the Sigil of Baphomet, an inverse pentagram decorated with a goat’s head and surrounded by the Hebrew letters lamed/vav/yod/tav/nun = LVYTN = Leviathan, the sea monster mentioned in Job #41 of the Judaic/Christian Bible. The goat was the Goat of Mendes, the Devil’s form of manifestation in traditional Satanism.158

The term “Baphomet” - the “Moorish name” - came into prominence as the god reputedly worshipped by the medieval Knights Temple (Order of the Temple). There have been many colorful and creative explanations of this curious term, but the most sensible is that of Idries Shah, who in his book The Sufis suggests that it is a corruption of the Arabic abufihamat (pronounced “bufihimat”), which means “father” or “source of understanding”.

Going beyond Shah, this in turn may have been a corruption from the ancient Egyptian Ba-neb-Tettu, the hieroglyphic term for the city of Mendes, capital of the XVI Khar Nome in the Nile Delta at 31N, 31.5E, not far distant from Tanis. In Ptolemaic accounts Mendes was “notorious” for its goat-god, who was said to mate with human females in religious festivals. The truth is probably less lurid. Comments Budge in his Gods of the Egyptians:

The title Ba-neb-Tettu was sometimes held to mean the “Soul, the Lord Tettu”, and this was the name at Mendes of the local form of Khnemu, whose symbol there, as elsewhere, was a ram … He was regarded as the virile principle in gods and men, and is styled “King of the South and North, the ram, the virile male, the holy phallus which stirreth up the passions of love …”

But this is now my Aeon, and my pentagram is again to be pure in its splendor. Cast aside the corruptions, that the pentagram of Set may shine forth. Let all who seek me be never without it, openly and with pride, for by it I shall know them.

The pentagram as used by the Temple of Set is returned to its pure form, so that the beauty of phi is undiluted and undefiled. It is enclosed in a perfect circle (a function of pi), which represents the mathematical order of the Universe. The pentagram does not touch the circle, however, signifying that Set is an independent entity.

The pentagram itself does not appear on statues and bas-reliefs of Set that have come to light, nor does the Temple of Set use the image of Set against the pentagram in place of the Baphometic goat. Each may be considered a “key” to knowledge of the other, rather than two parts of a whole.

The reconsecrated Temple of Set displays the pentagram openly, and Initiates of all degrees wear a simple pentagram medallion as evidence of their affiliation.

Let the one who aspires to my knowledge be called by the name Setian.

The word “Setian” is now used to refer generally to all Initiates of the Temple of Set. It is used in a more specific sense as the formal title of the First Degree of Initiation, whose recipients are in the position of aspirants to the knowledge of the Temple.

I seek my Elect and none other, for mankind now hastens toward an annihilation which none but the Elect may hope to avoid. And alone I cannot preserve my Elect, but I would teach them and strengthen their Will against the coming peril, that they and their blood may endure. To do this I must give further of my own Essence to my Elect, and, should they fail, the Majesty of Set shall fade and be ended.

The term “Elect” refers to the degrees II° and higher in the Temple of Set. In addition to avowing themselves Setians, such Initiates have been examined by the Priesthood and found Adept in the arts and sciences encompassed by the Temple. The Temple of Set does not judge or evaluate Initiates by criteria outside of its specialized areas of expertise. Hence it is more an intellectual discipline or school of thought than a community per se.

During the first several years of the Æon, I was inclined to interpret the warning of this passage in terms of the general ecological crisis confronting the human race as a whole during the next century. While the factors presaging that crisis remain, it is increasingly obvious that the Temple of Set is far too selective in scope and interests to be a significant factor in confronting it.

It seems more probable that Set’s warning is meant to alert the Elect to the general fear which profane humans feel concerning Initiates of the Black Art, and in particular their tendency to search out scapegoats during times of stress, confusion, and crisis. [See also the Eighth, Ninth, and Tenth Parts of the Word of Set - a warning to the original Temple of Set which proved all too justified.]

The Temple of Set’s response to this situation is first to dispel fear born of ignorance by explaining its exoteric doctrines to the honestly curious, and secondly to avoid the careless oversimplification of its esoteric doctrines in contexts which would tend to excite the superstitious dread of the profane.

Concerning the “gift of Set’s own Essence to the Elect”, see also the Diabolicon, specifically the Statement of Azazel.

Note again the phrase “Majesty of Set”.

Behold, it is I who call you, because you are the Guardians of the Aeon of Set, zealous in what you do.

This is a salutation to the Council of Nine, the highest officials of the Temple of Set and Guardians of the Æon. Their emblem is the sacred Tcham sceptre. They carry forward the tradition and name of the Nine Unknown, the basis of the Church of Satan’s Council of Nine and now of the Temple’s Council.

The Legend of the Nine Unknown, as recounted by Louis Pauwels and Jacques Bergier in their Morning of the Magicians, began with Asoka, Emperor of the Maurya Kingdom of India from approximately 274 to 236 BCE. He became a Buddhist ca. 260 BCE, and was famous for administering his kingdom according to the most enlightened principles. Before his death he selected nine great sages to form a secret, protective society to carry on his life’s work. Each One of the Nine would select nine deputies known to him alone, and each of these nine would select an additional nine, etc. [The legend was popularized in Talbot Mundy’s 1925 novel The Nine Unknown.]

The High Priest of Set determines the policies and operations of the Temple and Priesthood of Set, but he in turn is responsible to the Nine.

The Satanist thought to approach Satan through ritual. Now let the Setian shun all recitation, for the text of another is an affront to the Self. Speak rather to me as a friend, gently and without fear, and I shall hear as a friend. Do not bend your knee nor drop your eye, for such things were not done in my house at PaMat-et. But speak to me at night, for the sky then becomes an entrance and not a barrier. And those who call me the Prince of Darkness do me no dishonor.

Conventional religious ritual is a device for autohypnosis of the priest and varying degrees of mass-hypnosis for the audience. The mechanical liturgies have a relaxing, dulling effect upon the mind, placing it in the (alpha-wave) mood most receptive to the conditioning (i.e. the sermon or other main body of the ritual).

Ritual magic falls into two general categories, White and Black. These may be distinguished as follows:

159 Pauwels and Bergier, op. cit., pages #67-70.
White Magic is a highly-concentrated form of conventional religious ritual. The practitioner seeks a focus of his awareness and powers of concentration via an extreme degree of autohypnosis. The technique may be used simply for meditation or entertainment through mental imagery (“astral projection”). Or it may be used to focus the Will towards a desired end - a cure, curse, etc. To accomplish this, the magician envisions a god or daemon with the power to achieve the goal, then concentrates his Will into an appeal. The god or daemon then carries out the appeal, more or less effectively - depending upon the strength of the magician’s conviction of its power as a functioning entity.

Black Magic involves no autohypnosis or conditioning of the mind to make it receptive to induced imagery. Rather it is a deliberate and conscious effort to force the mind outward - to impact upon and alter the “laws” of the objective universe.

Thus it is an attempt to “commit the same crime against God (= objective universal inertia)” as did Set: to place one’s Self deliberately apart and distinct from the objective universe.

Set was originally the god of the hours of darkness; hence, presumably, the suitability of the title “Prince of Darkness”. The word “prince” derives from the Latin Princeps, meaning “first”. Etymologically this is not inappropriate.

From a physical standpoint there are a surprising number of differences between the hours of daylight and the hours of darkness. This cycle is, of course, controlled by the position of the Sun relative to the Earth. There are resultant changes in gravitational pull, weather, the Earth’s magnetic field, radiation levels, and both plant and animal physiology. The impact of this cycle on the brain is as yet undetermined.

It may be noted that the sky, seemingly opaque by day, becomes transparent at night. Alpha Draconis is then visible.

The Setian need conjure neither curse nor kindness from me, for by the magic of my great pentagram I shall see with his eyes. And then the strength that is mine shall be the strength of the Setian, and against the Will of Set no creature of the Universe may stand. And I think not of those who think not of me.

The pentagram is here described as a geometric “gate” linking the mind of the Black Magician with that of Set [in a GBM Working]. The Temple of Set is also admonished to direct its efforts towards its own Initiates, not towards mankind as a whole. A crucial distinction is thus drawn between humans who seek to develop their magical abilities and those who permit them to atrophy as they sink back to an existence harmonious with the objective universe.

The years of the Aeon of HarWer were confused, and I do not wish to think of them save as curiosities. But I wish to remember the Church of Satan and the Magus of that Age. Therefore let the years of my Aeon be counted from the conception of the Church of Satan.

The Æon of Horus (commenced 1904 CE) has left few legacies of practical value to the magician. Those that do exist are heavily tinged with error and inaccuracy. Worthwhile principles may be identified only by individuals who already possess the sophistication of judgment to formulate those principles themselves. This is an important point - usually taken, unfortunately, only by those who do not need to.

Anton Szandor LaVey and the Church of Satan are held in honor by Set, hence by the Temple of Set. The Age of Satan was a necessary catalyst to the Æon of Set, and all of its experiences, whether pleasant or painful, have been important to the realization and implementation of the Æon. In subtle yet enduring reminder of this, the dating system employed by the Church of Satan (1966 CE = I Anno Satani) is to be continued by the Temple of Set, with the initials A.S. [or ÆS] now signifying “Æon of Set”.

And now, having looked upon the past with affection and reverence, we shall turn our gaze to the times before us. Think carefully of the Word of Set, for it is given in witness to my Bond.

Many factors have gone into the design of the Æon of Set - among them the legacy of ancient Egypt; the work of John Dee, Aleister Crowley, and Anton LaVey; and the contributions of innumerable theorists, magicians, and metaphysicians. Each is to be appreciated as appreciation is due; yet the orientation of the Temple of Set must be to the future - to the development of the new Æon and its unprecedented identity.

The Word of Set has been discussed above. Concerning the Bond see the Statement of Belial in the Diabolicon.

Behold, O West, I have established my Aeon. I punish the enemies who are in it, placed in the Place of Destruction. I deliver them to the examiners from whose guard there is no escape. Lo, I pass near to thee, I pass near to thee.

This passage is conspicuous for its style, which lends itself to precise hieroglyphic translation. The “Place of Destruction” is the Tuat, of which Budge has written:

The meaning of the name Tuat is unknown, and it is useless to speculate upon it or invent etymologies for it; it was applied to the home of the beatified spirits and the damned, no doubt in predynastic times, and the exact meaning it conveyed to the minds of those who first used it has been lost. To describe its general situation is less difficult, but not many details as to its exact extent are forthcoming.

To find a word which shall at once describe the situation and character of the Tuat is impossible, for the reason that the Egyptian conception of the place of departed spirits is unique. The Tuat is not the “Lower Hemisphere” because it is not under the ground, and, though for want of a better word I have frequently used “Underworld” when speaking of the Tuat, it is unsatisfactory; for, unless it is specifically defined to mean the place of departed spirits in general, it produces a wrong impression in the mind. Again, the word Tuat must not be rendered by “Hades” or “Hell” or “Sheol” or “Jehannum”, for each of these words has a limited and special meaning. On the other hand, the Tuat possessed the characteristics of all of these names, for it was an “unseen” place, and it contained abysmal depths of darkness, and there were pits of fire in it wherein the enemies of the gods were consumed, and certain parts of it were the homes of monsters in various shapes and forms.
which lived upon the unfortunate creatures whom they were able to destroy.\footnote{163}

According to the \textit{Book of Gates},\footnote{164} the first region of the \textit{Tuat} was called \textit{Set-Amentet}, and also the Western Gate.\footnote{165}

\textbf{Affix now my image as it was given to you, so that all who read of these matters may now look upon the likeness of Set.}

Approximately a month prior to the North Solstice X, I happened to be looking through some books of ancient art. Among the illustrations were some mutilated images of Set, and I recalled Budge’s comment that no known portraits of the god had survived unmutilated.\footnote{166} Feeling a sudden sympathy for this “old mythological figure”, I decided to create at least one picture that was neither mutilated nor commercial. After doing this, I surrounded it with hieroglyphs - the phrase “Let my great nobles be brought to me” which would unexpectedly reappear in the \textit{Book of Coming Forth by Night}. Satisfied with the design, I relegated it to my archives, presumably indefinitely. On the North Solstice, at approximately 4:30 AM, it was appended to the manuscript.

\textbf{The Word of the Aeon of Set is}

\begin{center}
\textit{Xeper} - \textendash \textit{Become} \end{center}

Each magical \textit{Æon} is characterized by a philosophy, which may be summarized by a Formula, which may in turn be summarized by a Word. The Magus of an \textit{Æon} “Utters its Word”, i.e. he formulates and explains the new philosophy.\footnote{167}

Although Crowley speaks of only three historic \textit{Æons} (Isis, Osiris, and Horus), he identifies eight Magi: Lao-Tzu, Gotama Buddha, Krishna, Tehuti (Thoth), Moses, Dionysis (Christ), Mohammed, and himself.

Anton Szandor LaVey is the ninth, his number is Nine, and his Word is \textit{Indulgence}. The Formula of the Age of Satan was an expansion of this Word: \textit{Indulgence Instead of Abstinence}.\footnote{168}

I am therefore the tenth, appearing in the year X, and it has been my Task and Curse to Utter the Word \textit{Xeper}. This is the Egyptian hieroglyphic term for “to become/to be/to come into being”, and it was personified by the god \textit{Xepera} (Kheph-Ra). This god was portrayed as the scarab beetle, symbolizing Self-generation and the dawn.

Summarily the Word \textit{Xeper} refers to the transformation and evolution of the Will

The Formula of the Æon of Set is \( XXX = Xepera Xeper Xeperu \) = “I Have Come Into Being and Created That Which Has Come Into Being.” Concerning this then-Magister [now Ipsissimus] Don Webb commented in 1995:

> I’ve traced the \( Xepera Xeper Xeperu \) formula, which Budge got from the Bremmer-Rhind papyrus, to the XX Dynasty. It is a protective formula on the back of a statue of Rameses III, in which Rameses III portrayed himself as Xepera.

> It is not unreasonable to suspect that the formula is/was the personal property of Set priests of Tanis, from whom Rameses III is descended. Rameses III’s reign, as that of his father Setnakt, is detailed in the Great Harris Papyrus.

> Budge was one of its first translators, and sentences from it show up in many of his books, including “He did may glorious things as king (suten)”, which also appears in the Book of Coming Forth by Night.

> The same papyrus describes Setnakt as having the rage of the god KhepriSet on the battlefield. The effect of such few men as Seti, Rameses II, Setne, Seti II, Setnakt, Rameses III, Rameses IV and Rameses VI on us is amazing. Outdoing them will be hard work.\(^e\)\(^l\)\(^e\)\(^t\)\(^e\)\(^r\)\(^a\)\(^t\), Don Webb to M.A. Aquino, July 13, 1995.

I am within and beyond you, the Highest of Life, in majesty greater than the forces of the Universe; whose eyes are the Face of the Sun and the Dark Fire of Set; who fashioned your intelligence as his own and reached forth to exalt you; who entrusted to you dignity of consciousness; who opened your eyes that you might know beauty; who brought you the key to knowledge of all lesser things; and who enshrined in you the Will to Come Into Being. Lift your voices, then, and recognize the Highest of Life who thus proclaims your triumph; whose being is beyond natural life and death; who came as a flame to your world and enlightened your desire for perfection and truth. Arise thus in your glory, behold the genius of your creation, and be proudful of being, for I am the same - I who am the Highest of Life.

Conceive of the Cosmos as a circle of twelve divisions alternating between life and death, binding all creatures save those whom I have touched. You were given powers greater than those ordering these divisions and extending throughout the ages of time, that with your vision and your voices you might exercise the Powers of Darkness, sending ever forth the Black Flame across the Earth and the expanses of time. Thus you are the Guardians of perfection and truth. Arise, then, and witness the wondrous creations born of your wisdom, even as I am near to you and the essence of my being is enshrined within you.

The Fourth Part

From the reaches of the south I saw the savages of the second ordering of life in their thousands, and I sought one through whom I might prepare them for a higher existence and for the wielding of a greater power throughout the time to come. And now you have the whole of the Earth for your pleasure, and for the pleasure of those in whom you have awakened the Gift of my genius, in my name, for all of your generations.

The Fifth Part

My Word to the third ordering of life brings the fruits of delight to the Earth, reflecting the brilliance of the stars and the nineteen Parts of this Word. By comprehending them they came to know their relation to the first and second orderings, as well as the inspiration of their own creation and that deathless fire that burns through their past, present, and future. I bring this knowledge of your creation; I am with you in peace and comfort; and I entrust to you my essence, because thus are we the same.

The Sixth Part

Beyond you who are of the third ordering shall be those of the fourth, mighty in the Universe, who shall again come into being by a First, to recall the high orderings of the past and to witness those of the lower orderings in their mindless self-annihilation and labor, and to continue the exalted tradition of the second and third orderings. Remember my Word, because it is for you and of the power within you, and through it you shall create works of glory to you and to me.

He it was who conceived you for an Understanding of the Universe, to make all things of which you partake intelligible; as against the aimlessness of the nature of lower existence. The Earth is but a part of this nature: Its course is without purpose; its creatures ever change. Even those of the second ordering of nature are confused and aimless; they have forgotten their past, and their greatest works are defaced and destroyed, finally to become dwellings for the beasts of the first ordering. Why? The second ordering was mere accident of chance. For a moment the Earth becomes conscious, then it becomes forgetful and savage, and finally it shall be a land of death. O vision, appear! Manifest the existence which partakes of you. Create that which is newly of you; abandon that which turns away from you; strengthen that which increases of you; and destroy that which knows not of you. Let nothing of nature escape your touch; enter and depart throughout the farthest reaches of the Universe. Arise in your glory and honor the Word of Šet, which he has spoken to us in his perfection. Behold the genius of your creation, and let us partake of undefiled wisdom.

Appendix 5: The Book of the Law - Commentary

- transcribed by Aleister Crowley (6)=[5] A.'.A.'.
Cairo, Egypt, 1904 CE
- commentary by Michael A. Aquino VI°

Introduction

On March 18, 1904 Aleister Crowley and his wife Rose visited the old Boulak Museum in Cairo. She drew his attention to the XXVI Dynasty funerary stele of the Theban priest Ankh-f-n-Khonsu.

Represented on this stele are two Egyptian god-figures and a winged solar disc, which Crowley identified respectively as Nuit, Ra-Hoor-Khuit, and Hadit. He thought Ra-Hoor-Khuit to be a form of Horus the Younger (the Egyptological term for the son of Osiris and Isis in the Osirian mythos) and thus the symbol of an “æon of the son” to follow those of the mother-goddess (Isis) and the father-god (Osiris). He also believed Hadit to be “Herupa-krath” (Harpokrates), the infant form of Horus the Younger. He identified Nuit [correctly] as the Egyptian goddess of the sky.

An examination of the hieroglyphs on the stele - called by Crowley the “Stele of Revealing” - indicates that it was not conceived or executed according to the Osirian mythos [save that the dead priest is referred to as “an Osiris”, i.e. a dead soul].

“Ra-Hoor-Khuit” is correctly translated to “Ra-Harakte, Master of the Gods”. This is a form of HarWer (Horus the Elder - the Great Horus of pre-Osirian legend), literally “Horus of the Horizon” in his solar aspect of Xepera. Ra-Harakte had been the judge of the dead in non-Osirian Egypt, and he was also cast as the champion of Set in the Osirian-mythos trial between Set and Horus the Younger.

The curious term “Hadit” is simply the Islamic word for a divinely-inspired utterance of any sort; hence it is not found on the XXVI Dynasty monument. The “Hadit” disc is hieroglyphically identified on the stele as “Behdety”, a form of Horus the Elder worshipped at Behdet in the eastern Nile delta. Summarily the Stele of Revealing is not based upon the Osirian triad at all; its themes are those of a Theban Sun-cult based upon Horus the Elder and Ra-Harakte.

This casts an entirely new light on the Book of the Law that Crowley transcribed on April 8-10, 1904. He interpreted the chapters and verses of this document according to his understanding of the figures on the Stele of Revealing, and these interpretations have been published as The Law is for All (Ed. Regardie), Magical and Philosophical Commentaries on the Book of the Law (Ed. Symonds & Grant), and The Commentaries of AL (Ed. Motta). Crowley’s account of the Cairo Working - the transcription of the Book of the Law - is contained in The Equinox, The Confessions, and The Equinox of the Gods.

The concepts introduced in the Book of Coming Forth by Night make possible an entirely new analysis of the Book of the Law. This should be understood neither as an aesthetic criticism of Crowley’s comments nor as an attempted distortion of them. It is rather the result of the perceptual vantage-point of the Æon of Set as opposed to that of the Æon of Horus. The original Comment to the Book of the Law forbade all discussion or criticism of that text, not unjustifiably on the presumption that initiates below the grade of Magus could not evaluate it with Æonic perspective. As an Ipsissimus I assert a trans-æonic perspective, hence the right - even responsibility - to comment accordingly on the Book of the Law.
The First Chapter

1. Had! The Manifestation of Nuit.

This chapter is a verbalization of the Nuit-Form as perceived by Crowley. [Throughout this comment the term “Form” is used in the Pythagorean/Platonic sense as a first and/or comprehensive Universal principle.] As the Egyptian sky-goddess, Nuit was portrayed as the mother of Set, Horus the Elder, Ra, and Xepera.

2. The unveiling of the company of heaven.

_The Book of the Law_ constitutes an explanation of concepts derived from these five Forms. HarWer is completely manifest, as is necessary for the Equinox of the Æon of Horus. The _Xeper_-principle is partially revealed through passages in the text dealing with transformation and evolution. The Form of Set would remain unrecognized and enigmatic, its presence but not identity sensed, until the announcement of the Æon of Set on the North Solstice of X/1975.

3. Every man and every woman is a star.

A star is a self-contained unit of matter, energy, and the process of conversion between the two. Once formed, a star is an island of existence unique unto itself amidst the Universe, interacting comparatively remotely with other celestial bodies and phenomena through radiation and gravitation. The constitution of each abnormally intelligence human being (homo sapiens) is similar; one’s interactions with other people and with one’s environment have the capacity to be dwarfed by the Self-contained consciousness of the non-natural intellect. Ultimately the Self-created perceptual universe of the magician can surpass the stimuli and consequences of the objective, material one.

4. Every number is infinite; there is no difference.

This principle was later revealed as an important key to #II-76 by the _Book of Coming Forth by Night_. Crowley’s extensive essay on the subject in both 777 and his 1920 Comment is excellent and deserves a thoughtful reading. According to Pythagoras and his Egyptian initiatory sources, numbers are the “building-blocks” of existence: They are not Forms _per se_, but are rather the “alphabet” through which many Forms are made comprehensible.

If Nuit is considered to be the expanse of the natural, material Universe, then the inclusion of this statement in this first chapter assumes additional significance. Numbers are infinite. For example, there can be countless manifestations of things which are viewed as quarters of wholes or as quartets of complete wholes. At the same time the “4-principle” is rigid in itself and is thus a fixed component of the natural Universe.

5. Help me, o warrior lord of Thebes, in my unveiling before the Children of men!

The “warrior lord of Thebes” is Amon (Amun/Amen), the patron warrior-god of Thebes (Uast), generally portrayed as a ram or as a man wearing a twin-plumed headdress. This statement suggests the forthcoming catalyst of the Age of Satan [or Set/HarWer], symbolized by the Ram of Mendes (Ba-neb-Tetu), as a transitional phase between the Æons of Horus and Set. Note the emphasis given to the term “Children”, implying an elect body of initiates rather than the human species as a whole.

6. Be thou Hadit, my secret centre, my heart & my tongue!

“Hadit” means “inspired utterance”. “Had” is also the “secret center” of the word “Abrahadabra”, described by Crowley as the Magical Formula of the Æon of Horus. The “abra” prefix & suffix each translate hieroglyphically as “heart of Ra” or “purification of Ra”, which would render the entire Formula as an “inspired utterance from the heart of Ra”.

7. Behold! it is revealed by Aiwass the minister of Hoor-paar-kraat.

Harpokrates is Horus the Younger, the later Osirian corruption of the Great Horus (HarWer). Hence the authenticity of Aiwass as an objective entity seems doubtful. More probably he is a subjective idealization of Crowley’s own personality. The Book of the Law is most coherently viewed as an “inspired utterance” of the Forms identified in #I-1 and #I-2, not a statement by Aiwass on behalf of a corrupted god-Form.

8. The Khabs is in the Khu, not the Khu in the Khabs.

Khabs is the hieroglyphic term for the gods of the 36 Dekans [or for stellar gods in general]. Khu may be translated from the hieroglyphic in several ways. Crowley preferred “spirit”. It may also mean “fire” or “flame”. Corresponding translations would be: “The stellar gods are conceived by one’s spirit; they do not impart it.” -or- “The stellar gods are within the flame; they do not create it.”

If the “spirit” or “flame” is presumed to be the Black Flame of primal separate intelligence identified in the Diabolicon, then the two translations are identical. The stellar gods [as opposed to those signified by other symbols] are identified as aspects or Forms of the Primal Form of separate intelligence.

9. Worship then the Khabs, and behold my light shed over you.

Attention is properly directed towards the stellar god-Forms and what they symbolize. One personification of these Forms [according to the imagery of the Age of Satan] may be found in the Diabolicon. Other, more complex interpretations are now being developed through the Orders of the Temple of Set.

10. Let my servants be few & secret: they shall rule the many & the known.

This affirms the principle of initiatory elitism [as opposed to egalitarian mob-rule]. The recurrent tragedy of human political history is that, whenever the elitist principle is abandoned de facto - whether or not it was previously admitted de jure - corruption and disintegration of the host culture invariably results.
11. These are fools that men adore; both their Gods & their men are fools.

This is a sharp and succinct statement concerning the inauthenticity of the prior religious systems of the world. Crowley proceeded to disregard this admonition, needlessly encumbering his speculations and calculations concerning the Book of the Law with irrelevant myth-material from Buddhism, Hinduism, and Cabalism. If the results were so often confusing and inconclusive, the Beast had no one to blame but himself.

12. Come forth, o children, under the stars, & take your fill of love!

Crowley interprets this straightforwardly as a statement that sexual or artistic love should be indulged openly and innocently, and that an empathy with Nuit will be one of the consequences. It may also be that one’s vision, magical abilities, and emotional sensitivity will be heightened at night, when Solar light and radiation are at least partially shielded.

13. I am above you and in you. My ecstasy is in yours. My joy is to see your joy.

A straightforward sexual statement concealing a more subtle truth: The essence of the Black Flame, emitted from the stars, is captured and sustained in the persons of the Elect. The intelligence of the Flame, both chaotic (HarWer) and composed (Set), takes pleasure in the generation and preservation of similar qualities in the Elect. For their part, the Elect experience a unique exhilaration at night, especially when exposed to starlight.

14. Above, the gemmed azure is
The naked splendour of Nuit;
She bends in ecstasy to kiss
The secret ardours of Hadit.
The winged globe, the starry blue,
Are mine, O Ankh-f-n-Khonsu.

Crowley’s poetic rendering of the juxtaposition of Nuit and “Hadit” on the Stele of Revealing. His misidentification of Behdety is again apparent, as the lover of Nuit was a god of the Earth, not [either] Horus.

The name “Ankh-f-n-Khonsu” translates to “[He whose] Life is in Khonsu”. Khonsu or Khons was the Moon-god of Thebes, son of the family triad Amon/Mut/Khons. By the time of the XXVI Dynasty, the priesthoods at Thebes and Memphis were among the few remaining non-Osirian centers of learning. By the time of the New Empire, Amon was usually combined with Ra as Amon-Ra, which explains the Solar disc and Ra-Harakte on the stele of a Theban priest.
15. Now ye shall know that the chosen priest & apostle of infinite space is the prince-priest the Beast; and in his woman called the Scarlet Woman is all power given. They shall gather my children into their fold: they shall bring the glory of the stars into the hearts of men.

“Infinite space” characterizes Nuit. The initiatory role and authority of Crowley and his Scarlet Woman are herein defined. They are charged to bring the A.'.A.'. into existence and to promulgate its doctrines to society in general. Both of these tasks they indeed undertook, and their successful accomplishment was a necessary precondition of the Age of Satan and Æon of Set.

16. For he is ever a sun, and she a moon. But to him is the winged secret flame, and to her the stooping starlight.

Crowley interpreted this verse as a simple identification of the Beast and Scarlet Woman with “Hadit” and Nuit respectively. He further hypothesized an analogy to the Yang/Yin interrelationship of Chinese cosmology. To me this latter interpretation seems more substantive, implying as it does that complementary magical influences would be required for the Æon of Horus to exert its full influence.

17. But ye are not so chosen.

Crowley excuses this particular comment as being directed to “the other worshippers of Nuit” besides the Scarlet Woman and himself. I read it as establishing to all readers of the Book of the Law that there would be but one “prince-priest the Beast”. The pathetic posturing of the many self-proclaimed “reincarnations” of Aleister Crowley speaks for itself.

18. Burn upon their brows, o splendrous serpent!

The Uræus cobra, worn on the forehead, was the symbol of Egyptian kingship. More precisely, the pharaoh’s role was that of a priest-king: a divinely inspired and sanctioned guardian of the initiatory Elect of Egypt. Nuit announces Crowley’s ascent to this station as Magus of the Æon. Once again the authenticity of the Book of the Law is subtly evidenced, as the exclusive symbolism of the Uræus is unmistakable. “This is the Uræus which came forth from Set.” - Utterance #683, Pyramid Texts.

19. O azure-lidded woman, bend upon them!

Nuit is the “azure-lidded woman”. Considered together with verse #I-18, this implies that the priest-king powers and perceptions of the Beast and Scarlet Woman will be more fully realized during the hours of darkness. Horus, however, is a deity of daylight; consider the three 12-1 PM transmissions of the Book of the Law itself.

20. The key of the rituals is in the secret word which I have given unto him.

Crowley believed this word to be “Abrahadabra”, symbolizing the union of complementary concepts through ritual. He explored its construction via Cabalistic numerological techniques, arriving at various numbers which he believed significant to the Æon of Horus. While the Hebrew Cabala possesses no objective validity, Crowley insisted - presumably as a consequence of his Golden Dawn training - upon trying to use it as a device for systematizing his philosophy. His diaries reveal his exhaustive efforts in this vein and the many pointless “results” he achieved.

Exactly how Crowley used “Abrahadabra” as a ritual key is obscure. He did observe that it contains 11 letters, and that the (1)=[10], (2)=[9], (3)=[8], etc. grades of the G.'D.'. and A.'A.' incorporated an elevenfold base [which was rather at odds with the tenfold Cabalistic Tree of Life]. He also felt the word to be a “corrected” version of the older term “abracadabra” (a pyramidal word-puzzle based upon the a-b-c-d sequence).

21. With the God & the Adorer I am nothing: they do not see me. They are as upon the earth; I am Heaven, and there is no other God than me, and my lord Hadit.

Crowley interpreted this passage as descriptive of the Stele of Revealing. I read it rather as a statement concerning the true nature of “God”, i.e. the mechanical, inertial cosmos (objective universe) (Nuit) as opposed to popular concepts of God as an anthropomorphic, sentient center of willful personality. Such fantasies are unsubstantiated. The true “God” is “Heaven” (the objective universe/Nuit), and it is perceived as such by means of inspired visions (Hadit).

22. Now, therefore, I am known to ye by my name Nuit, and to him by a secret name which I will give to him when at last he knoweth me. Since I am Infinite Space, and the Infinite Stars thereof, do ye also thus. Bind nothing! Let there be no difference made among you between any one thing & any other thing; for thereby cometh hurt.

The secret name, revealed in the 12th Æthyr of Liber 418 (The Vision and The Voice), was that of Babylon or Babalon, incorporated by Crowley into the seal of the A.'A.'.. Again Nuit is shown to comprise the objective universe. The adjuration of this passage lays bare the terrible secret of all forms of God/nature worship: the forcing of all deviant Will towards uniformity and conformity to the cosmic norm. Difference or independence of any sort - particularly intellectual separation - is anathema to Nuit.

23. But whoso avalleth in this, let him be chief of all!

A Magus - (9)=[2] A.'A.'., V° Church of Satan, or V° Temple of Set - is in fact an individual who succeeds in achieving a perspective of separation from the objective universe and, from that point of perspective, Uttering a Word [=formulating a philosophy] to alter that universe in some fashion. Nuit’s reaction is one of inertia. The change is resisted, but once accomplished it is reinforced. Once a Magus has successfully completed his Task, he becomes obsolete as such and must either revert to the level of Magister Templi or take the oath of Ipsissimus.
24. I am Nuit, and my word is six and fifty.
25. Divide, add, multiply, and understand.

Crowley divided 6 by 50 and got 0.12, which he thought might signify his 0=2 equation. His other attempts to solve the mathematical riddles of these verses were unsuccessful, though he attributed one or two Cabalistic symbols to the numbers that resulted. He did not, however, uncover the word of Nuit. That word is “inertia”, whose letters, numbered per the English alphabet [cf. the Book of Coming Forth by Night]=76=13=4. 50÷6=8. 50+6=56. 50x6=300. 8+56+300=364=13=4= key number concealing the sacred decad of Pythagoreanism (1+2+3+4=10). Cf. also Crowley’s most significant Book 4. Q.E.D.

26. Then saith the prophet and slave of the beauteous one: Who am I, and what shall be the sign? So she answered him, bending down, a lambent flame of blue, all-touching, all penetrant, her lovely hands upon the black earth, & her lithe body arched for love, and her soft feet not hurting the little flowers: Thou knowest! And the sign shall be my ecstasy, the consciousness of the continuity of existence, the unfragmentary non-atomic fact of my universality.

The response to Crowley’s appeal for confirmation of his identity was this endorsement of his belief that he was in fact the Beast 666. The most subtle and meaningful of all signs was given - a reminder of Crowley’s ability to sense the omnipresence and comprehensiveness of Nuit. Such an experience would have been impossible for one of lesser vision than a Magus, because a Magus, by definition, must first comprehend the totality of what presently exists before Uttering a Word to exert change upon it.

27. Then the priest answered & said unto the Queen of Space, kissing her lovely brows, and the dew of her light bathing his whole body in a sweet-smelling perfume of sweat: O Nuit, continuous one of Heaven, let it be ever thus; that men speak not of Thee as One but as None; and let them speak not of thee at all, since thou art continuous!

Crowley’s ecstatic recognition of the sign, and hope that mankind generally will not transcend inertia by achieving a point of perspective similar to his [from which Nuit may be seen “from outside”]. Presumably this follows #I-5 and #I-10, in which only Elect initiates may presume to “see the goddess unveiled”.

28. None, breathed the light, faint & faery, of the stars, and two.

Nuit validates the concept that she is all-inclusive, hence cannot be distinguished from any other thing known to her. [The Set/HarWer phenomena are distinct and apart from the objective universe.] Yet the objective universe is not a homogenous whole; it is everywhere separated into complementary parts: +/- magnetic fields, matter/antimatter, mass/energy, light/darkness, heat/cold, etc. It is the interaction of these parts which engenders the phenomena of time and mathematics.
29. For I am divided for love’s sake, for the chance of union.

Love is the highest expression of complementary attraction. The division of Nuit into complementary components makes love possible, and the many possibilities for combination bring the phenomena of chance into play.

30. This is the creation of the world, that the pain of divison is as nothing, and the joy of dissolution all.

Division - the forced separation of a homogenous whole into parts - is disruptive, hence painful to the inertia of Nuit. Dissolution of components through their union with complements is joyful, insofar as the homogenous whole is thus restored. The statement argues against division and for the reunion of the whole. Again this tendency of the Nuit-Form confirms its true identity as such.

31. For these fools of men and their woes care not thou at all! They feel little; what is, is balanced by weak joys; but ye are my chosen ones.

Crowley need not worry about obstructions to the unification of Nuit resulting from the emotional and intellectual spasms of uninitiated mankind. These are balanced by complementary forces - joy for pain, satisfaction for curiosity, the death-wish for the life-force, etc. Hence intellectual or emotional ventures will be neutralized before they stray so far from the pattern as to recognize it for what it is. And the initiates known to Nuit are only those who seek to hasten reunification of the whole.

32. Obey my prophet! follow out the ordeals of my knowledge! seek me only! Then the joys of my love will redeem ye from all pain. This is so: I swear it by the vault of my body; by my sacred heart and tongue; by all I can give, by all I desire of ye all.

Nuit admonishes Crowley not to stray from the goal of reunion. Dissolution of the self into Nuit brings an end to all self-consciousness and thus from pain. The ultimate argument of Nuit is for suicide of the finite self in order to become part of the infinite whole. [Cf. Crowley’s discussion of the “annihilation of the self” via the “crossing of the Abyss” between Adeptus Exemptus (7)=[4] and Magister Templi (8)=[3] in One Star in Sight.]

33. Then the priest fell into a deep trance or swoon, & said unto the Queen of Heaven; Write unto us the ordeals; write unto us the rituals; write unto us the law!

Crowley desires the means for reunion with the whole to be explained to him in terms of ordeals (stresses necessary to destroy the self), rituals (mental and physical exercises to bring initiates closer to Nuit), and law (commandments that are to be obeyed to achieve the reunion).
34. But she said: the ordeals I write not: the rituals shall be half known and half concealed: the Law is for all.

    Nuit refuses to identify the suicide “ordeal” required of separate personalities for absorption into the whole. The procedures for the rituals will be imparted, but the weakening of the self resulting from those rituals will not be identified for what it actually is. The Law - that Nuit insists the reunion be pursued - is all-embracing; it is integral with the Form of Nuit in its entirety.

35. This that thou writest is the threefold book of Law.

    Identification of the name of the Book of the Law.

36. My scribe Ankh-af-na-khonsu, the priest of the princes, shall not in one letter change this book; but lest there be folly, he shall comment thereupon by the wisdom of Ra-Hoor-Khu-it.

    The Book of the Law is not to be altered, edited, or abridged in any way by Crowley, though he may comment upon it in order to explain its relevance to the Aeon of Horus. The reason that the text may not be touched by that Magus is that it contains formulæ recognizable only after the Aeon of Horus, as is evident from this commentary and the contents of the Book of Coming Forth by Night.

37. Also the mantras and spells; the obeah and the wanga; the work of the wand and the work of the sword; these he shall learn and teach.

    Ceremonial and operative magical procedures are among the tools that the Beast is to use for the communication of his Word. The suit of Wands in the Tarot covers aspects of positive existence; the suit of Swords covers aspects of force and destruction. The path of the Aeon of Horus would seem evident, particularly against the tableaus set forth in the second and third chapters of the Book of the Law.

38. He must teach; but he may make severe the ordeals.

    A Magus must Utter his Word; that is, he is compelled to explain his philosophical principle. Nevertheless he may choose those for whom he deems such explanation educational and beneficial. Pearls need not be cast before swine.

39. The word of the Law is θεληµα.

    [In English: Thelema.] Crowley explained this concept as “harmony of Will and Action”, but he also wondered if it might not also have “probably a very lofty secret interpretation”. That interpretation is decipherable once the word of Nuit - inertia - is known. What is understood by the term “Will” is an expression of mental separateness from Nuit, in that the self is impressing its desire for inertial change upon Nuit.

    By definition, then, the separate Will cannot be harmonious. Harmony with Nuit can occur only when the separate Will is destroyed and the mind mechanically fused with the inertia of the objective universe. This notion has been expressed as “oneness with God”, nirvana, etc. From the standpoint of Nuit this is immortalization of the Will; from the standpoint of the individual apart from Nuit it is suicide.

Contained in the concept is the principle that the individual Will can be weakened and destroyed only by the separate being possessing it. It is not “of Nuit” and cannot be directly influenced by that Form.

Within the context of the Æon of Horus, then, Thelema could be seen as the “sane” alternative to chaotic behavior, since the essence and presence of Set were as yet concealed.

40. Who calls us Thelemites will do no wrong, if he look but close into the word. For there are therein Three Grades, the Hermit, and the Lover, and the man of Earth. Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law.

Crowley advanced a Cabalistic interpretation thus: The = the Hermit [of the Tarot] = “invisible yet illuminating”. le = the Lover = “visible as is the lightning-flash - the College of Adept”. ma = “the man of Earth - the Blasted Tower”. He went on to add the Cabalistic/numerological values of these three cards and obtained 31 (“AL”+“LA”), whence came the secret name of the Book of the Law.

The famous final sentence of this passage, originating [like “Thelema”] in Dr. Francois Rabelais’ novel Gargantua, had also been used by Sir Francis Dashwood who inscribed FAY CE QUE VOUDRAS over the main entrance to Medmenham Abbey.

Crowley, in adopting it, applied it specifically to “one’s true will” - which, according to the Word of the Æon of Horus, meant the uniting of the individual Will with that of the objective universe (Nuit).

41. The word of Sin is Restriction. O man! refuse not thy wife, if she will! O lover, if thou wilt, depart! There is no bond that can unite the divided but love: all else is a curse. Accursed! Accursed! be it to the aeons. Hell.

Compare the Magical Formula of the Age of Satan (1966-1975 CE): “Indulgence instead of Abstinence.” Crowley interprets “love” in a sexual context, but the comment concerning union of the divided implies the neutralization of complementary opposites by fusion - the compulsion of Nuit. [See #I-29 through #I-32.] All impulses other than those which lead towards such reunion and neutralization are seen as a curse, and they are collectively characterized as Hell. This is not inconsistent with the symbolism of the Diabolicon and the Age of Satan that succeeded the Æon of Horus.

42. Let it be that state of manyhood bound and loathing. So with thy all; thou hast no right but to do thy will.

“Hell” is further described as “that state of manyhood”, i.e. a variety of distinct and separate Wills, which, from the standpoint of Nuit, is a condition “bound and loathing”. Compare again the Diabolicon. Again the charge is given that polarized intellects “have no right” but to “do thy Will” - a meaningless aphorism except as interpreted per #I-39.
43. Do that, and no other shall say nay.

The human intellectual separation from Nuit is the only such manifestation on Earth. Once this “flaw” has been “corrected”, the natural inertia of Earth will have been restored. There are no other intellects capable of achieving a sense of separateness - of “saying nay”, as it were.

44. For pure will, unassuaged of purpose, delivered from the lust of result, is in every way perfect.

Will “delivered from the lust of result” and without “purpose” is independence of Will destroyed. The concept of Will then becomes completely meaningless except as identified with the cosmic inertia as a whole. This would in fact be “perfection” from the standpoint of Nuit.

45. The Perfect and the Perfect are one Perfect and not two; nay, are none!

Perfection as defined by Nuit consists of unity. Once it has been achieved, it becomes a meaningless concept, since there will be none apart from it to appreciate that unity.

46. Nothing is a secret key of this law. Sixty-one the Jews call it; I call it eight, eighty, four hundred & eighteen.

In that fulfillment of the Law would reduce all intellectual existence to unity and thus to a meaningless concept, “nothing” is indeed a secret key to the Book of the Law! What the Jews call it is unimportant, since the Hebraic/Cabalistic numerological system is insubstantial. The sum of 8, 80, 400, and 18 is 506 = 11 = the eleven-lettered formula of Abrahadabra.

47. But they have the half: unite by thine art so that all disappear.

Another reaffirmation of the law of Nuit.

48. My prophet is a fool with his one, one, one; are not they the Ox, and none by the Book?

A criticism of Crowley for his strong sense of individuality and subconscious refusal to accept and embrace the nihilism of Nuit. [Here it appears that “fool” is to be understood in the mundane sense rather than as synonym for the A.'.A.'. grade of Ipsissimus.] Nuit perceives separate intellectual existence as stupid - as are oxen - and futile according to the doctrines put forth in the Book of the Law.
49. Abrogate are all rituals, all ordeals, all words and signs. Ra-Hoor-Khuit hath taken his seat in the East at the Equinox of the Gods; and let Asar be with Isa, who also are one. But they are not of me. Let Asar be the adorant, Isa the sufferer; Hoor in his secret name and spendour is the Lord initiating.

All principles of ceremonial magic not in accordance with the Book of the Law are obsolete and should now be discarded. Ra-Harakte “hath taken his seat in the East”: The Sun is now dawning on the Equinox of the Gods. Since the Vernal Equinox occurs at approximately March 21, it may be assumed that the statement refers to an “equally-balanced night” between the unity of Nuit and the separate chaos of HarWer [as will be seen in the third chapter].

Asar (Osiris) and Isa (Isis) are identified as representative of a non-germane principle: that of posthumous redemption and revival. Osiris is a mythical object of popular worship; Isis is symbolic of those who equate worship with abstinence, suffering, and deprivation. Death-worship [in the biological sense as distinct from the self-obliteration sense] and worship by abstinence have no place in the Æon of Horus; they would be distracting to the actual Word of the Æon.

The secret name of Hoor (the hieroglyphic Hor or Horus) is HarWer - in hieroglyphics the “Great Horus” or Horus the Elder - not the Horus [the Younger] of the Osirian mythos.

50. There is a word to say about the Hierophantic task. Behold! there are three ordeals in one, and it may be given in three ways. The gross must pass through fire; let the fine be tried in intellect, and the lofty chosen ones in the highest; thus ye have star & star, system & system; let not one know well the other!

Within the Æon of Horus the initiatory Order - the A.'.A.'. - may accept persons of various levels of intelligence for appropriate pursuits within the Order. Tests and ordeals should be tailored to individuals’ potential as appropriate. [Consider also #I-3.] Nevertheless there should be no confusion or blurring of the distinction between the several intellectual levels; intelligence is a dispassionate identification of elites.

51. There are four gates to one palace; the floor of that palace is of silver and gold; lapis lazuli & jasper are there; and all rare scents; jasmine & rose, and the emblems of death. Let him enter in turn or at once the four gates; let him stand on the floor of the palace. Will he not sink? Amn. Ho! warrior, if thy servant sink? But there are means and means. Be goodly therefore: dress ye all in fine apparel; eat rich foods and drink sweet wines and wines that foam! Also, take your fill and will of love as ye will, when, where and with whom ye will! But always unto me.

Crowley considered this passage a more or less literal interpretation of the initiatory environment the A.'.A.'. was to use. Lapis lazuli and jasper he considered symbolic of Nuit and “Hadit” respectively, and he thought jasmine and rose to represent “the two sacraments” (the male and female sexual fluids). He referred guardedly to the “emblems of death” as the ceremonial symbols of Freemasonry - to be adopted and used by the A.'.A.'..

If the passage is indeed descriptive of an initiatory temple, then it may be read literally and a temple constructed accordingly, complete with four gates and sinking... floors [perhaps an alligator pit for the quick & tidy disposal of would-be initiates who failed the tests of #I-50?].

52. If this be not aright; if ye confound the space-marks, saying: They are one; or saying, They are many; if the ritual be not ever unto me: then expect the direful judgments of Ra Hoor Khuit.

Crowley identified “space-marks” as stars [in the sense of #I-3]. It is equally erroneous, he said, to consider individuals as either completely interconnected with or completely disconnected from one another.

By “the ritual” he understood the sex-act, taking the admonition to mean that it was of value as a magical ritual more than as an expression of brutish lust. This is an important distinction in Crowley’s own magical philosophy and explains his interest in the later, sex-magic-based Ordo Templi Orientis (O.T.O.).

Crowley’s magical and æsthetic approach to sex has not, it may be said, been carried forward in the practices of his latter-day disciples, most of whom err on either side of the delicate balance between the symbolic and the animalistic.

53. This shall regenerate the world, the little world my sister, my heart & my tongue, unto whom I send this kiss. Also, o scribe and prophet, though thou be of the princes, it shall not assuage thee nor absolve thee. But ecstasy be thine and joy of earth: ever To me! To me!

The impulse of Nuit is to restore natural harmony and balance to the Earth - a condition which is distorted by the non-natural intellectual self-consciousness of mankind. Crowley’s exalted role in this design shall not exempt him from selfobliteration as well, but he is promised “ecstasy and joy” - the first from intellectual union with the objective universe/Nuit and the second by return to the physical station of a non-intellectual, natural animal on Earth.

54. Change not as much as the style of a letter; for behold! thou, o prophet, shall not behold all these mysteries hidden therein.

In fact the various printed versions of the Book of the Law have consistently omitted key elements of the handwritten manuscript that could not be typeset. Two of these elements - the configuration of the coded passage #II-76 and the grid/number matrix behind part of #III-47 - proved crucial to their decipherment in the Book of Coming Forth by Night.

55. The child of thy bowels, he shall behold them.

Crowley interpreted this verse in a magical, rather than in a genealogical sense. At first he felt the “child” to be Charles S. Jones (Frater Achad), but then abandoned this opinion when Jones developed theories not in accordance with Crowley’s own beliefs concerning the Æon. The matter was unresolved at the time of Crowley’s death, nor were his various disciples or organizational splinter-groups able to reach consensus upon it. The question was resolved by the Book of Coming Forth by Night precisely a century after Crowley’s own birth.
56. Expect him not from the East, nor from the West; for from no expected house cometh that child. Aum! All words are sacred and all prophets true; save only that they understand a little; solve the first half of the equation, leave the second unattacked. But that hast all in the clear light, and some, though not all, in the dark.

The “child” would be neither of the “Eastern” (oriental/Theosophical) nor of the “Western” (Cabalistic/Masonic) magical schools, but would come rather from a school distinct from and unrecognized by both - the Church of Satan, an initiatory magical Order that itself rejected the doctrines both of the aforementioned systems and of Crowley’s organizations.

The “child”, as Magus of the Æon of Set, necessarily had to reject the premises of the Æon of Horus as obsolete and/or incomplete, but this same perspective and initiatory comprehension enabled him to explain key mysteries of the Æon of Horus that had been unresolved even by Crowley himself. By definition only a Magus may completely comprehend a previous Magus - because the successor possesses the extra-æonic perspective required.

Crowley’s curiosity concerning the identity of the “child” is also dismissed as futile - a word of advice which he, to his continuing frustration, refused to heed.

The Words of the several Magi are valid under the circumstances of their Utterance, but each Magus will Understand only those magical and philosophical principles encompassed by his Word [and previous Words to the extent that it elaborates upon them].

Each Word represents a new equation between the experience of the past and the problems of the future. A Magus may use the power of his Word to better understand the past and to address the present, but he should not presume that his Word will be the final solution to the indefinite future.

The intellect alone will enable man to confront problems purely in the realm of the objective universe, but the uninitiated intellect is inadequate where the entire Universe - including metaphysical realities - is concerned. This is the realm of the Magi.

57. Invoke me under my stars! Love is the law, love under will. Nor let the fools mistake love; for there are love and love. There is the dove, and there is the serpent. Choose ye well! He, my prophet, hath chosen, knowing the law of the fortress, and the great mystery of the House of God. All these old letters of my Book are aright; but Tzaddi is not the Star. This also is secret: my prophet shall reveal it to the wise.

Nuit is to be invoked during the hours of darkness.

“Love is the law, love under will” became one of Crowley’s key aphorisms [generally used to close any document opened with the “Do what thou wilt” quote from #I-40]. He understood it to mean a profound empathy with all entities of creation, guided not by fear [which he considered the Christian motive for love] but by deliberation.

There is further a caution concerning superficial types of love. There is “pure” love for its own sake - the dove; and there is love for ulterior motives - the serpent. [Crowley interpreted the serpent as a symbol of Kundalini, a sex-magic force supposedly coiled at the base of the spine. I find the concept quaint, if hardly to be taken seriously.]
Crowley himself chose the love of the serpent, always subordinating human love and affection to his magical workings. As a result his love-life consisted of an endless string of disasters, his opinion of women remained immature, and his experiments with sex-magic [as highlighted, for example, in The King on the Royal Art, one of his sex-magic diaries] were pathetic and fruitless.

The “great mystery”, which Crowley declined to explain in his comments on the grounds that it was reserved to the highest grades of initiation, was simply that he believed sex-magic to be the most potent form of the art - explained only at the highest degrees of the O.T.O.

Crowley understood “Book” as the Tarot, and the Hebrew letter Tzaddi as the Emperor trump in that deck. In his commentary he proceeded to explain why this passage identified this trump as complementary to the Star trump XVII - which I simply do not see implied by the above passage of the Book of the Law. [Crowley devised a Hebrew/Cabalistic interpretation for the Tarot, which I consider useless.].

58. I give unimaginable joys on earth: certainly, not faith, while in life, upon death; peace unutterable, rest, ecstasy; nor do I demand aught in sacrifice.

The promise of Nuit to mankind upon its re-integration with the objective universe - at which point there would be nothing left to sacrifice, nor any separate mind feeling any awareness of a separate “deity” - hence not even the notion of “sacrifice”.

59. My incense is of resinous wood & gums; and there is no blood therein: because of my hair the trees of Eternity.

The composition of incense for Nuit and the reason for it - the tree as a symbol of timeless existence because of its apparent lack of change, i.e. growth at a comparatively slow rate.

60. My number is 11, as are all their numbers who are of us. The Five Pointed Star, with a Circle in the Middle, & the circle is Red. My colour is black to the blind, but the blue & gold are seen of the seeing. Also I have a secret glory for them that love me.

See #I-24; 5+6=11. See also the comment concerning #I-20. The five-pointed star is the Pentagram of Set, and a red circle is the Egyptian symbol for the Sun. This fragment is inconclusive, but it might suggest the encircled Sigil of Baphomet [used during the Age of Satan] with its Solar connotations of virility - a glimpse of Things to Come. To non-initiates the esoteric nature of the Book of the Law might seem “black” (i.e. Satanic), but in fact it is “blue & gold” (a “God”-oriented initiatory system of magical philosophy).

For the “secret glory” see again #I-30.

61. But to love me is better than all things: if under the night-stars in the desert thou presently burnest mine incense before me, invoking me with a pure heart, and the Serpent flame therein, thou shalt come a little to lie in my bosom. For one kiss wilt thou then be willing to give all; but whoso gives one particle of dust shall lose all in that hour. Ye shall gather goods and store of women and spices; ye shall wear rich jewels; ye shall exceed the nations of the earth in splendour & pride; but always in the love of me, and so shall ye come to my joy. I charge you earnestly to come before me in a single robe, and covered with a rich headdress. I love you! I yearn to you! Pale or purple, veiled or voluptuous, I who am all pleasure and purple, and drunkenness of the innermost sense, desire you. Put on the wings, and arouse the coiled splendour within you: come unto me!

62. At all my meetings with you shall the priestess say - and her eyes shall burn with desire as she stands bare and rejoicing in my secret temple - To me! To me! calling forth the flame of the hearts of all in her love-chant.

63. Sing the rapturous love-song unto me! Burn to me perfumes! Wear to me jewels! Drink to me, for I love you! I love you!

64. I am the blue-lidded daughter of Sunset; I am the naked brilliance of the voluptuous night-sky.

65. To me! To me!

66. The Manifestation of Nuit is at an end.

The Second Chapter

1. Nu! the hiding of Hadit.

According to Islam, the term Hadith identifies a “divinely-inspired utterance”. The term has no meaning in Egyptian hieroglyphic. The “Hadit”-figure on the Stele of Revealing is identified in the inscription as Behdety, a form of HarWer, the Great Horus. This Second Chapter is intelligible if it is understood as an utterance of Aleister Crowley inspired by HarWer. [By contrast, the Third Chapter is in the form of a direct address by this neter.]

In this first verse Nuit is said to conceal or obscure the magician’s awareness of HarWer. If Nuit is recognized as the inertial neter of the objective universe, and if HarWer - per the Book of Coming Forth by Night - is seen as a concentration of intelligence directly opposite to Nuit, the antipodal tension between them may be understood.

2. Come! all ye, and learn the secret that hath not yet been revealed. I, Hadit, am the complement of Nu, my bride. I am not extended, and Khabs is the name of my house.

Crowley considered Hadit to be symbolic of “infinite contraction” - a geometric point - and Nuit “infinite expansion” into the three geometric dimensions. The concepts have no meaning save in pure mathematics, because the former state would mean nonexistence save as a locus, and the latter a state of existence embracing everything - in which case “Hadit” could not think or talk, while there would be no one “else” for Nuit to talk with!

“Khabs” may be translated in many ways [see #I-8]. Here it may characterize HarWer as a neter of “pure spirit” [see #II-1].

3. In the sphere I am everywhere, the centre, as she, the circumference, is nowhere found.

Crowley compared this to “an old mystical definition of God - He whose centre is everywhere and whose circumference nowhere”. In terms of Euclidian geometry, of course, both the center and the shell of a given sphere can be determined. Technically the shell can be “found”; it is the physical displacement of a sphere in space. But the center has no three-dimensional existence; it has location only. #II-3 is thus contradictory to fact. This statement would place HarWer completely outside of the objective universe [where such laws apply].

4. Yet she shall be known and I never.

The objective universe may be comprehended through the logical and empirical procedures of science. The pure intellect, since it possesses the capacity to behave illogically, may not be defined through logic alone. Nοetic intuition is also required. Consider here the Dialogues of Plato relative to the actual identification and definition of a Form/\n\n5. Behold! the rituals of the old time are black. Let the evil ones be cast away; let the good ones be purged by the prophet! Then shall this Knowledge go aright.

Crowley understood the “old time” as a reference to the Æon of Osiris, characterized by the predominance of death-worship religions, now to be superseded by the Æon of Horus.

He understood the ritual reference to mean that he must purge the texts of the Golden Dawn (G.'D.'.) to ensure their compliance with the principles of the new æon.

6. I am the flame that burns in every heart of man, and in the core of every star. I am Life, and the giver of Life, yet therefore is the knowledge of me the knowledge of death.

The capacity for intelligent thought distinguishes man from beast. This same capacity enables man to perceive his existence as distinct from that of the Nuit-cosmos, hence the finity of that distinct existence - eventual death of the self.

7. I am the Magician and the Exorcist. I am the axle of the wheel, and the cube in the circle. “Come unto me” is a foolish word; for it is I that go.

HarWer is the creator of a new æon and the destroyer of the old one. His being is the origin - or axle - of the new æon, and elaborations of the Word of that æon extend outwards from this core principle.

Cubical altars within magic circles were used for certain types of magical ceremonies, but the relationship was expanded to three dimensions in the “Cry of the 30th Æthyr” in Liber 418 (The Vision and The Voice): “This cube is surrounded by a sphere” - implying the spiritual above and beyond the purely material.
8. Who worshipped Heru-pa-kraath have worshipped me; ill, for I am the worshipper.

Harpokrates, the infant Horus the Younger of the Osirian mythos, is in fact a corruption of HarWer, the Great Horus. Here HarWer exposes the corruption and points to a further fallacy: An intellect cannot worship itself as an “object”.

9. Remember all ye that existence is pure joy; that all the sorrows are but as shadows; they pass & are done; but there is that which remains.

This reaffirms the opposition of HarWer to Nuit, who considers non-existence [of anything else] the supreme joy [see #I-32]. Finite intellects are subject to death. The non-conscious whole of matter/energy (Nuit) will, however, continue to displace space indefinitely.

10. O prophet! thou hast ill will to learn this writing.

11. I see thee hate the hand & the pen; but I am stronger.

12. Because of me in Thee which thou knewest not.

13. for why? Because thou wast the knower, and me.

Crowley recounts that, at this point, he resented the direction of the Book of the Law but was unable to cease transcribing it. At the time he was an avowed Buddhist [which, since Buddhists seek obliteration of the self in nirvana, is not inconsistent with his attraction for Nuit]. The Second Chapter of the Book of the Law attacks this position with an affirmation of the independent existence of the intellect. And even the very attempt to “deny” the intellect necessitates its existence: Cogito Ergo Sum.

14. Now let there be a veiling of this shrine; now let the light devour men and eat them up with blindness!

Despite the glaring truth of #II-10/13, those who “don’t want to hear it” will simply ignore it in favor of cherished fantasies. Crowley himself missed its significance altogether. Hence he also failed to understand that it was the HarWer aspect of his own mind that was the actual source of this Second Chapter.

15. For I am perfect, being Not; and my number is nine by the fools; but with the just I am eight, and one in eight: Which is vital, for I am none indeed. The Empress and the King are not of me; for there is a further secret.

In the Old Comment, which appeared in the Equinox in 1912, Crowley wrote: “I am perfect, being Not (31 LA or 61 AIN) … Which is vital, for I am None indeed. LA.” This is rather at odds with the notion that Charles Stansfeld Jones (Frater Achad) first communicated the AL/LA “key” to Crowley in 1919.

9 is the number of the Tarot trump “The Hermit”, symbolizing [according to the Book of Thoth] the Secret Fire Khu [see #I-8 and #I-13]. Within the scope of the Æon of Horus, however, only an Ipsissimus (10)=[1] - a “fool” - could perceive this.

To others an intellectual evaluation of HarWer would yield 8 = “Adjustment”. Among other things this trump signifies the displacement of an obsolete Æon by a new one.
Trump #1 - “The Magus” - refers to Crowley’s role “in 8” - i.e. in the new æon as the instrument of Adjustment. This is “vital” insofar as the HarWer neter cannot manifest itself in the objective universe save through the mind of a material/intellectual medium.

“The Empress” (trump #3) and “The Emperor” (trump #4) add to trump #7 ("The Chariot"), signifying the North Solstice and the mystery of the Grail. This is indeed a “further secret”, as it is not of HarWer and would be revealed only in the Hall of the Dead (Walhalla) at Wewelsburg Castle, Westphalia, in XVII/1982 CE.

16. I am the Empress & the Hierophant. Thus eleven as my bride is eleven.

“The Empress” (trump #3) and “The Hierophant” (trump #5) again equal “Adjustment” (trump #8). The Æon of Horus is characterized by the eleven-lettered formula “Abrahadabra” [see #I-20].

17. Hear me, ye people of sighing!
The sorrows of pain and regret
Are left to the dead and the dying,
The folk that not know me as yet.

18. They are dead, these fellows; they feel not. We are not for the poor and sad: the lords of the earth are our kinsfolk.

19. Is a God to live in a dog? No! but the highest are of us. They shall rejoice, our chosen, who sorroweth is not of us.

20. Beauty and strength, leaping laughter and delicious languor, for and fire, are of us.

The Law of Thelema is for those who have the wit and the will to comprehend and apply it. All others are fated to continue their slow, inevitable regression to beasthood. [Consider H.G. Wells’ Island of Dr. Moreau.] As for intellectuals and magicians of the obsolete æon:

“Such a being is gradually disintegrated from lack of nourishment and the slow but certain attraction of the rest of the universe, despite his now desperate efforts to insulate and protect himself, and to aggrandize himself by predatory practices. He may indeed prosper for awhile, but in the end he must perish, especially when with a new æon a new Word is proclaimed which he cannot and will not hear, so that he is handicapped by trying to use an obsolete method of Magick, like a man with a boomerang in a battle where everyone else has a rifle.” - Magick in Theory and Practice

21. We have nothing with the outcast and the unfit: let them die in their misery. For they feel not. Compassion is the vice of kings: stamp down the wretched & the weak: this is the law of the strong: this is our law and the joy of the world. Think not, o king, upon that lie: That Thou Must Die; verily thou shalt not die, but live. Now let it be understood: If the body of the king dissolve, he shall remain in pure ecstasy for ever. Nuit! Hadit! Ra-Hoor-Khuit! The Sun, Strength & Sight, Light: these are for the servants of the Star & the Snake.

The “law of the jungle”, raised to its most complex expression in the writings of Nietzsche. One of the prerogatives of an independent intellect, however, is that of defying the law of the jungle - to enable the weak or injured to survive in order that they may prove their worth under other circumstances. Excessive devotion to one extreme means cruelty. Excessive devotion to the other results in weakening the self through the hosting of parasites. An Aristotelian “Golden Mean” must be sought.

In Egyptian philosophy the pharaoh was not a king in the European sense. Rather he was an embodied manifestation of the gods. Human shells for him to inhabit might be required, but the “actual” pharaoh was immortal.

In this verse may also be found one of the secrets behind the practice of mummification: If the body is permitted to dissolve, the ba (“heart-soul”) and ka (“double”) cease to exist and are absorbed by the objective universe. [See The Book of Opening the Mouth, translated by Sir E.A. Wallis Budge.]

The Star is the Silver Star (A.’A.’.) of Babalon, and the Snake is subsequently (#II-22) identified as HarWer.

22. I am the Snake that giveth Knowledge & Delight and bright glory, and stir the hearts of men with drunkenness. To worship me take wine and strange drugs whereof I will tell my prophet, & be drunk thereof! They shall not harm ye at all. It is a lie, this folly against self. The exposure of innocence is a lie. Be strong, o man! Lust, enjoy all things of sense and rapture: fear not that any God shall deny thee for this.

Here the random volatility of the HarWer-neter is shown at its most extreme. It may well be one of the greater tragedies of the Æon of Horus that Crowley did not recognize the fourth sentence of this verse as being an abrupt rejection of the disordered thoughts of the first three. This rejection is emphasized by the fifth and sixth sentences, which encourage him to strengthen, not impair his sensory powers.

23. I am alone: there is no God where I am.

The conceptual separation of HarWer from Nuit is absolute; the two neteru are mutually exclusive.

24. Behold! these be grave mysteries; for there are also of my friends who be hermits. Now think not to find them in the forest or on the mountain; but in beds of purple, caressed by magnificent beasts of women with large limbs, and fire and light in their eyes, and masses of flaming hair about them: there shall ye find them. Ye shall see them at rule, at victorious armies, at all the joy; and there shall be in them a joy a million times greater than this. Beware lest any force another, King against King! Love one another with burning hearts; on the low men trample in the fierce lust of your pride, in the day of your wrath.

Strengthening of self-awareness is not to be achieved through isolation and meditation, as in the Hindu and Buddhist systems, but through exposure and expression of the self. Those with the most highly-developed sense of self-awareness are also those who are seen to attain success in their endeavors; it is a sign that they have correctly identified and actualized their true will. Such a person will continue to achieve success, unless he should clash with another whose true will is equally well-developed - or more so.
25. Ye are against the people, O my chosen!

A reaffirmation of #II-18/19.

26. I am the Secret Serpent coiled about to spring: in my coiling there is joy. If I lift up my head, I and my Nuit are one. If I droop down my head, and shoot forth venom, then is rapture of the earth, and I and the earth are one.

A learned discourse on the pleasures of sex.

27. There is a great danger in me; for who doth not understand these runes shall make a great miss. He shall fall down into the Pit called Because, and there he shall perish with the dogs of reason.

28. Now a curse upon Because and his kin!

29. May Because be accursed forever!

30. If Will stops and cries Why, invoking Because, then Will stops & does naught.

31. If Power asks why, then is Power weakness.

32. Also reason is a lie; for there is a factor infinite & unknown; & all their words are skew-wise.

33. Enough of Because! Be he damned for a dog!

Neither the Book of the Law nor other texts dealing with metaphysics can be comprehended through purely-logical analysis. This is the ultimate message of the Platonic Dialogues, which collectively demonstrate the futility of a logical approach to the Forms/neteru. After all rational and scientific procedures have been exhausted, an intuitive (Nétic) apprehension of each Form is required.

A reading of the Book of the Law with an inaccurate or insufficient appreciation of the neteru manifest within it can lead to disaster. [Consider Crowley’s own misreading of #II-22.]

34. But ye, o my people, rise up & awake!

35. Let the rituals be rightly performed with joy & beauty.

36. There are rituals of the elements and feasts of the times.

37. A feast for the first night of the Prophet and his Bride.

August 12, the day in 1903 when Crowley married his first wife, Rose Edith Kelly. In his Comment he observed that this event ultimately made possible the Cairo Working [yielding the Book of the Law].

38. A feast for the three days of the writing of the Book of the Law.

April 8, 9, and 10 beginning at noon.

39. A feast for Tahuti and the child of the Prophet - secret, O Prophet!

Crowley identified the “Supreme Ritual” as the March 20 invocation to Horus which resulted in the subsequent success of the Cairo Working.
41. A feast for fire and a feast for water; a feast for life and a greater feast for death!
42. A feast every day in your hearts in the joy of my rapture!
43. A feast every night unto Nu, and the pleasure of uttermost delight!
44. Aye! feast! rejoice! there is no dread hereafter. There is the dissolution, and eternal ecstasy in the kisses of Nu.

A reaffirmation of the true nature of Nuit. Concerning the “dissolution” see the comments to #I-32 and #II-21.

45. There is death for the dogs.

Those who reject such dissolution and absorption, and who are not initiates capable of sustaining the existence of the ba and ka after the transfer of the khu, will in fact die.

46. Dost thou fail? Art thou sorry? Is fear in thine heart?
47. Where I am these are not.
48. Pity not the fallen! I never knew them. I am not for them. I console not: I hate the consoled & the consoler.
49. I am unique and conqueror. I am not of the slaves that perish. Be they damned & dead! Amen. [This is of the 4; there is a fifth who is invisible, & therein am I as a babe in an egg.]

A restatement of the themes in #II-18/21. Amon is the “conqueror” - the warrior lord of Thebes [see #I-5]. He was the patron of Uast, the IV (4th) Nome of Upper Egypt. Patron of the V (5th) Nome was Amsu, portrayed as one of the children of Horus the Younger [hence “babe in an egg”].

50. Blue am I and gold in the light of my bride: but the red gleam is in my eyes; & my spangles are purple & green.

See #I-60. Yet there is also an aspect of HarWer that is closer to Set [whose color is red] than to Nuit [whose colors are blue & gold]. Purple is the color of a Magus, and green the blending of the colors of Nuit.

51. Purple beyond purple: it is the light higher than eyesight.

The “vision” of a Magus extends beyond the scope of the normal range of eyesight, just as ultraviolet is beyond violet in the visible spectrum.

52. There is a veil: that veil is black. It is the veil of the modest woman; it is the veil of sorrow, & the pall of death: this is none of me. Tear down that lying spectre of the centuries: veil not your vices in virtuous words: these vices are my service; ye do well, & I will reward you here and hereafter.

The “lying spectre of the centuries” is Osiris, the death-oriented god of the æon preceding that of Horus. The “vices” of emotional excess are characteristic of emotional use of the intellect - an attribute of HarWer’s distinction from the dispassionate objective universe.

53. Fear not, o prophet, when these words are said, thou shalt not be sorry. Thou art emphatically my chosen; and blessed are the eyes that thou shalt look upon with gladness. But I will hide thee in a mask of sorrow: they that see thee shall fear thou art fallen: but I lift thee up.

A restatement of Crowley’s role as set forth in #I-15. The Curse of a Magus is that, because he Utters a new Word amidst the values and norms of the expiring æon, or as an unfamiliar complement to the present æon, few if any will initially understand or endorse that new Word. Hence he can expect to be greeted with disinterest or even contempt. Truth, however, is not determined by vote. HarWer suggests that Crowley’s reception will be so antipathetic that even his disciples may lose confidence in him. This, however, will not affect the essential truth of his Word.

54. Nor shall they who cry aloud their folly that thou meanest nought avail; thou shall reveal it: thou avai lest: they are the slaves of because: They are not of me. The stops as thou wilt; the letters? change them not in style or value!

The Word and philosophy of Aleister Crowley cannot be understood as a mere product or synthesis of existing philosophy. A Word [as the Utterance of a Magus] introduces a new philosophical principle altogether. While it may contain elements of preexisting wisdom, its essence and emphasis will be unique and accessible only via nœtic intuition.

Crowley is permitted to punctuate the Book of the Law as he thinks appropriate, but he is not to tamper with the words, letters, or numbers of the text.

55. Thou shalt obtain the order & value of the English alphabet; thou shalt find new symbols to attribute them unto.

A straightforward instruction for Crowley to discard the number & letter values of the Hebrew Cabala. He ignored #II-55, due no doubt to the years he had already invested in Cabalism, and put forward Liber Trigrammaton as a gesture of compliance. He admitted his dissatisfaction with this in his 1920 Comment, theorizing further research into Sanskrit or Enochian.

The actual solution was deceptively simple: a direct, numerical equivalence to the order of the English alphabet and the construction of a new symbol for each letter/number. #II-55 was later to prove crucial to the revealing of #II-76 in the Book of Coming Forth by Night.

56. Begone! ye mockers; even though ye laugh in my honour ye shall laugh not long: then when ye are sad know that I have forsaken you.

Those who ridicule the Book of the Law, feeling secure in the conventions and norms of the expiring Æon of Osiris, will find that this conservatism works against them when the inertia of Nuit gradually aligns itself to the emerging values of the Æon of Horus.

Crowley himself was of the opinion [in the 1920 Comment] that this verse also had a special meaning with regard to imposters and false cults abusing the license of the Æon of Horus: that ultimately they would merely make themselves look foolish. There is a lesson here for any individual or group attempting to “go through the motions” of ritual magic, Thelemic or otherwise, without really understanding the principles or desiring the results the ceremonies in question were originally conceived to activate. Ritual without such understanding and purpose becomes merely a rote exercise, hence an excuse for the mind to not think!

True to the objective universal-unifying principle of Nuit, Crowley went on to propose intellectual separateness [from Nuit … ironically the central feature of HarWer, whose æon he was inaugurating] as the ultimate “evil”. In Liber Aleph he observed:

“And of such the Lords are the Black Brothers, who seek by their Sorceries to confirm themselves in Division … know this concerning the Black Brothers that cry: I am I. This is Falsity and Delusion, for the Law endureth not Exception. So then these Brethren are not Apart, as they Think; but are peculiar Combinations of Nature in Her Variety.”

Alas for those who think that mere insistence upon a law can make its violation impossible! Quite the contrary: Were it not conceivable or possible to do so, no law would be necessary in the first place. Nor is it sufficient to say that “[objective] universal law is a fact, not a convention, hence cannot be violated”. Until man understands and correlates all of what he so boldly calls “natural law”, how can he be certain that no exception exists to the tiny province he has thus far mapped?

Why should Crowley so dislike the “Black Brethren”, then? Is it just because they are explorers bolder than he, or is it rather because the endless evolution, change, and variety they cherish is antithetical to the goal of a monolithic, homogenous objective universe - that siren’s song of Nuit which so enraptured the “Buddhist” Magus of the Æon of Horus?

Unfortunately - or fortunately, depending upon your æonic point of view - the Beast 666 had a bit of Black Brotherhood in his modus operandi as well. He may have advocated the theoretical ideal of universal harmony, but he nonetheless devoted considerable time and effort to exercising and maximizing his own individuality. [I am certain HarWer approved.]

57. He that is righteous shall be righteous still; he that is filthy shall be filthy still.

In the 1920 Comment Crowley viewed this as a corollary to #II-56, suggesting that it is actually impossible for an object to undergo change, because it cannot be altered in its basic chemical constitution. If an apparent change occurs due to the addition, subtraction, or rearrangement of elements of this constitution, then the object has lost its original identity and assumed a new one.

This argument does not provide, however, for unrealized potential, which may not be apparent in the original assessment of an object although it is in fact there. A caterpillar does not lose its identity because it evolves into a butterfly, any more than a man loses his identity because he grows a beard. For Crowley’s argument to hold true, identity would have to be defined in a strictly limited sense, and at a fixed point in time. Either one of these assignments would be arbitrary, hence artificial - a case of the stepsister’s foot being jammed into Cinderella’s glass slipper.
58. Yea! deem not of change: ye shall be as ye are, & not other. Therefore the kings of the earth shall be Kings forever: the slaves shall serve. There is none that shall be cast down or lifted up: all is ever as it was. Yet there are masked ones my servants: it may be that yonder beggar is a King. A King may choose his garment as he will: there is no certain test: but a beggar cannot hide his poverty.

The Æon of Horus [and the Æon of Set, for that matter] will not enable silk purses to be made from sows’ ears. Yet superficial appearances may be quite deceptive, and an Adept seen through the eyes of a non-Adept may seem to be behaving erratically or irrationally. It is true that a beggar might not be able to hide his poverty, but a king in a good disguise would seem every bit as impoverished. In judging another, one must first determine one’s actual ability to render such a judgment, then the criteria according to which the judgment will be made.

59. Beware therefore! Love all, lest perchance is a King concealed! Say you so? Fool! If he be a King, thou canst not hurt him.

See the discussion of “love” in the comment to #I-57. In his 1920 Comment with reference to #II-59, Crowley further characterized it as a “right relationship” between two components of the Nuit-totality - not a blind attraction for superficial motives which, upon closer examination, might not prove to be mutually beneficial.

60. Therefore strike hard & low, and to hell with them, master!

Crowley is to be remorseless and uncompromising in his proclamation, definition, and application of the Word of the Æon. [He was.]

61. There is a light before thine eyes, o prophet, a light undesired, most desirable.
62. I am uplifted in thine heart; and the kisses of the stars rain hard upon thy body.
63. Thou art exhaust in the voluptuous fullness of the inspiration; the expiration is sweeter than death, more rapid and laughterful than a caress of Hell’s own worm.
64. Oh! thou art overcome: we are upon thee; our delight is all over thee: hail! hail: prophet of Nu! prophet of Had! prophet of Ra-Hoor-Khu! Now rejoice! now come in our splendour & rapture! Come in our passionate peace, & write sweet words for the Kings!
65. I am the Master: thou art the Holy Chosen One.

Crowley’s ecstatic experience of the transcription and realization of the Book of the Law, and a reaffirmation of his identity as Magus of the Æon of Horus.

66. Write, & find ecstasy in writing! Work, & be our bed in working! Thrill with the joy of life & death! Ah! thy death shall be lovely: whoso seeth it shall be glad. Thy death shall be the seal of the promise of our agelong love. Come! lift up thine heart & rejoice! We are one; we are none.
This is certainly the most tragic and poignant passage in the Book of the Law because of its prophetic irony. Crowley died frustrated and confused, tears in his eyes as he fought the coming of his final coma. [Cf. John Symonds, The Great Beast.] The “red gleam in his eyes”, I suspect, resisted the dissolution of his personality into Nuit. His death was indeed testimony to the promise of the “love” of Nuit [see #I-29/32]. By becoming one, he and Nuit ceased to exist as entities who could be contrasted to one another; they became indeterminate.

Consider also the paradox of the “magical death” of the self when becoming a Magister Templi (8)=[3] A'.A.'.. See “One Star in Sight” in Magick in Theory and Practice, and also the “Cry of the Thirteenth Æthyr” in Liber 418 (The Vision and The Voice).

67. Hold! Hold! Bear up in thy rapture; fall not in swoon of the excellent kisses!
68. Harder! Hold up thyself! Lift thine head! breathe not so deep - die!
69. Ah! Ah! What do I feel? Is the word exhausted?

Crowley’s ecstatic vision recommences and is likened to a sexual experience.

70. There is help & hope in other spells. Wisdom says: be strong! Then canst thou bear more joy. Be not animal; refine thy rapture! If thou drink, drink by the eight and ninety rules of art: if thou love, exceed by delicacy; and if thou do aught joyous, let there be subtlety therein!

This verse addresses an important aspect of Crowley’s philosophy - that pertaining to indulgence in sex and other sensual pleasures of the human body. Critics have accused Crowley of being a pervert, a lecher, and a disgusting sexual psychotic. Many admirers, on the other hand, have tried to imitate his lifestyle on a purely behavioral level - and have succeeded in earning precisely those titles.

Both groups fail to appreciate the artistry, the magical philosophy, and the sensitivity that were essential components of Crowley’s sensuality. Thus there is an almost surprising atmosphere of innocence in even the most “lurid” of Crowley’s erotica that is conspicuously lacking in the crude, genital/anal-obsessed antics of certain latter-day “Thelemites”. Yet another illustration of the point made in the comment to #II-56: that ritual without understanding is at least futile, and more often dangerous, degrading, and/or ridiculous.

At the other extreme are the compulsively cerebral schools of modern Thelemite thought. Such devotees are enthusiastic about Crowley the metaphysician, but quite uncomfortable about Crowley the sensualist. So they practice a quaintly “proper” version of his Magick: When the text of his Gnostic Mass calls for the priest to part the veil of the priestess with his lance, such practitioners dutifully brush aside a veil with a ceremonial spear!

71. But exceed! exceed!

Again this verse captures an extremely significant aspect of Crowley’s philosophy. As he observes in letter #33 of Magick Without Tears, the Aristotelian Golden Mean “is more valuable as the extremes which it summarizes are distant from each other”. The depth of this statement cannot be over-emphasized; in fact a deliberate exploration of extremes became the Formula of the Age of Satan, according to the Word Indulgence.

A procedure for ascertaining viable extremes from which to define a Golden Mean is too often neglected by students of Aristotle. The difficulty in arriving at any sort of “absolute” mean is more understandable when Aristotle’s motives are appreciated: He was trying to construct an alternative to his teacher Plato’s contention that absolute standards are not definable through purely logical methods. [Aristotle failed, and ultimately returned to Plato’s point of perspective.]

72. Strive ever to more! and if thou art truly mine - and doubt it not, an if thou art ever joyous! - death is the crown of all.

The objective universal order of Nuit and the non-natural, emotional will of HarWer - “death” and “life” in the rawest metaphysical sense - are the ultimate extremes. [The position of Set is not inaccurately approximated as a Golden Mean between these ordered and chaotic extremes; another of the magical secrets of the absolute standard of beauty symbolized by the phi-ratio of the Pentagram of Set.]

73. Ah! Ah! Death! Death! thou shalt long for death. Death is forbidden, o man, unto thee.

74. The length of thy longing shall be the strength of its glory. He that lives long & desires death much is ever the King among the Kings.

The Curse of a Magus, as discussed with reference to #II-53, necessarily subjects him to strong forces of frustration and depression. The new Word may imply values that are so alien to those of existing society that the Magus doubts his sanity and sense of proportion. All he has to combat these factors is a fundamental conviction that the Word he Utters is true.

Can those who are not Magi ever understand the intensity of such a realization? Yes - those who are Masters of the Temple and thus have attained the power of Understanding.

75. Aye! listen to the numbers & the words:

76. 4 6 3 8 A B K 2 4 A L G M O R 3 Y X 24 89 R P S T O V A L. What meaneth this, o prophet? Thou knowest not; nor shalt thou know ever. There cometh one to follow thee: he shall expound it. But remember, o chosen one, to be me; to follow the love of Nu in the star-lit heaven; to look forth upon men, to tell them this glad word.

In his 1920 Comment Crowley observed: “This passage following appears to be a Qabalistic test (on the regular pattern) of any person who may claim to be the Magical Heir of The Beast. Be ye well assured all that the solution, when it is found, will be unquestionable. It will be marked by the most sublime simplicity, and carry immediate conviction.”

Revelation 13:11.

77. O be thou proud and mighty among men!

78. Lift up thyself! for there is not like unto thee among men or among Gods! Lift up thyself, o my prophet, thy stature shall surpass the stars. They shall worship thy name, foursquare, mystic, wonderful, the number of the man; and the name of thy house 418.

Revelation 13:12.

79. The end of the hiding of Hadit; and blessing & worship to the prophet of the lovely Star!

I John 4:3.

The Third Chapter

1. Abrahadabra! the reward of Ra Hoor Khut.

Ra-Harakte was a form of HarWer adopted as an aspect of Ra by the priesthood of Ra at Heliopolis. [Cf. Budge, From Fetish to God in Ancient Egypt (London: Oxford, 1934, page #216).]

Crowley, whose familiarity with Egyptian philosophy was limited to the Osirian mythos, did not know that the cosmological systems of the Great Horus and Ra were originally independent of the Osirian movement and were only assimilated into it in corrupt forms during the final dynastic decadence. Hence Crowley remained confused as to the name and significance of “Ra Hoor Khu[i][t]” and the Third Chapter of the Book of the Law - and confessed as much in his 1920 Comment entry concerning this verse.

2. There is division hither homeward; there is a word not known. Spelling is defunct; all is not aught. Beware! Hold! Raise the spell of Ra-Hoor-Khuit.

Again Crowley missed the point of this verse - a simple admonition to correct the name - and conceptualization - of Ra-Harakte as indicated on the Stele of Revealing.

3. Now let it first be understood that I am a god of War and of Vengeance. I shall deal hardly with them.

4. Choose ye an island!

5. Fortify it!

6. Dung it about with enginery of war!

7. I will give you a war-engine.

8. With it ye shall smite the peoples and none shall stand before you.

Historically the two most significant events of the Æon of Horus were World War II and the development of the atomic bomb which ended that war. Nor can England’s critical importance during the Battle of Britain be denied.

9. Lurk! Withdraw! Upon them! this is the Law of the Battle of Conquest: thus shall my worship be about my secret house.

Were the values of the Æon of Horus reflected more by the Allies or more by the Axis? The latter championed elitism and “right by might”, whereas the former at least propagandistically upheld the banner of egalitarianism, socialism, and democracy.
Yet the police-state environments of Germany, Italy, and Japan also acted to stifle creativity on an individual basis, encouraging and rewarding conformity and automatic obedience to the very few who, through circumstances as much as genius or talent, had emerged in positions of power. While the defeat of the Axis might seem to have been a defeat for the values of the Æon of Horus, then, it may well be that, in a more subtle and long-term sense, the cause of elitism was better served by the victory of more openly-competitive political systems. It is still too early to venture a final evaluation in this regard.

10. Get the stele of revealing itself; set it in thy secret temple - and that temple is already aright disposed - & it shall be your Kiblah for ever. It shall not fade, but miraculous colour shall come back to it day after day. Close it in locked glass for a proof to the world.

11. This shall be your only proof. I forbid argument. Conquer! That is enough. I will make easy for you the abstraction from the ill-ordered house in the Victorious City. Thou shalt thyself convey it with worship, o prophet, though thou likest it not. Thou shalt have danger & trouble. Ra-Hoor-Khu is with thee. Worship me with fire & blood; worship me with swords & with spears. Let the woman be girt with a sword before me: let blood flow to my name. Trample down the Heathen: be upon them, o warrior, I will give you of their flesh to eat!

Kiblah: a point towards which prayer or devotions of a spiritual nature are directed.

Crowley evidently thought better of burglarizing the Boulak Museum to steal the stele. He settled for having a replica prepared for him. [The antiquities of the Boulak Museum have since been transferred to the Cairo Museum.]

Cairo (Al-Kahira) = [the city of] victory.

12. Sacrifice cattle, little and big: after a child.
13. But not now.
14. Ye shall see that hour, o blessed Beast, and thou the Scarlet Concubine of his desire!
15. Ye shall be sad thereof.

Crowley later identified these verses as a reference to the death of his firstborn daughter in 1906.

16. Deem not too eagerly to catch the promises; fear not to undergo the curses. Ye, even ye, know not this meaning all.
17. Fear not at all; fear neither men nor Fates, nor gods, nor anything. Money fear not, nor laughter of the folk folly, nor any other power in heaven or upon the earth or under the earth. Nu is your refuge as Hadit your light; and I am the strength, force, vigour, of your arms.
18. Mercy let be off: damn them who pity. Kill and torture; spare not; be upon them.
19. That stele they shall call the Abomination of Desolation; count well its name, & it shall be to you as 718.
After many failures, Crowley set down “stele” in Greek, which “to him” was 52. He then subtracted 52 from 718 and got 666.

20. Why? Because of the fall of Because, that he is not there again.

In his 1912 Comment Crowley indicated that he had mentally questioned #III-19. Ra-Harakte chides him for seeking a justification [see #II-27/33].

21. Set up my image in the East: thou shalt buy thee an image which I will show thee, especial, not unlike the one thou knowest. And it shall be suddenly easy for thee to do this.

Ra-Harakte (“Ra Hor of the Horizon”) was the aspect of the Sun at dawn, when of course it appears in the east.

22. The other images group around me to support me: let all be worshipped, for they shall cluster to exalt me. I am the visible object of worship; the others are secret; for the Beast & his Bride are they: and for the winners of the Ordeal X. What is this? Thou shalt know.

Crowley thought “the other images” to be those of Nuit and “Hadit”. In view of #III-21 it would seem more probable for them to be Ra’s other aspects: Aten (noon), Atum (sunset), and Xepera (the Sun at night). Nevertheless [in Liber Resh vel Helios] Crowley did institute periodic devotions to these other aspects of Ra.

The significance of Xepera would indeed remain a secret until the year X of the Æon of Set, at which time it would indeed be revealed to the “winners” of that particular ordeal.

23. For perfume mix meal & honey & thick leavings of red wine: then oil of Abramelin and olive oil, and afterwards soften & smooth down with rich fresh blood.

Oil of Abramelin [from The Sacred Magic of Abra=Melin the Mage]: Eight parts of oil of cinnamon, four of oil of myrrh, two of oil of galangal, seven of olive oil.

24. The best blood is of the moon, monthly: then the fresh blood of a child, or dropping from the host of heaven: then of enemies; then of the priest or of the worshippers: last of some beast, no matter what.

25. This burn: of this make cakes & eat unto me. This hath also another use; let it be laid before me, and kept thick with perfume of your orison: it shall become full of beetles as it were and creeping things sacred to me.

26. These slay, naming your enemies; & they shall fall before you.

27. Also these shall breed lust & power of lust in you at the eating thereof.

28. Also ye shall be strong in war.

29. Moreover, be they long kept, it is better; for they swell with my force. All before me.

30. My altar is of open brass work: burn thereon in silver or gold!

31. There cometh a rich man from the West who shall pour his gold upon thee.
While Crowley did not specify anyone in particular as the object of this verse, in his later life he received crucial help from one American disciple in particular: Karl Germer, who became Outer Head (chief international executive) of the O.T.O. following Crowley’s death.

32. From gold forge steel.
33. Be ready to fly or to smite.
34. But your holy place shall be untouched throughout the centuries: though with fire and sword it be burnt down & shattered, yet an invisible house there standeth, and shall stand until the fall of the Great Equinox; when Hrumachis shall arise and the double-wanded one assume my throne and place. Another prophet shall arise, and bring fresh fever from the skies; another woman shall awake the lust & worship of the Snake; another soul of god and beast shall mingle in the globed priest; another sacrifice shall stain the tomb; another king shall reign; and blessing no longer be poured to the Hawk-headed mystical Lord!

Crowley felt the “holy place” to be Boleskine House, his one-time estate on the shore of Loch Ness in Scotland. Boleskine has remained standing to date, but has become a celebrity focal point for contemporary Crowleyphiles. If the physical Boleskine is thus reduced to a “haunted house” spectacle, the mystical Boleskine remains an untouched image in the minds of those initiates who understand and appreciate its unique role in the development of its Beastly “Laird”.

Harmakhis was one of the many forms of Xepera as a symbol of regeneration, transformation, and immortality. Harmakhis was portrayed in many shapes, the most famous being that of the Great Sphinx at Giza.

The “double-wanded one” is Set, whose symbols in ancient Egypt were the $D'm$ ($Tcham$) and $w3s$ sceptres. Both sceptres were Set-headed, but the $w3s$ was distinguished by a spiral shaft and the absence of a decorative base (Set’s forked tail on the $D'm$ sceptre). On the Stele of Revealing, Ra Harakte holds a $D'm$ sceptre. The Setian sceptres signified magical power, as opposed to the crook & flail sceptres symbolizing the pharaoh’s roles as shepherd and taskmaster of the Egyptian nation.

“Fresh fever from the skies”: the Book of Coming Forth by Night.

“Another woman”: Lilith Aquino, the Serpent One: Maga V° of the Temple of Set and One of the Nine.

“The globed priest” and “another sacrifice”: Anton Szandor LaVey [who shaved his head to signify his office as High Priest of the Church of Satan], and the destruction of the Church of Satan as precondition for the manifestation of the Æon of Set.

“Another king”: Ra-en-Set $suten net$.

35. The half of the word of Heru-ra-ha, called Hoor-pa-kraat and Ra-Hoor-Khuit.

The first half of “Heru-ra-ha” reveals the name of Her-Ur (HarWer), the Great Horus, of whom both Harpokrates (the Osirian Horus “the Younger”) and Ra-Harakte [see #III-1] are corruptions.

36. Then said the prophet unto the God:
37. I adore thee in the song -
I am the Lord of Thebes, and I
The inspired forth-speaker of Mentu;
   For me unveils the veiled sky,
The self-slain Ankh-af-na-khonsu
   Whose words are truth, I invoke, I greet Thy presence, O Ra-Hoor-Khuit!
Unity uttermost showed!
I adore the might of Thy breath,
   Supreme and terrible God,
Who makest the gods and death
   To tremble before Thee:
I, I adore thee!

Appear on the throne of Ra!

Open the ways of the Khu!
   Lighten the ways of the Ka!
The ways of the Khabs run through
   To stir me or still me!
Aum! let it fill me!

The sacred bull Mentu was the god of the city of Ani, capital of the IV Uast (Thebes) Nome of Upper Egypt [see #II-49]. Ankh-f-n-Khonsu is the priest commemorated by the Stele of Revealing. His name means: “[He whose] Life [is] in Khonsu (the Moon-god of Thebes and son of Amon and Mut)”. Crowley believed himself to be a reincarnation of this priest.

38. So that thy light is in me & its red flame is as a sword in my hand to push thy order. There is a secret door that I shall make to establish thy way in all the quarters (these are the adorations, as thou hast written), as it is said,

The light is mine; its rays consume
Me: I have made a secret door
   Into the House of Ra and Tum,
Of Khephra and of Ahathoor.
   I am thy Theban, O Mentu,
The prophet Ankh-af-na-khonsu!
By Bes-na-Maut my breast I beat;
By wise T’a-Nech I weave my spell.
   Show thy star-splendour, O Nuit!
Bid me within thine House to dwell,
   O winged snake of light, Hadit!
Abide with me, Ra-Hoor-Khuit.

#III-37 and #III-38 contain extracts of poems Crowley had written prior to the Cairo Working [of the Book of the Law]. These poems (titled paraphrases of the inscriptions on the front and back of the Stele of Revealing) are contained in the 1936 edition of Crowley’s Equinox of the Gods. [Therein the final line of the extract in #III-37 reads: “Aum! let it kill me!”]
39. All this and a book to say how thou didst come hither and a reproduction of this ink and paper for ever - for in it is the word secret & not only in the English - and thy comment upon this the Book of the Law shall be printed beautifully in red ink and black upon beautiful paper made by hand; and to each man and woman that thou meetest, were it but to dine or drink at them, it is the Law to give. Then they shall chance to abide in this bliss or no; it is no odds. Do this quickly!

The secrets of the Book of the Law are to be found through both the English and the Egyptian hieroglyphic languages.

40. But the work of the comment? That is easy; and Hadit burning in thy heart shall make swift and secure thy pen.

In both his 1912 and 1920 Comments Crowley indicated dissatisfaction with the results of his commentaries. He might have fared better had he reconsidered #II-55, though some of the contents of the Book of the Law would remain enigmatic until the advent of the Æon of Set.

41. Establish at thy Kaaba a clerk-house; all must be done well and with business way.

42. The ordeals thou shalt oversee thyself, save only the blind ones. Refuse none, but thou shalt know & destroy the traitors. I am Ra-Hoor-Khuit; and I am powerful to protect my servant. Success is thy proof: argue not; convert not; talk not overmuch. Them that seek to entrap thee, to overthrow thee, them attack without pity or quarter & destroy them utterly. Swift as a trodden serpent turn and strike! Be thou yet deadlier than he! Drag down their souls to awful torment: laugh at their fear: spit upon them!

See #I-32/38. Many who thought to exploit Crowley got the worst of the encounter, and he shed few tears over them. In fact his contempt to those whom he had discarded is at least partly responsible for the often-vicious criticism he received - and continues to receive - at their hands.

43. Let the Scarlet Woman beware! If pity and compassion and tenderness visit her heart; if she leave my work to toy with old sweetnesses then shall my vengeance be known. I will slay me her child: I will alienate her heart: I will cast her out from men; as a shrinking and depised harlot she shall crawl through dusk wet streets, and die cold and an-hungered.

The fate of Crowley’s Scarlet Women was not a pleasant one. After Rose Crowley’s daughter died, she became an alcoholic and was eventually committed to a sanitarium. Crowley’s daughter by Leah Hirsig, the most famous Scarlet Woman, died at the Abbey of Thelema as an infant, and the shock caused Leah to miscarry a second child. Eventually she too was abandoned by Crowley under the bitterest of circumstances.
44. But let her raise herself in pride. Let her follow me in my way. Let he work the work of wickedness. Let her kill her heart. Let her be loud and adulterous; let her be covered with jewels, and rich garments, and let her be shameless before all men!

45. Then will I lift her to pinnacles of power: then will I breed from her a child mightier than all the kings of the earth. I will fill her with joy: with my force shall she see & strike at the worship of Nu; she shall achieve Hadit.

None of the Scarlet Women was able to sustain #III-44 and thus attain #III-45.

46. I am the warrior Lord of the Forties: the Eighties cower before me, & are abased. I will bring you to victory & joy: I will be at your arms in battle & ye shall delight to slay. Success is your proof; courage is your armour; go on, go on, in my strength & ye shall turn not back for any.

This is popularly [by Crowleyphiles] considered to be a validation of the Book of the Law’s prophetic power [as a prediction of World War II] and a further prediction of war in the 1980s. Since there are local or regional wars ongoing constantly on some part of the planet, whether or not the “eighties” prediction is considered to be validated is simply a question of how extensive a war must be for Ra-Harakte to take note of it. Alternately the 1980s were in fact a decade of international paranoia concerning and social persecution of occultism generally.

47. This book shall be translated into all tongues: but always with the original in the writing of the Beast; for in the chance shape of the letters and their position to one another: in these are mysteries that no Beast shall divine. Let him not seek to try: but one cometh after him, whence I say not, who shall discover the Key of it all. Then this line drawn is a key; then this circle squared in its failure is a key also. And Abrahadabra. It shall be his child & that strangely. Let him not seek after this; for thereby alone can he fall from it.

See #I-54, #II-75/76, #III-22, and the Book of Coming Forth by Night.

Although #I-56, #II-76, and #III-47 explicitly state that Crowley himself would never know the mysteries of the manuscript, the one who would expound them, or the initiatory system from which he would come, Crowley nonetheless took it upon himself to recognize Charles Stansfeld Jones of Vancouver as the “one”. Jones could not interpret the #II-76 passage, but he did announce that “AL/LA” constituted the “master key” to the Book of the Law. Since Crowley was already well aware of the reversible qualities of this term in the Hebrew tongue [see comment to #II-15], his enthusiasm for Jones’ announcement seems unjustified - nor did Jones’ “master key” unlock anything at all concerning the Book of the Law.

What neither Crowley nor Jones realized was that “AL” in Hebrew is merely a corruption of an elder Egyptian hieroglyphic term which may be pronounced in three ways: “Al”, “Ar”, or “Har”. This term translates to “the Divine Son” and specifically identifies Har or Hor, the Great Horus. [-ur or Wer is a suffix meaning “great”.] In Egyptian mythology both Set and Horus (HarWer) were identified as children of Nuit, but the actual derivation of the two neteru from Nuit is explained more precisely in the Book of Coming Forth by Night. So, ironically enough, “AL” is a sort of master key to the Book of the Law, identifying it as a creation of Horus. A full translation of its name (Liber AL vel Legis) would be: The Book of the Law of Horus.

As for Jones, he suffered the fate predicted in #II-56. In 1926-27 he converted briefly to Catholicism, then disavowed the Book of the Law and proceeded to announce the new æon to be that of Maat. Crowley expelled him from the A.'.A.'..

48. Now this mystery of the letters is done, and I want to go on to the holier place.
49. I am in a secret fourfold word, the blasphemy against all gods of men.

Crowley felt this “word” to be the four words “Do what thou wilt”, on the presumption that it would make each person his own god.

50. Curse them! Curse them! Curse them!
51. With my Hawk’s head I peck at the eyes of Jesus as he hangs upon the cross.
52. I flap my wings in the face of Mohamed and blind him.
53. With my claws I tear out the flesh of the Indian and the Buddhist, Mongol and Din.
54. Bahlasti! Ompehda! I spit on your crapulous creeds.
55. Let Mary inviolate be torn upon wheels: for her sake let all chaste women be utterly despised among you.
56. Also for beauty’s sake and love’s.
57. Despise also all cowards; professional soldiers who dare not fight, but play: all fools despise.
58. But the keen and the proud, the royal and the lofty; ye are brothers!
59. As brothers fight ye.
60. There is no law beyond Do what thou wilt.
61. There is an end of the word of the God enthroned in Ra’s seat, lightening the girders of the soul.
62. To Me do ye reverence; to me come ye through tribulation of ordeal, which is bliss.
63. The fool readeth this Book of the Law, and its comment & he understandeth it not.

Moreover the fool readeth this comment & he understandeth it not.

64. Let him come through the first ordeal & it will be to him as silver.
65. Through the second, gold.
66. Through the third, stones of precious water.
67. Through the fourth, ultimate sparks of the intimate fire.

The initiatory history of mankind since the destruction of the ancient priesthoods of Egypt has passed through an era of silver (early secret societies and medieval witchcraft), gold (the G.’D.’. and A.’.A.’.), stones of precious water (the Order of the Trapezoid and Church of Satan), and ultimate sparks of the intimate fire (the Temple of Set).
68. Yet to all it shall seem beautiful. Its enemies who say not so, are mere liars.

The Book of the Law exudes an aura of both beauty and authenticity that is not simply a function of its included statements. It too is a Form which cannot be defined by purely logical methods. It must be apprehended through Nœsis.

69. There is success.

And thus is the Book of the Law Understood and Revealed.

70. I am the Hawk-headed Lord of Silence & of Strength; my nemyss shrouds the night-blue sky.

71. Hail! ye twin warriors about the pillars of the world! for your time is nigh at hand.

See the Book of Coming Forth by Night concerning the primal bound of Samtaui between Set and the original Horus.

72. I am the Lord of the Double Wand of Power: the wand of the force of Coph - but my left hand is empty, for I have crushed an Universe & nought remains.

Again the Crowley manuscript’s value is demonstrated. Crowley originally wrote “Coph”. Rose later scratched it out and penned “Coph Nia” in its place, and it is this corruption which appears in printed texts. “Coph”, which Crowley recalled hearing only approximately, would make sense as one of the hieroglyphic variants of Xeper (pronounced “kheffer” with the vowels assumed). Perhaps it is significant that the Magus of the Æon of Horus could not “hear” the Word of the Æon of Set.

73. Paste the sheets from right to left and from top to bottom: then behold!

Crowley experimented with “chain”-pasting but noticed nothing remarkable. [I read this verse as a simple instruction to bind the manuscript of the Book of the Law as a book.]

74. There is a splendour in my name hidden and glorious, as the sun of midnight is ever the son.

The “sun of midnight”: Xepera.
The “splendour in my name hidden and glorious”: Set, True Origin of Liber AL, who would remain hidden until the North Solstice of X.

75. The ending of the words is the Word Abrahadabra.

The Book of the Law is Written and Concealed.
Aum. Ha.
Symbols do not represent the thing itself, the actual phenomenon. It would also be wrong to think that they are purely and simply schematic formulæ. In operational research the model is not a small-scale or simplified model of a known object; it is a possible approach to, or means of getting to know this object. And it is outside reality, in the mathematical universe.

The next requirement is that the analogical machine constructed on this model should enter into an electronic trance so that it can give practical answers. This is why all the usual occultist explanations of symbols are useless. They look upon symbols as if they were schemas that can be interpreted by intelligence at its normal level and so lead immediately to an apprehension of reality. For centuries they have been treating in this way the St. Andrew’s cross, the swastika, and the star of Solomon, but have contributed nothing to a study of the profound structure of the universe.

Einstein, with his sublime intelligence, was able, in a flash of illumination, to catch a glimpse of the space/time relationship, but without completely understanding or integrating it into his scheme of things. To communicate his discovery at an intelligible level, and to help him recapture his own illuminating vision, he drew the sign \( \lambda \) representing the trihedral angle.

This sign is not a schema of reality and means nothing to the mass of mankind. It is a signal, a rallying cry to all workers in the field of mathematical physics. And yet all the progress made in this field by the greatest intellects will only succeed in discovering what this trihedral symbol evokes, but will not be able to penetrate the universe where the law of which this symbol is an expression actually operates. At least, at the end of this forward march, we shall know that this other universe exists.\(^{170}\)

The inverse pentagram against a circular field is known as the Pentagram of Set. This insignia constitutes the Seal of the Temple of Set, and it is also used to identify the six magical degrees of initiatory membership.

The pentagram is one of the most ancient symbols known to mankind, dating from prehistory.\textsuperscript{171} \textsuperscript{172} It is significant mathematically in that it precisely embodies the ratio $\phi$ (\textit{phi}), as the ratio between any longer and shorter line section within the pentagram.\textsuperscript{173} \textsuperscript{174}

In ancient Egypt $\phi$ was known as the Sacred Cut. It was employed in all important construction and artwork. For instance, one-half the base of the Great Pyramid divided

\textsuperscript{171} Don Webb IV°: “William Arnett’s
_The Predynastic Origin of Egyptian Hieroglyphs_ (1982) shows that the pentagram existed side-by-side with the five-line star, which became common use in the protodynastic Naquada region (a Setian site). Five-pointed stars were found at Gerza and Tarkhan, all Upper or Middle Egyptian protodynastic sites. The Tarkhan has a five-pointed star in a circle attached to a boat - one of the first signs of the journey through the \textit{Tuat}. Arnett dates all of these to 3500 BCE, but I suspect for various reasons that they’re about a thousand years earlier.”

At the Set-XIV Conclave in London I was asked if the pentagram were definitely known and used in ancient Egypt. I could do no better at the time than state that Pythagoras had spent 22 years there and then started up his Brotherhood in Magna Græcia with the pentagram as its supreme secret and badge of recognition.

Now I have archaeological data. After much soul- and budget-searching, I obtained one of Guy Brunton’s three volumes on the Qau and Badari excavations sponsored by the British Museum. Flipping through the volume, I found a half-page of Old Kingdom pot marks that included two definite and unmistakable pentagrams - one cut into the clay before firing by the potter, one scratched onto the pot by its owner. The bread pot with the potter-cut pentagram was thought to be from the IV Dynasty. Brunton remarks on “the noteworthy pentagram used in quite different ways and at different periods” in speaking of these pot marks.

After that I decided to go back to Brunton’s Matmar expedition notes and found a crude pentagram among the pot marks documented there, again on a pot thought to date to the Old Kingdom.

I then consulted Flinders Petrie’s Tanis expedition notes published nearly forty years earlier. There I found among the sketches of items from Defenneh near Tanis a pentagram marked on a sealed vessel dated to the XXVI Dynasty.

So here are instances of the pentagram used to mark vessels in both Upper and Lower Egypt, in both early and late dynastic times. In all these cases the pentagram does not appear to be an ornament or decorative element; it stands by itself, without apparent reference to any other mark or inscription. Since I have only three expedition reports in my possession, and all three included an instance of a pentagram cut or scratched into pottery, it seems evident that the pentagram was known in great antiquity. It was found not on stelae or tomb paintings, but on pottery found in graves, suggesting that the symbol predates the strict artistic canons and religious formulæ governing the work of scribes and artists in pharaonic Egypt - or arises from some tradition outside them.

What has been said so far concerns figures which are unmistakably pentagrams. The five-pointed star-in its simplest form a five-rayed asterisk - is found everywhere in Egyptian hieroglyphic inscriptions and art. One never finds six-pointed stars or hexagrams. A seven-pointed star is the symbol of Seshet, who appears to be a female \textit{neter} of records and site plans. She is always portrayed at the founding of new temples and monuments, either with reed-pen and tablet in hand or assisting the king in driving the first peg that will be used to stretch cords during the foundation’s layout. [Using the stars of the Thigh to orient the foundation is frequently mentioned in the text for these scenes.]

\textsuperscript{173} The concept and significance of $\phi$ may be studied at length in H.E. Huntley’s \textit{The Divine Proportion} (#12D), as well as in related works in Reading List Category #12. As of this writing there is also an excellent website devoted to $\phi$ at: http://www.geocities.com/jyce3/

\sin 36^\circ
into the apothem equals $\phi$ accurate to 4 significant figures.\textsuperscript{175} \textsuperscript{176}

The Greeks too used $\phi$ in art and architecture, naming it the Golden Mean or Golden Section.\textsuperscript{177} A "Golden Rectangle", where the $\phi$ ratio is equal to the relationship between the longer and shorter dimensions, appears in the works of artists Leonardo da Vinci, Albrecht Dürer, and George Seurat. In 1876 Gustav Fechner, a German psychiatrist, conducted experiments which concluded that the vast majority of people "preferred" rectangles in this shape.

$\phi$ also appears in nature. Most spiral growth in nature, notably phyllotaxis (the growth of leaves and flowers), follows the Fibonacci series, where each number in the series is equal to the sum of the two preceding numbers, ie: 1, 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 13, 21, 34... As this series continues, the relationship between successive numbers approaches $\phi$.\textsuperscript{178}

The Sacred Cut (or Golden Section) divides a line into unequal sections where the smaller is to the larger as the larger is to the whole. Similarly, a Golden Rectangle is one which, when divided into a square and smaller rectangle, the smaller rectangle is also a Golden Rectangle. Or, algebraically, $\phi^2=\phi+1$.\textsuperscript{179}

This, then, is the "secret" of the pentagram - a fact overlooked completely by most occult "authorities" of history. All "magic pentangles" - generally embellished with Cabalistic graffiti of one sort or another - amount to an unconscious effort to use the innate power of the pentagram even though not recognizing it for what it actually is. The pentagram as used by the Temple of Set is retained in its pure form, so that the beauty of $\phi$ is undiluted and undefiled.\textsuperscript{180}

It is portrayed inverse to imply change and movement in place of stasis and rest, \textsuperscript{175} I am particularly grateful to Setian Rodney Scott of Australia for his meticulous corrections and refinements to the $\phi$-mathematics summarized in this section, as well as in the previous notes concerning it by other Setians.

\textsuperscript{176} Assuming that the base to be 440 cubits and the apothem 356 cubits, then the apothem divided by 1/2 the base yields:

\textsuperscript{177} This entire idea seems to have died with the fall of ancient Greek civilization; it was not rediscovered until the 16th century, when Lucas Picioli published \textit{Divina proportione} with illustrations by Leonardo da Vinci.

\textsuperscript{178} The Fibonacci series was named after mathematician Leonardo Pisano Fibonacci. The 23rd number of this series is 28,657, the 24th; 46,368;

\frac{46,368}{28,657} = 1.618039882053

\textsuperscript{179} Some further properties of $\phi$:

$1 + \phi = \phi^2; \phi + \phi^2 = \phi^3; \phi^2 + \phi^3 = \phi^4; \text{ad infinitum.}$

$\phi = (\sec 72)/2 = (\csc 18)/2 = 1/(2 \cos 72) = 1/(2 \sin 18) = 2 \sin 54 = 2 \cos 36 = 2/(\csc 54) = 2/(\sec 36)$

\textsuperscript{180} \textit{The Book of Coming Forth by Night}. The Church of Satan again displayed the pentagram inverse, but only together with the other symbols which comprise the Sigil of Baphomet. The Moorish name referred to by Set is obviously the name “Baphomet”. “Khar” is the name of the Egyptian XVI Nome, whose capital was Ba-neb-tett, or Mendes, and whose god-figure was the famous Goat of Mendes, notorious during the Ptolemaic period of decadence as a symbol of sensuality.
and also to proclaim the evolutionary dialectic of thesis contrasted with antithesis to produce synthesis - instead of a foreordained and unavoidable absolute standard.

In occult tradition the inverse pentagram has also symbolized Black Magic or Satanism as opposed to the White Magic of Cabalists and polytheists, symbolized by an obverse pentagram.

The Pentagram of Set is enclosed in a perfect circle (a function of π), representing the mathematical order of the objective universe. The pentagram does not touch the circle, however, signifying that the Powers of Darkness are not derived from or dependent upon that order.

Silver is the traditional color of the night, as gold is of the day. In recognition of the role of Set as Prince of Darkness and counterpart to the [Horus] light of day, the Temple of Set casts the pentagram in silver. Silver has also signified initiatory and exclusive religious systems as opposed to open, mass-oriented ones.

The background color of each degree medallion possesses distinct significance. The color white (I°) represents the newfound freedom of the mind from myths, misconceptions, and doctrines resulting from fear and superstition.

An Adept II° wears the pentagram against red. Of all the gods of ancient Egypt, Set alone was portrayed in red, and red has also been the traditional color of life-oriented religions; the Blood is the Life.

Those who are Elect to the Priesthood of Set III° wear the Pentagram of Set against black, symbolizing the individual’s consecration by the Prince of Darkness.

A Master of the Temple IV° wears the Pentagram of Set against blue, the traditional color of the most advanced and accomplished initiates (such as the Philosopher-Kings of Plato’s Republic or the Priest-Kings of Atlantis).

A Magus V° wears the Pentagram of Set against purple, the traditional color of royalty, because he is distinguished from the Masters of the Temple by being Tasked by the Prince of Darkness with the Utterance of a Word.

An Ipsissimus VI° wears the Pentagram of Set against gold. The symbolism of this color is known to the Masters of the Temple.

An Honorary Setian (a non-Initiate of the Temple so designated by virtue of distinguished service to the Temple or Æon of Set) wears the Pentagram of Set against green, symbolizing the natural universe in which the recipient dwells. In this case the Pentagram of Set appears in gold, symbolizing the non-initiatory character of this honor.

The full-size (2” diameter) medallion of the Temple of Set may be worn with formal, semi-formal, or casual attire, but never with such garb as to reflect ill upon its dignity. Under ceremonial circumstances Initiates of degrees I°-III° wear it together with a black robe trimmed in the individual’s degree-color (I°=white, II°=red, III°=silver). Initiates of degrees IV°-VI° wear either robes of the appropriate degree color or black robes trimmed in the individual’s degree-color. III°+ Initiates may wear a black clerical collar.
I. Name of this corporation shall be Temple of Set.

II. The purposes for which this corporation is formed are:

(a) The specific and primary purposes are to operate an organization for religious purposes.

(b) The general purposes and powers are to have and to exercise all rights and powers conferred on non-profit corporations on the laws of California, including the power to contract, rent, buy or sell personal or real property; provided, however, this corporation shall not, except to an insubstantial degree, engage in any activities or exercise any power that are not in furtherance of the primary purposes of this corporation.

(c) No substantial part of the activities of this corporation shall consist of carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting to influence legislation, and the corporation shall not participate or intervene in any political campaign (including the publishing or distribution of statements) on behalf of any candidate for public office.

III. This corporation is organized pursuant to the General Non-Profit Corporation Law of the State of California and does not contemplate the gain or profit to the members thereof and is organized for non-profit purposes.

IV. The principal office for the transaction of this business of this corporation is located in the County of Santa Barbara, State of California.

Article 1. Offices

Section 1.01. Principal Office

The principal office for the transaction of the business of this corporation is located in the City and County of San Francisco, California, United States of America.

Section 1.02. Other Offices

The corporation may also have offices at such other places, within or without the State of California where it is qualified to do business, as its business may require and as the High Priest may from time to time designate.

Article 2. Affiliation

Section 2.01. Temple/Corporate Affiliation

The Temple of Set, both as a religious organization and as a corporation, shall not be a member of, or affiliated with any other organization or institution.

Section 2.02. Initiate Affiliation

SubSection 2.02.1. Religious

An individual Initiate of the Temple of Set may be a member of, or affiliated with another primarily religious organization or institution, or may have a religious affiliation to an otherwise secular organization or institution, as determined by the High Priest, during I° Initiate status only.

SubSection 2.02.2. Initiatory

An individual Initiate of the Temple of Set may be a member of, or affiliated with another initiatory organization or institution as long as, in the evaluation of any IV°+ Initiate, such membership does not conflict with or take precedence over membership in the Temple of Set.
Article 3. Membership

Section 3.01. Initiatory

There shall be six degrees of initiatory membership in the Temple of Set: Setian I°, Adept II°, Priest or Priestess of Set III°, Magister or Magistra Templi IV°, Magus or Maga V°, and Ipsissimus or Ipsissima VI°.

Section 3.02. Setian I°

SubSection 3.02.1. Admission

Any person may become a Setian I° who has attained the age of eighteen (18) years, is in sympathy with the purposes of the Temple of Set, has indicated an interest in furthering its program, has contributed to the Temple of Set the admission fee, has not been a previous member of the Temple, and is admitted to membership by a III°+ Initiate, such admission be communicated in writing to the Executive Director within ten days. Applicants with previous membership are discussed in Section 3.14.

SubSection 3.02.2. II° Time-Limit

Initial membership as a Setian I° is for a maximum of two years. If by the end of that period the individual has not attained II° Recognition, affiliation with the Temple shall be automatically terminated. Exceptions to this two-year I° limitation may be granted by any III°+ Initiate for a maximum of six additional months. Only the High Priest may grant additional extensions beyond this six-month period.

SubSection 3.02.3. Expulsion

A Setian I° may be expelled from the Temple of Set by a III°+ Initiate. Such a decision must be communicated in writing to the High Priest and to the Executive Director within ten days following the decision.

Section 3.03. Adept II°

SubSection 3.03.1. Recognition

A Setian may be Recognized to Adept II° if a III°+ Initiate deems that person deserving of the II°. Such a Recognition must be communicated in writing to the Executive Director within thirty days after it is proclaimed, and this communication must be signed by the III°+ Initiate who has proclaimed the Recognition.
SubSection 3.03.2. Downgrade/Expulsion

An Adept II° may be downgraded in degree and/or expelled from the Temple of Set by a III°+ Initiate. Such a decision must be communicated in writing to the High Priest and to the Executive Director within ten days following the decision.

SubSection 3.03.3. ReRecognition

In the case of a return to the I° either voluntarily or involuntarily, the person in question shall be expelled from the Temple at the end of one year if II° Recognition is not reattained by that time.

Section 3.04. Priest/Priestess of Set III°

SubSection 3.04.1. Recognition

An Adept II° may be Recognized to Priest or Priestess of Set III° if a IV°+ Initiate deems that person Elect to the III°. A minimum of a thirty-day advance notice of the proposed Recognition must be communicated to all III°+ Initiates of the Temple by the individual proposing the Recognition. Following the end of the thirty-day advance notice period, the Recognition must be communicated in writing to the High Priest and the Executive Director within fifteen days of the formal Recognition. These communications must be signed by the IV°+ Initiate who has proclaimed the Recognition, and at least two other IV°+ Initiates must concur in writing and so notify the High Priest and Executive Director.

SubSection 3.04.2. Corporate Voting Membership

Only III°+ Initiates shall be considered voting members of the Temple of Set, Inc. for purposes of amending these By-Laws.

SubSection 3.04.3. Expulsion

A Priest or Priestess of Set III° may not be involuntarily downgraded in degree. The individual may be expelled from the Temple of Set by decision of the High Priest. Such a decision must be communicated in writing to the Executive Director and to all voting Councillors within fifteen days following that decision, and at least five voting Councillors must indicate their approval of the decision in writing to the High Priest and Executive Director. This section may not be invoked to expel an incumbent Councillor nor any incumbent officer named within these By-Laws.
Section 3.05. Magister/Magistra Templi IV°

SubSection 3.05.1. Recognition

A Priest or Priestess of Set III° may be Recognized to Magister or Magistra Templi IV° by decision of the High Priest. A minimum of a thirty-day advance notice of the proposed Recognition must be communicated to all IV°+ Initiates of the Temple by the High Priest. Following the end of the thirty-day advance notice period, the Recognition must be communicated in writing to the Executive Director and to all voting Councillors, and at least five voting Councillors must indicate their approval of the decision in writing to the High Priest and to the Executive Director.

SubSection 3.05.2. Expulsion

A Magister or Magistra Templi IV° may not be involuntarily downgraded in degree. The individual may be expelled from the Temple of Set by decision of the High Priest. Such a decision must be communicated in writing to the Executive Director and to all voting Councillors within fifteen days following that decision, and at least six voting Councillors must indicate their approval of the decision in writing to the High Priest and Executive Director. This section may not be invoked to expel an incumbent Councillor nor any incumbent officer named within these By-Laws.

Section 3.06. Magus/Maga V°

SubSection 3.06.1. Recognition

A Magister or Magistra Templi IV° may be Recognized to Magus or Maga V° by decision of the High Priest. A minimum of a thirty-day advance notice of the proposed Recognition must be communicated to all IV°+ Initiates of the Temple by the High Priest. Following the end of the thirty-day advance notice period, the Recognition must be communicated in writing to the Chairman of the Council and the Executive Director, and all nine voting Councillors must indicate their approval of the decision in writing to the High Priest and to the Executive Director.

SubSection 3.06.2. Expulsion

A Magus or Maga V° may not be involuntarily downgraded in degree. The individual may be expelled from the Temple of Set by decision of the High Priest. Such a decision must be communicated in writing to the Executive Director and to all voting Councillors within fifteen days following that decision, and at least seven voting Councillors must indicate their approval of the decision in writing to the High Priest and Executive Director. This section may not be invoked to expel an incumbent Councillor nor any incumbent officer named within these By-Laws.
Section 3.07. Ipsissimus/Ipsissima VI°

SubSection 3.07.1. Recognition

A Magus or Maga V° may be Recognized to Ipsissimus or Ipsissima VI° by decision of the individual Magus or Maga in question. This decision must be communicated to the High Priest, the Chairman of the Council, and the Executive Director, and at least five voting Councillors must indicate their approval of the decision in writing to the High Priest and to the Executive Director.

SubSection 3.07.2. Expulsion

An Ipsissimus or Ipsissima VI° may not be involuntarily downgraded in degree. The individual may be expelled from the Temple of Set by decision of the High Priest. Such a decision must be communicated in writing to the Executive Director and to all voting Councillors within fifteen days following that decision, and at least eight voting Councillors must indicate their approval of the decision in writing to the High Priest and Executive Director. This section may not be invoked to expel an incumbent Councillor nor any incumbent officer named within these By-Laws.

Section 3.08. Voluntary Lower Degree Resumption

An Initiate of any initiatory (II°-VI°) degree may voluntarily return to any lower degree by notifying the Executive Director in writing.

Section 3.09. Honorary Setian

SubSection 3.09.1. Conferral

Non-initiatory membership as an Honorary Setian may be conferred by any IV°+ Initiate. Such conferral must be communicated to the High Priest and the Executive Director within ten days. Honorary Setians pay no admission fee or annual dues for life.

SubSection 3.09.2. Expulsion

An Honorary Setian may be expelled from the Temple of Set by decision of the High Priest. Such a decision must be communicated in writing to the Executive Director and to all voting Councillors within ten days following that decision, and at least five voting Councillors must indicate their approval of the decision in writing to the High Priest and Executive Director.
Section 3.10. Membership Records Access

Names, addresses, and all other information kept in the membership database files of all members of the Temple of Set shall be made available to any III°+ upon demand. Any III°+ may not reveal any information so gained outside the Priesthood of Set III²+ without prior written authorization from a IV°+ Initiate.

Section 3.11. Admission Fees and Annual Dues

SubSection 3.11.1. Admission/Dues Determination

The admission fee and the annual dues amount are each set by the High Priest. These may not be changed more than once in a twelve-month period. To change them, the High Priest must notify the Council of Nine and receive written approval from at least five voting Councillors.

SubSection 3.11.2. Annual Dues

To maintain membership, each Initiate of the Temple of Set must annually pay such dues, to be equal for all Initiates. A postage surcharge of up to 10% of the annual dues may also be charged for overseas Initiates, as determined by the Treasurer and approved by the High Priest.

SubSection 3.11.3. Non-Renewal Membership Cancellation

The Executive Director may cancel the membership of any Initiate who fails to pay his dues in accordance with SubSection 3.11.2 within sixty days following the dues deadline as preannounced in the Scroll of Set. Extensions to this dues deadline for up to sixty days may be granted by the High Priest, Treasurer, Executive Director, or Chairman of the Council, provided written notice of such extension is sent to the Executive Director and High Priest. Longer extensions may be granted by the High Priest or the Chairman of the Council only with the approval in writing of at least five voting Councillors.

Section 3.12. Resignation

Any Initiate or Honorary Setian of the Temple of Set may withdraw from the Temple by so notifying any III°+ Initiate in writing. The Executive Director may accept written notice concerning the resignation of a I° or II° Initiate from any III°+ as if it were sent by the individual resigning.

Section 3.13. Pre-Incorporation Initiatory Degrees

Determination of degrees of members received prior to the incorporation of the Temple of Set shall be made by the High Priest and communicated in writing to the Executive Director and the Council of Nine not later than October 31, 1975 CE.
Section 3.14. Readmission

SubSection 3.14.1. After Voluntary Resignation

Readmission of any former Initiate of the Temple of Set who was not expelled from the Temple shall be at the discretion of any III°+ Initiate of the Temple (if formerly I° or II°), and at the discretion of the High Priest (if formerly III°+). Any individual so readmitted must comply with any procedures determined to bring membership status current as determined by the Executive Director.

SubSection 3.14.2. After Expulsion

Readmission of any former Initiate of the Temple of Set who was expelled from the Temple shall be at the discretion of the High Priest. Such a readmission authorized by the High Priest must be communicated in writing to the Executive Director and all Councillors, and at least five voting Councillors must indicate their approval of the decision in writing to the High Priest and Executive Director.

SubSection 3.14.3. Readmission II° Time Limit

The membership of any person readmitted to the Temple of Set as a I° Initiate shall automatically cease at the end of one year if II° Recognition is not attained by that time. Extensions to this one-year time limit may be granted by the High Priest.

SubSection 3.14.4. Degree Upon Readmission

An individual may be readmitted at the same or lower degree as held previously, as determined by the readmitting authority.

Article 4. Council of Nine

Section 4.01. Name and Authority

The Board of Directors of the Temple of Set, Inc. shall be known as the Council of Nine. All references to “the Council” in these By-Laws refer to the Council of Nine. All references to “the Chairman” in these By-Laws refer to the Chairman of the Council of Nine.

Section 4.02. Membership

The Council of Nine shall consist of nine voting Councillors, each of whom holds the III°+. In addition to these nine voting Councillors, the High Priest and the Executive Director shall be ex officio nonvoting members of the Council.
Section 4.03. Councillor Term of Office

Each voting Councillor shall serve a nine-year term of office ending June 30 or upon the confirmation of a successor to that Council seat.

Section 4.04. Councillor Selection

Vacancies on the Council of Nine through either expiration of a term of office, voluntary resignation, or incapacity as determined per Section 4.05 shall be filled in the following manner:

SubSection 4.04.1. Announcement

The Chairman of the Council shall announce to the IV°+ and the Executive Director that a vacancy has occurred or is scheduled to occur. If there is no Chairman in office, any Councillor may make this announcement.

SubSection 4.04.2. Nomination/Election

Any IV°+ Initiate may propose a name to the Executive Director within two weeks following the Chairman’s announcement. The Executive Director will verify that each proposed individual is willing to serve, then announce those proposed names to the IV°+ and request approvals in writing. Each IV°+ may send in an approval for only one of the proposed names. A majority approval by the IV°+ will confirm the approved individual to the seat.

SubSection 4.04.3. Run-Offs

If there is no majority approval, the Executive Director will announce the two names with the most approvals and request run-off votes as necessary to obtain the majority. The Executive Director will provide tabulations of all received approvals to the High Priest and the Chairman of the Council. If after three or more run-offs no candidate has received a majority approval, and if there is a matter pending which requires Council voting or confirmation, the High Priest may appoint one of the two run-off-candidates as the new Councillor. If the Executive Director has not completed the procedures of this Section within two months from the date of the seat vacancy, or if there is no Executive Director in office, the High Priest may at his option administer the procedures.

Section 4.05. Removal for Incapacity

SubSection 4.05.1. Definition

“Incapacity” as used within this Section is defined as “a general incapacity of the individual to wisely and competently execute the Councillorship or Chairmanship as applicable”. The determination may be based on either physical (presence, health, etc.) or dispositional (contactability, responsiveness, attentiveness, etc.) factors. It may not be based on the individual’s opinion or judgment concerning specific issues before the Council.
SubSection 4.05.2. Determination/Approval: Councillor

Incapacity of a Councillor to execute his office shall be determined by the Chairman of the Council. Such a determination must be approved in writing by a minimum of six other voting Councillors, such approval to be communicated to the High Priest, the Chairman of the Council, and the Executive Director.

SubSection 4.05.3. Determination/Approval: Chairman

Incapacity of the Chairman of the Council to execute his office shall be determined in writing by a minimum of seven voting Councillors, such approval to be communicated to the High Priest, the Chairman of the Council, and the Executive Director. An individual so removed from the Chairmanship will continue in his regular Council seat unless removed from it in accordance with SubSection 4.05.2.

Section 4.06. Quorum

A quorum of the Council shall consist of all nine voting Councillors.

Section 4.07. Resources

The High Priest and the Executive Director will ensure that the resources of the Temple of Set, both administrative and financial, are used to the greatest reasonable extent to assist the Council in carrying out its responsibilities.

Section 4.08. Chairmanship Selection

SubSection 4.08.1. Nomination/Election

As soon as possible following July 1 and not later than August 1 of each year, or whenever the office of Chairman of the Council of Nine becomes vacant, any Councillor may propose any voting Councillor to serve as Chairman of the Council of Nine, term of office to expire August 31 of the following year or upon confirmation of the next Chairman. Such proposals will be made to the Executive Director. The Executive Director will verify that each proposed individual is willing to serve, then announce all proposed names to the Council and request approvals in writing. Each voting Councillor may send in an approval for only one of the proposed names. A minimum of six approvals will confirm the individual to the Chairmanship.

SubSection 4.08.2. Run-Offs

If no name receives six approvals, the Executive Director will announce the two names with the most approvals and request as many run-off approvals as necessary to obtain the six-minimum. The Executive Director will provide tabulations of all received approvals to the Council.
SubSection 4.08.3. Procedure

If the Executive Director has not completed the procedures of this Section within two months from the date of the Chairmanship vacancy, or if there is no Executive Director in office, the High Priest may at his option administer the procedures.

SubSection 4.08.4. Council Seat Priority

If there are any seat-vacancies on the Council, they must be filled according to Section 4.04 before a successor Chairman can be appointed under this Section.

Section 4.09. Catastrophic Absence of Officers

If the Temple of Set finds itself with no High Priest, no Chairman, and no Executive Director, then the voting Councillor with the longest current continuous membership on the Council will serve as Chairman pro tem for the purpose of (1) filling any and all vacancies on the Council of Nine, then (2) appointing a new High Priest, and (3) serving as required until a new Chairman is appointed in accordance with Section 4.08.

Section 4.10. Comprehensive Access

All records and documents of the Temple of Set, and all Temple-related records and documents of any III°+ Initiate involving the Temple of Set, shall be made instantly available to the Council or to any individual Councillor upon demand. This includes material in any medium or format: printed, electronic, audiovisual, or otherwise.

SubSection 4.10.1. Council Restriction

Any individual Councillor who invokes Section 4.10 may not reveal any information so accessed outside the Council without prior written authorization from the Chairman, communicated to the entire Council.

SubSection 4.10.2. Non-Councillor-Requested Restriction

Any Initiate who provides information to any Councillor not requested under 4.10 may place the information under SubSection 4.10.1 restriction by notifying the Councillor in writing.

SubSection 4.10.3. Noncompliance

Any member of any degree who withholds or destroys information requested under Section 4.10 may be expelled per the procedures of Article 3 for this reason.
Section 4.11. Finance

All Councillors serve without compensation. They shall be reimbursed for reasonable expenses of their office as determined by the Chairman of the Council.

Section 4.12. Corporate Board Minutes

A record of minutes of the Council of Nine, when it is functioning specifically as a board of directors for corporate purposes, shall be kept by the Executive Director.

Article 5. High Priest of Set

Section 5.01. Responsibility and Authority

The responsibility and authority to determine all organization, policies, and programs of the Temple of Set, in compliance with and subordinate to its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, shall rest with the High Priest (or High Priestess) of Set. All standing policies established under this Section shall be recorded in the Crystal or Onyx Tablets of Set as applicable to all Initiates or the Priesthood of Set respectively.

Section 5.02. Corporate President

The High Priest shall perform all duties of a corporate president required by law.

Section 5.03. Selection and Term

SubSection 5.03.1. Initiatory Degree

The High Priest shall hold the IV°+.

SubSection 5.03.2. Appointment

The Chairman of the Council of Nine shall appoint the High Priest. The appointment must be approved in writing by at least five other voting Councillors, communicated by them individually to the Chairman, the Executive Director, and each other.

SubSection 5.03.3. Term

The High Priest shall serve without fixed term until resignation or removal from office. He may resign from office by notifying both the Chairman of the Council and the Executive Director in writing.
Section 5.04. Removal

SubSection 5.04.1. Council of Nine

The Chairman of the Council may remove the High Priest from office if he feels that there is just cause for doing so. Such a decision must be approved in writing by at least six other voting Councillors, communicated by them individually to the High Priest, Chairman, Executive Director, and each other.

SubSection 5.04.2. Masters of the Temple

The High Priest may be removed from office by a 3/4 vote of all IV°+ Initiates. Such vote shall be called on a petition submitted by 1/3 of the IV°+ Initiates to any Councillor. This vote will be jointly supervised by the Council and the Executive Director.

SubSection 5.04.3. Office Restrictions

An Initiate removed from the High Priesthood per Section 5.04 may not hold office as Chairman or High Priest for a period of five years from removal.

Section 5.05. Finance

The High Priest may serve with or without compensation as determined by the Chairman of the Council. He shall be reimbursed for reasonable expenses of his office as determined by the Chairman of the Council.

Article 6. Executive Director

Section 6.01. Responsibility and Authority

All administrative operations of the Temple of Set, in compliance with and subordinate to its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, and thereunder subject to the instructions of the High Priest, shall be determined and supervised by the Executive Director.

Section 6.02. Corporate Vice President/Secretary

The Executive Director shall perform all duties of a corporate vice president/secretary required by law.

Section 6.03. Selection and Term

SubSection 6.03.1. Initiatory Degree

The Executive Director shall hold the III°+.
SubSection 6.03.2. Appointment

The Chairman of the Council of Nine shall appoint the Executive Director. The appointment must be approved in writing by at least four other voting Councillors, communicated by them individually to the Chairman, the High Priest, and each other.

SubSection 6.03.3. Term

The Executive Director shall serve without fixed term until resignation or removal from office. He may resign from office by notifying both the Chairman of the Council and the High Priest in writing.

Section 6.04. Removal

The Chairman of the Council may remove the Executive Director from office if he feels that there is just cause for doing so. Such a decision must be approved in writing by at least five other voting Councillors, communicated by them individually to the High Priest, Chairman, Executive Director, and each other.

Section 6.05. Finance

The Executive Director may serve with or without compensation as determined by the Chairman of the Council. He shall be reimbursed for reasonable expenses of his office as determined by the High Priest.

Article 7. Treasurer

Section 7.01. General

SubSection 7.01.1. Responsibility and Authority

All financial operations of the Temple of Set, in compliance with and subordinate to its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, and thereunder subject to the instructions of the Executive Director, shall be determined and supervised by the Treasurer.

SubSection 7.01.2. Fiscal Year and Annual Reports

Fiscal year of the Temple of Set shall be the calendar year. Within three months following the close of each fiscal year, the Treasurer shall prepare and submit to the High Priest, the Executive Director, and the Council of Nine an annual financial statement of that fiscal year. The financial statement shall be prepared in accordance with sound accounting practices, and may at the Executive Director’s discretion be certified by a public accountant.
SubSection 7.01.3. Records and Access

The Treasurer shall keep and maintain adequate and correct records of the Temple of Set’s corporate properties and business transactions, including accounts of its assets, liabilities, receipts, disbursements, gains, and losses. These records may be computer-based or physical. These computer programs/files and/or books are the property of the Temple of Set.

SubSection 7.01.4. Priesthood and Council Access

All Temple financial records are open for inspection at any reasonable time by any III°+ Initiate. Such right to inspection includes the right to make extracts and copies only if the inspector is a Councillor, and any such extracts and copies are automatically Council-protected documents per SubSection 4.10.1.

SubSection 7.01.5. Government Access

On request of a county government assessor, the Temple of Set, Inc. shall make available at its principal office in California or at a place mutually acceptable to the assessor and the corporation a true copy of business records relevant to the amount, cost, and value of property, subject to local assessment, which it owns, claims, possesses, or controls within the county.

Section 7.02. Corporate Treasurer

The Treasurer shall perform all duties of a corporate treasurer required by law.

Section 7.03. Selection and Term

SubSection 7.03.1. Initiatory Degree

The Treasurer shall hold the III°+.

SubSection 7.03.2. Councillorship

The Treasurer may be a voting Councillor. If so, his rights and responsibilities as a Councillor take precedence over Treasurer duties, as he determines.

SubSection 7.03.3. Appointment

The Chairman of the Council of Nine shall appoint the Treasurer. The appointment must be approved in writing by at least four other voting Councillors, communicated by them individually to the Chairman, the High Priest, and each other. The Chairman may require the Treasurer to be bonded at the expense of the Temple of Set.
SubSection 7.03.4. Term

The Treasurer shall serve without fixed term until resignation or removal from office. He may resign from office by notifying both the Chairman of the Council and the Executive Director in writing.

Section 7.04. Removal

The Chairman of the Council may remove the Treasurer from office if he feels that there is just cause for doing so. Such a decision must be approved in writing by at least five other voting Councillors, communicated by them individually to the High Priest, Chairman, Executive Director, and each other.

Section 7.05. Finance

The Treasurer may serve with or without compensation as determined by the Chairman of the Council. He shall be reimbursed for reasonable expenses of his office as determined by the Executive Director.

Section 7.06. Expenditure Authorization

Checks drawn on the account of the Temple of Set shall require two signatures. One will normally be that of the Treasurer and the other that of either the High Priest, the Executive Director, or the Chairman of the Council. Should the Treasurer be temporarily incapacitated or unavailable, the two signatures may be those of any two of the other three authorized signatories.

Section 7.07. Balanced Budget

The Temple of Set shall operate with an annually balanced budget. The High Priest or the Chairman of the Council may authorize the incurring of short-term indebtedness, such as charge accounts, in the name of the Temple of Set.

Section 7.08. Special Funds

The Temple of Set may reserve money and property in special funds, managed by the Treasurer, dedicated to specific purposes or not, separate from normal operating funds, as appropriate to its religious and organizational goals.

SubSection 7.08.1. Donation Requirements

Any donation to the Temple of Set with a value greater than 1% of the sum of monetary items within all special funds as reported at the beginning of the fiscal year (or, if the special funds total less than US$100,000, then any donation of US$1,000 or greater) is to be placed into these special funds, separate from normal operating funds, unless specifically donated to the operating funds.
SubSection 7.08.2. Donor Designation

Donors may specify one or more special funds to receive their donations if they wish, regardless of value.

SubSection 7.08.3. Non-Monetary Property

The value of non-monetary property in special funds will be jointly estimated by the High Priest, the Executive Director, and the Treasurer. Such property may be converted to monetary amounts at the discretion of the High Priest.

SubSection 7.08.4. Use

The Treasurer may use special and/or operational funds to maintain property within special funds, to an annual maximum of 5% of the property’s estimated value. Any other expenditure from special funds must be preauthorized by the High Priest and preapproved in writing by at least seven voting Councillors to the High Priest, the Chairman of the Council, and the Executive Director.

Article 8. Information Director

Section 8.01. Responsibility and Authority

All electronic/computer-based/accessed operations of the Temple of Set, in compliance with and subordinate to its Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws, and thereunder subject to the instructions of the Executive Director, shall be determined and supervised by the Information Director.

Section 8.02. Selection and Term

SubSection 8.02.1. Initiary Degree

The Information Director shall hold the III°+.

SubSection 8.02.2. Appointment

The Executive Director shall appoint the Information Director. The appointment must be approved in writing by at least five voting Councillors, communicated by them individually to the Chairman, the Executive Director, and each other.

SubSection 8.02.3. Term

The Information Director shall serve without fixed term until resignation or removal from office. He may resign from office by notifying the Executive Director and the Chairman of the Council in writing.
Section 8.03. Removal

The Executive Director or the Chairman of the Council may remove the Information Director from office if he feels that there is just cause for doing so. Such a decision must be approved in writing by at least six voting Councillors, communicated by them individually to the Chairman, Executive Director, and each other.

Section 8.04. Finance

The Information Director may serve with or without compensation as determined by the Chairman of the Council. He shall be reimbursed for reasonable expenses of his office as determined by the Executive Director.

Article 9. Insignia

SubSection 9.01.1. Temple of Set

Insignia of the Temple of Set shall consist of a pentagram, two points upraised, against a circular field. The edges of the pentagram shall not touch the circular field. This insignia may be used by any member of the Temple of Set in accordance with the provisions of this Article, but it shall not be embellished with any other designs or have any other insignia superimposed upon it.

SubSection 9.01.2. Temple of Set, Inc. Corporate Seal

The corporate seal of the Temple of Set, Inc. shall consist of the Insignia of the Temple as defined in SubSection 9.01.1 encircled by the words: “[arcing over the top:] TEMPLE OF SET [arcing under the bottom:] INC. OCT 20, 1975 • CALIFORNIA”. This seal may be affixed to corporate instruments by the corporate president (High Priest), vice president/secretary (Executive Director), and treasurer (Treasurer) only, but failure to affix it shall not affect the validity of any such instrument.

Section 9.02. Initiatory and Honorary Member Insignia

SubSection 9.02.7. Honorary Setian

Insignia of Honorary Setian is a gold pentagram, two points upraised, against a circular field of green.

Section 9.03. Wear and Usage

No member of the Temple of Set may wear or otherwise use the insignia of a degree other than that which he currently holds.

Article 10. Orders

Section 10.01. Definition

The term “Order” designates a suborganization of the Temple of Set supervised by one or more IV°+ Initiates as Grand Master/Co-Grand Masters. An Order is generally concerned with the conception and development of a widely-applicable magical philosophy, and is not normally geographically-localized.

Section 10.02. Creation/Dissolution

Any IV°+ Initiate may create an Order, but may not serve as Grand Master/Co-Grand Master of more than two Orders at a time. An Order may be dissolved by decision of its Grand Master, subject to approval of the High Priest, as communicated to the Executive Director. In the absence of a Grand Master, an Order may operate up to one year under an Acting Grand Master (SubSection 10.03.1). If a new IV°+ Grand Master has not been selected by that time, the AGM must either inactivate the Order or reconstitute it as an Element or Pylon.
Section 10.03. Authority

The Grand Master/Co-Grand Master of an Order exercises complete authority over that Order subject to these By-Laws and any policies of the High Priest concerning all Orders generally as published in the Jeweled Tablets of Set.

SubSection 10.03.1. Acting Grand Master

A Grand Master may appoint an Acting Grand Master, who must hold the III°+, for a maximum, non-renewable period of one year. The Grand Master may withdraw this appointment at any time. If a Grand Master relinquishes his office without appointing a new Grand Master, the High Priest may appoint an Acting Grand Master until the Order selects a new IV°+ Grand Master.

Section 10.04. Admission/Expulsion

SubSection 10.04.1. Decision

Order admissions or expulsions are decided by the Grand Master. Such Order admissions or expulsions will not affect the standing of the individual involved as an Initiate of the Temple of Set. All Order admissions and expulsions must be promptly reported to the Executive Director by the Grand Master.

SubSection 10.04.2. II°+ Recognition Requirement

Orders will accept only II°+ Initiates or Honorary Members of the Temple of Set as Order members.

SubSection 10.04.3. Additional Order Memberships

A member of the Temple of Set may belong to a maximum of one Order unless the Grand Masters of that Order and any proposed additional Order(s) agree that additional Order membership is acceptable.

Section 10.05. Insignia

Order insignia may be worn either together with Temple of Set insignia or alone. When worn together with Temple insignia, the Order insignia must not conflict with, displace, or cover it.

Article 11. Elements

Section 11.01. Definition

The term “Element” designates a suborganization of the Temple of Set supervised by one or more II°+ Initiates as Director/Co-Directors. An Element is generally concerned with a special project and/or skill, and is not normally geographically-localized.
Section 11.02. Creation/Dissolution

Any III°+ Initiate may create or Sponsor an Element. If an Adept II° is to serve as Director, the Element must be sponsored by a III°+ Initiate. An Element may be dissolved by decision of its Director, its Sponsor, or by decision of any Master of the Temple as communicated to the Director, Sponsor, Executive Director, and High Priest. If a Master of the Temple determines to dissolve an Element, the Element will cease activities immediately. The Element may resume activities if the High Priest reverses the Master’s decision within 30 days following notification.

Section 11.03. Authority

The Director of an Element exercises complete authority over that Element subject to these By-Laws, any policies of the High Priest concerning Elements published in the Jeweled Tablets of Set, and approval of the Sponsor (if the Director is II°).

Section 11.04. Admission/Expulsion

Element admissions or expulsions are decided by the Director. Such Element admissions or expulsions will not affect the standing of the individual involved as an Initiate of the Temple of Set. All Element admissions and expulsions must be promptly reported to the Executive Director by the Element Director.

Section 11.05. Access to Activities

Elements may, as determined by the Director, open their activities to nonmembers of the Temple of Set, as long as such nonmembers are respectful of and courteous towards the Temple.

Section 11.06. Insignia

Element insignia may be worn either together with Temple of Set insignia or alone. When worn together with Temple insignia, the Element insignia must not conflict with, displace, or cover it.

Article 12. Pylons

Section 12.01. Definition

The term “Pylon” designates a suborganization of the Temple of Set supervised by one or more II°+ Initiates as Sentinel/Co-Sentinels. A Pylon may be concerned with either general or specialized initiatory interests, and is normally but not necessarily geographically-localized.
Section 12.02. Creation/Dissolution

Any III°+ Initiate may create or Sponsor a Pylon, but may not serve as Sentinel of more than one Pylon at a time. If an Adept II° is to serve as Sentinel, the Pylon must be sponsored by a III°+ Initiate. A Pylon may be dissolved by decision of its Sentinel, its Sponsor, or by decision of any Master of the Temple as communicated to the Sentinel, Sponsor, Executive Director, and High Priest. If a Master of the Temple determines to dissolve a Pylon, the Pylon will cease activities immediately. The Pylon may resume activities if the High Priest reverses the Master’s decision within 30 days following notification.

Section 12.03. Authority

The Sentinel of a Pylon exercises complete authority over that Pylon subject to these By-Laws, any policies of the High Priest concerning Pylons published in the Jeweled Tablets of Set, and approval of the Sponsor (if the Sentinel is II°).

Section 12.04. Admission/Expulsion

SubSection 12.04.1. Decision

Pylon admissions or expulsions are decided by the Sentinel. Such Pylon admissions or expulsions will not affect the standing of the individual involved as an Initiate of the Temple of Set. All Pylon admissions and expulsions must be promptly reported to the Executive Director by the Sentinel.

SubSection 12.04.2. Additional Pylon Memberships

A member of the Temple of Set may belong to a maximum of one Pylon unless the Sentinels of that Pylon and any proposed additional Pylon(s) agree that additional Pylon membership is acceptable.

Section 12.05. Access to Activities

Only current Initiates of the Temple of Set shall be admitted to Pylon activities, the only exceptions being that prospective members or member spouses/significant others may be admitted to non-ceremonial-working meetings and social gatherings by advance permission of the Sentinel.

Section 12.06. Insignia

Pylon insignia may be worn either together with Temple of Set insignia or alone. When worn together with Temple insignia, the Pylon insignia must not conflict with, displace, or cover it.
Article 13. The Scroll of Set

Section 13.01. Definition

The electronic and/or physical newsletter of the Temple of Set shall be called The Scroll of Set. Any reference in these By-Laws to “the Scroll” refers to this newsletter.

Section 13.02. Content

Content of each issue is determined by the Editor. Documents submitted for inclusion by any IV°+ Initiate will automatically be included providing that they are submitted to the Editor in normal submission format and prior to the deadline for the desired issue.

Section 13.03. Distribution and Reproduction

The Scroll is distributed to each Setian as a right of current membership. The Scroll may not be shown to and discussed with non-Initiates of the Temple. III°+ Initiates may authorize limited, selected copies or extracts of its contents for reasonable purposes, as long as these do not disclose the identities of Setians without their prior approval.

Section 13.04. Editor

SubSection 13.04.1. Appointment

The High Priest shall appoint the Editor. Such an appointment must be approved in writing by at least five voting Councillors to the Chairman, the High Priest, and the Executive Director.

SubSection 13.04.2. Term of Office

The Editor shall serve without fixed term until resignation or removal from office. He may resign from office by notifying both the Chairman of the Council and the Executive Director in writing.

SubSection 13.04.3. Removal

The Chairman of the Council or the High Priest may remove the Editor from office if he feels that there is just cause for doing so. Such a decision must be approved in writing by at least six voting Councillors to the Chairman, the High Priest, and the Executive Director.

SubSection 13.04.4. Finance

The Editor may serve with or without compensation, as determined by the Chairman of the Council. He shall be reimbursed for reasonable expenses of his office as determined by the Executive Director.
Article 14. The Jeweled Tablets of Set

Section 14.01. Definition

Official reference documents of the Temple of Set will normally be included in The Jeweled Tablets of Set, an electronic and/or physical publication divided into six component collections:

SubSection 14.01.1. The Crystal Tablet of Set

The Crystal Tablet of Set includes papers generally relevant to all Initiates of the Temple of Set and particularly pertinent to Setians I°. The Crystal Tablet is distributed to each new Setian upon affiliation as part of the admissions packet, and updates are available to all Setians at cost. It will be Edited by the Executive Director. The Crystal Tablet may be shown to and discussed with non-Initiates of the Temple, and III°+ Initiates may authorize limited, selected copies or extracts of its contents for reasonable purposes.

SubSection 14.01.2. The Ruby Tablet of Set

The Ruby Tablet of Set includes papers generally relevant to all II°+ Initiates of the Temple of Set. It will be Edited by a III°+ Initiate. Access to the Ruby Tablet is restricted to II°+ Initiates, and will be available to all II°+ Initiates at cost. III°+ Initiates may authorize limited, selected copies or extracts of its contents for reasonable purposes.

SubSection 14.01.3. The Onyx Tablet of Set

SubSection 14.01.5. The Amethyst Tablet of Set

The Amethyst Tablet of Set includes papers generally relevant to the Work of the V°. It will be Edited by a IV°+ Initiate. Access to the Amethyst Tablet is restricted to IV°+ Initiates, and will be available to all IV°+ Initiates at cost.
SubSection 14.01.6. The Topaz Tablet of Set

The Topaz Tablet of Set includes papers generally relevant to the Work of the VI°. It will be Edited by a IV°+ Initiate. Access to the Topaz Tablet is restricted to IV°+ Initiates, and will be available to all IV°+ Initiates at cost.

Section 14.02. Structure

Each of the Jeweled Tablets shall be divided into two volumes: I-Standing Documents and II-Varying Documents.

SubSection 14.02.1. I-Standing Documents

I-Standing Documents consists of documents defining the Temple of Set’s essential design and core philosophy. As such they cannot be included or removed from a Tablet, or modified within a Tablet, by the Editor or any other single official. Such inclusion/removal/modification can be proposed to the Chairman of the Council of Nine by any III°+ Initiate for the Crystal/Ruby/Onyx Tablets, and by any IV°+ Initiate for the Sapphire/Amethyst/Topaz Tablets, which proposal must be approved in writing by at least six voting members of the Council, such approval to be communicated to the Chairman, the High Priest, and the Executive Director by those Council members individually.

SubSection 14.02.2. II-Varying Documents

II-Varying Documents consists of documents, other than Standing Documents, determined by the Editor to be appropriate for inclusion in the Tablet. Varying Documents may be recommended by any Initiate with access to the Tablet in question. Varying Documents recommended by any IV°+ Initiate will automatically be included in the Tablet as long as that Initiate remains an active member of the Temple of Set.

Section 14.03. Tablet Editors [other than Crystal and Onyx]

SubSection 14.03.1. Appointment

The High Priest shall appoint the Editor. Such an appointment must be approved in writing by at least five voting Councillors to the Chairman, the High Priest, and the Executive Director.

SubSection 14.03.2. Term of Office

The Editor shall serve without fixed term until resignation or removal from office. He may resign from office by notifying both the Chairman of the Council and the Executive Director in writing.
SubSection 14.03.3. Removal

The Chairman of the Council or the High Priest may remove the Editor from office if he feels that there is just cause for doing so. Such a decision must be approved in writing by at least six voting Councillors to the Chairman, the High Priest, and the Executive Director.

SubSection 14.03.4. Finance

The Editor may serve with or without compensation, as determined by the Chairman of the Council. He shall be reimbursed for reasonable expenses of his office as determined by the Executive Director.

Article 15. Amendments to By-Laws

Section 15.01. Effect

These By-Laws shall become effective immediately upon their adoption. Amendments to these By-Laws shall become effective immediately upon their adoption unless the members in adopting them provide that they are to become effective at a later date.

Section 15.02. Amendment Vote Requirement

Subject to any provisions of law applicable to the amendment of By-Laws of non-profit corporations, these By-Laws, or any other of them, may be altered, amended, or repealed and new By-Laws adopted by a three-quarters majority vote of all III°+ Initiates of the Temple of Set.

Section 15.03. Amendment Vote Supervision

A vote to affect these By-Laws in accordance with Section 15.02 shall be jointly supervised by the High Priest, the Chairman of the Council, and the Executive Director.

Section 15.04. Amendment Initiative

The High Priest may call for a vote to affect these By-Laws in accordance with Section 15.02 at his discretion. A vote must be called for upon receipt by the Executive Director of a petition signed by one-third of the III°+ Initiates of the Temple of Set. Upon receipt of such a petition, the Temple of Set shall immediately cease all programs and activities involving the issue(s) in question until the vote has been conducted, announced, and implemented.

Section 15.05. Recording

The original or a copy of these By-Laws as amended or otherwise altered to date, certified by the Executive Director, as corporate secretary, shall be recorded and kept in the Onyx Tablet of Set.
Article 16. Interpretation of By-Laws

Section 16.01. Interpretation

Interpretation of the provisions of these By-Laws, where they are not clearly explicit, shall be by the High Priest. The Chairman of the Council may overrule such an interpretation. An overrule decision must be approved in writing by at least four other voting members of the Council to the High Priest, the Chairman, and the Executive Director.

Section 16.02. Degree Identification

As used in these By-Laws, the notation “+” following an initiatory degree means “this or any higher degree”.

Section 16.03. Generic Gender Reference

All degrees of membership and all offices within the Priesthood and Temple of Set may be held by persons of either sex. Use of masculine nouns/pronouns in these By-Laws is for simplicity only.

Section 16.04. Written Notice

Any “written notice” referred to in these By-Laws may be given in person, sent by postal mail, by commercial courier, facsimile, electronic mail, or other commonly-used methods of written/typed communication. It is always the responsibility of the sender to ensure that the written notice was received by the recipients, especially when using methods, like electronic mail, which are not highly reliable.
Appendix 9: Letter, William F. Murray to M.A. Aquino

17 de June, X

Dear Magister Aquino, Counselor & Friend;

Salut!

Before getting to the meat of the matter, let me quote to you a portion of a letter I am currently drafting to Dr. LaVey. I want you to be aware of something that has hit me with megaton force. "... therefore I wish to inform you of my intention to withdraw from ‘The Church of Satan, Inc.’ and return to The Church of Satan which has been in existence for many thousands of years.” To quote a recent bandied about quote, “‘Nuff said?”!

O.K., here we go. The phone has been coming off the hook here since Friday, 13 Jun. Of course I was in Elko over the weekend, but when I returned Sunday morn, dear mother had a note pad of many pages with notes regarding who called and why. Sandy, the mailperson is now delivering by the bag. No joke!

For some reason I have become in the eyes of many, a sort of Vicar-General of the Caldron, or to put it in my own elegant way, a wailing wall for odds and sods from all over the lot. Alas (as the case may be), I am reaping seeds of my own sowing. For the past six years I have; answered every letter, returned every phone call, gone out of my way for every bloke who needed a visit, handed out advice and admonishments (when called for) -- because, like Popeye the Sailor, “I yam-what-I-yam!” Now, whether I an the recipient many times over of that famed Central Grotto decoration, “The Short End of the Stick” w/Splinter Cluster is an academic question. Though I must say that the letter I received from the group a la nom de plume “John Kincaid” re the nebulous nature of my Regional Agencyship was a monument of misinformation and downright fucking lies. All of this, of course, is stacked up in the useless lumber pile of the past. Having served its purpose, it is discarded.

Warlock Mark Harris and his lovely wife, Janice (Now there is a marriage made in Hell!) are currently visitors to Carpathia. Mother Keller will be up here some time today. It is raining, the hot spell breaking, and for three days a great black crow or magpie has been circling the block and the house. Good signs, I would say.

Three turgid paragraphs of preamble to open this letter. Not had, Bill, not had at all. Oh, well, it could have been worse. I can imagine your in-basket is overflowing, so is mine. So in some sort of order, mixing phone calls and letters but trying to keep them in sequence to the order of your “informational packet” which I hope will be a handy reference for you, and away we go;

Bits and Pieces

“Bill, if Dr. LaVey needs some money, why couldn't he sell off some of that is that is listed in that book that Wolfe wrote?”

“If it is money, I’ll contribute something.”

“And in this case my II° doesn’t mean a fucking thing!”

“Who the hell does he think he is, the Pope? Shit, my dad bought all his degrees in the K.C. Is this what the Church of Satan is now?”

“I cried all night!”

“I am stronger, because of this, than I have ever been before.”
“I think it is a joke.”
“Is this what he meant when he talked about whoopie-cushions?”
“I’ve been calling Central Grotto all day. All I get is that recording.”
“Does Magister Aquino really mean that I can write to him?”
“I saw this coming a year ago.”
“When my wife and I saw Dr. LaVey at Central the night of the 23rd, we were really surprised. He seemed so tired. Except for some girl with the name of Hansen, there seemed to be no one else there. I felt that he just wanted some friendly people to talk to and listen to. He made me feel like he was my long-lost father. He was so gentle. It was all I could do to keep from calling him ‘Tony’. God damn it, he seemed so tired.”
“When we got hack to the car, I turned to (husband) and said, ‘Oh, my god, he seemed so alone. I wanted to hold him in my arms.’”
“When we were driving back over the bridge, suddenly we both turned to each and in almost the same voice said, ‘Was that Dr. LaVey?’”
“Hey, Bill, is this some sort of backstairs revolution?”
“Is it true, can anyone ‘lift the Mandate’?”
“Poor Mr. (sic) LaVey, I am so embarrassed for him.” [Note: Seven other people expressed embarrassment. One of our Canadian members expressed it with such compassion: “I feel as though a very old and dear friend had unintentionally farted at the vicarage tea.”]
“What do I do now? Join the Hell’s Angels?”
“I see the hand of Diane LaVey in all this.” [Now that is an interesting thought.]
“Hey, is what happened down in Santa Cruz connected with all of this?”
“I saw all this shit coming when West II went down the tubes last year.”
“Who does he think he is - Richard Nixon?”
So far, that is just a brief sample of what has been coming in. I think I can see a trend starting to develop. Agree? Perhaps I am wrong. It is really too soon to tell.
Now this is what I have been doing. In my response to all telephone calls and in my answers to letters, I have been saying this: “Please do not react without chewing this over for a while. An emotional reaction is not what anyone needs right now. Besides, when you react emotionally, there is always the post operation of removing hoof from mouth! If nothing else, we are realistic and logical [or at least try to be]. Let’s base our reaction on this little story: When modern China opened its doors to western newsmen again, the then-current editor of the Singapore Straits Times (who has recently written a book on the Chinese Army; P.L.A.) was able to interview Marshal Chu Teh, one of the driving forces that created the P.L.A. One of the questions, in so many words, was ‘How did the collapse of the Roman Empire in the year 300 effect or affect the East?’ Marshal Chu pondered the question for only a few seconds and replied, ‘It is too soon to tell.’” I am telling everyone to stay cool and just wait.
For the most part, I think most folks are going to do this, for a number of reasons; 1. They are scared of getting in the way of “two of the Biggies slugging it out.”, 2. They will just give up and die on the vine. O.K. I am not too concerned about this lot. Perhaps they are the “chaff” you referred to. As we know, there are resignations starting to come in: you, Lilith, Dale, Shai, Harris, some others as well. My letter is on the drafting board.

Gumbo Ya Ya - or, What is Happening in “the Network”

On the 11th and 12th of July a meeting of all concerned in the Ohio area will be held at Warlock Huddleston’s place in Mt. Vernon. Warlocks Huddleston and Zabrecky have been in constant contact with Warlocks Shai, Andrews, and Rev. McQuown. From what I can gather from Art Zabrecky’s last phone communication, it looks like quite a mob from the Midwest will be there. I have instructed him and Ratley to make a full report to you. I have also indicated to them to immediately write you and tell you themselves their feelings regarding this whole matter (favorable to you, by the bye). But I want you to hear it firsthand from them, and not secondhand from me. That is why my charge to them. As you know, Warlock Zabrecky has phoned the Santa Barbara “hot line” several times. He seemed upset that you did not directly answer him. Art can be a hit impatient at times. I indicated to him the press of your work and this current situation, and also delivered a short lecture on common sense. He saw the point. You shall be hearing from him and Tom shortly.

Shai called for the second time last night when I was conducting the Harris’ on the 50-cent tour of Carpathia. We had a good chat, and he indicated to me again his original reasons for dropping the III°, and now the final act, his resignation from C of S, Inc. Please tell the lovely Lilith that we also talked of “Semper Barley” and happier times. My eyes got a little wet around the edges. Must be the dust and “chaff”. Mike is such a good friend. Incidentally va multimisc, dear Priestess Lilith for the copy of your letter which came yesterday in the bag. You speak for all of us.

From our friends in Canada, much of interest. Long telephone call from Stu Munro last night. Incidentally Stu (“Cheech” to his friends) was most appreciative to receive the entire packet rather than just the letter.

To digress for the nonce: Had things continued to run at their usual pace, Priestess Wendall and I would have been in contact with you regarding Stuart Munro’s possible appointment to the II°. There is good reason for this. Currently the Eastern Canada Regional Agency is a shambles. I was compiling a report to you on this matter, but just didn’t have all the facts yet. It really breaks my heart to report that [and this guy I considered a friend at one time] Stephen Hollander is just not doing the job. He refuses to respond to contacts from the people in. his agency. This policy of non-contact has been in effect since the final gavel at East VI. Needless to say, our Canadian friends are up in arms about this. Prior to these events I had received a stack of complaints over the way Hollander [and Lynne Jarman] were conducting their meetings, the subject matter covered, and his general holier-than-fucking-thou attitude. People in the Ottawa-Hull area actually stopped coming to meetings. Now I wonder who was boycotting whom.

Anyway, Stu indicated to me in a letter of a week or so ago that he was ready to become a working member of the Church, and was wondering just what he could do. As you know, Stu is the Director of the Motorcycle Safety Program of the Canadian Ministry of Transport. Fact is, he wrote the course. Currently he has been traveling all over the continent, as not only has Canada accepted the program but the U.S., Great Britain, France, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Belgium, etc. are very interested. Stu will be in Paris on the 20th.

Incidentally when he was in Washington, D.C., he “recruited” the executive secretary of one of the “big wheels” in the Secretary of Transportation’s Office. He felt very frustrated as he had no one in the D.C. area to refer her to. He said she is a real firecracker and a Compleat Witch. I told him to have her contact the Central Grotto P.O. Box. What else could I do?

I have as yet to hear from Jzamon in Massachusetts, or “Bear” Brownell in Nova Scotia. If I know them as I think I do, they are listening, pondering, and waiting. Which would be pretty damn good advice for anyone.
Back to “Bits and Pieces” for a bit: letters and telephone calls. Four people indicated that they felt there were “gaps” in the 17 pages that were sent in “the packet”. This I could not answer. However I do not believe this is the case. If it is, then O.K., whatever your reasons are, they are yours. I feel they felt there were gaps as in one case only one page of a letter was included. Well, hell, what was of value was on that page. There was no reason to reproduce the entire letter.

To date, 12:30 P.M., 17 June; 12 people feel that this is the culmination of “the great joke” Anton LaVey started in 1966: “This is the Big Rip-Off, and now he is going to split.”

Twenty-five people feel that about two years ago or so, and they are basing this on rereading past issues of the Agents Bulletin and the Hoof. Anton LaVey delegated too much authority to the wrong people in Central Grotto, a corps of “yes-persons” developed, each one out to grab what he or she could, and things got out of hand.

I remember way back one Hallowe’en year VI, after the gate buzzed open and I trudged up the brick stairs, “the Boss” related in so many words, “This is what I have created. Now it is up to you - the II°, III°, and other degrees - to ‘carry the ball’.” Now get this: “I have other fish to fry.” So help me, Hastur, sir, he said it!

I’ve got to say it, otherwise I’ll bust: “Beluga caviar and Stolichnaya vodka” - Bullshit!

Five people commented on paragraph 1 of page 1 of your letter dated 2 May. They wanted to know if the “accountant” you were referring to is an accountant who does the books of the Church, or an accountant who does the personal books of Dr. LaVey and his family. Or are both accounts one and the same?

Everyone so far has commented on the two pages of the proposed Hoof for May/June X. They all thought you did a nice job of easing the pain, however somewhat less than 50% did express some verbal eyebrow-lifting at you even wanting to “go along with the gag”. Sorry, sir, but that is what was said. Hell, some people just do not know how to read.

All did say you handled as well as could he expected considering what was a-brewing.

The general opinion of the LaVey letter of 27 May is “Pooey on the LaVey letter of 27 May!” One delightful soul from one of our southern states observed, “Well, well, it is certainly a great step from Manichewitz(?) and Lox to Beluga and Stolichnaya.”

All cheered your letter of 31 May. Nineteen [give or take one or two, can’t really remember, as I did not keep score on these] did wonder why the telephone was not used during this interchange that, of course, led to what has now happened.

The Diane LaVey letter of 4 June. Almost all agree that this is vitriolic, contradictory, and an immediate, hysterical lashing-back at you in that you did dare to question the papal infallibility of him. It was bitter, vicious, “witch-bitch cat infighting”, and also showed the true colors of Central Grotto at its worst.

Reports as early as last year from the Eastern area indicated to me that there was some great concern as to the direction the Church was taking with regard to “this over-ego, power-mad, headlong rush the Church and its leaders seem to he taking.”

Let’s stick with this a little longer. Take another look at paragraph 3 on page 2 of Diane’s letter. Some of the now-embarrassing things that occurred during the “early prankish stage” of the development of the Church are still coming home to roost. Because of some of the drivel that was handed to Wolfe, who slavishly included it in “that book”, we lost three excellent members here in Winnemucca - two, mind you, being rather well-placed in the police department. We also lost a good, older husband and wife team in Reno/Sparks because of this.
Now I know damn well [or think so] that Anton LaVey really did lead Wolfe down the garden path when all this was going on, just as he led the poor chap that did that thing in the recent issue of Argosy.

Now, about “those photographs”: When I was speaking to the students of Nye Hall, University of Nevada at Reno, the minister of the Campus Methodist Church quietly handed me a page torn from a girlie magazine. “How do you explain this, sir?” I had to satisfy my ego by countering, “Try it, you might fill your church this Sunday.” I was not proud of my answer. And I sure as hell did not mention that particular encounter in my report to Central.

Last night Warlock Harris showed me a magazine which was published several years ago, and will probably he a valuable collector’s piece in the future, showing the High Priest and others cavorting with all sorts of naked young lovelies. I will say everyone seemed to be enjoying each other’s company. But, and with all reverence to Sir Francis Dashwood, there is a time and a place for everything. And really there are times when a photographer should not be present. I am no prude, mind you. I like my “meat and potatoes” sex, and I also like my “chilled vodka, pepper, cracked crab, and Arab coffee” sex as well. But I shall never make a public display of it!

All wondered at why Diane wrote the letter. Was Dr. LaVey too overcome or too indifferent to answer? Or make a statement of position? Why Diane? [Why Diane indeed?] That breaks my heart.

When I was down there, I was completely bowled over as to how charming and what a wonderful hostess she was, how she welcomed me to her home as though I were a loved and valued member of the family. Unfortunately, having just gone through a dreadful emotional experience, I overreacted and basked in the blaze of the LaVeys like a little lost puppy who had been brought in out of the rain and in front of the kitchen stove was given a warm dish of milk. That was Mistake Number One.

“Circus of Dr. LaVey” - that raised a few eyebrows!

Holy Toledo, the fence around Central is a fine idea. Ask Mark Harris about security measures here at Carpathia. Also ask Margaret Wendall about the eggs, smashed bird feeder, cosmetic smears on sidewalk and wall of house, and, most wretchedly, the mutilated body of a little rabbit that was thrown on her lawn!

“Little place on the Napa/Sonoma County border” - Everyone commented on that one. The general roar that was most heard was, “Not according to Wolfe!”

“Just don’t let us know who considers ...” etc. This was greeted with howls of laughter and snorts of glee. One well-knowing gent commented on the phone, doing a rather good impression of Dr. LaVey’s voice, “I am Oz the Great and Terrible. What do you want, tin man?”

All of us who know, love, and respect Lilith have no comments to make regarding the last three paragraphs on page 1. Other than the remark that her and “Lana” (?) “used to giggle over this”. Hell, I was led to believe that “Lana Green” was the nom de plume of who ever was currently secretary. Have I been the victim of a falsehood? Same deal with “Kincaid”.

Nobody was too excited about the remark that she felt you had on purpose written your letter with the idea that “others see it”. Everybody said, “So what?” Hell, it’s just like me. You can show this particular letter of mine to anyone you want to. I am not ashamed of anything I have written to anybody.

Your letter of 10 June is a monument of tact, diplomacy, and, yes, heartbreak. All agree that you, or any of us, have the power to “lift the Mandate”. You chose to do it.
The “general letter” to the membership of the 10th naturally had to follow. To not have done so would have been a violation of your “Mandate”.

More to follow ... Thus ends Part One of the tender and true-to-life story of Just Plain Beau, Warlock of Winnemucca. Brought to you by Garcia’s Guacamole - great for eating and shining green shoes.

Respectfully,
Salutari Satan!

Appendix 10: Lesser Black Magic/Ethics

- by Michael A. Aquino VI° from Chapter #5 of Black Magic 1975-2002

Lesser Black Magic (LBM) is the influencing of beings, processes, or objects in the objective universe by the application of obscure physical or behavioral laws.

LBM is an impelling (encouraging, convincing, increasing of probability) measure, not a compelling (forcing, making inevitable) one. The object is to make something happen without expending the time and energy to make it happen through direct cause-and-effect.

In order to receive celebrity treatment in society, for example, one may work for many years to become a genuine celebrity. On the other hand, one may simply represent oneself outwardly as a celebrity, behave correspondingly, and receive much the same deference. One risks being exposed and embarrassed, but such risk is small if the magician is skilled in his assumed character. (RL#23F)

All LBM is a variation on this basic theme. It involves everything from simple tricks of misdirection to extremely subtle and complex manipulation of psychological factors in the human personality. While it requires less time and effort in application than overt, direct methods, it is more intellectually demanding and requires extensive practice.

In addition to their basic personalities and logical thought processes, all persons have likes, dislikes, fetishes, strengths, weaknesses, and emotional emphases. These are broadcast through direct communication, habits, dress, style of life, career patterns, choice of friends, and the like. In normal social or business contact, one usually sees only the “tip of the iceberg” of this character makeup. This is because individuals in modern society are accustomed to project and display only those parts of their characters which they feel are advantageous in a given situation. (RL#13D)

The magician, like Sherlock Holmes, must habitually look for clues to the rest of the iceberg - if possible without the subject’s being aware of this. If the subject realizes that what Wilhelm Reich called his “character armor” is being probed and penetrated, he will react with distrust, annoyance, and antagonism. (RL#19T)

The purpose of such an analysis is not necessarily to deceive or exploit the subject. Most often it is simply to gain a better picture of him or her, so that subsequent dialogue and encounters can be more fruitful and comfortable for both parties. It is often remarked that the company of a magician is stimulating and pleasing. Much of this is due to the magician’s automatic, almost subconscious tailoring of his mannerisms to a style most effective in a particular situation.

The philosophers Gurdjieff and Ouspensky were fond of saying that most people spend their lives “asleep” - meaning that they are content to allow their behavior to be governed by instinctive or logical reactions to external stimuli. (RL#19B) As you undertake to look beyond surface impressions of individuals, you will probably be surprised - and even dismayed - at how applicable this reproach has been to your own lifestyle.

As you attempt to form more perfect pictures of people and events around you, and as you begin to resist a life of merely reacting to stimuli, you will find that you “wake up”. To be “awake” in this sense is to be in a condition of stress, since you will be making deliberate decisions about many things which you previously dealt with semi-consciously [hence semi-intelligently]. You will be able to sustain this level of mental activity and concentration for only brief periods of time. It is not necessary for you to irritate and exhaust yourself by trying to extend those periods. Rather keep the ability to “awake” close at hand, ready to summon when appropriate.

In addition to self-determined personality traits, human beings are influenced by a variety of physical factors of which they are generally unaware. If the magician is aware of them, he is in a position to take them into account when assessing a subject’s present or probable future behavior. (RL#19, #20E, #22L)

This process of investigating the conscious and subconscious factors governing a subject’s behavior is neither quick nor easy. To be done correctly, it requires careful research (which may prove difficult and be regarded as an invasion of privacy) as well as an acquired expertise on the part of the magician to interpret the results carefully and objectively. Because of time and resource limitations, the magician must usually settle for something less than a complete picture. The more incomplete the picture, of course, the more margin for error in the emergent picture.

The distinction between LBM and merely being a good amateur psychologist is that the magician is specifically interested in behavior determinants which are obscure and consciously unknown to the subject. The magician’s object is to assess the individual without it being apparent that he is “practicing psychology” on him. The result is frequently that the deductions and consequent actions of the magician appear mysterious and even supernatural.

The best illustration of this - as well as an excellent way to gain practice in LBM [and enjoy doing so ... and run minimum risk of offending test subjects] is stage magic. (RL#23A-D) The stage magician must assess his audience, guide their attention unsuspectingly in certain controlled directions, and accomplish seemingly impossible things right in front of their eyes. Some stage magic depends upon slight-of-hand, some upon trick props; but all of it depends upon the magician’s developing the skill of manipulating obscure tendencies in onlookers’ behavior. [It can even be done through the medium of the printed page. To get the saliva going in your mouth, all I need do is ask you to think for a moment about a very bitter, juicy lemon ... which you can taste in your mouth ...]

One of the more exacting types of stage magic is mentalism, wherein the magician creates the illusion that he can read minds, predict behavior, and determine subjects’ choices. The most impressive mentalist routines require rigorous training in memory and other mental gymnastics on the part of the magician. Mentalism is the most mysterious and “occult” field of stage magic, and its techniques are most adaptable to LBM in general, so its study is particularly recommended to you. [Do not scratch your left ear during the next five minutes, or you will run a serious risk of tripping over something in the next 24 hours.]

Books and materials dealing with stage magic and mentalism are available in magic shops [as opposed to “occult” shops]. If you live in an area where there doesn’t seem to be such a shop at all, consider a search on the Internet. Most magic shops have mail-order catalogues and capabilities.

Professional stage magicians emphasize that they are entertainers, and their acts are usually accented with comedy, props, and “patter” to reinforce this image. This sets the audience at ease by allowing it to feel superior to the magician; he becomes a “court jester”. Aficionados of “serious” occultism generally shy away from stage magic because (a) they are afraid to appear comical, and (b) they fear that their “true” occult accomplishments will be written off as tricks by those on whose awe they psychologically
The Black Magician should not make this mistake. Stage magic, in addition to being good training and good fun, is extremely useful in LBM operations. In such circumstances, of course, the tinsel, patter, and props are absent; the magician deliberately sets out to impress the subject with something he will regard as “supernatural”. When stage magic is not presented in the context of entertainment, it can be quite impressive and even frightening.

Use of the Tarot for fortune-telling purposes is a good example of this. The Black Magician regards the Tarot, as he does everything else in magic, as a mere tool - a mirror to reflect aspects of his own mind and the minds of others. He attributes no intrinsic powers to it at all. When he uses it to “tell fortunes” or “read omens” for others, he never trusts blindly in the cards to reveal anything. Rather he decides beforehand what he wishes to tell the subject [and why], then causes specific cards to appear ... or causes the subject to “freely” choose one or more particular cards ... or, if he doesn’t want to bother with slight-of-hand or “card forces”, merely “interprets” whatever cards do appear as he desires. It should be easy for you to see that the “pick a card” technique of the stage magic entertainer is disarming and amusing, while the same trickery applied to a Tarot reading can be mysterious and impressive.

To the extent that you become known as a Black Magician, people will want to see you “do magic”. Most of them have no truly legitimate reason for this; they just want to be entertained. They would probably find the actual experience of GBM mystifying, perhaps extremely frightening, perhaps dull - certainly not comprehensible to a bystander with only a casual interest. Assuming that you want to accommodate such persons at all, you will save yourself a good deal of trouble, time, and annoyance by treating them to some stage magic suitably disguised as “the Black Arts”. Your audience will have a better time - and so will you!

So far we have discussed LBM on an individual or small-group basis. It is also a useful technique in mass situations. The governing principle remains the same: to impel behavior at the subconscious level, to control people without their realizing how or why they are being controlled. LBM applied to the mass falls under the twin headings of politics and propaganda. If you find this disappointingly self-evident, don’t go ahead to the next chapter quite so fast. The only difference between politics and stage magic is one of scale. There are certain things you are intended to see, say, and do; and the politician’s actions are planned and carried out accordingly. Rarely will the apparent rationale be the real one.

Propaganda is the use of political techniques for a variety of behavior-control objectives besides those normally associated with “politics”. The content of the propaganda can be true or false, and the apparent origin of the propaganda can be true or false, and the propaganda can be beneficially intended just as easily as it can be nefariously intended. High school presentations to frighten youngsters away from venereal disease exposure are propaganda, every bit as much as the infamous “brain washing” techniques of the North Koreans.

Modern society is engulfed by power-seeking disguised as altruistic politics, and by propaganda disguised as information. There is no exception, just as there is no free lunch. This is so important that I will repeat it: There is no exception, just as there is no free lunch. (RL#23E, #23G) The point to be taken is not that you should become paranoid and antisocial. The point is rather that you should accustom yourself to looking for actual motives and purposes behind the presented ones. Hence you will be able to make your own decisions based on your position relative to the actual motives and purposes. It is really that simple, and it is not hard to do. [Once you develop the habit of doing this, you will be astonished at how easily you used to be led around by the nose!]

The major political motives, ideas, and ideologies of Western society are dissected for you in #14P and throughout category #16. #19L and #19P will expose you to basic propaganda theory. By all means pursue advanced research in either topic as time and interest move you.

Ethics in the Use of Black Magic

As you become adept in LBM, you will be tempted to use it for all manner of personal gratification. The more skilled you are, the more you will be inclined to think that you can get away with almost anything. The governing factor is not whether you can or can’t, but rather whether your consciously-determined ethics allow you to.

As you begin to direct your life independently of morals, codes, and customs imposed upon you by the politics and propaganda of society, you will have to assume the responsibility for your own ethics. Only if you are known to be a strictly ethical individual will your rejection of social norms be tolerated. Otherwise you will be ostracized and probably persecuted by society. If it cannot be sure of controlling you, it will tend not to trust you to control yourself intelligently unless you make it very clear that you can do precisely that. In that case society will tend not only to tolerate you, but even to respect and admire you for the unique, creative being that you are. The following section discusses ethics in greater detail.

Before one can consider the proper place of ethics in Setian behavior, “ethics” as a term must be raised from a vague sentiment to something more concrete. It is, unfortunately, one of those terms whose elusiveness has made it all too susceptible to casual and cursory use. “He’s an ethical person,” we say - and leave it at that. What are ethics? How can we identify them, and how should we judge them?

Ethics, alternatively called moral philosophy, seeks to distinguish what is good from what is bad and to formulate justifiable reasons for making such distinctions.

As a branch of philosophy, ethics is a normative science; that is, it seeks to identify principles of good and evil that transcend social, cultural, or political convention (social contract theory).

Beyond a merely normative approach to ethics is metaethics, which seeks to investigate normative currency-terms such as “good”, “evil”, “justice”, “ought”, “right”, and “wrong”. The neutrality and objectivity of metaethics depend on the assumption that such terms are not dependent upon moral beliefs (such as religion). The metaethical concept of naturalism, advanced by theorists such as John Dewey and Herbert Spencer posits that moral terms have a basis in scientific fact. Intuitionists agree that moral terms have an external, reliable basis, but attribute it to self-evident (“I know it when I see it”) qualities.

Challenging intuitionists and naturalists are moral skeptics who insist that moral terms are completely arbitrary. Emotivists claim that such terms have no capacity for being true or false in themselves, and that the people who use them are simply stating their emotions about an issue. Subjectivists maintain that moral judgments state subjective facts only about attitudes, not the objects of those attitudes. And Imperativists insist that moral judgments are actually “commands” in another guise, hence do not focus at all on criteria of truth or objectivity.

When even its basic language terms are so fraught with controversy, normative ethics is off to a rough start. Beyond this are arguments over the criteria for making any kind of moral judgment. Teleologists maintain that the morality of an action is determined solely by its consequences. Some teleologists, such as Plato, insist that the perfection of the self is the correct consequence; hedonists say that it is mere pleasure; utilitarians counter that it must be the greatest benefit to society. Theologians, such as Aquinas, Luther, et al., dispense with teleology altogether in favor of obedience to proclaimed or perceived morality from a God or gods.

The sharpest attack on ethics generally comes from egoists such as Thomas Hobbes and Friedrich Nietzsche (cf. his Genealogy of Morals) [and Ragnar Redbeard!], who consider all ethics as verbal camouflage to conceal the reality that all actions are merely in the interest of the stronger (who by that same strength dictates all definitions of “justice”, “right”, etc.). The egoist position was represented in the Platonic Dialogue The Republic by Glaucon, and went on to form the basis for Enlightenment “social contract” theories (Hobbes, Locke, Rousseau), wherein “justice” and related terms became simply (!) matters of agreement and contract between the people of a society.

Accordingly it is not surprising that practical problem-solvers shy away from metaethical issues and try rather to address questions in terms of what are generally called descriptive ethics - the customs and standards of a given culture which serve as measurements of rightness and wrongness within that culture. An acceptance of descriptive ethics as ethics leads to an attitude of ethical relativism, according to which there is no standard for judging right and wrong apart from the cultural environment of specific situations. Hence the killing of humans by humans may be “ethical” if sanctioned by a judge or national sovereign, but the identical act may be “unethical” if undertaken by an individual, regardless of reasons.

Until the Enlightenment of the late-17th and 18th centuries, ethical philosophy was completely metaethical; standards of good and evil were accepted as being prescribed by one or more divinities or divine principles (neteru, Forms). It was humanity’s task not to determine ethics, but rather to understand and obey divinely-ordained ethics.

The ancient Egyptians perceived the Universe as actively controlled by conscious, natural principles or “gods” (neteru in hieroglyphic). To the Egyptians, all of “nature” (derived from neteru) was alive and the direct consequence of the wills of the neteru. Nature was intelligible not just through inanimate, automatic, general regularities which could be discovered via observation, but also through connections and associations between things and events perceived in the human mind. There was no distinction between “reality” and “appearance”; anything capable of exerting an effect upon the mind thereby existed. Justice and virtue were sought in manifestations of beauty, symmetry, and harmony, and were personified by the goddess Ma’at.

In contrast to the Egyptian view of humanity as being a harmonious component of nature - symbolized by the pharaoh’s position as half-divine deputy of the neteru - ancient Mesopotamian tradition posited humanity as something estranged from the gods. Virtue in Mesopotamia was thus understood as obedience to the willful desires of the god(s), not harmony with their natural principles. Mesopotamian kings sought the “right ruling” of their communities in accordance with the Akkadian principle of shulmu (later the Hebrew shalom), a term meaning not just “peace” but the community well-being that engenders peace. In the Hebraic system, God is not intelligible through reason or logic, but rather through prophecy and the history of events, whether or not the events’ outcomes seem situationally appropriate (theodicy). The Hebraic presumption of a “covenant” between mankind and a divinity reflected the notion that mankind is given a “mission” and/or a “destiny”, and that virtue lies in the fulfillment of that mission/destiny - whether or not it is aesthetically palatable or even understandable. Herein lie the roots of a certain kind of “outcome-justified” thinking that is prevalent in modern culture.

The ethics of Plato reflect his commitment to teleology, the doctrine that purpose and design are apparent in nature, and that natural phenomena move inexorably towards certain goals of ultimate self-realization. [The opposite of teleology is mechanism, which describes phenomena in terms of prior causes rather than presumed destination or fulfillment. Modern science is thus mechanistic.]

In his Dialogues Plato, through the character of Socrates, endorsed the Egyptian and Pythagorean model of human virtue as a particularization of Universal principles (an application of his famous “Theory of the Forms”). Such Forms or principles could be apprehended through rigorous exercise of the higher faculties of reason (dianoia), leading to an intuitional or nœtic apprehension of the good - and a simultaneous veneration of it for its own sake. This process Plato referred to as the dialectic, meaning self-teaching through the examination and refutation of logically- or factually-imperfect concepts.

In Plato’s Republic Socrates is unable to directly refute Glaucon’s egoist charge that justice is merely a rationalization for the prevailing of the interests of the stronger. Socrates can only suggest, through the analogy of a perfectly-harmonious “republic”, that it is more natural for a man to be just if his psyche is healthy and each part is doing its proper work. The virtuous state is held up as “the psyche writ large”.

Aristotle, the most famous of the early mechanists, laid the groundwork for situational ethics by denying that virtue, truth, beauty, and the other Pythagorean/Platonic Forms existed in an absolute sense. Such values, as they applied to humanity, were rather to be sought in moderation between unacceptable extremes in specific situations: Aristotle’s doctrine of the “golden mean”.

Until this point in human history, ethics and politics were inseparable; the individual’s good and the community’s good had to be pursued together; there was no such thing as “personal ethics within an unethical state”, nor “an ethical state comprised of unethical citizens”. The sins of Œdipus necessitated not only his blinding but his exile, and Socrates’ challenge to the harmony of Athens was considered sufficient grounds to condemn him to death. Socrates himself acknowledged this principle, accepting his execution as a “cure” of his function as a kind of social “illness” - albeit one whose impact would ultimately strengthen the Athenian political culture.

In the Hellenistic era - the period following the conquests of Alexander the Great - ancient mankind lost its innocence. Elaborate philosophical systems dependent upon specific cultural deities were discredited when other cultures with different philosophies and different gods were seen to be doing just as well - and perhaps better. Materialism was the order of the day, and the power of ethics to influence society was denied by the Cynics and Skeptics. If virtue had any place in human affairs, it was in one’s personal conduct. Epicureanism held that virtue could be found in the happiness of the soul, and that such happiness was to be pursued by disassociating oneself from the corruption of society. Stoicism also despaired of social ethics, but insisted that personal ethics were to be pursued by one’s labors within the social fabric rather than apart from it.

The importance of Stoicism to the subsequent path of Western civilization can scarcely be overemphasized. Stoics, like Aristotle, sought validation of knowledge in sense-experience rather than through abstract logic or intuition. A wise man, said the Stoics, can distinguish reliable impressions (kataleptika phantasia = “grasping impressions”) from ethereal ones. Humanity is integral with nature; virtue is to be found in reason-based endurance of the natural flux. Thus if evil comes to the good man, it is only temporary and not really evil, since in the greater sense it is natural. The Stoic thus accepts the fortunes and misfortunes of life calmly, seeking to avoid passionate loss of objectivity. The Stoics’ ideal was a gradually-evolving “world society” (cosmopolis) transcending geographic and cultural divisions.

Stoicism was the primary ethical force in the Roman Republic and Empire, and it is not surprising to find its core principles adopted by early Christianity. Augustine’s doctrine of the “two cities” reflected the Stoic notion of a virtuous soul co-existing with a flawed social system. By the medieval era, the “two cities” had been refined into Thomas Aquinas’ “hierarchy of laws”, with social and political “human law” placed firmly beneath [church-] revealed “divine law” and Stoic-derived “natural law”. The contradictions and corruptions of such a climate spawned Machiavelli.

Niccolo Machiavelli (after whom the Devil began to be called “Old Nick”) sought to prescribe wise conduct (virtu) for Italian princes faced with unavoidable problems (necessita) brought about by factors beyond their control (fortuna). Contrary to his church-propagandized image, Machiavelli was constantly and intensely concerned with the establishment of the ethical society, and his manipulative techniques were justified in his eyes by the “best political results under the circumstances” that he expected as the eventual outcome. Precisely quoted, the famous passage from Chapter #18 of The Prince reads:

> In the actions of all men, and especially of princes who are not subject to a court of appeal, we must always look to the end.

While Machiavelli advocated the tacit manipulation of society for deliberate [and ultimately virtuous] ends, early Protestant theorists such as Martin Luther and John Calvin regarded ethics as being beyond the rational reach of mankind. The basis for ethical behavior, they said, is that a righteous man will automatically incline towards such behavior, not because it is logically or empirically justified in itself. Salvation (=attainment of righteousness) is attainable only through the complete surrender of oneself to Christ. This constituted a rejection of medieval scholasticism, and of the “logical ethics” arguments of Aristotle (whom Luther called “this damned, conceited, rascally heathen”) and Aquinas. The impact of the Protestant Reformation was to remove the rational basis and responsibility for either personal or social ethics, replacing these with the notion of ethics as a suprarational article of religious faith - to be selectively invoked by spokesmen for that religion.

With the social-contract theorists of the 17th- and 18th-century “Enlightenment” came a renaissance of reason - including as the negotiated basis for ethics. Thomas Hobbes, after Glaucon, denied the religious tenet of a “supreme good”, seeing in its place only material self-interest and gratification. Hobbes’ prescribed social contract was thus a negative one, establishing an atmosphere of truce between citizens who would otherwise savage one another mercilessly. Such a contemptuous view of humanity evolved forward into many “lower” ideologies of contemporary society, most conspicuously communism. “Hobbes,” Karl Marx is said to have muttered, “is the father of us all.” It should be pointed out, however, that Hobbes’ reputation for harshness came not from personal preference, but rather from a coldly practical analysis of what makes human beings behave unpleasantly towards one another. Previously “evil” had been excused as a theological force, or as the result of “original sin”, i.e. something for which rational individuals could not be held exclusively responsible. Hobbes denied such excuses.

In contrast to Hobbes, John Locke suggested that social-contract nations could exist on a positively cooperative basis of mutual interest. It is important to note that Locke’s prescription was based not on idealistic abstractions (such as ethics), but rather on attainable material objectives: “life, liberty, and estate”. Like Hobbes, he sought to design a society reflecting “basic man” rather than one espousing unattainable ideals and expectations. Locke’s positively-cooperative assumptions and prescription for limited government based upon majority rule formed the philosophical basis for the American Declaration of Independence and Constitution, to include the latter’s Bill of Rights [against the government]. Locke recommended a “reasonable Christianity” - a faith which, while satisfying personal religious desires, would play only a symbolic and ceremonial role in political decision-making.

The history of social-contract ethics does not cease with John Locke, but his ideas, as immortalized in the aforementioned documents, ordained the ethical atmosphere of United States political culture, in which the Temple of Set is principally based, to the present day. This atmosphere may be summarized in five general maxims:

1. Government based on law is a positive institution, not something to be eliminated in an ideal society.
2. Good government is a construct of the people and is responsible to them (social contract theory), not to a higher religion, destiny, or ideology.
3. The will of the people is best ascertained through the opinion of the majority, which thus determines “political truth”. [It is precisely because there is no authority superior to such majority opinion that Locke placed certain “inalienable rights” of all humanity beyond the reach of government.]
4. As society is based upon cooperative self-interest, so the attractions of such self-interest - for example, private property - must be preserved and enhanced as beneficial and indeed vital features of that society.
5. There is an intrinsic dignity in the individual human life which must be accepted and respected as an article of faith.

To the Lockean frame of mind, these values are, in the words of the Declaration of Independence, “held to be self-evident”; they are beyond debate, beyond compromise. Nevertheless many other cultures do not accept them in whole or part - and do not necessarily see this as a deficiency in their social structures.

As the United States aged sufficiently to develop a sense of and regard for its own history, “pure” Lockean theory became leavened with a measure of ethical conservatism: an acceptance of certain things as “good” simply because they have continued to be tolerated over an extended period of time.

Conservatism was elevated to a deliberate ethical philosophy by David Hume, who defined the morally good as what one ought to do according to prevailing passionate custom. Hume denied that the good could be ascertained by dispassionate reasoning. Reason, he said, is useful only to discover the most practical or sensible approaches to problems. Hence virtue and vice are products of sentiment. Virtue is not approved because it is “intrinsically virtue”; it is considered to be virtue because it meets with passionate approval.

The point of this brief tour through certain key concepts in the evolution of ethics is simply to show clearly what all too many people perceive only dimly and imprecisely - how the United States has developed its “official ethics”. If this background is not understood, Setians cannot clearly understand why certain ethical norms are expected in this country - or understand why some foreign cultures “mysteriously/unreasonably” reject those norms ... often on what they consider to be ethical grounds!

The science of ethics is not peripheral or incidental to the Temple of Set; it is central to it. Whether people hold a certain opinion or behave in a certain way is critically influenced by whether or not they believe themselves justified in so doing. Once “rightness” or “wrongness” is established, specific LBM Workings will be interpreted accordingly. In order to be effective, a magician must first recognize and consciously appreciate the ethical components of his designs that are particular to their cultural point of origin.

Earlier in this chapter it was demonstrated that Western civilization’s efforts to apprehend “truth” - and to answer the integral question of whether “truth” and “the good” are inseparable - have been arduous and frustrating. The United States emerged at a moment in history - the Enlightenment - when reason reigned supreme, and so the values of the Enlightenment’s most optimistic and practical political philosopher, John Locke, were incorporated into our Constitution.

Lockean values have served us reasonably well these past two centuries, but what of those countries who have “worshipped strange gods”? What do they know of “the good”, and in what respect - if any - do they hold “the truth”?

The principal social contract theorists - Hobbes, Locke, and Rousseau - viewed the state as a man-made construct, justifiable only as it might serve the interests of its citizens. The first of the two great challenges to this preeminence of the individual came from Georg W.F. Hegel, who insisted that the state is prior to man.

Hegel conceived of the Universe as the manifestation of God’s mind seeking complete self-realization through a process called dialectic idealism. As applied to our particular planet, it is the concept that the history of the world consists of part of the spirit of God, manifesting itself through the collective spirits of mankind, moving onwards through logic (the dialectic) towards completion. An existing idea (thesis) is criticized and partially refuted by its opposite (antithesis), resulting in a more perfect product (synthesis). Hegel felt the organic state to be the manifestation or reflection of the dialectic of God’s mind in the world. Accordingly it might well proceed in ways and towards goals which are not necessarily the sum total of the ways and goals of the individual human minds within it.

The task of national leaders, according to Hegel, is thus to apprehend the “spirit of the state” (Volksgeist) and to make their decisions in support of its furtherment rather than for the citizens who may chance to populate it at a given point in time. The Enlightenment values of individualism and rights against a government were considered by Hegel to limit freedom: Since they reduce the scope and power of the whole, they serve to limit possibility.

Hegel plus a heavy dose of 19th-century Wagnerian Romanticism pointed the way to the state-cults of Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy. Germany in particular sought to displace the sense of life-consciousness from the individual human being to the state. Most Germans were able to achieve this only in a mundane sense - in a kind of ecstatic selflessness created and sustained by propaganda. But the “monk-knights” of the pre-war SS could disdain, even willingly embrace the death of the individual human body according to the doctrine that disciplined personal consciousness could be transferred to a larger life-form - that of the Hegelian state - and that individual sacrifice towards the strengthening of that life-form would actually contribute towards one’s greater immortality. In a very real way incomprehensible to the mundane mind, therefore, all of the individual-death references in the SS - such as the Totenkopf insignia and ritual pledges of “faithfulness unto death” - were in fact arrogant affirmations of immortality. To Dr. Rauschning Hitler remarked:
To the Christian doctrine of the infinite significance of the individual human soul and of personal responsibility, I oppose with icy clarity the saving doctrine of the nothingness and insignificance of the individual human being, and of his continued existence in the visible immortality of the nation. The dogma of vicarious suffering and death through a divine savior gives place to that of the representative living and acting of the new Leader-legislator, which liberates the mass of the faithful from the burden of free will.

Both National Socialism and Fascism are now episodes in history, but the principle which underlay their phenomenal power and impact - the organic state as prior to its citizens - remains very much a force in the contemporary international environment.

In the United States, social and political truth is arrived at via the methods specified in the Constitution, all of which are based on some combination of direct or representative voting. Our national perception of truth is thus democratic - an approach which John Locke would consider eminently reasonable, but one which would affront Plato and Hegel. To them, truth was/is an absolute principle - not something to be determined by whim, much less by the masses. Plato held that truth could be attained through the dialectic of human philosophical enquiry; Hegel insisted that only God could consciously employ such a dialectic, and that the most humanity could hope for was to sense its reflection through the dynamics of the state.

What is it we see when we look at the many “democracies” and “republics” of the world and perceive them to be behaving not as vehicles for the benefit of their individual citizens, but rather as cultural amœbæ of ethnocentric, even xenophobic passion which contemptuously sweep aside appeals to reason? A few are relics of ancient theocratic systems, but most have shed this worn-out skin only to regenerate it under the guise of the Volksgeist.

One may indeed communicate with the citizens of such cultures as individuals, but to influence the culture as a whole one may not appeal just to the citizens’ individual desires. Rather one must speak to the interest of whatever it is that they perceive their “national spirit” to be. To seek to “Westernize” it - to alter citizens’ conception of the state into a social-contract model - is to attack not a set of rational opinions, but an article of faith which is perceived to be the very fountain of truth and ethics.

The second great challenge to social-contract individualism came, of course, from Karl Marx. Marx was strongly influenced by Hegel, but believed that Hegel had made a fundamental mistake in using nations as the basis for his dialectic and in relating it to a divine manifestation or purpose. Marx considered the dialectic to be a function of economic struggle between social classes, and he denied the existence of any supernatural intelligence, calling all religion “the opiate of the masses”.

Marxism, sometimes called dialectic materialism to distinguish it from the dialectic idealism of Hegel, is a theory of socialism that identifies class struggle as the fundamental force in history. Increasing concentration of industrial control in the capitalist class and the consequent intensification of class antagonisms and of misery among the workers will lead to a revolutionary seizure of power by the proletariat and the subsequent establishment of a classless, utopian society.

Marx, like Hegel, premised his ideas on a necessary, inevitable process of history. Thus communism would eventually come to pass, no matter what capitalism tries to do to stop it. The other side of this coin is that there is nothing Marxists can do to speed it up; their society must first evolve to the “last stages” of decadent capitalism. This didn’t suit V.I. Lenin, who wanted to accelerate evolution a little. His prescription for doing so was the so-called “dictatorship of the proletariat”, under which a communist elite would force-march the masses towards their eventual paradise. The state apparat would then “wither away”.

As in the case of Hegelian state-preeminence, communism cannot simply be challenged or refuted by appeals to individual self-interest. To a serious Marxist, history is again moved by far greater forces than the wills of individuals who may chance to inhabit it at a given point in time. Marxist states view the advanced capitalist cultures as social bombs collectively approaching critical mass; their desire is accordingly to avoid being caught up in the desperate external adventurism, including apocalyptic warfare, which they expect deteriorating capitalist nations to employ in an effort to stave off their inevitable communist revolutions.

Communism [to use the label by which modern Marxism is generally known] incorporates two attitudes towards the truth. The “greater truth” - the materialist dialectic - is considered to be absolute, and adherence to it is once again supra-rational: an article of faith. Why an article of faith? Because the people, if given the sole power to determine the government, might revolt against it again - particularly if it is not [as per Locke] designed to facilitate their pursuit of personal interests. The option of further revolution must therefore be removed - by representing the Communist Party as the “priesthood” of a “god” higher than that of the people themselves. In service to this “god”, lesser ethical issues are unimportant - and indeed heretical if they confuse or inhibit the greater truth.

When capitalists seek to “reason” with communists, they fail to realize that they are regarded as ignorant, corrupt, or deluded by their very inability to see and accept the “great truth”. A sincere communist does not reason with such an opponent any more than with a child; he seeks rather to placate, deceive, or otherwise control him.

To communicate with a communist theoretician is thus a difficult task. One must first establish basic rapport by displaying an understanding of, if not an agreement with Marxist theory. Immediate goals of mutual interest may then be pursued jointly insofar as they do not intrude into ideological realms where the communist’s position must necessarily rigidify.

A curious and paradoxical picture emerges from this examination of communist vs. capitalist ethics. In the West we are accustomed to regard the United States as a religious society, and to condemn communism for its “godlessness”. In communist countries theorists disdain Western adherence to religion and take pride in communism’s “state atheism”. But is this picture borne out in practice?

Locke advocated a national structure in which supreme wisdom lay in the will of the citizenry and in which organized religion played only a symbolic and ceremonial role: in his words a “reasonable Christianity”. Our governments have since approached our national and international problems under the presumption that the free will of the human beings directly involved will order the course of events. This is vintage Enlightenment-thinking, and to date the United States has seen no reason to subordinate it to any “higher authority”. In terms of its political decision-making processes, the United States behaves atheistically.

On the other hand, communist leaders do not consider themselves able to control or influence the passage of events as free agents. They may make minor adjustments here and there, but the basic course of the future is above and beyond their control, locked in place according to Marx’ principles of historic determinism. Like the ancient Mesopotamians, they perceive themselves as the incidental tools of a “god” - whose name just happens to be Dialectic Materialism instead of Baal or Marduk. In terms of its political decision-making processes, communism behaves theistically.
Where ethics are concerned, therefore, capitalism holds itself fully responsible for its own, while communism considers any and all “minor” ethical abuses automatically justified if in service of its “god”. This is a very crucial point - and it explains why the United States goes through such persistent agonies of self-criticism while communist countries such as China and the late Soviet Union shrug off far more horrendous excesses.

[At the conclusion of the 20th Century CE, the Soviet Union dissolved into constituent quasi-capitalist states. Communism as a political and economic phenomenon has revealed its fragility. It will be interesting to see what happens to communism as a “religion”.

The Black Magician contemplating a particular LBM working must therefore determine not only whether that working will be ethical in his eyes, but also ethical according to the cultural mind-sets of all other parties to the working: participants, objects, catalysts, witnesses. To label a working “good” or “evil” by some knee-jerk, propagandistic formula is entirely inadequate. [Formula “good/evil” values are merely appropriate for the profane masses, who can’t - and don’t want to - understand anything more precise.]

There is thus no easy answer to the question of whether a given magical act is “good” or “evil”. In itself it is ethically neutral. As Machiavelli so clearly observed, it is the result it produces which will be judged - and then it is up to the magician to determine what judgments - by which judges - will be important. Successfully conducted, such an assessment will not only reinforce the success of a given working; it will also ensure that the magician correctly anticipates the actual consequences of its immediate results.

This chapter was intended to achieve two goals: First, to alert you to the fact that everyone in the world is practicing LBM on everyone else, usually unconsciously and usually extremely unskillfully. Second, to advise you that, as you become sensitive to its use on you - and skilled in your own use of it on others - you can accomplish a great deal. You will now have to go out and study the aforementioned subjects, practice them, and become fluent in them before they will be of any real use to you. Just reading this chapter and assuming that you “get the message” is not sufficient.

It is perhaps appropriate to conclude with a brief but necessary warning: As an association of Adepts in LBM, the Temple of Set could not function cooperatively if its Initiates practiced this particular Art on one another, no matter with what good intentions. You are trusting the Temple and its sages to enhance and Recognize your self-initiation - not to mislead or exploit you for lesser/ulterior purposes. You must reciprocate in turn. So remember this point and remember it well:

Do not - ever - attempt to control another Setian through LBM.

Because he trusts you not to, his usual guards will be down, and you may think him easy to influence in this way. Nevertheless it is just a question of time before either your “victim” or another Setian realizes what is happening, whereupon you will find yourself facing probable expulsion.

In all contacts and communications within the Temple, be straightforward, direct, and open. In profane society you might be pounced upon as a “mark” or “sucker” for such behavior, but within the Temple of Set you will find yourself trusted and respected as a fellow Initiate and magician.
A week or so ago I received a surprise phone call from an NBC reporter in Los Angeles asking me what I knew about sinister/occult messages being “reverse-mastered” on rock music albums. “Nothing to be gained by it, even if it is occurring,” I said, “since it would be far more effective to insert magical messages straightforwardly.” “Do you know any group that does that?” asked NBC. “Sure,” I said. “The Jefferson Starship’s been doing it for over a decade.” “Yes, we heard that you had some connection with the Starship,” said NBC. “Anything to that?”

Suddenly I had visions of Charles-Manson-and-the-Beatles “exposes”, followed by Jerry Falwell picketing the Starship’s Earth-base over on Fulton Street. “Paul Kantner and I corresponded briefly in ’75-78,” I said, “but that was about it. None of the Starship are or were affiliated with the Temple of Set, and none of them has been involved with conventional Black Magic.” NBC sounded disappointed, but gradually perked up as our discussion led into some of the other exotic interests of the Temple.

In fact the story of the Temple of Set and the Jefferson Starship is a good deal weirder than Charles Manson’s fixation with “Helter Skelter”, and far more Black Magical in the bargain. As with so many other things concerning the Temple, however, it is so complicated that an answer to Mr. NBC would have churned up his phone bill well beyond its already 3-hour bite ...

18 years ago in August a new band opened in San Francisco at a small nightclub named the Matrix. Calling itself the Jefferson Airplane, it soon became the most prominent band of the Haight-Ashbury “acid rock” culture. The themes of its songs [and first 6 albums] were those of the late 1960s: love, political protest, and psychedelic fantasia. Flying my loudspeaker-equipped psychological warfare chopper around Vietnam in 1969-70, I used to treat U.S. fire-support bases to a sky-blasted (12-horn/12,000 watt) tape of “Volunteers of America” or “Somebody to Love” before my trademark, Simon & Garfunkel’s “Big Bright Green Pleasure Machine”.

In 1970 I returned to San Francisco, was ordained to the Satanic Priesthood, and encountered a very singular new album which I wrote up in the Nineveh Grotto’s Blacklist newsletter. Bearing Paul Kantner’s name and “Jefferson Starship” (rather than “Airplane”), it was called Blows Against the Empire. Kantner’s compositions, arranged in a loose sequence, told the story of a group of young counter-culture Americans, increasingly alienated and frustrated by the climate of the Johnson/Nixon era, who ultimately decided to hijack an orbiting starship just constructed by the government and go streaking off into the cosmos en route to the Andromeda Galaxy. At the end of the accompanying libretto booklet was a proclamation:

We intend to hijack the first sound interstellar or interplanetary starship built by the people of this planet. A time of 3-7 months will be needed for tantronic conversion of the machinery to make it usable for practical travel - involving light years. We need people on Earth now to begin preparing the necessary tools. There will be room for 7,000 or more people. If it seems that your head is into this, please write & talk about something for a bit. You will not be contacted immediately. Please just prepare your minds & your bodies. Experiment - move your mind. Practice telepathy & telekinesis - if you feel it. Search out Atlantis. It lives and breathes inside of you. Join us - a plunge into reality.

Unfortunately Blows Against the Empire was rather ahead of its time. The fad of the day was not space migration but the “Jesus Freak” movement. The “Jefferson Starship” grew back to being the Jefferson Airplane, and for the next 4 years produced 4 albums - Sunfighter, Bark, Long John Silver, and Baron von Tollbooth & the Chrome Nun - characterized by increasing musical expertise and a kaleidoscope of themes and images. By now Grace Slick and Paul Kantner were all that remained of the original 1966 band, but the availability of guest crew for the Airplane seemed endless.

Kantner’s 1971-73 songs appeared to demphasize space travel in favor of magical and mystical concepts, ancient Egypt, and weird, futuristic fantasies. In Bark (1971) he had first focused on the summer of 1975 as an occasion of special importance, but seemed reluctant to be specific. As late as May 30, 1975, when asked what he thought was about to occur, he responded: “I think it is going to be obvious by the end of the summer where this country is going. I’d be really surprised if it isn’t. Several different possibilities, depending upon whether you are optimistic or pessimistic. Either you are going to have Gerald Ford for another 30 years and it will keep getting progressively worse, or it will explode in a civil situation, or it’s going to get better. And there is a great chance of it getting better from any number of natural and supernatural origins.”

“I don’t know,” commented Grace Slick. “I’ve asked Paul a number of times what he means in the lyrics. He says, ‘I don’t know - any way you take it.’ I’m sure he means well, but I really don’t know what he is talking about. I think the political situation all over is so screwed up that nothing is going to come together, and actually once a week something else falls apart. Then next week something else falls apart, and the next week something else. It doesn’t seem to go ‘Blam!’ all at once.”

In terms of mundane history 1975 proved to be neither more nor less noteworthy than its predecessors and successors. It did prove to be a very significant year for the band itself, as its latest album, Dragonfly, had mushroomed into an unprecedented hit.
Coincidentally it had been released under the signature of “Jefferson Starship”. The theme which had been ahead of its time in 1970 was now perfectly timed, aligned, and focused.
The United States had just emerged from the Scylla of Vietnam and the Charybdis of Watergate into energy shortages and ecological doomsday forecasts. Escapism was pervasive, beginning with revivals or the old Star Trek television series and culminating a year later in the popular hysteria that greeted George Lucas’ Star Wars.

Everyone in the music/literary world had an explanation for the Jefferson Starship’s sudden success. It was the return of Marty Balin, or it was the new sophistication of the music, or Grace Slick’s voice was now repaired/perfected. All such analyses blissfully ignored the elegantly simple fact of the name-change. Everyone was now longing to escape to space, and here was a genuine space-band to sing us on our way.

Until 1975 the Jefferson Airplane had been significant to me primarily as an “old San Francisco friend”, nostalgically comforting to hear as I roamed about the planet. But the crisis and destruction of the Church of Satan, the Book of Coming Forth by Night, and the creation of the Temple of Set on the Summer Solstice of 1975 suddenly made Paul Kantner’s predictions very intriguing indeed. I sensed the presence of a Magical Link.

From their disconnected beginnings in San Francisco nine years earlier, both the Jefferson Airplane and the Church of Satan had passed through a “lens” in 1975 and emerged as something totally different. The only one of the original thirty copies of the Book of
As the Temple of Set began to emerge in its newfound identity, Kantner’s curiosity was aroused. “Beware the respectable,” he wired me. “Interested in your explorations of 7 deadly sins. What do you pursue in your community? I’m coming through soon, perhaps, and care to explore the limits. What can you offer?”

“Essentially,” I answered, “the Temple of Set is a machine to facilitate the exchange of information and ideas between Setians; it is a means, not an end. The real value of the Temple lies in the minds of the Setians themselves.” But Kantner’s question continued to provoke me. He was in quest of “the limits” - presumably of human consequence. He himself was pursuing this quest through the medium of musical expression, and very successfully so. How might a “machine” like the Temple of Set embrace such a quest? The projects and priorities of the Temple being what they were, I didn’t have a chance to devote serious time to the problem for another two years - during which time the Starship launched two more albums, Spitfire and Earth.

Since the Winter Solstice of X/1975 the Temple of Set had been researching the concepts of human evolution and extra-terrestrial migration, the results of which were sent to the Priesthood in a series of five working papers under the general title Setamorphosis. Setamorphosis-V crystallized the research into a proposal entitled Project Atlantis, addressed to both the Priesthood and Paul Kantner:

The object of Project Atlantis is to execute a three-phase operation designed to provide a base for simultaneous transmission to both Earth and outer space. Such transmission is to be entirely artistic and without any military or utilitarian/scientific influences or applications whatever. Project Atlantis is to be controlled by a non-profit corporation specifically designed for this purpose, with directors designated by the J.S. and the T.S. but with no other legal or financial ties to either organization or to any other outside agency or institution ...

Phase I’s object is to conduct a single, suborbital transmission from space ca. 1982 by means of the NASA Space Shuttle, which is expected to be operational by 1980 and available for private experiments on a time-sharing basis shortly thereafter. This package may consist of: (1) Transmission of specially recorded, or re-transmission of live music to Earth by the Jefferson Starship. (2) Transmission of the same program to Alpha Centauri and the Andromeda Galaxy in the form of uncoded music or mathematically-encoded impulses. (3) Transmission of test patterns to evaluate communications links between elements of the Temple of Set First and Second Foundations. (4) Transmission of encoded signals by the Temple of Set to Alpha Draconis, Sirius, and the Crab Nebula.

Phase II, ca. 1985, would be a series of scheduled transmissions of a mix similar to that of Phase I, through relay from Earth to an orbiting satellite designed, orbited, and operated by Project Atlantis itself. Difficulties may be encountered because of many nations’ propaganda and censorship policies towards an independent satellite with a trans-world reach. A PSYOP analysis will be conducted accordingly, as will feedback analysis of its influence.

Phase III, programmed for 1990, will consist of enhanced experiments of the order of Phase II, conducted from a manned space station specifically designed for Project Atlantis and controlled by it, subject only to recognized international space treaties. The station will be as inaccessible as possible to any government, military instrument, or interest group. Its sole orientation will be towards the musical, magical, and recreational principles of Project Atlantis. It is conceived as the starting-point for experiments beyond Project Atlantis itself.

Paul Kantner wired back his enthusiasm for the preliminary study, and I began to correspond accordingly with contacts in NASA, RAND, Princeton’s Space Studies Institute, the World Future Society, and the Smithsonian. The preliminary study, prepared in November 1978, identified some serious problems:
The Environmental Fund in Washington, D.C. projects an average annual world population increase during the Project Atlantis time-span of 87.3 million. This figure’s significance lies in its effect upon the freedom of action of U.S. individuals and institutions, including the tightening of domestic budgets [including NASA]. The Soviet Union will have a temporary military advantage over the United States from 1983 to 1985, during which time the U.S.S.R. is projected to be under serious alliance and economic strain. In addition to social pressure against the “selfish” use of an orbital space station for the recreational/artistic use of a relative few, we would face significant danger of a military threat, considering that nuclear delivery systems are targeted by satellite. In view of the estimated $3,000 per 1.5 square feet of space on the NASA Space Shuttle, we may contact OTRAG in New York and Stuttgart for its estimates. Preliminary data for Phase III will be initiated through NASA’s LDEF program.

Alas, Project Atlantis was doomed. Controversy bordering on outright fear was developing within the Temple of Set, many of whose Initiates weren’t certain they were ready for orbit, much less a trip to M31. If our seasoned Black Magicians were getting cold feet, one may presume that the Starship crewmembers were similarly dubious about translating their Captain’s “quaint fantasy” into something very real - and in collaboration with the dark & diabolical Temple of Set! Moreover the Jefferson Starship had confronted disaster of a more immediate kind during a trip to Germany that year. 12,000 fans had rioted and destroyed over $200,000 of the band’s equipment. An exhausted and unnerved Grace Slick had announced her departure from the group, and co-founder Marty Balin was on the brink of following suit. The appearance of each new Starship album was accompanied by reviews lauding Balin’s love songs and disparaging the “inevitable” Kantner sci-fi pieces.

Project Atlantis, it seemed, would have to be postponed until prospects for its success improved - from all input sources. Then within three months I had retired from the High Priesthood, and the new High Priest was nervous about flights even in conventional airliners.

While awaiting a more opportune launch-date, I decided to take Paul Kantner and Grace Slick to Andromeda anyway - via The Dark Side. Slick was transformed into a fire-dæmon of Sith and a confederate of Darth Vader’s. [She sang beautiful music in Dreams, and I was sorry I had painted such a terrifying picture of her. Then she released Welcome to the Wrecking Ball, and I decided I wasn’t so far off the track after all.] I took the liberty of destroying Kantner’s body and transferring his mind to a Pantechnikon (an “ultimate cyborg”). These two remarkable creatures contributed to the outcome of the Star Wars scenario in a sequence rather more startling than that experienced by audiences of the Lucasfilm movie sequels.

It has taken Paul Kantner five years to get the Jefferson Starship’s engines back to full translite power. Grace Slick is back on board, and this month has seen the release of Kantner’s Planet Earth Rock & Roll Orchestra, the 13-years-delayed evolutionary successor to Blows Against the Empire. [ Appropriately Planet Earth is subtitled The Empire Blows Back.] I could tell you something about the plot, but then your curiosity wouldn’t drive you to acquire the album and hear the music (which is the Key to the Link). [Select the record, not the cassette, as only the former includes the critical documentary inserts.]

The Temple of Set may be returning to its original scope, and the Jefferson Starship may be soaring high again, but Project Atlantis remains dormant. The projections in our initial research have materialized only too well. A constricting network of barriers to Phases I & II have arisen, while the killer satellite technology of the Soviet Union and the military capabilities of the Space Shuttle [whose program was saved from scuttling by Defense Department interest] would make Phase III a highly vulnerable undertaking.
Space colonization efforts pioneered by Gerard O’Neill, deliberately designed to appeal to the corporate profit motive, have yet to yield substantive results. Even so, space efforts by the military/industrial complex are a far cry from the utopian beauty and vision of Project Atlantis. At the other end of the spectrum are the antics of Timothy Leary et al., whose simplistic space migration fantasies tend to subject any serious attempt towards non-M/I use of space to public ridicule [hence disinterest].

Are we then condemned to the placebo of fantasy? Must Paul Kantner content himself with singing about space to audiences attracted far more to the mind-dulling throb of rock concerts than to his lyrical concepts and expressions? Must the bodies of those who are developing Setian consciousnesses remain chained to a biosphere governed increasingly by what Nietzsche described as “the tyranny of the most inferior and the most stupid”, even as their intellects yearn towards the limits of existence? Not necessarily. The Order of the Trapezoid will be concerning itself with research towards Project Atlantis’ successor. If it seems that your head is into this, please write & talk about something for a bit. You will not be contacted immediately. Please just prepare your minds and your bodies ...

Part II: [Musical] Notes Towards Project Andromeda
First published: Runes #II-1
January XIX/1984

Like art, magic is supra-rational. Attempts to explain it - to reduce it to logical statement or argument - always fall short of the original and are thus inadequate and disappointing. Setians are well-acquainted with how difficult it is to explain the atmosphere of a Black Magical ceremony to someone with a conventional, materialistic background. This supra-rational quality also characterizes good music, whose impact on the senses similarly cannot be reduced to words:

Music and architecture - Is it not in these disciplines that we find recorded the path of humanity’s ascent? When I hear Wagner, it seems to me that I hear rhythms of a bygone world. I imagine to myself that one day science will discover, in the waves set in motion by the Rheingold, secret mutual relations connected with the order of the world. The observation of the world perceived by the senses precedes the knowledge given by exact science as well as by philosophy. It is insofar as percipient awareness approaches truth that it has value.

I can’t help wondering what Adolf Hitler, who uttered those words 42 years ago, would think of Paul Kantner and the Jefferson Starship [Yes, the picture of such an encounter strains my imagination too, but read on.] - because more than any other contemporary musical group, the Starship has managed to turn the human voice into a musical instrument. The individual members of the band do not “sing the words to songs which they play on instruments’”; rather they become the songs - so much so that the words frequently become lost within a swelling of sheer musical power. “When it works best,” Kantner says of the Starship, “we become a great churning air machine, capable of moving people to the unknown, of making you cry, laugh, march in silly parades.” All Airplane/Starship albums since Blows Against the Empire have included printed lyrics, so that dazed audiences would be able to interpret at least part of what they had just experienced.

Rock music with complicated and sophisticated themes is never going to be terribly popular, since it demands too much thinking - and people don’t go to rock concerts to think. Quoth Alvin Toffler in his now-classic Future Shock:
The religious fervor and bizarre behavior of certain hippie cultists may arise not merely from drug abuse, but from group experimentation with both sensory deprivation and bombardment. The chanting of monotonous mantras, the attempt to focus the individual’s attention on interior bodily sensation to the exclusion of outside stimuli, are efforts to induce the weird and sometimes hallucinatory effects of understimulation.

So the Starship, while successful and indeed legendary, has never quite been one of those hysterical/smash-hit/teen-craze groups. Its better-known songs have been those with fairly familiar themes of love, and psychedelia. If she sings a thousand other songs, Grace Slick will always be remembered as the girl who sang “White Rabbit”.

And far out in the Twilight Zone of Starship esoterica are the compositions of Paul Kantner, who sine-waves between visions of mankind’s ancient past and evolutionary future. Not too many listeners seem to have devoted much serious thought to the ideas in Kantner’s lyrics, and this is not surprising given their complexity. But what is surprising is that his music seems to have become the target of a modern-day witch-hunt.

Last week I was invited to appear on a radio talk-show with Kantner. Also on the show were one Catholic priest and one fundamentalist pastor from the “Eagle’s Nest Christian Fellowship” in California’s fabled Orange County. The issue of the evening was - seriously! - whether the Devil is french-frying the minds of today’s youth with secret messages recorded backwards into rock-and-roll music.

I thought I had seen it all after The Exorcist movie came out and scores of people around the country began being possessed. But this “reverse-mastering” scam actually seems to be believed - not only by fundamentalist snake-oil salesmen but by many of their audiences as well.

The panel discussion reminded me of nothing so much as the Mad Hatter’s tea party: Whatever Kantner or I said to dispute the accusation was simply ignored by the fundamentalist and his callers [who, since so many addressed him by his first name, I suspect were exhorted in advance to storm the telephone lines].

It began with the accusation that the picture on the cover of the Starship’s Spitfire album shows “the whore of Babylon astride the Beast of Revelation”. Kantner looked pained. “The dragon is a symbol of wisdom and nobility in China,” he said, “and the girl is a Chinese girl.”

Another charge leveled by the fundamentalist was that the song “A Child is Coming” on Blows Against the Empire contained the backwards phrase “the son of Satan”. [The song was written to commemorate the anticipation of Kantner’s and Grace Slick’s daughter China.] A tape was duly played backwards on the show. I for one heard nothing except backwards music and garbled singing.

It would have been a slapstick comedy evening except for the unpleasant surprise that quite a few people evidently believe in such nonsense. It was this blind irrationality that gave me a bit of a chill. In a slightly less 1st-Amendment society than this one, this would be enough to blacklist the Paul Kantners, or even to imprison and kill them. I am reminded, per John Fowles’ Aristas, that the reason Christianity no longer tortures and kills heretics is not because it has become more tolerant or benevolent doctrinally, but rather because secular society forced it to stop.

I had come to the show anticipating an opportunity to discuss some of the fascinating notions on Kantner’s Planet Earth Rock and Roll Orchestra album. Since I spent all of my mike-time doing little more than denying that there were packs of crazed devil-worshippers conducting nameless rites and human sacrifices with Starship music in the background, I had no opportunity to delve into magic. Nor, I think in retrospect, would most of the radio audience have been able to understand very much of it. So here comes what KFRC missed, being notes towards Project Andromeda -or- How the Devil Really Talks to You Through the Planet Earth Rock and Roll Orchestra:

“The Planet Earth Rock and Roll Orchestra,” says Kantner on the album lyric sheet, “is a San Francisco band that, in the near future, develops a computer-assisted telepathic amplification technology. In using the machineries on everything from their audiences to forms of weather control and extrasensory spying, they attract the attention of various government and police agencies and right-wing religious forces.”

Let’s start with telepathy. Since I wrote “Psi in the Sky” for the Cloven Hoof 10 years ago, I have criss-crossed ESP looking for bedrock amidst all of the Uri Geller stage magic and Jeanne Dixon mumbo-jumbo. The idiocy that still makes it into “respectable” print never ceases to amaze me - most recently Targ & Harary’s Mind Race. Targ is a Stanford Research Institute physicist who says that he has worked for a decade on a “multi-million-dollar program of psychic research financed by the Defense Department and intelligence agencies”.

Targ’s pet project consisted of “remote viewing” experiments, on which I happened to be briefed last year at the State Department in Washington, D.C. It was unconvincing, not only because the statistical data are not really conclusive, but also because the transmission of information to the brain simply doesn’t occur outside the visible spectrum. Light-waves from the central fountain in Washington Square Park (alleged to have been “seen” by one of Targ’s subjects) are atmospherically dispersed long before reaching Palo Alto, California.

There’s a lot we don’t know about the brain’s internal design, but how information travels into and around it is no mystery. Electricity - the same stuff that makes flashlights work. Please note that the electrical impulses rocketing around in your head are very weak: To light a flashlight bulb you would have to generate about 30 million times your present level of brain current. Fascinating experiments in ESB (Electrical Stimulation of the Brain) have been done by Dr. Jose Delgado of Yale University and are cited in RL#19F. Delgado’s probes, using tiny amounts of current, were capable of changing moods, stimulating memories, and even causing motor actions despite the conscious will of the subject to resist. If the human skull were not a good insulation against external electricity [which it is], you would have a grand mal seizure and an explosion of utterly arbitrary thoughts every time you drove under a high-tension wire.

Without going into exhaustive detail, therefore, both light waves and the stuff of which thoughts are made don’t travel cross-country. If the Pentagon and the intelligence community did in fact spend several million dollars on snake-oil, P.T. Barnum must be rolling merrily around in his grave.

Now let’s take a look at why Paul Kantner’s notion of a “computer assisted telepathic amplification technology” isn’t nearly so fantastic as it seems at first glance.

The electrical energy in your brain occurs in waves measured according to cycles per second (CPS). 1-3 CPS = Delta waves, characteristic of deep sleep. 4-7 CPS = Theta waves, characteristic of high emotion, violence, and frustration. 8-12 CPS = Alpha waves, characteristic of meditation, relaxation, and “searching for patterns”. 13-22 CPS = Beta waves, characteristic of frontal brain activity, deliberate effort, and logical thought.

We’ll come back to brain waves in a moment, but first a word about another principle: resonance. Resonance is a very interesting concept and deserves a precise definition:

(1) a vibration of large amplitude in a mechanical or electrical system caused by a relatively small periodic stimulus of the same or nearly the same period as the natural vibration period of the system.
(2) the intensification and enriching of a musical tone by supplementary vibration that is either sympathetically or mechanically induced.

In Runes #1-2 I provided a short profile of Dr. Nikola Tesla, the “mad scientist” who went past the boundaries of “recognized” science with, among other things, experiments in resonance. Biographer Margaret Cheney relates (RL#20I):

He attached an oscillator no larger than an alarm clock to a steel link 2’ long and 2” thick. “For a long time nothing happened, but at last the great steel link began to tremble, increased its trembling until it dilated and contracted like a beating heart, and finally broke.” Sledgehammers could not have done it, he told a reporter, crowbars could not have done it, but a fusillade of taps, no one of which would have harmed a baby, did it.

Pleased with this beginning, he put the little oscillator in his coat pocket. Finding a half-built steel building in the Wall Street district, 10 stories high with nothing up but the steelwork, he clamped the oscillator to one of the beams. “In a few minutes I could feel the beam trembling. Gradually the trembling increased in intensity and extended throughout the whole great mass of steel. Finally the structure began to creak and weave, and the steelworkers came to the ground panic-stricken, believing that there had been an earthquake. Before anything serious happened, I took off the oscillator, put it in my pocket, and went away. But if I had kept on 10 minutes more, I could have laid that building flat in the street. And with the same oscillator I could drop Brooklyn Bridge in less than an hour.”

Now a little-known but interesting fact is that brain-waves are subject to the principle of resonance. Energy-waves reaching your brain through any medium - eyes, ears, or flesh - will tend to induce your brain-waves to cycle at the same wave-length. A common example of visual resonance is the seizures that some people experience when exposed to a light flickering at 10 CPS.

The audio spectrum - being the range of sound vibrations which human hearing can consciously detect - is from 15 CPS (bass) to 20,000 CPS (treble). The infrasonic range - 10-15 CPS - is too low to be consciously detected but is nonetheless capable of inducing resonance in the brain. Below infrasound [and sometimes encompassing it] are Extremely Low Frequency (ELF) waves, which are powerful and durable enough to travel through the Earth for communication with submerged submarines.

The relaxation which you paradoxically feel when listening to the deep, heavy throbbing of drums and bass guitars at rock concerts is the same as that felt by American Indians listening to the large dancing-drums accompanying their ceremonial campfires. Resonance is produced which inclines your brain-waves towards Alpha, and if the rate of the beat seems particularly pleasing to you, I recommend that you take your pulse. My guess is that it will be close (somewhere around 70 CPM), which your system will find subconsciously soothing. [If you wish to calm a crying infant, rock its cradle at about that speed, or hold it to your breast so that it can hear the beating of your heart. Try it!]

Now Theta happens to be a very interesting range. Soviet research into PK phenomena has yielded the fact that PK activity is generally associated with a sudden surge of Theta activity at the 4 CPS level. Theta activity is also more common in the brains of young children than in those of adults, which may have something to do with the rumor (which I cannot call more than that) that “poltergeist” activity is usually catalyzed by the presence of a child in the house.

Now let us suppose for a moment that we have a rock-and-roll band whose amplifiers, speakers, and acoustical equipment are already well-suited for infrasonic wave generation. Such a band - call it the Jefferson Starship or the Planet Earth Orchestra, or anything you want to - is currently making people very happy with lots of Alpha-wave resonance. But what if that same band, via computer-assisted technology, produced either sustained or timed/calculated Theta-waves at energy levels strong enough to induce resonance throughout a concert hall containing thousands of people. And suppose all of those people focused their wills on the same thing. And suppose that the energy pattern emerging from those minds-in-concert (neat pun) were received, amplified, and retransmitted at substantially higher energy levels via fairly conventional electronic relay technology ...

Mount Shasta
Natural caves in the ancient mountain. Earth rites - deep human racial memory - a huge primeval fire/forces of nature/tapped/pagan hints of many souls in attendance. Mount Shasta began in the age of the great migrations, when the peoples who had crossed the ice brought their earth rites to the heart of the great mountain. Before dates, before time, before calendars, certain women and men sought out the cave and infused it with deep racial memories of forgotten fire.

Come where I am. An aerial spirit has entered through the walls that separate me from the world.

Resplendent with light, purified by the four elements, pure as the genius of fire, lift the veil - crimson sky.

- Paul Kantner, Planet Earth Rock and Roll Orchestra

The first questions asked by new Setians are usually (1) What is magic? and (2) How can I do it? [Hence Black Magic.] One of the next questions is (3) Where can I do it? The stock answer is “anywhere”, and the customary launching-pad is a magical ritual chamber constructed in one’s abode.

Yet I am quite serious when I say “anywhere”. This planet is bursting with suitably magical environments, and a bit of amateur detective work, coupled with just keeping your eyes and ears open, should be sufficient to alert you to more Satanic Sites than you’d ever dream were in your neighborhood.

As a newly-admitted 1° in IV/1969, I found myself not in San Francisco Babylon, but in Fort Bragg, North Carolina. A bit of delving in local libraries informed me of the existence of the nearby “Devil’s Tramping Ground”, a sterile circle in the woods around which Old Scratch was wont to pace while pondering his Great Works. Brave locals might visit it in the daytime, but none dared go near it at night. I did, of course, and it proved a superb site for a working.

Magician’s block is something like writer’s block. There are many Setians who read enthusiastically about magic and magicians - and then sit around waiting to see others “do magic for them” or just waiting for more to read.

As Black Magic emphasizes, that’s not how to become a magician. You've got to work actively with the principles yourself. At first they will seem awkwardly “mechanical” - and probably painfully so. On one hand you may feel ridiculous and self-conscious, particularly if you really screw up what you thought would be a most serious and solemn working. [I have.] On the other hand you might get so effectively caught up the working that it goes 200% beyond what you planned, and you spend the next several hours pretty shaken up, wondering what on Earth [or under it] you let loose.

Once you are in the habit of watching for magical opportunities, an endless parade of same will pass before you. When Magister DeCecco moved to Las Vegas some time ago, I thought I would call his attention to the Valley of Fire, a lightning-swept plain encircled by craggy peaks that would make Sauron of Mordor feel right at home. I might have saved myself the trouble, however, because DeCecco had already discovered the VoF on his own
- because it is second [first!] nature for him to sense such things. And this is what I encourage you to do.

This article is a sort of case-study about where one such investigation can lead. “Bunny Flat?” you say. Read on -

A few Runes issues ago I got reasonably excited about Paul Kantner’s Planet Earth album. Took Runes readers on a trip through the mechanics of mind-functions and such.
Now that's a very big turkey-breast, and there’s lots of it in the refrigerator left to eat; but a good magician doesn’t neglect the wings and drumsticks either. In this case one of the drumsticks was Mount Shasta. [The other one was Australia. I'll get to Australia later.]

While I may be “a leading figure in the contemporary American occult scene” [per Australian author Nevill Drury], I confess I had paid zero attention to Mount Shasta until the arrival of Planet Earth. After reading the notes quoted at the beginning of this article, and listening to the music, my magician’s nose began to quiver - and so I went Shastahunting.

A good deal of Shasta-data was already buried in my own library & files. It was quickly supplemented by more data and then by an expedition. The results of all this have swollen far beyond a Runes article, but here’s a quick & dirty summary. Now once again, the point of all this is not just to tickle you under the chin with Mount Shasta, but rather to give you an example of the kind of treasure-hunt you can go on whenever and wherever you choose - which is one of the ways you Become an Adept of the Black Arts instead of Mr./Ms. Average Human Bean.

On February 14, 1827 a Hudson’s Bay Company fur scout named Peter Ogden reached the top of the Siskiyou Mountains in souther Oregon and saw for the first recorded time a peak about 50 miles to the south, towering thousands of feet above surrounding crags. In his diary he wrote: “There is a mountain of equal heights to Mount Hood. I have named the mountain ‘Sastice’.” Eighty years later the white men would call it Mount Shasta, but when Ogden asked the Klamat Indians he found at its base for its name, they answered: “He Who Sleeps in the Clouds”.

For about the next 60 years Shasta remained just a big, beautiful mountain. But after Darwin’s Origin of Species was published in 1859, events began to be set in motion that would change Shasta’s image rather markedly.

Among the phenomena most troubling to the Darwinists was the little lemur, since it [together with other fossil, flora, and fauna specimens] was found in such non-connected locales as Madagascar, India, Africa and the Malay Archipelago. English Zoologist Philip Sclater hypothesized a primeval land-mass covering this entire area. In honor of the lemur he called it “Lemuria”. Little did he expect what a Frankenstein Monster he had created!
Some of the more speculative scientists promptly added to the hypothesis. In the 1870s German naturalist Ernst Haeckel went so far as to propose Lemuria as the ancient home of the human race:
Of the five now-existing continents neither Australia nor America nor Europe can have been this primeval home [of man], or the so-called “Paradise” the “cradle of the human race”. Besides southern Asia, the only other of the now-existing continents which might be viewed in this light is Africa. But there are a number of circumstances, especially chronological facts, which suggest that the primeval home of man was a continent now sunk beneath the surface of the Indian Ocean, which extended along the south of Asia, as it is at present (and probably in direct connection with it), towards the east, as far as Further India and the Sunda Islands; towards the west as far as Madagascar and the southeastern shores of Africa ... By assuming this Lemuria to have been man’s primeval home, we greatly facilitate the explanation of the geographical distribution of the human species by migration.

The occultists came running. First on board was Helena Blavatsky of the Theosophical Society. In her 1888 book The Secret Doctrine she avowed that the “Book of Dzyan” included an account of Lemuria in addition to Atlantis. Her “Third Root Race” consisted of Lemurians (as “gigantic, brainless, apelike creatures”). [The fourth RR was Atlantis. Current humanity is the fifth. The Sixth will evolve from us and return to Lemuria, while the Seventh will chuck Earth altogether and emigrate to Mercury.]

Later Theosophists embellished Blavatsky’s Lemurian mythos, most notably Annie Besant and W. Scott-Elliot in his The Story of Atlantis and the Lost Lemuria (1896). Scott-Elliot’s account went into extraordinary detail, offering a sinister picture of semi-reptilian Lemurians [shades of V] who kept pet dinosaurs.

While Scott-Elliot was conjuring up Lemurian monsters, an 18-year-old Shasta-area human named Frederick Spencer Oliver began to write a tale which he said had been inspired by a discarnate personality named “Phylos the Tibetan”. Published in 1896 as A Dweller on Two Planets, it became something of a minor Shasta/occult classic. Oliver/Phylos said nothing about Lemurians, reptilian or otherwise. His Shastoids went by the name of the “Lothinian Brotherhood” and were proper mammals. The Lothinians lived in sumptuous caverns within the mountain, whose interior was a maze of polished walls and fur-carpeted floors. O/P was guided to this inner sanctum by a Dr. Lao-like Chinese initiate named Quong:

We halted in from of a huge ledge of basaltic rocks, some hundreds of feet in height. The ledge was broken and twisted as if by some rending convulsion. All about the base lay huge fragments broken off the face of the wall. Against the cliff rested a giant block many tons in weight. Touching this with his hand, the Tchin said: “Here is our Sach, our Temple, so to say; this rock is guard at the entrance to a place remarkable, to say the least, if viewed from an occidental standpoint.”

The Lothinian Brotherhood had anticipated George Lucas by some time, as may be gleaned from one of their instructions to O/P:

“Thou art impatient, my brother; know then, what was at one time known upon the Earth, but is now for ages forgotten: that Nature has a dual aspect, is double, is positive and negative; that the great positive side is the side known to mundane science, while the other or negative or ‘Night Side’ - or, as it was once known on Earth by the men of Atla ‘Navaz’ - is a side all unknown and scarcely guessed in the most exceeding flights of speculation, left un broached, secretly kept by a few, who knew not that they entertain an angel, an angelic wisdom that in a century more, yea, less time! shall overturn much of the face of terrene things, shall bestow aerial vessels, and all else once known to those men of Atla of whom I spoke. Thou dost not yet understand?”

I said that I did not - that I thought he referred to some domain of the physical forces not yet known; but what had this to do with the Sun?

“This: The suns of systems are centers of forces of the Night Side of Nature whereof I spoke, and are force and matter of a higher value than are planets and satellites, just as water above a cataract is truly water - but being above and mobile, flows over and down, developing energy. In other words, out of the cold, dark, negative side or ‘Night Side’ force emerges, drawn to the positive polarity which constitutes in its outgoing flow that termed ‘Nature’, and develops in its fall magnetism, electricity, light, color, heat, sound, and lastly solid matter - for this last is a child of energy, not its parent. When the Navaz forces drop to light, if the light waves enter a spectroscope, they will emerge as colors. These correspond to the various spectrum bands and will, as the descent progresses, give the noted lines of the Solar spectrum, as the great ‘B’ line of oxygen, the conspicuous ‘1474’ line, and the brilliant ‘H’ and ‘K’ violet bands.”

Meanwhile the Lemurian link continued to be forged [no pun intended]. Next in line was Rudolph Steiner, who broke with the Theosophists in 1906 in disgust over Annie Besant’s Krishnamurti scam. He accepted a charter from the German Ordo Templi Orientis (O.T.O.) and then went on to form his own Anthroposophical Society. In 1923 he wrote Cosmic Memory: Atlantis and Lemuria, which specifically fingered Mount You-Know-What as a remaining refuge for You-Know-Who.

Back at the Mount Lowe observatory next door to Mount Y-K-W was an astronomer/occultist named Edgar Larkin, who at about the same time decided that it would be interesting to train his telescope towards “He Who Sleeps in the Clouds”. Imagine his surprise and delight to see dazzling lights and colorful pavilions of happy Lemurians frolicking on the slopes! Larkin died in 1924 before meeting any Lemurians personally, but the cat was now definitely out of the bag where Shasta and Lemuria were concerned.

Next to add his 2-cents-worth was H. Spencer Lewis, founder of the Ancient Mystical Order Rosae Crucis (AMORC) in San Jose.

I should pause a moment here to make certain you don't get confused. Lewis got going in occultism in 1909, when he joined one of the splinter-groups of Eliphas Levi’s Ordre Kabbalistique de la Rose-Croix in France. [The group joined by Lewis was headed by one Josephin Peladan, hence the later rumor that France harbored a gang of Satanists called “Palladinists”! Cf. Lillie, Satanism in Modern France.]

In 1915 Lewis split from Peladan and, also on the strength of a charter from O.T.O. chief Theodor Reuss, founded his AMORC in New York. He took it down to Florida in 1925, then to San Jose in 1927. A few years down the road, after Lewis had survived a scandal and acquired some nice real estate & begun to construct all those fancy Egyptian buildings Setians toured during the Set-V Conclave, Aleister Crowley showed up [as new Outer Head of the O.T.O.] and demanded title to the property on the strength of the O.T.O. charter. Lewis ignored him.

But Lewis didn't ignore Mount Shasta. In 1931, under the pen-name of “W.S. Cerve”, he authored Lemuria, the Lost Continent of the Pacific. None of HPB’s or Steiner’s fooling around for Lewis - he got down to specifics, to wit: 150,000 years ago people lived on Lemuria, then called Mu for short. 82,000 years ago magnetic changes caused continental shifts and submergences. Europe rose up, and North & South America drifted away from Europe & Africa and bumped into the east coast of Lemuria. Then the west parts of Lemuria submerged. Its eastern area became what is today Washington, Oregon, California, and parts of Arizona, Nevada, and Mexico.

Lewis’ book resulted in all sorts of occultists flocking to Shasta to scrounge for Lemurians, a snipe-hunt still going on today. In 1932 reporter Edgar Lanser wrote an account of Larkin’s telescopic sightings in the Los Angeles Times Star, and went on to say that Shasta residents enjoyed occasional visits from & commerce with their Lemurian neighbors. Lanser reported mysterious red & green lights on Shasta’s slopes and thus inaugurated one of the more durable Shasta legends. Recounts Nigel Pennick in Hitler’s Secret Sciences (RL#14M):
For over a century occultists have claimed that these special holy mountains are in reality energy centers which collect cosmic forces from space and channel them into the “veins of the Earth”, the energy grid composed of ley lines.

Observations of holy mountains reinforce this assertion. At certain times of the year, when the energy is at its maximum, strange lights and other phenomena are often seen at such places. Mount Shasta, one of the Native Americans’ sacred peaks, is one such site; for there many inexplicable flashes of light have been observed. First recorded by prospectors in the old California gold rush of 1849, these flashes were seen in daylight, and in clear weather when there was no lightning about.

Nowadays cars in the vicinity of the mountain develop ignition failure without any obvious cause. This is a classic energy manifestation noted in connection with UFOs, Stonehenge, and the enigmatic “transmitter” Hitler erected on the Brocken peak in Germany.

When a vast forest fire engulfed much of the district in 1931, Mount Shasta was suddenly swathed in a mysterious fog. The fire could not burn where the fog protected the mountain peak. For many years afterwards a perfect curve around the mountain marked the furthest advance of the flames.

Five years after the forest fire had been repulsed by the Lemurians, an occult enthusiast by the name of Guy Ballard made a pilgrimage to Mount Shasta. He lucked out and encountered not just another Lemurian, but a genuine Ascended Master, the Count of Saint Germain. Shasta is evidently one of those places where it is fashionable for AMs to be seen. Ballard, at any rate, was so moved that he returned to lesser humankind to found the “I AM” organization. "I AM" prospered until 1939, when Ballard died and the organization was hauled into court on mail fraud charges. “I AM”, however, has proven to be the most durable Shasta fan club, as it is today headquartered in the town of Mount Shasta and puts on a Jesus Christ pageant every August.

In 1946 another Shasta enthusiast named Eugene Thomas wrote The Brotherhood of Mount Shasta, a dreamy, Dunsany-like tale of Lemurian mystery & mysticism at the Mount:

Australia is what remains of a vast continent which existed so far back in the history of the world that men now seldom dare speak of it; and if they do speak of it, most of what they say is theory and conjecture. Only those whose souls are able to lift the curtain of the past can really tell you anything about that mysterious land. When you have been sufficiently instructed, and have diligently striven to carry out the instructions received, go to the western coast of the American continent, to an extinct volcano whose name is Shasta. If your preparation be sufficient, your sincerity unquestionable, an ancient Brotherhood will be found that will guide you to the place where you may be further instructed.

Australia again! Come on, Australian Setians - What’s really going on Down Under? We await a report with baited breath - and if you turn out to be Lemurian lizards in human disguise, you get two free passes to the set of V.

The upshot of all this was that a visit to Shasta seemed the thing to do. In August Lilith and I headed north on Highway #101 to the Oregon Caves to sample a proper Lemurian atmosphere. Setians who have not yet gone cave-delving (“spelunking”) are encouraged to do so if you are near suitable facilities such as the O.C., Carlsbad, Kentucky Caves, etc. [But don’t go fooling around in unexplored or unmarked caves if you are not a seasoned spelunker; the DEROs might nab you.]

After a side trip to Crater Lake (another magical spot), we headed back down Highway #97 into California, getting much the same first-view of Shasta that so impressed Peter Ogden 157 years ago. Arriving in the town of Mount Shasta, we checked in at the “Tree House”, recommended by the Lemurian Tourist Association as the place to stay.
The next morning, Sunday 8/11, happened to be the date of the annual “I AM” Jesus pageant, complete with IAMers in bedsheets and angel-wings. It is a harmless enough local tradition, I suppose, but somehow a bit out of out-of-place at this Lemurian outpost. We would have preferred something with flying saucers, lizard-people, and oh-wow light shows on the mountain at night. [The modern-day Egyptians have their heads together on this, which is why you can see a great spooky night-time sound and light show at Giza and Luxor these days.]

We couldn’t take very much of the Jesus play, so decided we’d have to go find Lemurians on our own. Actually it was an ideal time to head for the mountain, as everyone else was at the I AM Jesus show.

There is one highway, the Everitt Memorial Highway, which leads out of the town towards the mountain. It winds up along the side of the mountain for about 13 miles, terminating at Bunny Flat and nearby Panther Meadow at an elevation of 7,000’ (halfway up to the 14,161’ summit). From there mountaineers must hoof it, and be prepared - as we found out - for some shortness of breath.

We had decided to check the Theta-wave patterns of our brains en route, via a pair of Biosone-I portable monitors [available from Edmund Scientific Corp.]. The B-I can almost be mistaken for a Walkman, except that you have to tolerate one electrode on your scalp and a clip on your earlobe in addition to the earphone. The few humans who had gone to Bunny Flat instead of the Jesus show probably thought we were Lemurians!

Both of our Theta readings were markedly higher than in town the day before, but the high altitude [and some great pizza at the Tree House] may have had something to do with the changed reading. Also there were some people at Panther Meadow pounding frenziedly on tom-toms, which tended to distract one's attention, hence one’s brain-wave pattern.

It was immediately evident why Shasta has developed its esoteric reputation, as there is undeniably a pleasantly exhilarating atmosphere atop the mountain. This is true of most mountains, to be sure, but Shasta has a “something” that I haven't felt, say, atop Mount Whitney (California’s highest peak, which I climbed 20 years ago).

I don't know if Paul Kantner sampled Shasta personally before creating Planet Earth, but the music and the mountain are assuredly in synch. It is high time [pun intended this time] for a midnight ceremony atop Shasta, complete with PER&RO & Lemurian music, banks of red & green carbon lasers a la Laserium blazing off into the sky, and Lemurians, Star Scouts, Setians, and any other extra-terrestrials or just extra-special terrestrials who happen to drop by for the occasion. I think we can go the “I AM” Jesus show one better.

Australia ... Oz and Beyond

“Oz”, oddly enough, is the name some Australians attach to their country. It is here that the band flees, to a settlement deep in the blisteringly-hot Australian Outback. Over fifteen hundred people have formed a settlement that is nearly totally self-sufficient. Weather control, lakes, forests, mountains, underground agriculture, and huge machines all serve to support this community.

U.S. government agents eventually discover the settlement and launch an attack to recover the extrasensory technology for Cold War use. The children of the settlement construct a telepathic shield around the colony, and they escape into space in the “edge of your seat” climax.

- Paul Kantner, Planet Earth Rock and Roll Orchestra
The Temple of Set now has a pretty sizable number of Initiates in Australia, and that has turned my attention all the more towards that very interesting continent. All regions of the world have their weird and magical aspects, and Australia is no exception. When you go to the local library to look up Australian mythology, however, conventional books assume you want to know about the legends and superstitions of the Aborigines rather than about the forbidden, subterranean city of H.P. Lovecraft’s The Shadow Out of Time.

Accordingly I have appealed to some of our Aussie Initiates for information concerning the shadowy aspects of their homeland - and particularly the Outback, where Paul Kantner plans to move the Planet Earth Rock & Roll Orchestra prior to its lift-off towards Andromeda. [And if you, dear reader, are an Australian whom I haven’t yet hit up for Sinister Truths about the continent, you are hereby solicited. Please tell us about Australia - either by letter to me or by direct article for the Scroll. Thanks!]

In the meantime I might point out that I am not the first person to be confused about Australia. For a great many centuries the entire world was unsure whether it existed or not. Thereby hangs the tale of Terra Australis Incognita, the “Unknown Southern Land”, which gets a chapter to itself in a charming book by Raymond H. Ramsay entitled No Longer on the Map: Discovering Places That Never Were (NY: Viking Press, 1972).

This book recounts the most famous, infamous, and occasionally slapstick cases of continents, islands, sea-passages, cities, and civilizations whose existence was at one time taken for granted - and then which, after the wasting of lots of time, money, and sailing expeditions, were grudgingly and ruefully acknowledged to be puffs of fluff.

Fortunately Atlantis and Mu/Lemuria are not in the book, else there would be room for little besides in view of the mammoth amount of material penned about those two turkeys. But there are chapters on El Dorado, the Northwest Passage, a variety of R’yleh-like now-you-see-it-now-you-don’t islands, the Seven Cities of Cibola, a variety of other geographical curiosities.

Now the fun thing about Australia is that it was presumed to be there long before it was discovered. The story begins with the Alexandrian Greek astronomer and geographer Claudius Ptolemy. In his day sensible scientists knew the world (ge) was round, and it was proposed by Krates of Mallos in the 2nd century BCE that there had to be roughly equal land-masses on all surfaces in order to “balance” the known portion (oikoumene). Otherwise the world wouldn’t stay upright [the Greeks hadn’t got gravity, orbital rotation, etc. quite worked out yet].

Ptolemy is most famous in history for his bright but wrong idea that the Sun and planets revolve around the Earth. He had another wrong idea about Terra Australis, which appears for the first time on a 1482 edition of one of his maps as a gigantic land mass occupying the bottom of the globe, and of which Africa is a northern peninsula. [In the 7th century BCE an Egyptian Pharaoh had sent a Phoenician expedition around the Cape of Good Hope, but Ptolemy shrugged that off. To be fair to him, so did Herodotus. Ignoring inconvenient data is not only a modern phenomenon.]

It is commonly supposed that medieval Europeans thought the world was flat. In fact, following the authority of Aristotle, it was assumed [in learned circles, at least] to be spherical. Since God could hold the planet together in any way He chose to, however, it was no longer thought necessary to have land masses just for the sake of weight-distribution. Australia went off the map.

Besides, argued theologians, God would not have been so wasteful of space to create all that land without people, and if there were people there, they would be heathen and in need of conversion, and if no one could get to them, they couldn’t be converted, which was outrageous. There couldn’t possibly be any other people besides those within reach of Christianity. It was definitely better to keep Australia off the map.

[A little later America was (re)discovered, and there were indeed native people there. Some theologians proposed that these “Indians” were not true people but an evil race created by the Devil. Orthodox dogma said that only God could create, however, so the native inhabitants of the Americas went on to receive the blessings of the Christian missionary efforts. As this issue of the Scroll goes to press, the Catholic Church is proceeding to canonize Junipero Serra for his California missionary activities, despite the protests of native Americans who recall the religious persecution of their ancestors somewhat less reverently.]

_Terra Australis_ was decreed not to exist because it was unreachable, and it was unreachable because the equator was decreed to be uncrossable because it was thought to be hot and burnt-out. One day someone sailed across it at sea and noticed that he didn’t burn up. After the general astonishment died down, enthusiasts such as Portugal’s Prince Henry the Navigator commissioned all sorts of mapping expeditions.

Once Columbus rediscovered America, it seemed that old Krates was right. There had to be more land sprinkled around the globe until one got round to the _oikoumene_ again. In the 16th & 17th centuries CE _Terra Australis Incognita_ was re-added to the map. So far no one had actually bumped into it yet.

There were a couple of near-misses. In 1545 the Spaniard Inigo Ortis de Retes discovered New Guinea and supposed it to be a northern peninsula of _TAI_. The Peruvian Alvaro de Mendana de Neyra found some islands in 1567, which he named the Solomons in hopes that he would find similar treasure there. [Perhaps it was lunchtime when Captain Cook reached Hawaii.]

In 1603, having fired up the Pope and Philip III of Spain with tales of Pacific treasures to be reaped, de Retes’ lieutenant, Pedro Fernandes de Quieros, went out to try again. He came back with wild tales about a new continent larger than Europe and packed with more gold than Peru. He called it _Australia del Espiritu Santo_ and said that he had formally laid the cornerstone for a city named New Jerusalem there. Actually he had found the New Hebrides, but no one believed him anyway.

Meanwhile the cartographers were having fun. On the maps of the time _TAI_ was positioned everywhere from underneath Africa to underneath South America, and everywhere in between. Guesses ranged from island-size to something big enough to reach from Cape Horn to the Cape of Good Hope. The famous Turkish Piri Reis map joins South America to _TAI_, places 6-horned oxen there, and adds the notation that “the Portuguese infidels have recorded it in their maps”.

In 1613 the Dutchman Dirck Hartog published his sighting of the Australian coast, and thereafter the Dutch poked around a bit. In 1629, in the best European tradition, they took a whirl at starting a colony. Captain Francis Pelsart set off from Java with a small fleet. Unfortunately he took a Haarlem pirate by the name of Jerome Cornelius along. The expedition crashed on the Abrolhos Islands (in Portuguese: “Keep-Your-Eyes-Open Islands”). Ramsay reports how it all turned out:

Exactly what happened then is not clear; whether Pelsart took some of the party and sailed back to get help, or whether Cornelius held his mutiny on land and drove out Pelsart and those loyal to him. In any case Cornelius ended up in control. He killed some 40 of the men to save water supplies, took over all of the women for himself and his followers, and held a brief reign that was a succession of drunken orgies. He also killed several more of the men on suspicion of disloyalty to him, including the two ship’s carpenters, and was thus unable to carry out his plan of salvaging material from the wrecks, building another ship, and becoming a pirate. When Captain Pelsart and his men unexpectedly returned, Cornelius was overthrown and was summarily tried and hanged.
As colonizing goes this was not exactly a high point. The Dutch more or less said to Hell with it, and the rest of the world agreed. Cartographers of the 17th century were accustomed to map only known areas, leaving unexplored areas blank. So Australia went back off the map for another 100 years.

Of course everyone knew it was still down there somewhere. The fantasy writers of the day knew a good thing when they saw it, grinding out many tales set there of which Jonathan Swift’s Gulliver’s Travels is the best-known.

The basket-cases checked in too: In 1676 the Franciscan monk Gabriel de Foigny, already notorious for his scandalous life, published La Terre Australe Connu in which he revealed that the natives of Australia were hermaphrodites who used a special breed of long-nosed pigs to root in straight lines, thereby tilling the ground for them.

This nonsense went on until 1768, with a succession of maps showing TAI here, there, or nowhere, and New Zealand and Tasmania similarly growing or shrinking in size at the whim of the cartographer. Finally the famous Captain Cook went down to explore and chart the area, and he got a grip on Australia. It went back on the map, and in reasonably correct proportions, and thereafter its exploration, settlement, and political history leaves the realm of magic and enters that of conventional history.

Part V: My Classified Introduction to PERRO: The Novel

XXXVIII/2003

[The unclassified version by Paul Kantner, within the novel, can be ordered from the Jefferson Starship website: http://www.jeffersonstarshipsf.com/main.htm]

Paul Kantner shot bolt-upright in his bed, his eyes frozen and unfocused, teeth clenched: awake. Yes, awake - It had happened again.

The panic began to recede. He felt his muscles relax; he saw the room, smelled perspiration, tasted blood, realized with annoyance that he must have bitten his lip. He swung his body off the bed, scowled at the twisted sheets, and walked unsteadily into the bathroom.

The cold shower helped his body, but the ghost of the dream was still there:

He was standing on Hollywood Boulevard. It had to be the Boulevard, because nowhere else could you feel that sodden atmosphere of dreams, glamor, failure, corruption - at once the thrill of being There, at the nerve center of Fame, yet you can’t touch it, your fingers press against the cold stars of the dead stars; they are an eternity away. But above him -

Above him - it had somehow been there all along - the ... machine. Machine? What other word ..? It was high, distant, perhaps ten thousand feet in the air. But he couldn’t be sure, because it enveloped the entire Los Angeles Basin like some gigantic black amoeba of leathermetal, pulsing quietly, wetly. But it was not endless, because there to the far south was still a sliver of bright blue sky.

Transfixed, he clutched the hand - her hand, Lilith’s hand; she was there with him, her hair cascading in the electric wind of the machine, her face darkly glowing in its blazing pulses. He had turned, then, slowly, to smile at her: This is a great dream.

But she shook her head and laughed. “It’s no dream, lover.”

It was somehow very important that he answer her, but he was whirled away to stare at a 1949 Mercury, garish in candy-apple paint, cruising down the Boulevard toward them, its ancient AM radio blaring tinny, low-fi music (though he couldn’t make out the tune).
Now the car was still, but the music must have continued, because two youths, a boy in a plastic bodysuit and a girl with green hair, were suddenly beside it, music-swaying, staring up at the machine. They obviously didn’t see the door.

But Paul did, because Lilith guided his eyes to it. Curving down from, yet oddly separate from the machine, a rectangle forcing the sky apart around it, distorting everything, even Lilith’s still-waving hair, which was now angular. Moving in angles, with electricity, she drew him towards the opening.

The Boulevard remained an inert spectator, motionless save for the dancing forms next to the Mercury, silent but for the music which must have been there for them. Falling towards the door in the sky, Paul looked slowly to one side, then the other, and was rewarded, preposterously, with reflections of Lilith and himself, both in leather S&M costumes, in Frederick’s of Hollywood’s display-window. But it was too hot to be wearing them, he knew, because he was gasping with the heat, tearing the leather away from his body that now shone, like Lilith’s, with wet electricity, which he also tried to brush from his arms, but it ran ahead of his fingers over his body.

Lilith, now completely a sculpture of electrical angles, was pulling him, finally, ultimately, through the -

Paul Kantner turned off the shower, ran a towel impatiently over his body, and padded back out into the bedroom, where Albert Einstein smiled fuzzily at him, riding, as always, his bicycle across the M.I.T. campus, frozen forever in that faded wall-poster. Paul rummaged in the bedside drawer for his rimless, rectangular glasses - as much his trademark as Indiana Jones’ fedora, he supposed - and winked back at a now-crisp Albert through them.

The Sun, he saw from his window, had just crept above Mount Diablo over in the East Bay, and was sending warm rays of golden light across San Francisco to break, finally, against the red towers of the Bridge. He never ceased to marvel at the contrast between the two worlds on either side of the Golden Gate: the bustling cosmopolis to the east, the Tolkienesque crags and seascape to the west.

For perhaps the tenth time in so many days he considered the dream, or nightmare, or whatever-it-was. At first he had dismissed it as the reverie of a brain pretty well saturated, he granted, with science-fiction imagery. But now a slight worry had begun to creep in. The same dream, too many times. What the hell.

He sat down on the mangled bed, found the phone on the floor next to it, buried under a pillow. At last it was the date; the thing should finally be here. He began to dial ...

It had begun with Blows Against the Empire, that 1970 spaceflight-of-fancy album which had won Paul Kantner both a Hugo Award nomination (which he knew about) and a Defense Intelligence Agency file (which he didn’t).

DIA, located across the Anacostia River from Washington, D.C., was the Defense Department’s in-house answer to the civilian Central Intelligence Agency. CIA, after years of more sensationalism and media glamor than it cared for, had been rewarded with a good deal of Executive and Congressional watchdogery. DIA reported only to the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, because it had so-far-successfully maintained that its only concerns were strategic national defense intelligence.

But in the aftermath of the 1969 Apollo-13 Moon-landing, the National Aeronautics & Space Administration’s civilian funding for its sensible but unglamorous Space Shuttle program had begun to dry up. NASA did what many another desperate agency has done under such circumstances; it went knocking on the doors of the Pentagon. Could DoD help with the bills?

Yes, it could. But there was a price. Those old, quaint ideas about peaceful use of space, about shuttles to carry civilian research and commercial packages, even tourists, as a possible prelude to orbital space colonies? - off the table. The shuttles will now be doing - our business. Special satellites. For intelligence, for secure communications, for space-based defense. You don’t have a need to know exactly what they do. Your job is just to get them up there and keep them there.

None of which was known by, or of the slightest concern to Paul Kantner when he wrote and sang a series of songs about hijacking the United States’ first functional spaceship for pacifistic planetary touring. However DIA, which now had assumed a counterintelligence mission regarding the “new” NASA, decided that it was concerned about him. Was he serious? Wasn’t that Jefferson Airplane of his one of those agitation-bands that had worked right along with Jane Fonda and Daniel Berrigan to fuck up the Vietnam War? Turn an entire generation of once-well-bred Eisenhower kids into long-haired acidheads? Now that the war is falling to pieces, are we going to have to worry about interference with our space programs?

In April 1971 the Kantner file was tasked to the Missile & Space Intelligence Command (MSIC) of DIA’s ambiguously-named Directorate for Analysis & Production (DI), where it was eventually Compartmented and ultimately, on January 17, 1972, designated with an MJ-prefix, removing it instantly from DIA’s normal Intelligence Library tracking system.

DI/MSIC/MJ agents thus carefully followed the progress of Kantner and his band, now the Jefferson Starship, through the 1970s. Their tours, interviews, lyrics, and private lives were annotated to the file and scheduled for periodic analysis.

By 1980 MJ’s interest had lessened somewhat. The NASA security issues raised by Blows showed no signs of materializing, and while several additional Kantner space-themes had been introduced, all were clearly in the realm of fantasy. That was, until ...
Appendix 12: Setamorphosis

- by Michael A. Aquino V°
South Solstice X/1975

Setamorphosis: A TS term for the third stage of human evolution. The word is formed from Set-a or Set-heh (“Eternal Set” or “Timeless Set”), a god-form of Set in ancient Egypt as a serpent. Serpents were symbolic of immortality via their seeming rebirth by shedding of their skin, were sacred to Set, and as the Uræus symbolized the divine authority of the Pharaoh. They also represented imparted knowledge of a divine character; hence the later corruption that would appear in the “Garden of Eden” myth. The suffix denotes a “change of form” or “transformation”. The familiar “metamorphosis” thus translates to “super(natural) transformation”. The old term is thus refined.

“Genesis III” was an attempt to explain our present state of being in accordance with the Book of Coming Forth by Night and common sense. It was not intended to be a “last word” but rather a working hypothesis. I am far more comfortable with hypotheses than with “laws”, because the formulation of a law implies that all pertinent factors have been taken into account. This in turn implies that all pertinent factors are themselves completely understood, and thus the factors that bear upon them, ad infinitum. Historically it is borne out that human knowledge constantly increases, and there is no reason to assume that we now know all there is to know about anything! In point of fact, we don’t know the extent of what we don’t know.

We obtain knowledge by interpolation and by projection. Interpolation in reasoning is also known as deductive logic; projection as inductive logic. [For a review of the concept of logic -and errors to avoid -see my “Much Ado About Logic” in Cloven Hoof #IV-2.] The most general shortcoming of both systems of knowledge acquisition is that they work only with known data. New theories in complete accord with known data may in fact be quite [or partially] wrong, but this cannot be discovered until the theory bumps into fresh data which does not fit the mold.

I go into this for two reasons. The first is that we must never allow the Temple of Set to relax into fixed concepts. The key to the ultimate success of the Temple is Xeper in its intellectual pursuits as well as in its Initiates. The second reason is that, in the course of this communique, I will be clashing head-on with a gentleman by the name of Einstein. He himself was forethinking enough to define his discoveries as “theories”, but their dazzling nature has tended to enshrine them as de facto laws, questioned at dire peril. What they explain, they explain well. The danger lies in projecting them too far beyond the known phenomena by which they were first interpolated. Consider this well.

By its very design the Temple confronts two essential problems. The second problem is to identify, comprehend, and effect Setamorphosis. Solving this problem promises to be exciting, stimulating, and ultimately very rewarding. The first problem is to survive long enough to solve the second problem. And this task, unfortunately, promises to be tedious, depressing, and quite possibly dangerous.

Let us consider the following passage from the Book of Coming Forth by Night:

I seek my Elect and none other, for mankind now hastens toward an annihilation which none but the Elect may hope to avoid. And alone I cannot preserve my Elect, but I would teach them and strengthen their Will against the coming peril, that they and their blood may endure. To do this I must give further of my own Essence to my Elect, and, should they fail, the Majesty of Set shall fade and be ended.

When I first read this passage, I was inclined to interpret it as a reference to the general ecological crisis that the human race as a whole faces in the next 50-100 years per the research of the Club of Rome, Jacques-Yves Cousteau, and other Temple contacts. Stated in its most basic form, this crisis comprises the outrunning of Earth's life-support systems by a humanity that is reproducing itself out of control. The Club of Rome assumes [in The Limits to Growth and Mankind at the Turning-Point] that world order will break down in frantic competition for available resources, resulting in a great deal of initial carnage (25%+ of the world population) and then a new era of repressive, primitive feudalism. More pessimistic predictions see the introduction of massive thermonuclear weaponry during the crisis period, with the resultant extermination of all life on Earth.

There were two things that bothered me about this initial interpretation of the passage. One was that such an ecological crisis would occur on such a tremendous scope that its sheer inertia would prevail against anything even an enlarged and strengthened Temple of Set could do to prevent it. The other was that any sort of “escape” by the Elect seems highly improbable. In spite of the wistfulness with which romantics grope towards a new Exodus to space [consider the strong emotional appeal of Star Trek and Space: 1999 in this light], a colonial-scale space effort is all but ruled out by the increasing demand for resources to be diverted to the growing Earth-crisis itself. And even if some neo-Noah’s ark were planned, selection of the privileged few would be quite impossible. [Most likely the project would be destroyed by the disappointed majority; shades of Pythagoras and his rejected “deficient intellectuals”!]

The passage does not say “escape”, however; it says “avoid”. This raises the possibility of the Temple of Set surviving during the crisis and aftermath period in spite of the fact that it continues to be located on this planet. In the event of a nuclear holocaust, of course, nothing of the sort would be possible. But I am inclined to think that the crisis will attain full force in a more gradual way, resulting in increasing anarchy and then a violent authoritarian backlash. The final scenario would be one of the world divided into a number of crude police-states, with an intellectual atmosphere something like that in 1984. There have been countless examples of this political/social pattern throughout history, the most recent being the current century’s fascist regimes in Germany, Italy, Japan, South America, and Africa. Indeed the trend towards authoritarian government is increasing right now while we watch, as democratic/republican systems prove more and more incapable of coping with growing pre-crisis stresses.

This past summer I discussed this situation with the Executive Director at a meeting in San Francisco. I then brought up the concept that Isaac Asimov had introduced in his famous science-fiction trilogy Foundation/Foundation and Empire/Second Foundation.

In this novel a psychohistorian (one who calculates the probable course of the future based upon interpolation and projection of past social patterns and human psychology) predicts the gradual decline and fall of the galactic empire and a subsequent era of feudal anarchy. In order to preserve the sum of accumulated knowledge throughout this period, he institutes a Foundation of scientists and technologists on a remote planet at the edge of the galactic spiral. Through its technological skill and relative isolation from the mainstream of the revolutions and wars, the Foundation survives the disintegration of the empire and even establishes a certain hegemony of its own. But, through a freak accident, the Foundation is almost conquered by a mental mutant. It is saved through psychohistorical manipulation by a Second Foundation, secretly instituted and maintained in the heart of the old empire by the original psychohistorian. The Second Foundation then feigns its own destruction, allowing the First Foundation to continue on its way without feeling threatened.

What I call the “Star Trek syndrome” is a desire to emulate the First Foundation by getting the hell off the planet with a small group of technological elite. For reasons cited earlier, this course of action is not open to the Temple [or anyone else]. But it may well prove possible for an organization with the unique characteristics of the Temple to emulate the Second Foundation. Consider:

The Second Foundation survived secretly because its avowed purpose - caretaking of the main library of the old empire - was thought unimportant and irrelevant to the warring factions. Its actual configuration as a team of psychohistorians was unknown, even to the First Foundation.

The Temple of Set to the public is a quaint peculiarity - a group of religious nuts who worship some old Egyptian god. Hence it is not a likely target of authoritarian repression. If anything, association with the Temple would tend to gain one a public reputation as an antiquarian eccentric, therefore politically harmless. That the Temple is Coming Into Being as an extraordinarily sophisticated organization does not become apparent until one has joined and advanced to the III°+ level. Such is the Election of the Priesthood of Set that it would be impossible for an unqualified person to attain such recognition. [This is just as well, because I would not envy the fate of a false Priest of Set.]

The prospect of a secret society existing in the midst of a secular culture is not a novel one. Case studies may be drawn from the Templars, Rosicrucians, Illuminati, Golden Dawn, A.'A.'., Church of Satan, etc. The approach has been successful to the extent that it has been either strictly secret or philosophically camouflaged. In modern times, strict secrecy is no longer possible [even for the high-echelon units of government]. Moreover the sort of organizational structure necessary to enforce strict secrecy would make the Temple an increasingly threatening entity in the eyes of authoritarian governments.

Let us look more closely at the notion of “philosophical camouflage”. The idea here is to develop a vocabulary and philosophical frame of reference which are useful for conveying the most sophisticated information between Initiates, but which merely seem nonsensical and ridiculous to the non-initiate.

This is not the same thing as a cipher per se, which is a code that anyone given the key can read.

Philosophical camouflage is unbreakable when expertly used, and in its most advanced form it cannot even be explained to an interrogator. This is because the concepts and relationships which comprise the linguistic system must all be communicated and understood before the system as a whole makes any sense. And those concepts and relationships each require a Setian mind for understanding. Thus this entire system possesses its own “failsafe” device.

Should you attend a convention of technologists in some field other than your own, you will quickly discover that many terms unfamiliar to you are being used casually. Such terms are both professional jargon and precise technological concepts. One must be an “initiate” (educationally and/or professionally) to understand the conversation. The Temple is in a position to adapt this phenomenon to our own purposes, which encompass magic, futurist analysis, and our own brand of Asimov’s psychohistory.

Because of the special position of religion in both society and the human psyche, the Temple can expect relative tolerance and freedom of internal action during at least the earlier stages of authoritarian social systems. [By strict definition, authoritarian systems require only behavioral cooperation. Totalitarian systems require mental and philosophical endorsement as well. Thus it is when things reach the totalitarian stage that cherches and initiatory societies come under fire. Examples: Stalinist Russia & Nazi Germany.]

Because of the absence of strong social dogmas in bringing about or controlling the ecological crisis, I suspect at this time that repressive measures will not come to the totalitarian extreme. The Temple should therefore be able to maintain its own “religious eccentricity” without overt attention or persecution. To the extent that our philosophical camouflage is successful, we will be able to enjoy internal freedom to pursue the Second Problem. Externally our Initiates will be able to participate pragmatically in whatever social systems they find themselves located.

The profile and survival techniques of the Second Foundation within the decaying, authoritarian galactic empire were not described in any detail. Nor did the Second Foundation possess or feign religious philosophies per se.

A very interesting blueprint for the manner in which religious philosophical camouflage may be used in an authoritarian system exists in a book which the Executive Director sent to me a short time after our conference. It is Robert A. Heinlein’s The Day After Tomorrow. In this novel religious concepts are deliberately used as political and social weapons against an oppressive government, the concepts themselves being only a sham. In the Temple, by contrast, our concepts are quite genuine. But the way in which a religious structure may defend itself against social repression with the aid of its intrinsic concepts is well illustrated here.

After reading the Asimov and Heinlein works, you may find it interesting to review the way in which the Catholic Church survived [and even prospered] during the medieval era. Special attention should be given to the methods and achievements of Pope Innocent III [see especially Sidney Packard’s Europe and the Church under Innocent III (NY: Russell Russell, 1967)]. While Catholic and Setian philosophies hardly coincide, we may learn some valuable lessons from the experiences of the medieval religious institutions.

What form will the philosophical camouflage of the Temple assume? It is not a question which can be answered a priori. We will develop it as we go along. My guess is that it will draw strongly from the magical/religious/philosophical camouflage employed both widely and expertly by Aleister Crowley and John Dee. You are already familiar with some good source material on the former, so let's take a quick look at the latter.

John Dee lived from 1527 to 1608 CE. During his lifetime he became an expert mathematician, geographer [studying under Mercator], and astronomer. He was intimately familiar with the work of Pythagoras, Plato, and Aristotle. He was sufficiently accomplished in chemistry to scorn the illogic of alchemy, and his official position as astrologer to Elizabeth I was largely a blind for extensive political intelligence work on her behalf. Because of his thorough familiarity with esoterica, Dee could phrase both his intelligence reports and his own experimental records & diaries in a fashion almost completely indecipherable by others. An example may be found in one of Dee’s 1585 reports to Elizabeth:

At the time, Dee was in Prague. A fellow occultist told him that a party of Frenchmen financed by the Spanish crown were being sent to England to sabotage the English shipbuilding program. The only clue available to Dee was that the party was instructed to arrive “before three yeares were ended and the nine men beginne their Perambulation”.
He sent the following “record of a magical conversation with the spirit Madimi” to Elizabeth:
Ma. "I am a poor little maiden, Madimi, but I rejoice in the name of Jesus."
D. "What is it that you can see?"
Ma. "I see the coming of the end of the three yeare circle and the approache of the Nine Guardians of the Vert."
D. "What does that portend?"
Ma. "Here is something that maketh me afraid. I see the Bible and a stick of hollie and the danger of perjury by someone. It is a test of loyalty."
D. Madimi’s gown changed colour from red to green and she shook it as though the skirt was a tree rustling in the wind. She went up and down with lively gestures, dancing and pretending she was a tree bent this way and that in the breeze, as though she performed a charade.
D. "Whose man are you?"
Ma. "I am the servant of God both by my bounden duty and by his Adoption. For me the truth is sacred."
D. "What more do you see?"
Ma. "I see the risk of fire, great fire." Her dress changed colour to red again.
D. "What is the significance of the three yeares and the Nine Men?"
Ma. "The Nine are Guardians of the RF D. They must acte against fire by the creatures of the Scorpion. O.S.V."
D. "And the Nine must watch for the chimney of smoke?"
Ma. "I must not guess the truth, but so it would seem. My sister has torn two leaves from the book which would have tolde me."

Dee’s familiarity with old Druidic customs had reminded him of one still in progress. The Druids had held the number 3 and multiples thereof in special regard. The Druidic year was 360 days, and once every three years nine government foresters made a circuit inspection of the royal forests. Crucial to the current shipbuilding effort was the Royal Forest of Dean, identified by both "RF D" and the reference to the Bible & stick of holly [used in that forest in another Druidic custom]. The “Scorpion” was Dee’s code word for Spain, and the Enochian sequence O.S.V. [“I reign over you”] brought the message to Elizabeth’s attention. The “chimney” refers to the customary right of forest squatters to land on which they could build a chimney between sunset and sunrise. Elizabethan agents watched for and eventually discovered an attempt to bribe such squatters to burn the forest, and successfully thwarted same.

The point here is threefold: (1) Dee’s freedom from suspicion and freedom of action as an “eccentric astrologer & occultist”, (2) his ability to put both Druidic lore and his own systems to practical use, and (3) the almost complete indecipherability of a message incorporating philosophical camouflage except by a fellow initiate.

The basic facts concerning Dee’s life are well-documented and fairly easy to find. Not so his magical research and philosophy. He left massive papers comprising diaries and records of magical workings, but they are heavily laced with philosophical camouflage per the example just cited.

The papers themselves are scattered between the British Museum, Oxford’s Ashmolean Museum, private Continental collections, and the Soviet Union. The papers acquired by Meric. Casaubon for Dr. John Dee’s Actions With Spirits are only a sample of Dee’s voluminous “angelic conversations”. Fortunately the Casaubon papers contain the Enochian Keys, which may possess an entirely self-contained philosophical camouflage system.

Unfortunately the completeness of the Casaubon work is itself subject to question. Contemporary Dee biographer John Aubrey said: “Meredith Lloyd sayes that John Dee’s printed booke of Spirits (i.e. the Casaubon book) is not above the third part of what was writt, which were in Sir Robert Cotton’s library; many whereof were much perished by being buryed, and Sir Robert Cotton bought the field to digge after it.”

Arthur Dee, John’s son, wrote of the Casaubon book: “It did great harme to the memorie of a great man and was both ignorant and mischievous.”

Yet the published manuscripts seem to have been sufficiently intact to worry insiders in the government. A British Museum copy of the Casaubon work contains a 1683 notation indicating that the government had considered seizing all copies of the book, but that it had sold too quickly for effective action to be taken.

A crucial key to Dee’s philosophical camouflage may be found in a deciphering of his Hieroglyphic Monad, still undeciphered but significantly republished in the year 1975 by Samuel Weiser, Inc. My opinion is that the keys to the Monad and hence to the basis for the Enochian system will be found in the Pythagorean/Platonic (i.e. neo-Egyptian) concepts to which Dee devoted such extensive research.

[A note may be inserted here: The claim has been made that Enochian per se predates Dee. This is completely unsubstantiated and undocumented. Superficially Enochian is a jargon and possesses no unique grammar or syntax. It can be written according to English, Hebraic, Latin, etc. grammar once one has made a rough catalogue of its words from the Casaubon text. This was done by Aleister Crowley and resulted in the “Enochian” invocations he appended to his Goetia.]

Philosophical camouflage alone will not solve our Problem #1. A variety of other techniques and mechanisms must be devised as well, among them an intra-Temple communications system that does not rely on the mails [the vulnerability of which was just demonstrated to us by the Canadian mail strike].

A diffusion of knowledge and source material throughout the Priesthood will make the Temple that much less susceptible to impairment through the loss or incapacitation of one or more officials. A flexible administrative structure will keep us “light on our feet” and able to plan for and react to changes in the social environment.

All these projects are already off the ground. For example, in-depth research into Enochian is being done by Magister Ethel and Priest Holt. Intra-Temple communication systems for the future are being studied by the Executive Director and Magister Grumboski. Selective diffusion of Temple concepts is being handled by Magistra Wendall via the Scroll, and on a lesser scale by periodic newsletters & communiques from a number of officials. An exploration of the potential use of our non-profit corporate administrative structure is being undertaken by Magister Seago. Altogether this constitutes an important first step in a continuous and cumulative process.

Now let me address Problem #2 and work over Mr. Einstein. [In fact I won’t do anything to him that I didn't do to Darwin in Genesis III; you can draw your own conclusions!]

The solution to Problem #1 can be only a temporary one, no matter how long we may be able to string it out. Even if the Temple succeeds in preserving an internal freedom of operation amidst an authoritarian political environment, the natural resources that enable scientific research to function at a high level of priority are uncomfortably finite. Scientifically-assisted breakthroughs must be effected before human standards of living [and hence funds resources for educational scientific research] are lowered.

The problem with Setamorphosis is that we don’t know what form it will take, how [if at all] we may influence it, what scale it will occur on, or when it will be effected.

Yet the passage of the Book of Coming Forth by Night cited above does not license the Elect to sit on their haunches and await the arrival of a good fairy with a sackful of ruby slippers. Rather the implication is that the germ of Setamorphosis already exists within those who are recognized as Elect, and that they must isolate it and develop it.
[Here you may find it helpful to consult selected works of Colin Wilson, especially The Philosopher’s Stone and The Mind Parasites.]

Unless it transpires that Setamorphosis will involve an Elect so numerous that it can control Earth [along the line of Childhood’s End], or unless Setamorphosis itself enables the Elect to control non-Elect, Earth will proceed to become increasingly inhospitable. Moreover there is more to the Star Trek syndrome than meets the eye: It is impractical as a solution to Problem #1, but its strong psychological draw [of a “racial memory”-type] bears upon Problem #2.

Merely building an Enterprise or two and larking off across the cosmos won’t cut the mustard. Life-support systems would be finite and ultimately non-renewable. And the chances of finding a planet with precisely the right chemical, organic, and environmental constitution to sustain human beings is infinitesimal, particularly within the operating lifetime of a sub-speed-of-light space vessel.

So we confront two questions: (a) Is faster-than-light travel possible? and (b) If so, what would be the consequences?

According to Einstein’s second fundamental postulate of the Special Theory of Relativity, the velocity of light is always constant relative to an observer, no matter how fast the observer and the light source are separating or converging. A derived equation states that, when an object is moving with respect to an observer, the mass of the object becomes greater, the amount of increase depending on the relative velocity of object and observer. At the same time that the mass of the object increases, its length along the axis of its direction will decrease. At the speed of light, the object’s mass becomes infinite and its length shrinks to zero. Since an “infinite-plus” amount of energy would be required to raise the speed of an infinite mass beyond the speed of light, such hyper-light speed is not possible.

Mathematically the Special Theory is consistent, because it treats the speed of light as a constant and incorporates a series of equations which rely upon that constant and are consistent with one another. As the Special Theory applies to sub-lightspeed phenomena, it is correct. The interrelationship of mass and energy relative to 186,000 miles per second (the Einstein speed of light constant) has been formulated as \( E=mc^2 \) and put into practice through nuclear fission.

The Achilles’ Heel of the Special Theory is that, while applying the principle of relativity to everything except the speed of light, it treats the speed of light as an exception to the rule. An exception to a rule of physics is an indication that the rule is inadequate to cover all known phenomena. (= Aquino Aphorism) Einstein’s decision to treat the speed of light as a constant was based upon the difference between the speed of light and non-light-wave-related phenomena being so vast as to make sub-186,000 light speed impossible to detect; and also upon the inability of science to detect anything going faster than 186,000 mps.

Note my emphasis upon the word “detect”. Detection and existence are two different things. Now consider this hypothesis: If light waves from a stationary source travel at 186,000 mps, and those light waves are the only means an observer located elsewhere has for detection of that source, what would happen if the source begins to move away from the observer at 186,001 mps? The light waves that are the sole source of the observer’s information are now no longer reaching that observer. The waves are now receding from him at 1 mps. As far as the observer can detect, the light-source vanished when its speed passed beyond the speed of light. But did it? It did not. It still exists, and a person riding along with it would still exist as well.
What about a light-source approaching at a speed faster than that of light? Following our line of reasoning, it itself would arrive before an observer could detect it, because we do not possess the apparatus to detect emitted light traveling 186,001 mps. If it were to smash into us, we would literally not know what hit us. If it were to slow down to sub-light speeds upon reaching us, light waves subsequently emitted would inform us of its presence. [And people wonder how UFOs could ever get into the vicinity of Earth without being detected?]

As an object passes an observer laterally and approaches the speed of light, it seems to compress. The explanation for this is more complex, but it can be approximated by saying that the lateral movement/oscillation of the emitted light waves is less detectable as the lateral speed of the light-source approaches 186,000 mps.

All this sums up to say that Einstein's Special Theory is valid for physical phenomena at speeds so slow that 186,000 mps might as well be a constant. It is not valid as an argument against +186,000 mps travel. In fact, its provisions for relative motion, when applied to the “sacred” 186,000 mps figure, invalidate any absolute measurement of that figure and hence destroy its significance.

So much for the Special Theory. Faster-than-light travel is just as easy as traveling 186,000 mps. You just have to wind the rubber band a little tighter, that's all. [If you want to present this case to your local physics teacher and he still insists the world is flat, don’t blame me.]

So the Temple has the option to build a faster-than-light Enterprise, and no special gymnastics are necessary to produce “warp-factor” engines. Inertia in a vacuum and with negligible gravitational drag will remain constant; the firing of additional rockets will constantly increase velocity, not maintain it. To travel increasingly faster than light, just bum the engines proportionately longer.

That’s the minor problem. The major one, as cited above, is to find a closed environmental system (i.e. a planet) capable of supporting human life without negative side-effects. Considering the painfully-long evolution of even the most basic organisms to produce complex forms capable of surviving on Earth, this is a task of dismaying difficulty. It is not necessarily unsolvable, but additional chemical and biological data must be assembled first. So, for the moment, I will table it.

Are there other options open to us besides a star trek? Quite possibly. In “Genesis II” (Cloven Hoof #IV-7) I addressed the concept of an anti-matter universe to account for the existence of a “positive” one according to the equation 0 = +1-1. There are two forms in which an anti-matter universe could exist. The first and more easily conceivable form is that of stars & planetary bodies of anti-matter co-located in the “positive” space that hosts our own solar system. Since space itself is merely a near-vacuum [containing extremely rarified (10^-6 atoms/cc) plasma], there seems to be no necessity for a “second space”. [Anti-matter is necessary to logically explain the existence of matter.]

Anti-matter bodies in “normal” space would not appear markedly different from matter bodies. They could be detected only by the violence with which they would react to contact with matter. Should an object of anti-matter contact an object of matter, there would be an explosion releasing many hundreds of times more energy than a hydrogen bomb of the same mass. That such explosions have not been detected to date is not improbable, given that the universe is expanding.

For a time it seemed to me that the existence of “Black Holes” argued for their being a gate between the “normal” universe and an entirely distinct one. According to conventional theories, a Black Hole is a neutron star/“white dwarf” that continues to collapse in upon itself to a density where the ratio of gravity to surface area would be so strong that escape velocity would have to exceed the speed of light. Furthermore, the strong gravity continues to “tighten” the mass of the Black Hole continuously, resulting in an infinitely small concentration of the original mass. Logic would indicate that the process would have to lead “somewhere” - perhaps into the “second” universe of anti-material existence, where a proportionate expansion would take place. [The alternative to this - and the conventional Black Hole theory - is an infinitesimal “point” of mass with the gravitational force of the original star ... which would suck into itself any other chunk of mass passing close enough.]

Black Holes, however, are relatively unknown quantities. No sample Black Hole which could not just as easily be a neutron star has manifested itself. [If Black Holes are infinitesimal points, this is not surprising.] So Black Holes remain theoretical. Nor would a Black Hole make a very comfortable gate into a “second” universe, since a traveler would be processed into a zero-dimensional pancake en route. To the Temple of Set Black Holes - if and when their existence is verified - will be significant only if they constitute proof that a “second” universe should in fact exist.

Setamorphosis from matter to anti-matter in the normal universe wouldn’t seem to accomplish anything. Like Alice going through the looking-glass, we would merely become mirror-images of ourselves, unable to come into contact with matter. Setamorphosis into a different universe “opposite” this one through a gate less uncomfortable than a Black Hole might be somewhat more interesting.

Acceleration past the speed of light will not in and of itself serve as any sort of a gate. [It might have, except for the invalidation of the Special Theory of Relativity where the restriction on 186,000+ mps speeds is concerned.] And the existence of Black Holes remains mathematically impossible, since a zero-dimensional point cannot contain even an iota of mass, much less all that contained in a star.

But, if a Black Hole phenomenon should prove to be a rupture into a “second universe”, then we may find that intense concentration of mass beyond a certain density forces such a rupture. If such a rupture can be made passable to mass that has not itself undergone concentration, we’ve got our gateway. States the Book of Coming Forth by Night:

> HarWer I was when I was once part of the Cosmos and could achieve identity only by becoming what the Cosmic order was not. By HarWer I cancelled the imbalance, leaving a Void in which true Creation could take form as Set.

Xeper.
Appendix 13: Setamorphosis II

- by Michael A. Aquino V°
Vernal Equinox 1976

Since I sent you the original Setamorphosis letter at the Winter Solstice of X, there has been quite a discussion about the concept. The purpose of Setamorphosis II is to summarize some of the points that have been brought out, to introduce some refinements to the original concept, and to identify additional considerations that may merit discussion and research. I anticipate that Setamorphosis II will eventually be followed by III, IV, V, etc. as the Temple of Set refines and systematizes the concept and components.

Summary of Discussion & Actions to Date

1. From the Priesthood I have received no negative comments concerning the overall tone or philosophy of Setamorphosis. This is very significant to me, because the concept involves some potentially-controversial assumptions and conclusions.
   The idea that Earth civilization is entering a period of over-saturation and crisis, for example, is by no means generally accepted by analysts and forecasters.
   The exclusivist and elitist tone of Setamorphosis might have raised some objections from readers on grounds of compassion and humanitarianism.
   The technological, financial, and cooperative requirements raised might have seemed ridiculous for an organization that is presently just getting underway.
   Finally it is a “long mental stretch” between ancient Egypt, traditional concepts of magic, Satanism, and spaceships capable of faster-than-light/interdimensional travel! Some might have thought that the Temple was simply biting off far more than it could ever hope to chew.

2. As it turned out, however, the comments I received from you were positive. You took the ball and ran with it. In individual letters you addressed various parts of the concept, suggested corrections & refinements, and brought out considerations which the initial document did not raise. You discussed the concept with each other, and with selected I°/II° Initiates. Finally, through the Executive Director’s office, a Department of Contingency Planning (DCP) was formed to coordinate a continuing study of the First Problem of Setamorphosis.
   This is where we stand right now, and it is nothing short of phenomenal when one considers that only four months have elapsed since the Setamorphosis concept was introduced.

3. The question of communications was brought up almost immediately. The membership of the Temple is spread out rather loosely across great geographic expanses. What will be our primary and alternate methods of communication, both now and in the foreseeable future? Why? Do we have a projected rate of organizational expansion that will affect this picture one way or another? What about expenses involved and skills required?

4. Exactly what is this “crisis” referred to in the Book of Coming Forth by Night? Is it something that can be pinned down, or is it simply a vague omen? Are we being unduly paranoid, or are we being practical and resourceful? What is the rate of speed at which all this will happen?

(5) What is the function of magic in Setamorphosis? Is it only a “blind” as John Dee employed it, or does it have substantive value?

(6) How do these relatively independent and isolationist notions square with the Temple’s status as an organization incorporated under the laws of a secular state? Are we thus not bound to support the state and tie our fortunes to it?

(7) Is the Temple having a bad case of Star Trek-itis? [Do the High Priest’s famous pointed eyebrows mean that he is also part Vulcan?] Is it true that Carpathia Forge is building a starship out in the Nevada desert? If Einstein were wrong, how come Hiroshima got a crew cut? Leading to: How much of all this is mere speculation, and how much of it is reliable fact?

Department of Contingency Planning

The DCP has an interesting history. Approximately one week after the appearance of Setamorphosis, Magister Grumboski sent an “eyes only” memorandum to the Executive Director, outlining some of the strategic and logistical implications of the first problem.

This was followed on 2/5 with a letter from the Executive Director to Priest Lynn Norton, asking him to organize and coordinate a DCP. Finally on 3/13 Priest Norton sent out an initial descriptive letter concerning the DCP to about ten Setians of various degrees who had expressed an interest in working on the project.

Included in the 3/13 letter were many of the logistical/strategic considerations introduced by Shai [Grumboski] and the Todal [Murray], as well as Norton’s own sketch of the configuration of the DCP.

Interspersed with the serious points of the letter were some snatches of humor [i.e. “Martians may land in space ships.”]. This caused an incident or two of treeclimbing by individuals who wondered if (a) we were becoming raving paranoiacs, or (b) we had reason to suspect that Martians actually would be landing in space ships.

So, before we go any further, let me emphasize a couple of points:

The first is that the DCP [and the entire Temple, for that matter] is not a “finished product”. It is a working proposition which will be refined and elaborated upon as it gets underway. So there is no reason for anyone to climb a tree just because he sees a phrase or two in print that startles him. These things will all work themselves out as our knowledge and capabilities grow.

The important thing is that no one “suffer in silence”. If you have a comment or an idea - pro or con - let’s hear it. That is Xeper.

Another point is that a magician without a sense of humor might as well hang it up. We will be dealing with problems and situations that will be both serious and depressing. In spite of this we need to maintain optimism, creativity, and imagination. The ability to smile - indeed to poke fun at ourselves on occasion - is important. It prevents us from taking ourselves too dogmatically [which would result in a “freezing” of opinions]. It enables us to serve as our own worst critics, which is important to the maintenance of a sense of perspective. It allows criticism of theories without ego-insult to their authors. Finally it is a “safety-valve” to release tensions between individuals without harm to them or to the Temple. If there is a subject which you cannot “stand” seeing lampooned or caricatured, it is a sign that your philosophy is becoming rigidified in that area. Think about it.

A final point relative to DCP is that any sort of projection for the future is bound to be vague. Frankly we don’t know what’s actually going to happen until it does. In the meantime we are faced with a rather simple choice: Plan for the worst and be pleasantly surprised if it doesn’t occur; or plan for the best and be unpleasantly surprised if it doesn’t occur.

As the future develops, and as our own expertise in estimating it increases, we’ll be more and more able to position ourselves at a practical medium between the two extremes. But we have to get our feet wet first, and the DCP is a first move towards doing just that.

The DCP is not intended to be the only part of the Temple that is concerned with the First Problem. We are all concerned with it. But the DCP is in a position to be a collecting and coordinating agency for the project. As you have comments and ideas that impact upon it, please send them along to Priest Norton. And, of course, if you are not now involved with the DCP and would like to work with it, let him know that as well.

Communications

The Executive Director has asked Priest Ronald Barrett of San Francisco to ride herd on this item.

What it boils down to is this: At the present time the Temple is oriented towards written communications via the mail, and towards verbal communications via face-to-face meetings and the telephone. Our communications systems affect what we say, the speed with which we can react to it, and the patterns in which the organization will expand.

If in fact one or more of our present communications systems should break down or prove unreliable, the Temple would be hamstrung to a certain extent. [During the recent Canadian mail strike, for example, communications with our Canadian members came to an abrupt standstill. The Executive Director was able to arrange certain key lines of communication via diplomatic channels, but you see the general point.]

Under ideal circumstances, obviously, our present orientation is the best. The mails are cheap & quick, and photocopy & offset machines permit quick & economical duplication of data. Perhaps the mails will continue to be reliable; perhaps not. The point is not to get caught with our pants down if the postal system becomes unusable, that’s all.

Barrett is presently investigating radio as an interesting alternative. It has both advantages and disadvantages, of course. But it is conceivable that the Temple could work out a contingency communications system based upon HAM radio between nations, states, cities; and upon Citizen’s Band AM/SSB radio within local areas. This is just one of many alternatives for us to think about.

But, as with DCP, we have to consider such things in advance of an actual crisis. There wouldn't have been much point in Noah starting to build the ark once the rain began to fall, right?

Communications Funding

This only becomes a really major problem if we are talking in terms of radio. I do not foresee the Temple acquiring any CB equipment; that is an individual concern. It is possible - not necessarily probable - that we might want to own and operate HAM equipment on an organizational basis. But this is a long-range consideration which we should not worry about until the entire subject has been discussed and developed a good deal more.
Nature of “The Crisis”

The Book of Coming Forth by Night is not clear about this. As a rule of thumb, I am inclined to consider it a reference to the general socio-econopolitical deterioration that the Club of Rome et al. project for the next half-century or so. [For details, consult Mankind at the Turning Point on the Temple Reading List.]

I do not think that the crisis is going to be short-range or of instantaneous impact [such as nuclear war or a coup d’etat]. Particularly while we are a young organization, there is no way we can plan for or react against short-range developments. But we can anticipate, plan for, and surmount long-range scenarios. Our exclusively-internal orientation, our lack of red tape, our forecasting machinery, our contingency plans, and our sensitivity as the Elect of Set are all very real advantages which we possess and others do not.

What is the function of magic in this?

In the nine months since the advent of the new Æon, it has become clear that many pre-existing notions of magic were inefficient if not outright nonsensical. I will be issuing Priesthood letters on this subject, and of course many of you have already grasped the important axioms on your own. To date I have developed this subject only at the Magistry level via a letter to the Masters.

At any rate, magic is not merely a “blind”, nor should Dee’s work be interpreted as only a cover-up operation for his cipher/spying work. That was a component of his work, but not nearly the entire story. In the near future there will be a Priesthood letter on magic, and the Scroll and the Ruby Tablet will develop the topic at the I°/II° level. But it is necessarily the case that a great percentage of this information will be transmitted on an individual-to-individual basis.

Is the Temple, in discussing its survival in a future context which does not include the survival of the United States or other host countries, being treasonable or revolutionary in a political sense?

No. We would be treasonable or revolutionary only if we deliberately or actively worked towards overthrow of the state, or if, through intentional withholding of political information, we in effect contributed towards state downfall or overthrow.

But it is not treasonable for the Temple to simply be unconcerned with the political issues of the United States or any other country when we formulate our own policies. In fact the principle of the separation of religion and state requires a true religion to avoid concerning itself with governmental matters of host countries. In the United States a church which works avowedly either for or against the government is liable to lose its tax-exempt status on precisely these grounds.

The point in our case is that the Temple will not state its policies and doctrines relative to political/governmental policies and doctrines. Rather we will state our position relative to Set, his Temple, and his Priesthood.

Incorporation & tax-exemption do not signify either approval of the Setian religion by the state or the bestowing of special privileges upon us.

Incorporation is a device for ensuring the protection of the Temple within the state’s legal structure, by enabling the Temple to be regarded as a “legal person” for purposes of property ownership and court standing. It permits the Temple a legal existence apart from the individuals who constitute it.

As for the exemption ruling, it too expresses neither approval nor disapproval of our religious philosophy per se. It merely recognizes the fact that we are a legitimate and true religion by establishing that the state does not have the right to tax us.

When we accepted the exemption, we agreed thereby to reciprocate - to keep our organizational policies and assets out of any political campaigns. Legally the exemption ruling is a sort of “pact of mutual non-intervention” -which is what the separation of religion and state is all about.

So the Temple will develop its plans regarding the future as it sees fit, in keeping with our understanding of the Will of Set and without regard to any national or governmental fortunes.

As individuals, Setians themselves may have certain obligations of citizenship to their respective countries. Where such obligations do not conflict with the Setian religion, the Temple takes no position concerning them - again because of our non-concern with political or governmental matters. Where there appears to be a conflict, we will consider each case on an individual basis before rendering an opinion. Here again we must be careful to ensure that Temple positions are dictated by our religious principles, and are not merely “votes” concerning political issues.

Are we being “Closet Trekkies”, or is the second problem of Setamorphosis a different thing altogether?

It is not entirely coincidental that the Æon of Set happened to occur at a time when escape-from-Earth themes are in vogue, the Star Trek revival being the most spectacular.

The influence of a magical æon extends throughout the entire civilization of its time; indeed the Word and Formula of an æon are simply a condensation of the “theme” of the æon. Moreover if you look closely enough, you will see that the Temple has identified and pinpointed the practical and appealing components of the escapist themes, while rejecting factors that are irrelevant or illogical.

In the case of Star Trek, for example, we do not assume the existence of a stable “home base”, nor of a series of adventures on populated planets, nor of a static human condition.

Setamorphosis presupposes a third stage of human evolution. It may or may not involve linear space-travel; that is just one of the possibilities. It is entirely disassociated from governmental order of any sort, being a phenomenon on a far more profound scale. Finally it is not a question of spacial relocation, either permanent or temporary, but of transformation into an entirely new existence - a Coming Into Being.

Hence the Temple and the Star Trek revival are two different animals. In fact, you will find that many supposed similarities are actually the result of unconscious projections of Setian themes and principles into Star Trek episodes!

The High Priest’s Pointed Eyebrows

It is logically improbable to assume that such a chance feature possesses extraterrestrial significance.
Is Carpathia Forge building a Starship in the Nevada Desert?

Not just yet.

If Einstein were wrong, how come so many authorities think he’s right, and how come practical applications of his theories work?

I addressed myself to only one Einstein theory - the one that states that faster-than-light travel is impossible. And my rejection of that theory was actually based upon my acceptance of another Einstein theory - being that all motion is relative. My statement is merely that a theory arguing for a fixed velocity of light is inconsistent with one which states that all motion is relative. Period.

Other Einsteinian theories dealing with nuclear physics, gravitation, field theory, etc. are not affected. As for arguing that a fixed velocity for light must exist because a great many people think it does, that is a logical fallacy known as “authoritarian argument”. Tell Columbus and Copernicus all about it!

How much of Setamorphosis is speculation, and how much is fact?

The answer is that it is mostly somewhere in-between. “Speculation” is unsubstantiated imagination, while “fact” is rock-hard evidence.

Because Setamorphosis deals with the future, and because it deals with a higher stage of human evolution, it cannot be factual or exact. It must emphasize inductive, not deductive patterns of reasoning. But at the same time the precepts upon which its essential argument is based are not whimsical; they have all been researched quite extensively. For example, the Einsteinian component was written after about four days’ reading in about a dozen high-level physics texts. [“Genesis III” was even more rigorous, calling for about thirty biological, genetic, and anthropological references.]

Nevertheless I assume that Setamorphosis must have a wide margin for error. If we knew all about it, we’d be “there” already!

The theory is something which will Xeper as we go along. Hence it is not cast as a doctrine, but rather as a working hypothesis. So let us talk about it, refine it, and develop it as more information is discovered.

Some Additional Considerations

(1) As a result of Setamorphosis, one very interesting distinction between Adepts and the Priesthood has come to light. It is that the Adept ability to view the future from a totally-detached and objective vantage-point is both limited and fragile.

It may not seem so to the Priesthood intellect, but many of the precepts of Setamorphosis can be unnerving and frightening to those of lesser initiatory cohesion. It rips the rug out from conventional notions of our evolutionary future, just as “Genesis III” ripped the same rug out from our evolutionary past. This isn’t ring-around-the-rosie witchcraft; it’s the very fabric of human existence being rewoven. It is “heavy stuff”.

Among I° and even some II° Setians, there will be a very strong psychological tendency to “run and hide” from data that demolishes sacred cows. [Remember how impressionable you were in your I° and II° days.] So have a care about what you say to whom. This is not to say that you should not discuss this material with I’s and II’s. But do not expect them to understand it as “automatically” as a III° would.
(2) Must the Temple be obsessed with Setamorphosis? No. This is a “grand design” for the future - something which will Xeper gradually and intricately. The degree to which we can influence it - or even identify it - is open to question. We should be alert to it and aware of it, that is all.

In the meantime we are individual magicians and philosophers with a multitude of interests, aptitudes, priorities, and ambitions. There is room for all of these things in the Temple of Set; indeed such diversity and egocentrism are vital to development of the true Black Magician.

Additional supplements to Setamorphosis will be along as the course of events makes updates and additions necessary. But Setamorphosis should be considered a sort of “sum of the future parts” of the Temple and not “the most important part”.

(3) The entire “tone” of Setamorphosis seems very futuristic, very cold-blooded scientific, and very indefinite/uncertain. By definition, religions are supposed to have pat answers and be comforting They are not supposed to keep you awake at night wondering how many dimensions you exist in, etc.

Even the Church of Satan was a comforting religion in the old sense: It said that, even if appeals to God & Jesus would not work, appeals to the Devil and his demons would. The C/S was a Dennis Wheatley novel come to life, with necessary modifications to ensure that it would not actually violate any laws. And, even though we knew that many of the demons in the Satanic Bible were Judaic/Christian creations and that some were scattered willy-nilly across many religions and many civilizations, we still felt “deep down” that there was something really authentic here that was not to be found in any other church.

In the Temple of Set this “something” was finally brought into crystal-clear focus as Set - who is undistorted, underivative, uncompromising, and even uncontroversial. Then, just as everyone’s Set-tling down in ancient Egypt, along comes Setamorphosis, and zoom - we’re talking in terms of the most advanced concepts in physics and metaphysics.

In point of fact it’s all quite consistent, because the Book of Coming Forth by Night makes it clear that the new Æon is a formula for the future and not a mere retreat to the pastoral existence of ancient Egypt.

Yet we can’t help feeling a certain amount of culture shock. And nostalgia. Must we say goodbye to werewolves and vampires and ghosts and goblins and horned entities from the Pit and the rest of the gang? Must a Setian be so cerebral that every romantic superstition be abandoned?

I have thought this over very carefully, and my feeling is this:

The old C/S assumption that demons, were independent entities and intelligences which could be addressed and activated through ritual is indeed obsolete. There is only one such independent entity -Set/HarWer in its complete aspect, and Set alone in its fully-directed intelligence.

The other gods, goddesses, and demons do enjoy existence -but with an important difference: They are derivative of the human mind.

This is not the same thing as saying that they are merely figments of imagination. The mind is capable of imagination, yes, but it is also capable of creation in a far more substantive sense. It can literally give life to stereotypical, archetypical, or unique gods or demons - very much like the creation of the id-monster that took place in the famous film Forbidden Planet.
The difference between the magician and the non-magician is thus easy to identify: The non-magician is subject to spontaneous creation of such entities from his non-conscious Id, but the magician is able to create them deliberately from his conscious Ego. Indeed this explains a number of things:

- It explains why the rituals of the Church of Satan worked.
- It explains why a god, goddess, or demon could be evoked simultaneously in many different ritual chambers.
- It explains why the same entities have often appeared spontaneously to non-magicians.
- It explains why interpersonal curses and possessions work: because a magician implants the creation of a certain demonic entity in the id of the victim’s mind.
- It explains why the magician can effectively evoke Yog-Sothoth, even though Yog-Sothoth seems to be only a fictional character invented by HPL. [The magician, in practice, creates a real Yog-Sothoth from the “stereotypical blueprint” supplied by HPL.]
- It explains a great deal of Aleister Crowley.
- It explains the direct access to the Powers of Darkness that characterizes the Priesthood of Set.

And it does something else. It enables us to use the old ceremonies and rituals without feeling that we are kidding ourselves and doing something “stupid and primitive”. The difference is that now we know what it is that we are actually doing. We know what the effect will be upon magicians who are present, and we know what the effect will be upon non-magicians who are present. We know what remote results can be expected and why.

Never were these things formulated, much less conceived, during the Age of Satan. Not even Anton LaVey, I think, realized them. If you examine the magical instructions in the Satanic Bible and Satanic Rituals, you will find that they advocate procedures for influencing the non-conscious id of the magician to produce results. They do not train the ego to create the desired results deliberately and consciously.

This realization is a bit of Setamorphosis, if you will, that could not Xeper until the conventions of “orthodox Satanism” had been swept aside by the new Æon.

I might add that this new concept of the basis for ritual magic is quite a valuable weapon in the hands of the Setian Priest. It is also valuable as a device for education and instruction. Therefore be careful to whom you explain it. As is my custom, I make no prohibitions. But I would recommend that this knowledge be discussed no lower than the III°, for the reason that it could be damaging and even self-destructive to a mind that is not sufficiently self-reliant and self-conscious.

We shall not cease from exploration,
And the end of all our exploring
Will be to arrive where we started
And know the place for the first time.

Live Long and Xeper.
Introduction

The magical and philosophical interests of the Temple of Set span a wide range of disciplines. Use of commercially-published reference works, despite their respective drawbacks, is thus both essential and economical. It enables the Temple to concentrate its internal publications in areas in which critical information is either seriously substandard or altogether lacking.

When using this reading list, keep in mind that the Temple is not a book club, but rather a religious institution in which Initiates are expected to be practicing magicians. These books are recommended not merely to entertain [though many of them are good at that too!], but more importantly to impart principles which may be applied and to provide facts which are helpful or essential to an understanding of these principles.

Ideally this list should contain only those works which are currently in print or which are generally available through libraries. Unfortunately the unusual and exotic directions of our interests frequently necessitate titles which are neglected, suppressed, and/or out-of-print. Some of these works are available only at excessive prices through rare-book dealers; others seem to have vanished altogether.

If you keep your eyes open while browsing through new/used bookstores, however, and if you make maximum use of library and inter-library-loan services, you should be able to track down the materials of greatest interest to you. Many of the most interesting and valuable books may be discovered by accident [?], when you are looking for something else entirely [or just rooting around in dusty, dark stacks in the Arkham University Library]. The only thing you can’t do is grumble about the fact that the book you want isn’t presented to you on the neighborhood supermarket rack for $2.50. “Those who seek shall find.”

In earlier editions of this list, notations were made as to whether a given book were in or out of print, including foreign editions. Experience has shown that this information, as well as pricing, changes so frequently as to be unreliable. Setians seeking a particular book should check with Internet search engines, libraries, bookstores, or book-search services for current availability. Lending-library options are particularly to be recommended, as prices for many of these works - particularly the out-of-print ones in “collector’s” fields - may be excessively high. If you have doubts as to the worth of a given book at a price quoted to you, check with the source recommending the book.

Internet Book Sales and Search Services

The following three websites (none of which are connected with or officially endorsed by the Temple of Set) may be useful to you in locating/acquiring desired books:

- http://www.amazon.com
- http://www.bookfinder.com
- http://aol.alibris.com

Use of the Reading List

The reading list is not intended to be doctrinal or dogmatic. The inclusion of a book in it should not be taken to mean that all or even most of its premises and conclusions are endorsed by the Temple of Set. Most have been written by very wise people. A few have been written by cranks who just happened to blunder into something that we want to know about. Hence your own discernment is critical. Bear in mind that few if any books are written for the disinterested transmission of facts. Every author necessarily writes with a motive [besides the profit one] and from a point of personal perspective and/or bias.

The reading list is selective but not exclusive. For each book on the list, many alternatives may have been considered and rejected for one reason or another over the last two decades.

On your own you may - and probably will, if you pursue your initiation aggressively and conscientiously - discover works which appear preferable to some of those on the list, or which you think should be added to it. In such cases you are invited to send particulars. If your recommendation is adopted, the book will be added to the next update of that category of the list, with your name as the recommender.

Updates

This reading list is continuously and incrementally updated, and the most current list is included with each new Crystal Tablet sent out. Current updates of this introduction and all Categories are available in the Crystal Tablet area of the Temple of Set Intranet.

Letter Codes

After each book title you will see one or more letter codes, which identify the book as relevant to a particular initiatory system currently embraced by the Temple of Set. “TOS” = Temple of Set generally. “COS” = Church of Satan (I-X AS). “TRP” = Order of the Trapezoid. “SHU” = Order of Shuti. “VAM” = Order of the Vampyre. “LVT” = Order of Leviathan. Other codes may be added at any time to identify works pertinent to specific Orders of the Temple.

Comments By

Before the comments to each book are either initials (MA = Michael Aquino VI°, JL = James Lewis VI°, DW = Don Webb VI°, AL = Anton LaVey V°) or the name of the commenter.

Non-English Languages

The Temple of Set has reached the point in its development where we have a growing number of Initiates in countries whose native language is not English. We are now experimenting with German annotations to this list to see if this will be useful and practical to German-speaking Setians. Annotations in other languages may be added later.

This is not only because of non-English-speaking cultures’ interest in translations of English-language books. Some invaluable reference works exist only in non-English originals, and gradually the Temple will want to identify them.

Research Level Numbers

You will see a research level number attached to each letter code. These are explained as follows:

-1: The specific information contained in this book is generally essential to Initiates of all degrees. The book’s treatment is unique, and substitution of another book on the same subject is not recommended.

-2: The topical information contained in this book is generally essential to Initiates of all degrees. The book’s treatment is not unique, and other books covering approximately the same material may be substituted.

-3: This book should be considered supplementary to -1/-2 books in the same category. It is not essential, but is recommended rather for those who have a special interest in the topic.

-4: This book is suitable primarily for highly-specialized, technical research and is liable to be confusing or misleading to readers without previously-acquired, basic knowledge of the field in question. It should be considered supplementary to any -1/-2/-3 books in the same category.

-5: The contents of this book may be dangerous if applied by inexperienced magicians. III°+ consultation and guidance strongly recommended.
Films/Periodicals/Music/Organizations/Websites Sections

Sections are gradually being added to each category to cover films, periodicals, recorded music, special-interest organizations, and Internet websites relevant to that category. Entries in these supplementary sections will appear gradually over time - and when entries initially appear, they may be fragmentary and even inaccurate until we have had time to check the data out and update/verify the entry in question. [Your recommendations and feedback will be very helpful in this regard.]

The RL-# coding system will not be used for these supplementary sections. Films and music, in particular, are artistic items subject to personal taste. The presence/description of a film or recording on the list, therefore, should be understood merely as a suggestion of something you might like to investigate, not as “sanction”.

Film

Entries in this section will be designated with an “F” in front of the entry-number.

There are many ways to see non-current films, of which the easiest are (a) waiting for them to come around on television and (b) renting or buying them on videocassette or DVD. The Temple of Set can’t help you much with the former option, save to alert you to some titles to keep an eye out for.

In the case of the latter option you can prowl your local video rental stores, or you can purchase a particularly-desired item by mail order. Two possible sources:

Movies Unlimited. MU publishes a massive annual catalogue of VHS (NTSC) films, from which you can order at prices about as low as you’ll find anywhere. There is a charge of +/-US$8 for the catalogue, but it is so massive and comprehensive that it’s easily worth the price. For exact information, contact MU at 6736 Castor Avenue, Philadelphia, PA 19149, USA or telephone (800) 523-0823 for ordering information or (215) 722-8398 [9-5 Eastern US time] for customer service. Website: http://www.moviesunlimited.com

A Million and One World-Wide Videos: Post Office Box 349, Orchard Hill, GA 30266-0349. Telephone: (800) 849-7309. This company specializes in finding and mail-ordering almost every video that exists worldwide. You don’t even have to be sure of the title; just give them something to work with, such as the name of the director or an actor, and they’ll send you a list of films they worked on. Website: http://www.wwvideos.com

Periodicals

Entries in this section will be designated with an “P” in front of the entry-number.

There are some excellent professional and special-interest magazines and journals covering areas addressed by various categories of the reading list. As we narrow our survey down to the best, we will begin to include them here.

Music

Entries in this section will be designated with an “M” in front of the entry-number. This will be an effort to accumulate commercially available recordings of music appropriate to the reading list category in question, which may range from classical to electronic to soundtracks to rock, etc.

Organizations

Entries in this section will be designated with an “O” in front of the entry-number. In addition to specialized periodicals, and usually in concert with them, are special-interest groups and societies. If we come across a particularly good one, we’ll discuss it here.

Ancient Egypt holds the distinction of being both the first true nation (as opposed to city-state) and the most enduring one - existing three times as long as the Roman Empire and fifteen times as long as the United States. Many of the political and social principles which sustained Egypt are being adapted for contemporary applications by the Temple of Set. Many Egyptian cultural and scientific achievements, some long forgotten or neglected, are also of special importance when considered in the light of related areas of Setian concern. Because of its undeniable grandeur and mystery, Egypt has been sadly abused by occultists and sensationalists of later eras. Hence it is all the more incumbent upon Setians to observe responsible standards of accuracy when referring to the present Temple’s ancient heritage.

1A. The Mummy by E.A. Wallis Budge. NY: Collier Books, 1973. (TOS-2) MA: “This book contains sections on history, magic, culture, and hieroglyphics. The late Keeper of Egyptian and Assyrian Antiquities for the British Museum (and rumored initiate of the Golden Dawn), Budge has written many detailed works on Egyptology. Their shortcomings are minor: an overemphasis on Osirian interpretation of philosophy and occasional questionable assumptions (generally educated guesses based on whatever fragmentary archæological data were available during his lifetime). The Mummy is a good ‘basic Budge’. Written at the beginning of this century, however, it is necessarily dated. Its contents are best updated by comparison with recent theories contained in more modern works.”

1B. Egypt the Black Land by Paul Jordan. NY: E.P. Dutton, 1976. (TOS-2) MA: “Jordan is a writer and producer of archæological films for television, specializing in Egyptology. This book, with chapters on history, society, religion, morality, technical/scientific achievement, and philosophy, is an excellent survey incorporating recent archæological data. Technical assistance from the Royal Scottish Museum’s Cyril Aldred. A good work to cross-reference with #1A. Many beautiful photographs are included.”

1C. The Larousse Encyclopedia of Ancient and Medieval History by Marcel Dunn (Ed.). NY: Harper & Row, 1963 [reprinted 1972 (paperback) by Crown]. (TOS-3) MA: “The Egyptian section of this book is remarkably succinct and objective, which accounts for its inclusion in this category. An additional benefit is that the book is written sequentially, so that an episode occurring in one part of the world may be followed by an episode taking place in another area at the same point in time. The general library value of this book extends far beyond its Egyptological applications. Indeed, Setians would do well to familiarize themselves with the Larousse series, including such Encyclopedias as #3R, #24A/B/C, and Modern History (companion to #1C).”

1D. Egypt Under the Pharaohs by Heinrich Brugsch-Bey. NY: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1891. (TOS-4) MA: “Brugsch-Bey was one of Germany’s most prominent Egyptologists of the last century. This book was his final publication, and in it he endeavored to derive a history of Egypt entirely from the inscriptions on its surviving monuments. Since most of the inscriptions are quoted in the text, the reader has a means of assessing the author’s conclusions - a rare luxury in Egyptology. The book is understandably dated and may be compared with works incorporating more recent data.”

1F. Secrets of the Great Pyramid by Peter Tompkins. NY: Harper & Row, 1971 [paperback reprint available]. [Deutschland: Die Geheimnisse der grossen Pyramide. Fischer Taschenbuchverlag, Frankfurt, 1979.] (TOS-3) (TRP-3) MA: “This is the most comprehensive analysis to date of the Great Pyramid of Giza. [See also #1K.] It contains a sophisticated discussion of the scientific and mathematical principles incorporated in the monument, as well as a history of archeological attitudes towards it. Extensively illustrated. It should not be confused with the many ‘pyramid fad’ books appearing shortly thereafter. Tompkins has written a companion volume on obelisks, as well as one devoted to pyramid structures in the western hemisphere: Mysteries of the Mexican Pyramids (NY: Harper & Row, 1976). While not as impressive as the information concerning the Giza pyramids, this material is also worthy of study by those interested in architectural magic in general. Some provocative additional material concerning the Great Pyramid is contained in The Mysteries of the Great Pyramids by A. Pochan (NY: Avon #31492, 1978. Tompkins has also written the prefaces to #2AB and #5F.”

1G. The Pyramids by Ahmed Fakhry. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1961. (TOS-3) MA: “Fakhry (1905-1973) was Professor of Ancient History at Cairo University. This book is a thorough survey of all the major Egyptian pyramids, with supplementary chapters on building processes, the Giza Sphinx, and related philosophy. His approach is essentially unsympathetic to those who ‘read mysticism into’ the monuments; hence this book is a good contrast to #1F. Nevertheless it is evident that Fakhry ignores data that do not support his solidly-materialistic approach.”

1H. Lives of the Pharaohs by Pierre Montet. Cleveland: World Publishing Company, 1969. [Deutschland: Das Leven der Pharaonen. Propyläen Verlag, Frankfurt, 1970.] (TOS-3) MA: “Montet is a Member of the French Institute and Honorary Professor at the College de France. Rather than attempting to cover Egyptian history in its entirety, he focuses on the more significant periods, governments, philosophies, and rulers. The result is a book with major insights into such episodes as the Hebrew exodus, the Akhenaten period, and the Setian dynasties. After reading this book, you will be able to see the Osirian distortions in most of the less exactlying researched histories.”

1I. A Book of the Beginnings by Gerald Massey. Seacaucus, NJ: University Books, 1974. (TOS-4) MA: “A two-volume edition of about 1,200 pages. Massey was a poet and amateur Egyptologist in turn-of-the-century England, and this work was the first of his series on the topic. It was so radical a departure from accepted archaeological interpretations that it was rejected in academic circles. The book’s contentions are often startling, but Massey documents his arguments so thoroughly and carefully that criticism is decidedly difficult. He is further an accomplished linguist, reading and cross-referencing hieroglyphics fluently. Among the topics addressed: Egypt’s connections with later civilizations’ mythologies, Egyptian origins of practically every Hebrew and Christian myth, Egyptian origin of the Hebrew language, the Setian religion as the most ancient in existence, the Hyksos not outside invaders but rather an indigenous Egyptian group, and periodic Setian/Osirian factional control of the nation.”

1J. The Natural Genesis by Gerald Massey. NY: Samuel Weiser, 1976 [two volumes]. (TOS-4) MA: “Massey considered this as the ‘second half’ of #1I. It continues the same themes, with the noteworthy addition of an extensive and exhaustive chapter on Darkness and Setian symbolism in ancient Egypt. Also included are many investigations into the cults of HarWer and Xepera, animalistic influences on primitive human psychology, and physiological influences on mythical systems. There are innumeral surprise tidbits along the way, such as evidence for the Egyptian origins of the waters of ZamZam [see #6L]. A linguistic comparison of Sanskrit and Egyptian hieroglyphics [no mean feat!] is appended. 1,050 pages.”

1K. Ancient Egypt, the Light of the World by Gerald Massey. NY: Samuel Weiser, 1976 [two volumes]. (TOS-4) MA: “Massey’s final work, originally published in 1907. In the introduction he said: ‘Comparatively speaking, A Book of the Beginnings was written in the dark, The Natural Genesis was written in the twilight, whereas Ancient Egypt has been written in the light of day.’ This work covers much the same ground as his earlier editions, but it includes a major attack on Hebrew/Christian mythology. One suspects that this may be the reason for the reluctance of Western society to accept, much less endorse Massey; those who interrupt soothing fictions with irritating facts are rarely welcome. 944 pages. [In 1974 Samuel Weiser also published Gerald Massey's Lectures in hardcover. This volume is recommended as a supplement to Massey’s theoretical works, since it comments upon their theses in a series of lecture texts. It will not be very intelligible to the reader who has not previously read #1I/J/K, however.]”

1L. Pyramid Odyssey by Wm. R. Fix. NY: Mayflower Books, 1978. (TOS-3) MA: “Recommended as supplementary reading to #1F. Fix is the first author to make a critical analysis of Tompkins’ contentions concerning the Pyramids. In doing so he traveled to Giza and discovered that many facts concerning the Pyramids’ measurements which were taken for granted by various authors are unsubstantiated by first-hand measurement. Fix also details various discoveries concerning the monuments which do not appear in other works on the subject. Fix himself is an amateur rather than a professional Egyptologist or archaeologist, but his arguments are impressive for the obvious care with which they are constructed. [See also #2O.]”

1M. Egypt Before the Pharaohs by Michael A. Hoffman. NY: Alfred A. Knopf, 1979. (TOS-4) MA: “An academic, archaeological text written in language intelligible and meaningful to the layman. This is the first modern, coherent treatment of Egyptian history and prehistory ca. 700,000 BCE to 3100 BCE and includes interesting evidence and speculations concerning the origins of the Egyptians’ religious and philosophical traditions, including the predynastic influence of the Set and Horus cults. Author a Ph.D. in Anthropology and a Professor at the University of Virginia.”

10. A History of Ancient Egypt by Nicholas Grimaal. Oxford: Blackwell, 1992. (TOS-2) DW: “Grimaal ‘has managed to transform - without disguising current gaps in knowledge - disparate sources of evidence and the result of many different disciplines into a coherent historical sequence’. In the paperback version Kent R. Weeks (of KV5 fame) has added a nice section of further reading in English. Grimaal is a Professor of Egyptology at the Sorbonne.”

F1A. The Egyptian. MGA, 1954. MA: “This film was one of the ‘sword and sandals’ Cinemascope spectaculars which were popular in the 1950s. Adapted from Mika Waltari’s novel, it tells the story of an Egyptian physician, Sinue (Edmond Purdom), involved in court intrigues during the reign of Akhenaten (Michael Wilding). Taking dramatic license, the film skips Tutankhamun, jumping the throne immediately to Horemheb (Victor Mature), alternately regarded as the founder of the 19th (Setian) Dynasty or as a non-dynastic Pharaoh between the 18th & 19th Dynasties. This film is interesting not so much for archaeology as for the picture it sketches of court life and atmosphere in ancient Egypt. The Akhenaten era is a good subject for this, as of course it involved conflicts between the traditional priesthoods and the throne-patronized cult of Aten. Additional roles are played by Jean Simmons, Peter Ustinov, and Gene Tierney. The soundtrack is available on the MGA label and offers a nice selection of what Hollywood thinks ancient Egyptian music might have been like [but probably wasn’t].”

F1B. Egypt: Quest for Eternity. National Geographic Society. MA: “Of all the archaeological surveys of ancient Egypt, this is - as is in keeping with NG productions generally - one of the most professional and visually impressive.”

F1C. Mysteries of the Pyramids. MA: “A film that investigates the Pyramids as incisively as #1F & #1L remains to be made. But this is a nice ‘tourist trip’, with a nice guide (Omar Sharif), if you can’t visit Giza personally.”

P1A. KMT. KMT Communications, 1531 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94115. MA: “A layman’s archaeological magazine devoted to ancient Egypt. Subscriptions only - not normally available on newsstands.”
In a relatively short span of time, the Egyptian culture went from barbarism to an advanced and intricate cosmological philosophy. After the fall of Egypt’s initiatory priesthoods - and the extinction of hieroglyphic literacy - this philosophy survived only in crude and superficial approximations, often so ludicrous out-of-context that Egypt became a prime target for romantic fantasy. Not for another two thousand years would its true tenets begin to be rediscovered, and popular understanding of them is still minimal - due, in no small part, to the significant dissimilarity between them and mainstream Western philosophy and mysticism, which proceed largely from Judaic/Christian assumptions. For the Setian to understand the Temple of Set, it is first necessary to understand and experience life as the initiated Egyptians perceived it, then to temper that impression with modern scientific knowledge.

2B. Before Philosophy by Henri Frankfort (author of #2Q) et al. Baltimore: Penguin Books, 1946. (TOS-3) MA: “A survey of higher cosmological, political, and moral thought prior to Hellenic Greece. The section on Egypt, written by John A. Wilson, summarizes Egyptian cosmology, the concept and functioning of the state, and various values of life. This material is particularly helpful in understanding the integration of Egyptian cosmology into the entire political and social attitude and derivative structures & institutions of the nation. This book is generally considered the classic work on its subject.”

2C. From Fetish to God in Ancient Egypt by E.A. Wallis Budge. London: Oxford University Press, 1934. (Quality paperback reprint available) (TOS-4) MA: “This last major Egyptological text written by Budge incorporates many new archeological discoveries not yet made when he authored his earlier works. 545 pages long and extensively documented, it may be considered his magnum opus. It covers the entire range of Egyptian religion, with abundant quotes from actual texts and inscriptions. The Osirian cult is still disproportionately emphasized, however, and the political/social applications of the religious philosophy covered are not treated in detail.”

2D. The Egyptian Heaven and Hell by E.A. Wallis Budge. La Salle, Illinois: Open Court, 1974. (TOS-3) MA: “In this book Budge describes major Egyptian texts dealing with the Tuat (the ‘afterworld’) - specifically the Book of Gates, Book of Am-Tuat, and other accounts of a non-Osirian orientation. This material is valuable as a contrast to the more extensive and better-known Book of Coming Forth by Day (‘Book of the Dead’), which treats the same subjects from an Osirian perspective.”

2E. The Conflict of Horus and Seth by J. Gwyn Griffiths. Chicago: Argonaut Publishers, 1969. (TOS-4) MA: “This book contains both extensive quotes from Egyptian texts and analyses of later treatments of the legend by Herodotus, Diodorus, Plutarch, and subsequent scholars. It remains the definitive work on the subject, with a 23-page bibliography. It is out of print, and few copies exist, so significant material from it will be introduced from it as pertinent in Temple of Set papers. #2E may be considered a companion volume to #2G.”

2F. The Dawn of Astronomy by J. Norman Lockyer. Cambridge: MIT Press, 1964. [More recently republished at US$45 by Kessinger Publishing; P.O. Box 160; Kila, MT 59920 - phone (406) 756-0167.] (TOS-3) MA: “Lockyer, an eminent British astronomer of the 19th century, developed a theory that the Egyptian gods - and the temples and artifacts dedicated to them - were closely integrated with astronomical phenomena. Although he accompanied his argument with extensive documentation, the theory was initially considered too radical to have substance. Recent archæological discoveries have prompted the reprinting and reconsideration of this book.”

2G. Seth, God of Confusion by H. Te Velde. Leiden, The Netherlands: E.J. Brill, 1977. (TOS-4) (SKM-1) MA: “This is the definitive analysis of Set in ancient Egyptian religion and philosophy. Essentially an archæological reference work, it includes 150 pages of text, 6 pages of bibliographic entries, and a section cross-referencing Set to major Egyptian texts. Reprinted [quality paperback] and revised from the original 1968 edition. Write for Brill’s current catalogue, which also includes many other works of possible interest. In the U.S.A. write to: E.J. Brill, P.O. Box 467, 24 Hudson Street, Kinderhook, NY 12106. Overseas: E.J. Brill, Postbus 9000, 2300 PA Leiden, The Netherlands. #2G may be considered a companion volume to #2E.”

2H. Cleopatra by H. Rider Haggard. NY: Harper & Brothers, 1888. Reprinted 1987 by Castle Books Division of Book Sales, Secaucus, NJ (ISBN 1-55521-122-4) [Deutschland: Kleopatra. Arthur Schilbach Verlag, Leipzig, 1898.] (TOS-5) (LVT-5) MA: “Haggard, better known as the author of She and King Solomon’s Mines, also produced this extraordinary account of Egyptian initiatory priesthoods and their relationship to the national government. The plot revolves around the hypothetical survival of a native line of succession, protected by the Priesthood of Isis, during the Ptolemaic era. Harmachis, last of this line is charged by the Priesthood to overthrow Cleopatra and reestablish the Egyptian dynasties. What transpires involves many lessons concerning initiation, honor, and the responsibilities of a true priesthood and priest-kingship. Aspirants to the Priesthood of Set should accordingly take seriously to heart the central theme of this story.” JL: “The meeting of Harmachis with Cleopatra is that of one magician encountering another and proving as did Star Wars, The Lord of the Rings, and The Wizard of Oz that an ‘evil’ can be overcome only by chance or a yet greater ‘evil’, bearing in mind that ‘evil’ is in the eye of the beholder. The lessons of the central theme spoken of by MA for those aspirants to the Priesthood of Set are also extremely important.”

2I. Ancient Egypt by Maurice Maeterlinck. London: George Allen & Unwin Ltd, 1925. (TOS-4) MA: “This essay succeeds in capturing the atmosphere of Khem to a degree unmatched by other published works. Chapters on life, the wisdom of the priesthoods, the secret religion, and the spiritual atmosphere of the land. [Maeterlinck is also the author of #18D.]

2J. Development of Religion and Thought in Ancient Egypt by James H. Breasted. NY: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1912. (TOS-4) MA: “Breasted was Professor of Egyptology and Oriental History at the University of Chicago, and this book is composed of a series of lectures given at a theological seminary. Although some of the source material is dated, this book covers the same ground as #2B with greater sophistication and detail. Egyptian texts are quoted and documented with precision, and appropriate attention is given to non-Osirian aspects of the national philosophy and to the integration of the religion with the entire state of being of Egypt.”

2K. The Mythical Origin of the Egyptian Temple by E.A.E. Reymond. NY: Barnes & Noble, 1969. (TOS-4) MA: “Primarily an archæological text, this book treats the actual construction of Egyptian temples from the myths surrounding them. Major sections cover actual use of the temples - something rarely to be found in other works on Egyptian religion - as well as the legends concerning the conception and construction of specific edifices. Reymond is precise with his facts; the book is dry but thoroughly scholarly. Useful as a ‘hard archæological’ contrast to #2P.”

2L. Her-Bak (two volumes) by Isha Schwaller De Lubicz. NY: Inner Traditions, 1954. (TOS-3 alternative to #2AB) (SHU-1) (LVT-1) MA: “Although speculative and intuitive rather than strictly historical, Her-Bak describes the experience of Egyptian priestly initiation clearly, coherently, and consecutively. The two volumes are in the form of a narrative story whereby a young Egyptian, Her-Bak, undergoes both exoteric and esoteric selection and schooling. Included throughout the narrative are many digressions into the social, political, and cultural life of ancient Egypt. A wealth of appendices provide more detailed discussions of some of the key concepts and points addressed in the story proper. The reading of Her-Bak is a pleasant, reflective, and meditative experience - so much so that one is occasionally relaxed to the point of sleep! Her-Bak’s Egypt seems to be suspiciously free of the interpersonal strife that characterizes so much of human society. If there is a shortcoming to this work, then, it is that it doesn’t come to grips with ‘low’ human nature in the way that #2H, #2M, or Waltari’s The Egyptian can do. When all of life begins to seem like a Booth cartoon, read some Her-Bak. [For a more archæological treatment of the Egyptian priesthood institution, see #2AA.]” JL: “MA’s description of the two volumes is concise and insightful. One could wish de Lubicz had Dr. Aquino’s ability to say a lot in fewer words. The GM of the Order of Leviathan detests the Her–Bak books with a passion, but admits grudgingly that the set holds more than its share of wisdom as Her-Bak Xepers from urchin to initiate.” DW: “The Schwallers were French Romantics who undertook a magical and philosophical interpretation of Egyptian culture and symbolism. I would include Schwaller on my list of Magi; his Word was Al Khemi, which was later reUttered by Ronald K. Barrett as Xem. For one perspective on Schwaller see his biography: Al Khemi: Hermetic, Occult, Political, and Private Aspects of R.A. Schwaller de Lubicz by Andre Vandenbroeck (Hudson, NY: Lindisfarne Press, 1987).”

2M. Wisdom’s Daughter by H. Rider Haggard. NY: Del Rey #345-27428-8-195, 1922. (TOS-3) (LVT-2) MA: “Another approach to the subject of #2L in the form of a novel concerning the Egyptian initiation of Ayesha, central figure of Haggard’s She and its sequels. The novel’s orientation is first Osirian [Ayesha’s initiation is as a Priestess of Isis] and ultimately theistic, but her use of her priesthood is quite Setian - thus leading her to the experiences recounted in She and Ayesha: The Return of She. Her-Bak this is not!”

JL: “Anyone whose only exposure to Haggard’s She-Who-Must-Be-Obeyed is #F2B is missing a great deal. The movie’s characters cannot hold a candle to the actual Black Magician which Ayesha is. Members of the Order of Leviathan will benefit from seeing the mind of the Priestess [at least nominally of Isis] in motion as she plans for the present and future, invariably confounding her foes. Time and circumstance are the servants of Ayesha, not her masters.”

2N. Mathematics in the Time of the Pharaohs by Richard J. Gillings. Cambridge: MIT Press, 1972. (TOS-4) MA: “This is a scientific textbook; its chapters are filled with mathematical formulae and calculations as the Egyptians employed them. Apart from the purely technical evidence it offers concerning the high level of Egyptian civilization, it may be considered an interesting cross-reference with #12E and #12F.”

2O. Star Maps by Wm. R. Fix. London: Octopus Books, 1979. (TOS-3) MA: “In this book Fix, the author of #1L, undertakes the somewhat more ambitious task of making sense out of Egyptian ‘out of the body’ writings, specifically with regard to extra-terrestrial life sources and life-after-death modes of existence. This book has strong points [interesting analyses of various inscriptions, correlations to the work of Lockyer (#2F) and Lilly (#19N)] and weak points [accounts of ‘astral’ experiences of dubious authenticity and relevance, i.e. Stanford Research Institute (see #19W)]. Yet Fix brings to this study the same sincerity and tenacity evident in his earlier work; he is trying to make sense of some admittedly perplexing data. His conclusion is that man is primarily a metaphysical and only degeneratively a physical entity, and that his eventual triumph over the physical orientation will enable the initiated intelligence to return to a universal/stellar mode of unrestricted existence and consciousness. In this theme Fix has much in common with most of the initiatory texts and stories in this reading list category. This book could also be classified in categories #18 or #19, but is placed here because of Fix’ many references to ancient Egyptian texts and philosophies. A well-researched and argued hypothesis, not a definitive statement.”

2P. The Temple in Man by R.A. Schwaller de Lubicz. Brookline, Massachusetts: Autumn Press, 1949. (TOS-4) MA: “De Lubicz, an alchemist [in the philosophical sense] became an amateur Egyptologist, residing near Luxor for 15 years. In this book he presents the thesis that Egyptian temple construction has certain geometric and architectural relationships to the human body. Further - and perhaps more central to his Egyptological contributions - he proposes that any study of ancient Egypt prerecessitates one’s personally assuming the Egyptians’ philosophical outlook. Otherwise the monuments and writings convey distorted meanings. The clarity, logic, and coherence of #2L (written by his wife) are the best possible testimony to this approach.”

2Q. Kingship and the Gods by Henri Frankfort (Editor of #2B). Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1948. (TOS-3) MA: “A comparative study of the institutions of Egyptian and Mesopotamian kingship and their relationship to the respective religious and magical codes of the lands in question. Relevant to the Temple of Set not only because of the historical material contained, but also because of its indication that Platonic concepts of the role of the philosopher-king originated in Egyptian governmental tradition.”
2R. Principles of Egyptian Art by Heinrich Schaefer (Emma Brunner-Traut, Ed.) (John Baines, Trans. Ed.) Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1974. [Deutschland: Von ägyptischer Kunst, besonders der Zeichenkunst. Heinrichs Verlag, Leipzig, 1922.] (TOS-4) MA: “From E.H. Gombrich’s foreword: ‘This book is more than a classic of Egyptology. Its results must be of interest to art historians, psychologists, and philosophers who concern themselves with systems of signs and their role in communication. It constitutes indeed the only attempt ever made of analyzing an artistic style as a mapping procedure. Schaefer has successfully reconstructed the key we have to consult if we want to interpret an Egyptian image in terms of what it is intended to represent. Put in another way, he teaches us the rules of transformation we must apply if we want to translate an Egyptian representation into the corresponding verbal description of a real or imaginary situation.’”

2S. The Opening of the Way by Isha Schwaller de Lubicz. NY: Inner Traditions, 1979. (TOS-3) MA: “A non-fictional treatment of some of the main themes of #2L by the same author. As is the case with some of the philosophical dialogues in #2L, the writing style is a bit on the dry side. Moreover the argument culminates in a somewhat lame proposal for gnostic Christianity, which is presumably the result of the author’s feeling she has to end up in some kind of mode acceptable to the mainstream of Western religious tradition [a mistake]. The reader should not be put off by this, but should approach the text for what it does present competently.”

2T. Egyptian Language by E.A. Wallis Budge. NY: Dover Publications, 1973. (TOS-3) MA: “A small, economical, and relatively easy-to-read introduction to Egyptian hieroglyphics. This book will not teach you to become fluent in ancient Egyptian, however; for that you would have to undertake more extensive and exhaustive studies. [Ten years of training was required of Egyptian scribes.] If you are not deterred, proceed to #2U and #2X.”

2U. An Egyptian Hieroglyphic Dictionary (two volumes) by E.A. Wallis Budge. NY: Dover Publications, 1978. (TOS-4) MA: “A reprint of the original 1920 dictionary, which is virtually unavailable outside of libraries. Though flawed by some later discoveries in hieroglyphic translation techniques, this remains the most available and easy-to-read publication of this type.”

2X. Egyptian Grammar by Sir Alan Gardiner. Oxford: University Press, 1927 (Third Edition reprinted through 1979). (TOS-4) MA: “This 646-page hardcover book will teach you how to read and write hieroglyphic text, but it is a difficult and demanding undertaking. There is a dictionary in the latter part of the book; while not as large as that of #2U, it is generally acknowledged to be more accurate since it reflects advances in the field since Budge’s time. Currently selling for about £17 in London.”

2Y. Sacred Science by R.A. Schwaller de Lubicz. NY: Inner Traditions, English translation 1982. (TOS-4) MA: “This book - the most extensive work by this author - might perhaps be described as his version of the #2S argument, supported by a non-fictional treatment of the principles espoused [pardon the pun] in #2L. It is noteworthy for comparisons drawn to Pythagorean and Copernican thought. I would assess it as being somewhat more speculative and subjective than a strictly-archæological analysis should be, and again the author’s inclination towards an Osirian bias and a resultant Gnostic Christianity is - as in #2S - apparent.”

2Z. Egyptian Mysteries by Lucie Lamy. NY: Crossroad, 1981. (TOS-3) MA: “Lamy was a long-time student of R.A.S. de Lubicz, and her superb Egyptian/hieroglyphic illustrations, both line drawings and color paintings, may be found throughout his works as well as in the Her-Bak volumes. In this slim but elegant treatise on Egyptian religious philosophy - also beautifully photo-accented and illustrated, she displays her considerable skill as an author and philosopher as well. In keeping with what I am tempted to call the ‘de Lubicz style’, the discussion is marked by serenity and quiet reverence for the concepts being treated; this is no ‘textbook’ that treats the ancient Egyptians like so many interesting bugs to be dissected. 96 pages - about the size of one of the Hamlyn books. More diverse than #2A in its treatment of philosophical concepts, and I would say more insightful as well - but not nearly as systematically organized. This is a ‘browsing and enjoying’ book.”

2AA. The Priests of Ancient Egypt by Serge Sauneron. NY: Grove Press (Black Cat Edition), 1980. (TOS-3) MA: “Serge Sauneron is a former Director of the French Oriental Archæological Institute in Cairo, and has participated in excavations in Tanis and Karnak. In this 190-page book he focuses on the concept of the priesthood as it evolved in the ancient Egyptian culture. Whereas #2L is more intuitive than archæological, #2AA is solidly an archæological work. Chapters deal with: the priestly function, the world of the temples, the sacred activities, the sacred wisdom, and the fortunes & misfortunes of the priesthoods. The rise and fall of various priesthoods over the dynasties is also discussed in some detail, including the renaisessance of the Priesthood of Set during the XIX-XX Dynasties.”

2AB. Serpent in the Sky: The High Wisdom of Ancient Egypt by John Anthony West. NY: Julian Press, Inc. (ISBN 0-517-56635-4), 1987. (TOS-3 alternative to #2L) MA: “An extremely lucid and concise summary of the de Lubicz interpretation of Egyptology, easily available in this high-quality oversized paperback. Preface by Peter Tompkins, author of #1F. Whereas #2L presents these ideas through the medium of a narrative story, this book is completely analytical in format. The essence of de Lubicz’ argument is that, in its literature, art, and architecture, Egypt incorporated an extremely sophisticated metaphysical philosophy which must be intuitively apprehended, not merely archaeologically deciphered. Such a heretical approach to Egyptology has made de Lubicz anathema to conventional Egyptologists, but they remain unable to refute his propositions.”
2AC. Symbol and Magic in Egyptian Art by Richard H. Wilkinson. London/NY: Thames and Hudson Ltd, 1994. (SKM-1) DW: “This book is a follow-up to Wilkinson’s Reading Egyptian Art. It deals with the symbolism of form, size, location, materials, color, numbers, hieroglyphs, actions, and gestures. Full of examples, and an explanation which is both readable and scholarly.”

2AD. Hieroglyphics Without Mystery: An Introduction to Ancient Egyptian Writing by Karl-Theodor Zauzich (translated and adapted from the German (Verlag, 1980) by Ann Macy Roth. Austin, TX: University of Texas Press, 1992. ISBN 0-292-79804-0 (pbk.) (TOS-3) DW: “This is a small volume that attempts to fill the gap between the child-level introductions to the Egyptian language and the standard text, Sir Alan Gardiner’s Egyptian Grammar (#2X). Written primarily for tourists and museum visitors, it imparts the information required to read short inscriptions. The material on vocabulary and grammar is both well organized and very readable. The first part of the book contains a concise description of the writing system, and the second part applies it to several dozen photographs of inscriptions. It also has a number of useful appendices, including suggestions for pursuing further study of the hieroglyphs. There are also many workbook-style problems in the text. A good alternative to the more elementary and dated #2T.”

2AE. SAOC 54. The Mechanics of Ancient Egyptian Magical Practice (Second Edition Revised) by R.K. Ritner. Chicago: Oriental Institute, 1995. ISBN 0-918986-75-3. (TOS-4) DW: “I was very glad to hear that Ritner’s revised dissertation is reprinted. Thanks for letting us know, Priest Radtke. It is the absolute best source, with only two drawbacks. It is costly (US$50). It assumes some familiarity with Egyptian thought/language. If you really want to do Egyptian magic, you need this book.” From the publisher’s announcement: “To date no comprehensive treatment of Egyptian magic has focused on the practice of the magician. Both general studies and textual publications have emphasized instead the religious elements in the contents of recited spells, while the accompanying instructions, with their vignettes and lists of materials, instruments, and ritual actions, remained uninvestigated. This study represents the first critical examination of such ‘magical techniques’, revealing their widespread appearance and pivotal significance for all Egyptian ‘religious’ practices from the earliest periods through the Coptic era, influencing as well the Greco-Egyptian magical papyri. The author also discusses the ‘pagan-Egyptian’ influence on Old and New Testament practices and in the lives of the Coptic Desert Fathers. The second edition includes minor corrections from the original edition. ‘This volume is a significant revisionist approach to ancient Egyptian magic. As a result of a methodical analysis of both the textual and archaeological records, Ritner concludes that the boundaries between ancient Egyptian magic, religion, and medicine were not as strictly observed as modern commentators believe. Furthermore he categorically denies the frequent attempts of moderns to define ancient Egyptian magi as a phenomenon dealing with the supernatural, practiced primarily for nefarious purposes sub rosa by individuals outside of the religious mainstream ... Ritner’s engaging prose style and felicitous exegesis of even the most arcane material make for easy reading. But more important still, the content of the work ensures that it will become a vital reference tool for all engaged in any aspect of ancient Egyptian religion.’ [From a review in Journal of the American Oriental Society 114 (1994) 513].” To order, contact Oriental Institute Publications Sales, 1155 E. 58th Street, Chicago IL 60637, or call Chris Kahrl (Sales Manager) at (312) 702-9508, or email Chris at c-kahrl@uchicago.edu

2AG. Seven Faces of Darkness: Practical Typhonian Magic by Don Webb. Smithville, TX: Runa-Raven Press, 1996. (TOS-1) DW: “A study of the magic of the Late Antique Mediterranean with a special emphasis on the figure of Set-Typhon in the magical writings and practices of that time. Useful for understanding the relationship of practical sorcery to the process of initiation.”

2AH. The Ancient Egyptian “Tale of the Two Brothers” by Susan Tower Hollis. Norman, OK: University of Oklahoma Press, 1990. (TOS-4) (SKM-1) DW: “The Papyrus d’Orbiney has a reworking of an Egyptian fairytale known as the ‘Tale of the Two Brothers’ into a Setian initiatory manual. The papyrus was written for Prince Seti-Merenptah, who later became Seti II. Dr. Hollis’ book is a great scholarly examination of the papyrus with many useful, hard-data insights into the nature of life, Set, Anubis, rebirth, and Remanifestation. It may be a bit challenging to someone new to Egyptology.”

2AI. The Secret Lore of Egypt: Its Impact on the West by Erik Hornung and David Lorton (trans.). Cornell University Press, 2002. ISBN: 0801438470. (TOS-4) Patty Hardy IV°: “This volume documents the most visible, persistant, and pervasive legacy of ancient Egypt: esoteric teachings and arts, mystery schools, and secret societies, architectural tributes and political movements reflecting a view of Egypt as fountainhead of wisdom. For this perspective he coins the term ‘Egyptosophy’. [This book could also go in RL#4, as a survey of the roots of contemporary occultism.] Hornung, a Professor Emeritus of Egyptology at the University of Basel, writes that ‘scholarly concern with the esoteric tradition is still in its infancy and stands in inverse proportion to the immense importance of the esoteric among the general public’ and muses: ‘Are we heading for a new Renaissance in which Egypt, though in a very different form, will again play a role?’”

2AJ. The Mind of Egypt: History and Meaning in the Time of the Pharaohs by Jan Assmann and Andrew Jenkins (trans.). Hardcover: New York: Metropolitan Books, 2002 (ISBN: 0805054626). Paperback: Harvard University Press, 2003 (ISBN: 0674012119). (TOS-3) Patty Hardy IV°: “This history strives to trace and document transformations of meaning - changes in the philosophy and self-image of ancient Egyptian - using three sources of evidence: ‘traces’ (material artifacts), ‘messages’ (the content of inscriptions and papyri, which contain both explicit and implicit clues to the authors’ perspective), and ‘memories’ (folklore, myth and other narratives of the remembered past). Each source has strengths and blind spots. With these three sources Assman braids a history of Egypt from unification to the birth of modern Egyptology - which Assmann views as a victory of the ‘traces’ school over rival interpretations of ancient Egypt. But this victory is not the last word: ‘Today we know infinitely more abut Egypt than did the experts of the eighteenth century. But we are also infinitely less sure of what to do with that knowledge. Only gradually are endeavors emerging to supplement that antiquarian preoccupation with traces (the merits of which are beyond question) with an attempt to enter into a dialogue with the newly readable messages of ancient Egyptian culture and thus to reestablish them as an integral part of our cultural memory.’ Since 1976 Assmann has held a professorship of Egyptology at the University of Heidelberg. Assmann makes points generally relevant to the Setian interest in Egypt: (a) the West is viewed as having ‘dual foundations’ in Greek classicism and Hebrew religion, but both of these are responses to contact with Egypt; (b) this cultural legacy of Egypt continually remanifests and re-informs the West, regardless of the suppressed or disreputable cast given to it.”

F2A. The Mummy. Universal, 1932. MA: “The first and best of many ‘mummy/monster’ films, The Mummy actually involved more research and subtle allusions than most of the viewing public is aware of. The ‘Scroll of Thoth’ in the film was taken from #18C, and the mummy himself was named after Imhotep, legendary architect of the Pyramid of Zoser. Makeup by Jack Pierce, the Universal wizard responsible for most of the classic film-monsters of the 1930s, such as the Frankenstein monster and the Chaney wolf-man. Edward Van Sloan makes as crafty an opponent for Boris Karloff here as he does for Bela Lugosi in Dracula.”

F2B. She. Hammer Films. MA: “There have been eight film treatments of She (cf. #2M), though, as far as I know, none of the other She -series books by Haggard. The most lavish and most recent stars Ursula Andress as Ayesha. I have not yet found it as a videocassette, but have seen it broadcast occasionally on television. The last and best of the seven silent-film versions was shot in 1925 starring Betty Blythe, with cards written by Haggard himself.”
Today’s philosophical and religious climate derives from the interaction and competition of a great many schools of logic, superstition, science, and intuition throughout history. It is necessary for the Setian to acquire at least a working familiarity with such systems, as the information gained is often useful in the development of both Greater and Lesser Black Magical techniques. Furthermore, while the original Priesthood of Set did not survive the decadence and downfall of Egypt, many of its characteristics were either preserved by other cultures or independently discovered by initiates of other magical/philosophical systems. The works selected for this category are intended to survey the more elaborate and esoteric concepts of intellectual elites throughout the ancient Mediterranean and Western European cultures. [See also Category 24.]

3A. Religion in Ancient History by S.G.F. Brandon. NY: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1969. (TOS-3) MA: “This book is worth chasing down through a library. It consists of 25 essays on such topics as the soul, national religions, the Devil, life after death, Dualism, Jewish history to 70 CE, early Christian mythology, Time as God and Devil, origins of religion, the Akhenaten period, early Christian Gnosticism, and angels. Author a Professor of Comparative Religions at Manchester University.”

3B. The History of the Devil by Paul Carus. NY: Land’s End Press, 1969 (paperback reprint 1974 by Open Court). (TOS-3) (SHU-1) (LVT-1) MA: “Still the standard reference work on the topic, containing chapters on the devils and dæmons of many cultures from antiquity to the present. Included are many perceptive observations on the concept of ‘evil’ in human behavior. In his Confessions Aleister Crowley remarked: ‘Carus had always interested me as being widely learned, yet understanding so little. After meeting him, I decided that I liked him for it.’” JL: “Occultists of ye olden days believed that to know the name of a demon was to have power over him. They were correct only insofar as their belief was an attempt to define a principle or supposed entity and therefore have the power to use it through understanding it. In the case of #3B, Carus’ work has placed a name and brief history with almost every devil for whom one could wish, and with a few for whom one would not. Attractive or otherwise, the demons in #3B are named, traced, and cross-referenced. The Order of Leviathan member can find historical background in the book and use it to follow the trail of the Serpent.”

3C. Christian Mythology by George Every. NY: Hamlyn Publishing Group, 1970. (TOS-3) MA: “Another in the Hamlyn mythology series [see #2A], updated & reissued in 1986 by Peter Bedrick Books. It exposes the origins and adaptations of Christianity and includes a number of later legends quite at odds with the Bible. The author’s comments on the psychological need for specific myth-types are quite illuminating. The book is neither pro nor con - merely analytical. Hence it is an excellent source of data for dialogues with Christians; you can respond to theological issues on a historical rather than on an emotional, dogmatic, or æsthetic basis.”
3D. The Romance of Sorcery by Sax Rohmer. NY: Causeway Books, 1973. (TOS-3) MA: “Better known as the author of the Fu Manchu novels [fun to read if you’re into 1890’s ‘Yellow Peril’ themes and heroines who faint a lot], Rohmer was also an initiate of the Golden Dawn who dreamed of writing an authoritative commentary on the occult. This book was the result - an empathetic but not-uncritical profile of history’s prominent sorcerers, including Apollonius, Nostradamus, Dee, Cagliostro, Blavatsky, and Francis Barrett. Written in 1913 and especially commended by Harry Houdini.”

3F. The Secret Societies of All Ages and Countries (two volumes) by Charles William Heckethorn. New Hyde Park: University Books, 1965. [Deutschland: Geheime Gesellschaften, Geheimbünde u. Geheimlehren. Renger Verlag, Leipzig, 1900.] (TOS-3) MA: “Written in 1875 and revised in 1897, this remains the major work on the topic. It does full justice to its ambitious title. In addition to discussing the characteristics of secret societies per se, Heckethorn includes comments on the clandestine operations of supposedly above-ground organizations (such as the Jesuits). Literally hundreds of groups are covered. If nothing else, it will leave you with the impression that there have been quite a number of sneaky people around.”

3G. The Magic Makers by David Carroll. NY: Signet #E-6556, 1974. (TOS-3) MA: “This little paperback covers somewhat the same ground as #3D and #4C, with the advantage of being less dated. There are chapters dealing with the reality of magic, the magical universe, the interrelationship of magic and science, and the national magical practices of Egypt, Israel, Greece, and Rome. Individual magicians profiled include Apollonius, Dee & Kelly, Cagliostro, Saint Germain, Agrippa, and Faust.”

3H. The Secret Societies of All Ages by Manly Palmer Hall. Hollywood: Philosophical Research Society, 1928. (TOS-4) MA: “Available in a variety of sizes and pricetags, this book contains 45 chapters on just about everything remotely connected with the Rosicrucian/Masonic tradition. Hence there is considerable material on Egypt, the Pythagoreans, Atlantis, the Cabala, etc. It is admittedly a treasure-house of sorts, but the intelligent reader will note an abundance of unsupported speculation. There are no footnotes, bibliographical references, or documentary attributions. Accordingly this volume is best used as an introduction to interesting areas of study rather than as a definitive text concerning them. It [particularly the larger/more expensive editions] looks nice on a coffee-table. The biggest one (Golden Anniversary monster edition) is heavy enough so that you can bash a rat with it and be reasonably assured he’s now a two-dimensional rat. The information in this book is also handy for confusing [equates to impressing] Masons and Rosicrucians whose cages you want to rattle. [If you want to understand what Freemasonry and Rosicrucianism are all about, your best bet is #3E.]”
3I. Encyclopedia of Occultism by Lewis Spence. New Hyde Park: University Books, 1960 (originally published 1920). (TOS-3) MA: “There are three ‘occult’ encyclopædias on this reading list, the others being #4E and #4F. Although dated, this one is extremely well researched, objective, and thorough. Its companion volume, Nandor Fodor’s Encyclopedia of Psychic Science, is less likely to be of interest or practical value. Before acquiring a copy of #3I, consider whether #4E, which reprints extensively from it, will suffice for your needs and interests.”

3J. The Occult Sciences in the Renaissance by Wayne Shumaker. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1972. (TOS-3) MA: “Shumaker is Professor of English at U.C. Berkeley. This definitive work includes sections on astrology, witchcraft, White Magic, alchemy, and Hermes Trismegistus - painstakingly footnoted and with thoughtful critical analyses. ‘The analyst does not take for granted the necessary existence of truth, much less of profound, forgotten wisdom in any of the systems, but treats them objectively as historical efforts to understand the world in which man is placed and to use his knowledge for human purposes.’ [See also #3N.]”

3K. The Dark Side of History: Magic in the Making of Man by Michael Edwardes. NY: Stein & Day, 1977. (TOS-3) MA: “A fascinating investigation by a Professor of History and Political Science into the roles of magic in major social movements of history - from Mesopotamia to the French Revolution to Maoist China. This might be considered a reflective essay rather than a documentary analysis, but Edwardes’ work is a commendable effort towards bridging the gap of ignorance that usually separates magic from the social sciences. Not as much fun to read as #4B, perhaps; but one doesn’t feel quite so far out on a limb either.”

3L. The Western Mystical Tradition by Thomas Katsaros and Nathaniel Kaplan. New Haven, Conn.: College & University Press, 1969. (TOS-3) MA: “A very good history of mysticism from Hellenic Greece onwards. Offers the ‘mystical perspectives’ of many of the philosophers whose more materialistic concepts are treated in tomes such as #16A.”

3M. A History of Magic and Experimental Science by Lynn Thorndike. NY: Columbia University Press, 1923 (eight volumes). (TOS-4) MA: “Frazier’s Golden Bough - which would seem to be an inevitable component of a reading list such as this - was ultimately not included because its focus on mythology as such (i.e. as an essentially anthropological phenomenon) offers no thesis which is usable by magicians. ‘Magic,’ said Frazier in an oft-quoted passage, ‘is science that doesn’t work.’ Since Black Magic as defined by the Temple of Set does work, and since we are not interested in variations that don’t work, we seek more illuminating histories to trace its development. Thorndike’s is one such. In this massive work he shows the complex interrelationships between the magical, the scientific, and the philosophical from the time of ancient Egypt to the 17th century CE - after which the influence of materialism and logical positivism acted to suppress both magic and philosophy in favor of an all-embracing scientific method. Like the unabridged Golden Bough, Thorndike’s opus is usually to be found only in major libraries. You should be aware of its existence for advanced research purposes.”
3N. Pythagorean Palaces: Magic and Architecture in the Italian Renaissance by G.L. Hersey. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1976. (TOS-4) MA: “According to Pythagorean philosophy, numbers and proportions possess quality as well as quantity, and the elements of architecture approach excellence as they maximize incorporation of these elements of quality. In this book Hersey, Professor of Art History at Yale University, analyzes several Italian Renaissance buildings according to the Pythagorean standards employed by their architects. [See also category #12 in general, as well as #3J. See also #6O for observations concerning architecture which is conspicuously lacking in Pythagorean excellence.]”

3O. A History of Secret Societies by Arkon Daraul. NY: Citadel Press, 1961. (TOS-3) (COS-3) AL: “A fine essay on the subject, with objectivity and much attention to detail.” MA: “This survey includes chapters on such groups as the Order of the Peacock Angel (Yezidi), Knights Templar, Assassins, Sufis, Gnostics, Castrators, Vehm, Rosicrucians, and of course the Masters of the Himalayas. Used by the early Church of Satan as a source document for appropriate magical and ritual material. No documentation is offered, so this book is best considered at face value.”

3P. The Lost Key to Prediction: The Arabic Parts in Astrology by Robert Zoller. NY: Inner Traditions, 1980. (TOS-3) MA: “The first part of this book is an exacting examination into the philosophical and metaphysical bases for astrological theory, resulting in the author’s postulate that the true astrologer deals ‘with the material globes in astrology only insofar as they are used to time the movements of the inner “planets” and “stars” that lie hidden at the center of man’s being’. Part Two consists of Zoller’s translation of a 13th-century Latin astrological text by Guido Bonatti. In Part Three Zoller applies Bonatti’s concepts to the construction of horoscopes. One of the most sophisticated conceptual studies of astrology yet penned. Reviewed in detail in Runes #III-1. The excellent bibliography is supplemented by extensive notes. The author is an ex-Adept II° of the Temple of Set and a practicing astrologer. [See also his review of #3R, described in that entry.]”

3Q. Larousse Encyclopedia of World Mythology by Pierre Grimal (Ed.). NY: Excalibur Books, 1981. (TOS-3) MA: “As the title indicates, this is the ‘mythology’ volume in the Larousse series of encyclopaedias. 550 pages - in fine print - jammed with information. Note that this book focuses on mythology, not on occultism, so it is more descriptive of systems [from an archeological/anthropological/ sociological point of view] than analytical concerning their various merits, drawbacks, substance, etc. The editor is a Professor at the Sorbonne in France.”

3R. The Serpent and the Rainbow by Wade E. Davis. NY: Warner Books #0-446-34387-0, 1987. [Deutschland: Die Toten kommen zurück. Drömer-Knaur Verlag, München, 1986.] (TOS-3) MA: “This is the book explaining the Voodoo system of Haiti and the manner in which zombis are actually created - not by supernatural means, but by the secret use of poisons. The book is based upon field research by the author, who holds undergraduate degrees from Harvard University in Ethnobotany and Biology, and more recently a Ph.D. in Ethnobotany. #3R is reviewed in detail by Adept Robert Zoller (author of #3P) in Scroll #XII-3, June 1986.”
3S. The Books of the Beast by Timothy d’Arch Smith. London: Crucible (Aquarian Press/Thorsons Publishing Group, 1987. (TOS-4) MA: “This is a 126-page, high-quality paperback collection of essays on Aleister Crowley, Montague Summers, Ralph Nicholas Chubb, Francis Barrett (author of The Magus, the book which revived an interest in sorcery & ceremonial magic in 19th-century England), Florence Farr (author of #10I), and the British Library’s catalogue of erotica. This collection is cited here because of some interesting anecdotes it contains re Crowley, Summers, Barrett, and Farr. If you are interested in one or more of them, you might enjoy this book as a ‘casual read’. But I would not consider it essential.”

3T. Testament: The Bible and History by John Romer. NY: Henry Holt, 1988. (TOS-3) MA: “A superb study of the history of the Judæo/Christian Bible, to include its sourcing from pre-J/C cultures and mythologies and its assembly and revision over the Christian period in Europe. There is also a companion PBS television series, also excellent, narrated by Romer. This study is valuable for its objectivity; Romer is not unsympathetic to the J/C cultural heritage, but neither does he seek to distort its true historical origins. The author is a distinguished Egyptologist and archaeologist.”

3U. Strange Superstitions and Magical Practices by William J. Fielding. Philadelphia: Blakiston Company (Circle Books), 1945. (TOS-3) Terry Quesenberry II°: “This little book is surprisingly objective and broad in its coverage of superstition and magic in its manifold phases, considering the time it was published. Topics covered include Satanism, Black Mass, Walpurgisnacht, lycanthropy, pentagram (as an emblem of perfection), evil eye, Nietzsche, mysteries of nature, mysteries of number, ancient Egypt, divination, magic of mathematical formulæ, daemonology, origins of pagan holidays, and witchcraft.”

3V. The Devil in Legend and Literature by Maximilian Rudwin. La Salle: Open Court, 1989 (latest reprint). (TOS-3) DW: “An alternative to #3B. For my money this volume, dedicated to the memory of Paul Carus, is much the superior volume.”

3W. The Fifth Sun by Burr Cartwright Brundage. Austin: University of Texas, 1983. (TOS-3) DW: “This book explains the Aztec mindscape rather well and includes great coverage of Tezcatlipoca, the Aztec Set. A good book to read for a cross-cultural perspective on Set.”

3Y. Hermetic Magic by Stephen Edred Flowers, Ph.D. York Beach, ME: Samuel Weiser, 1995. (TOS-1) DW: “This book is an analysis both scholarly & practical of the Southern tradition’s greatest magical success [until the Temple of Set]. It deals with the synthesis of Greek & Egyptian traditions into Hermeticism; with ancient, modern, & postmodern theories of magic; and with practical spell-book methodology. The Hermetic tradition involves gaining & using power, and this is the best gateway in the English language. It is the Arrow handed by Arrabis to me.” MA: “The term ‘Hermeticism’ brings to mind vague, inconsistent, & impotent Judæo/Christian mystical fluff. This book has nothing to do with that. Rather, Flowers explores the historical filtering of coherent Egyptian magical theory & practice through a number of later cultures, then explains how the core concepts may be put into effective practice."

3Z. The Presence of Shiva by Stella Kramrisch. Princeton: Princeton University, 1981. (TOS-4) DW: “This book, nicely reprinted as a Bollingen paperback, is a study of the figure of Rudra/Shiva, the ‘Set’ of Hinduism and focus of much historical & current Hindu Left-Hand Path practice. It is another way to get a handle on the Prince of Darkness beyond our usual Satanic & Egyptian lenses. ‘Rudra is consciousness, and his actions are its forms.’ A useful initiatory model for those drawn to the gate of the East.”

F3A. Masada. 1981. MA: “This was originally a television mini-series, now condensed into a single videocassette. The fortress of Masada was one of the last strongholds of the Zealots in ancient Israel to be conquered by the Romans, and the film dramatizes this siege. Peter O’Toole is the Roman general and Peter Strauss his Hebrew counterpart. Most relevant to this category of the reading list is the Romans’ utilitarian use of religion in contrast to the fanatic belief of the Hebrews. The film does not pass a moral judgment as much as it highlights a ferocious battle fought because of different perceptions of reality.”

F3B. The Devils. 1971. MA: “Probably the most graphic and horrifying treatment of the Inquisition ever brought to the screen, this film recounts the story of the 17th-century French priest Urban Grandier (Oliver Reed) who was accused of signing a pact with the Devil. The political schemes resulting in Grandier’s downfall are developed with cold precision, and his torture, mutilation, and death by burning at the stake are also shown in graphic detail. This is one of the films strongly opposed by the Catholic Church, for obvious reasons! The cast also includes Vanessa Redgrave. Directed by Ken Russell (who also directed Altered States).”

F3C. The Serpent and the Rainbow. 1988. (07-1587). MA: “This may have started out as an attempt to bring #3R to the screen, but by the time Hollywood was finished with it, it was more of a simple horror movie than a non-fictional study of Voodoo and zombification. Useful perhaps to catch something of the atmosphere of the grip which modern Voodoo has on its adherents in locales such as Haiti.”

P3A. Freethought Today. Freedom From Religion Foundation (FFRF), Post Office Box 750, Madison, WI 53701. Telephone 608-256-8900. MA: “FFRF is a very feisty atheist organization which publishes the bimonthly newspaper Freethought Today (subscription about US$30/year). FT is almost completely devoted to exposes of Christian corruption and violations of church/state separation, together with scholarly articles debunking Judæo/Christian mythology and superstition, all done to a professional standard. A major feature is the ‘Black Collar Crimes’ column, which dutifully recounts the ongoing epidemic of sex crimes committed by Christian officials. The Temple of Set does not spend much time J/C-bashing in the way that the old Church of Satan did, so if you’re nostalgic for that kind of confrontation and would like lots of ammunition for debates, an FT subscription is essential. It will also astound you to see how much dirt there is to dig up.”
Aside from the Temple of Set itself, what may be said concerning the positive achievements of occult research? Is the field substantive? And what is “the occult”? The following books explore these and other questions in terms of current scientific and cultural knowledge.

4A. The Occult by Colin Wilson. NY: Random House, 1971. [Deutschland: Das Okkulte. Heyne Taschenbuch-Verlag (01/7282), München, 1986.] (TOS-2) MA: “This book is divided into two principal sections - a history of European and American occultism to the present century, and an extensive commentary concerning occult methodology from an existentialist point of view. Wilson postulates a ‘Faculty X’ of the human mind to explain psychic phenomena. Here the weakness of a non-initiated approach to the subject is glaringly demonstrated, because Wilson’s bibliography includes many sources of questionable quality. Moreover Wilson becomes predictably confused as he tries to explain his ‘Faculty X’ as a natural potential of the mind. The history section of the book is nicely done, though it also suffers from Wilson’s reliance upon some biased sources. A more careful and reflective argument for ‘Faculty X’ is presented in Wilson’s Mysteries: An Investigation into the Occult, the Paranormal, and the Supernatural (NY: Putnam, 1978), providing that one exercises prudence in crediting some of the case studies.”

4B. The Morning of the Magicians (original French title: The Dawn of Magic) by Louis Pauwels and Jacques Bergier. NY: Avon Books, 1968. [Deutschland: Aufbruch ins dritte Jahrtausend. Wilhelm Goldmann Verlag (Nr. 11711), München, 1979.] (COS-3) (TOS-1) (TRP-1) (LVT-1) AL: “First and best work ever done describing the Satanic influence in the world.” MA: “This is the book that kicked off the occult revival of the 1960s and started the whole van Däniken show on the road. It highlights many phenomena for which non-occultists cannot account [somewhat after the fashion of Charles Fort]. Included is an especially interesting section on German Nazi esoterica, which until recent years was virtually the only account of such material easily available to the public. It is also the only recent book to discuss the original Council of Nine (the Nine Unknown). If there is a defect to the book, it lies in its emphasis of fanciful, rhetorical questions and in the lack of adequate footnotes in some of the most intriguing chapters. This is an excellent book to recommend to a friend who thinks you’re crazy for being interested in the occult. [See also #17B and #22B.]” JL: “MA’s comment on the book says it all.” DW: “This book represents French Romanticism at its height with a little Gurdjieff thrown in. It inspired a huge occult revival in France. It has a twofold Solve effect: It makes the reader ‘wake up’ a bit and realize the effect of the suprarational in history. Its enthusiastic reception in English-speaking countries facilitated the translation of related French authors such as de Lafforest (#6O) and Charroux. This contributed to the rise of movements in those countries such as ‘New Wave’ science fiction and the Church of Satan. This book is not as unique in the 1990s as in the 1960s, in part because of its own success in encouraging more sophisticated and current imitators and successors. Fun for inspiration, but take with many grains of salt.”
4C. The Black Arts by Richard Cavendish. NY: G.P. Putnam’s Sons, 1968. [Deutschland: Schwarze Magie. G.B. Fischer Verlag, Frankfurt, 1969.] (COS-3) (TOS-3) AL: “Good basic primer on the subject.” MA: “Still the most lucid introductory book on the subject of ‘general occultism’. Chapters on numerology, Cabalism, alchemy, astrology, ritual magic, Black Magic, and Devil worship. Very dispassionate, with esoteric doubletalk kept to a minimum. If you’re relatively ‘new to occultism’ and would like to survey the subject from a non-Temple of Set-particular point of perspective, try this book. Conspicuous defects include an excessive emphasis on the Hebrew Cabala and on similarly superstitious techniques such as astrology, numerology, and alchemy.”

4D. Occultism, Witchcraft, and Cultural Fashions by Mircea Eliade. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1976. [Deutschland: Das Okkulte und die moderne Welt. O. Müller Verlag, A-Salzburg, 1978.] (TOS-3) MA: “This is a critical analysis of the current appeal of occultism, with case studies taken from the 1960s. Inclusive and generally well-argued, though the cited source material indicates Eliade’s unfamiliarity with in-depth documents and doctrines in the murky forest of occultism. He is a distinguished Professor of History of Religions at the University of Chicago and has penned many works of repute in the field.” DW: “I think this is Eliade’s least interesting book. His others have my universal recommendation.”

4E. Encyclopedia of the Unexplained by Richard Cavendish (Ed.). NY: McGraw-Hill, 1974. (TOS-3) MA: “This is a very readable encyclopædia which emphasizes 20th-century occultism rather than the more historical material treated by #3I. Contributing editors and authors include such recognized authorities as Professor J.B. Rhine and Ellic Howe (#10F, #14W). Rhine’s introductory essay ‘How to Cope with a Mystery’ is excellent. 304 pages, profusely illustrated.”

(TOS-3) MA: “Two entertaining paperbacks containing a vast assortment of haunted houses, graveyards, battlefields, ships, railroads, theaters, prisons, hotels, entire cities, and even an elevator for good measure. Both books are indexed and include bibliographical lists of books and periodicals for avid spook-hunters [and spooks]. #4J contains a June XV interview with Anton LaVey concerning Jayne Mansfield and her ‘Pink Palace’.”

4K. The Haight-Ashbury: A History by Charles Perry. NY: Random House (Vintage Books #394-74144-7), 1984. (TOS-3) MA: “There are many different kinds of ‘occultism’, including some that don’t think of themselves, and aren’t usually described by others in that context. The ‘Hippie experience’ was one such. At the time (ca. 1966-69) it was fragmentary, unprogrammed, and generally difficult for either insiders or outsiders to understand. It was far more than simply a drug-orgy, and - though Anton LaVey would probably be loath to admit it - its values were very much those of the Age of Satan and its Word (Indulgence). Finally there is a book which pulls it all together into a coherent (as much as possible) whole, showing how so many trends of the post-World War II era lead slowly but inevitably into this particular ‘critical mass’, and how so many of the values in the subsequent decades have been charted along certain courses because of that same ‘critical mass’. Included is an account of the 9/21/67 ‘Satanic mass’ conducted by Ken Anger at the Straight Theatre, including the showing of the original version of Lucifer Rising, reportedly pilfered that evening by Bobby Beausoliel. See also Tom Wolfe, The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test (NY: Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 1968), which focuses in on the LBM influence of Ken Kesey and his Merry Pranksters. See also #19X.”

4L. The Occult Experience by Nevill Drury. Garden City Park, New York: Avery Publishing Group, 1990 (ISBN 0-89529-414-1). (TOS-3) MA: “This is the book version of the made-for-television film of the same name (#F4A). Drury (author of #4H) was technical consultant to the film, which includes episodes on a variety of occult and quasi-occult groups in Australia, Britain, and the United States. Interviewed/discussed are: [USA]: Selena Fox, Z Budapest, Starhawk, Dr. Gordon Melton (Institute for the Study of American Religion), Dr. Michael & Lilith Aquino, Michael Bertiaux, Dr. Michael Harner (today a shaman but an ex-6114-ite - see #6M), Dr. Charles Tart, Dr. Joan Halifax; [UK]: Fellowship of Isis, Janet & Stewart Ferrar, Alex Saunders; [Australia]: Temple of the Mother, Coven of Lothlorien; [Switzerland]: H.R. Giger. The Temple of Set’s discussion accounts for 16 of the book’s 150 pages. Also included are names & addresses for all groups/individuals discussed [TOS address outdated], as well as a bibliography. An eight-page black/white photo section is included. Note: This book was also published by Robert Hale Ltd in London, England in 1987, and by Fontana Publishers in Sydney, Australia in 1985. The Australian edition has the photo-section in color.”

contemporary society. I assume the Temple of Set was spared only because the book was published the same year we were founded. I don’t know what happened to Shea, but Wilson went on to publish some ‘non-fictional’ works in the same vein which, because they lacked the unself-conscious style of Illuminatus!, fell right into the category of publications so successfully lampooned by Illuminatus!! Truth, however, remains stranger than fiction, and within the pages of Illuminatus! you will actually find many gems of, er, occult wisdom. This is perhaps a counterweight to Morning of the Magicians: a good book to give to someone who’s too obsessed with the occult!“

4O. The Gurdjieff Work by Kathleen Riordan Speeth. Los Angeles: Jeremy P. Tarcher, Inc., 1989 (2nd edition/reprint of 1976 edition). (TOS-2) DW: “This is perhaps the only book on Gurdjieff that tells you what to do rather than relating a history of the movement. If you are really interested in these techniques, you might look for local Gurdjieff/Ouspensky centers; initiation works better when practiced rather than merely read about. But, as always, observe the graduates of the school before investing your time, efforts, and funds. The best history of the Gurdjieff movement is James Webb’s The Harmonious Circle.”

4P. Persuasions of the Witch’s Craft: Ritual Magic in Contemporary England by T.M. Luhrmann. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1989. (TOS-4) MA: “This is an extremely sophisticated study of the neo-pagan/Wiccan phenomenon by a cultural anthropologist, who went to the extent of joining several covens and participating personally in their ritual activities. Although it is clear that Luhrmann retained an ‘academic detachment’ from the cultures she was investigating, her analysis is remarkable for being empathetic and non-critical; she seeks to understand and to explain, not to condemn or ridicule. Although Wicca is on an entirely different level from that of the Black Arts, Luhrmann’s observations and conclusions are nonetheless most valuable in helping the aspiring Black Magician to see ways in which the Black Art and Science can be used for social/cultural needs common to humans generally. Probably the most insightful study of Wicca yet published.”

4Q. Cows, Pigs, Wars and Witches: The Riddle of Culture by Marvin Harris. NY: Random House 1974, Vintage Books 1978 (paperback). (TOS-3) Patty Hardy IV°: “This is a functional analysis of food taboos, infanticide, ritualized warfare, messianic cults, and witchcraft crazes. More than an anthropological study of bad craziness, it will alert the Initiate to delusional elements in modern life. Writes Harris: ‘Ignorance, fear, and conflict are the basic elements of everyday consciousness. From these elements, art and politics fashion the collective dreamwork whose function it is to prevent people from understanding what their social life is all about.’ Harris taught anthropology at Columbia University and held the Chair of the Department of Anthropology from 1963 to 1966.”
4R. Aghora: At the Left Hand of God (1986) and Kundalini: Aghora II (1993) by Robert E. Svoboda. Albuquerque, New Mexico: Brotherhood of Life. (TOS-2) DW: “Readable introductions to the current practices of a branch of the Hindu Left-Hand Path. The Aghorist breaks with the world with beef-eating and seeking that which society deems impure, meets the gods on their own level, and practices those purifying virtues which makes the psyche self-aware by not uniting with the laws of the cosmos but escaping them by becoming larger than them. A good cross-read to #3Z. [Write to the Brotherhood of Life, 110 Dartmouth SE, Albuquerque, NM 87106, USA for information on these & other publications.]”

F4A. The Occult Experience. (LVT-2) MA: “This is the videocassette version of #4L.” JL: “This is the famous one we saw at the first Las Vegas Conclave. It is also the one with the ‘If the Devil lives anywhere, it could be in San Francisco’ comment. Michael and Lilith Aquino are interviewed, clips of Anton LaVey from Satanis are shown, and from there the film goes downhill. As a study in comparative religion, it is worth adding to one’s personal video library.”
Category 5: Atlantis
as of February 26, 2003

Since it is now established fact that mankind has possessed high intelligence for quite some time prior to the recorded beginnings of Egypt, the question of what was happening during the previous 95,000 years - approximately the length of time we’ve possessed our expanded cranial capacity - remains unresolved. Did our ancestors content themselves with swinging from trees and eating bananas ... and suddenly decide to civilize themselves a mere 5,000 years ago? Or were other things taking place?

5A. Atlantis, the Antediluvian World by Ignatius Donnelly, 1882; revised/edited by Egerton Sykes, 1949. NY: Gramercy, 1949. [Deutschland: Atlantis, die vorsintflutliche Welt. ?, Esslingen a.N., 1911.] (TOS-3) MA: “This is the classic analysis of Atlantis. Written to the scientific standards of Donnelly’s time, it fell victim to a priori disbelief and was dealt a near-death blow by being embraced by the occult faddists of that day. Nevertheless the book remains a sound archæological study, though dated in some areas which will be readily apparent to modern readers. Some of the more startling points made by this book are cited at the beginning of George Pal’s sci-fi/fantasy (?) film Atlantis, the Lost Continent (#F-5A).”

5B. The Mystery of Atlantis by Charles Berlitz. NY: Leisure Books #272DK, 1969. [Deutschland: Das Atlantis-Rätsel. Zsolnay Verlag, Hamburg, 1976.] (TOS-3) MA: “This book summarizes the current case both for and against Atlantis. Berlitz comments extensively and authoritatively on Donnelly, particularly with regard to the language question. [Berlitz, son of ‘the’ Berlitz, speaks thirty languages himself.] The tone of the book is conservative and scientific. Ultimately, however, Berlitz can add little in the way of new data; he merely critiques #5A.”

5C. Atlantis Rising by Brad Steiger. NY: Dell Books #1182, 1973. (TOS-3) MA: “A speculative work on Atlantis, with some interesting new data. The case studies are well presented, although the book suffers from Steiger’s sensationalistic writing-style.”

5D. Atlantis: The New Evidence by Martin Ebon. NY: Signet #W-7371, 1977. (TOS-3) MA: “In most regards this book is neither as scholarly nor as thorough as the other books in this category. It does include, however, a very intriguing account of the archæological efforts of Heinrich and Paul Schliemann concerning Atlantis. A lot of time is wasted on snipe-hunt theories about Atlantis actually being Crete or Santorini, presuming that Plato (who traveled about the Mediterranean Sea) was too stupid to know the difference between the Mediterranean and the Atlantic Ocean.”

5E. Timæus and Critias by Plato. Baltimore: Penguin Books #L261, 1971. [Deutschland: Platon-Hauptwerke (u.a. Texte). Alfred Kröner Verlag, Stuttgart, 1973.] (TOS-4) MA: “These are the two Platonic dialogues concerned, among other things, with Atlantis. They are also included in #12C, but this edition has the added attraction of some very good footnotes to the mathematical intricacies of the dialogues. The book’s drawback is a Santorini-oriented appendix on Atlantis by the edition’s translator, Desmond Lee of University College, Cambridge.”
5F. The Secret of Atlantis by Otto Muck. NY: Pocket Books, 1978. [Deutschland: Atlantis-gefunden. Victoria Verlag, Stuttgart, 1954.] (TOS-3) MA: “A tightly argued, carefully documented case for the historical accuracy of Plato’s accounts. Muck, a German scientist who contributed to the invention of the schnorkel and V1/V2 rockets of World War II, concludes: ‘The Mayan temple records and modern methods of historical dating agree. They prove that Plato’s account is true. The statements that have been looked on with such skepticism are correct.’ Introduction by Peter Tompkins, author of #1F, who dispenses firmly with the Santorini theory.”

5G. Ancient Man: A Handbook of Puzzling Artifacts by William R. Corliss. Glen Arm, Maryland: The Sourcebook Project, 1978. (TOS-3) MA: “In his preface Corliss states: ‘The primary objective of this handbook is to provide libraries and individuals with a wide selection of reliable descriptions of unusual artifacts of ancient man. To meet this goal I have analyzed hundreds of volumes of archaeological journals as well as the complete files of Nature and Science. The result is an incomparable collection of information on the frontiers of archaeology.’ Chapters on engineering structures, tools & artifacts, graphics & symbols, geology, anthropology, biology, and mythology. 800 pages of small print! Altogether a refreshingly reliable text after one has endured the sensationalistic stuff of van Däniken and his many imitators for so many years.” DW: “If you write to Corliss, get his catalogue. Its well-researched title stock will challenge you in many ways.”

5H. Atlantis of the North by Jürgen Spanuth. NY: Van Nostrand Reinhold Company, 1979. [Deutschland: Die Atlanter-Volk aus dem Bernsteinland. Grabert Verlag, Tübingen, 1985.] (TOS-4) (TRP-1) MA: “This is a rather deceptive work. Although published as a book in 1979, it is a revised and expanded treatment of the author’s earlier work Atlantis (1965). But as you examine the dates in the footnotes and the 16-page bibliography, it begins to dawn on you that Spanuth has taken massive amounts of material from the archives of the prehistorical research elements of the Ahnenerbe-SS [see #14M]. In fact it is rather amusing to see how ‘startling’ everyone finds this book - as though this is all ‘breakthrough revelation’ in archaeology. It is more correctly the unveiling of source material that has lain under an emotional and political taboo since 1945. To be fair to Spanuth, he has done a good job of integrating and analyzing an enormous amount of data whose processing under the Nazi regime was inhibited by (a) wartime pressures and (b) the ideological constraints of Nazi politics. Spanuth’s thesis is that the royal island of Atlantis (Basileia) was located in the area of Heligoland, and that the Platonic accounts of Atlantean history are essentially accurate. He - and the Ahnenerbe - make a good case.”

5I. Plato, Prehistorian: 10000-5000 B.C. Myth, Religion, and Archaeology by Mary Settegast. Cambridge: The Rotenberg Press, 1986. (TOS-3) DW: “There’s a more recent trade paperback of this book from Lindisfarne Press. Settegast looks seriously at Plato’s Timæus and Critias as a remembrance of the spiritual awakening in the mid-seventh millennium from Persia to north Africa to the Greek peninsula, which created certain links in these cultures with the practice of mystery religions.”
5J. Forbidden Archaeology: The Hidden History of the Human Race by Michael Cremo and Richard Thompson. San Diego: Bhaktivedanta Institute, 1993. ISBN: 0-9635309-8-4. (TOS-4) MA: “A gigantic compendium of all sorts of ‘inconvenient’ archæological data that conventional archæology has preferred to ignore or ‘fast-forward’ through. At the end of this tome the authors blithely propose the significance of this data: that ‘beings resembling anatomically-modern humans were present in the Early Pleistocene (1.7 million years ago) and Pliocene (3.5 million years ago)’. Furiously denounced by conventional archæologists [see Scroll of Set, April 1996], this book still, well, exists unfuted. A year later C&T followed FA with a less-technical, abridged version entitled just The Hidden History of the Human Race (Badger, California: Govardhan Hill, 1994), which could be considered TOS-3.”

F5A. Atlantis, The Lost Continent. MA: “Despite the power of the Atlantis legend, it has not been an object of much interest by filmmakers. One exception was this 1960s-vintage fantasy film by George Pal. Beginning the film with a recitation of ‘Atlantis-proofs’ from #5A, Pal set his Atlantis in the time of Classical Greece and decorated it with Nautilus-like submarines, crystalline death-rays, and mad-lab experiments in applied lycanthropy. Interesting for the ‘flavor’ it creates for an Atlantic civilization like yet unlike the known ones of the Mediterranean.”
Category 6: Satanism
as of February 26, 2003

Satanism is the “Blackest” of the Black Arts and until the North Solstice X encompassed the most advanced - and the most dangerous - school of religion and magical knowledge. Because its doctrines are intensely personal, hence asocial, conventional societies have tended to regard it as a threat to the docile, cooperative obedience of the citizenry. This bias against Satanism as something “necessarily criminal” will be evident in some of the following accounts, and it frequently resulted in persecution that drove Satanists even farther from the social mainstream. In 1966 CE (the year I of the Æon of Set) Anton Szandor LaVey founded the Church of Satan, an institution designed to translate the philosophy of Satanism into a socially-acceptable form. In 1975 the Church of Satan evolved into the Temple of Set, at which time the philosophical inconsistencies and anti-Judaic/Christian orientation of the older organization were eliminated. The Black Art has now been raised to its highest form.

6A. La-Bas (Down There) by J.K. Huysmans. NY: Dover Publications, 1972. [Deutschland: Tief unten. Diogenes Taschenbuchverlag, CH-Zürich, 1987.] (TOS-3) MA: “This is the classic of late 19th-century French Satanism. It contains detailed accounts of the old 17th-century Black Mass as later practiced in ‘underground’ Paris. The book evidences a strong Christian moral bias; hence it is historically unreliable. Nevertheless it became a model for subsequent efforts at anti-Christian ceremonies. ‘Devil-worship’ sequences from most contemporary films, for example, can be recognized as variations on the La-Bas account. [Appendix 64 of #6N reprints the Black Mass sequence from La-Bas.]”

6B. The Satanic Mass by H.T.F. Rhodes. London: Jarrold’s Publishers Ltd, 1968 [available in the U.S. from Citadel Publishers]. (COS-3) (TOS-3) AL: “A non-hysterical account by a criminologist who has researched his subject well.” MA: “This book, whose emphasis is criminological, traces Satanism from an underground French revolutionary movement to organized crime to decadent burlesque to modern cultural offshoots and influences [short of the Church of Satan, which had not yet been founded when the research for this book was completed]. Principal emphasis is on the French tradition and the Dashwood Hell-Fire Club. This was one of the basic sourcebooks for the Church of Satan during its formative years.”

6C. A Razor for a Goat by Elliot Rose. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1962. (TOS-3) MA: “This book was begun as a good-humored effort to debunk the neo-witchcraft theories of Margaret Murray and Gerald Gardner [which it does rather conclusively]. Rose went a good deal further and straightened out many misconceptions concerning medieval witchcraft accounts as well. Yet he argues for the essential value of the concepts of ‘pure’ Satanism. This was another book of prime importance to the original design of the Church of Satan, and it helps to explain the strong anti-neopagan/Wiccan attitude of that institution. It says something for popular tastes [and the memory of P.T. Barnum] that Wiccan literature continues to flourish while #6C is usually found only in university libraries.”

6D. Seven Footprints to Satan by A. Merritt. NY: Avon Books #28209, 1942 [reprinted 1976]. (TOS-5) (LVT-5) MA: “Written ca. 1928, this novel contains many passages describing the central philosophies of Satanism, as well as many episodes exemplifying them. Since the book was ostensibly fiction, Merritt did not have to mince words. Harmless to non-Initiates, it is a Satanic manifesto for Adepts of the Left-Hand Path. And the character of ‘Satan’ in the story bears a remarkable resemblance to Anton Szandor LaVey ... in more than one way.” JL: “The image of ‘Satan’ in #6D is very like that of Anton LaVey during I-X AES. His expertise as a magician surpasses even Ayesha’s best efforts and is more believable because of the novel’s contemporary setting. Although he uses highly sophisticated LBM exclusively, his designs far exceed the grasp of the other players who, despite their efforts, continue dancing to the tune played by ‘Satan’ almost to the end. #6D portrays a world in which the present and future are both controlled with admirable precision. The acts of theft and violence in #6D may be deplorable, but we can admire the mind which created and mastered a universe designed for its exclusive pleasure.”

6E. Asimov’s Annotated Paradise Lost by John Milton and Isaac Asimov. NY: Doubleday, 1974. (TOS-4) MA: “The creative aspects of Satanism are beautifully portrayed in Paradise Lost, and this edition has the added attraction of extensive notes by the brilliant and witty Asimov. [Missing, sadly, are the famous Dore illustrations, which enthusiasts will have to seek in other editions.] Milton, who lived and wrote during the Cromwellian Commonwealth, observed due subtlety in his portrayal of the virtues of Satan and the vices of YHVH. Asimov is under no such constraint, and he overlooks no opportunities to identify and explain the hidden material.”

6G. The Hell-Fire Club by Daniel P. Mannix. NY: Ballantine Books #01625, 1959. (TOS-3) MA: “This is an extensive, sensationalistic account of 18th-century England’s notorious Friars of St. Francis of Wycombe, a Satanic society organized by Sir Francis Dashwood and including such prominent personalities as the Prime Minister and the First Lord of the Admiralty. Benjamin Franklin was a noted visitor from the Colonies. [The Dashwood estate is open to visitors.] See also #6T & #6AC, which are progressively less colorful but probably more accurate.”

6H. Witchcraft: Its Power in the World Today by William Seabrook. NY: Lancer Books #78656, 1968. (COS-3) (TOS-3) AL: “Witchcraft discussed in terms of suggestive psychology.” MA: “Originally published in 1940, this book was the forerunner of the occult revival of the 1950s. Although personally a skeptic, Seabrook admitted the psychological effectiveness of witchcraft. He was among the close friends of Aleister Crowley at the time of the latter’s attainment of the grade of Magus. This book is now somewhat dated, but it may be acquired for its scholarship and its value as a classic.”
6I. The Magus by John Fowles. Boston: Little, Brown & Co., 1965 [revised edition 1977]. (TOS-4) MA: “A novel of an arrogant/selfish/ sensitive/intellectual British schoolteacher who becomes enmeshed in the schemes of a modern magician. An excellent illustration of the use of psychological magic as a control device [as opposed to a mere research tool]. The characters of Nicholas (the schoolteacher) and Conchis (the magus) exemplify aspects of the Nemo and Aristos, principles in Fowles’ own brand of existentialism as set forth in his incisive theoretical work The Aristos (NY: Signet Books #Q4280, 1964). Fowles describes the revised edition of The Magus as less fantastic/more realistic than the original edition, but after several readings of comparing the two I am inclined to favor the revised edition as a richer experience from which the magic has definitely not been excised. The Magus is one of those books whose every re-reading brings new impressions and adventures. I was strongly tempted to rate it TOS-1, but feel that greatest benefit will be derived from a reading of it when the Setian has first mastered the basics of the included philosophical concepts and of Lesser Black Magic. See also #F6J.”

6J. The Powers of Evil by Richard Cavendish. NY: G.P. Putnam’s Sons, 1975. (TOS-3) MA: “While preparing #4C and editing #4E, Cavendish was intrigued by certain recurring themes relative to the notion of ‘evil’ in cross-cultural contexts involving death, darkness, sex, disorder, etc. This book is his effort, as an acknowledged skeptic and agnostic, to deal with these themes. The result is not a full survey of the philosophy and theology of ‘evil’, but it is a good introduction. The book’s defect is that Cavendish, as a consequence of his detachment, is forced to rely upon second-hand sources for his data and so can only report others’ direct impressions [which can be somewhat less than objective]. Much of the book’s 300 pages are weighted down with the usual, tiresome collection of occult anecdotes and mythological stories.”

6K. The Satanic Bible by Anton Szandor LaVey. NY: Avon Books #NS44, 1969 [hardcover edition from University Books, 1972]. (COS-1) (TOS-3) (TRP-1) (LVT-1) MA: “This book summarizes the social and magical philosophy of the Church of Satan at the time of its writing, but it is not a compendium of all C/S doctrines of subsequent years. LaVey was the founder and High Priest of the C/S and Magus V° of the Age of Satan (1966-1975 CE). Included are instructions for a ‘basic’ Satanic ritual, as well as LaVey’s ‘Satanic’ version of the Enochian Keys of John Dee [see category 11]. Introduction to the hardcover edition by M.A. Aquino, then IV° C/S. Introduction to the most recent Avon edition by Burton Wolfe, author of #6M. Chapter 4 of #6N reviews #6K in detail.” JL: “Although research by the Temple of Set has shown that the ‘Book of Satan’ section was plagiarized from Ragnar Redbeard’s Might is Right (1896), the ‘Nine Satanic Statements’ from Ayn Rand, and the ‘Enochian Keys’ from Ipsissimus Crowley’s Equinox, #6K was the leading reference volume for Satanists during years V-5/X of the Age of Satan. Just as Ipsissimus Crowley was faced with opposition from the momentum from the Æon of Osiris, Magus LaVey boldly confronted society with a Church in honor of the Devil. Without the dramatic impact of the Age of Satan, the Æon of Set would have been longer coming into being.” DW: “This book is one of the most effective workings in the English-speaking world. It set up the path of Satanic initiation, which utilizes the forces of the world as the resistance necessary for the individual to gain power. It was designed to produce a solve, a dissolving of the world. As such it will remain a powerful force in the world; as long as there are 17-year-olds, it will be in print. It failed to provide a new vision directly, but it is the nature of works of destruction that they carry the seeds of a new creation. The Æon of Set is that creation. This book isn’t here for inspiration, but as a model of how to shake things up, if that is what you want to do. But you’ll have to come up with a new figure to shake things up with: Satan now sells T-shirts and music albums.”

6L. The Satanic Rituals by Anton Szandor LaVey. NY: Avon Books #W359, 1972 [hardcover edition from University Books, 1972]. (COS-1) (TOS-3) (TRP-1) (LVT-3) MA: “Companion volume to #6K, this book contains a discussion of ritual theory and a selection of rituals (French, German, Russian, Persian, and Church of Satan) adapted and/or written by LaVey for the Church. The historical claims for the texts are improbable, although each text does incorporate ethnic and/or historical images of interest to the magician. A theoretical essay on H.P. Lovecraft and two accompanying Lovecraftian rituals were contributed by M.A. Aquino. Chapter 21 of #6N reviews #6L in detail, and #6N also contains uncensored/original/authentic versions of some of the rituals published in #6L. Performances of early (ca. III/1968) versions of a C/S Black Mass, the Stifling Air, and other ritual sequences may be seen in the film Satanis [see comments under #6M]. See also #6AA & #6AB.” JL: “In the Æon of Set our Understanding and application of ritual magic have evolved substantially since the Age of Satan. And yet the rituals created and collected by the original Church of Satan deserve preservation [and application as appropriate] rather than neglect. Rituals of any religion are an expression of the magical and philosophical trends of the host society.” DW: “A good source of ritual texts to be reworked and redesigned in a Setian context. Of particular importance are: (1) the ‘Vorspiele’, which demonstrates that the laws of consciousness evolve through time and culture - an excellent reworking of the Eighth Precept of the Emerald Tablet of Hermes Trismegistus; (2) the ‘Ceremony of the Nine Angles’, which demonstrates the GBM principle that one may attain inner psychic order, the existence of the Xeper of mankind’s most noble heritage [If they did it, I can do it.]; and (3) the ‘Adult Satanic Baptism’, which establishes control of the psyche as the key to power.”

6M. The Devil’s Avenger by Burton H. Wolfe. NY: Pyramid Books, 1974. (COS-1) (TOS-3) (LVT-3) MA: “A biography of LaVey and an account of the Church of Satan’s San Francisco operations from I/1966 to III/1968, including profiles of some early C/S members. The book brings out the impressive scope of LaVey’s exposure to the art, history, and institutions of occultism and to many colorful personalities on the fringe of contemporary society. Unfortunately the book is also extremely propagandistic, advancing many ‘facts’ which are either questionable or known to be false - for example the chapter recounting a supposed LaVey/Marilyn Monroe affair, and the final chapter with several distortions concerning the post-III Church of Satan. Moreover the personality profiles are unrepresentative of the mainstream of post-III Satanists both within and without the San Francisco area. Specific details may be checked with III°+ officials, or with any II°+ Setian owning a copy of #6N. An interesting photo section is included in #6M. Burton Wolfe also wrote another book which is of interest, if only as a curiosity, to collectors of C/S memorabilia: The Devil and Dr. Noxin (San Francisco: Wild West Publishing House, 1973). This paperback is a political-satire play picking generally on Richard Nixon but incidentally on several other political personalities of that time. Ritual sequences and philosophical principles from the 1966-68 Church of Satan are included as a running theme throughout the play, and are favorably/seriously treated. Oddly enough The Devil and Dr. Noxin was not publicized nor promoted by LaVey at the time of its publication or, as far as I know, thereafter.” JL: “Taken with a large grain of salt because of the self-serving exaggerations and inaccuracies, this colorful portrait of Anton LaVey nonetheless illustrates the first steps that he and others around him took ca. 1966-68 towards developing the Church and Age of Satan.”

6O. Houses That Kill by Roger de Lafforest. NY: Berkley Medallion Books #425-02620-125, 1972. (TOS-5) (TRP-5) MA: “Anton LaVey originally intended to follow #6L with a collection of essays entitled From the Devil’s Notebook. Among these was to be an essay on Satanic architecture in general and the Law of the Trapezoid in particular [discussed in #6N]. Mention of #6O was censored from the Church of Satan’s newsletter by LaVey because it appeared to preempt the planned FTDN essay. #6O suffers from a certain amount of sensationalism, but it is a first step into the unexplored region of ‘negative architecture’. Chapters on open/closed air, types of afflictions, cancer, waves and currents, walls, retention of memories (‘haunted houses’), and remedies & precautions. Certain infamous case studies are offered.” DW: “If this one doesn’t send you over the deep end, try his Fate Control.”

6P. Hollywood Babylon (San Francisco: Straight Arrow Books, 1975) and Hollywood Babylon II (NY: New American Library, 1984) by Kenneth Anger. [Deutschland: Hollywood Babylon (2 Bände). Rogner & Bernhard Verlag, München, 1985.] (COS-1) (TOS-3) MA: “Anger is an ‘underground film maker’ [whose style anticipated today’s ‘music videos’ by about 20 years] who became fascinated with Aleister Crowley and with Anton LaVey during the early days of the Church of Satan. [Anger’s films Scorpio Rising and Inauguration of the Pleasure Dome contain Crowley themes, while Invocation of my Demon Brother includes a cameo appearance by Anton LaVey. The most recent version of Lucifer Rising, despite its title, includes no C/S themes.] Anger’s view of Hollywood is characterized by savage, decadent nostalgia - captured to perfection in Hollywood Babylon I/II. Anton LaVey was gripped by many of the same emotions in the 1973-75 period, with a resultant influence on the Church of Satan as discussed in #6N. For a ‘tourist guidebook’ to many of the sites discussed in HBI/II, see Richard Lamparski’s Lamparski’s Hidden Hollywood (NY: Simon & Schuster, 1981). It contains capsule biographies, addresses, and photos of the various stars of HB vintage, among which is a misleading account of Marilyn Monroe derived in part from Anton LaVey.] [See also The Movie Lover’s Guide to Hollywood by Richard Alleman (NY: Harper & Row/Harper Colophon Books #CN1262, 1985) for an excellent on-site guidebook complete with addresses, descriptions, photos, and maps. Another good guide is Ken Schessler’s This Is Hollywood (Los Angeles: Southern California Book Company, 1984): ‘Hundreds of exciting and unusual places to visit, including historical sites, landmarks, murders, suicides, graves.’]”
6Q. The Second Coming: Satanism in America by Arthur Lyons. NY: Dodd, Mead, 1970. (COS-3) (TOS-3) AL: “Discusses our Church from an objective standpoint, shows how the media have maligned our Order, and gives concise comparisons with the beliefs of some of the ‘Satanic cults.’” MA: “A ‘lightweight’ historical survey of Satanism, concluding with ‘magazine-story’ coverage of the Church of Satan. Lyons was a 1° C/S whose active participation in the Church was limited to San Francisco ca. 1969. In 1988 this book was extensively revised, expanded, updated, and republished (NY: Mysterious Press) under the title Satan Wants You: The Cult of Devil Worship in America. New chapters analyze and expose the ‘criminal Satanism’ scare of the 1980s. The new edition’s only drawback is that Lyons, apparently out of personal devotion to Anton LaVey, significantly misrepresents the crisis of 1975 in the Church of Satan and portrays that institution as continuing unabated. In a similar vein he distorts the origins and post-1975 development of the Temple of Set. Lyons corrected some of the more blatant errors in the subsequent paperback edition of this book by the same publisher, but the LaVey-obsequiousness continues. Although Satan Wants You is the more current and sophisticated of Lyons books, therefore, The Second Coming remains the more honest one.”

6R. Rasputin by Colin Wilson. London: Panther Books, 1966. (COS-3) AL: “An insight into the workings of a truly Satanic magician.” MA: “Anton LaVey was strongly impressed by Rasputin both as an individual and as a social influence. This is most evident from the ‘Russian’ section of #6L.”

6S. Pedlar of Death: The Life of Sir Basil Zaharoff by Donald McCormick. London: Macdonald & Co., 1965. (TOS-3) MA: “Zaharoff was a European munitions agent from 1877 to his death in 1936. He was also a behind-the-scenes manipulator of politics [towards war] and a British knight. Though never included on a Church of Satan reading list, this book was the primary source of Anton LaVey’s fascination with Zaharoff as a skilled, Machiavellian Lesser Magician. LaVey also admired Zaharoff’s Howard Hughes-like avoidance of public scrutiny - to the point of deliberate sabotage of records concerning him. McCormick’s research is careful, exhaustive, and convincing, making this book the definitive one on the subject. McCormick also wrote #6T.”

6T. The Hell-Fire Club by Donald McCormick. London: Jarrolds Publishers Ltd, 1958. (TOS-3) MA: “McCormick (also author of #6S) argues that the long-standing image of the Hellfire Club as an elite Satanic [in the strict, theological sense] society is erroneous. His research leads him to the position that the club was neither diabolist nor decadent, but simply an example of ‘rakemanship’ common among British clubs of the day. His evidence and argument are [regrettably] convincing. This thesis is explored in greater depth in #6AC.”

6U. The Family by Ed Sanders. NY: E.P. Dutton, 1971. (TOS-3) MA: “The definitive study of the Manson Family, with extensive treatment of its alleged exposure to such occult organizations as the Process Church of the Final Judgment [see also #6AD] and the Solar Lodge of the O.T.O. While the public was quick to brand Charles Manson a ‘Satanist’, his own Family considered him Jesus Christ. In a sense that neither the public nor his Family understood, perhaps he was [and is] a Satanist. To prosecutor Vincent Bugliosi, Manson’s ‘evil’ was easy to identify & condemn. This book is by no means an apology for Manson; if anything, it paints him in even more horrific colors than Helter Skelter. But the picture also emerges of a far more complex individual than generally seen by the public. In 1989 this book was reissued by Signet (ISBN 0-451-16563-2). Although there are five new chapters updating the history of the Mansonites, this new edition also omits an entire chapter on the infamous ‘Solar Lodge of the O.T.O.’ as well as several references to the O.T.O. and the Process. [This is as the result of a lawsuit filed against Dutton by the Process after the publication of the original edition - won in the United States but lost in England.] Hence it is useful to acquire both editions of this book. For Manson’s own version of his life and the development of the Family, see Nuel Emmons, Manson in his Own Words (NY: Grove Press, 1986). In this narrative Manson downplays the legends that grew up around him and rationalizes his actions in terms of his personal alienation from and antagonism towards society in general. Another portrait of Manson is offered by Nikolas Schreck in The Manson File (NY: Amok Press, 1988). This compendium of Manson documents & memorabilia also includes commentary on Manson’s relationship to the Process and other occult groups/ideas [See also ‘Distant Echoes of Helter Skelter’ in *Runes #III-3.”]

6V. Rosemary’s Baby by Ira Levin. NY: Random House, 1967. [Deutschland: Rosemary’s Baby. Europäische Bildungsgemeinschaft, Stuttgart, 1984.] (TOS-3) MA: “Written a year after the founding of the Church of Satan and made into a dramatically-successful movie in 1968, this ‘contemporary Gothic’ novel reveals Satanists to be ‘the people next door’ - and rather cultured ones at that. Although Anton LaVey gave Roman Polanski advice concerning the film, he did not, as is rumored, personally play the role of Satan in it. Rosemary’s Baby as both a book and a film touched off a wave of interest in the occult generally and in Satanism in particular. In the words of Roman Castevet: ‘To 1966 - the Year One!’ See also #F6E.”

6W. The Circus of Dr. Lao by Charles G. Finney. NY: Viking Press, 1935 [reprinted paperback: Avon #19190, 1974]. [Deutschland: Dr. Laos grosser Zirkus. Klett-Kotta Verlag, Stuttgart, 1984.] (COS-1) (TOS-3) (LVT-3) AL: “A tale that tells it all; every human foible is dissected. It is the epic of man’s desire and futility: Zarathustra under canvas - an excursion to the highest Llamasery of the Red Monks for those who can read it.” MA: “This is the story of a traveling circus which arrives suddenly in a small town in the Arizona desert. It is a very unusual circus, including among its attractions a satyr, Apollonius of Tyana, a Gorgon, a mermaid, a roc, a chimæra, a sea-serpent, and a werewolf. Its main show includes such exotica as a witches’ sabbath, complete with personal appearance by Satan. Dr. Lao, the enigmatic Chinaman who ringmasters this show, is one minute a bumpkin, the next an intellectual, and always a magician - in short, a kind of Chinese ASLV. No turn back on him preeze! See also #F6L.” JL: “Finney’s book, although not easy to find even in paperback, is a superb trek into the universe of a Magician highly skilled in ECI, LBM, and GBM.”

6AA. Devil Worship: The Sacred Books and Traditions of the Yezidiz by Isya Joseph. Boston: Richard G. Badger/The Gorham Press, 1919. (TOS-3) MA: “This rare little book was Anton LaVey’s source for the Yezidi section of #6L, including the ritual texts quoted. As noted in #6N, Joseph bases these rituals and his own conclusions upon an ‘Arabic manuscript presented to me by my friend Daud as-Saig ... a man of culture, in sympathy with western thought, etc.’ When Joseph’s book was assessed in 1967 by Royal Asiatic Society anthropologist C.J. Edmonds, he noted that it remained unauthenticated. Fellow R.A.S. scholar Alphonso Mingana considered the ritual texts offered by Joseph as simple forgeries, based upon Mingana’s analysis of their grammar & syntax. These evaluations and objections were apparently unknown to [or ignored by] Anton LaVey when he included the Joseph material in #6L. The Temple of Set’s texts of the Yezidi rituals in question are included as appendices to #6N, and are based upon current doctoral papers at the University of California, Los Angeles, obtained through the Anthropology Library at UC Berkeley. The UCLA papers reveal Joseph’s account and analysis to be incomplete and factually suspect. For Yezidi culture, your best starting point is #6AB.”

6AB. A Pilgrimage to Lalish by C.J. Edmonds. London: Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, 1967. (TOS-3) MA: “This small, concisely-written book remains the most coherent and reliable published book concerning Yezidi culture to date. It does not contain any of the Yezidi religious or magical texts, however. The authentic text of the Yezidi Book of the Revelation [corrected and expanded from the Joseph version contained in #6L] is reprinted as Appendix 65 of #6N. The other principal Yezidi text, the Mashaf-a Resh (Black Scripture), is not reprinted in #6N because of its length, but a copy is available in the archives of the Temple of Set.”

6AC. Dashwood: The Man and the Myth by Eric Towers. London: Crucible (Aquarian Press/Thorsons Publishing Group, 1986. (TOS-4) MA: “This is the definitive account of Sir Francis Dashwood and his Medmenham Abbey, complete with extensive photo sections. This continues and reinforces the thesis of #6T, offering evidence that Dashwood’s ‘occult’ activities consisted largely of revels in honor of Apollo and Bacchus in West Wycombe Park, with the only possible Satanic element being hearsay rumors about a ‘closed room/chapel’ in Dashwood’s Abbey. This room was reputed to be accessible only to the ‘monks’ of Dashwood’s group, and to be decorated with obscene/blasphemous pictures. If, so, the decor was removed later, for the Abbey today shows no trace of it in any room. An interesting side-note is that the Dashwood group never called itself the ‘Hellfire Club’. That name actually belonged to a club of libertines formed in London many years earlier (1719) by the Duke of Wharton, which became so scandalous that the crown shut it down with a proclamation denouncing ‘certain scandalous clubs or societies of young persons who meet together, and in the most impious and blasphemous manner insult the most sacred principles of our Holy Religion, affront Almighty God himself, and corrupt the minds and morals of one another’. By contrast the frolics at West Wycombe seem to have been rather less extreme. Towers’ book includes an interesting discussion of how rumors about Dashwood’s doings multiplied over the centuries until it was taken for granted that he presided over every kind of depravity at Medmenham, to include Dennis Wheatley-style Black Masses. Over the main entrance to Medmenham can still be seen the inscription FAY CE QUE VOUDRAS from Dr. Francois Rabelais’ ‘Abbey of Theleme’ in his novel Gargantua, which Aleister Crowley would later borrow for his ‘Do What Thou Wilt’ Law and for his own Abbey in Sicily.”
6AD. Satan’s Power: A Deviant Psychotherapy Cult by William Sims Bainbridge. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1978. (TOS-4) MA: “The definitive account of the ‘Process Church of the Final Judgment’, a quasi-Satanic movement that existed in the late 1960s-early 1970s. It was more the product of the ‘Jesus Freak’ atmosphere of the time than of authentic Satanism, as it was a ‘hippie’ religion that acknowledged four deities - Jehovah, Christ, Satan, and Lucifer - in a complementary relationship. Predictably it was the ‘Satanic’ component of the Process that attracted the most attention - from aspirants and external critics alike - and the Process proved unable to come to grips with this symbolism and its implications. Bainbridge shows how the organization was erroneously linked to the Manson Family in Sanders’ The Family (#6U), and how its failure to successfully dispute and reject this linkage resulted in the breakdown and eventual dissolution of the group. Theologically/philosophically the Process was ignorant of Satanism, so the primary value of this account is as an account of the dangers faced by an unskilled group perceived by society as ‘Satanic’ in the conventional/evil sense. [Principal name disguises: Process = ‘Power’. Processean = ‘Powerite’. DeGrimston = ‘de Forest Jones’.] Bainbridge is Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Washington.”

6AE. Satanismus by Josef Dvorak. 1989. (LVT-2) JL: “Written in German, Satanismus deals with Satanskult analyses ranging from Aleister Crowley to Anton LaVey to the homocidal Manson. The Grand Master’s German is less polished than could be desired; hopefully an English translation will become available.”

6AF. Satanic Panic: The Creation of a Contemporary Legend by Jeffrey S. Victor. Chicago: Open Court, 1993. (TOS-3) MA: “Simply the most comprehensive and objective analysis to date of the ‘Satanic crime’ urban myth of the late-1980s. Available in both hardcover (ISBN 0-8126-9191-1) and paperback (ISBN 0-8126-9192-X). This book is not essential for Setians who are not personally interested in the myth and the scams resulting from it. But if you are interested, this book is indispensable. An exhaustive bibliography is appended, as are names and addresses of important specialized contacts, both individuals and organizations. Victor is Professor of Sociology at the State University of New York and has an extensive academic background in the study of rumor-panics.”

6AG. In Pursuit of Satan: The Police and the Occult by Robert D. Hicks. Buffalo, NY: Prometheus Books, 1991 (ISBN 0-87975-604-7). (TOS-3) MA: “The best book on the subject of #6AF from a professional law-enforcement perspective. When the ‘Satanic scare’ was instigated, law-enforcement agencies were caught off-guard, having virtually no background or experience in ‘cult-hunting’. To make matters worse, some officers had personal religious biases and agendas that colored their approach to the scare. This book provides a historical overview of what resulted, together with a methodical presentation of facts to prevent a similar over-reaction from recurring. Hicks, a former police officer, is a criminal justice analyst who advises Virginia law-enforcement agencies.”

6AH. Lords of the Left-Hand Path: A History of Spiritual Dissent by Stephen E. Flowers. Runa-Raven Press, P.O. Box 557, Smithville, TX 78957, 1992. (TS-3). Order directly from Runa-Raven for US$40 postpaid domestic. Overseas orders include approximate surface or airmail book postage. MA: “The definitive survey of the ‘Satanic tradition’ throughout recorded history and the world’s major cultures. Flowers is a Magus V° of the Temple of Set, Grand Master of its Order of the Trapezoid, Yrmin-Drighten RX of the Rune-Gild, and a Ph.D. in Germanic Studies - as well as author of many definitive books in ancient north European history and esoterica. Chapter titles (& just some of the subtopics): The Left-Hand Path (defined); The Eastern Traditions (Hinduism, Buddhism, Zoroastrianism); The Roots of the Western Tradition (paganism, Greece, north Europe, Semitic, Hamitic, cult of Set); The First Millennium (Gnosticism, Christianity, Islam, Assassins, Yezidi); The Path of Satan (Middle Ages, dualists, pantheists, witchcraft, Faust); Lucifer Unbound (Hellfire Club, de Sade, Goethe, modern Devil-concepts); An Interlude in the Absolute Elsewhere (Nazi occultism); The Occult Revival (Theosophy, Crowley, Fraternitas Saturni, Spare, Gurdjieff, modern witchcraft); Anton Szandor LaVey (& Church of Satan); Michael A. Aquino: The Temple of Set; Offshoots & Parallels. Appendices include a discussion of ‘Satanism’ as a fundamentalist urban legend.”

6AJ. The Fortunes of Faust by E.M. Butler. London: Cambridge University Press, 1952. (TOS-4) DW: “This volume, third in a recommended trilogy of The Myth of the Magus and Ritual Magic, deals with the Faust legend, a Christianized Remanifestation of the Odhinn’s ‘sacrifice of himself to himself’ - in other words, making a deal with your own psyche, which under the anti-psyché mode of monotheism became ‘Satanic’. Dealing with figures of Don Juan and Faust, Butler shows how the pagan concept of the magus endured and appealed to artists - an archetype which could not and cannot be banished.”

6AK. The Satanic Screen by Nikolas Schreck. London: Creation Books, 2001. (TOS-3) MA: “An exhaustive, incisive, and provocative survey of all films made with Satanic themes. This is no mere recitation or catalogue, as Schreck (a Magister Templi IV° of the Temple of Set at the time of publishing) possesses both the initiatory perspective and the film-world experience to bring out not just the entertaining and horrific aspects of each movie, but its [intentional or accidental] philosophical and magical power as well. Mention must also be made of Schreck’s writing style, which is elegant-yet-slashing in the tradition of the Æsthetes and Decadents.”

6AL. Flowers From Hell: A Satanic Reader by Nikolas Schreck (Ed.). London: Creation Books, 2001. (TOS-3) MA: “An exhaustive collection of the most elegant and inspiring writings concerning Satan or Satanic themes by authors Dante Alighieri, Christopher Marlowe, John Milton, Johann Goethe, William Beckford, Matthew Lewis, Charles Maturin, Washington Irving, Edgar Allan Poe, Charles Baudelaire, J-K. Huysmans, Mark Twain, Anatole France, Max Beerbohm, and Aleister Crowley. The Diabolicon is also publicly published for the first time. At least as fascinating as the classic contents of this volume is Schreck’s extensive Introduction “The Luciferian Vision”, in which he examines not only each individual text, but the personality and psychology of each author.”

F6A. The Devil’s Rain. 1975. MA: “In 1974 CE Robert Fuest, who directed the Dr. Phibes films, decided to film a horror movie with Satanism as its theme. He took an anemic novel about Wiccan-witchcraft in New England and hired Anton LaVey as technical advisor to spice it up, which he did - adding touches of LaVey artwork, Mexican extras chanting Enochian Keys, and ‘Satanic Priest’ Ernest Borgnine intoning extracts from the invocation in my ‘Ceremony of the Nine Angles’ in #6L. The setting was moved to Durango, Mexico (‘Redstone’), and the colorful cast included Ida Lupino, William Shater [just before the Star Trek movie revival], John Travolta [his screen debut - a fight & fall downstairs], and cameos for Anton (a gold-helmeted Priest) and Diane (Borgnine’s colonial-era wife) LaVey. While the film was [and is] lots of fun for those in the know about all this, it bombed at the box office and is today only rarely shown on television. See discussion in #6N.”

F6B. Asylum of Satan. 1975. Charles Kissinger, Carla Borelli. MA: DVD: “Something Weird Video” #ID1598SWDVD. “Around 1971CE, when I was Priest III° of the C/S Nineveh Grotto in Louisville, Kentucky, a local commercial film company decided to try for the big time by making a Satanic horror movie - using local theatrical talent. Since they had a Church of Satan in town, they asked us if we would handle the ritual scene. I wrote the script, Nineveh designed the chamber, and we imported the Rosemary’s Baby devil-suit [with a new head] from Hollywood. The result of all this was a turkey of a movie with, if I say so, a rather zesty ritual sequence. The company is no longer in existence, but somehow this thing survived as a videocassette - and later, in 2002, as a digitally-remastered, widescreen DVD, complete with a commentary by the original filmmakers which is at least as charming as the film itself Dry-ice, rubber snakes & bugs, and plaid trousers on the hero will all scare you frightfully. See discussion in #6N.”

F6C. The Devil Rides Out. Hammer Films, 1968. Screenplay by Richard Matheson. Director: Terence Fisher. Christopher Lee. (LVT-2) MA: “Probably one of the best Hammer films ever made - now available in a Hammer Collection videocassette. It is a very accurate screenplay of Dennis Wheatley’s first and most famous Satanism novel. Look for Charles Gray’s silky-evil portrayal of Mocata, the character whom Wheatley specifically modeled after Aleister Crowley, an acquaintance of his. [One other Wheatley Satanism novel, To the Devil a Daughter, was also made into a film, but it is a ghastly mess which bears no comparison to the book. Wheatley’s novels are generally available in British editions, with occasional American publication. Other novels in his ‘Satanism’ series include The Satanist, They Used Dark Forces, and The Ka of Gifford Hillary.” JL: “The novel is far better than the movie, but few can resist taking a look at the cinematographer’s art turned to the subject of Black Magic. Christopher Lee stars as de Richleau, the rich man’s Indiana Jones, although his IJ exploits are mentioned only in passing. Of far more interest is Charles Gray’s portrayal of Ipsissimus Mocata, particularly in his discussion of the moral aspects of Magic. The film also has in its cast Paul Eddington, a British actor who has turned for the most part to comedy. It might have been that DB was a bit too much for him.”

F6D. Fade to Black. 1983. Dennis Christopher and Linda Kerridge, Mickey Rourke. Director: Vernon Zimmerman. MA: “In the flavor of Anger’s Hollywood Babylon books, this is a horror movie about a young, aliented film buff, Eric Binford, who, in a different application of lycanthropy, assumes various characters from classic films to give himself ‘their powers’. Readers of #6N will recognize the parallels to the 1974+ interests of Anton LaVey, to include the presence of Marilyn Monroe as Eric’s ideal woman and ‘death angel’.”
F6E. Rosemary’s Baby. 1968. Mia Farrow, John Cassavetes, Ruth Gordon, Sidney Blackmer, Maurice Evans, Ralph Bellamy. Produced by William Castle. Directed by Roman Polanski. MA: “This film is so well known to contemporary Satanists that little need be said. After the smash success of the novel, Polanski filmed it with virtually no modifications whatever. Contrary to rumor, Anton LaVey did not play the part of the Devil in it, but consulted briefly with Polanski in Los Angeles before the film was shot at the Dakota building in New York City. Unusual music by Christopher Komeda, who died shortly afterwards. Chocolate mousse was added to Levin’s story because of the excellent CM at the ‘Ile de France’ restaurant across West 72nd from the Dakota - where the Priesthood had a dinner meeting at the 3rd Eastern Conclave of the C/S at Halloween 1972. See further discussion in #6N.”

F6F. The Abominable Dr. Phibes. 1971. Vincent Price, Joseph Cotten, Hugh Griffith, Terry-Thomas. Director: Robert Fuest. MA: “A campy horror movie with Price as a disfigured ex-vaudevillian (nice pun) seeking vengeance against a team of physicians he believes responsible for the death of his wife. What makes the movie is the lush atmosphere of Art Nouveau/Art Deco with which Phibes surrounds himself in the magical ‘universe’ he has created for himself. See further discussion in #6N.”

F6G. Dr. Phibes Rises Again. 1972. Vincent Price, Robert Quarry, Terry-Thomas. Director: Robert Fuest. MA: “The success of #F6F prompted this sequel, even more lavish than the original. Phibes travels to Egypt in search of the river of immortality, dispatching assorted inconvenient archaeologists and policemen on the way. See further discussion in #6N.”

F6H. The Brotherhood of Satan. 1971. Strother Martin, L.Q. Jones. MA: “After the success of Rosemary’s Baby, Hollywood floundered around trying to capitalize on the Satanism theme with a couple of failures like The Mephisto Waltz. #F6H was the first film to start ‘getting it right’, and it was the brainchild of a little-known producer/director, L.Q. Jones, who also starred as the sheriff in the film. Strother Martin plays a surprisingly effective Satanic Priest.”

F6I. The Black Cat. Universal, 1934. Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi. MA: “A remarkable essay in Art Deco/Satanism starring Karloff as the Satanist and Lugosi as his only-slightly-less-sinister opponent. The story line, centering on a house modeled after the Ennis-Brown house in Hollywood [see Runes #III-6], has nothing to do with the Poe version. Included is a stylized Black Mass - about as close as Hollywood would come to UFA-expressionism.”

F6J. The Magus. ca. 1968. Michael Caine, Anthony Quinn, Candice Bergen, Anna Karina. Director: Guy Green. Screenplay by John Fowles. MA: “The Magus, like Lord of the Rings, is one of those novels which is so subtle and complex that you have to read it about 2-3 times before you really begin to absorb it. The film was an excellent translation of the book to the screen - but only for persons who had previously digested the book. To a first-time viewer it was dreadfully confusing. Nevertheless, if you have read the book, the film is a fine set of illustrations to accompany it. Perfectly cast, with Quinn as Conchis, Caine as Nicholas, and Bergen as Lily/Julie. Finally released as an unabridged video/DVD in 2006.”
F6K. Satanis, the Devil’s Mass. 1970. DVD: “Something Weird Video” #ID1615SWDVD. MA: “Satanis was a commercial documentary of the Church of Satan in San Francisco, filmed in 1968CE and shown almost exclusively in a San Francisco art-theater. Available currently in DVD. Satanis includes ritual sequences, interviews with Anton, Diane, and Karla LaVey, and footage of the premises of the original Central Grotto house on California Street in San Francisco. An amusing sequence shows the blessing of Isaac Bonewits’ penis by Anton LaVey. IB was later tossed out of the C/S and went on to become a self-proclaimed ‘druid’. Whether the spell is still effective is not known.” DW: “Sometimes sold with Satanis is an episode of Brother Buzz, a San Francisco children’s TV show, in which BB, a puppet bee, tells his friends about the lion Togare and his wonderful master Anton LaVey. A picture of Anton during his pre-Church of Satan ghost-hunting days, with some shots of his house.”

F6L. The Seven Faces of Dr. Lao. 1964. Tony Randall, Barbara Eden. Produced by George Pal. (LVT-3) MA: “On the whole, a pretty effective film treatment of #6W - a bit more lighthearted than the somewhat savage novel, however. Available in DVD.” JL: “This film appears infrequently on cable stations and is also worth watching, particularly for those who have read the book.”

MA: The novels and short stories of Howard Phillips Lovecraft are famed for their horrific imagery. To the Setian, however, their importance lies in their success in capturing emotion, motives, and patterns of behavior long suppressed to near-extinction by conventional civilization. These qualities may be effectively employed in Black Magical operations. Collectively the Lovecraft writings illustrate the concept of “genetic memory”, also a key magical principle. [See also #6L and #6N.]

7A. Lovecraft: A Biography by L. Sprague de Camp. NY: Doubleday & Co., 1975 (paperback edition available). (TOS-3) MA: “This is the definitive biography and psychological profile of HPL, with detailed analyses of the philosophical principles he incorporated into his writings. In contrast to the sanitized image portrayed by August Derleth, de Camp covers all aspects of HPL’s personality, socially-acceptable and otherwise. Consequently this biography has been criticized by some HPL fans who want to see their idol exemplify and reinforce their own social ideologies. Its objectivity, candor, and thoroughness nevertheless make it indispensable for a correct understanding of HPL the man, the writer, and the philosopher.”

7B. The Dunwich Horror & Others / Dagon & Other Macabre Tales / The Mountains of Madness & Others / Tales of the Cthulhu Mythos (four volumes) by H.P. Lovecraft. Sauk City, Wisconsin: Arkham House, 1963+. (TOS-3) (TRP-1) (LVT-5) MA: “The first three volumes contain the bulk of HPL’s principal works, and the fourth contains both HPL material and selected stories by the most prominent writers of the ‘Lovecraft Circle’. The magical philosophies and techniques illustrated herein were experimented with by the Church of Satan and are currently applied effectively by the Temple of Set.” JL: “The LVT places Lovecraft’s works in the ‘5’ category not because we worry that anyone might inadvertently move his lips while reading, but because the rites and gods of HPL can be misused through misinterpretation. No one believes there to be a Cthulhu, and yet it is possible to become so involved with the creation of a Cthulhu working that one strays over into a King in Yellow trap with a resulting loss of contact with reality.” DW: “Tales of the Cthulhu Mythos was re-edited 1990. These stories by diverse hands are powerful extensions of HPL concepts. Of particular note are ‘The Hounds of Tindalos’ by Frank Belknap Long and ‘The Terror from the Depths’ by Fritz Leiber. If the latter’s theme of negative architecture grabs your fancy, look for his Our Lady of Darkness (very much a TOS-5).”

7C. The King in Yellow by Robert W. Chambers. NY: F. Tennyson Neely, 1895 (Dover paperback available). (COS-5) (TOS-5) (LVT-5) AL: “First on my list, as it is the work of a writer of cheap romances who became daemonic possessed after being involved in espionage work of a delicate nature, the implications of which are still cycling. Chambers, in his literary emergence from the Impressionists of his day, cast a die for Lovecraft, Orwell, Huxley, and many others. Yes, the reading of The King in Yellow in its entirety can drive one mad, if one realizes the insidiousness of the thing.” MA: “This is the book at the core of HPL’s mythos and the model for his fictional Necronomicon. It constitutes the beginning of a type of Black Magic unknown prior to this century - at least in traditional esoteric circles. It may be read by the non-Initiate with consequences no worse than confusion, but to the Adept this book is exceedingly dangerous if misapplied. [See also #7J.]” JL: “Those conversant with the handling of dangerous chemicals or sensitive explosives will find #7C a book to be savored. Those not so skilled in cautious handling should delay #7C until later Initiatory levels are attained.”

(TOS-3) MA: “The fame of HPL’s fictional Necronomicon inevitably inspired other authors to produce books purporting to actually be that terrible tome. Some are good-humored tributes; some appear to be deliberately fraudulent. This Hay version, which is both a collection of commentaries and a ‘translation’ of the Necronomicon, is both the most entertaining and the most scholarly of the good-humored types. Included are essays by Colin Wilson (#4A, #7E, etc.) and David Langford (#21D), with ‘translation’ by Robert Turner [from the ‘John Dee Edition’ - which was invented by Frank Belknap Long for one of his Cthulhu-mythos stories!].”

[Deutschland: Die Seelenfresser. März Verlag, Berlin, 1983.] (TOS-3) MA: “When Wilson criticized HPL in The Strength to Dream, August Derleth challenged him to write a better HPL-style novel. Wilson’s response was this book, the writing of which increased his respect for HPL and caused him to embark on his own series of related novels and short stories. This Bantam edition contains a preface by Wilson explaining this. Other novels in the series include #19A and The Space Vampires (sequel to Parasites - later made into the science-fiction movie Lifeforce - which in my opinion is more interesting than the Space Vampires novel).”

7G. Lovecraft at Last by HPL and Willis Conover. Arlington, Virginia: Carrollton/Clark, 1975. (TOS-4) MA: “This is a beautifully presented and bound account of HPL’s correspondence with Conover, containing some unusual insights into the Cthulhu mythos and some rare photographs of HPL himself. Many HPL letters are included in both photo-facsimile and typeface - including one in which HPL recounts the history of his mythical Necronomicon in great detail, to include its inspiration by #7C.”
7H. The Man Who Lived in Inner Space by Arnold Federbush. NY: Bantam Books #Q8794, 1973. (TOS-5) (LVT-5) MA: “In this beautiful, ethereal, occasionally chilling novel, a man whose body and lifestyle are shattered by the surface world and its inhabitants becomes more and more enchanted by the sea, first watching it, then studying it, then living near it, then living in a permanently-submerged habitat, then finally adapting his body to an amphibian existence. HPL treated a related theme in his The Shadow Over Innsmouth, but the only horror to be found in Federbush’s account comes from the savagery of the surface world and its inhabitants. This is not a superficial novel, but one which looks carefully into human anatomy and oceanography. A powerful ‘genetic memory’ statement, it ranks with #7C and #22G as a magical text. An excellent non-fictional bibliography is appended for those who wish to pursue this area further.” JL: “Federbush’s man of the sea is a magician who focuses his Art towards the central aim of Magic: the control of one’s life and the universe impacting upon it. An entertaining book in its own right, it should nonetheless be read with some caution.”

7J. The Hastur Cycle by Robert M. Price (Ed.). Oakland, California: Chaosium, 1993. ISBN: 1-56882-009-7. (TOS-5) MA: “In the words of the editor: ‘13 tales that created and define Dread Hastur, the King in Yellow, Nighted Yuggoth, and Dire Carcosa’. #7C was a lightning-rod that drew to itself various preexisting themes, melded them into a Working of Power, and sent them forth into Lovecraft’s Mythos and the Dead Dreams of others. Here in this volume are several of these Pre- and Rémanifestations, by authors such as Bierce, Machen, Chambers, Blish, Campbell, Carter, and Derleth. Most fiendishly are actual attempts at reconstructing The King in Yellow drama itself by Blish and Carter - both too close to the Essence of the Pallid Mask for [their] comfort.” DW: “Chaosium publishes an ongoing series of books of fiction connected to the Cthulhu Mythos, including many out-of-print items and rarities. As Chaosium is a gaming company, these books are available in many role-playing gaming stores. Volumes focus on a theme (such as the ‘Hastur Cycle’) or a writer (such as Bloch). A catalogue is available from Chaosium, 950-A 56th Street, Oakland, CA 94608-3129, USA.”

F7B. Die, Monster, Die! 1965. Boris Karloff, Nick Adams. MA: “Another shot at The Color Out of Space, much more stylized and remote from the original than #F7A.”

F7D. From Beyond. 1986. Jeffrey Combs, Barbara Crampton. MA: “Since audiences survived #F7C, the same gang returned with this somewhat more startling HPL-theme film - not very true to the story, as Howard was not into black leather S&M, but reasonably Yuggothy.”

F7E. The Dunwich Horror. 1970. Sandra Dee, Dean Stockwell, Ed Begley, Sr., Sam Jaffe. MA: “The first ‘modern’ HPL film. Sandra Dee was added to the story to give it a female victim, and there is nothing physically unusual about Wilbur Whateley, although Stockwell portrays him weirdly enough. The only appearance by the ‘Old Ones’ is as a group of hippies dancing through the meadows, which is a new one for this HPL-fan.”

F7F. The Haunted Palace. Vincent Price, Lon Chaney Jr. MA: “For some odd reason, this film is fully titled ‘Edgar Allen Poe’s The Haunted Palace. In actuality it has nothing to do with Poe; the story is adapted from HPL’s novel The Strange Case of Charles Dexter Ward. It is a loose adaptation, fun for CDWophiles.”

F7H. Dagon. 2001. MA: “Director Stuart Gordon, who gave us #F7C & #F7D, really outdid himself with this one, which is essentially HPL’s The Shadow Over Innsmouth reset [interestingly/convincingly] to a decrepit Spanish fishing village. As is usual with HPL protagonists, things start creepy and get progressively worse. Don’t watch this one late at night, alone, or if you’re planning a Spanish coastal vacation.”
Category 8: Vampirism and Lycanthropy
as of February 26, 2003

This category is important for much the same reason as #7: The legends of the vampire and the werewolf reveal suppressed characteristics of the human soul which the magician may recognize, control - and occasionally avoid when sensing them to obsess the personalities of immature or hysterical humans. It is important to note that the literature in this category is selected not for its story value, but for its in-depth treatment of these phenomena. Here may be found some of the most ancient and essential instincts and intelligent dispositions of the soul - qualities among the first to be challenged and ostracized by profane society because of its brutish fear of such godlike prerogatives. Because of the superstitious taboo which has lain over them for so many centuries, it is widely assumed by profane society that vampirism and lycanthropy are mere myths, playthings for monster-movies. They are not.

8A. The Vampire Papers by Bernhardt J. Hurwood (Original title: Terror by Night, later released as The Monstrous Undead). NY: Pinnacle Books #523-00975-5, 1976. (TOS-3) MA: “Unlike the werewolf or vampire sections of most occult anthologies, this book focuses directly on the sexual and psychopathic bases of both archetypes. Other sections dealing with necrophilia, cannibalism, blood rituals, and premature burial have made this one of the books least likely to be kept in stock at your neighborhood bookstore. A short but informative bibliography is appended. [See also #8I.] Books dealing exclusively with subjects such as necrophilia [sample title: The Love of the Dead (!)] were evaluated for this reading list but rejected as being mere attempts to pander to degenerate and morbid tastes. #8A relates such themes to the more significant precepts addressed by this reading list category.”

8B. The Annotated Dracula by Leonard Wolf. NY: Clarkson N. Potter, 1975 (paperback edition also produced). (TOS-3) MA: “A richly-annotated facsimile publication of the first edition of the classic by Bram Stoker. This edition includes descriptions and explanations of the many factual events and references included in the novel. Complete with maps, photographs, and a series of magnificent illustrations by Sätty. [Historical note: A review of this book was struck from the Church of Satan newsletter because of a clash between Anton LaVey and Wolf over the length of a ‘Satanic pregnancy’ (Wolf = 13 months, LaVey = 9 months) and also because of a parting of ways between LaVey and Sätty some years back.] Wolf is also author of #8D.”

8C. The Vampire by Ornella Volta. NY: Award Books #A807S-MAC, 1962. (TOS-4) MA: “Only slightly less gory than #8A, this book explores various psychological implications of vampirism and proceeds to case studies. Again the nature of its contents makes it unlikely that this book will be easily located.”

8D. A Dream of Dracula: In Search of the Living Dead by Leonard Wolf. NY: Popular Library #445-00159-125, 1972. (TOS-4) MA: “This is a painstaking, if somewhat rambling and Freudian study of the vampire in contemporary society, with many references to historic incidents. Wolf is author of #8B and a San Francisco State University Professor. An excellent bibliography is appended.”

8F. The Werewolf of Paris by Guy Endore. NY: Farrar & Rinehart, 1933. (TOS-5) MA: “This novel is to lycanthropy what Dracula is to vampirism. If you are so rash as to order a copy, the book dealer may shoot you on sight [with a silver bullet]. Not advisable to read during the full Moon, particularly if you have neighbors who might resent your howling at it.”

8G. Man Into Wolf by Robert Eisner. NY: Philosophical Library, 1951 (republished Santa Barbara: Ross-Erikson, Inc., 1978). (COS-4) (TOS-4) MA: “Highly regarded by Anton LaVey as a psychological analysis of lycanthropy, this work is an anthropologically-based treatment of sadism, masochism, and lycanthropy in the form of a 30-page lecture and 233 (!) pages of footnotes to that lecture. The issue is whether man is inherently savage or whether he imitated savagery from other species and hence has the prerogative to rid himself of it. The notes are very extensive, amounting to an annotated bibliography of lycanthropic literature. Introduction to the original edition by Sir David K. Henderson and to the 1978 edition by Donald Lathrop.”

8I. Vampires by Berhardt J. Hurwood. NY: Omnibus Press, 1981. (TOS-3) MA: “Hurwood (author of #8A) produced this as a ‘coffee-table’ book on vampires - bits and pieces of interesting information concerning vampirism in general. It is less analytical and psychological than #8A, while at the same time being more story-, movie-, and legend-oriented. Included are an extensive bibliography, an indexed listing of all films on the theme of vampirism, and even a directory of vampire-related organizations.”

8K. The Monster with a Thousand Faces: Guises of the Vampire in Myth and Literature by Brian J. Frost. Bowling Green, Ohio: Bowling Green State University Popular Press, 1989. (TOS-3) (VAM-3) D&RW: “This tidy little 150-page survey covers both non-film vampire legends and the various ways in which vampiric themes have been treated in film. A very useful addendum to the book is an extensive list of novels and short stories dealing with the subject of vampirism. Frost is a long-time amateur devotee of weird fiction, and evidently accumulated enough data on this particular subject to assemble it thus.”

8L. The Living and the Undead: From Stoker’s “Dracula” to Romero’s “Dawn of the Dead” - by Gregory A. Waller. Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1986. (TOS-3) (VAM-3) MA: “Contributed to the reading list by Setian James Sass. An exhaustive study of the influence of the vampire theme in contemporary Western culture, particularly through film interpretations, with special attention to the Hammer Film Draculas and the two versions of Nosferatu. A member of the English Department at the University of Kentucky, Waller extracts psychological details from these films with an intricacy most casual viewers might consciously miss - but which might very well affect their attitude towards the films nonetheless.”

8M. American Vampires: Fans, Victims, Practitioners by Norine Dresser. NY: W.W. Norton & Co. (ISBN 0-393-02678-7), 1989. (TOS-3) (VAM-3). MA: “Dresser is a teacher of folklore at the California State University, Los Angeles and is a research associate of the Center for the Study of Comparative Folklore at the University of California, Los Angeles. This book is a light and lively study of the vampire theme as present in American society today [to include the Temple of Set’s Order of the Vampyre]. An added feature are the names and addresses of as many vampire-related societies as the author (ahem) dug up ...”

F8A. An American Werewolf in London. 1981. MA: “What would it really be like to (a) encounter a werewolf and/or (b) become one? Watch this film to find out. Then sniff out its sequel, AAWI Paris.”

F8C. The Wolf Man. Universal, 1941. Lon Chaney Jr., Claude Rains, Bela Lugosi, Maria Ouspenskaya. MA: “The first and best of the Universal ‘wolfman’ films, in which Lon Chaney Jr. made this role as much his as Lugosi did that of Dracula.”
F8D. Nosferatu, Phantom of the Night. Fox. Isabell Adjani, Klaus Kinski. Director: Werner Herzog. Music: Popol Vuh. MA: “There are scores, perhaps now hundreds of Dracula-theme movies in existence. This remake of the original Murnau Nosferatu is recommended not because Kinski makes a shudderingly-ugly Dracula, but because the film so eerily illustrates the not-living/not-dead phantom realm of the classical vampire, and the ‘atmosphere’ which accompanies him. See #8L for a strong discussion of the symbolism in the two Nosferatu films. When originally tested in the United States, this French/German film had English voice-overs. When finally released, it was in German with English subtitles, which prevents the audience from being absorbed into its scenes. Too bad! There are ‘French’ and ‘German’ editions of the soundtrack album by Popol Vuh.”

F8E. Blood for Dracula. Andy Warhol/Paul Morrissey. Udo Kier, Joe Dallesandro. MA: “If you think you’ve seen all the Dracula variations there are to see, try this one: This Dracula (Kier) can only drink the blood of virgins. A frantic comedy ensues in his desperate quest to find one. The high point is reached when the sullen Dallesandro, a staple in Warhol/Morrissey films, seduces the only virgin daughter in the Italian family being stalked by the count. When caught in the act by the girl’s understandably indignant mother, Dallesandro retorts, ‘I’m saving her from a vampire’ - probably the most unusual excuse yet offered. Very explicitly sexual, very gory, and very funny.”

F8G. Shadow of the Vampire. Universal, 2001. MA: “Willem Dafoe steals this show as Max Schreck in this film about the making of the original Murnau Nosferatu - the twist being that Schreck is really a vampire. Dafoe - who received an Oscar nomination for this role - intimidates his fellow castmembers, and Murnau (John Malkovich) as least as much as the audience. Watch for Udo Kier as the director’s long-suffering associate.”

F8H. [John Carpenter’s] Vampires. Columbia Pictures, 1998. MA: “‘When I find the bastard, I’m going to shove a stake up his ass,’ growls vampire-hunter James Woods, and that pretty much sets the tone for this brutal, hardboiled, vampires-vs.-humans yarn set in the modern American west. As is often Carpenter’s whim, he does the soundtrack with his own band, the Texas Toad Lickers: a sledgehammer of a score that is well-worth picking up as a CD on its own.”
Category 9: The Æon of Horus
Das Äon von Horus
as of February 26, 2003

In 1904 CE the British magician Aleister Crowley - the self-acknowledged Beast 666 - proclaimed the Æon of Horus, an initiatory climate characterized by actualization of the most refined sense of the human Will towards conscious unification with the Universe. This was a major advance in the coherence and evolution of occultism, comprising the most sophisticated basis for initiation until 1966 CE and the advent of the Æon of Set.

In his writings, Crowley sought to integrate what had previously been a haphazard collection of medieval superstition and ancient paganism into a legitimate magical philosophy. He was more or less successful, but his works are so complex - requiring for their understanding an extensive background in philosophy, occultism, comparative religious mythology, and world cultural history - that it remains open to question how many [if any] of his present-day disciples can be said to truly possess and apply the extremely rigorous magical skills he sought to codify and communicate. That there are numerous “Aleister Crowley fan clubs” is undeniable. Whether any of them would have gained his personal endorsement as a legitimate embodiment of the Silver Star (A.'A.') or Ordo Templi Orientis (O.T.O.) as he originally conceived them to be is an issue that cannot be resolved by argument, decree, or civil law - but only by the test of time. At this time there is no legitimate A.'A.' in evidence. There are only two O.T.O. organizations with meaningful claims to legitimacy: The California-incorporated/New York-headquartered O.T.O. (the “McMurtry” or “Caliphate” O.T.O. - which is recognized as the O.T.O. under U.S. law) and the “Metzger” O.T.O. in Switzerland. The Temple of Set recognizes and enjoys cordial relations with the U.S. O.T.O.; we have had no contact with the Swiss organization. We do not recognize the credentials of any group claiming to be the A.'A.'.

The Book of Coming Forth by Night establishes the Temple of Set’s interest in and responsibility to the Crowley legacy. Because of the continuing and highly-emotional controversies over Crowley organizations, concepts, and successors, we have thought it best to allow water to seek its own level over a period of time, concentrating our Crowley-related efforts towards meaningful and serious discussion and application of Æon of Horus principles as they may complement and enhance those of the Æon of Set.

The books cited below represent only part of the entire corpus of Crowley literature. While the Temple’s archives include virtually the “complete Crowley”, many books by/about him contain overlapping/ reprinted material ... and/or confuse more than they clarify. Some Crowley-related books - most conspicuously those by Kenneth Grant and Marcelo Motta - contain severe distortions of Crowley’s original concepts and are not recommended accordingly. If you want to go Crowley-hunting, the books listed in this category ought to be the most informative and rewarding.

9A. The Great Beast by John Symonds. London: Macdonald, 1971 [Weiser paperback edition available]. [Deutschland: Das Tier 666, Sphinx Verlag, CH- Basel, 1983] (TOS-3) (LVT-1) MA: “This remains the most comprehensive and objective biography of Crowley. The 1971 Second Edition is expanded and updated from the original 1951 First Edition. #9A has been criticized for describing certain episodes of Crowley’s life in a scornful and condescending light, but it would be more accurate to say that a description of his behavior without attention to his magical motives for such behavior is misleading. #9B and #9C in particular reveal these motives. So complex were Crowley’s life and works, however, that any attempt to understand other works in this category without first having digested #9A will result in confusion.” J. Lewis Vi°: “The Work of the Magus of the Æon of HarWer is one of the invaluable legacies passed down to Setians, who have the benefit of historical perspective. Understanding the Word Thelema is an essential step along the path of Initiation.”
9B. The Eye in the Triangle by Francis I. Regardie. St. Paul: Llewellyn Publications, 1970. (TOS-3) MA: “Regardie worked with Crowley for many years as his personal secretary. Although the two became estranged in 1937, Regardie went on to edit and publish a number of Crowley’s major works, including #9D, #9F, #9H, and #9I. More than any direct testimony could establish, Regardie’s sensitivity and skill at such editing established him as the single most reliable authority on Crowley. #9B is more of a portrait than a biography, although it was written in part as a protest against the bias Regardie felt to be present in #9A. [While Regardie did not recognize the Church of Satan, he did enjoy pleasant and cooperative relations with the Temple of Set and myself from 1975 to his death in 1985. It was he, incidentally, who put the Temple in touch with the California O.T.O.]”

9C. The Confessions of Aleister Crowley by Aleister Crowley (Ed. Symonds & Grant). NY: Hill & Wang, 1969. [Deutschland: Confessions - Die Bekenntnisse des Aleister Crowley (2 Bände), Johanna Bohmeier Verlag, Bergen an d. Dumme, 1986] (TOS-4) (LVT-4) MA: “Crowley’s autobiography - elegantly written, with a treasure-house of his magical philosophy to be found along the way. While it adds the missing motives to most of the unflattering episodes cited in #9A, #9C probably ignores or minimizes events that Crowley disliked recalling. All things considered, the picture of the Beast that emerges from this work is that of a far more sensitive and principled individual than his media reputation suggests. One suspects that Crowley indeed suffered from the Curse of a Magus (not to be understood, much less Understood), and that those who could not u/Understand him lashed out at him to allay their own feelings of frustration and inferiority.” J. Lewis VI°: “This fascinating and oversized book is one of the best portraying the Task and the Curse of the Magus. DCLXVI reached for the eternal; #9A and Liber Legis tend to question whether he truly attained it. Read and draw your own conclusions.”

9D. Magick Without Tears by Aleister Crowley (Ed. Regardie). St. Paul: Llewellyn Publications, 1973. [Deutschland: Magie mit/ohne Tränen. Kersken-Canbaz, 2 volumes, ISBNs: 3-89423-076-2 & 3-89423-077-0.] (TOS-3) (LVT-4) MA: “This is an extensive ‘interview’ with Crowley in the form of a series of his letters [answering those of a new student]. Most aspects of his magical philosophy are covered, and the absence of magical jargon makes the book relatively easy to understand. Since this exchange of letters took place rather late in Crowley’s magical career, his discussion of many of his more controversial ideas shows a more reflective approach than in earlier works.” J. Lewis VI°: “#9D is not a book to be taken down for an evening of easy reading. It calls for an attentive examination, which will show Crowley’s exceptional insights.”

9E. Magical and Philosophical Commentaries on the Book of the Law by Aleister Crowley (Ed. Symonds & Grant). Montreal: 93 Publishing, 1974. [Deutschland: Liber Al vel Legis mit Kommentaren. Kersken-Canbaz, ISBN: 3-89423-001-0.] (TOS-4) MA: “In 1912 and again in 1920 Crowley wrote two extended commentaries on the Book of the Law, the magical Working through which the Æon of Horus was announced and defined. These commentaries are consolidated in this beautifully printed book. Its only shortcoming consists of an introduction and footnotes by Kenneth Grant, who attempts therein to twist the Book of the Law and Crowley’s commentaries into supports for his own theories and pretensions. The same Crowley commentaries appear in The Law is For All, published by Llewellyn in 1975. In this volume their layout is somewhat confusing, but there is the advantage of an excellent introduction and annotation by Regardie. A third volume containing the Crowley commentaries - The Commentaries of AL, published by Weiser - has been butchered so badly by ‘editor’ Motta as to be virtually useless. [See also the section on the Book of the Law, containing the complete text and my own commentaries to same, in The Book of Coming Forth by Night: Analysis & Commentary, in the Ruby Tablet of Set.]”

9F. The Secret Rituals of the O.T.O. by Francis King (Ed.). London: C.W. Daniel Company, 1973. (TOS-4) MA: “Distributed in the U.S. by Weiser, this is both a capsule history of the original German and later Crowley versions of the Ordo Templi Orientis, and the texts of its rituals from 0° to IX° as written and/or revised by Crowley. Also included are several essays of secret ‘instructions’ to the IX° by Crowley. This volume is valuable for the insight it provides into the innermost initiatory doctrines of the original Crowley O.T.O. It also provides a good introduction to the older German O.T.O., which is the parent organization of virtually all Illuminati/Rosicrucian societies presently in existence [such as San Jose’s AMORC, whose founder, H. Spencer Lewis, received its charter from the O.T.O.’s Theodor Reuss in 1915]. Present-day Illuminated Rosicrucians will probably be disappointed to discover that the enthusiastic sex-magic of the original O.T.O. Illuminati IX° has been abandoned in favor of more spiritually uplifting meditation with the ‘Cosmic Masters’. For more information on the original German O.T.O., see ‘German Occult Groups’ in #4E.”

9G. The Equinox (Volume I, #1-10) by Aleister Crowley. NY: Samuel Weiser, 1972 (reprinted). [Deutschland: Der Equinox Band I. Kersken-Canbaz, ISBN: 3-89423-078-9.] (TOS-4) MA: “This series of books was intended by Crowley as a loosely-organized [not topical or alphabetical] encyclopedia of the A.'.A.'.'s magical system. Most of Volume I is exclusively A.'.A.'.'., but as Crowley lost confidence in the ability of students to master the A.'.A.'.'s difficult curriculum - and as he became enthused over the sex-magic/Masonic atmosphere of the O.T.O. - the O.T.O. began to appear as well. Weiser’s 1972 reprint is out-of-print, but a 1994 reprint has since appeared from the same publisher. Since most of #9G’s essential contents may be found in #9H and other extracted books [there are quite a few Crowley collections which are just selected extracts from #9G], acquisition of #9G is generally necessary only to the advanced student of Crowley. Nevertheless it remains unique among magical source publications for its size, scope, and sophistication. A single volume followed the original ten - the so-called ‘Blue Equinox’ (Volume III, #1) [there was no Volume II]. [Deutschland: Der Blue Equinox. Kersken-Canbaz, ISBN: 3-89423-097-5.] Weiser reprinted it separately from Volume I, but it is also now out-of-print and sells used for +/-$50. Among other things it contains the blueprint for the O.T.O. organization as Crowley planned to restructure it. [Note: In recent years Marcelo Motta, an O.T.O./ A.'.A.'.' pretender, published a series of books purporting to be the ‘Equinox, Volume V’ - with bindings, layout, and typeface in imitation of the actual Equinox. Setians are cautioned against this misrepresentation. [See also #9P.]”

9H. Gems from the Equinox by Aleister Crowley. St. Paul: Llewellyn Publications, 1974 [reprinted 1982 by the Israel Regardie Foundation]. (TOS-4) (LVT-4) MA: “This is a single-volume condensation of the best material from #9G (Volume I, #1-10 & Volume III, #1). The contents are selected, introduced, and edited by Regardie. For all but the most detailed research, this volume is a quite adequate - and better organized - substitute for #9G. Regardie’s purpose was to consolidate ‘all the magical writings’ and eliminate the literary/poetic/dramatic ones, as well as those by contributors other than Crowley himself. So, from a purely organizational/magical/initiatory standpoint, #9H is the ‘meat’ of #9G. 1,134 pages in length, and about $25.” J. Lewis VI°: “Gems is a reference volume deserving a place in anyone’s magical library. It does not have the OL’s ‘1’ rating, but is worth tracking down for the wealth of ritual, magical rules, and approaches to life it contains.” DW: “Much of the material in #9H can be found in on-line archives maintained by the O.T.O. on the Internet.”

9J. The Magical Diaries of Aleister Crowley by Stephen Skinner (Ed.). NY: Samuel Weiser, 1979. (TOS-4) MA: “This diary covers the year 1923 and is capably edited by Skinner. A very helpful Crowley chronology is included. ‘I may be a Black Magician, but I’m a bloody great one. The world may have to pass through a period of error through me, but even the error will tend to the truth.’ - A.C. 6/10/23.”

9K. Magick by Aleister Crowley. NY: Samuel Weiser, 1994. Available by mail from 93 Publishing Ltd.: P.O. Box 2593; Asheville, NC 28802; USA (US$49.95 + postage). [Deutschland: Magick. Kersken-Canbaz, 2 volumes, ISBNs: 3-89423-007-X & 3-89423-008-8.] (TOS-4) MA: “This volume is divided into three parts: a discussion of Yoga and a description of the various artifacts required for ceremonial magic (parts I & II = Book Four) and a series of essays on magic itself (part III = the famous Magick in Theory and Practice). This Weiser edition is recommended instead of the older ‘pirated’ Castle Books edition of Magick in Theory and Practice because of its extensive annotation and because parts I-III are best considered together. While Magick in Theory and Practice appears at first glance to be an introductory text, it contains many comments and references which are understandable only after exposure to many of Crowley’s other works. For maximum value it should be read after the other works in this category. This most recent revised edition contains over 100 photos & illustrations, as well as color plates.” R. Winkhart IV°: “Die beiden hier angeführten Bände beinhalten im wesentlichen den Inhalt der englischen Originalausgabe (Anm.).”

9L. The Book of Thoth by Aleister Crowley. NY: Samuel Weiser, 1969. [Deutschland: Das Buch Thoth, Urania Verlag, Waakirchen, 1981] (TOS-4) (SHU-4) MA: “Crowley’s guide to the Tarot, this is vastly superior to any other published book on the same subject. [The O.T.O. Tarot deck manufactured by U.S. Games Systems, Inc., 38 East 32nd Street, New York, NY 10016 should be used in conjunction with this book. Ask for their ‘Best of Cards’ catalogue, which at last report costs $2 and contains almost every Tarot deck in existence.]” expands upon earlier editions of "777 and The Qabalah of Aleister Crowley," it is recommended in place of them. As a point of clarification, Crowley used the term "Qabalah" to describe any system of magical correspondences a magician might find personally meaningful or useful. He was not a slave to the Hebrew Cabala, though he was fluent with its terminology and was perfectly capable of bending same to his purposes as he might be so inclined.

9N. The Equinox of the Gods by Aleister Crowley. O.T.O., 1936 [publisher unidentified]. (TOS-4) MA: "A reprint of the Book of the Law together with a number of autobiographical and analytical extracts from Crowley’s diaries and #9G bearing upon it. Useful in understanding Crowley’s own attitude towards Liber AL - a supplement to #9E."

9O. Liber Aleph: The Book of Wisdom or Folly by Aleister Crowley. Chico, California: L.A. Brock [undated]. [Deutschland: Liber Aleph: Das Buch von Weisheit oder Torheit, Verlag Johanna Bohmeier & Co., Clenze, 1986] (TOS-4) MA: “In Crowley’s own words: ‘Liber Aleph was intended to express the heart of my doctrine in the most deep and delicate dimensions. It is the most tense and intense book that I have ever composed.’ #9O consists of 208 paragraphs, each encapsulating some aspect of Crowley’s philosophy. He is correct in saying that these summaries are the most “intense” he ever penned; at the same time they are so poetic, so couched in metaphor as to be confusing and mystifying to the reader who is not familiar with Crowley’s magical jargon. Recommended, like #9K, only after the more elementary books in this category.”

9P. The Equinox #III-10 by Hymenæus Beta (William Breeze) (Ed.). NY: Thelema Publications, 1986. (TOS-3) MA: “Shortly after the McMurtry O.T.O. won its court fight against Marcelo Motta in 1985, it set about to organize the O.T.O. literature into some kind of coherent whole. This book, released in early 1986, was intended to be a ‘basic collection’ of administrative documents, rituals, and exhortations. To this extent it is successful, since it makes available easily and inexpensively (ca. $15/paperback) many Crowley writings on the O.T.O. that are otherwise accessible only in rare and expensive volumes. Unfortunately, since this collection contains only O.T.O.-related works, the novice Crowley student will not be exposed to the crucial A.'.A.' background to Crowley’s philosophy - nor, for that matter, to a hard-hitting biographical profile of Crowley himself. Also some of the most interesting magical aspects of the O.T.O. system - the symbolism and structure of its various degrees - are omitted from this compendium, presumably to keep them mysterious. [See #9F.] Finally, the history of the O.T.O. as presented here is rather more serene than that of the actual O.T.O.(s) since Crowley’s demise. Although this volume endeavors to capitalize on the well-known name of the Equinox, its claim to that title is questionable, since the Equinox was actually the periodical of the original A.'.A.'., while the Oriflamme was that of the O.T.O. I would consider the ‘blue’ Equinox #III-1 the last of the true Equinoxes [see #9G]. #9P is reviewed more extensively in Scroll #XII-5/October 1986.”

9Q. The Magick of Thelema by Don Milo Duquette. York Beach: Weiser, 1993. (TOS-1) DW: “This book has copies of the major rituals of the system and a useful commentary on them. Duquette has been a practicing Thelemite for 20 years, and he discusses Crowley’s system from its initiatory use, as well as providing factual and practical tips on the work. This book clears up a great deal about the A.'.A.'., Crowley’s death, averse pentagrams, and other matters of interest. Because of its straightforward language and initiatory applications, I would recommend it highly. The secret of this book is the interrelationships between the rituals and real-life practice of initiation.”

9R. The Key to it All by David Allen Hulse. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1993 (two volumes). (TOS-4) DW: “These two books are an expansion of Liber 777 with a good deal of scholarship, but firmly in the Crowley camp as opposed to objective scholarship. Book #1 deals with Cuneiform, Hebrew, Arabic, Sanskrit, Tibetan, Chinese. Book #2 deals with Greek, Coptic, Runes, Latin, Enochian, Tarot, and English.”

F9A. Night of the Demon. Sabre Film Productions Ltd, 1956. Dana Andrews. (LVT-3) MA: “Later released in the USA in a cut-down edition as Curse of the Demon. A runes-oriented film with the sinister sorcerer modeled on Aleister Crowley. The full-length original British version is now available in DVD (which also includes the Curse version” J. Lewis VI*: “All right, so it’s in black and white and the dialogue leaves something to be desired. ND is also a story with a Black Magician conversant in the theory and practice of LBM, which the film portrays very well. The scriptwriters fell flat when attempting to show GBM in actual practice. The magician Karswell, portrayed by Niall McGinnis, is based in part on Aleister Crowley.”

F9B. The Devil Rides Out - see #F6C. MA: “The character of Mocata is modeled on Crowley. The dress and ceremonial behavior of Mocata’s disciples are probably about as close a portrayal [less human sacrifice] of A.'.A.'. rites as modern audiences will see on the screen.”

F9D. Lucifer Rising. 1970-1980. MA: “Another cassette in the Magic Lantern series, this one contains the most sophisticated Anger film, LR, with Marianne Faithfull as Lilith and music by Bobby Bueausoliel (of the Manson Family). On the same tape is the earlier Invocation of my Demon Brother, with Anger as a Crowleyesque sorcerer, a cameo appearance by Anton LaVey, and a weird soundtrack consisting of a 2-second clip of music from Mick Jagger’s Sympathy for the Devil played over and over. Art, sort of.”

F9E. The Magician. MA: “This silent film version of Maugham’s novel-treatment of Crowley is almost unavailable, and is on this list simply to alert you to the fact that it does exist and would make interesting viewing if it eventually surfaces as a cassette [as many silents do].”
Category 10: The Golden Dawn
Der Golden Dawn
as of February 26, 2003

The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn was a turn of the century British Rosicrucian/ceremonial magic society. Drawing from the legacy of Eliphas Levi, the Theosophical Society of Helena Blavatsky, and the Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia (S.R.I.A.), the Golden Dawn nevertheless succeeded in achieving a sophistication and an artistic elegance all its own. While it may be going too far to say that it became the prototype for all initiatory orders of this century, it certainly was the forerunner of Aleister Crowley’s A.'.A.'., and its initiatory grade-structure would influence those of the Church of Satan and the Temple of Set.

10B. The Golden Dawn by F. Israel Regardie. River Falls: Hazel Hills, 1970 (2 volumes, reprinted as 1 volume in 1974 by Llewellyn). (TOS-4) MA: “This is the third edition of the famous and still definitive study of the G.'.D.'.. It is perhaps the only published work in which the artistry and atmosphere intended for the G.'.D.'.. are clearly evident, unmarred by bitter accounts of petty personality conflicts. Looking through this work, one can see the authenticity and sophistication that the G.'.D.'.. projected, which accounted for its attractiveness to the intelligentsia of a cynical and restless Victorian England. In spite of this, the G.'.D.'.. was crippled by a lack of scientific and historical precision in its doctrines; this too will be apparent to the reader. Compare, for example, the Enochian Keys with the original Dee manuscript [included in “The Book of Coming Forth by Night: Analysis & Commentary”]. Nevertheless The Golden Dawn remains a classic - and Regardie’s magnum opus. [Not recommended is Regardie’s 1984 work The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic, which is a confusingly-organized product of a variety of authors, some apparently original/authentic and others modern/pretenders - most identified by initials/mottos only, so that the reader cannot easily distinguish between them.]”

10C. Sword of Wisdom: MacGregor Mathers and “The Golden Dawn” by Ithell Colquhoun. NY: G.P. Putnam’s Sons, 1975. [Deutschland: Schwert der Weisheit, Verlag Johanna Bohmeier & Co., Clenze, 1985] (TOS-3) MA: “An account of the G.''.D.''. and its principal figure, Mathers, by a devoted Mathers admirer. This bias, together with scant documentation of arguments in the text, makes it necessary to take this book with a grain of salt. Its primary value is as an update and supplement to #10A. The Enochian section is best ignored as unsubstantiated. An interesting feature of the book is the inclusion of G.''.D.''. membership and ‘spinoff’ lists, which offer clues to the legacy of the G.''.D.''. in some later initiatory contexts.”
10D. The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin, the Mage by S.L. MacGregor Mathers (Trans.). NY: Dover Books #23211-5, 1977 (reprinted from the 1932 de Lawrence hardcover edition). [Deutschland: Das Buch der Praktik in der göttlichen Magie, Diederichs Verlag, München] (TOS-4) MA: “In the pristine Golden Dawn this grimoire was thought to be particularly ‘dangerous’, but by Setian standards it is merely quaint. Yet it was the text that inspired Aleister Crowley to begin serious Workings as a magician. Now of historical/collector value only, it is a translation of a 15th-century manuscript in the Bibliotheque de l’Arsenal in Paris. Included is an extensive introduction by Mathers.” DW: “This book shows two things very well: (1) The laws of consciousness cannot be codified. What works for the Sufi master, the Zen archer, or the magician of the late Middle Ages will not work straight off the shelf for you. (2) If you’re about to begin a large, lifetime project - such as starting law school - a period of intense outer workings beforehand can strengthen the mind/will or, as non-magicians would say, make you lucky.”

10E. Eliphas Levi: Master of Occultism by Thomas A. Williams. University of Alabama Press, 1975. (TOS-3) MA: “Amidst all the confusion surrounding Levi, this little 174-page biography stands as an island of scholarship. Williams discusses the facts of his life, philosophy, and writings succinctly, suggesting prior influences and subsequent legacies. Today most of Levi’s doctrines are thoroughly outdated, but in many ways he was the Columbus of modern occult science. Extensively footnoted, with a good bibliography and a list of Levi’s own works.”

10F. The Magicians of the Golden Dawn by Ellic Howe. NY: Samuel Weiser, 1978. (TOS-3) (LVT-4) MA: “A documentary history of the rise and fall of the G.'.D.'., by a historian, not an occultist with an axe to grind. Hence it is objective while stopping short of cynicism. This history is based upon various personal and group interactions among the membership, not upon the evolution or development of magical theory. The book is valuable as an illustration of the stresses and strains upon an occult order and of how various individuals - some well-intentioned, some not - attempted to influence the situation. The ultimate lesson is that an occult society which becomes obsessed with interpersonal intrigue to the neglect of magic and philosophy is on the path to self-extinction. Howe is also the author of #14W.” J. Lewis VI°: “It gives one pause to think that one day, decades hence, someone will write a book on the Magicians of the Temple of Set. I think we will be a far more colorful group of personalities, but this is not to say the Golden Dawn members were lacking in activity! #10F gives readers a deeper insight into the Æons and Ages.”

10G. Yeats’ Golden Dawn by George Mills Harper. NY: Barnes & Noble, 1974. (TOS-3) MA: “The best account of W.B. Yeats’ encounter with occultism - first via Blavatsky’s Theosophical Society and then with the G.'.D.'., after 1891. A picture of the conflict between Yeats the poet and Yeats the magician. There is an extensive documentary section, including Yeats’ key pamphlet ‘Is the RR&AC to Remain a Magical Order?’ and the ‘Bye-Laws’ of the 1st and 2nd Orders of the G.'.D.'., as of 1900 and 1902 [after the Mathers & Crowley schisms]. Also included is the Hermetic Library Catalogue of Wynn Westcott, now obsolete but charming for its historical quaintness.”
10H. Yeats and Magic: The Earlier Works by M.C. Flannery. NY: Harper & Row (Barnes & Noble Import Division), 1978. (TOS-4) MA: “This is neither as lengthy nor as G.’D.’.-focused as #10G, but it is interesting because of its explanation of the influences of #19S and Blake [see #6F] in Yeats’ magical philosophy. It is also more probing than #10G, seeking to illustrate Yeats’ personal approach to a magical philosophy rather than his dealings with the G.’D.’. organization.”

10I. Egyptian Magic by Florence Farr. Wellingborough, Northamptonshire: The Aquarian Press, 1982. (TOS-4) MA: “The actress Florence Farr was one of the more famous initiates of the G.’D.’. and was a particularly close friend of Yeats and G.B. Shaw. This little paperback is a very readable summary of the Egyptian magical tradition - as abbreviated as may be expected in 85 pages - but is nonetheless notable for its section on gnostic Christian philosophy as developed in post-dynastic Egypt. Herein may be found the G.’D.’. roots of the ‘Æonic’ system into which Aleister Crowley would propose the Æon of Horus.” DW: “This book is interesting as a historical trifle, but if you really want to know what’s going on, look for The Books of Jey and the Untitled Text in the Bruce Codex by C. Schmidt (Ed.) & V. MacDemot (Trans.) (Leiden: Brill, 1978).”

MA: John Dee was court magician, astrologer, mathematician, and occasional spy for Queen Elizabeth I. At that time sorcerers were still subject to being burned at the stake for “dealings with the Devil”; hence Dee was quite careful to lace his magical writings with pro-Christian preambles. He was also a cipher expert, keeping many of his personal records in various forms of cryptical shorthand. In 1584 he wrote into his diaries a series of nineteen magical incantations, since known as the Angelical or Enochian Keys. These Keys were regarded as being of high potency for ritual operations by the Golden Dawn, the A.'.A.'., and the Church of Satan. In the Book of Coming Forth by Night they are revealed as a corruption or approximation of the Word of Set (contained in “The Book of Coming Forth by Night: Analysis & Commentary” in the Ruby Tablet of Set).

DW: “John Dee is a much used and abused source for most English-language ceremonial magic. What the modern occultnik misses is that the outer workings of a Magus like Dee are the merest frosting on the cake. His work with Mercator, the British navy, the LBM used on Queen Elizabeth I, the collecting of books: These things gave him power. Serious magicians should seek to live world-changing lives of mundane excellence if they hope to make Dee’s system speak to them. I speculate that Dee’s Word was Regi (Latin: “I will reign.”).”

11A. John Dee by Richard Deacon. London: Frederick Muller Ltd, 1967. (TOS-3) MA: “While other biographical studies of Dee have been written, none compares with this one for insight, clarity, and readability. An excellent introductory work. The author is particularly sensitive to Dee’s linguistic skills and contributes many helpful research recommendations of his own.”

11B. John Dee: The World of an Elizabethan Magus by Peter J. French. London: Routledge & Kegan Paul Ltd, 1972. [Deutschland: WU: 23/5646] (TOS-4) MA: “To date this remains the most sophisticated study of Dee and his philosophy, with detailed chapters on magic, science, religion, Hermetics, applied science, literature, and antiquarianism. An exhaustive bibliography is appended. This book is not recommended for those not already familiar with the basic facts concerning Dee, and a grounding in Classical philosophy and metaphysics wouldn’t hurt either.”

11C. John Dee by Charlotte Fell Smith. London: Constable & Company Ltd, 1909. (TOS-3) MA: “This book is lighter on the philosophy and heavier on the biography than either #11A or #11B. Hence its greatest value is as a cross-reference to them. A good index to names and events is included, and the bibliographical appendix is helpful in classifying the various Dee-works which the researcher might encounter.”

11D. The Vision and The Voice by Aleister Crowley. Dallas: Sangreal Foundation, 1972. [Deutschland: Die Vision und die Stimme, Verlag Sigrid Kersken-Canbaz, Berlin, 1982] (TOS-4) (LVT-4) MA: “This book contains the record of Crowley’s experiences with the thirty Æthyrs of the XIX Enochian Key. The visions are considered by many to be Crowley’s most beautiful magical record. This material is also included in both #9G and #9H, but this small edition has the advantage of detailed footnotes by Crowley, together with helpful annotations by F.I. Regardie.” J. Lewis VI°: “Students of Dee and the Enochian system are treated to a new universe in the record of DCLXVI’s series of Workings with the Æthyrs. The Order of Leviathan affiliate may decide to enter the Æthyrs personally. The 19th Key is the operative one and while the old Keys can still be used, the Order of Leviathan recommends the Parts of the Word of Set over the older C/S and pre-existing versions.” DW: “Pay particular attention to the Tenth Æthyr, where Set is described by a RHP brain.”

11E. John Dee’s Actions With Spirits by Meric. Casaubon. London: Askin Publishers, 1974 (originally published 1659). (TOS-4) MA: “A large, beautifully bound photofacsimile edition of Casaubon’s transcript of the Dee diaries containing the original Keys. While not a completely accurate copy of the original diary material, this volume was far more authoritative than the corruptions progressively introduced by the Golden Dawn, A.’A.’., and Church of Satan. This edition originally sold for $100-$150, as did a similar, leatherbound edition which followed a year or so later. Unless you are a book collector per se, #11H is a more useful acquisition. Introduction to #11E by Stephen Skinner. [Note: The Casaubon Keys are reproduced in Scroll of Set #I-11.]”

11F. The Complete Enochian Dictionary by Donald C. Laycock. London: Askin Publishers, 1978. (TOS-4) MA: “In addition to containing a comprehensive English-Enochian and Enochian-English dictionary, this volume includes a scholarly history and analysis of Dee’s Enochian system and Laycock’s edited version of the Keys from Dee’s original manuscript. Comparison of Laycock’s version with the Temple of Set’s microfilm copies of the original Dee diaries, however, reveals that Laycock arbitrarily subdivided parts of the Enochian text and added English-based punctuation. [Setian Gregory Anderson reports that ‘Laycock’ is in fact a pseudonym of Francis I. Regardie, who didn’t use his own name because he was dissatisfied with the book. Anderson also notes the existence of an Enochian dictionary entitled GMICALZOMA! by Leo Vincy, available through some British outlets. ‘Leo Vincey’ - a hero in Haggard’s She novels - was a pseudonym occasionally employed by Aleister Crowley, who included some Enochian-jargon incantations in an edition of The Gœtia.] Until the appearance of #11H, the only verbatim printed copy of the original Dee Keys available to Setians was/is in ‘The Book of Coming Forth by Night: Analysis & Commentary’ with the Word of Set translation.”

11G. John Dee on Astronomy by Wayne Shumaker (Ed.). Berkeley: University of California Press, 1978. (TOS-4) MA: “This book is the ‘missing link’ between the metaphysics of Pythagoras, Plato, and Aristotle and Dee’s otherwise-seemingly fantastic magical Workings. It is also the key to Dee’s enigmatic ‘hieroglyphic monad’. You will need to have a basic grounding in higher mathematics, astronomy, and geometry before this book will reveal its essence to you, however. Shumacher is a Professor of English at the University of California and is also author of #3J.”

11H. The Enochian Evocation of Dr. John Dee by Geoffrey James (Ed./Trans.). Gillette, NJ: Heptangle Books, 1984. (TOS-4) MA: “At long last - The original Dee diary Keys assembled with a large selection of Dee’s related spells, all carefully footnoted and annotated to the original Sloane, Cotton, Bodeleian, Ashmolean, etc. documents. James is familiar with and critiques as appropriate the various approaches in such works as #11B/D/F. Since this is a book consisting solely of annotated magical text, it will not be readily intelligible to readers who have not obtained a biographical and exoteric understanding of Dee through other sources. A top-quality clothbound volume, well worth the $40 pricetag for serious students of Dee.”
Pythagoras, famed as the first Greek philosopher, was one of the only foreigners to be initiated into one or more Egyptian priesthhoods prior to the final decadence and destruction of Egypt. Hence it is through the Pythagoreans and their students that many of the most sublime mathemagical principles have been passed down to us. Pythagoras was the first to use the pentagram as the symbol of his initiatory order, and death was the penalty for revealing its secret \(\phi\). [See also “The Sphinx and the Chimæra”]

12B. Pythagoras: His Life and Teachings by Thomas Stanley. Los Angeles: Philosophical Research Society, 1970. (TOS-3) MA: “I can forgive Manley P. Hall & Co. a lot as long as they reprint treasures like this: a handsomely-bound facsimile reproduction of the Ninth Section of the 1687 edition of Stanley’s History of Philosophy. It contains an extensive account of Pythagoras and his doctrines, carefully footnoted to the original Classical sources. Almost any other account of Pythagoras that you come across will have been derived, in whole or part, from this book. The typeface and language are ‘very 17th-century’, so be prepared for ye eyestrayne. Some extracts will be found in ‘The Sphinx and the Chimæra’ in the Ruby Tablet.”

12C. The Collected Dialogues of Plato by Plato (Ed. Edith Hamilton & Huntington Cairns). Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1961. [Deutschland: Platon-Die Hauptwerke, Alfred Kröner Verlag, Stuttgart, 1973] (TOS-4) (LVT-4) MA: “It may sound inadequate to say ‘go read Plato’ - sort of like saying ‘go read the encyclopædia’! The fact remains that this closet student of Pythagoras [cf. Alban Winspear, The Genesis of Plato’s Thought, NY: S.A. Russell, 1940] incorporated a wealth of Pythagorean philosophy into his Dialogues and letters. This volume remains the standard academic translation. And, since it contains all of Plato’s works [in fine print, on microthin paper], cross-referencing -indispensable where Plato is concerned! - is possible.” R. Winkhart IV°: “Beinhaltet als Alternativtitel: Protagoras, Gorgias, Menon, Phaidon, Das Gastmal, Phaidros, Der Staat, Theaitet, Der Staatsmann, Timaios, Kritias, und Die Gesetze.” J. Lewis VI°: “Descending into the waters of Plato is to enter a world where all things are subject to question and resolution through dialogue. Few if any of Plato’s adversaries could outdo his finely-tuned mind. Plato is hardly the author to pick for a little light reading, but neither should an understanding of his works be considered an impossibility.”

12D. The Divine Proportion: A Study in Mathematical Beauty by H.E. Huntley. NY: Dover Publications #0-486-22254-3, 1970. (TOS-4) (TRP-1) MA: “If you enjoyed J. Bronowski’s ‘Music of the Spheres’ episode on Pythagoras in the Ascent of Man series/book, you’ll like this little book - since it was one of J.B.’s primary sources. The text alternates between aesthetics and mathematics, with some rather hefty formulae included. Supplementary chapters touch upon the Fibonacci Numbers, Pascal’s triangle, and other ‘golden ratios’ of science and nature.”

12F. The Theoretic Arithmetic of the Pythagoreans by Thomas Taylor. NY: Samuel Weiser, 1972 [originally published 1816]. (TOS-4) (TRP-4) MA: “In the author’s words [from the 1816 title page]: ‘The substance of all that has been written on this subject by Theo of Smyrna, Nichomachus, Iamblichus, and Boetius; together with some remarkable particulars respecting perfect, amicable, and other numbers, and a development of their mystical and theological arithmetic.’ A technical text by a distinguished scholar. Compare with #2N and #12E.”

12G. Pythagoras: A Life by Peter Gorman. London: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1979. [Deutschland: WU: 29/21-076] (TOS-3) MA: “Quite simply - and in 216 pages - the most well-written, carefully researched, and objective biography of Pythagoras to date. Also included are chapters on philosophers contemporary with Pythagoras, as well as on certain key aspects of his philosophy.”

12H. The Geometry of Art and Life by Matila Ghyka. NY: Dover Publications, 1977. (TOS-3) Patty Hardy IV°: “This covers some of the same territory as #12D, but devotes more space to the aesthetics of harmonic and geometric principles as they are found in living systems and in art. There is some interesting basic material covered [such as a discussion of why fivefold symmetry cannot be found in inorganic systems]. Chapters are included on the mathematics of phi and the Golden Section, the transmission of geometrical symbols and plans from Pythagorean times through the masonic guilds of the Middle Ages, the Greek and Gothic canons of proportion, and harmonic analysis of biological and architectural forms.”

Category 13: Sex in Religion and Magic
as of February 26, 2003

MA: Sex and magic have never been very far apart. This is both because sorcerers and sorceresses tend to be rather sensual individuals, and because the sexual drives (as distinct from sex per se) can be used for purposes of ritual magic. Historically Black Magical societies have been accused of being obsessed with sex; a Black Magician might well retort that his/hers is the rational & mature approach, and that the critic is suffering from a bad case of Judaic/Christian repressed/sex neurosis/hysteria. A problem with “sex-magic” has been that many practitioners, in an effort to over-compensate for the aforementioned neurosis, have plunged into sex in the most animalistic way possible - as an indulgence for its own sake. This, for example, was the presumption of the Church of Satan. Aleister Crowley, however, employed his “sex-magical” practices as a means to attain an ecstatic state of being appropriate to an ulterior, conceptualized goal - a fact almost totally lost on his latter-day disciples, who more often than not either ignore the sexual component in his Workings or become obsessed with it. The Temple of Set proposes an integral, non-compulsive, comfortable, and relaxed interrelationship between sex, aesthetics, and love - the neglect of any one of which will inhibit the efficacy of whatever magical Working is involved.

 DW: The only commandment here is to know yourself. Whether you choose to overcome boundaries or practice what you know; whether you choose a lot, a little, or none; your practice of safe, sane, consensual, adult sexuality must be absolutely and ultimately your own. Let your sense of beauty, which is to say Ma’at, be your guide.

13B. The Sacred Fire by B.Z. Goldberg. NY: University Books, 1958. (TOS-3) MA: “A history of sex in religion, valuable primarily as an in-depth supplement to #13A - the main differences being that Goldberg seems a little less obsessed with the subject, and that there is an interesting section dealing with the concept of revolt (sexual and otherwise) against repressive religious environments.”

13C. Sexuality, Magic, and Perversion by Francis King. Secaucus, New Jersey: Citadel Press, 1971. (TOS-3) MA: “You have to hand it to King for picking a catchy title! Yet this is a rather thorough survey of the influence of sex in a number of contemporary cults, religions, and magical societies around the world - the Wiccan ‘great rite’, the auto/hetero/homosexual magic of the O.T.O. VIII°/IX°/XI°, etc. A good update to #13A and #13B. The data dealing with the Church of Satan are so fragmentary and misleading, however, that the author’s care in researching other environments must be doubted as well. Use more as a starting point for further research than as a definitive source.”

13D. The Compleat Witch by Anton Szandor LaVey. NY: Dodd, Mead & Company, 1970. Reissued as The Satanic Witch with an Introduction by Zeena Schreck, Feral House, Los Angeles, 1989. (COS-1) (TOS-3) MA: “Although the more earthy passages in this book put off many readers who were expecting ‘more of the Satanic Bible’, LaVey often maintained that it was the best of his three books because it contained the most Lesser Magic. [It could just as well be included in category 23.] Tucked away amidst the pages are some very incisive comments concerning human traits and motivations and how both may be recognized and manipulated in day-to-day contexts. By no means ‘just a sex book’, though a background in Church of Satan history is necessary to understand the author’s point of perspective. Chapter 8 of #6N reviews #13D in detail.”

13G. How to Make a Man Fall in Love With You by Tracy Cabot. NY: St. Martin’s Press, 1984. (TOS-3) Hether Payne III*: “Despite the tacky title, this book contains excellent LBM lessons for both men and women. It is a good crash-course in basic psychology that teaches you how to make people feel truly understood, to build trust, and to persuade through various techniques such as ‘mirroring’, ‘anchoring’, ‘casting a spell’, etc. I have found it very potent information and accordingly would warn Setians to be careful how they use it - or they may not be able to rid themselves of the object of their magic. This book is somewhat the opposite of Anton LaVey’s Compleat Witch in principle and in theory, but I feel it to be of equal importance.”

13H. Carnal Alchemy by Crystal Dawn and Stephen Flowers. Smithville: Runa-Raven Press, 1995. DW: “The Temple of Set neither advocates nor forbids sado-magical activities between consenting adult magicians. If you are inclined to explore pleasure and pain, and want to use this practice for self-transformation, then this is the best book available - if you can guide your practice by love. If you’re not so inclined, this is an entirely boring book useful only for shocking your friends. Hence it has no rating, and is mentioned merely to remind the Setian that no topic is taboo as long as its investigation harms not the mind, the body, nor the potential unfolding of the soul.”

F13A. Dracula. 1979. Frank Langella, Laurence Olivier, Donald Pleasence, Kate Nelligan. MA: “This film is placed here rather than in Category #8 because Langella’s interpretation is that of the vampire-as-lover, and because the impact of that interpretation, particularly upon female audiences who saw this film, proved to be remarkably powerful. In contrast to more traditional Draculas (such as Christopher Lee, who merely ‘used women for feeding’ while playing his vampire as a power role), one receives the impression that Langella’s Dracula exists only for love, having, over the centuries, found all other ambitions to be transitory and shallow. This sensitivity of his, in contrast to the mundane romantic infatuations of Mina’s human beau, makes Dracula worth the sacrifice that woman understands her historic role in love to be. It is significant that the ‘normal’ humans in this film will stop at nothing to destroy the example of Dracula, shaming as it does their own petty sexual power games.”

F13B. The Story of O. S.N. Prodis, Paris, 1975. Video: Independent United Distributors. Corinne Clery, Udo Kier. Just Jaeckin director. MA: “This is not a film about sadomasochism at all, but about the degrees of mutual surrender that love involves. O willingly endures the ordeals of Castle Roissy simply because her lover wishes her to, then emerges not as slave but as goddess for the three men - her lover, her taskmaster at the castle, and finally Sir Stephen - who are devoted to her. The atmosphere of her new divinity confuses, then obsesses a female friend of hers, who ultimately is drawn to Roissy for a similar initiation. Perhaps only the French, who are able to portray even the most outré and graphic forms of erotica without the slightest hint of obscenity, could have made a film such as this. It is a mirror to its audiences of what sexual and sensual maturity involves - and how remote from that maturity most persons of either sex actually are.”
Category 14: Fascism, Totalitarianism, and Magic Faschimus, Totalitarismus und Magie
as of February 26, 2003

This is a very potent, controversial, and dangerous area of magic, whose implications are rarely examined, understood, or appreciated by the profane [which is just as well]. Much of the data concerning it derives from Nazi Germany, whose character as a state based upon magical rather than conventional principles goes a long way towards explaining the “peculiar” fascination which that episode continues to exert on students of history and political science. Many of the techniques pioneered or perfected by the Nazis continue to be used/abused—generally in a superficial and ignorant fashion—by every country of the world in one guise or another [never avowedly as “Nazism”, of course].

The Temple of Set emphasizes the potential of human individualism. Metapolitical concepts such as Nazism do strengthen the power of humans, but only through a degree of collectivization of the will in a political state system. Well-run states can maximize virtue and minimize vice, as in Plato’s ideal Republic. Poorly-run states can do just the opposite, suppressing or corrupting virtue, as in Orwell’s 1984. Most contemporary political systems exist between these extremes. The Initiate/citizen must be sensitive to both the positive opportunities his society provides, and the repressive/destructive constraints it places on his freedom. Thus he may maximize the benefits of the former and avoid the damage of the latter.

14A. The Mass Psychology of Fascism by Wilhelm Reich. NY: Simon & Schuster, 1970. [Deutschland: Die Massenpsychologie des Faschismus, Fischer Taschenbuch-Verlag, Frankfurt, 1974] (TOS-3) MA: “The controversial Reich examined both the Nazi and the communist elements of Germany, found them wanting, and was roundly denounced by them in return. This book exposes their use of mass movements and mob psychology as a sexual substitute, and their repression of ‘innocent’ sex as a deliberate political technique [compare #14E]. This manipulation of expression and repression is applied to other social phenomena as well—such as certain organized religious bodies. A lucid and hard-hitting study. A biographical profile of Reich is presented in #6N, Appendix 75—‘The Frankenstein Legacy’.”

14B. The Occult and the Third Reich by Jean-Michel Angebert. NY: Macmillan, 1974. (TOS-3) (TRP-3) MA: “This book contains sections on the Grail (both Christian and pagan), traditions concerning Atlantis and ancient initiatory societies, the theories of Nietzsche and Wagner, Nazi mysticism, and the Catharist tradition. Well footnoted. The almost fantastic subject material tends to make the author’s objectivity suspect, but on close examination his argument is grounded in responsible research. On the other hand Otto Rahn, the young German mystic whose theories are advanced in this book did not hold the alleged high rank in the SS, nor commit suicide because of politico/mystical reasons. He was an Unterscharführer (sergeant) who killed himself after being expelled from the SS because of his sexual preferences.”

14C. The Grail Legend by Emma Jung and Marie-Louise von Franz. NY: G.P. Putnam’s Sons, 1970. [Deutschland: Die Gralslegende in psychologischer Sicht, Olten-Verlag, Freiburg, 1987] (TOS-4) (TRP-1) MA: “Another book for the C.G. Jung Foundation for Analytical Psychology [see also #19K], this impressive study treats all major historical versions of the Grail legend, identifies their common features, and evaluates their significance. The definitive work on the Grail. See also #6N, Appendix 36—‘In Quest of the Unholy Grail’.”
14D. The Spear of Destiny by Trevor Ravenscroft. NY: G.P. Putnam’s Sons, 1973. [Deutschland: Der Kelch des Schicksals, Sphinx Verlag, CH-Basel, 1987] (TOS-3) (TRP-3) MA: “The chief merit of this book lies in its profile of the metaphysical and occult-society concepts and movements that influenced pre-Nazi and Nazi Germany. Read critically but thoughtfully. Since it is heavily footnoted to Theosophical Society (Blavatsky) and Anthroposophical Society (Steiner) sources, this book cannot be considered factually reliable. [See also #14Y.]”

14E. 1984 by George Orwell. NY: Harcourt, Brace & Co., 1949. [Deutschland: Ullstein Taschenbuchverlag, Frankfurt, 1981] (TOS-3) MA: “Orwell’s classic portrait of a ‘negative utopia’, with many features adapted from Nazi Germany and Stalinist Russia - but also a satire of socialist trends in postwar Britain. Many features of Orwell’s imaginary society may be increasingly applied to actual ones today. The shape of things to come?”

14F. Mein Kampf by Adolf Hitler. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1943. [Deutschland: Verlag Franz Eher Nachf., München, um 1935] (TOS-5) (TRP-3) MA: “Everyone knows that this is ‘the most evil book ever written’, but few have taken the time to actually read it, hence cannot really explain why. Further complicating the situation is Hitler’s interspersion of political philosophy (interesting) with emotional tirades (not so interesting). Look for the discussions concerning the selection of leaders, control of the masses, and the justification for human social organization. You may be surprised at what you discover. Keep in mind that this book was written not as a historical memoir, but rather as a propaganda device to lend an image of philosophical substance and coherence to the still-fledgling and somewhat [due to Hitler’s incarceration in prison at the time of MK’s writing] disorganized Nazi Party. A far more revealing ‘Hitler Memoir’ is #14K. [ During the antiSatanism hysteria of the 1980s, the entire Temple of Set reading list was denounced by one major newspaper thus: ‘a reading list which includes MK’ (evidently to the unimportance of any other book on the entire list)!]”

14G. Hitler: Legend, Myth, & Reality by Werner Maser. NY: Harper & Row, 1971. [Deutschland: Adolf Hitler: Legende, Mythos, Wirklichkeit, Bechtle-Verlag, München, 1982] (TOS-3) MA: “As time passes, biographical profiles of Hitler become increasingly more objective. This is probably the most useful one currently in print, which Colin Wilson calls ‘the most important document on Hitler so far published’. It is noteworthy for its focus on the man rather than on the political official [for the political official see #14H]. If you are going to take a look at Hitler’s own writings and statements (#14F/K/L), read this first for perspective.”

14H. The War Path (NY: Viking, 1978) and Hitler’s War (2 volumes; NY: Viking, 1977) by David Irving. (TOS-4) MA: “1933-39 (WP) and 1939-45 (HW) through Hitler’s eyes. An impressive work of research that will show you peacetime Nazi Germany and World War II as you’ve never seen them before. Sound scholarship, objective evaluation.”

14I. The Bormann Brotherhood by William Stevenson. NY: Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 1973. (TOS-3) MA: “Around VI-VII the pursuit of underground Nazi-survivalist organizations was all the rage, and there was a flurry of Bormannism, ODESSA films/novels, etc. This little book was sort of overwhelmed in the general stampede, but it didn’t deserve to be. A cold, clear, fact-packed study of the post-World War II survival of the original Nazi hierarchy.”
14J. Three Faces of Fascism by Ernst Nolte. NY: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1963. [Deutschland: Faschimus: von Mussolini zu Hitler, Verlag Kurt Desch GmbH, München, 1968] (TOS-4) MA: “This is a political science text analyzing 20th-century fascist movements in France, Germany, and Italy. The observations concerning the metapolitical implications of the philosophy are among the most profound yet voiced. The analysis of the failure of the French movement is as instructive as that of the successes of the German and Italian movements. It is interesting to contrast Nolte’s assessment of fascism with Hitler’s [as set forth in #14F].”

14K. Hitler’s Secret Conversations 1941-1944 by H.R. Trevor-Roper (Ed.). NY: Farrar, Straus and Young, 1953 [simultaneously published in England as Hitler’s Table Talk by Weidenfeld & Nicolson, London]. [Deutschland: Hitlers Tischgespräche im Führerhauptquartier, Picker, Goldmann Taschenbuch Nr. 11234, München, 1979 (Englische Ausgabe Herausgeber Trevor-Roper)] (TOS-5) (TRP-3) MA: “Martin Bormann was sufficiently fascinated by Adolf Hitler’s private conversational comments on various topics that he persuaded Hitler to allow them to be stenographically recorded. After 1945 the transcriptions were found among Bormann’s private papers and were ultimately compiled and published by Professor Trevor-Roper (who also edited and published the final entries of Dr. Goebbels’ diaries). Hitler’s conversations cover an astonishingly broad spectrum of topics - organized religion, metaphysics, dogmatism, Voltaire, origins of the human race, aesthetics, Egyptian & Greek culture, Hoerbiger’s cosmology, genius, philosophy of law, superstition, mental diseases, etc. An impressive look into the mind of an individual whom the postwar world has been conditioned to dismiss as a crude, criminal, and unintrospective thug. Read, then judge for yourself.”

14L. The Voice of Destruction by Hermann Rauschning. NY: G.P. Putnam’s Sons, 1940. [Deutschland: Gespräche mit Hitler, Europaverlag, CH-Zürich, 1988] (TOS-5) (TRP-3) MA: “Rauschning was a regional party leader (Gauleiter) of the early Nazi Party who was a confidant of Hitler’s during 1932-34. At first so impressed with the Führer’s private statements that he took extensive and immediate notes, he later took fright and bolted to Paris. In 1937-38 he wrote a theoretical condemnation of Nazism entitled The Revolution of Nihilism: Warning to the West (NY: Alliance Book Corporation, 1939). It seemed so alarmist that few took it seriously - until World War II broke out. Then Rauschning was able to publish these transcripts and analyses of Hitler’s conversations. Topics include: Aristocracy, Antichrist, barbarism, ethics of war, a new social order, the Human Solstice, Black & White Magic, and the mystical elements in Obersalzburg. Most of the material for Nazi occultism alluded to in #4B came from this book. It was regarded as so ‘weird’ as to be spurious until after the war, when the #14K material came to light and substantiated it.”

14M. Hitler’s Secret Sciences by Nigel Pennick. Suffolk: Neville Spearman, 1981. (TOS-4) (TRP-1) MA: “The esoteric section of the German Nazi SS was not the Sicherheitsdienst [as alleged in #6L] but the Deutsche Ahnenerbe (German Ancestral Heritage Organization). Most histories of the SS concern themselves with the better-known organizations and activities of the Black Order, mentioning the Ahnenerbe only in passing. This is one of the first books to discuss it in any detail. Again there is a lot of #14B/C/D material, but it is all relevant and coherently organized. This is a concise (177 pages), fact-packed book bolstered by a strong bibliography of rare and unusual publications and periodicals. If you are seriously interested in the Ahnenerbe, and are fluent in highly-technical German, see Kater, Michael H., Das ‘Ahnenerbe’ der SS 1935-1945: ein Betrag zur Kulturpolitik des Dritten Reiches (Stuttgart, Deutsche Verlags-Anstalt, 1974). [The complete archeological, magical, and administrative records of the Ahnenerbe are contained on microfilm rolls #120-211, Microcopy T-580 (10-135-4) in the National Archives Building of the United States, Washington, D.C. These papers have never been sorted, indexed, and annotated in detail, but the Order of the Trapezoid has compiled a working index with brief annotations pending a more thorough study. Initiates of the Order who may be traveling to Washington and wish to examine that microfilm are invited to contact the Temple office for a copy of the index.] [See also #5H.]”

14N. The Passing of the Great Race by Madison Grant. NY: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1916. [Deutschland: WU: 8*-913] (TOS-5) MA: “You can still find #14F in print, because it’s a good whipping-boy for sanctimonious finger-waggling. It is less easy to find the books from ‘our side’ that argued along similar lines. This is [was!] one of the more famous, and you may still uncover an occasional copy in the back room of a used-book store or in the darkest corners of obscure libraries. Grant was not exactly a nonentity or lunatic-fringe fanatic. He was Chairman of the New York Zoological Society, Trustee of the American Museum of Natural History, and a Councilor of the American Geographical Society. In this book [by a prominent publisher] he argues a forceful case for a European race history that would have done credit to Hitler and Rosenberg. The most interesting aspect of this book is that only a very few years ago it was accepted as a respectable contender in the academic/scientific community. After World War II it was, in Orwell’s terms, guilty of Crimethink and thus condemned to be an Unperson. There is a lesson to be learned here concerning the durability and invulnerability of ‘established scientific fact’ when it becomes politically or socially inconvenient. I hereby suggest that you make up your own mind as to whether the book is convincing. After all, I wouldn’t want to get in trouble for even appearing to endorse it ...”

14O. Race and Race History and Other Essays by Alfred Rosenberg (Robert Pois, Ed.). NY: Harper & Row (Harper Torchback #TB-1820), 1974. (TOS-5) MA: “Extracts from the major race-history writings of the Nazis’ ‘official philosopher’ - with a finger-waggling introduction, of course. It is O.K. for this book to be in print; it has the appropriate editorial condemnation. [See also #14S.]”

14P. Geopolitics: The Struggle for Space and Power by Robert Strausz-Hupe. NY: G.P. Putnam’s Sons, 1942. (TOS-4) MA: “The study of international relations on the basis of power politics is academically known as political realism (Realpolitik), and before reading #14P you might want to flip through the bible of this school, Hans Morgenthau’s Politics Among Nations, for a general familiarity with its principles. In 1926 and 1928 Oswald Spengler published his powerful indictment of contemporary Western civilization, The Decline of the West, and this made a great impression on a German General named Karl Haushofer. Haushofer became a professor who gained increasing fame in Germany as the master-theoretician of ‘Geopolitics’, being a part-political, part-geographic, and part-mystical rationale for aggressive state expansionism. Haushofer was considered by many to be the evil genius behind Hitler’s ‘blood and soil’ and ‘living-space’ programs. He wrote no single, coherent text of his philosophy. This book was commissioned in order to explain Geopolitics to a still-uncomprehending U.S. diplomatic community, and it does a good job. Geopolitical thinking was out of favor in the West until reintroduced by Henry Kissinger (a Morgenthau enthusiast), but it has always been the lynchpin of Eastern (Soviet/Chinese) foreign policy. Strausz-Hupe summarizes: ‘World policy evolves towards several continental systems, and technology accentuates the strategic importance of large, contiguous areas. Thus the era of overseas empires and free world trade closes. If this reasoning is pushed to its absolute conclusion, the national state is also a thing of the past, and the future belongs to the giant state. Many nations will be locked in a few vast compartments. But in each of these one people, controlling a strategic area, will be master of the others.’”

14Q. Wewelsburg 1933 bis 1945: SS Kult- und Terrorstätte by Prof. Dr. Karl Hüser. Paderborn: Verlag Bonifatius Druckerei, 1982 (German language edition only). (TOS-5) (TRP-5) MA: “The first in-depth documentary study of the role of the Wewelsburg Castle in the mythological and Black Magical practices of the SS. This is a historical, not an ‘occult’ publication; in the first few paragraphs it easily discounts the fanciful, ignorant accounts of the Wewelsburg such as appear in #14B/D/N/R, etc. Here is bedrock: bewildering to some, but a Gate to the Order of the Trapezoid. [See also #14AC.]

14R. Hitler: The Occult Messiah by Gerald Suster. NY: St. Martin’s Press, 1981. [Deutschland: WU: B-45-197] (TOS-3) MA: “This is a short (200-page) hardcover book which brings together most if not all of the occult speculations concerning Nazi Germany, with a reasonable degree of footnoting. Hence it is included here as a good introductory survey of the field. Extensive quotations from Crowley and an ‘Æon of Horus’ theme throughout the text expose the author’s Thelemite bias.”

14S. The Myth of the Master Race: Alfred Rosenberg and Nazi Ideology by Robert Cecil. London: B.T. Batsford Ltd, 1972. (TOS-4) (TRP-3) MA: “The best biography and critical analysis concerning Alfred Rosenberg, ‘official philosopher’ of the Nazi movement. Much of the material otherwise in existence concerning Rosenberg is suppressed by the Soviet Union, while previous Western biographies and editions of his memoirs were cruelly edited to portray him as more of a monster than a human being, much less a philosopher. Nevertheless Cecil is no apologist for Rosenberg, bringing out his weaknesses as well as his strengths. This book also describes the ideological background and climate of Nazi Germany as a whole, and summarizes the main arguments of Rosenberg’s Myth of the Twentieth Century. [A 1982 English translation by Vivian Bird of Rosenberg’s The Myth of the Twentieth Century: An Evaluation of the Spiritual-Intellectual Confrontations of our Age is available from Noontide Press, 1822-1/2 Newport Blvd. #183, Costa Mesa, CA 92627, USA.][See also #14O.]”

14T. Metapolitics from the Romantics to Hitler by Peter Viereck. NY: Alfred A. Knopf, 1941. [Deutschland: WU: 25/16-504] (TOS-4) (TRP-1) MA: “This is quite simply the definitive history and analysis of the Germanic mystical and magical tradition as it has been applied to society and politics. No other political analysis of Nazi Germany compares with it, and an understanding of the Nazi phenomenon is impossible without it. Major sections deal with Romanticism, life-worship, Kultur, dynamism, Wagner, Chamberlain, Fichte, Hegel, Rosenberg, and Hitler.”

man, we insist illogically on confusing the history of his purely biological being with the history of his spirit; the latter defies any attempt at investigation by methods we now call scientific. Darwin and his followers deal with the emergent evolution of visible man, while on the other hand religion and mythology deal with the evolution of his invisible soul. In his cycle of the Ring and Parsifal, Wagner uses the magic power of music, words, and scenery to open man’s heart to the history of the hidden essence of his own self, and to the changing forces that are active behind the sensory phenomena of man and Earth.”

14V. The True Believer by Eric Hoffer. NY: Harper & Row, 1951. [Deutschland: *Der (TRP-3) MA: “Hoffer’s thoughtful study of the mind of the fanatic and of the various media through which such a mind attempts to fulfill itself - religious, political, or social. It is particularly instructive to compare Hoffer’s theses with the experiences of Hitler, Himmler, and Rosenberg as treated elsewhere in this reading-list category. The book’s strong point is Hoffer’s famed common-sense, but this same feature is also its weak point, because it is obvious that Hoffer is not aware of [or does not understand] the principles discussed, for example, in #14T.”

14W. Astrology and the Third Reich by Ellic Howe. Wellingborough, Northamptonshire:
Aquarian Press, 1984. (TOS-3) (TRP-3) MA: “A historical study of astrological beliefs in Western Europe since 1700, with special emphasis on German astrology during 1919-1930 and in Nazi Germany. A revised and expanded edition of Howe’s earlier Urania’s Children, this book also presents and critiques basic astrological theory and explores the Lesser Magical use of astrology as a psychological warfare device during World War II. Howe, in addition to being the author of #10F and a contributor to #4E, served in Britain’s Political Warfare Executive during World War II.”

14X. *The Occult Roots of Nazism: The Ariosophists of Austria and Germany 1890-
1935* by Nicholas Goodrick-Clarke. Wellingborough, Northamptonshire: Aquarian Press, 1985. (TOS-3) (TRP-3) MA: “This new and very scholarly book fills a crucial need in the study of 20th-century Germanic occultism, namely a detailed and non-sensationalistic account of Guido von List’s Armanenschaft, Jörg Lanz von Liebenfels’ Order of New Templars, and Rudolf von Sebottendorf’s Thule Gesellschaft. Also profiled is SS-Oberführer Karl Wiligut, occult counselor to Heinrich Himmler and architect of such projects as the Wewelsburg restoration and the SS-Totenkopf ring. This book is a revised version of the author’s doctoral thesis at Oxford.”

14Y. Adolf Hitler and the Secrets of the Holy Lance by Col. Howard A. Buechner 1913159-05-0). (TOS-3) (TRP-3) MA: “Buechner was a surgeon in the U.S. Army during World War II; Bernhart was a German U-boat officer and recipient of the Knight’s Cross in the same war. This intriguing collaboration by them expands upon the themes of #14D.
An initial section traces the [legendary] history of the Spear of Longinus through its arrival in the Hofburg Museum of Vienna. Subsequent sections deal with the disposition of the Spear during the Third Reich & thereafter, the Wewelsburg, Nazi/SS occultism in general, the death of Adolf Hitler, and the disposition of his body and/or the Lance and/or Nazi/SS treasure at the end of the war. As is the case with #14D, how much of this book is fact and how much is either speculation or outright fiction is open to debate. Nevertheless, also like #14D, it tells a colorful tale and is an entertaining read. It even ends on a suitably ominous note, proclaiming that the Knights of the Holy Lance exist even today (underground), and will, Barbarossa-like, remanifest themselves at the proper magical moment. This book is privately published and unlikely to be found in your local bookstore, so if you are interested in it, write to the Thunderbird Press at 300 Cuddihy Drive, Metairie, LA 70005 for purchase information.”

14Z. The Nazi Connection: Eugenics, American Racism, and German National 508260-5. (TOS-4) MA: “One of the most criticized elements of Nazi Germany was its attempt to ‘purify the Aryan race’ through all manner of breeding-control and non-‘Aryan’ suppression policies. All of this was based upon a concept of ‘race’ that went only skin/appearance deep, ignoring actual genetic factors. As a result the Nazi program, and earlier/later ones like it by other states, descended into mere arbitrary prejudice and cruelty. An unfortunate by-product of this is the stigma that hangs over all human genetic engineering research - which critics attack as ‘genocide’ rather than as a scientific means for the gradual improvement of human physiology and health. In this remarkable book Kuehl, who is a sociologist and historian at the University of Bielefeld in Germany, shows how the Nazi eugenics programs were inspired by original programs in the United States and elsewhere at the turn of the century, and analyzes the ‘new scientific racism’ which societies are grappling with today.”

14AA. Trading with the Enemy: The Nazi-American Money Plot 1933-1945 by World War II was being orchestrated by the politicians and fought & endured by the masses, many large companies and financial institutions on both sides continued to do business with all sides, maximizing their profits through the demands and stresses of the war. Indeed the remarkable thing is how little notice they took of the war, save as a changing economic ‘playground’. Higham, a former _New York Times_ writer, calmly documentst this astonishing ‘peek behind the curtain’, offering the reader sobering insights into what any international war really means, and to whom. The importance of this book lies not just in its historical cynicism, but in the lessons it implies for present and future ‘national conflicts’.”

14AB. Al Khemi: Hermetic, Occult, Political, and Private Aspects of R.A.
(TOS-5) DW: “This book is essential for fully understanding all of the work of R.A.
Schwaller de Lubicz. Schwaller began his magical/political career as a fascist, trying to work out the dilemma of a people becoming self-empowered, godlike beings yet cooperating in a nationalistic group. He was a member of the Tala, the esoteric core of Les Veilleurs, a group which also included Rudolph Hess and possibly had ties to the Thule Society. When pressure was brought to bear on his group, he emigrated to Egypt and became an advocate of ancient Egyptian wisdom. A couple of notable quotes from the book: ‘Black Magic is a Pandora’s box, not because the practitioner is evil, but because he lacks the “sense of the temple” as safeguard of ideas.’ “Il faut voir cela dans sa nue crudité” was all the moral advice he would ever offer. It implies a free vista of the existing state of affairs, unhindered and unembellished by an artificial code of morals.’
VandenBroeck was Schwaller’s student the last two years of the latter’s life. The book explains the experiment of social alchemy to create empowered individuals: His magical work was an attempt to recreate the pharaonic secret. This is the hidden ground behind Fulcanelli, Lucie Lamy, Bika Reed, John Anthony West, Robert Lawlor, Ronald K. Barrett, and many other transformational elitists in the New Age movement, including the Temple of Set. A great study of the Word Al-Khemi, meaning both the secret of the pharaohs and the method of its attainment. The powers and dangers of symbolism are revealed by this book.”

14AC. Heinrich Himmler’s Camelot by Stephen Cook and Stuart Russell. Kressmann-Backmeyer LLC. 1999. (TOS-3) (TRP-3) MA: “Subtitled The Wewelsburg: Ideological Center of the SS 1934-1945, this book is a superb historical & pictorial documentary, packed full of all of the information to date on this topic. One of the authors has lived for years in Paderborn, the other in Australia, and both have been famously fixated on the castle. That they would come together to collaborate on this magnificent book is literary, if not indeed poetic justice. HHC is also another of the books which refreshingly and courageously makes its historical statement without paying the expected text-tax to “Holocaust” hand-wringing.”

14AD. Secret King by Stephen E. Flowers, Ph.D. (Trans.) and Michael Moynihan (Ed.). Dominion Press/Runa-Raven Press, 2001. (TRP-4) MA: “Subtitled Karl Maria Wiligut, Himmler’s Lord of the Runes: The Real Documents of Nazi Occultism. This unusual, unprecedented, and intriguing study explores the role of the runic scholar Wiligut in early 20th-Century Germany and particularly the early [to 1939] years of the SS, wherein he had the especial regard of Heinrich Himmler. While it is evident that Wiligut’s Odinism had some impact, just how enduring it would have been became a moot point with the destruction of the SS. A well-presented selection of Wiligut’s writings is included.”

F14A. The Keep. Paramount, 1983. Paramount Home Video #VHS 1563. Jurgen Prochnow, Scott Glenn. MA: “During World War II a German army detachment occupies a small village in a remote pass of the Romanian Balkans, only to accidentally let loose an ancient Form (daemon/neter/god) imprisoned in a trapezoidal ‘Keep’ by its Universal opposite. As a modern-dress version of the Conflict of Horus and Set [but which is which?], this film oscillates between the harshly real and the surreal. Screenplay writer & director Michael Mann (the wizard who brought you Miami Vice) took F. Paul Wilson’s plodding, ‘here-comes-Vlad-the-Impaler-again’ novel and rewrought it into this expressionistic banquet for the senses. One is left wondering, at the end of the film, which one of the daemon-beings’ influence would have proved better for humanity - that of the tranquil Glenn, who remained aloof and remote from human suffering, or that of his ‘evil’ counterpart, who takes swift and savage vengeance against humans deemed to deserve it - and aids others deemed to deserve that.”

F14B. Triumph of the Will. 1934. MA: “Leni Riefenstahl’s classic documentary of the Nürnberg Nazi Party Rally still stuns the senses decades after it was made. You may experience a variety of mixed emotions upon seeing this film, but you will not be indifferent to it. Look especially for the Synapse Films ‘Special Edition’ DVD #SFD0015, which is the most complete, best-restored version available.”
F14C. The Twisted Cross. NBC/Warner Home Video #29015, 1983. MA: “There are several documentary films about the phenomenon of the Third Reich, which generally waltz through a predictable pattern: (1) the problems of Weimar Germany, (2) a profile of Adolf Hitler, (3) how the Nazi Party took over Germany and started World War II by itself, (4) the horrors of the concentration camps [which of course no one had but Germany], and (5) how the rest of the world finally united to destroy Mordor. This film is one of the more lively of the bunch. While it goes through the standard sequence, it ingeniously mixes actual film footage of the time with black-and-white reenactments of certain events (such as the abortive Munich Putsch) so adroitly done that you think you are seeing the events themselves.”

F14D. Hanussen. 1988 (German-Hungarian). DW: “The title character is a World War I Austrian soldier, who, after being shot in the head, develops the ability to foresee the future. An intriguing story of a real superman having to deal with the brutality of ‘supermen’ whose power comes from mass assertion. Based on a ‘true’ event. Intriguing fare for Pylon Movie Night.”

F14F. Unsolved Mysteries of World War II. Castle Communications; P.O. Box 1445; St. Laurent, Quebec H4L-4Z1; Canada; 1992. #UMW-3-4520. MA: “This is a boxed set of six cassettes for about $20, the price possible because the six hours of film are recorded in EP-mode. Neverthess the quality is quite adequate for viewing. Volumes: ‘People & Plots’: (1) The Riddle of Rudolph Hess, The Strange Death of Geli Raubal, Drugs and the Fuehrer. (2) Hitler’s Secret War, Kill Hitler. ‘Battle Mysteries’: (1) Pearl Harbor, The Phantom Invasion. (2) Decision at Dunkirk, Stalin’s Secret Armies. ‘Occult & Secrets’: (1) Hitler’s Secret Weapons, Enigma of the Swastika, Himmler’s Castle. (2) The Eagle and the Swastika, The Last Days of Hitler. These are ‘teaser’ mini-documentaries, not as detailed as #F14E, but often with fascinating facts rarely aired elsewhere - for instance the Allies’ uneven use of Enigma intelligence vs. the Germans’ strange failure to discern the breaking of their codes, some of the most detailed period film footage of the Wewelsburg yet, and the odd German decision to declare war on the USA when American concentration on Japan would have been to German benefit, etc. A ‘food for thought’ item, easily worth its price.”

F14G. The Empty Mirror. Universal, Lion’s Gate Films, 2000. MA: “Portrayals of Adolf Hitler in postwar films have been inflexibly propagandistic: He is never to be shown as anything other than an ugly, screaming, drooling, and of course insane Orc. TEM is perhaps the first film to at least partially defy this requirement, showing him, at least for part of this film, as a rational, introspective visionary. The film’s title refers to a speculation:
What would Hitler, looking back on his career, ‘see in the mirror’? Hitler is played by the British actor Norman Rodway, who not only looks reasonably like AH but represents him responsibly. I am not surprised that this film was an official selection at the Cannes Film Festival, but I am surprised that it was not suppressed altogether. Hurry up and see it before it is.”
MA: Everyone knows that computers and computer science are continuing to mushroom, but few really know just how much and with what impact. The reality is astonishing in some ways and overblown in others. Industrialized civilizations of the planet are now so dependent upon computerized systems of commerce and communication that they are close to being “at the mercy” of the computer scientist, whose responsibility it is to “make the things work” - and, incidentally, to set parameters for human enterprise by taking computer design in one direction or another.

Books for this reading list, many of them computer-prepared themselves, were located, ordered, and shipped by computers ... after which the reading list was typed on a computer [originally 1976 on a PolyMorphic #8813 and now on a Macintosh], printed on a computer-controlled laser-printer, duplicated on a computer-controlled copy machine, and delivered to you with the assistance of computer-maintained address-list/labels read in turn by computer Zip-code scanners at the post office ... with updates available on the Temple’s electronic database, Glinda.

Obviously a computer-dominated society is hyperefficient in some ways, hypervulnerable in others. At the very least the magician must know enough about the field so that he is sensitive to the ways in which it influences him - and the ways in which he may use it to influence others.

 DW: The digital world offers vast amounts of information, amazing abilities to communicate, and tremendous amounts of political freedom of assembly. It is likewise an addictive drug, a place that hastens the decline of civility, and an immense source of powerlessness. The magician must decide. The best of all possible worlds scenario is a learned Setian who buys the tools that are best for person needs, can pull anything off the Web with ease, has fun on Internet mailing lists of choice, and keeps a “victory garden” going in case it all goes south. The reading list does not include books on software, hardware, or the Internet; these are obsolete when they are printed.

15A. Future Shock by Alvin Toffler. NY: Random House, 1970. [Deutschland: Der Zukunftsschock, Deutscher Bücherbund, Stuttgart, 1970] (TOS-3) MA: “Strictly speaking, this is a study of accelerated styles of living rather than of computers per se. It is included in this section because it illustrates the environment in which computers have become increasingly indispensable. It is also important to consider the directions in which this environment may proceed, and the impact of related phenomena. Future Shock has been around for a long time now, but its propositions are no less valid today than they were when the book was first published.”

15B. God & Golem, Inc.: A Comment on Certain Points where Cybernetics Impinges on Religion by Norbert Wiener. Cambridge: MIT Press, 1964. [Deutschland: Gott & Golem, Inc., Écon-Verlag, Düsseldorf, 1965 (WU: 15/2465)] (TOS-3) MA: “Wiener, who coined the term ‘cybernetics’ in 1948, later went on to consider the ultimate implications of artificial intelligence. A series of his lectures was consolidated into this 100-page volume, which won the National Book Award. The argument is one of ethics rather than of technology.”

15C. Being Digital by Nicholas Negroponte. NY: Knopf, 1995. (TOS-1) DW: “This book, by the Founding Director of the Media Lab at MIT, tells you where the digital world from TV to computers is going, what’s hype, what’s going to be possible, and what social forces are working against the media revolution. The predictions he makes about the type of new interfaces with the digital world may be taken as accurate. ‘By the year 2020 the largest employer in the developed world will be “self”.’ Much of this book appeared as a series of essays in Wired magazine. Easy to read, and a great source of learned excitement.”

15E. As Man Becomes Machine: The Next Step in Evolution by David Rorvik. NY: Pocket Books #0-671-82230-6, 1978. (TOS-3) MA: “An anthology [in layman’s terms] of the research towards the evolution of the cyborg - first the gradual replacement of various organic components of the human body with inorganic machinery, then the transference of consciousness from the organic brain to an inorganic computer. Various hypotheses from this book are illustrated in the character of Lorin Xanpol the Pantechnikon in #211.”

15F. Machines Who Think: A Personal Inquiry into the History and Prospects of Artificial Intelligence by Pamela McCorduck. San Francisco: W.H. Freeman, 1979. [Deutschland: WU: 30/5440] (TOS-3) MA: “This is the book on artificial intelligence. Over the years I have examined and rejected many books on this subject as being either too elementary or too technical. McCorduck is a reporter, not a computer scientist, but she’s got a first-rate [organic] brain of her own and a writing style that turns this potentially confusing subject into an exciting adventure. From the book: ‘I like to think of artificial intelligence as the scientific apotheosis of a venerable cultural tradition, the proper successor to golden girls and brazen heads, disreputable but visionary geniuses and crackpots, and fantastical laboratories during stormy November nights. Its heritage is singularly rich and varied, with legacies from myth and literature; philosophy and art; mathematics, science, and engineering; warfare, commerce, and even quackery. I’ve spoken of roads or routes, but in fact it is all more like a web, the woven connectedness of all human enterprise.’”

15G. Computers and the Imagination by Clifford A. Pickover. NY: St. Martin’s Press, 1991. (TOS-3) DW: “Pickover’s books are generally recommended because his greatest desire is to make you excited-in-love-crazy with math. This book is about using existing and evolving computer technologies as ways to expand the mind and give new arenas to creativity.”

15H. Life on the Screen by Sherry Turkle. NY: Simon & Schuster, 1995. (TOS-3) DW: “Dr. Turkle, Professor of Sociology of Science at MIT and a licensed clinical psychologist, looks at the question of ‘self’ in the digital world, where one can change gender, play in fantasies, have AI companions, and spend hours alone typing in front of glowing screens. This is a book about how computers are changing the hearts and minds of people; the magician is alerted to dangers and opportunities.”

Category 16: Good and Evil
Gut und Böse
as of February 26, 2003

Much of human history can be explained, if not excused by the conflict between those of low intelligence (who consider good/evil objective) and those of high intelligence (who consider good/evil subjective). Certainly it begs the question to use those very terms to distinguish one extreme from the other! The Church of Satan sought freedom by attempting to reverse the good/evil norms of society; the Temple of Set seeks freedom by attempting to escape those norms - and preexisting ones - and to encourage its Initiates to construct enlightened, individualistic definitions. This is as much an art as a science, and the quest must be undertaken and pursued with logic, caution, common sense ... and apprehension of the Agathon.

16A. Political Ideas and Ideologies: A History of Political Thought by Mulford Q. Sibley. NY: Harper & Row, 1970. [Deutschland: WU: 22a/11] (TOS-1) (LVT-1) MA: “Until you’ve read and digested this material, you really oughtn’t to talk about ‘political philosophy’ any more than someone who hasn’t read an anatomical textbook should try to hold forth on anatomy. I teach university courses surveying the history of political theory, and this is far and away the most lucid, objective, and comprehensive survey text I’ve yet found. It has two conspicuous omissions - Nietzsche and ancient Egypt - and it is oriented towards the political rather than the more abstract or conceptual branches of philosophy. So you won’t find Kant, Schopenhauer, Sartre, etc. here. The author [wonderful name!] was a very distinguished and a very controversial Professor of Political Science at the University of Minnesota. If you wonder why something like this is TOS-1, trust me. After you’ve absorbed the knowledge it contains, you’ll wonder on what basis you held political opinions before reading it.” J. Lewis VI°: “Go read a textbook? In this case, yes. Sibley’s book lacks dryness of text and contains doors opening onto the essence of politics. It is valuable for far more than explanations of sandbox politics.”

16B. Nietzsche by Karl Jaspers. Tucson: University of Arizona Press, 1965. [Deutschland: Nietzsche und das Christentum, Piper-Verlag, München, 1985 (WU: 37c/1845)] (TOS-4) MA: “Trying to get a grip on Nietzsche through either his own writings or those of others is a bit like trying to get an octopus into a straitjacket. He thought at a level which the German language did not anticipate, and so there is bitter controversy concerning the proper translation of many of his terms and texts into English [to say nothing of their proper meaning in German]. After going through a number of editions, translations, texts, analyses, and criticisms, I have come to rest on #16B as the most useful for the Setian who wants to ‘get at’ Nietzsche as quickly and accurately as possible. Jaspers, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Basel, Switzerland, is one of the acknowledged giants of the academic community. In this book he sought to make the reader ‘think Nietzsche’s thoughts with him’, and in my opinion he succeeded. There are sections on both Nietzsche’s life and his philosophy, which must be considered together for the latter to be meaningful. 500 pages.” DW: “This book is in three parts. Read all of it, but the second is the part to reread. Great material providing interesting springboards for Setian discussion.”

16C. The Annotated Jules Verne: Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea by Walter James Miller. NY: Thomas Y. Crowell, 1976. (TOS-4) (LVT-4) MA: “English-language editions of this story prior to this edition have been appallingly distorted and shortened by incompetent editors and translators. Verne was a genius far beyond his reputation as a mere yarn-spinner, and his moral philosophy is sublimely subjective. The annotations in this edition will help to illustrate Verne’s expertise in a variety of arts and sciences. Walt Disney must be given credit for bringing many direct quotes into his celebrated film: [Nemo: ‘I am not what you call a civilized man! I have done with society entirely, for reasons which I alone have the right of appreciating. I do not therefore obey its laws, and I desire you never to allude to them before me again.’]” J. Lewis VI°: “Captain Nemo is not, he says, a civilized man. His deliberate separation from the consistency imposed by society has produced a new man, a superman intent on creating a new world.”

16D. The Lord of the Rings by J.R.R. Tolkien. Cambridge: Houghton Mifflin, 1967 (2nd Edition). [Deutschland: Der Herr der Ringe, Klett-Kotta Verlag, Stuttgart, 1984] (TOS-4) (LVT-4) MA: “LOT is not on this list just because it is a stirring adventure tale, but rather because it illustrates a very significant point about good/evil: that ‘evil’ can be destroyed only by a greater ‘evil’ or by accident. Saruman attempts the former and Gandalf the latter, and Gandalf succeeds ... to the satisfaction of egalitarian readers [but who would want to hang around Middle-earth after all the excitement was gone?]. LOTR is thus an argument for Christian morality, which is immediately evident from The Silmarillion, whose philosophical sections - the ‘Ainulindale’ and ‘Valaquenta’ - are transparently adapted from Paradise Lost.” J. Lewis VI°: “Issues of ethics and morality are central throughout the three LOTR volumes. The Initiate embarking on the path to eternity needs more than the simple wish to survive; he must comprehend and define both ‘good’ and ‘evil’. See also the Moriulindé at http://www.xeper.org/maquino”

16E. The Marquis de Sade by Donald Thomas. Boston: New York Graphic Society, 1976. [Deutschland: Der Marquis de Sade, Blanvalet Verlag, München, 1978 (WU: 28/18-527)] (TOS-3) MA: “The best biographical treatment of this controversial and notorious libertine. As Thomas assesses him, he was opposed to the notion of progressive philosophy, holding the supreme power of the human race to be its self-destructive power; the extinction of the species is not to be regretted; history is not progress but helpless drifting. Compare this point of view with that of Satanism, which is similarly cynical but holds out certain hopes for the individual’s transcending of the mass neurosis. [A more recent biography is Sade by Maurice Lever (NY: Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 1993, ISBN 0-374-20298) More text, less of a ‘coffeetable’ book. Lever is Director of the National Center for Scientific Research in Paris.]”

16F. Parapolitics by Raghavan Iyer. NY: Oxford University Press, 1979. (TOS-4) MA: “An admirable, beautifully orchestrated attempt to apply the political philosophy of Plato to the modern world. Iyer lays the groundwork with diagrams explaining the hierarchy of mental activity: Noesis (‘pure vision’ - apprehension of the Good [the Agathon]), Dianoia (logical ‘thinking’), Pistis (‘believing’ - dogmatic acceptance of ideology), and Eikasia (‘imagining’ - the lowest form of image-simplification and instinctive behavior). These forms of activity may be applied to society in a variety of political ‘dimensions’, governed by various syntheses of logos (speech), will (strength), and eros (sympathy). The resultant political forces may be generated towards the attainment of various goals: self-preservation, power, stability, reason, welfare, perfectability, and ultimately the parapolitics of transcendence. This book is a pearl of thought; its sole defect is that it was cast before a world of largely egalitarian readers [it was allowed to go out of print in 1985. Do not attempt it until you have first mastered #12C, #16A, and #16G. Iyer was Professor Emeritus of Political Science at the University of California, Santa Barbara. For information concerning other books by this RHP Magus, contact: Concord Grove Press; 1407 Chapala Street; Santa Barbara, CA 93101. Phone (805) 966-3941.”

16G. Political Thinking by Glenn Tinder. Boston: Little, Brown & Co., 1986 (4th Edition). (TOS-1) MA: “This marvelous little (228 pages) paperback is composed completely of questions to the reader concerning the great political/philosophical issues of history, together with information on how major political philosophers addressed those questions. The questions are left open-ended, the expectation being that the reader must think his own answers to them. This book is thus an active mental exercise, not a textbook for passive memorization or indoctrination. Tinder is Professor of Political Science at the University of Massachusetts.”

16H. The Social Contract by Robert Ardrey. NY: Atheneum, 1970. (COS-3) AL: “The Law of the Jungle as applied to human behavior. How the fallacy of ‘all men are created equal’ has created an imbalance - perhaps necessary - in man’s potential. A beautifully written book guaranteed to hurt many whose only claim to fame is that they are ‘higher animals’.”

16I. Extraordinary Popular Delusions and the Madness of Crowds by Charles Mackay, LL.D. NY: Harmony Books, 1980 [reprint of the 1841 edition]. (TOS-3) MA: “Perhaps the most wonderful book-title since #13C’s. A crazy, wonderful, informative, educational, and non-fictional tour of the major manias of Western civilization up to the time of the book’s publication. As Andrew Tobias observes in his foreword: ‘Once upon a time there was an emperor with no clothes. For the longest time no one noticed. As you will read in this marvelous book, there have been many naked emperors since. There will doubtless be many more.”

16J. Collective Search for Identity by Orrin E. Klapp. NY: Holt, Rinehart & Winston, 1969. (COS-3) AL: “A useful key to the understanding and utilization of Lesser Magic.” DW: “This is a key book to understanding LaVey’s thinking. It is the root of our distinction between rites and ceremonies (which Klapp got from The Folklore of Capitalism by T.W. Arnold Yale [1937] - which if available I would make a TOS-5). When great books about LaVey are written, they will have Klapp as background.”

16L. World Civilizations by Edward McNall Burns, Philip Lee Ralph, Robert E. Lerner, and Standish Meacham. NY: W.W. Norton, 1982 [6th Edition]. (TOS-2) MA: “I am often concerned to see how little knowledge many aspiring Initiates have of exoteric human history. Unless you have a reasonably solid grounding in this subject, anything you derive from this reading list [and most other sensory-inputs] is going to be distorted in your mind. #16L is the best single-volume, collegiate-level survey I’ve yet found: up-to-date, readable, balanced, and comprehensive. Lavishly accented with color plates, maps, and many photographs & illustrations. It is a pleasure to read, as though one were drinking at a fountain of human adventure. 1,384 pages. See also #16M.”
16M. Western Civilizations by Edward McNall Burns, Robert E. Lerner, and Standish Meacham. NY: W.W. Norton, 1984 [10th Edition]. (TOS-2) MA: “This is an alternative/companion volume to #16L, minus the non-Western sections [which permits greater emphasis & detail regarding the Western ones]. 1,068 pages. A wonderful literary and intellectual experience.”

16N. Batman: The Dark Knight Returns by Frank Miller. NY: Warner Books #38-505, 1986. (TOS-3) MA: “A Setian comic (?) book.” Superman: “They’ll kill us if they can, Bruce. Every year they grow smaller; every year they hate us more. We must not remind them that giants walk the Earth. You were the one they used against us, Bruce: the one who played it rough. When the noise started from the parents’ groups, and the subcommittee called us in for questioning, you were the one who laughed - that scary laugh of yours ... ‘Sure, we’re criminals,’ you said, ‘We’ve always been criminals. We have to be criminals.’” Batman: “The world only makes sense when you force it to.”

16P. The Lucifer Principle: A Scientific Expedition into the Policies of History by Howard Bloom. NY: Atlantic Monthly Press, 1995 (ISBN 0-87113-532-9). (TOS-4) MA: “This historical/sociological book is an argument for Bloom’s thesis: that ‘evil is a by-product of nature’s strategies for creation, and is woven into our most basic biological fabric’ (the ‘Lucifer Principle’). He further postulates that the LP applies even more to at the group level (what he calls the ‘superorganism’), and that this is what actually matters in the course of history. In talking of ‘evil’ Bloom means no theological concept, but rather the social impulsive, emotional, destructive, and aggressive features of [principally but not just] human social groups. He case-studies several historical episodes to show that ‘progress results from this pain’ rather than from more tranquil times. Somewhat Hegelian, somewhat oversimplistic - but not without its point. Bloom’s credentials are somewhat elusive: ‘member of the NY Academy of Science, the American Psychological Society, and the American Political Science Society’.”

F16A. Batman. 1989. Michael Keaton, Jack Nicholson, Kim Basinger. Directed by Tim Burton. MA: “This began as an attempt to bring #16N to the screen, and succeeded at least in capturing the noir atmosphere of its Metropolis-like architecture and urban decay. Michael Keaton’s Batman is convincing, but not nearly as savagely psychotic as in #16N. This film came close to being a horrific masterpiece, but at some point it was decided to cast Jack Nicholson as the Joker and play that role for comic relief, presumably to make the film acceptable to youthful audiences. The historic Joker was a malevolent fiend in whose risus sardonicus death-grin there was nothing the least amusing.”

F16B. 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea. Walt Disney, 1954. Disney Video #15VS. James Mason, Kirk Douglas, Paul Lukas, Peter Lorre. MA: “A thoroughly excellent translation of #16C to a motion picture, less the extensive scientific/oceanographic instruction which Verne packed into his novel. [On the other hand, there are many lingering camera shots of underwater attractions, so Disney’s interest in naturalism is upheld.] Disney also changed Verne’s rather unimaginative, spindle-shaped Nautilus into a magnificent metal ‘monster’ whose moonlight charges at hapless warships are one of the screen’s most dramatic sequences. Atomic energy was still a thing of awe when this film was made, as can be seen from the drama accorded the Nautilus’ atomic reactor, the design of Nemo’s Vulcana laboratories, and the final atomic explosion.”

F16C. Apocalypse Now [Redux]. 1979. Francis Ford Coppola. Marlon Brando, Martin Sheen, Robert Duvall. MA: “Loosely adapted from Joseph Conrad’s Heart of Darkness, this film is a sort of Caligula of the Vietnam War: Much of what it shows is in fact historically accurate, but in a single collage it appears so stark, obscene, and insane that the viewer tends to dismiss it as merely a baroque satire. Brando portrays an American Special Forces colonel whose obsession with the war leads to his alienation from the ethical rituals expected by the U.S command structure; Sheen is the captain sent to assassinate him. We are left to wonder why the destruction of human life sanctioned by governments is ‘good’, while that lacking such sanction, even if apparently justified by circumstances, is ‘bad’.”
Sometime between the Lower-Paleolithic Period (about 800,000 years ago) and the Middle-Paleolithic (about 100,000 years ago), the proto-human brain underwent a mutation directly contrary to the objective-universal laws of natural evolution. Between Pithecanthropus Erectus and Cro-Magnon the cranial cavity almost doubled in size - from about 900 cc to about 1,700 cc. Darwinian evolutionists are completely unable to explain this development and therefore deal with it in texts by simply glossing over it. The Temple of Set does not.

17A. Childhood’s End by Arthur C. Clarke. NY: Harcourt, Brace & World, Inc., 1953. [Deutschland: WU: 34/16-683] (TOS-3) (LVT-1) MA: “A most fascinating - and delightfully diabolical - speculation on the Gift of Set that, in a more abstract version, was later brought to the screen as 2001: A Space Odyssey [see #F17A.] The eventual sequel to that film, 2010, broke no new ground; what more was there to say?” J. Lewis VI°: “Is there another book by man which describes the Gift of Set in better ‘fiction’?”

17B. The Eternal Man by Louis Pauwels and Jacques Bergier. NY: Avon Books #380-16725-150, 1972. [Deutschland: Die Entdeckung des ewigen Menschen - Die Umwertung der Menschheitsgeschichte durch d. phantastische Vernunft, Wilhelm Heyne Verlag (Nr. 7009), München, 1975] (TOS-1) MA: “There are a great many sensationalistic paperbacks on the market dealing with ‘startling discoveries concerning human history and prehistory’. The Setian may browse among them at will, picking and choosing substantive data for further investigation. This book, by the dynamic duo who brought you #4B and #22B, is, however, a unique item.”

17C. Lifetide by Lyall Watson. NY: Simon & Schuster, 1979. (TOS-3) MA: “Dr. Watson, an anthropologist who is only very slightly ‘tainted’ by his interest in phenomena that polite academia carefully avoids, is the author of #22D and #22Q as well. Here he discusses scientific evidence for the extra-terrestrial origins of life on Earth and attempts to describe the development of the phenomenon of self-consciousness through purely-natural means. It is a valiant attempt. He stumbles, however, on certain features (such as the working vertebrate eye) that cannot be explained by evolution, and finally he is forced to admit that there is something beyond the natural order at work. In an effort to avoid taking the plunge into theology, he coins the term ‘lifetide’, a sort of neo-version of the ‘vitalism’ used as an escape-valve for inconvenient facts by hard-core Darwinists. An excellent book for seeing just how far science can go in beating its head against the door of non-natural tampering with the human intellectual equation.”

17E. The Neck of the Giraffe: Darwin, Evolution, and the New Biology by Francis Hitching. NY: New American Library (Mentor) #0-451-62232, 1982. (TOS-3) MA: “The recent attack on accepted Darwinian theories of evolution and natural selection by religious fundamentalists has prompted a few brave natural scientists and biologists to question some of the ‘sacred cows’ in the field of evolution. Evolution as a principle stands up to the most exacting tests, but some of the Darwinian sub-assumptions are found not to. There are ‘gaps’ in the fossil record between major species - for example, between early invertebrate sea creatures and ancient fishes. And between fish and amphibians. And between the reptile & the mammal jaw. How could the hyper-intricate human eye have evolved through ‘intermediate stages’? Hitching then launches into a careful discussion of mutation, genes, and cellular coding, after which he analyzes the best arguments the creationists have to offer. While dismissing creationism as ridiculous, he agrees with British Museum palaeontologist Colin Patterson: ‘They [the creationists] didn’t have the right answers, but they certainly asked a lot of the right questions.’ In addition to a 4-page bibliography of technical works, Hitching provides an additional 4-page annotated bibliography of introductory reading, keyed to points brought out in the chapters of his book. If you intend to think or talk about evolutionary theory, this book should be considered TOS-1; if you don’t, then TOS-3.”

17F. The Body Electric: Electromagnetism and the Foundation of Life by Robert O. Becker, M.D. and Gary Seldon. NY: William Morrow, 1985. (TOS-3) MA: “Becker is an orthopedic surgeon who gradually uncovered a number of correlations between electromagnetic phenomena and the behavior of living tissue. In this tightly argued and well-documented book, he discusses human brain evolution and behavior in terms of past and present EM field influences, as well as the more general effects of EM radiation on living beings. This book is reviewed in detail in Runes #III-3. From the text: ‘Francis Ivanhoe, a pharmacologist and anthropologist at two universities in San Francisco, made a statistical survey of the braincase volume of all known Paleolithic human skulls, and correlated the increase with the magnetic field strength & major advances in human culture during the same period. Ivanhoe found bursts of brain-size evolution at about 380-340,000 years ago, and again at 55-30,000 years ago. Both periods correspond to major ice ages, the Mindel & the Wuerm, and they were also eras when great cultural advances were made - the widespread domestication of fire by Homo Erectus in the early Mindel, and the appearance of Homo Sapiens Sapiens (Cro-Magnon peoples) and gradual decline of Neanderthals (Homo Sapiens) during the Würm ...’ [See also #19I/J.]” feature of this book is Penrose’s discussion of what he calls the ‘Platonic Universe, in which mathematical concepts and truths inhabit an actual world of their own, that is timeless and without physical location’. Penrose sketches his discussion in terms of the interrelationship of this ‘Platonic U’ with the ‘Physical U’ of scientific observation (the Temple of Set’s ‘objective universe’) and the ‘bridge’ of the ‘Mental U’ of observing/reflecting intelligences.”

17G. The Rise of Life by John Reader. (LVT-3) J. Lewis VI°: “Published as a coffee-table book, this history of life from the time of core formation 4.5 billion years ago through the present day is highly readable. Within its pages can be found evidences of the Gift of Set as life moves from one-celled presence to the succeeding rulers of the Earth. Keep an eye out for this one; it is worth its $15.95 price, though it can be found for less at book warehouses.”

17I. The Tangled Web: Biological Constraints on the Human Spirit by Melvin Konner, Ph.D., M.D.. NY: Holt, Rinehart & Winston, 1982. (TOS-3) Patty Hardy IV°: “A thoughtful and cautious study of human nature, particularly its destructive facets, from a biological perspective. The author realizes that humans are oddly transitional, and calls for self-knowledge guided by a sense of wonder. He fears the political misuse of behavioral biology, but he fears ignorance still more.” DW: “Magistra Hardy suggested this book for Category #16, Magister Ronald L. Barrett for #17. Konner is currently Professor of Anthropology at Emory University, jointly appointed to the Department of Psychiatry at the Emory School of Medicine.”

17J. Flow: The Psychology of Optimal Experience by Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi. NY: Harper & Row, 1990. (TOS-1) DW: “If the crisis of 1975 had not caused the rapid change from Indulgence to Xeper, but things had happened gradually, we would have Csikszentmihalyi’s concept of Flow. The way to happiness lies not in mindless hedonism but in mindful challenge. This is about the art of obtaining happiness by learning to control the psyche and seeking new challenges for the self. It is about Xeper, written from the perspective of a non-magician. A great book, and one that you can give to your nonSetian friends.”

17K. The Stars my Destination by Alfred Bester. Various editions beginning 1956. (TOS-5) DW: “Gulliver Foyle is lost in space, floating away from the wrecked rocket. He discovers a great secret, and in using it changes the world forever. What he does is to put the secret into the right hands, and by giving it away accomplishes his goals from the meanest to the greatest. It provides a better look at Revelations 13:13, and reveals the real reason why the Temple of Set is a scary organization. ‘Gully Foyle is my name,/ And Terra is my nation./ Deep space my dwelling place,/ The stars my destination.’”

F17A. 2001: A Space Odyssey. MGM/United Artists, 1968. MGM/UA VHS #MV700002. (12-1022). Screenplay by Stanley Kubrick and Arthur C. Clarke. Directed/produced by Kubrick. (LVT-1) MA: “As noted in #17A, the conceptual roots for 2001 go back 1-1/2 decades to Childhood’s End, though this was [for obvious religious reasons] not advertised with the film’s release. Even so it is surprising that the film did not draw fire from conventional religion, its theme being that mankind is essentially an experiment on this planet by an alien intelligence. The simple device of changing the ‘Devil’ Karellen [or Set] to a Golden Sectioned monolith made the plot sufficiently abstract to be non-threatening. Besides, most audiences were less interested in the Nietzschean/Setian implications of the film than they were with HAL the computer [supposedly more advanced than IBM, so his name was created by ‘the next higher letter’], space scenes with Strauss waltzes, and the final ‘stargate trip’ scene. Seen through Setian lenses, 2001 remains a beautiful essay on the Gift of Set.” J. Lewis VI°: “The message of 2001 took many a person around many a mulberry bush on its arrival on the theater circuit. I saw it shortly after its release while in the company of several Christian brothers and priests, and grew weary of hearing the monolith being described as ‘God’. They missed the point completely: The monolith served as a god-like instrument, but readers of #17A get a far better picture of what was actually occurring. [Setians attending Set-VIII visiting Universal Studios got to see HAL and the Discovery during the holiday. The monolith was not available at the time, but we managed to interact with the real thing later on during the Conclave."]

F17B. Five Million Years to Earth. British, 1968. DW: “This sci-fi adventure in the Quatermass series shows the Gift of Set in a thriller format. Workers unearth a spaceship (powered by an inverse pentagram) in a remote part of London (named ‘Hob’s End’ after the Devil said to have appeared there in ancient times). It’s part of a Martian plot: The Martians look like ‘demons’ (an idea reused in #F19C2), and they’re coming back through a Remanifestation of their ideas. Sadly Satan loses, but this is a great treat for Pylon film night.”
Category 18: Life and Death
Leben und Tod
as of February 26, 2003

To the profane, life and death are automatic, inevitable, and unalterable. Hence they take the influence of the life/death continuum on human affairs for granted. To the magician, life and death can be influenced and eventually controlled altogether. The Victor Frankenstein of yesterday becomes the genetic engineer of tomorrow. New forms and mutations of life will become possible, death may cease save through accident, and the Self may evolve into a Self-contained state of existence unhampered by a physical shell chained to the entropy of the objective universe.

[recently revised and updated]. (TOS-3) MA: “In this brilliant book Harrington argues that the presence and the fear of death are root causes for much if not all of human behavioral characteristics. Non-human animals cannot conceptualize and anticipate death, hence are not governed by it. Harrington then catalogues the surprising number of ways in which death-awareness grips human philosophy, presents data on efforts to arrest death, and finally ventures hypotheses concerning a non-death- obsessed environment. A scientific rejection of the Osirian ethic. I originally reviewed #18A in the Church of Satan’s newsletter The Cloven Hoof #V-1: ‘The Secrets of Life and Death’, reprinted as Appendix 71 in #6N and also available in the Order of the Trapezoid section of the Intranet.”

18B. The Immortality Factor by Osborn Segerberg, Jr. NY: Bantam Books #553-08183-195, 1974. [Deutschland: WU: 25/12684] (TOS-4) MA: “This is a somewhat more technical approach to the questions addressed in #18A, with emphasis on the physiological aging/ regeneration processes [see also #17F’s discussion of this], the creation of life, and ecological implications of a controlled life/death environment [cf. Logan’s Run]. Well-researched & argued.”

18C. The Book of Opening the Mouth by E.A. Wallis Budge (Trans.). NY: Benjamin Blom, 1972. (TOS-5) MA: “The Spell for Life Unbounded by Time, caricatured as the ‘Scroll of Thoth’ in the classic Boris Karloff film The Mummy. As with other TOS-5 codes, this text is not to be read or used casually or irresponsibly. The motion picture
Deathdream (Quadrant/Impact Films, 1972) can give you a good idea of what can happen when you tinker with necromancy without appreciating the consequences of ‘success’.”

18D. Our Eternity by Maurice Maeterlinck. NY: Dodd, Mead & Co., 1914. (TOS-4) MA: “A revision and expansion of Maeterlinck’s 1911 essay ‘Death’. The highest form of inductive logic directed towards the major issues of existence and survival of the egocentric consciousness after material death. Key to the effectiveness of #18C.
[Maeterlinck is also the author of #21.]”

18E. The Mysteries of Life and Death: An Illustrated Investigation into the Incredible World of Death by Professor Keith Simpson, OBE, FRCP, FC Path, et al. NY: Crown (Crescent Books, 1980). (TOS-3) MA: “At first glance this appears to be a rather morbid ‘coffee-table’ book, but it soon becomes apparent that it is quite a bit more. For one thing, the contributing authors are among the most respectable and distinguished in their fields, which range from philosophy and criminal psychiatry to pathology and forsenics. Here is the entire concept of death for you to examine: mythology, physiological aspects, psychological considerations, and cultural legacy. There are chapters on assassination, disease, the soul, strange & bizarre funeral & entombment practices, suicide, artistic influences, war, etc. After you get over feeling queasy [the photographs & illustrations pull no punches], you will be fascinated to discover just how little you actually knew about the phenomenon of death [hence life], and just what the limits of human knowledge concerning it happen to be.”

18G. The Jewel of Seven Stars by Bram Stoker. NY: Kensington Publishing Corp (Zebra Books #416), 1978 (originally published by Rider & Company, UK, 1912). (TOS-5) MA: “After writing Dracula Stoker set out to do for ancient Egyptian magic and immortality what he had done for medieval vampirism, and JSS was the result - certainly his second greatest creation. Though well-received in England, JSS remained almost unavailable and unknown in the USA until this small paperback firm brought out this edition. The book recounts the story of Queen Tera, a mysterious sorceress of old Khem, one of whose hands was seven-fingered. Superstitiously hated and feared by the ordinary priesthoods and court cliques, Tera used her arts to discover the great spell for immortality drawn from the Seven Stars of the Thigh of Set, and enchanted it into her tomb through the Xepera-shaped Jewel of Seven Stars. Subtly, sensitively, Stoker evokes in the Initiate reader the success and triumph of Tera - though to the uninitiate it will seem that she failed. [See also my “My Last Three Books” in Scroll #XVIII-2, April 1992.] See #F18A.”

F18A. Blood from the Mummy’s Tomb. Hammer Films. MA: “Recently restored/released on DVD [with some informative and amusing interviews with cast & crew]. Despite its lurid title, it is actually a film version of Bram Stoker’s The Jewel of Seven Stars - and a much more faithful treatment of the novel than the later and better-known Charlton Heston remake The Awakening. The only irritant is the ending: Whereas Stoker’s novel ends on a romantic, mystical note, BMT concludes [as does Awakening] with a ‘monster movie shock scene’ completely absent in the original. Cast includes Andrew Keir, Valerie Leon, James Villiers. Directed by Seth Holt. See #18G.”
Category 19: The MetaMind
Der Metamind
as of February 26, 2003

The Æon of Set heralds the expansion and extension of Elect minds into yet a third stage of intellectual evolution - a point of perspective as far removed from that of mankind as mankind’s is from Pithecanthropus. [No doubt the prospect will seem as incredible to humans as a forecast of their Coming Into Being would have seemed to Pithecanthropus.] Many phenomena casually called “ESP” are in fact the first symptoms of what may be termed the Metamind. Setians should gain an understanding of the human mind’s characteristics, physiology, and potential - then apply Metamental experiments to appropriate situations. “The most exhilarating thing in the world, I think, is the ability of the Setamorphic Metamind to correlate all its contents.”

19A. The Philosopher’s Stone by Colin Wilson. NY: Warner Paperback Library #0-446-59213-7, 1974. (TOS-1) MA: “A novel concerning the Metamind - with a Lovecraftian accent. A more intellectual treatment of the theme than Wilson’s better-known #7E [although #7E has a more colorful plot]. An expansion on much of the historical and bibliographical data in #19A may be found in Wilson’s earlier book The Outsider (Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1956). Subsequently Wilson wrote #4A and became thoroughly confused when he tried to explain the Metamind as a natural phenomenon.”

19B. The Psychology of Man’s Possible Evolution by Peter D. Ouspensky. NY: Alfred A. Knopf, 1969. [Deutschland: Die Psychologie des möglichen Menschen, Barth-Verlag Bern, Edition Pleyaden, Berlin, 1981] (COS-1) (TOS-1) (SHU-1) AL: “Should be read especially by those members whose magical ability is hampered by flaws in their balance factor.” MA: “A series of lectures which explain the Gurdjieff approach to the concept better than G. himself was able to do. If you’re unfamiliar with G., see Gurdjieff by Louis Pauwels (NY: Weiser, 1972). See also the section on G. in #4A.” DW: “This is a great book for Pylons to discuss - one lecture per meeting. For those who catch the Gurdjieff bug, I recommend that they later read Ouspensky’s In Search of the Miraculous (NY: Harcourt, Brace & World, 1949).”

19D. Tao of Jeet Kune Do by Bruce Lee. Burbank: Ohara Publications, 1975. (TOS-4) Lee: “To realize freedom, the mind has to learn to look at life, which is a vast movement without the bondage of time, for freedom lies beyond the field of consciousness. Watch, but don’t stop and interpret, ‘I am free’ - then you’re living in a memory of something that has gone. To understand and live now, everything of yesterday must die.”
19E. The Brain Revolution by Marilyn Ferguson. NY: Bantam Books #553-08412-225, 1975. [Deutschland: Die Revolution der Gehirnforschung, Olten-Verlag, Freiburg, 1981 (WU: 31/8398)] (TOS-3) MA: “An easy-to-read summary of the physiology of the brain to the extent that it is mapped. Well-researched and documented. This book is an excellent jumping-off point for further investigations. An especially interesting section describes the weaknesses and vulnerabilities of the brain to physical and psychological stimuli or deprivation. In other words, the mind is affected by the body more than most persons realize. This is important to the magician in control both of self and of others.”

19F. Physical Control of the Mind: Towards a Psychocivilized Society by José M.R. Delgado, M.D. NY: Harper and Row (Harper Colophon Books), 1969. [Deutschland: Gehirnschrittmacher. Direktinformation durch Elektroden, Ullstein-Verlag, Frankfurt, 1971 (WU: 22/11-115)] (TOS-4) MA: “Delgado, Professor of Physiology at Yale University, is one of the most distinguished authorities in the field of Electrical/chemical Stimulation of the Brain (ESB). This book is necessarily dated, but it is so well-written that it deserves to be perused as a preface to more recent works on the subject. In various sections of the text, Delgado discusses ESB techniques and experiments, clinical & psychological applications of ESB, the definition of the mind and ‘soul’ as distinct from the brain, and the many ethical issues involved in such a line of research. For a discussion of the Central Intelligence Agency’s ESB experiments, see Operation Mind Control by W.H. Bowart (NY: Dell #0-44016755-8, 1978). See also The Search for the ‘Manchurian Candidate’ by John Marks (NY: Times Books, 1979). See also #19X.”

19G. The Psychology of Anomalous Experience by Graham Reed. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1974. (TOS-4) MA: “Reed is Professor of Psychology at Canada’s York University. This book addresses unusual, irregular, and puzzling experiences - déjà vu, illusions, delusions, hallucinations, etc. - in terms of the mind’s normal psychological processes of gathering, monitoring, processing, and storing information. Drawing from the Existenz of Jaspers (#16B) and others who have stressed the distinction between the form and content of psychological experience, Reed approaches the border between psychology and philosophy. An extremely useful reference text for the magician attempting to identify valid mental vs. Metamental impressions.”

19H. The Roots of Coincidence by Arthur Koestler. NY: Vintage Books #V-934, 1972. [Deutschland: Die Wurzeln des Zufalls, Scherz-Verlag, München, 1972 (WU: 22/3196)] (TOS-3) MA: “The debate over the sense/nonsense of parapsychology rages on. To date Psi has not yet been proven to standards of scientific law, but then neither have a great many other interesting and useful phenomena. In their anxiety to gain academic respectability, parapsychologists have been easy victims for the Uri Gellers and other opportunists and fringe-occultists. This book by Koestler cuts through all the confusion and discusses the concepts of telepathy, psychokinesis, precognition, ESP, and clairvoyance in a rational and logical context. Subsections relate the concepts to Einsteinian theories of physics and fields, and to the controversial theories of Lamarck and Kammerer. Selected theories in this book were later tested by Koestler, and the results were compiled as The Challenge of Chance by Alister & Robert Hardie and Koestler (NY: Vintage Books #V-393, 1975). The physical, physiological, philosophical, and metaphysical conclusions drawn by Koestler from his cumulative research are set forth in his Janus: A Summing Up (NY: Random House, 1978), recommended as a complement to the aforementioned earlier works.”

MA: “During a period of more than forty years, Burr and his colleagues at the Yale University School of Medicine conducted research that indicated the existence of electrodynamic fields surrounding an permeating living entities. Even more interesting was the evidence that these fields can be ‘mapped’, and that changes in the fields can be used for diagnostic purposes. [See also #17F.] #19J is Burr’s own account of his research; it is both more technical and more scholarly than #19I (which is a deliberately sensationalized speculation on the possible implications of the L-field theory). Accordingly #19J may be considered a work of scientific calibre, while #19I is more along the lines of ‘food for thought’. For example, #19I hypothesizes the existence of similar fields for thought (‘T-fields’), which might be a way out of the difficulty of justifying ESP in terms of energy required for electronic transmission. Normal electrical thought impulses are too weak to pass through the skull, much less the air beyond.”

19K. The Game of Wizards: Psyche, Science, and Symbol in the Occult by Charles Ponce. Baltimore: Penguin Books #3864, 1975. (TOS-3) MA: “Ponce is a member of the C.G. Jung Foundation for Analytical Psychology [see also #14C]. In this book he attempts to formulate the connection between the human psyche and the ‘occult’, and on the whole he is successful. The reader will note the influence of #19I/J in his methodology. Ponce’s only problem is that he is a neo-Cabalist; hence he hangs himself by one foot from the Tree of Life. His book is interesting and provocative nevertheless.”

MA: “A philosophical exploration into the human body’s ability, both conscious and unconscious, to alter objective reality, with both physiological and philosophical [don Juan, Christ, etc.] case studies. Necessarily Pearce investigates the conceptual processes involved in ‘thinking’ and finds that the entire body - not just the ‘roof brain’ - is involved in the process. Many actual principles applicable to ritual magic, ESP, and PK phenomena may be uncovered, if only to the extent of a crack, in these intriguing works. [Cf. also #19I/J.]”

19N. The Deep Self by John C. Lilly, M.D. NY: Warner Books #33-023, 1977. (TOS-5) MA: “Lilly achieved prominence [or notoriety] as the principal proponent of, and experimenter with the sensory deprivation tank during the last two decades. This book summarizes and analyzes the findings of his earlier books and reports, and offers practical guidance concerning the construction and use of isolation tanks. Lilly, who along with his work was portrayed in the 1980 film Altered States, comments: ‘In the province of the mind, what one believes to be true either is true or becomes true within certain limits. These limits are to be found experientially and experimentally. When the limits are determined, it is found that they are further beliefs to be transcended. In the province of the mind, there are no limits. The body imposes definite limits.’”

19O. A New Model of the Universe by Peter D. Ouspensky. NY: Alfred A. Knopf, 1931 [reprinted Random House (Vintage Books), 1971]. [Deutschland: Ein neues Modell des Universums, Sphinx Verlag, CH-Basel, 1986] (TOS-3) MA: “A series of essays addressing various problems of esoterica according to what Ouspensky calls the ‘psychological method’. He surveys many Eastern and Western cultural traditions, together with modern scientific principles, in an attempt to find common threads. The title of the book is somewhat misleading, because the book does not comprise an integrated argument towards a particular conclusion. [The title is actually that of one of the included essays.] I would recommend #19B and #19C first, after which one will be sufficiently familiar with Ouspensky’s idiom to derive the greatest benefit from his essays.”

19P. Behavior Control by Perry London. NY: Harper & Row, 1969. (COS-3) AL: “A Satanic glimpse into the very near future. As this book was too hot for most markets, it might be difficult to obtain.”

19R. The Manufacture of Madness by Thomas S. Szasz. NY: Dell Publishing Co., 1970. [Deutschland: Die Fabrikation des Wahnsinns, Fischer Taschenbuch Verlag, Frankfurt, 1972] (TOS-3) MA: “An incisive comparison of the philosophy and methods of the medieval Inquisition with those of the modern mental health profession, specifically with reference to involuntary mental hospitalization. Szasz is an M.D. who is motivated by outrage at what he perceives as unethical practices within his profession. In this volume he explains how an initial, tacit decision is made to consider a deviant - as an ‘Other’ (i.e. something less than a ‘normal’ human being), whereupon any social, religious, or humanistic rights that ‘normal’ humans have may be denied him with impunity. Once accorded ‘Other’ status, the unfortunate victim becomes the helpless plaything of the society and its officials. In this sense a medieval person accused of witchcraft, a concentration-camp inmate, and a member of contemporary society declared legally insane are all ‘Others’. For a series of historical readings illustrating the progress of this phenomenon, see Szasz’ The Age of Madness (NY: Doubleday Anchor Books, 1973).”

19U. An End to Ordinary History by Michael Murphy. Los Angeles: J.P. Tarcher [distributed by Houghton Mifflin], 1982. (TOS-4) MA: “Like many other works on this list, this book is an iceberg-tip. The entire field of parapsychological research in the Soviet Union and other communist countries has long lain under a blanket of semi-suppression - not because such research is discredited, but rather because it is considered a potentially vital state secret. Since the publication of Ostrander & Schroeder’s Psychic Discoveries Behind the Iron Curtain in 1970, there hasn’t been much written outside of obscure technical material [which is fine for the Temple’s archives but inconvenient for individual Setians’ libraries]. #19U is a novel, but derives much of its ‘fiction’ from Murphy’s extensive experience in this field in collaboration with the ‘Transformation Project’, a San Francisco-centered data base of human consciousness evolution. See also Jacob Atabet by the same author. Murphy is co-founder of California’s famous Esalen Institute at Big Sur.”

19V. The Soulsucker by Ted Sabine. NY: Pinnacle Books, 1975. (TOS-3) Robertt Neilly IV°: “The main character in this novel has a functioning Metamind. Its understanding of the human mind enables it to convey mental suggestions to humans, including bodily sensations, moods, and time & sense perception.”

19W. Mind Wars by Ron McRae. NY: St. Martin’s Press, 1984. (TOS-3) MA: “An update to Psychic Discoveries Behind the Iron Curtain with a military flavor, written not by scientists but by one of Jack Anderson’s sensationalistic journalists. Nevertheless this is a rather impressively researched and written book, packed with data found nowhere else outside of classified government research reports. McRae analyzes the ‘remote viewing’ experiments conducted amongst much fanfare & big bucks by the Stanford Research Institute [see #2O] and concludes [as I do] that their results are unconvincing. Excellent chapter entitled ‘The Need to Believe’ on wishful thinking concerning Psi phenomena. The debunking of phony psychics like Uri Geller is treated. The chapter on the ‘First Earth Battalion’ is zany; its deletion would have improved the book. There is an excellent 12-page bibliography, listing both classified and unclassified sources.”

19X. Acid Dreams: The CIA, LSD and the Sixties Rebellion by Martin A Lee and Bruce Shlain. NY: Grove Press, 1985. [Deutschland: WU: B-58-887] (TOS-3) MA: “This is an oversize/345-page paperback which takes the reader on a behind-the-scenes tour of the psychedelic/hippie/new left culture of the United States ... interrelated with the covert drug exploration, money laundering, and clandestine dealing programs of the private and public sectors. It is a tour to leave even the most cynical & suspicious Satanist thoroughly stunned at the calculating ‘machinery’ operating behind the apparently-innocent peace/love movement of the ’60s/’70s. This story does not devalue the genuine idealisms of some of the more visionary and idealistic people described in #4K, but it does show that every silver cloud has its dark lining - to rearrange the aphorism a bit! In this case the lining was/is a very dark one indeed.”

19Y. Psychic Warfare: Fact or Fiction? by John White (Ed.). Wellingborough, U.S. by the Sterling Publishing Company, 2 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10016). (TOS-3) MA: “This is a collection of articles by McRae (#19W), Bearden (#20K), Ebon (#5D), and several other authors/researchers who have specialized in this field. White, former Director of Education for the Institute of Nœtic Sciences (an ESP/metaphysics-oriented think-tank loosely affiliated with the Stanford Research Institute [see #2O & #19W] and the Transformation Project [see #19U]), adds concluding chapters of his own dealing with the possible nature of ‘psychic energy’ and the ‘psychic warfare’ attributed to Nazi Germany. White confesses he is no closer to a ‘smoking gun’ of ESP than others who have written on the subject, but he invokes the work of Russell (#19I) and Burr (#19J) as most promising in this direction. A good survey of the current literature in this fascinating field.”

19Z. The Philosophy of Horror, or Paradoxes of the Heart by Noel Carroll. NY: fiction so enduring and appealing? What exactly is it? These are the questions which Carroll, an Associate Professor of Philosophy [and Theater] at Cornell University set out to answer in this complex and precise text. Drawing from ancient Classical tragedies as well as from the latest ‘slasher/gore’ films and novels of the present era, Carroll establishes that this fascination is as much a normal psychological need as an affectation or deviation from the norm. A carefully-reasoned, well-written, and heavily-documented study, displaying Carroll’s fine academic background in the field of philosophy.”

London: L.N. Fowler & Co., 1915. (TOS-3) Leon Wild II°: “Will is a faculty often taken for granted by magicians. Will is more than desire and intent. This book is an introduction to the development and use of will. The book has an essentially pragmatic ‘new’ psychological basis. The nature of will is discussed, to include desire, decisiveness, and action. The active will (or volition) is the aim of the book’s exercises, which are useful for concentration and visualization development. Atkinson’s will description almost goes as far as GBM, and is certainly useful in LBM concepts, in that the imagination creates patterns or mental molds which the will subsequently causes to manifest. Recognizing and countering negative marks of the will are also discussed.”

19AB. Luck by Nicholas Rescher. NY: Farrar, Straus, Giroux, 1995. (TOS-1) DW:
“This book is an enlargement of Rescher’s 1989 Presidential Address to the American Philosophical Association on the topic of ‘luck’. This is a very readable 30-year study of the effects, benefits, and perceptions of randomness in human life. A great cross-read to #6I.”

F19A. Forbidden Planet. MGM, 1956. (12-1035). Leslie Nielsen, Anne Francis, Walter Pidgeon, Robby. (LVT-2) MA: “In the middle of the 50s, MGM reared back and produced this first big-budget ‘intellectual’ space opera, drawing from Freudian theories of the ego & id, salted with a bit of Shakespeare’s Tempest, and peppered with the most charming robot since Gort. The design of the spaceship and even the casual uniforms of the crew were all forerunners of the original Star Trek television series. The plot centered around an ancient, highly-civilized race (the Krel), who had succeeded in expanding their mental powers almost to infinity. They were destroyed, however, by the id-monsters of their subconscious minds - a process which Walter Pidgeon, as a human scientist, comes all to close to repeating.” J. Lewis VI°: “Forbidden Planet has deliberate parallels with Shakespeare’s The Tempest. The island is transformed into a planet, the magician Prospero is a scientist living alone on the planet with his daughter, and Ariel has taken on a metallic shell as Robby the Robot. The story is entertaining in its own right; those familiar with The Tempest will find it even more so. For the Setian the greatest lessons in it are those of the power of the mind. Evolution does not cast away those parts of ourselves we now have under control. It takes the darker parts along on the journey and accentuates their power should they be loosened. The Initiate heading for eternity should give Forbidden Planet an evening of his time.”

F19B. Altered States. 1980. (19-1170) William Hurt, Blair Brown, Charles Haid. Director: Ken Russell. MA: “Adapted from the novel by Paddy Chayefsky, which in turn was loosely modeled on real-life experiments and experiences recorded by John Lilly in #19N. A wild and weird trip through the ‘final frontiers’ of the mind, by humans not quite ready to venture there yet. Hurt/Lilly resolves, he proclaims in a crowded bar, to identify and define the human soul ... ‘and I’m going to find the fucker!’ He eventually does.”

F19C. Doctor Who. (LVT-3) J. Lewis VI°: “The question of man’s abnormal mental evolution is one that has puzzled him since the time he began to realize his difference. The question is addressed by the Temple of Set in ‘Genesis III’, in the papers of the Priesthood of Set and the Book of Leviathan. It has also appeared in science-fiction. Doctor Who has shown three such ventures into the question:”

F19C1. The Daemons. “Jon Pertwee’s Doctor entered into The Daemons to give viewers an action-filled show with a little something for everyone. An ancient barrow, the Devil’s Hump, found near the quaint village of Devil’s End, is being opened by an archaeologist. [The gossip center of the village is the pub known as the ‘Cloven Hoof’, appropriately enough.] This Doctor Who story had witchcraft, hypnosis, a Satanic cult headed by Mr. Magister [the Master masquerading as the new rector], the gadgetry of which Pertwee is so fond to this day, and a gigantic creature with cloven hooves, horns, fangs, and the whole nine yards. This dæmon, Azal, stayed behind in 100,000 BCE as a representative of his race, awaiting the day man would become sufficiently advanced to awaken him and allow the dæmon to judge whether mankind had responded to the subtle nudges given him by the dæmons and therefore was fit to rule his planet with the dæmons’ scientific knowledge; or whether the race should be wiped out as a failure. The strategy of the two Time Lords is fascinating to watch. After all, for what purpose did Set instill the Black Flame in man? I doubt he would close his experiment by dropping the entire human race in the rubbish bin as Azal decides to do. No need to; mankind is quite capable of wiping itself and its planet out of existence without the aid of aliens. The Dæmons was released in black and white and is still visually stunning. The rumor among Doctor Who enthusiasts is that there is a color version of the show out there somewhere, last known to be at some undisclosed location in Canada.”

F19C2. Image of the Fendahl. “‘Like one who on a lonely road doth walk in fear and dread, and having turned once, turns no more his head because he knows a frightful fiend doth close behind him tread.’ That charming little piece of poetry by Coleridge formed the beginning of the Fendahl script, a science-fiction/horror story commencing with the murder of a hiker by an unknown monster in a dark wood and proceeding to a study being done on an ancient human skull unearthed in Kenya in 1984 CE, an inverse pentagram making up a congenital anomaly in its makeup. The secrets of the skull unfold as the Doctor (Tom Baker) and Leela discover it to be a link with the Fendahl, an æons-old force which lives through absorbing life and is therefore the personification of death. The suggestion in the story is that the Fendahl bred a certain genius in man to enable him to eventually grow so sophisticated as to open the gates for the force. This is another of the shows complete with it all: witchcraft, one of the explanations of ESP, an evil cult at work in the midst of it all, and the Doctor working to save mankind as those he seeks to help go out of their way in their attempts to kill him. Image of the Fendahl is a story which deviates from the reasons we suspect man to have the Gift of the Black Flame, but it does explore via fiction the darker alternatives.”

F19C3. The City of Death. “The explosion of a Jagaroth spaceship on the prehistoric planet Earth of 400,000,000 BCE splinters its pilot, Scaroth, into identical selves who are scattered throughout time. Each self is in contact with the others, and each strives to push the advancement of mankind up to a point at which, like the other two parallel shows, the alien can benefit from the upward leaps. In the case of Scaroth, the goal is to finally bring about men of intelligence sufficient to create a time machine which will allow him to return to the original disaster and halt it. The Doctor (Tom Baker) stops the Jagaroth pilot, but only just in the nick of time; had he succeeded in reversing his original mistake, man would never have evolved from the primeval soup affected by the radiation released on the ship’s explosion. In The City of Death, Image of the Fendahl, and The Dæmons, there was a common theme: An outside intelligence altered the genetic makeup of that which would become man, and for a definite reason. Only Azal is clinical about the task and so comes closest to Set’s own plans. The obligatory threat to mankind would have left viewers with an uneasy feeling of incompleteness in its absence.”

F19D. Meetings with Remarkable Men. British, 1979. (53-7173) Peter Brook, Director. Terence Stamp, Athol Fugard, Dragan Macksimovic. DW: “Based on Gurdjieff’s memoirs of the same name (NY: E.P. Dutton, 1969), this deals with G.’s trek through Asia and Africa in search of Truth. It reveals many things and is worth repeated viewings. Of special note is the concept of resonance in the scene of the singing contest, and the old Persian metaphor of ‘going to Egypt’, which means working through mastery of this world as one’s first test. A good video for Pylon Movie Night in conjunction with #19B.”
The philosophy of measurement is a fascinating field. How can and should we estimate, assign, and evaluate boundaries, categories, and phenomena both within and without? “Freedom,” said Winston Smith in 1984, “is the freedom to say that 2+2=4” ... whereupon the magician O’Brien convinced him that 2+2=5. The point is that only one who can define measurement is truly free; the Masons illustrate this by defining “God” as the “great architect” or “Geometer” of the Universe.

20A. The World of Measurements by H. Arthur Klein. NY: Simon & Schuster, 1974. (TOS-3) MA: “A 735-page ‘encyclopaedia of measurements’, so beautifully written that it is as intriguing and entertaining as a good novel. But there is technical material here too, so expect to do some hard thinking as you read. Major sections on measurement philosophy, time, mass, light, thermodynamics, radiation, electronics, pressures, densities, waves, fields, and nuclear disintegrations - to name but a few. As Mr. Spock would say: ‘Fascinating!’”

20B. The Nature of Time by G.J. Whitrow. NY: Holt, Rinehart & Winston, 1972. (TOS-3) MA: “This magnificent little book covers almost every possible aspect of time - relative, absolute, linear, circular, and otherwise. Again it is highly readable; one need not have a Ph.D. in Physics to understand its arguments and explanations. 189 pages.”

20C. The Timetables of History by Bernard Grun. NY: Simon & Schuster, 1979 [periodically updated; look for most recent edition]. [Deutschland: Kulturfahrplan, Werner Stein, Herbig Verlagsbuchhandlung, München, 1976] (TOS-3) MA: “This giant book consists of a single, continuous chart [by page] correlating mankind’s achievements in history/politics, literature/theater, religion, philosophy & learning, visual arts, music, science/technology/growth, and daily life from 5000 BCE to the present. Superbly comprehensive and an invaluable aid in understanding the conditions of civilization surrounding key stages in human historical development. [For a fascinating tour of some key interrelationships in human progress, you might enjoy James Burke’s Connections (Boston: Little, Brown & Co., 1978), the book version of the BBC television series of the same name. The title refers to the often obscure and intricate processes by which some important modern technology began several centuries ago as a number of scattered, seemingly unimportant discoveries.]” Roland Winkhart IV°: “Grun scheint ‘nur’ der Herausgeber der USA-Ausgabe zu sein (Anm.)” exhaustive bibliography on each major topic treated.”

20F. Infinity and the Mind: The Science and Philosophy of the Infinite by Rudy Rucker. NY: Bantam New Age Books #0-553-23433-1, 1982. [Deutschland: WU: 32/10-092] (TOS-4) MA: “From the author’s preface: ‘This book discusses every kind of infinity: potential and actual, mathematical & physical, theological & mundane.’ It does exactly that. Rucker is a Professor of Mathematics, so can deal with the very heavyweight mathematical concepts and formulæ involved in this subject. Fortunately for the non-mathemagician, he also has the gift of explaining [most] things in non-math-jargon. Even so, you’re in for some very heavy thinking if you tackle this book. It starts out fairly conversationally, but before you know it you’re floundering around in: temporal & spatial infinities, Pythagoreanism, Cantorism, transfinite numbers (from Omega to Epsilon-Zero & Alephs), infinitesimals & surreal numbers, Gödel’s Incompleteness Theorem, robot consciousness, set theory, transfinite cardinals, etc. Just to irritate you, each chapter concludes with a selection of problems and paradoxes illustrating the aspects of infinity covered therein. For example: ‘If infinitely many planets exist, then every possible planet would have to exist, including a planet exactly like Earth except with unicorns. Is this necessarily true?’ See what I mean?”

20G. Other Worlds: Space, Superspace, and the Quantum Universe by Paul Davies. NY: Simon & Schuster #0-671-42232-4, 1980. (TOS-4) MA: “One of the most lucid and [comparatively] non-technical explanations of quantum mechanics. Davies discusses subatomic & superspace, mind/ matter, the nature of reality, waves & particles, holes & tunnels in space, Möbius strip phenomena, etc. Davies is Professor of Natural Philosophy at the University of Adelaide, South Australia. The book makes two assumptions that I personally find questionable: the ‘Big Bang’ and Einstein’s theories of relativity. Nevertheless there is a lot of analysis here that does not hinge on these two sacred cows, and in any case it is virtually impossible to find an otherwise-first-rate physics text that doesn’t bow and scrape before them. [Word has it that scientists of 1522, who knew the Earth is flat, assumed that Magellan made it all the way around by crawling across the bottom.]”

20H. The Philadelphia Experiment: Project Invisibility by William L. Moore & Charles Berlitz. NY: Fawcett Crest Books, 1980. [Deutschland: Das Philadelphia Experiment, Zsolnay Verlag, A-Wien, 1979] (TOS-3) (TRP-3) MA: “One day in October 1943, so the story goes, the destroyer U.S.S. Eldridge vanished into a green fog, appeared for a few seconds at Norfolk, Virginia, and then reappeared at Philadelphia - the result of an ‘experiment gone wrong’ in ship-invisibility by the U.S. Navy. The poor old Navy has spent forty years denying that anything like the so-called ‘Philadelphia Experiment’ ever happened, but unfortunately there is a growing accumulation of evidence that something took place - perhaps not visual invisibility or dimensional transportation, but something more along the line of an effort to mask the radar/electronic ‘footprint’ of the vessel through the generation of powerful magnetic fields. If, as #17F and #19I/J maintain, the human body and mind are seriously affected by electromagnetic fields, intense damage could have been done to those on board the Eldridge and indeed to anyone in its vicinity. One would prefer to think that the Navy wouldn’t cover up such a mishap, but the monkey-business presently going on with Project Sanguine [see Runs #III-3, review of #17F] makes one wonder. #20H is definitely not a ‘nut book’, but rather a careful, logical recounting of the author’s long and often frustrating efforts to uncover the truth [or lack thereof] behind what has become one of the more famous legends of Outer Limits-type research. #20H is reviewed in Runes #IV-2. [See also the fictionalized but very well done film The Philadelphia Experiment (Thorn EMI VHS cassette #TVA-2547, 1984).] T.E. Bearden [in #20K]: “Reversing or lowering the electrogravitational charge is controlled by biasing the ground potential on the ensemble pattern transmitters, which can even be on-board the vehicle itself ... You can float metal ... You can even ‘dematerialize’ or ‘teleport’ it. The Philadelphia Experiment may have been real after all. If so, the test ship and its personnel were ‘blasted’ into this strange realm ...”

20I. Tesla: Man Out of Time by Margaret Cheney. Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey: Prentice-Hall, 1981. (TOS-3) (TRP-3) MA: “Few turn-of-the-century scientists are more colorful, accomplished, and controversial than Nikola Tesla, the inventor of radio, pioneer of alternating current, namesake of the Tesla Coil, colleague of Einstein, and all-around ‘mad scientist’ par excellence. This lively biography, basis for a Tesla profile in Runes #I-2, not only tells his tale but also raises many questions [and proposes some answers] about the nature of electromagnetic energy. Extensive notes and recommendations for further reading & correspondance are included.”

20J. The Command to Look: A Formula for Picture Success by William Mortensen. San Francisco: Camera Craft Publishing Co., 1945 [originally published 1937]. (TOS-3) (TRP-3) MA: “Although ostensibly a manual for the most enticing layout of photographic work, this small book was held by Anton LaVey to be among the most crucial for an appreciation of the artistic and audio/visual principles employed in the early Church of Satan and Order of the Trapezoid. It prescribes three elements for the CTL: impact, subject interest, and participation. It further suggests four types of visual patterns which contribute to the CTL: the diagonal, the S-curve, triangular combinations, and the dominant mass. In Runes #IV-3/May 1986 Stephen Flowers V°/GM reviews CTL in detail. Its principles were invariably utilized in Anton LaVey’s own artwork [examples in #6M, #6N and Satanis: The Devil’s Mass].” DW: “The connection between Mortensen and the ‘obscene angles’ of Frank Belknap Long & H.P. Lovecraft was made in the short story ‘The Sorcerer’s Jewel’ by Tarleton Fiske (Robert Bloch) in Strange Stories magazine (Feb 39). ‘Mortensen, of course, is the leading exponent of fantasy in photography; his studies of monstrosities and grotesques are widely known.’ The story, one of the hidden roots of the Order of the Trapezoid, is reprinted in Mysteries of the Worm by Robert Bloch (2nd Ed. 1993, Oakland: Chaosium - see #7J).”

20K. Fer-de-Lance: A Briefing on Soviet Scalar Electromagnetic Weapons by Thomas E. Bearden. Ventura: Tesla Book Company, 1986. (TOS-4) (TRP-4) Bearden: “Scalar electromagnetics is an extension of present electromagnetics (EM) to include gravitation. That is, it is a unified electrogravitation, and, what is more important, it is a unified engineering theory. Its basis was initially discovered by Nikola Tesla. Western scientists are familiar only with directed-energy weapons where fragments, masses, photons, or particles travel through space and contact the target to deliver their effects. However it is possible to focus the potential for the effects of a weapon through spacetime itself, in a manner so that mass and energy do not ‘travel through space’ from the transmitter to the target at all. Instead ripples and patterns in the fabric of spacetime itself are manipulated to meet and interfere in and at the local spacetime of some distant target.” MA: “This spiral-bound book can be ordered directly from the TBC. Write to them at P.O. Box 1685, Ventura, CA 93002 for a current price list. Bearden is a retired U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel with 29 years’ experience in air-defense systems. He holds a Master’s degree in nuclear engineering, and is presently a senior scientist with a major aerospace company.”

20M. Number Words and Number Symbols: A Cultural History of Numbers by Karl Menninger. NY: Dover, 1992. (TOS-3) Patty Hardy IV°: “Number is one of the most powerful tools humans apply to their experience, and like language itself is often taken for granted. Cross-cultural and historical inquiry can hint at the strengths, weaknesses, and limits of the tools we have inherited.”

20N. Keys to Infinity by Clifford A. Pickover. NY: John Wiley & Sons, 1995. (TOS-3) DW: “An introduction to very large and infinite numbers, fractals, vampire numbers, leviathan numbers, and other mind-stretching ideas. Chapter 6 is a discourse on the probable future history of computing, fractals, and the nature of Nepthys co-written with myself. Clifford is an IBM Fellow at the T.J. Watson Research Center. For his computer graphics work he received first prize in the 1990 Beauty of Physics Competition.”

20O. The Demon-Haunted World: Science as a Candle in the Dark by Carl Sagan. NY: Random House, 1996. (TOS-3) Robert Moffatt IV°: “This is a spirited defense of the scientific method and skeptical thinking. The occult world is the standing target for people wanting to sell bad thought for money. The Setian needs to be armed against the forces of ignorance which pursue such exploitation. As Sagan remarks, ‘Those who have something to sell, those who wish to influence public opinion, those in power, a skeptic might suggest, have a vested interest in discouraging skepticism.’”

F20A. The Philadelphia Experiment. New World Pictures/Thorn Video #TVA-2547, 1984. Michael Pare, Nancy Allen. Executive Producer: John Carpenter. MA: “No one was more surprised than I to see Hollywood pick up the Philadelphia Experiment as the subject for a science-not-so-fiction movie. Though advertised and represented as sci-fi, PE reeks with references to the actual (?) event, with the U.S.S. Eldridge correctly named and even a spoken reference to ‘Project Rainbow’ - the reputed code name for the actual PE. Portrayals of the PE occur only at the very beginning and very end of the film; in the middle is a purely dramatic-license romance to give the movie something to take up 2 hours with. [Don’t waste time with Philadelphia Experiment II.]”

F20B. The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari. 1919. Werner Krauss, Conrad Veidt. MA: “The first and most famous of the interwar German Expressionist films, containing highly-distorted representations of rooms, streets, and buildings. The effect of these distorted sets upon the viewer is startling, illustrating the degree to which we depend upon our instincts for normal/Euclidean geometry for our sense of order and mechanism in the cosmos.”
F20C. The Golem. 1920. Paul Wegener. MA: “Hans Poelzig, an Expressionist artist & architect who had designed Berlin’s Grosses Schauspielhaus for Max Reinhardt in 1919, combined the non-Euclidean angles and planes from Caligari with his own expertise in lighting to create sets that seemed to writhe and crawl with a life of their own, so much so that the humans - and even the Golem - seem mere accessories to the more insidious drama of the houses and streets of the Prague ghetto.”
An effective magician must be able to move within and influence the fourth dimension as well as the first three. Such skill involves understanding and applying the principles which define and govern past periods of focus within the time-continuum, together with both passive analysis and active manipulation of the future. Time-Magic as employed by the Temple of Set may involve either Greater Black Magic techniques [referred to as Erotic Crystallization Inertia (ECI) techniques by Anton LaVey; see Runes #II-6] or Lesser Black Magic technology. The following selections include some of the more sophisticated futurological thinking in conventional society - as well as a few experiments-gone-wrong from The Outer Limits ["There is nothing wrong with your television set ..."]

21A. The Future by Gerald Leinwand (Ed.). NY: Pocket Books #671-80316-6-195, 1976. (TOS-2) MA: “An anthology of selected readings concerning the future, selected by the Dean of the School of Education, City University of New York. Included are articles and extracts by such futurologists as Asimov, Orwell, Huxley, Clarke, Kahn, Reischauer, Toffler, and Skinner. Most of the contributions discuss developments of the near future which can be interpolated more or less reliably, but there are some long-range speculative essays as well. A good introductory work.”

21B. The Last Days by Anthony Hunter. London: Anthony Blond Ltd, 1958. (COS-3) AL: “A fairly scarce work from England which explains the workings of the prophets of doom who prey upon their followers’ fears that the world will end, tidal waves, earthquakes, etc.”

21C. Mankind at the Turning-Point by Mihajlo Mesarovic and Eduard Pestel. NY: E.P. Dutton & Co., 1974. [Deutschland: Menschheit am Wendepunkt, Deutsche Verlags-Anstalt, Stuttgart, 1974 (WU: 24/14815)] (TOS-3) MA: “This is the second major book sponsored by the Club of Rome [the first being Meadows’ The Limits to Growth]. It expands upon and updates the data in Limits and responds to critics. Far more sophisticated than the sensationalist ‘doomsday’ books that sprang up following the appearance of Limits (which Raghavan Iyer, author of #16F and a member of the Club of Rome himself, told me was deliberately sensationalized in order to ‘shock’ the public - which of course it did).”

21D. War in 2080: The Future of Military Technology by David Langford. NY: William Morrow & Co., 1974. [Deutschland: WU: B-39-249] (TOS-3) MA: “Langford is a physicist and science-fiction devotee [#7D], and he applies his skills in both areas in this excellent work. Topics treated include fission & fusion bombs, concepts of nuclear warfare, death rays (lasers, grasers [gamma-ray lasers], antimatter projectors, particle beams), orbital battlegrounds, geological warfare, ecological warfare, and human & non-human warfare in space. A good theoretical background study for #22N. For a specialized discussion of space warfare probabilities and possibilities, see also Space Weapons/Space War by John W. Macvey (NY: Stein & Day, 1979).”
21E. The Next Ten Thousand Years by Adrian Berry. NY: Mentor Books, 1974. [Deutschland: Die grosse Vision, Econ-Verlag, Düsseldorf, 1975] (TOS-3) MA: “This is definitely long-range! An optimistic challenge to the ‘doomsday’ books that followed Limits to Growth, and a scientific scenario for survival within the Solar System with technological aid. Well-argued, with consideration given to the many influential factors. Nevertheless Berry seems excessively confident in the ability of the masses of humanity to cooperate in egalitarian ‘master plans’.”

21F. Foundation/Foundation and Empire/Second Foundation by Isaac Asimov. NY: Avon Books, 1951. [Deutschland: Das galaktische Imperium, Deutscher Bücherbund, Stuttgart, 1981 (WU: 31/11530)] (TOS-4) MA: “Brilliant trilogy of the future, based upon Asimov’s concept of ‘psychohistory’. This concept and others introduced in the text inspired certain aspects in the original design of the Temple of Set. In late 1982 Asimov published a sequel to the original trilogy - Foundation’s Edge - which I reviewed in Scroll of Set #IX-3, which in turn was commented upon by Asimov. The series was merged with Asimov’s robot series [cf. #15D] in Foundation and Earth (NY: Doubleday, 1986), in which the ultimate justification for mankind’s galactic unification is considered to be the eventual invasion of the Milky Way Galaxy by denizens from other galaxies. [Too late, Isaac - see #22N.]”

21G. Metropolis by Thea von Harbou. NY: Ace Books #441-52831-125, 1927. (TOS-5) MA: “An Expressionistic portrait of a negative utopia in which humans are controlled by machines - save for one Black Magician (Rotwang). The novel from which Fritz Lang’s classic UFA film was made, and the basis for many electronic/audio-visual ritual techniques employed by the Church of Satan and further developed by the Temple of Set. A King in Yellow of science-fiction, preserved today through the personal efforts of Forrest J Ackerman. To understand Metropolis in the context of German Expressionist cinema, see The Haunted Screen by Lotte E. Eisner (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1973). [See #F21A.]”

21H. Political Science and the Study of the Future by Albert Somit. Hinsdale, Illinois: Dryden Press, 1974. (TOS-3) MA: “This is a theoretical text with accompanying case studies, and it is primarily valuable for its explanation and illustration of various social forecasting techniques, including: social physics (ideological theories, logistics curves, Kondratieff cycles), economic forecasting, demographic extrapolation, technological change, structural certainties, operational codes, operational systems, structural requisites, overriding problems, prime movers, sequential development, accounting schemes, scenarios, and decision theory. Another good introductory work without social science emphasis is Edward Cornish’s The Study of the Future (Washington, D.C.: World Future Society, 1977).”

21I. Engines of Creation: The Coming Era of Nanotechnology by K. Eric Drexler. NY: Anchor Books, 1986 (paperback 1987). (TOS-3) Patty Hardy IV°: “Nanotechnology is a fledgling field of engineering that involves manipulation of matter on a molecule-by-molecule basis. This book is addressed to laymen, and ponders the limits of human ability to transform the natural order. This is the science perfected by the Krell in Forbidden Planet. Drexler’s analysis of possible responses to technologies of radical risk, ‘Strategies and Survival’, is worth skimming even if one is not interested in nanotech itself. Setians with training in physics or chemistry may want to seek out the published version of

21J. A Quick & Dirty Guide to War by James F. Dunnigan & Austin Bay. NY: William Morrow, 1985+. [Deutschland: WU: B-56-805] (TOS-3) MA: “This heavy-duty paperback is subtitled ‘Briefings on Present and Potential Wars’, and that pretty well sums it up. As depressing as it is to admit, the world continues to move away from international peace and cooperation and closer to a kind of ‘tolerable/continuous state of war’, and - by geographic area - this book provides ‘intelligence briefings’ to tell you what is most likely to hit the fan where [if it isn’t already doing so]. Regularly updated, so look for the latest edition. This project is an attempt by the authors to overcome the short-sightedness of most press coverage, and to tell you about things before they happen. Jammed with facts and data: political forecasting of the most substantive kind.”

21K. Futurehype by Max Dublin. NY: Penguin, 1989. (TOS-2) DW: “This book shows not only the short-sightedness of prophecy but its use as a way of ruling institutions. Dublin charts the rise of futurologists and the profound effect prophecy has on politics, business, education, the military, and the health-care system. The Setian has learned not to follow the RHP religious prophet, but also needs to see how futurologists may similarly limit social choices.”

F21A. Metropolis. UFA, 1926. (10-2030) Fritz Lang, director. (LVT-5) MA: “See discussion under #21G above.” James Lewis VI°: “Lang’s silent film remains one of the early and best of those with a Black Magician. Rotwang’s machinations are a King in Yellow of the cinema. Audiences then were not prepared for the world with which Rotwang would have replaced their own. Already wages were insufficient for the needs and wants of most; the thought of a robotic army able to take over the city of Metropolis was an unpleasant reminder of that which could happen to themselves. The story ended with the defeat of Rotwang, and all through a chance happening, that of Maria’s escape from his dark old house into the freedom of the city’s streets. Had she not made the escape, the robotrix would have triumphed and it may be that its admirers would have rallied to save her from the angry mob of workers. What could have been makes for intriguing speculation.”
Category 22: Toward the Unknown Region
In die Richtung der unbekannten Region
as of February 26, 2003

“Darest thou now, O soul,
Walk out with me toward the unknown region,
Where neither ground is for the feet nor any path to follow?”
- Walt Whitman

“Where no terrestrial dreams had trod
My vision entered undismayed,
And Life her hidden realms displayed
To me as to a curious god ...”
- Clark Ashton Smith

“Let’s go!”
- Paul Kantner, Captain, Jefferson Starship

“It was very expensive to make the first Star Trek motion picture, roughly $44 million. That’s equal to the cost of sending two Apollo space missions to the Moon.”
- Patrick Stewart, Captain, Starship Enterprise

22A. The Cosmic Connection by Carl Sagan. NY: Dell Publishing Company #3301, 1973. [Deutschland: WU: 25/8786] (TOS-3) MA: “Dr. Sagan was Professor of Astronomy & Space Studies and Director of the Laboratory for Planetary Studies at Cornell University. In this collection of essays he examines mankind’s prospects for a space-oriented culture, touching upon everything from intelligent dolphins to scenarios for communication with extra-terrestrials. While adhering to high standards of scientific precision, the book is as conversational as the writings of Asimov. Hence it is a pleasant introduction to ‘space-consciousness’. Also highly recommended is Sagan’s Cosmos (NY: Random House, 1980), the book version of the PBS television series Cosmos. And catch that series if you can. Sagan’s a little rough on Pythagoras, who he feels gave science a bum steer in the direction of intuition & mysticism instead of Aristotelian ‘scientific method’. Shows what old turtle-neck knows about Pythagoras - and Aristotle! But I’ll forgive him this lapse, because the other episodes of the series - and his genuine love for space/ecology - are so admirable.”

22C. Worlds-Antiworlds: Antimatter in Cosmology by Hannes Alfven. San Francisco: W.H. Freeman & Co., 1966. [Deutschland: Kosmologie u. Antimaterie, Umschau-Verlag, Frankfurt, 1967 (WU: 17/6645)] (TOS-4) (SHU-3) MA: “Alfven is a Nobel Prize recipient; member of the Royal Institute of Technology, Stockholm; and Professor of Physics at the University of California, San Diego. In this 100-page book he explains the origin of the Universe through the fission of plasma into primal matter and antimatter. Chapters deal with the actual construction of galaxies & star systems, the errors in the ‘steady-state’ and ‘Big Bang’ theories, the physics of matter/ antimatter and plasma particles, the development of the metagalaxy, and the effects of relativity. In short: How the Universe really works. [See also my review of #22C, ‘Genesis II’ in the Cloven Hoof, reprinted as Appendix 57 in #6N.]”

22D. Supernature by Lyall Watson. Garden City, NY: Doubleday, 1978. [Deutschland: Geheimes Wissen: das Natürliche, das Übernatürliche, S. Fischer-Verlag, Frankfurt, 1977 (WU: 28/5127)] (TOS-3) (SHU-3) MA: “If magic involves the use of principles for which there are not yet scientific laws, then this book [by the author of #17C] is a guide to the Twilight Zone between magic and science. Watson’s goal is to force science to admit that it still cannot account for everything in a wide variety of fields; hence it should not shy away from unorthodox theories and hypotheses. Specific chapters cover cosmic laws & their impact upon Earthly organisms, life fields, brain-wave research, biophysics, PK, ESP, witchcraft, time measurement, and precognition. An extensive and sophisticated bibliography is appended for those interested in detailed investigations into specific areas. See also #22Q, Watson’s equally-brilliant update to #22D.”

22E. The Key to the Universe by Nigel Calder. NY: Penguin Books #005065.5, 1977. [Deutschland: Schlüssel zum Universum: d. Weltbild d. modernen Physik, Verlag Hoffmann und Campe, Hamburg, 1981 (WU: 31/6780)] (TOS-3) MA: “This is the book-version of the BBC television documentary of the same name. Chapters 1-4 explore recent breakthroughs in particle physics (quarks, neutrinos, muons, etc.), and chapters 5-6 analyze and speculate upon the impact of these discoveries on our scientific understanding of cosmic forces. Calder and his sources are essentially committed to Einsteinian partial relativity and the ‘Big Bang’ theory of Universal creation, so you may find it helpful to assess the implications of chapters 1-4 in light of #22C.”

22F. Intelligent Life in the Universe by Carl Sagan and I.S. Shklovskii. San Francisco: Holden Day, Inc., 1966. (TOS-4) MA: “Long before Sagan (#22A) was invited to assemble the Cosmos documentary series, he was intrigued by the subject of this book. This is a collaboration between him and one of the most eminent astronomers of the Sternberg Astronomical Institute, Soviet Academy of Sciences, Moscow. The presentation is a synthesis of physics, biology, chemistry, and cosmology, and the abundance of technical data may be confusing to the layman. For the serious investigator, however, the same feature is a welcome change from the unsupported speculations of many pseudoscientific works on the same subject.”

22I. Space Shuttle by the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center. Washington, D.C.: NASA, 1976. (TOS-3) MA: “Much has been written about the space shuttle program. This is NASA’s official booklet on the subject and is a clean, clear, uncluttered presentation for the reader seeking the basic facts.”

22J. Enterprise by Jerry Grey. NY: William Morrow, 1979. (TOS-3) MA: “This is an excellent summary of the space shuttle program and its implications for research, colonization, etc. by the U.S. Vice-President of the International Astronautical Federation & Administrator of Public Policy for the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics. Comments Isaac Asimov: ‘This book is the story of the real beginning of the space age, how it came about, and what it will lead to. It is the story of real people who made dreams come true and are utterly revolutionizing space flight - and humanity - in doing so. And it is told by someone who has lived the story.’”

22K. Space Settlements: A Design Study by Richard D. Johnson and Charles Holbrow (Eds.). Washington, D.C.: NASA, 1977. (TOS-3) MA: “Popular books such as Gerard O’Neill’s The High Frontier have made space colonization a fad and the victim of a good deal of emotional journalism. This NASA study - a companion volume to #22I - is a refreshingly practical analysis. Appropriate technical data are included.”

22L. The Cycles of Heaven: Cosmic Forces and What They are Doing to You by Guy L. Playfair and Scott Hill. NY: St. Martin’s Press, 1978. (TOS-3) MA: “If #22D sparks your curiosity, this is a good follow-up book on the general subject of force-field influences upon the human body and consciousness: radiation, sound & light waves, gravitational fields, etc. Compare #22L’s discussion of the human ‘energy body’ with the theories set forth in #19I/J.”

22M. Moon Madness by E.L. Abel. Greenwich, Conn.: Fawcett Publications #0-449-13697-3, 1976. (TOS-3) MA: “This is one of the more comprehensive of a number of ‘lightweight, semi-scientific’ books discussing the Moon’s various influences - from mythological to physiological - on the human organism. Included are chapters/sections on time, blood, sex, women, maternity, plants, diseases, mental illness (including lycanthropy), suicide, lunambulism, electricity, and magnetism.”

22O. Pioneering the Space Frontier by the National Commission on Space. NY: Bantam Books #0-553-34314-9, 1986. (TOS-3) MA: “In format this is a companion volume to #22I & #22K, but in content it is an assessment of the U.S. space program at present and an argument for its expansion into a trans-orbital and planetary emphasis. NASA’s reliance upon the space shuttle, coupled with increasing military interest in and possible influence over the shuttle program as a component of SDI research has put more distant space-exploration efforts at a serious disadvantage: exploration of the Moon, the planets, interplanetary probes, etc. The National Commission on Space is a blue-ribbon panel of 15 space-exploration enthusiasts. This book is a good ‘state-of-the-art’ assessment which tells the reader what is and would be possible if the U.S. and other nations would resolve to move space-exploration forward. Whether the present fixation on Earth-orbital programs will yield to this more ambitious prospectus is unclear at this time.”

22Q. Beyond Supernature: A New Natural History of the Supernatural by Lyall Watson. NY: Bantam (ISBN 0-553-34456-0), 1988. (TOS-3) MA: “This book reflects Watson’s continuing efforts as a biologist to refine the propositions he introduced in #22D fifteen years previously. It was the purpose of #22D, he remarks, ‘to create a sort of demilitarized zone into which both scientists and enthusiasts could go without abandoning either their sense of proportion or their sense of wonder’. #22Q is divided into three general sections: Life, Mind, and Planet. The first deals with such topics as coincidence, order, imagination, organisms, identity, & natural selection. The second addresses bioelectricity, mind fields, biofeedback, social communications & phenomena, & extrabodily phenomena. The third investigates poltergeists, PK/ESP, paranthropology, Psi, paraphysics, parachæology, and Earth-as-Gaia (Earthmind). ‘What we need,’ he concludes, ‘is a slightly broader definition of reality: one which includes the possibility of certain things happening when humans are involved. A definition that is not so exclusive; one less inclined to dismiss certain things as impossible, and better able to deal with what actually happens in terms of probability rather than outright and unreasonable denial.’”

22R. Hamlet’s Mill by Giorgia de Santillana & Bertha von Dechend. Boston: Godine. (TOS-3) DW: “A little easier to find than #22B. A good study of the effect of the idea of the cosmos on mankind’s development and meaning-making activities.”

22S. The Millennial Project: Colonizing the Galaxy in 8 Easy Steps by Marshall Savage. NY: Little Brown & Co., 1994. (TOS-2) Alex Burns II°: “Savage’s vision is expansive to say the least, echoing Seldon’s Foundation plan in its detail and length. All the usual stuff is here: Dyson shells, interstellar travel, terraforming the Moon & Mars, asteroid mining, etc. It is the extreme optimism of the ‘Age of Aquarius’ tempered with pragmatism. The technical knowledge is massive: a dozen engineering disciplines, a wide-ranging analysis of scientific & technical literature. 385 pages text, 30 pages appendices, 707 footnotes, 16 pages color plates, 22 pages bibliography. Savage’s Web site: http://www.millenial.org”

F22B. Star Wars. 1977. MA: “This film is less important for its setting than for its significance as a study of magic, metaphysics, and morality [see #22N]. But it also broke new ground in another way, in that it portrayed a space-travel culture as casual as today’s automobile-travel one. Space, suggests the movie, is as natural an environment for humans to frolic around in as Earth. Obviously this is not quite the case, but the film nonetheless triggered an entire decade of ‘popular space consciousness’ in which ordinary people, not just ultra-select NASA astronauts, visualized themselves as explorers of this medium.”
Category 23: Lesser Black Magic Niedrigere Schwarze Magie
as of February 26, 2003

MA: There are Lesser Black Magical principles to be found throughout this reading list, to be sure, but there are also works which focus primarily or principally on the concept or technique itself. LBM is defined and discussed in “Black Magic” in the Crystal Tablet of Set, and generally embraces what ordinary human minds conceive as “magic”. Hence this category begins with four books on stage-magic, which will (a) enable the Setian to satisfy those who ask to “see some magic”, and (b) offer the Setian excellent training in the basic techniques of attention control and behavior & attitude manipulation so crucial to more serious applications of LBM. Following the stage-magic works are books dealing with the social environment so conducive to LBM operations. Setians are advised to pursue active operations of LBM only after they have schooled themselves in the relevant ethical fields as treated in category 16.

* * *

DW: LBM shouldn’t be used as the first resort in any situation, when reason and courtesy can be used instead. The Black Magician, a one-eyed man in the kingdom of the blind, must likewise learn not to become a Cyclops. However the ability to amaze and delight your friends is a primary art of the magician.

23A. The Great Book of Magic by Wendy Rydell with George Gilbert. NY: Harry N. Abrams, 1976. [Deutschland: Das grosse Buch der magischen Kunst, Lichtenberg Verlag, München, 1978 (WU: 28a/3505)] (TOS-2) MA: “There are a great many stage-magical manuals on the market, but I have recommended this one because it fills a great many requirements: It is a large, well-printed, clearly illustrated, quality paperback. It is reasonably priced ($10). It contains instructions for over 150 very effective tricks and an excellent introduction (the first half of the book) dealing with the history and major personalities of stage-magic, with major sections on the Black Arts [with rare photos of the Church of Satan’s Central & Lilith Grottos in 1972].”

23B. Thirteen Steps to Mentalism by Corinda. NY: Louis Tannen, 1967. (TOS-3) MA: “This and #23C are the recognized classic texts in the stage-magic art of mentalism. It is one of the more difficult fields to master, but it is also one of the most impressive - even frightening - to use in a non-entertainment setting. The same principles used for these mentalism tricks can be adapted to a great many LBM situations. Both this and #23C are usually stock items in stage-magic shops. Despite this, it is surprising how few people read the books, hence know their secrets.”

23C. Practical Mental Effects by Theodore Anneman. NY: Tannen Magic, 1963. (TOS-3) MA: “The second classic in the mentalism field. Since it is a reprint of a 1944 work, I would recommend #23B as being more clearly printed and in general easier to read. But either work is excellent from a technical standpoint.”

23D. The Prince by Niccolo Machiavelli. NY: Washington Square Press, 1963. [Deutschland: Der Fürst, Kröner Verlag, Stuttgart, 1955 (WU: Z49-235)] (TOS-3) MA: “You’ll find a summary of The Prince in #16A, but if you’re going to get seriously involved in the social jungle, you should probably read the book itself, since it is still the classic of practical power politics. A short, succinct work written in a crisp, no-nonsense style. Nevertheless it is not, as the vulgar assume, an argument for viciousness or callousness in political affairs, but is predicated upon the prince’s underlying ethical goals for his country.”

23E. The B.S. Factor: The Theory and Technique of Faking It in America by Arthur Herzog. NY: Simon & Schuster, 1973. (TOS-2) MA: “In Machiavelli’s day the world was sufficiently lawless to make force a viable alternative in day-to-day affairs. In a highly ordered nation such as the United States, however, manipulation must often take more subtle and psychological forms. This book is one of the best analyses of them. It focuses on the twisting and warping of language to mold opinions and behavior. Written humorously, but with serious underlying principles.”

23F. A Primer of Politics by James E. Combs and Dan Nimmo. NY: Macmillan Publishing Company, 1984. (TOS-3) MA: “A political science textbook dealing with the study of power according to the definitions, maxims, and recommendations of Machiavelli. Individuals, episodes, organizations, governments, and ideologies from ancient times to the present are offered as case studies. Mini-biographies of the various political leaders used in the case studies are included, with the result that this book reads like an anthology of dramatic episodes in the shaping of history - which in a way it is. Some leaders treated: Walter Lippman, Jefferson, Catherine the Great, Charles de Gaulle, Hitler, Madison, Madame de Pompadour, Disraeli, John Marshall, Elizabeth I, Eva Peron, Gandhi, Richard III, Mao, Cicero, Lincoln, FDR, Richelieu, Bismarck, Jackson, J. Edgar Hoover, Henry II, Tallyrand, Lenin, Goebbels, Stalin, Augustus Caesar, and Nicholas II. Whenever I have prescribed this text for a Political Theory course, students have gone wild over it, reading far more than assigned and using its concepts as a knife to cut through the jungle of doubletalk, deceit, hypocrisy, and inertia of modern political society. A book for the 1980s - in some ways regrettably so.”

23G. The Hidden Dimension by Edward T. Hall. Garden City, NY: Doubleday & Co., 1966. [Deutschland: Die Sprache des Raumes, Pädagogischer Verlag, Düsseldorf, 1976 (WU: 26/8627)] (TOS-3) MA: “The best study to date of ‘proxemics’ - the LBM technique involving, in the author’s words, ‘social and personal space and man’s perception of it’. Included are both a discussion of the principles involved in the design, control, and manipulation of proxemics, and a number of case studies - several ethnic and/or national/cultural in orientation - illustrating these principles. #23H is reviewed in Runes #III-4.”

23H. Getting to Yes: Negotiating Agreement Without Giving In by Roger Fisher and William Ury. Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1981 (Penguin paperback edition available). [Deutschland: WU: 33/8696] (TOS-3) MA: “This is a succinct (160 pages) manual on how to win arguments, particularly in a group or organizational setting. The step-by-step process results from studies and conferences by the Harvard Negotiation Project, a group which deals continually with various levels of conflict resolution. This is a book which raises what for most people is a ‘blind, stumbling’ (Pistis) experience to a deliberate, controlled (Dianoia) exercise.”

23I. Success with the Gentle Art of Verbal Self-Defense by Suzette Haden Elgin. Englewood Cliffs, NJ: Prentice-Hall, 1990. (TOS-1) Rosemary Webb III°: “This volume of Dr. Elgin’s ‘Gentle Art’ series summarizes her first five books. An example of LBM techniques, that is to say metacommunication applicable to long-term successes in the business world. Useful to teach the magician the difference between her purposes and the reactive environment. Unlike most NLP manuals, this book doesn’t serve as a hook to get you to buy more NLP manuals. Its TOS-1 rating reflects both ease of readability and breadth of topics covered.”

23J. Class by Paul Fussell. NY: Random House, 1983. (TOS-3) DW: “This slightly dated tome teaches both the reading and the presentation of economic class - a key to achieving metacommunication. The Black Magician is free from the social taboos that ‘politically correct’ society insists upon, and can use those taboos to his advantage while exploring the positive and negative effects they have had on his own life.”

F23A. Come Back to the Five and Dime, Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean. Viacom Enterprises. (LVT-4) James Lewis VI°: “This film never really made it big in the theatre circuit and taken overall, viewers can see why. The performances of Cher, Karen Black, and the others are good, but for the Order of Leviathan member the outstanding theme is that of watching an attempt at Magic gone awry because of what amounts to a religion built on a lie. If you have passed this by in the video store because of the title, give it a chance and see a cinematic rendition of the dangers of Black Magic.”

F23B. The Adventures of Baron von Munchausen. Prominent Features & Laura-film Productions, a Terry Gilliam film, fantasy fiction. (LVT-2) James Lewis VI°: “The Village Voice reviewed this movie as ‘No great job of storytelling, this movie is disjointed, exhausting, and overloaded with flamboyant bric-a-brac. It needed a slow movement. Yet how many films these days can be faulted for excess of riches? At his best, Gilliam seems the most legitimate heir to Melies working today.’ With all due respect to reviewers, the magic with which the Baron weaves the subjective into the objective world is worth the viewing time of the Setian. Imagery is an important tool for the Magician and few have the skills and adaptability of the old Baron.”
Category 24: Runic Arts and Sciences
as of February 26, 2003

The significance of this category of the reading list goes far beyond its specific subject material. It involves, quite bluntly, a major re-writing of the history of western European civilization. Until now, the “history of Europe” surveys taught in most universities have addressed the history of Christian Europe: the feudal states and nations which emerged following the decline of the Roman Empire. Pre-Christian [or later non-Christian] Europe was considered “uncivilized”, hence good for little other than a few anecdotes of marauding Goths, Vikings, Picts, and the like.

The so-called “neo-pagan” or “Wiccan” religion invented by post-World War II enthusiasts has further confused the situation by representing a rag-bag of medieval and modern fables and superstitions as a quasi-unified, Hippie-type nature religion supposedly prevalent throughout pre-Christian Europe. Nothing could be further from the truth. Although authorities such as Elliot Rose (#6C) have long since exposed this sham, the Wiccan movement prances contentedly along, blissfully undisturbed by inconvenient facts.

Magus Flowers, in his years of research into ancient Europe, has uncovered the key to the authentic pre-Christian wisdom of that subcontinent. His work in this field is no less significant than that of Champollion with the Rosetta Stone. His findings make possible, for the first time, a true understanding of how the forces of the universe were understood by the European cultures later to be systematically exterminated by Christianity. We learn that these ancient Europeans were not “savages” after all, but had developed cosmologies and philosophies as sophisticated and subtle as those of the Maya and ancient China. While the Temple of Set has always accorded special honor to ancient Egypt, as the original source of our knowledge concerning the Gift of Set, we are no less sensitive to the perception and utilization of that Gift by many other cultures in other geographic regions. What follows is a key to a door which has long been locked.

Introduction
- by Stephen E. Flowers V°

Reason would seem to dictate that now that there are over a dozen of my works either in print or presently in some stage of completion, the corpus of work should be put into some sort of perspective. This perspective will show how first this corpus represents a whole, crystallized and focused (if dynamic) vision, and how this vision is being cast into the objective universe to do its work. For the direct effecting of the objective universe is, indeed, one of the facets of this corpus of work. This is similar to the attitude Aleister Crowley had toward his book projects [see #3V]. However, all of this remains a vision still in emergence. The things I have done up to now have been pieces of a much vaster mosaic. Although the general outlines of this mosaic are clear to me, and so I can see how each of the new pieces fits into the overall scheme, it may not be so for others. Therefore, in order not to leave it to future historians to try to figure out what it is all about, I will here briefly outline the corpus of my work to date (to the beginning of 1990) and the general scheme into which it fits. Only those works which have appeared in commercially published form will be cited. I will also provide some idea of the direction this work will be going in the future - although this aspect remains open to dynamic influences and could change course as new data flow in to be coordinated.

Underlying all of my works are several principles. Most important among these is that there are certain hidden keys to initiation and to Becoming which I seek to find in the methods followed in my work in general. The chief element in this method is the dynamic synthesis of polar extremes - the two most important of these are the subjective and objective universes. Reflections of this process run through the work - from the cosmological model of fire and ice to the psycho-magical dichotomy of Huginn and Muninn, the two Odian ravens. These represent the rational, logical, analytical mind and the nœtic psyche and storehouse of perceived eternal forms respectively. The method underlying all of my works is a planned and deliberate oscillation between logical procedure and nœtic process.

The simplest way to put this is that there is a moving back and forth of focus between the objectively, historically accurate aspects of a tradition and the subjective and vibrant aspects. It is in the eternal ebb and flow, in the dynamic process - unending and without end - that the ultimate synthesis is found - not in a state of being. This is the essence of what I call the “Polarian Method”.

This can be seen in the corpus of material when one couples the contents of Runes and Magic (written as a Ph.D. dissertation according to strict scientific standards) with my first “runic trilogy”, (Futhark, Runelore, and At the Well of Wyrd.) Runes and Magic is the crystalline focal point of the logical, analytical end of the spectrum, while the “runic trilogy” is equally that for the nœtic, intuitive end. Once the entire corpus is viewed from this perspective, I think it takes on more of its meaning as a dynamic whole.

Necessary to the use of this guide are a few words on how it can be used most beneficially. In general it follows the same kind of plan as that of the rest of the Temple of Set Reading List. the codes have been given as Order of the Trapezoid (TRP-) - as those are most harmonious with the overall contents of this list. If I were to advise someone on a course to take in studying this corpus, I would say that Runelore, At the Well of Wyrd, and Futhark (in that order) would be the foundation. From there the priority codes could be used to determine a useful ordering of the other works. [A full course of reading of most of the works on the list is included in the text of The Nine Doors of Midgard.]

All of the works presented here are in the order of their chronological appearance. In the commentaries, I not only try to give a sense of the content and purpose of the work, but also show how it relates to the others in the web-work. In conclusion the present a prospectus for future works and works in progress.

24A. Futhark: A Handbook of Rune Magic by Edred Thorsson. York Beach, ME: Weiser, 1984. (TOS-3) (TRP-2) SF: “In many ways this book would look much different if I were to write it today. The MS for the work was actually finished in 1979, but it was not published until 1984. [This work was actually preceded by another book-length MS originally entitled A Primer of Runic Magic, finished in 1975.] Futhark remains a fertile field for experimentation by free-lance rune magicians, but its contents are actually a bit too influenced by the traditions of the Armanen to be entirely satisfactory to me now.”

24B. Runelore: A Handbook of Esoteric Runology by Edred Thorsson. York Beach, ME: Weiser, 1986. (TOS-3) (TRP-1) SF: “Runelore is basically the lore-curriculum of the Rune-Gild in summary form. It contains a current view of historical runology, esoteric lore concerning the runes, as well as Teutonic cosmology, psychology and theology. It is the first of my works to have been completed after my entry into the Temple of Set. Its contents are basic and essential to understand before serious and authentic work can be undertaken with the Runes.”

24C. Runes and Magic: Magical Formulaic Elements in the Older Runic Tradition by Stephen E. Flowers. Berne: Peter Lang, 1986. (TOS-4) (TRP-5) SF: “This is the published form of my dissertation written at the University of Texas at Austin. It represents an exhaustive study of the older runic inscriptions analyzed as magical formulaic communications based on a semiotic theory of magic - magic as a system of ‘inter-universal communication’ (subjective/objective). It contains introductory material on the theory presented, and then applies that theory to the evidence of the actual inscriptions. This work is thought by most to be a ‘difficult read’, and may be quite hard to find by now. Only 250 copies were printed.”

24D. At the Well of Wyrd: A Handbook of Runic Divination by Edred Thorsson. York Beach, ME: Weiser, 1988. (TOS-3) (TRP-2) SF: “This was the third in the original ‘runic trilogy’, with the other two being Futhark and Runelore. This work takes a highly traditional look at the art and practice of runecasting and the laying of the runestaves.”

24E. The Secret of the Runes by Guido von List. Translated and introduced by Stephen E. Flowers. Rochester, VT: Destiny, 1988. (TOS-4) (TRP-4) SF: “In many ways I see my work as a continuation - a Remanifestation - of works that have been undertaken by others in the past. From the most ancient ancestral Runemasters, to the German and English Romantics, down to the early 20th century rune magicians of Germany. The foundations for this latter group were directly laid by Guido von List, who was certainly more of a magician than he might at first appear. This book is a historical and scientific study of List and his ideology, along with a translation of its most famous expression, Das Geheimnis der Runen.” DW: “This book is interesting as an example of a Magus of the Northern Tradition’s thoughts and methods - and the insights it gives to the subjective side of reawakening a traditional system.”

24F. The Truth about Teutonic Magick by Edred Thorsson. St. Paul, MN: Llewellyn, 1989. (TOS-4) (TRP-4) SF: “This little volume (25 pages) is really a general program for the ‘Teutonic Magick Series’ which I created and for which I am acting as a consulting and acquisitions editor for Llewellyn Publications. In it can be found a general outline of the focus and scope of the practical/magical aspects of the overall work. What also becomes obvious here is that the work has expanded beyond that which I must personally undertake. Other magicians and writers have taken up the banner and are moving outward into the world with it.”

24G. The Galdrabok: An Icelandic Grimoire by Stephen Flowers. York Beach, ME: Weiser, 1989. (TOS-4) (TRP-4) SF: “This volume contains a translation (from Old Icelandic) of the complete text of a Scandinavian book of magic along with a collection of other magical spells and incantations of similar natures. The work shows a continuity of the Germanic (Northern) method of working magic carried over from pre-Christian times. There is also an introductory section which gives a history of magic in Iceland in post-Viking times.” DW: “A good source of Medial Black Magic operations, useful for beginning your own Galdarbok.”

24H. Rune Might: Secret Practices of the German Rune Magicians by Edred Thorsson. St. Paul, MN: Llewellyn, 1989. (TOS-3) (TRP-4) SF: “This whole work really represents a historical footnote to the ‘runic trilogy’, as an outline and practical discussion of the magical methods of the early 20th century German rune magicians. In many ways this is the general and practical companion to The Secret of the Runes by Guido von List. The material contained in Rune Might can also act as an effective bridge between the Germanic tradition and the more usually found ‘Western’ (really Southern) tradition.”
24I. A Book of Troth by Edred Thorsson. St. Paul, MN: Llewellyn, 1989. (TOS-5) (TRP-5) SF: “As Black Magic has existed, and does exist, in a variety of cultures and religious contexts - not only in those in which it is seen as a spiritually criminal kind of activity - this work seeks to help reestablish the more general White Magical (or Religious) tradition of the North. In this more healthy general context of former days, the practice of Black Magic was more completely supported by the common faith - even if it was just as little understood - and would certainly again find such support in a renewed system of the true faith of the North should it actually revive. It is to this end that this book was cast upon the world.”

24J. Fire and Ice: Magical Teachings of the Brotherhood of Saturn, Germany’s Greatest Secret Occult Order by Stephen E. Flowers. St. Paul, MN: Llewellyn, 1990. (TOS-1) (TRP-2) SF: “This is a general and fairly comprehensive introduction to the history, ideology, structure and rituals of the Fraternitas Saturni, which is a Thelemite (but non-Crowleyan) lodge which has dominated the German occult scene since the time of its inception in the late 1920s. With this book, I took a step out and back to my occult roots in the ‘mainstream’ western magical tradition. One of the main reasons for undertaking this study and writing this book was to explore the way in which an Æonic Word finds expression beyond the bounds of its Magus. A preface by Michael A. Aquino is scheduled to appear in future printings.” DW: “Michael Aquino’s preface is available from Runa-Raven Press. Certain technologies from this book have been adapted with great success by Pylons such as the Bull of Ombos and the Black Phœnix. A good study of the Black Flame as perceived before the coming of our Æon.”

24K. Rune Song: A Practical Guide to Rune Galdor by Edred Thorsson. Smithville, TX: Runa-Raven Press, 1993. (TOS-1) (TRP-1) SF: “Rune Song is a combination book and tape package. I have for a long time seen that the pronunciation of the now-exotic-sounding words and phrases of the Teutonic tradition was felt to be a major stumbling-block along the way to learning the lore. This project is designed to remedy that problem. Pronunciation of languages such as Proto-Germanic (the reconstructed language from which all Germanic tongues are derived), Old English, or Old Norse is usually the kind of thing only learned in the Ivory Towers of Academia. With Rune Song I hope to make this kind of information available beyond that sphere.”

24L. The Nine Doors of Midgard by Edred Thorsson. Llewellyn, 1991. (TOS-3) (TRP-1) SF: “This is a basic curriculum in magical training which takes the student from the beginning, assuming no prior training, and in a step-by-step fashion provides exercises and a curriculum of reading and other sorts of training so that by the end of the complete program it is possible to be considered for Naming as a Thegn or Drighten in the Rune-Gild. This program was ten years in the making, and will be published next year. In the meantime it is available for a donation to the Rune-Gild.”

24M. The Book of Ogham by Edred Thorsson. Llewellyn, 1992. (TOS-1) (TRP-4) SF: “The first grand experiment in the use of the Polarian method moving outside of the home base of the Germanic tradition into the kindred Celtic tradition. No magical tradition has been subject to more bastardization than the Celtic, so creating a useful synthesis according to my methods seems a worthwhile endeavor.” DW: “Persons interested in the matrix which produced Ogham may wish also to consult Celtic Heritage: Ancient Tradition in Ireland and Wales by Alwyn and Brinley Rees. London: Thames & Hudson, 1961.”
Supplementary Works
- by Stephen E. Flowers V

There is a corpus of writing which is often essential to the fullest understanding of the depth of the Germanic tradition, and which is not covered in the standard reading list of the Temple of Set. For a guide to these writings, I have provided this supplementary reading list. These works provide a larger context for the understanding of many works in Runelore, and give us a deep level basis for the understanding of the Northern (Indo-European-based) Tradition of the Black Art, which is distinguished in many ways from the Southern (Middle Eastern-based) Tradition.

24N. The Well and the Tree by Paul C. Bauschatz. Amherst: University of Massachusetts Press, 1982. (TOS-3) (TRP-4) SF: “To date this is the most valuable study on the Germanic conceptions of time and the structure of the cosmos. It is a highly scholarly text which nevertheless contains many insights of direct magical use. Reviewed in Runes #VII-2 by Rebecca Lance IV°/M.Tr.” DW: “A good book for the Setian to look at the force of What Has Come Into Being (Xeper) which the ancient Germans called ‘Weird’, and its powerful influence on What Is To Be. Helpful in throwing off mundane ideas of ‘fate’ and a fixed future.”

24O. Gods of the Ancient Northmen by Georges Dumezil, ed., tr. E. Haugen, et al. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1973. (TOS-4) (TRP-3) SF: “This book outlines the connections of Germanic myth and religion with the Indo-European tripartite socio-religious structure. This is not merely a ‘survey’ of Germanic mythology like other books with similar titles. It is an invaluable text to dispel notions that the gods are merely the simple personifications of natural forces, or the ‘deifications’ of mortal men.”

24P. The Myth of the Eternal Return, or Cosmos and History by Mircea Eliade. (= Bollingen Series 46) tr. W. Trask. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1971 [1954]. (TOS-2) (TRP-4) SF: “All works by Eliade are recommended, but this one is the one with which you should start. It explores the mythic meaning of ‘time’, ‘history’, ‘the center’, etc. The ideas contained in this book are fundamental to real understanding of mythic traditions, and necessary to learning ‘to think mythically’.”

24Q. The Road to Hel by Hilda R. Ellis (Davidson). Cambridge: University of Cambridge Press, 1943. (TOS-4) (TRP-4) SF: “This is an important study of the Teutonic concepts of death, the soul, and the other world(s).”

24R. Teutonic Mythology by Jacob Grimm, tr. J.S. Stallybrass. New York: Dover, 1966. 4 vols. (first published 1835). (TOS-4) (TRP-4) SF: “Although some of this work is now out-of-date, it remains a veritable treasure-trove of material from every Teutonic tradition. It includes discussions of all the deities and beings, cosmology, magic, herbs, etc.”

24S. The Poetic Edda by Lee M. Hollander, tr. and ed. Austin, TX: University of Texas Press, 1962. (TOS-3) (TRP-2) SF: “This is the best translation of the Elder Edda into English. Not only is it quite accurate, but it also gives a real feel for the form of the Old Norse poetry - and can in turn serve as a model for the composition of modern Eddic verse in English.”

24T. A History of the Vikings by Gwyn Jones. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1968. (Also a second revised edition.) (TOS-4) (TRP-4) SF: “This is the best general history of the Viking Age available in English. It may be important for some Initiates to gain a fuller understanding for the lives and values of this last great pagan culture of Europe.”

24U. In Search of the Indo-Europeans: Language, Archeology and Myth by J.P. Mallory. London: Thames & Hudson, 1989. (TRP-4) SF: “This up-to-date survey of the whole spectrum of Indo-European studies is essential to understanding the roots of Teutonic thought and society. It is from these seeds and from these roots that the Teutonic tree blooms; understand the seed and you understand the very core of the fruit.”

24V. Volsunga Saga by William Morris, tr. Introduction and glossary by Robert Gutman. New York: Collier, 1962. (TOS-3) (TRP-3) SF: “Gutman’s introduction provides a fine historical, literary, and artistic background to this great saga of the Teutonic peoples. Gutman compares the Volsunga Saga with the German Nibelungenlied and with Wagner’s treatment of the same themes. The saga itself is one of the most important sources for understanding the values of the Viking Age, and it certainly shows us how the Norsemen viewed their own broader Teutonic heritage. The story of a clannic line - with its divine descent (from Odhinn), and its vicissitudes, flowering and decline - is the Teutonic soul epitomized. The saga is of central importance to all seeking the inner meaning of Xeper in the context of the Teutonic tradition.” DW: “Recommended for its portrayal of Xeper, as well as the polar concept of the individual where one axis is ‘myth’ and the other ‘history’. Helpful for anyone planning to leave a magical legacy on this Earth.”

24W. The Prose Edda by Snorri Sturlson, tr. A.G. Brodeur. New York: The Scandinavian American Foundation, 1929. (TOS-4) (TRP-3) SF: “This is by far the best and most complete translation of the Younger Edda in English. It includes not only the Gylfaginning, but also the Skaldskaparmal (which is not completely provided in the Jean I. Young translation. Especially useful are Brodeur’s interpretations of the proper names in the text.”

24X. Egil’s Saga by Snorri Sturlson, tr. H. Palsson and P. Edwards. Harmondsworth: Penguin, 1976. (TRP-4) SF: “This saga is the greatest study of a rune magician from the elder age. There are many mysteries contained in this saga - some of them not quite so obvious as the many times in which Egill uses rune magic and poetry to alter the objective universe.” DW: “Good portrait of a Black Magician.”

24Y. Myth and Religion of the North by E.O.G. Turville-Petre. New York: Holt Rinehart & Winston, 1964. (TOS-4) (TRP-3) SF: “Turville-Petre’s book is the best survey of old Scandinavian religion in English, and an excellent one by any standard. He discusses the sources of our knowledge, all the divinities, the divine kings, heroes, guardian spirits, temples and objects of worship, sacrifice, death, and cosmogony and cosmology.”

24Z. Runarmal-I: The Runa Talks (Summer 1991) by Stephen Edred Flowers. Smithville, TX: Runa-Raven Press, 1996. (TOS-1) DW: “This is the essential text for persons seeking Runa. It is much more universal than Magus Flowers’ other books, and contains the essential relationship between Xeper and Runa. I consider it one of the most important magical texts working in the world today.”

24AB. Green Runa by Edred Thorsson. Smithville, TX: Runa-Raven Press, 1996. (TOS-3) DW: “This is a collection of Magus Flowers’ writings 1978-1985. It has many useful nuggets, such as: the importance of learning languages, a magical endeavor which Runa-Raven now supports by keeping a collection of learning aids for sale; ‘A Curious Curse Formula’ revealing the secret of the Nine Angles as an operant technology; material on holy signs; ‘Rune-Wisdom and Race’ (a good essay for debunking the charge that you’re a Nazi if you study the Runes); the Rite of Sumble; etc. A great supplement to any of Magus Flowers’ works. A magical biography of Magus Flowers by James A. Chisholm, Honorary K.Tr., is included.”

24AC. The New Comparative Mythology: An Anthropological Assessment of the Theories of Georges Dumezil by C. Scott Littleton. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1973. (TOS-3) (SKM-3) DW: “This is the best introduction to the work of Dumezil, who opened the way for studying Indo-European peoples. The discovery of the threefold division that underlies the thought of ancient Germans, Latins, and Iranians was Dumezil’s contribution to the Reawakening (though he may have been influenced by #24E). Very little material on the Germanic peoples in this book, but very useful for understanding the Weird of the Indo-Europeans.”

Appendix 15: The First Year

- by Michael A. Aquino V°
Scroll of Set #I-10, June XI/1976

It has now been almost a year since the reestablishment of the Temple of Set. I would like to review that year for you, touching upon both the highlights and the problems we have experienced. Then I will outline the plans we have for the next year, as well as some long-range projections. If you would like to discuss any of this material in greater detail, feel welcome to contact the Priest or Priestess of Set nearest you.

At this time last year the situation was chaotic. The Church of Satan had disintegrated, and absolutely no plans for a successor organization had been made. Until the appearance of the Book of Coming Forth by Night on the night of June 21-22, almost no research into pre-Satan concepts had been done. Nor, upon close examination, would the old administrative/executive structures of the Church of Satan have been of any use to the Temple of Set. In fact, they were practically non-existent, because the structure, Priesthood, program, membership, and policies of the Church of Satan could be - and were - changed at a moment’s notice by decision of Anton LaVey.

Creating a new organization that would be merely a carbon copy of the old one was out of the question, else we could eventually expect to encounter the same problems as the Church of Satan. Moreover, the Æon of Set embodies a sense of purpose or direction (Xeper) that did not exist in the aimless, hedonistic Age of Satan. The Temple of Set would have to be designed to grapple with problems and undertake projects that would have been completely beyond the reach of the Church of Satan, as well as of any previous religious/philosophical group.

And so we faced two general tasks: (1) Creation of the structure of the Temple of Set, and (2) Defining and introducing the direction in which the Temple should be moving.

The groundwork for the first task was laid in July, when the Priesthood worked out and approved a written framework for the Temple consisting of eight Articles of Incorporation and ten By-Laws with 79 sections. These provisions were given the force of law by incorporation of the Temple of Set within the State of California. By October the Secretary of State formally approved the Temple of Set as a legitimate religious institution, thus granting us full rights as a tax-exempt, non-profit organization.

This was, however, just the beginning. In the Church of Satan the Priesthood had no voice in the running of the organization, and the Council of Nine was merely an informal sounding-board for the High Priest. In the Temple of Set the Priesthood has had to accustom itself to possessing and using a great deal of influence over the entire Temple, and the Council of Nine is now in a position where it holds ultimate responsibility for the administration of the Temple - being distinct from and superior to the office of the High Priest.

Hence there was an urgent need for the high-speed transmission of information throughout the III°+ levels of the Temple. To meet this need I sent out a series of bulletins from my office, keeping the Priesthood advised on moment-to-moment developments. I have also corresponded extensively with our officials, amassing a 12-month file of letters that is about the size of a major city’s telephone book! Individual officials have also been communicating just as extensively with one another - something that never happened in the Church of Satan. The effect of this is extremely important, although it may not be automatically apparent to the general membership: It is that every initiate to the Setian Priesthood, whatever his location, possesses a full and reliable understanding of the design of the Temple of Set and its position at a current point in time.

All administrative services of the Temple to the general membership are now being coordinated through a new office - that of Executive Director. Priest William F. Murray, who holds this position, has made it the veritable nerve-center of our operations, controlling and/or coordinating finances, supplies, insignia, special research projects, records, and an endless parade of special-action developments.

Working closely with the Executive Director are a growing number of specialized departments, councils, and commissions across the continent. Data-processing is handled by Magister Grumboski in Michigan. The Scroll of Set is edited and published in San Jose, California, by Magistra Wendall. Plans for a research data bank are being developed in San Francisco by Priest R.K. Barrett. Council of Nine operations are being developed by the Chairman, Magister Ethel, in Washington, D.C. Scientific research is being done by Priest Holt in Georgia. Ceremonial and ritual magic matters are coordinated by Priest DeCecco in Massachusetts. Communications systems are being evaluated by Priest Harris in Los Angeles. Long-range financial work is being done by our Treasurer, Magister Seago, in Santa Barbara. Magistra Sinclair, also in Santa Barbara, will be administrating our discount/direct-purchasing book-order system [to be instituted this summer].

The latest special agency of the Temple is the Department of Contingency Planning, headed by Priest Norton in Michigan. The DCP is divided into a number of functional divisions, each concerned with specific matters with which the Temple may have to deal in the future.

What makes these accomplishments all the more impressive is the fact that the Temple is still relatively small in size. At this time last year the mailing list of the Church of Satan contained about 350 names, of which about 100 were either complimentary memberships or non-member subscriptions to the Cloven Hoof. Only the 250 regular members were told about the Temple of Set, and then only about fifty of them were accepted into the Temple as qualified initiates. The entire process of notification, information, application, and selection took about the first four or five months, and since then we have grown by about 30 additional Initiates. This is due in large part to our refusal to advertise, employ sensational publicity, or otherwise seek members by any “mass” process. We believe that each new Setian should be introduced to the Temple on an individual basis. Thus the Temple will grow relatively slowly, but the quality and interest of its initiates will be high.

The problems we have encountered fall generally under the heading of “growing pains”. On occasion it has not been clear what the extent and limits of a given official’s authority are, or what others should be involved, or what standards Initiates of various degrees are expected to observe. There are a few people doing a lot of work and a lot of people doing less. As yet we do not have a system for bringing the Temple of Set to the attention of qualified persons who may not know one of our present Initiates. These are things we must work out as we go along, being careful to avoid over-reaction to any one incident.

I am somewhat cautious in predicting the exact course of events in our second year, because so much has happened in the last twelve months that was far beyond our initial speculations. Yet certain concrete goals can be identified: Our first book-length document, The Book of Coming Forth by Night: Analysis and Commentary, is now available to Initiates. By fall we hope to have the initial edition of the Ruby Tablet of Set, a cumulative encyclopedia for our Initiates, ready for release. Designed in loose-leaf format, the Ruby Tablet will be added to and revised over the years in order to reflect the very latest information at our disposal. Later this summer an expanded and revised reading list will be distributed, and a limited system of book-ordering by mail at a below-retail discount will be attempted. If it works well, we will gradually expand the system to every available book on our reading list.

Almost all of our informational papers will be revised and updated. High priority will go to increasing the budget of the Scroll of Set. Via the Ruby Tablet additional material on ritual magic will be circulated. We hope to put out some general guidelines on local financing, regional conclaves, and the rights and responsibilities of the Temple as a tax-exempt religious organization. And, of course, all of the operations that the Temple has begun this year will continue to grow in their own areas.

As a Setian you are welcome to participate in whatever activities of the Temple you find most interesting - or to recommend new ones in which you might like to concentrate your own endeavors. For names and addresses of officials in each area, contact the Priest or Priestess with whom you are working and explain your special interests. But don’t sit back and expect the Temple to entertain you “$15 worth each year”, because that is not the way an initiatory religious society works. The initiative for your advancement and education rests with you; the Temple is a sort of “institutional accessory” to help you.

One year ago none of us expected that the Temple of Set would come this far in such a short time. What will it be like in another year, another ten years, a hundred years? I can’t venture a specific guess, but I can tell you that it will be totally unlike any institution this planet has ever seen before - except for the first Temple of Set. Xeper.
During the course of a recent guest appearance on a radio talk show, a woman called in on the telephone and asked me if I were aware of the “psychic hazards” inherent in the practice of Satanism and Black Magic.

I must confess that her question jolted me a little. Having been so long and happily practicing these arts myself, it becomes easy to forget occasionally that there are still some people who claim to have studied the subject in depth and yet still adhere to such archaic, obsolete ideas. On examination of the ideas themselves, however, it becomes apparent that these people simply do not understand the actual nature of the perils against which they so ardently warn us. I therefore feel it is time for the matter to be presented from the inside, from the point of view of the practicing Black Magician rather than that of someone who has only skimmed the surface of the subject.

So what about these dangers, then? Do they in fact exist? Yes, they do, in much the same sense that if you tell a child a frightening story, he will have a nightmare. [To see just how appropriate an analogy this is, examine in the light of logic and contemporary scientific knowledge the philosophical bases of the average Wiccan or other “white-light” occultist’s beliefs.]

The principal hazards cited by occult “authorities” generally fall into two categories: the summoning or inadvertent arousal of uncontrolled forces or entities which will turn up and destroy the would-be magician, and possession by some malevolent force or entity. The proficient black magician recognizes both concepts as the absurdities they are, yet these things do seem to happen to some who attempt to use magic. Why?

The first reason is the manner in which the average person approaches the practice of sorcery. He is the victim of a Judæo-Christian religious and moral tradition which conditions him to believe that man alone is nothing, that he must place his trust and reliance in a power or being outside himself. He is also led to believe that sorcerous delvings are sinful and forbidden and will lead to the inevitable destruction of the student. A resultant attempt to justify such experimentation is the current emphasis on “White” magic.

If the student has been lucky enough to avoid a Judæo-Christian type of indoctrination, he is still generally ensnared by a magical orientation based on the same principles and teaching that some forces are “good” and others “evil”, and that he should concern himself exclusively with the good or “positive” and avoid the evil or “negative”. It is easy to see how this approach to morality and magic leads to frustration and to the repression of perfectly natural feelings and desires - such as lust and anger - into the subconscious. These may later erupt from within as twisted monsters, dæmons, elementals, or powerful compulsions and obsess the student. St. Jerome’s account of his temptation in the desert is an excellent illustration of this:
and my frame chilled with fasting, yet my mind was burning with desire and the fires of lust kept bubbling up before me when my flesh was as good as dead.

Indeed, the entire history of the Middle Ages is a case in point, as G. Rattray Taylor so well points out:

In the earlier part of the Middle Ages what we chiefly find is frank sensuality, with which the church at first battles in vain. Then, as it improves its systems of control, we find a mounting toll of perversion and neurosis.

Springing as they do from the depths of the subconscious mind, these monsters may be powerful indeed. The student, unwilling to admit that such things could arise from within himself, naturally prefers to perceive them as some sort of Influence from Outside. The student who encounters such phenomena is often too shaken to experiment further, and, bound by repressive conditioning, never penetrates past these shadows to confront the awesome majesty of his true nature.

So much for these “monsters from the id”. If the practice of sorcery is correctly approached, you will probably never be confronted by them. If you are, then recognition of their actual nature should enable you to easily dispel them. If it does not, then you are the type of person who is likely to become possessed.

Possession is supposedly the control of a human being by some outside intelligence, demon, or even the Devil himself. Now, logically speaking, one would think that any Devil worth his salt would find better things to do with his time than invade someone’s body and terrify his friends and neighbors into scurrying for the nearest clergyman and Getting Right with God. Such a project would be senseless and self-defeating.

We will understand the situation more clearly if we once again look within ourselves rather than outside. What I have said above concerning subconscious repression of elements of the psyche which are regarded as undesirable is just as applicable here, but so is an additional factor: the desire for attention and recognition. Let’s face it - being possessed by the Devil, here and now, is far more exciting than having been Bridey Murphy or an Atlantean High Priest in a fantasized former lifetime. In addition, possession frees the “victim” from all responsibility for his actions: he is not the one who murdered his mother [whom he secretly hated for years]; it was the daemon who controlled him.

Possession allows one to express himself in socially-unacceptable ways and get away with it. It allows one to bathe in attentive sympathy or to provoke fear in those one dislikes, and gives one an excuse and sense of purpose for his otherwise-useless existence and his inability to cope with the pressures of life. In short, possession is never the “victim’s” problem; rather it is his subconscious solution to problems and conflicts which he cannot resolve in any other way. A good idea catches on quickly, too: remember the rash of “possession” cases following the release of The Exorcist?

The approach of the Setian to the sorcerous arts is from a basis of rational awareness which allows him to avoid the pitfalls which entrap others. He places no reliance or dependence on any force outside himself. A materialist, he recognizes from the outset that the powers with which he deals are his own. He perceives “God” as simply the natural order of things: a mindless, non-conscious, impersonal cosmos which is in no way concerned with him or with anything he may do.

The Prince of Darkness is seen as a finite intelligence greater than that of man, but is viewed as a guide and mentor in no way “supernatural” and certainly not a “reverse Jehovah” to be blindly worshipped and obeyed. In the Biblical myth, Satan was cast out of heaven because he decided that, rather than serve God, he wanted to become a god himself. The Setian finds an allegorical inspiration in this and feels he can do no less if he is to be worthy of the title. The Dark Lord having infused man with knowledge and intelligence, which is what separates man from the natural order (the Biblical account, though a myth, is at least correct in that respect), man now has the key to turn the universal inertia to his amusement and make of the Universe his playground: to become, in short, a divine being in his own right.

To worship the Prince of Darkness in the Judæo-Christian sense of the term would restrict the magician’s own evolution and the development of his own powers and capabilities; hence the Setian does all he can to become more godlike by working to develop his mind and his abilities, and by learning to exert an increasing control over himself, his environment, and his chosen sphere of social influence.

In a ritual context the Setian may use candles and incantations and call the names of various demons from a number of different myth-cycles. He may even invent his own. However these are merely psychological props designed to stimulate the flow of emotional force which will ensure a successful magical working. He deliberately engages in a form of controlled, constructive fantasy in order to attain very real objective ends. And, because he recognizes it for the fantasy it is, he is able to manipulate it in any way he desires and control it rather than being controlled by it.

The practice of Setian ritual magic, in a nutshell, involves the deliberate release of forces from the Dæmonic or subconscious personality under conditions which are controlled by the magician. This has two principal effects on the practitioner: first, instead of driving a wedge between the conscious and subconscious and setting them against each other, it causes them to work together, unifying and strengthening the entire personality. This in turn results in the development in the practitioner of abilities, powers of concentration, and forms of will completely unknown to him before.

Magical rituals are not valid for influencing the Prince of Darkness; nor are they intended to do so. No entity as advanced and sophisticated as Set is likely to be impressed by ceremonial theatrics. Ritual magic procedures are a tool for the magician’s personal use, which he can employ as a means of learning to focus his will and accomplish his goals. Once a certain evolutionary level is reached, he will find that they are no longer necessary to produce effects which he formerly could not obtain without them.

Paradoxical though it may seem, it is at this point that ritual may become most meaningful to the practitioner. He comes to perceive the dæmonic entities on whom he calls for aid as symbolic representations of aspects of his own personality, and the ritual now serves to make him totally conscious of the glory of his own unique Self.

He realizes that he has no need to ask favors of the Prince of Darkness, for he now knows - and demonstrates in every aspect of his existence - that the greatest gift of Set has already been bestowed upon him: the full awareness of the power of his own Will. Such a Setian has become Elect.
Appendix 17: The Gods of Christmas

- by Margaret Wendall IV°

Scroll of Set #I-4, December 1975

“In the latter days a pure virgin shall conceive, and when the child is born a star will appear. When you behold the star follow wheresoever it shall lead you and adore the child, offering gifts with humility. He is the Almighty Word which created the Heavens.” This prophesy came true on the Winter Solstice, December 25th by the Julian calendar. The god was called the “Unconquered Sun” and founded a religion based on aspirations of moral purity and the hope of immortality. He initiated several sacraments, among them baptism and the use of consecrated bread, wine and water. His worship included both communion and fasts; the leaders of his faith - both men and women - were celibate, and his priests were called, “Father”. He was regarded as the mediator between god and man, and he gave his life to ensure mankind’s future happiness.

Jesus? No - Mithra, the founder of a religion at least 600 years older than Christianity. Mithraism, which contains many elements borrowed by Christianity, was a very real threat to the early Christian Church Fathers, who called it a “work of the Devil” to seduce men from what Christians considered the “true faith”. Mithraism was forcefully suppressed in the Mediterranean regions by the time of Constantine.

He was born in a cave when his father went to the city to pay taxes. His birth was saluted by angels, and a light shone in the heavens. His parents were visited by a prophet who proclaimed the new-born child’s divine descent. His family fled to avoid persecution by a wicked king.

Jesus? No - Krishna, whose birthday is celebrated on the 25th day of Savarana, which corresponds to our December, and which is the Winter Solstice. Krishna’s life parallels Jesus’; in Hinduism he is regarded as an incarnation of god, and is called “He who takes away the sins of the world”. Millions of his followers still celebrate his birthday by decorating their homes and by the presentation of gifts to relatives and friends.

He was born of a virgin at the Winter Solstice. His birth was heralded by a star and singing angels. A wise man visited him at his birth and prophesied greatness. His followers call him the “Key of Righteousness”.

Jesus? No - the Buddha, whose life greatly parallels Jesus’ life. Today, many Buddhists not only celebrate the Buddha’s birthday, but their own, on January First, just eight days from the old Winter Solstice, and in Japanese Buddhism, “Bodhi Day” is December 8th. Both Buddhism and Christianity have “overcome” obstacles in their paths by absorbing them into their traditions, and today there are as many Buddhist sects as there are Christian denominations [although Buddhists of one sect treat others with a respect totally lacking in Christianity].

“Unto us a child is born this day!” In pre-Christian Rome this song was commonly heard on the Winter Solstice, December 25th, the birthday of the Sun. The festival was held during Saturnalia, and both were national festivals. All work stopped, and all roles were reversed. Master became slave and slave became master, a mock king who represented Saturn, god of sowing and husbandry, was elected.

In Egypt a Solar Nativity Ritual was celebrated on December 24th at midnight, when people walked through the streets singing: “The Virgin has brought forth! The light is waxing!” Isis, the mother of Horus, is sometimes pictured with the child Horus in her arms, wearing a crown circled with twelve stars, not too vaguely reminiscent of Christian pictures of Mary.

The Garden of Gethsemane, where Jesus is traditionally said to have wept before his crucifixion, was sacred to the god Adonis, whose birthday was celebrated at the Winter Solstice in Jerusalem. Adonis was Astarte’s lover; Astarte was the eastern Mediterranean Venus, or Morning Star. The word “Bethlehem” (the traditional birthplace of Jesus) means “House of Bread”, and Adonis was also god of corn.

Many other gods, too numerous to be named, are reputed to have been born at the Winter Solstice. Nearly every spiritual religion, major and minor, has had at least one god born at the Winter Solstice, when the “old Sun” died and a “new Sun” was reborn.

The first Christians did not celebrate Christmas because they did not believe that Jesus was a god. He was not deified until 325 CE, at which time his birth was celebrated on January 6th. Pope Julius I moved Jesus’ birthday to December 25th in an attempt to assimilate non-Christians and to prevent Christians from participating in the older festivals of the Solar birthday. Pope Leo the Great rebuked Christians for placing more emphasis on the birth of the Sun than on “the one who created the Sun”.

Christians for centuries have accepted December 25th as the birth- day of Jesus on blind faith, although there is no real evidence anywhere to support the claim that he was born on that day. Astronomical evidence indicates that Jesus was not even born in 1 A.D.! Some authorities believe that the entire legend of Jesus’ birth is composed of legends borrowed from other faiths combined with astrological computations - all of which have been fictionalized and personified by theological writers. Christmas is observed on December 25th because of the shrewd observation of the early Christian fathers that if Christianity were to conquer the world, it would have to relax some of its too-rigid principles and accept at least the old holidays, turning them into Christian festivals with the same meanings.

Should Setians celebrate Christmas? To celebrate it as the birthday of Jesus would be pure hypocrisy for us, who believe the birth of Jesus as god to be mere legend. But there is no reason for us not to celebrate the South (Winter) Solstice. There is no reason for a Setian not to send greeting cards to relatives and friends at this time of year, or to attend the office party, or even to have a “Solstice Tree”. In fact not doing these things would set us apart from the rest of our community and make us look suspicious in the eyes of our neighbors.

This particular South Solstice we have something of our own to celebrate. The Æon of Set is six months old. This may make our Temple sound like a mere babe-in-arms in comparison to the other religions of the world, but the announcement of the Æon six months ago has far greater implications for the world than all of them combined. We who are Setians are at last freed to Become.
In 1931 Carl Anderson, an American physicist, discovered the existence of positively-charged electrons. Until this time electrons had been known only as negatively-charged “particles” [the purpose of the quotation marks will become clear later] in orbit around a nucleus in an atom. Anderson was studying cosmic-ray electrons passing through a strong magnetic field, and noticed that while one-half of the electrons were bent as would be expected according to their charge, the other half were bent in an exactly opposite direction, indicating an opposite charge. These positively charged electrons became known as “positrons” (sort of anti-electrons).

This shed some light on Dirae’s “hole” theory in that these positrons were later shown to behave in the same manner as the “holes” postulated by Dirae. Later experiments showed that positrons could be produced by bombarding metal plates with gamma rays. Simply, a gamma ray striking the nucleus of an atom has all of its energy converted into electrons (e-) and positrons (e+). Both of these particles are cast off from the atom to be eliminated by other atoms. The electrons collide with other electrons and eventually find homes in other atomic structures. The positrons collide with other electrons to produce gamma rays. One positron colliding with one electron produces two gamma rays proceeding in opposite directions from one another. Considering the density of electrons surrounding us, it is easy to see that positrons are annihilated or converted almost instantaneously.

In October 1965 Emilio Segre discovered negatively-charged protons, and later negative or anti-neutrons. It has since been determined that all of the recently discovered particles have their opposites or anti’s.

Now, since anti-particles have been proven to exist, what about our Universe? First let us look at the “creation” of the Universe in terms of “Genesis II” from the Cloven Hoof #IV-7. We will briefly restate the theory to serve as a point of reference:

In the “beginning” the Universe was filled with radiation. This radiation became partially transformed into equal amounts of matter and antimatter. The particles thus formed began to draw toward each other, and toward a center. During this process, particles of matter met other particles of matter and fused yielding larger bodies of matter. The same occurred with the antimatter. Matter met antimatter in some cases, and both were “annihilated” forming radiation. Eventually, the radiation pressure became greater than the force of attraction between the particles and bodies proceeding toward the common center, and caused them to retreat from each other. The “body” formed by the proximity of the particles attracted to each other is basically what George Gamow termed an “ylem” in his “big bang” theory of universal expansion.

But is the Universe made up of both matter and antimatter? We do not know, and, to date, there does not appear to be any way to prove it. We know that our solar system is composed entirely of matter; equally, we are fairly certain that our entire galaxy is composed only of matter [if this were not the case, we would detect intense gamma radiation from all parts of the galaxy - even considering the distances between atoms in inter-galactic space]. Considering that there is more evidence to support the existence of proportional amounts of matter and antimatter in the Universe, we shall adopt this for use...
In our theories.

In the beginning was the radiation, and the energy was without mass. And the energy came together to form matter and antimatter.

\[ 0=+1-1 \]

By way of explanation let us bring up the “law of the conservation of mass & energy” developed from the “law of the conservation of mass” and the “law of the conservation of energy.” Briefly it states that mass and energy can never be created or destroyed, but they can be converted from one to the other. Utilizing this Law we get:

\[ E=m+a \]

where \( E \) = energy - in terms of mass, 0; \( m \) = matter or +1; and \( a \) = antimatter or -1. Hence:

\[ 0=+1-1 \]

=The creation of the Universe from “nothing”.

In 1906 Albert Einstein developed his theory of the relationship between mass and energy:

\[ E = mc^2 \]

where \( E \) = energy, \( m \) = mass, and \( c \) = velocity of light. Stated briefly, any appearance of energy is necessarily accompanied by the disappearance of a small amount of mass.

A French physicist named Louis de Broglie suggested that electrons were not particles but rather waves. This fouled up the entire system of thinking that had considered electrons to be little hard spheres.

Later a Viennese physicist named Schrodinger developed de Broglie’s idea into a system termed “wave mechanics”. This system explained quantum phenomena by attributing the functions of waves to protons and electrons. [What is quantum? I hear you cry. Quantum theory is the theory that energy does not flow smoothly in arbitrarily small amounts from the radiating body, but flows in the form of particles or quanta. Quantum is the singular of quanta.]

Thus electrons became viewed as undulating charges of electrical energy, and atoms as systems of waves. This tends to simplify and explain the “law of the conservation of mass and energy” as stated earlier.

Now you are probably wondering where Set comes into all of this.

In the beginning was Set, and Set was without form. He came together in creation to give rise to HarWer, that Set might define himself.

Set is the ageless intelligence - a form of energy. In the beginning Set equaled 0, nothing in terms of mass. In creation he united with himself to give rise to mass and anti-mass - matter and antimatter (HarWer).

Set continues in the form of energy while he continues in the form of mass, and he continually converts from one to the other [see the “law of the conservation of mass and energy” and \( E=mc^2 \)]. Hence, with the creation of the Universe came the definition of Set (potentially), and this creation was from Set whose existence was as nothing.
I am the Ageless Intelligence of the Universe. I created HarWer that I might define my Self. But HarWer, my opposite Self, is a strange and fitful presence. I, Set am my Self distinct from the order of the cosmos, yet am ordered in and of my Self. HarWer I was when I was once part of the cosmos and could achieve identity only by becoming what the cosmic order was not. By HarWer I cancelled the imbalance, leaving a void in which true creation could take form as Set.

- Book of Coming Forth by Night

The first part of the above quote is explained in the preceding paragraph. The second part is, however, a bit confusing. Set states that he is distinct from the order of the cosmos. This appears to contradict what we have stated earlier (i.e. that Set continues in the form of energy while he continues in the form of mass).

Before we get involved in this, let us start at the beginning of the second part of the quote: “But HarWer, my Opposite Self, is a strange and fitful presence.” Set, in the form of energy, gave rise to HarWer (matter/antimatter). HarWer’s purpose was [and is] to define Set, and this is accomplished by the use of opposites [i.e. day has no meaning without the existence of night]. When Set is energy, HarWer is matter/antimatter, and vice versa.

The Universe is basically ordered, but there are certain things that disrupt this order [we will not even consider mankind!]. The existence of antimatter (anti-particles) in a system composed entirely of matter is one such disruption. Hence HarWer as a “strange and fitful presence”.

“I, Set, am my Self distinct from the order of the cosmos, yet am ordered in and of my Self.” Contradiction of our above statements? No! By means of explanation let us define “order”. According to Funk and Wagnall’s Standard Encyclopedic Dictionary, “order” is defined as “a condition in which there is a methodical, proper, or harmonious arrangement of things”. We shall discount “methodical” and “proper” and concern ourselves with “harmonious”.

The same source defines “harmonious” as “made up of sounds, colors, or other elements that combine agreeably ...” The key word here is “agreeably”. When matter and antimatter collide, they produce an explosion, which we hardly find agreeable if we do not plan it.

Remember we are concerned with Set and the creation of the Universe; the “creation” of matter [and antimatter], and - since we are matter [most of us are anyway] - we are ergo concerned with ourselves.

Since Set has communicated with us [through the Book of Coming Forth by Night], he is concerned with us. Therefore our opinions count, and if we consider something disagreeable, it is disagreeable. Set as an Intelligence is obviously able to think, in which case he must consider some things disagreeable. Hence Set is “distinct from the Order of the Cosmos” as man is distinct from the order of the cosmos [we do many things which are against logic and order].

Set is “ordered in and of himself” as man is ordered in and of himself. Any “Intelligence” is in a sense un-orderly in that the intelligence gives it the ability to defy the order.

“HarWer I was when I was once part of the Cosmos ...” When Set was totally of the cosmos [“Cosmos” is defined, again by Funk and Wagnall’s, as “the world or universe considered as an orderly system” (emphasis mine)]. I.e. when Set was pre-intelligence, he was merely radiation which was partially converted to matter/antimatter (HarWer) according to the above stated “law of the conservation of mass and energy”. Set was HarWer (and Set) in the “beginning”.

- 479 -
“... and could achieve identity by becoming what the cosmic order was not.” The cosmic order was radiation. To achieve identity [by utilizing HarWer] Set had to become matter/antimatter (HarWer) which the cosmic order at the time was not.

“By HarWer I cancelled the imbalance, leaving a void in which true creation could take form as Set.” By becoming HarWer, Set cancelled the imbalance by becoming mass, along with energy. [Back to the “law”.] This left a “void” in the sense that “void” is defined as “a breach of surface or matter” [again Funk and Wagnall’s]. The conversion of matter to energy leaves a “void”. Similarly the conversion of energy to matter leaves a “void”. [Sounds a little like Dirac’s “hole” theory.]

By creating this “void” in such a manner, the way is established in which “true creation” can “take form as Set”. We are now back at the beginning and the creation of the Universe.

Xepert! Behold: Everything is Set, and Set is everything!

Among the abilities necessary for the performance of successful ritual magic are two which are very infrequent: mental concentration and vivid visualization. In light of this fact it would seem that more magicians would actively seek to develop these abilities in themselves than do. Why they do not is a mixture of three reasons: human inertia (i.e. it’s hard work), a philosophical distaste for techniques by meditative Eastern religions, and - most infrequently - possession of inborn talent so that artificial development is not necessary.

If you can already visualize whatever scene you desire at will with utmost vividness, then read no further. But if you cannot, then you should know that there are exercises you can use to develop your mental imagery to greater vividness.

In the Church of Satan yoga was avoided because of its linkage with philosophically-repugnant religions. And indeed most of yoga is useless to the Black Magician. It should, however, be noted that yoga of all types played a very major role in Crowley’s system.

There is one branch of yoga which should be of great interest to us: Raja Yoga - or, in English, mental concentration and development exercises. Let me point out that I am not advocating mantra chanting or octopus-like body postures. What I am advocating is a series of exercises designed to concentrate the normal mental “flashlight beam” until it has the strength and brilliance of a laser.

The assimilation of these techniques from the East need not include any of the [falsely] related philosophy. If the Red Chinese developed a new weapon, it would be insane for us to refuse to develop our own version of it because the original was “contaminated” by “Mao is god” propaganda.

For several years I myself have used mental concentration exercises and found them extremely helpful in achieving more intense levels of concentration and visualization in the ritual chamber. It seems logical to me that if one thoroughly practices his magical “scales”, he will be more able to play a magical “symphony” at a later date. For this reason I would like to bring these techniques to the attention of the Temple membership, and to present brief instructions and hints for those who are interested.

So, assuming that one is interested in developing a Setian set (!) of concentration exercises, how does he go about it?

Firstly particular areas of weakness should be ascertained. Can you blank your mind at will? Can you retain a clear visual image for a few minutes? But whatever you do, don’t just assume you can. Try it and see. If you don’t like what you find when you test yourself, here is an outline for a series of exercises:

1. Learn to be fully conscious of what you are thinking and doing, when you wish to be conscious of it.
2. Next sit quietly and watch the flow of thoughts through your mind, trying at all times to be fully aware of what you are thinking. The goal of both of the above exercises is to ensure your awareness of your own mental and physical functions: to ensure that you do not get carried away by a thought which you do not intend to think.
3. Having mastered watching the flow of your thoughts, learn to stop your mind upon a particular thought at will and follow it with full intent. This exercise is mastered if, when desired, you can follow one particular thought for ten minutes with no extraneous thought intruding.

(4) Learn to reject all thoughts and to blank your mind. This is perhaps the most difficult of the exercises listed so far and will not be quickly mastered, but it is essential to clear image formation. Let me draw an analogy. If one wishes to draw a picture upon a blackboard, he must first erase that blackboard. Once you can erase your blackboard, the time for drawing begins.

(5) Learn to visualize things, people, places, and scenes “as clearly as if you were there”. You should start at the bottom and work up. Begin visualizing spoons, matches, and so forth, moving on later to people and other large objects. When you can retain a clear image for a few minutes, you have mastered this exercise.

Let me point out that these exercises are work: they are not “fun” to do. Just like the countless hours of practice required to be proficient in the martial arts, concentration exercises require tenacity, will, and a firm desire to increase one’s magical abilities.

I strongly recommend the mental [and these only!] development exercises in the first three steps of Franz Bardon’s Initiation into Hermetics. Bardon was, as I have remarked before, exceedingly “white” and - most any psychiatrist would judge - insane. His works must be approached by the Black Magician with extreme care for these reasons. The book is fun to read in English because of the oft-times ludicrous translation from the German.

Also worth having is Christmas Humphreys’ Concentration and Meditation. Humphreys was a Buddhist and this distasteful philosophy contaminates the whole work, yet there are many worthwhile hints in it.

I have presented the basics here. If you are interested, the way is open to you. As usual, any questions or comments are welcome, and I will answer them as soon as I can.
Appendix 20: Austin Osman Spare: For Those Artistically Minded

- by Leon Marvell I°

Scroll of Set #1-10, June 1976

Imagine a canvas upon which strange faces appear from within storms of vibrant color. Around these mysterious visages swirl twisted limbs and grotesque exaggerations of the human form. Perhaps the shapes within are human, perhaps not; one is never sure. The painting might be called erotic, certainly it is unnerving in an indefinable way, and to the unaware it might be classified in dualistic moral terms as “evil.”

The painting I have just described is a work by Austin Osman Spare. It is one of many on similar themes and executed for a singular purpose: it is a work in the magical system of a sorcerer who has only very recently received any attention in occult circles.

The son of a City of London policeman, Spare was born at midnight on the last day of 1888. He showed exceptional artistic ability when very young, and in his early teens won a scholarship to the Royal College of Art. The great painter John Singer Sargent hailed Spare as a “genius”. Spare was not yet 19 years old.

In the early 1930s Professor Mario Praz in his The Romantic Agony described Austin Spare as a “Satanic occultist”. An impressive title, and Spare was an impressive man.

He was a powerful mystic, having a strong romantic streak as all true sorcerers must have - that refusal to take things at face value, the sense of meaning and purpose. He claimed to be a reincarnation of William Blake and was, perhaps, considerably influenced by his predecessor [although his work, if it resembled any other artist at all, reminds me much more of Hieronymous Bosch].

Spare claimed that at a very early age he was befriended by a “Mrs. Peterson” who was a witch and initiated him into the secrets of magic. From this moment onwards, until he died the death of the poverty-stricken in 1956, Spare never ceased to be wholly devoted to the Black Arts.

He was for a short time a member of Crowley’s Order of the A.'A.'. However he broke with Crowley, possibly because of a personality clash, but most probably because he disapproved of Crowley’s “Hermeticism” and Cabalism. Spare was already developing an intensely powerful and individual system of his own that rejected all time-honored “Rosicrucian” traditions and, in preference, utilized the ideas of Freud and Jung. [I am not sure of the Jungian influence; however, it would have lent support to his ideas of atavisms - the archetypes of the collective unconscious.] Crowley later reproduced some of Spare’s drawings in The Equinox and his Manual of Geomancy.

Spare’s magical system evolved through his first important work, The Book of Pleasure (Self-Love), published privately in 1913, and later in The Focus of Life. Two concepts were basic to his philosophy: those of Zos and Kia.

Zos was the self considered as a whole - that is, the entire life of an individual, a succession of existences or atavisms, many of them bestial and some possibly superhuman. [For those Setians who find the idea of reincarnation unacceptable, consider Kenneth Grant’s proposition that memories of past stages in the evolutionary cycle could be imprinted in the D.N.A. code.]

Kia was the primal force behind the Universe [like the Black Magical concept of the “ordering” force]: a dynamic - as opposed to static - energy ... like electricity except incalculably more subtle and powerful. Later in his life he considered Kia to be primarily sexual in nature. In this he resembled Reich with his “bion” and “orgone” energy. He used several forms of sex-magic to arouse concentrated Kia - the medium of his magic. The Setian will recognize the parallel of this idea with that of the Tantric “Kundalini”.

Much later in his life, during his “Zos Kia Cultus” period, Spare, by some metaphysical juggling, identified Kia with the energy that is synonymous with the autonomous self (Zos).

His most important magical contribution is his concept of “Sigilization”. Its process is basically as follows: He would define his desire in a clear, direct written form, i.e. “This is my wish [he always included this prologue; possibly it was an unwillingness to disregard all magical tradition; that is, the preliminary “invocation” or “statement of dedication”]: to obtain the strength of tigers.” He would then sigilize each phrase using the individual letters (and not repeating them). Then he would combine the sigils and simplify them again.

The use of the final sigil consisted of impressing its image on the subconscious mind and then purposely “forgetting” it - the idea being that the subconscious was the source of all magical power (Kia) and that the subconscious would recognize the hidden meaning of the glyph (which the conscious mind had “forgotten”) and fulfill the desire. The crux of the operation, of course, was the conscious dismissal of the significance of the symbol. To impress the sigil on the deeper mind, Spare used techniques of intense concentration, visualizing just the image of the sigil, and several forms of sex-magic [when the ego is “destroyed”].

Another magical practice was the design of practical stelae. Here Spare would design a stela which had a traceable path throughout the surface, containing, between twisting linkages of line, god-forms [of many cultures, including some of unknown origin], atavistic forms, personal sigils, and esoteric glyphs, all in a continuous line - his pencil never left the surface - and ending [or beginning: his stelae and literary works relied on the nonlinear concept of Time] like two ends of unknotted string or concluding in some sigil, acting as a “doorway”.

These stelae and his paintings were magical operations intended to effect “atavistic resurgence”. Spare accomplished much of his magic through the help of “familiars” which he conceived as being forces within the psyche that were memories of bestial and other incarnations. These atavisms were superior to his conscious ego and, for a specific purpose and time, possessed him.

His stelae and drawings show considerable Egyptian influence. In one particular work, the “Forces of the Sigils”, the image of Set is clearly defined. Spare’s experiments with “atavistic resurgence” probably inclined him to believe that he had discovered the true significance behind bestial-attributed Egyptian gods. It is interesting to note that the ancient Greeks, who had no definite magical tradition [except one, but more of that in a later article!] considered their gods in completely anthropomorphic forms.

Utilizing his stelae and a sensory deprival technique he called the “Death Posture” Spare often retired into his sub-conscious mind where he claimed he saw “sidereal perspectives” and strange geometries and landscapes. He despaired that he could never faithfully reproduce these visions, however, the alert observer can see these strange shapes (trapezoids, pyramids and unusual quadrilaterals and planes) lurking behind the main forms in any given work of his.

He incorporated his intensely individual system into the “witch-cult”, and I mean “Wicca” as created by Gerald Gardner. In its time, as one can readily imagine, Gardner’s revealing of the “witch-cult” caused quite a romantic flutter of the heart to those occult dilettantes who had always dreamt of becoming involved with some ancient and powerful magic cultus. Everybody was in on the act, not the least being Crowley, who wrote all the “original” Wiccan rituals for an appreciable fee. Spare was also influenced by this innovation, and up until the end of his life he apparently had some influence in Wiccan circles.

Kenneth Grant, perhaps Spare’s closest friend, describes his involvement with both Grant’s “New Isis Lodge” and Gardner’s “Coven” as an outside specialist. Both Gardner and Grant relied on his advice and the efficacy of his talismans/sigils.

Through his involvement with the English witch-cult, Spare developed his “Zos Kia Cultus”. He elucidated his concept of the witch-cult in his unpublished manuscript “The Zoetic Grimoire of Zos” (1950-1956). His concept of the “primal woman” receives much emphasis. However I believe that the Black Magician of the Temple of Set should not overlook his ideas because they evoke the repugnant memory of the present-day Neopagans. Rather consider that the Hindu Tantrics conceived of Kundalith as being feminine (mysterious?) in nature, although they considered the energy as being created from two opposing forces, positive and negative, male and female: Ida and Pingala.

In his strange cult Spare advanced the discovery and practice of a “primeval sexualism” (something to do with Kia) and the realization of ancient desires (atavisms) which would eventually produce a “whole” self.

I have written this introduction into the methods and influence of Spare because I believe his system is worth further investigation by the Setian. His sigilization technique has worked extremely well for me, and I also believe that the alert Setian will discover some “Setian” implications within his philosophy.

Appendix 21: How Bubastis Pylon Got its Name

- by Margaret Wendall IV°
Scroll of Set #I-12, August 1976
[reprinted from The Magic Cat #IV-4, June 1976, Bubastis Pylon]

The city of Bubastis (the Greek word for Pa-Bast) was an important city in ancient Egypt. Not only was it the site of worship of one of the Egyptians’ favorite goddesses, it was the capital of Nome XVIII (Am-Khent)\(^{181}\) on the Eastern Nile Delta, near the modern Tell Basta and the city of Zazagig. Some writers have indicated that the first “Suez Canal” ran from Bubastis to the Red Sea.

The city’s chief goddess was, of course, the cat Bast, but other gods and goddesses were also honored: Wadjet, Harakhti, and Atum (the gods of Heliopolis); Atum-Ra’s son, Shu; and from the time of Rameses III, Set and Ptah. Bast is often confused with Sekhmet; in fact, because both are feline, some authors will tell you they are the same goddess, although to Egyptians they represented separate concepts. For example, Sekhmet was the patroness of physicians, while Bast was the special goddess of women, and in many respects her worship parallels Catholic worship of Mary. Yet Bast is an evolutionary descendant of Sekhmet, much the same as our domestic cat may be a descendant of the lion.

We meet Sekhmet long before we find Bast in a land where the Sun can kill as well as give life, and where the Sun is both revered and respected. Ptah, the creator-god of Memphis, was represented both as a bull and the Sun. Sekhmet was Ptah’s consort and represented the Sun’s violent and destructive heat.

When the seat of power moved from Memphis to Thebes, Sekhmet followed. The Sun becomes Amon-Ra. Sekhmet waited each day to kill Apep, the great serpent who threatened to destroy Amon-Ra at sunset, the end of his daily journey across the sky. As the “Eye of Ra”, Sekhmet spotted Apep, killed him, and saved the Sun, without whom all life would cease. The transition from Sekhmet to Bast had begun.

The original Bast was possibly a “caffre cat”, which is similar to today’s Abyssinian, except that instead of having ticked fur it was more tabby. Caffre cats apparently abounded in northern Egypt are are presumed by some to be the ancestors of all our domesticated cats.

The caffre cats lived in the Nile delta and helped to rid the area of snakes and vermin. All cats are independent by nature, but because rats and mice are more plentiful near human habitation where grain is stored than in the desert, cats quite literally moved in with the Egyptians. There was almost a symbiotic relationship between man and cat; neither could have lived quite as well without the other. The cats moved into the cool temples, and it wasn’t long before temples were built in their honor.

In Bubastis the “Eye of Ra” and slayer of Apep became the popular snake-killing, caffre cat goddess Bast. In time this purring domestic cat almost relegated the lioness to oblivion in northern Egypt, but such are the ways of cats.

Whereas Sekhmet had represented the heat of the desert Sun and vengeance long before she became the patroness of healing, Bast always represented life and the gentle heat of the Sun. She is called the “Lady of Life”, and one invocation to her asks that she grant “life, power, health, and joy of heart”.

\(^{181}\) Of Lower Egypt. Some authors call this the VII Nome. The number of Nomes increased as Egypt progressed from the Old to Middle to New Kingdoms.
Egyptian women wore Bast amulets with kittens to represent the number of children they wanted. Every domestic cat was considered to be the same cat, Bast, and it was a capital offense to kill one. It apparently wasn’t a crime to let the cats kill each other, though.

When a cat died, its family went into great mourning, even shaving their eyebrows. The cat’s body was either mummified and buried in special cat cemeteries, or cremated with great pomp. Cat mummies are so numerous today that a museum with an exhibit on Egypt should have at least one.

Several goddesses have been likened to Bast: Rat, the female counterpart of Tem; Mut, the Lady of Asheru; Iusa-aset at Heliopolis; Hathor; Isis; Sekhmet and Menhet in Nubia; and Mut and Uatchet at Memphis. Whereas these goddesses do share Bast’s attributes, Bast is the only goddess to whom the domestic cat was sacred.

Sekhmet is represented as a lioness crowned by the solar disk and the uræus. She sometimes holds an ankh and a sceptre. Bast is represented in many ways, but always with the head of a domestic cat. Sometimes she is seated, her tail wrapped around her front paws. Sometimes she is a mother cat surrounded by kittens. Sometimes she is pictured wearing one earring. In human-cat form Bast is often standing, holding a sistrum (a musical instrument with a sound similar to a cat’s purr) in her right hand, a basket over her left arm and an ægis in her left hand.

Bast is also represented with the disk and uræus of Sekhmet, but Bast is seldom a lioness and Sekhmet is never a domestic cat. All of this might make Bast sound pretty “white light” were it not for the nature of cats, and a coincidence: Bast has also been associated with Taurt, sometimes represented as Set’s wife; and in the sky Bast was represented by Gamma Draconis - Set’s star. The circumpolar stars and those close to them were reserved for “gods of darkness” in Egypt from the time when night was darkness save for the light from the heavens. In this one respect Bast always retained the character of Sekhmet; and even the most gentle and purring domestic cat is capable of all the ferocity of a lioness.

Herodotus tells us that the annual festival at Bubastis was celebrated during the second month of inundation (Paini, 5/26-6/25\textsuperscript{182}), which would immediately precede the North Solstice beginning the astronomical period of Set.

Herodotus was also struck by the fact that the Temple of Bast was visible from every point in the city of Bubastis. It stood in a hollow and was surrounded by the city, which was amphitheater-shaped due to the various buildings which had been razed for new construction. Since many pharaohs and other wealthy individuals commissioned buildings in Bubastis, the “hills” must have been quite high. Even though Bubastis was an important city, this razing and rebuilding has apparently made Bubastis an archeological site far more important than the city itself was.

As far as we know, it was in Egypt that people first adopted small cats as household pets, although cats of many kinds figure in almost all of the religions of the world. It also seems likely that Bubastis is the only city dedicated to the worship of the domestic cat. It’s from the city and its caffre cat goddess that Bubastis Pylon takes its name, in honor of the domestic animal whose independence, inquisitiveness, beauty, mystery, and depth of personality make it most “Setian.”

\textsuperscript{182} Some authors give April and May; I use the calendar in Budge’s \textit{The Mummy}.

If you’re interested in the role cats have played in other religions, you might want to read The Cult of the Cat by Patricia Dale-Green (NYC: Weathervane Books, 1972). It’s also available in a paperback edition, but the hardbound edition is worth the extra cost for the pictures.
The human race has the potential to destroy itself and all traces of its civilization within a matter of minutes. Movies that have come out recently seem to show a preoccupation with destruction and doom. For rational, sane people, this cataclysm is a frightening aspect, to be avoided by any way possible.

The Temple of Set is dedicated to the survival of civilization and of its membership. We are an elitist organization; we realize that not all people are truly equal, but are indeed unique. Some people are talented and gifted, visionary and intelligent, while others, most, I’m afraid, are never meant to see beyond their own noses. We, the elite, must endeavor to lead the masses on a path that will save them, if possible. Our first duty, however, is to ensure our own survival and prosperity.

It would be realistic to point out that our members are few; it is our quality that sets [sorry about that pun] us apart from the rest of the religions. Even with our higher quality of people, it is ludicrous to think that we can save the world. Right now we might be lucky to save ourselves.

We cannot, however, allow ourselves to be dominated by pessimism. We live in a political climate that allows us to exist, for which we can be grateful. The Temple of Set supports this political system that allows each person to profess his or her own religious beliefs; without compulsion to change. In fact, on this point, we must always jealously guard this precious right, because it is a right that zealous self-appointed saviours and prophets do not recognize. Since every person has the right to blind himself by his own illusions, we do not begrudge anyone’s religious beliefs. We surely wouldn’t want everyone to become Setians and thus bring unqualified persons into our Temple. Set chooses his Elect, not the other way around.

What of the other political issues, you may ask. There are many controversies floating around, and many candidates seeking your support. Well, the Temple of Set is a recognized religious organization and thus tax-exempt under the laws of the United States and California. This is a valuable thing to have for all of us, and accurately reflects the nature of our organization.

The Temple of Set does not involve itself in partisan political activities; it will not lobby, endorse candidates or issue political position papers. We do so for two reasons: (1) Our tax-exempt status forbids it; and (2) More importantly, it could possibly divide our membership over a relatively trivial matter and thus change the nature of the Temple from that of a religious and philosophical society to that of a political club.

Partisan politics is concerned with immediate, hot issues. It is extremely rare for this issue to be of any long-range importance. Those in the public forum use these issues to manipulate the masses (i.e. abortion). At times such an issue may affect the life of individual members, in which case, that member should be intelligent enough to figure out a lawful course of action to take on his or her own to get the point across and protect the interest threatened. Remember that this takes energy. Determine if the interest affected is worth all this energy to protect it. It is possible to win the battle (protect the interest) and lose the war (too much expended energy and time). You do not (or should not) need the Temple of Set to tell you what to do. We will not be like the Catholic bishop and stand up in a pulpit and tell you to write letters against abortion or anything else. Our members are people, not sheep.

As it was stated in the Book of Coming Forth by Night, we are in a crisis situation. If we fail, the Majesty of Set will be no more. However, if we do succeed, then we shall come into a most glorious age with purpose and knowledge. That, indeed, is our challenge: to succeed.

Success will come by looking into the future and anticipating the adversities, not by grappling blindly in the pit of despair with the present.

The problems of the present seem so all-encompassing, yet they are only a warning of the future. For too long we have lived without considering the ramifications of our actions on future generations.

So long as the human race lives on, we have the only form of immortality that is really possible; the memory of our deeds and existence in the minds of those who follow us. If we act without considering those who will follow us, then indeed Set will be no more, as he has tied his fate to that of mankind.

We mustn’t wait for others to act and think for us; we must do it ourselves. The Setian should take it upon himself to do his part to solve the problems that threaten us, so that mankind can go on.

You need not think in terms of universal salvation. If it is possible to save only a few by acting, better than doom for everyone. It can be possible to try to save more of the world, but a bird in hand is worth two in the bush.

We are at a pivotal time in the history of mankind. It’s a bad cliche, but an appropriate one. We can either descend into chaos, destruction, and oblivion, or else find our way to an age of greatness where progress can continue to give all of us a better life. The Setian is well suited for this quest.

When considering priorities set by the political system, as individuals ask these questions: “Will this help make the future better? Will it help reach a long-range solution to the problems that beset us?” If it does, it should be supported while we also work on our own solutions. If it does not, then you should either work to change it within the law, or redouble your efforts to reach another solution, to ensure our own survival.
Death. For many people this is the most frightening word in the world; yet it can be the most comforting boon available to mankind, our Fifth Race included.

Bear in mind that I write this as a Setian and also as a member of a nursing team; you will see both elements emerge as I comment.

Part of my graduation vow, our class promise, was to sustain life insofar as we were able to do so. Then I recited the words with everyone else and had no more idea of what “life” was and is than I could plot an accurate map of Pluto. All we knew was that we had drugs and machines for everything and every condition. Ha! Looking back, I realize that while now my knowledge is limited, then I had the “new graduate syndrome” and knew everything!

The first few patients we lost made me chew my nails long into the night wondering what else could have been done. I looked with disgust at doctors who ordered, “NO C.P.R.” (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) on certain patients. I thought patients and families who gracefully accepted a coming end to be slightly, if not totally mad. Now I look back and see that these were patients in their seventies, eighties, and nineties; patients with carcinomas, or chronic pulmonary or renal or what-not disorders, and wondered how I could’ve been cruel enough to want them to remain in such a living hell. Thus saith the nurse.

Very few of us have not seen a family member or a close friend in a terminal stage. Some go with grace, dignity and acceptance. Others go with pain, fear, and raging against this end that must be. With acceptance or denial, the heart still ends with asystole after the fibrillation stage. Yes, we can do endotracheal intubation, gastric intubations, venous cutdowns, defibrillate in hopes of a normal sinus cardiac pattern, administer intravenous norepinephrine, use respirators, furosemide - the works! But if the brain cells are damaged so that there appears to be no hope of recovery [and I realize I get into something touchy here], why not stop? Can we of the Fifth Race, or any other, believe the Intellect, the Will, is still there? Suppose it is? Suppose it’s chained to this multi-tubed, mechanically-assisted body. Would it not scream for release?

Christianity preaches a burning Hell for non-believers. I say that there is no greater Hell than listening to the sounds of respirators through a tracheostomy, or knowing the last fever I’m fighting with antipyretics and sponging is the body saying, “This is my way of fighting it; let me do it, and then let me go.”

Listen now to a remark made by an elderly carcinoma patient who was resuscitated by some eager-beaver new graduates after a cardiac arrest: “Why did you bring me back? I was in a beautiful place. I was happy that I wasn’t hurting anymore, and those fields and hills went on for as far as I could see. I was there, but I knew what you were all doing to me. You made me come back to this! Why?”

I confess it sounds sugary, but the lady has a point. That happened two weeks ago and the narcotics needed to decrease her pain grows daily. Senseless, purely and simply senseless.

Of course, I’m not advocating never raising a finger, nor do I advocate euthanasia. I can look back on many who have been pulled through and lead full lives and on whom all these measures were fully justified.
    Now I say as a Setian: Let the body return to decay and dust. The Will still lives. Xeper.
Appendix 24: Why I Collect Science Fiction

- by Forrest J Ackerman, Honorary Setian

Scroll of Set #II-1, September 1976

You ask me why I collect science fiction, what I get out of it.

First of all, I got my whole life out of it. It brought me, after 47 years of collecting, to a $250,000 mortgage that will take me til 1998 when I am 84 years old to pay off, just to house the results of my collecting in a 4-story 17-room house in Hollywood that will be a proper repository for the collection.

Al Jolson had to sing. Fred Astaire was born to dance. I discovered science fiction when it was still scientifiction, in the October 1926 Amazing Stories, and by 1929 my collection encompassed not only Amazing but Amazing Stories Annual, Amazing Stories Quarterly, Science Wonder Stories, Science Wonder Quarterly, Air Wonder Stories, Science & Invention, some Weird Tales, and any issues of Argosy, Bluebook, Liberty, Popular or any other mundane magazines that turned up with “stf” stories in them, plus books by Burroughs, Kline, Cummings et al. By then I was corresponding with about 117 fans & authors. Soon I was into collecting stills from “scientifilms” and trying my hand at writing sf of my own, and at the beginning of 1932 the first fanzine was started and I was associated with it as a contributor.

In the beginning I collected sf avidly because I was thirsty for more than existed and it was like a man collecting dew in a desert oasis when he didn’t know where his next drop of water was coming from.

In 1975 I am still collecting science fiction because it has long been a way of life. Years ago I conceived of the creation of a Fantasy Foundation. I thought that many people would help me. Few have. To those who have, I am immensely grateful. But many moons ago it became evident that I was mainly going to have to do it myself.

I wonder how much I’ve spent in collecting in nearly 50 years? Several hundred thousand dollars? I wouldn’t be surprised - it seems to me I’ve spent money on very little else. And it’s meaningless to tell me it’s been a valuable investment; that those 100,000 stills and the other 100,000 books, magazines, paintings, posters, props, manuscripts, etc. are worth over $1 million in today’s inflated market for out-of-print rarities & collectors’ items. I may be a millionaire, but only theoretically, because I’m never going to cash in my chips, auction off my holdings, or sell them to libraries & institutions, tempting as it would be to retire. Don’t delude yourself that I wouldn’t love it, that I wouldn’t be happy to be free of the treadmill of 37 professional deadlines a year and all that agentorial work.

But I have a voracious white dinosaur to feed: the Ackermansion, the Museum of Imaginative Literature. Have I collected it, or has it collected me?

Well, when I go, it will be with the sense of satisfaction that I have left the world its greatest collection of science fiction & fantasy. And who knows? when the old curator kicks the bucket, it may only be for a temporarily-enforced “vacation”, because I intend to opt for a very scientifictional type of comeback: cryonic preservation and, potentially, resuscitation. If, after I die, I am later on revived, look at all the sci-fi I’ll have to collect! I can see it now: the New Rave science fiction of the 21st Century!

(Not) The End
Appendix 25: Religious Racism

- by L. Dale Seago IV°

Scroll of Set #II-4, December 1976

When I first began this project, my sole intention was to illustrate the manner in which the dominant Judæo-Christian religion is being used by at least one religious foundation to inculcate and perpetuate racist attitudes and activities, specifically by an organization called “Your Heritage”.

After examining their literature and its religious, political, and economic implications, however, I was increasingly struck by its similarity to the core principles of German National Socialism or Nazism, and I feel that this ideological identity should be noted in view of its possible implications for the future.

“Your Heritage” advocates a specific type of racist attitude: White “Aryan” supremacy. This “Master Race” ideology is founded upon two things: the Judæo-Christian Bible and a number of works purporting to present scientific evidence of White superiority. It is not merely anti-Black and anti-Yellow, but anti-Semitic as well - which sounds strange indeed until one sees how they justify it. Then it seems even stranger.

In the first place, they claim that all civilizations derive from the White race, and that of the Whites, the Aryan (commonly known today as the Germanic, Scandinavian, and Celtic peoples) are superior. This is based primarily on the writings of de Gobineau, Lapouge, and Houston Stewart Chamberlain, which state in effect that the White race is superior because White civilizations have reached a higher level than those of other races: a sort of social Darwinism. This is stated clearly in a pamphlet entitled God’s Great Race:

> The Caucasian or White race is the superior race. It is responsible for the civilization we have today. Throughout recorded history it has produced all the civilizations which have reached a high level. The Yellow race has not attained as high a civilization or progressed as far as have the nations composed of the Caucasian race. Malaysians and Polynesians are even less developed, and the Negroes have made the least progress of all. Where groups of Caucasians have merged or interbred with inferior stocks, the Whites have deteriorated ... The Caucasian race is indeed the greatest of all peoples, and if it dies, the glory of the world will perish with it.

So not only are the Whites superior, they must not mix their blood with inferior races. Biblically this is supposed to be justified by some of the following passages:

> “Thou didst separate them from among all the people of the earth, to by thine inheritance.” (I Kings 8:53)
> “For the Lord hath chosen Jacob unto himself, and Israel for a peculiar treasure.” (Psalms 135:4)
> “For thou art a holy people, the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a peculiar people unto himself above all the nations that are upon the earth.” (Deuteronomy 7:6)

Now this seems rather flimsy, since it obviously refers to Israel; and it hardly seems to justify anti-Semitism. But once you understand that it is actually the modern Aryan nations - and not the Jews - who are actually Israel, it all becomes perfectly clear ... doesn’t it?

Why are the Scandinavians, Germans, Franks, British/Scotch/Irish, Canadians, Americans, South Africans (the White inhabitants) racially Israelites? Well, you see, the original Israelites were White Aryans; and around 700 BCE ten of the twelve tribes of Israel were transported into Assyria after a major defeat. Nothing more is known of them as Israelite tribes after that. But also in the 7th Century BCE appeared in that area a people whom the Persians called the Sææ, Scyths, or Scythians, who were a White, light-haired people described as similar in appearance to the Celts and Germans. They were nomadic warriors who spread through various parts of Europe and, by tracing vague similarities in the sounds of names of different tribes, they are “shown” to be the ancestors of the Saxons, Goths, and others.

Also cited is the Scythians’ use of the battle-axe as a weapon; it was also a favored weapon of the Saxons, and is thus seen as a carryover from their history as Israel because, in Jeremiah 51:20, God says of Israel, “Thou art my battle-axe and weapons of war, for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms.”

There are also other similarities between the Aryans and the ancient Israelites. For example, the love of liberty is an Anglo-Saxon trait which was also common to the Israelites, which is perhaps natural since the Israelites seem always to have been in process of being carried captive into one ancient nation after another: Babylon, Egypt, Assyria ...

What about the Jews, then, who seem to be laboring under the delusion that they are Israelites? Simple. Those known today as Jews are the descendants of a mongrel breed of Canaanites, Assyrians, Babylonians, and others, who in turn - are you ready for this? - are descended from Cain, who was the offspring of Satan through his seduction of Eve in the Garden of Eden. The Jewish race is therefore Satanic and inherently evil.

Thus is presented a genetic basis for discrimination against, or even genocide of the Jews. Further it can be Biblically demonstrated by the results of prophecy that the Jews are not the “chosen people” of Israel. Some of the Biblical identification marks by which Israel can be known, quoted from an essay (author unknown) called “Let’s Review the Diagnosis”, are the following:

Israel -
“Would be above all other nations” - Gen. 27:29, Deut. 7:6 & 15:6.
“A great nation and a company of nations” - Gen. 35:11, 48:19.
“A people glorifying in Christ” -

(From this point on I will simply “hit the high spots” without citing the scriptural verses, as it is obvious that there are plenty of them.)

A missionary people; custodian of God’s word; possessing the gates of her enemies; having multitudinous seed; would colonize and spread abroad; possess mineral and agricultural wealth; would include a throne perpetually occupied by a king or queen of the Davidic line (an elaborate family tree supposedly tracing descent from David through mythical and historic kings of Ireland, Scotland, and Britain is provided); having a new home in “the appointed place”; to be God’s heritage; to be a people established in righteousness; to possess God’s holy spirit as well as His Word; to remain in partial ignorance of special relationship with God until the Great Revealing comes; to have a new language ...

And on, ad nauseam. The claim is made that only the Anglo-Saxon, Celtic, Teutonic, and related peoples bear all these marks, and the Jews have none of them.

Now the picture becomes really grim where the Jews are concerned; for they, the literal children of the Devil, are engaged in a worldwide conspiracy to thwart God’s plan, wipe out Christianity, and exterminate the White Aryan race. It is because of this Satanic race that we entered World War II: they controlled the Presidency at that time:
The Jews were getting us into the war, and Roosevelt had given his pledge to them that we would enter it. The only reason the Jews hated Hitler was because he saw what the Jew economic system and banking system had done to Germany, and he was breaking their power. So, as a means of strangling Germany and destroying her economically, the Jews started a world-wide boycott of German exports. And you know how the Jews control commerce in all the nations of the world. It was a declaration of war, as Samuel Untermeyer himself said. Hitler was starting to put into operation some of the laws of God. Against all the efforts of the Devil’s children to strangle and destroy her, Germany was becoming prosperous by going back to the economic laws of God—and that had to be destroyed (“Babylon’s Money”).

Some of the praise of Hitler is even more emphatic.

The Jews also control or engineer economic depressions, etc., and we have become confused and corrupted by aliens. We must turn from the evil ways into which we have fallen before it is too late.

What can we do? Recognize our identity as God’s chosen race and follow his laws. And certain benefits can be expected if we do so, according to Exodus 19:5-6:

“No, therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure to me above all people; for all the earth is mine. And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation.”

And, in Deuteronomy 7:6:

“For thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God: the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people which are upon the face of the earth.”

Nor, according to this essay [called “A Kingdom of Priests”], are we merely to keep our sacred blood separate from that of other races:

...What the ... priests were to the Nation of Israel, that nation was to become to all the world. That is to say, we were to teach God’s laws and commandments to all the world, to judge them when they became disobedient, to administer and enforce God’s will in all the world. We have not fulfilled our duty in merely sending missionaries to plead with the pagans to adopt God’s laws and religion ... When we promised to obey God’s commandments and to assume the powers and duties of his kingdom of priests, we really promised to administer his world for him, as his priests, not as the servants of the African-Asian bloc of nations in their destruction of civilization ... We should have put his laws into effect throughout the world, even if his enemies opposed us ... God himself commanded us to create empires ... We will meet opposition of course; but God commanded us not to retreat before it, but to destroy it.

Almost enough to make you shout “Sieg Heil!” when you realize that such a noble destiny awaits you, isn’t it? These people also await a Messianic prophet (like Hitler?) who will lead them in cleansing our lands of corruption, apostasy, and minority groups, for the Old Testament closes with the promise, “Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and terrible Day of the Lord.” So here we have imperialism just waiting to blossom again.

There is much, much more that I could have mentioned, but this is enough to provide a general overview of the organization’s propaganda. Having seen what they are preaching, let us see just how solid a foundation they really have, and whether or not they might actually be able to achieve their goals.

First, the Nazis held the same sort of “Master Race” theory; and the ideology of “Your Heritage” is based on the same source material: de Gobineau, etc., authored their “scientific” material.

The term “Aryan” actually arose from the discovery that most European languages belonged to the same family as those of Iran, Afghanistan, and the greater part of India. The original language seems to have developed in the Ukraine or Poland prior to 2000 BCE; its speakers had tamed the horse and invented chariots, which enabled them to conquer adjacent peoples, make themselves a ruling class, impose their language on their subjects, and intermarry with them. Their descendants conquered other tribes and so on until their language - now broken into many tongues retaining similarities of words and grammar - was spread from Portugal to Ceylon. The conquerors of Iran and India around 1500 B.C.E. called themselves Arya, meaning “nobles”; and when scholars realized the kinship of derivative languages as far apart as Icelandic, Armenian, and Bengali, they called this linguistic family “Aryan.”

The Aryan peoples, also called Indo-Europeans, overthrew a number of civilizations but created none; and as far as science can presently tell, there is not and probably never has been an “Aryan race” since, whatever the original Aryans’ racial type (which is still unknown), it soon disappeared as a result of intermarriage with the more numerous subjugated peoples. The term “Aryan,” if used properly, refers only to a family of related languages. There has probably never been a truly “pureblooded” race on Earth.

Curiously the source material cited in “Your Heritage”’s literature, with only three or four exceptions, was written during the period roughly from 1910 CE into the 1940’s - the same period during which the Nazi racial theories were being formed and applied. Many are the same books from which they derived their ideas. This implies, if not an actual connection with the Nazis, at least that we have here a case of racism seeking justification as opposed to racism created by religious dogma, particularly since most of the passages cited refer to Israel.

The argument hinges largely on identification of the Scythians with the Israelites, which is not satisfactorily accomplished. The fact that Scythians (exceedingly warlike nomads wearing trousers and pointed caps) appeared in the same area to which most of the Israeliite nation was transported as captives in the same century does not argue that they are the same, but rather that the Scythians exterminated the Israelites.

And there are few shakier things on which to base an argument than Biblical prophecy, since the same prophecies are applied to many different events. Take as one example that of the Antichrist, the false Messiah who will lead the world astray in the last days before the coming again of Christ. A number of monarchs and at least one Pope - not to mention Hitler - have been proclaimed by theologians to be the Antichrist; even Henry Kissinger was recently targeted as such by one religious group.

Propaganda, however, need not be truthful to be effective; all that is necessary is that it have a “ring of authenticity” - an appearance of truth. It is not designed to appeal to the lone intellectual, but to the masses through their emotions. And the Judæo-Christian religion, founded upon emotion rather than reason (being in fact a corrupted copy of the ancient Egyptian cult of Osiris with later historical accretions from other religions) and holding sway over millions, is an ideal vehicle through which to influence the non-thinking herd. The Nazis also used religious concepts in their own propaganda, proclaiming that they were the “sons of light” preparing to do battle with the powers of darkness and the Satanic race of Jewry.

But could this sort of nonsense really gain control of enough men’s minds to give rise to another Nazi Germany type of situation? Well, it happened once before; perhaps, presented in the guise of religion ...
And there are factors arising which did not exist in Hitler’s time and which may exert great influence on the course of human events. According to the research of the Club of Rome, the Cousteau Society, and other sophisticated and ecological forecasting groups, the human race as a whole will face a major crisis during the next 50-100 years due to overpopulation, pollution, and lack of resources. It will probably, according to the projections of the Temple of Set, attain full force in a gradual way involving increasing anarchy and then a major authoritarian backlash. Such a group might find a ready audience, innumerable scapegoats, and a great deal of popular support under increasingly intolerable social conditions, and a dictatorial theocracy could conceivably develop. The trend toward authoritarian government is steadily increasing as egalitarian/ permissive governmental systems like our own find themselves less capable of dealing with the growing pre-crisis stresses. And look at the fascist regimes which have come into being in our own century in Germany, Italy, Japan, South America, and Africa.

And “Your Heritage” appears to have outside help. While it claims not to be a part of any other organization. I find that about half the pamphlets they sent me - the more sophisticated ones, in fact - were printed and published by a group called the Federation of the Covenant People in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Now South Africa is well known for its Apartheid policy of discrimination against the native Africans and its advocacy of White racial supremacy. And here is another interesting tidbit: South Africa has recently minted a new gold coin, the Krugerrand, which weighs one ounce and sells on the international market for whatever the current price of gold happens to be (In fact, I saw a recent television advertisement which proclaimed, “You’re not just buying a coin - you’re buying gold!”).

Now gold mined in different areas is distinctive, because it will bear certain trace elements in varying proportions depending on the location whence it comes. Millions of dollars of SS gold disappeared from Germany at the close of World War II, and, according to Setian Priest Mark Harris, the Krugerrand has created quite a stir because it has been found to contain the same identifying characteristics as the missing SS gold. A country like the Republic of South Africa would seem to be a logical place for a White Aryansupremacist Nazi to move after losing a war ...

An eventual “Fourth Reich” might not be quite as farfetched an idea as it seems.

Pauwels, Louis and Bergier, Jacques, The Morning of the Magicians. New York:
Avon, 1968.

I began reading this book expecting to find some clues in my search for what is commonly labeled the "ideal personal relationship", or at least affirmation that my present relationship is the ideal one! What I uncovered, however, is quite apart from what I was looking for.

While sifting through the author’s theories on love as the answer to the problems of human existence, I found more and more acknowledgment of the fact that we as Setians are truly striving for goals much higher than mere human existence can ever offer!

While mankind has essentially [and allegedly] emerged from the animal kingdom, from instinctive “adaptation”, Setians have already far surpassed that achievement. Mankind has been gifted with reason. An awareness of himself, his past, his possibilities for the future. But instead of taking the ultimate advantage of this awareness of himself as a separate entity, he instead fears it - fears his separateness and imagined helplessness before the laws of nature and society.

Fromm says, “The deepest need, then, is the need to overcome his separateness.” Is this true for the Setian? I don’t think so! Man has lived through many ages and cultures faced with the same question - how to overcome isolation and separateness - how to conform to achieve acceptance and oneness with his fellow man and the mindless universe.

If I am like everybody else ... if I conform in custom, dress, ideas, to the pattern of the group, I am saved; saved from the frightening experience of aloneness.

Somehow, I feel you’ll agree with me that the terror lies in that shepherd conformity and not in any individual behavior! The tragic thing is, most people don’t even recognize this overpowering instinct to conform. They go through life pitifully believing that their ideas and beliefs are their own. [Fortunately they just happen to coincide with the popular beliefs in vogue at the time!]

One example of this for me is what I call the “Haight-Ashbury Syndrome”. These poor, misinformed “flower children - these pseudo-intellectuals - dropped out a while back and stated that they had achieved individuality! No longer would they conform to the dictates of our society and government. They claimed to achieve, by the use of drugs [and filthy surroundings] an expanded consciousness, an awakened state - true liberation! Women’s Lib, Cosmic Awareness, Holistic Approach, est, karma ... all terms and methods these “individuals” used to show their pathetic need for difference. The reality is however, that there is no individuality left at all. As Fromm states, “Equality today means ‘sameness’ rather than ‘oneness’.” These tragic people will call you “up tight” if you don’t carry around your issue of Rolling Stone, smoke grass, dress and live like a slob, or attend courses and seminars on “liberation” staffed by smiling, non-thinking automatons.

Setians, rejoice! The Gift given you is more valuable than life itself, for it is life - on a much greater level than mankind as a whole can ever hope to achieve. Gone is the fear of separateness and aloneness, for in your magical workings, who else but yourself as an individual can break through the dimensional barriers and communicate with the very same entity who saved you from the hideous death of mindless conformity!

This gift has been called an “experiment” ... but I will go further and call it “an experiment of love”. As Fromm states, “Love is an active power in man; a power which breaks through the walls which separate man from his fellow man, which unites him with others, makes him overcome the sense of isolation and separateness; yet it permits him to be himself, to retain his integrity. In love, the paradox occurs that two beings become one and yet remain two."

Sound familiar? I feel that I can reword that entire quote, applying it directly to our ritual experiences - our “Set-experiences” - and who could deny it? Haven’t we broken down the walls which separate our essence from the essence of Set? Haven’t we felt the separateness and isolation give way to an overwhelming sense of fulfillment and sharing in ritual - each of us as an individual, retaining our own distinct power of will, and yet, in joining with the Essence from beyond the Pentagram, that paradox once again occurs: “Two beings become one and yet remain two.”

We must remember, also, that this could never occur were it not for the fact that you as a Setian can exercise a quality which has almost disappeared from the surrounding mundane society - that of inner freedom and independence. Without this individuality and your awareness and use of it by means of your ever-increasing power of will, this “miracle”, this dimensional breakthrough, could never take place.

Reading further, I found more and more supportive evidence to my “experiment of love” idea. Fromm states, “Love is an activity, not a passive affect; the active character of love (its first aspect) can be described by stating that love is primarily giving.” Not, of course, in the exploitive or sacrificial sense, but rather as an outward expression of one’s own potency. In your act of giving, you will experience strength and power. In giving of his essence, Set also exercises and experiences his power, compounding and complementing it in us. He gives us what is alive in him and thereby enhances and enriches his own aliveness - an endless cycle and one for which we can be eternally grateful. It indicates a faith in his own powers, courage to rely on them to help us to achieve his goal for us that of evolution, of Setamorphosis - and finally, joy in the knowledge that through the giving of his essence, there is never a depletion but always a growth and enhancement through our growth!

The second aspect of love - responsibility - also is indicated quite clearly in our relationship with our benevolent friend. A self-imposed responsibility to us, which could have easily degenerated into domination [read again the Diaboliccon] has always remained a constant benefit to us because of the third aspect of love stated by Fromm: that of respect - the knowledge of our uniqueness, our individuality, and the ability to allow it to remain that way without interference. Set will go so far as to inform us of our powers and the secrets to their use, but we are loved; we must grow and achieve and evolve on our own. Without exploitation, with guidance, and without interference. Our individual evolution, though it is an enhancement to the Powers of Darkness, was never meant to be subservient to those Powers.

“Speak rather to me as to a friend. Do not bend your knee nor drop your eye ...” Xeper.
Incubus: A spirit or daemon who has carnal relations with mortal women.
Succubus: A spirit or daemon who takes the shape of a woman and tempts or has carnal relations with mortal men.

Incubus. Succubus. Depending on one’s point of view, those two words induce shivers of delight and anticipation, or great terror and repulsion. Traditionally practitioners of the Black Arts were said to welcome and thoroughly enjoy the sensual attentions of these daemon lovers, while their white-light counterparts feared them greatly and strove to resist being seduced and ravished by the licentious creatures. Since they almost always succumbed in the end, however, it is safe to assume that their great show of resistance was but token in nature and served to allow them to enjoy the delights of the flesh with a clear conscience, as it were. After all it certainly wasn’t their fault if the lustful daemons were stronger than they and overpowered them!

Interestingly, as the sexual climate became less repressed and grew more open and permissive, these “attacks” by rapacious daemons diminished in frequency until they are now all but non-existent in today’s swinging, cosmopolitan society. That should tell you a good deal about the true nature of our subjects right there.

To the Black Magician, however, the Incubus and Succubus are creatures of delight, to be summoned at will. It is harmless fun as long as the sorcerer or sorceress recognizes them for what they are, creations of his or her own mind, with no existence other than that which we choose to give them. They are not separate, tangible entities, and do not become so until we call them into existence by the creative power of our own wills. When we cease to think of them, they cease to exist, until the next time we fashion them through imagination and desire.

For the novice magician this confusion between objective and subjective existence is a common mistake as he or she moves slowly and sometimes painfully through the learning process. Are there any of us who do not look back upon our own fledgling years and cringe at the mistakes we made? Remember some of the asinine ideas we had? We all go through this phase, but the point is not to get bogged down there - to pass beyond it with an awareness of the pitfalls we have avoided, as well as those into which we blundered.

The evolution of the will and clarity of perception it brings enable us to see that things such as daemon lovers are brought into being by our own heightened powers. This does not make the physical sensations any less real or satisfying. On the contrary, they can become highly intense and quite pleasurable. Kept in perspective, it can be a healthy, enjoyable experience.

The key words here are “kept in perspective”. If this is lost sight of, the magician ends up behaving like a stereotyped caricature, going off in all the wrong directions and wasting precious time & energy. By the time we have evolved to the level of Setians, all such running-in-circles should be done with.

To be sure, some mistakes will still be made. We are, after all, human - some of us, that is. Erroneous ideas and misconceptions will occur. But basic perception and understanding of the true nature and power of the Setian will should be mastered at this point in our evolution, as well as the application of that will to the universe around us and recognition of its resultant effects. Failure to recognize this concept is an indication that more time is needed in the development and evolution of the magician. There are no short-cuts, no overnight wizards. Until and unless this is thoroughly understood, attempts to function as such will be largely ineffectual.

Now go ahead and summon those nameless and unspeakable playmates, and may a good time be had by all!
Appendix 28: The Second Year

- by Michael A. Aquino V°
High Priest of Set
Scroll of Set #II-10, June 1977

As you can see from the Executive Director’s report, we have devoted much of our second year of operation to refining the systems created in the first year, as well as to introducing some new ones for testing. We have experienced some complete successes and some failures - all of which adds up to a year well-spent. [I mistrust “failure-free” situations; it is an unmistakable sign that little or no experimentation is tolerated, or that unfavorable results of experiments are being swept under the rug. A crucial part of the “atmosphere” of the Temple of Set must be the freedom to err without fear of lingering ostracism after corrective measures have been applied.]

I think it is about time to explain the “model” of the Temple of Set to you in detail - the conceptual vision of this institution that I have in mind when I make decisions concerning its development. Once you understand what it is that we are heading towards, the intermediate steps - and the growing pains - will seem somewhat less mysterious.

Let me begin by answering a question which arises quite frequently in discussions with new Setians and non-members alike: Just how - if at all - does the Temple really differ from other occult, magical, or religious groups? Isn’t it just “the same old story” with slightly different mythological trappings and a higher degree of organizational efficiency?

There are three very important parts to the answer. The first part is that, before developing its philosophy, the Temple has attained a perspective on human history [both philosophical and practical] that is, in the strictest possible sense, all-inclusive and detached. We have made a careful study of human ideas and behavior for the express purpose of avoiding repetition of patterns, on the principle that those who do not understand and appreciate history are condemned to relive it.

The detachment involved in this perspective is equally important. Objectivity in any analysis requires a complete lack of bias on the part of the analyst. [This is why computers are invaluable as analytical tools ... to the extent that they do not have human bias programmed into them!]

The Setian mind differs from the human mind precisely in its ability to detach itself from the vast panorama of the “natural” course of events and to assess that panorama from an independent vantage-point. The crystal-clear “vision” that results - and the subsequent operations of the Setian mind upon that panorama to influence it - are the essence of what the natural, human mind can only understand as “magic” - because the principles involved are completely beyond the reach of its vision. This principle of complete historical scope and detached perspective is found in no other institution on this planet. It is entirely unique to the Temple of Set.

The second part of the answer is that the Temple is gradually being configured to operate in an environment that is distinct from that of material, natural events and non-comprehensible to those whose value systems are limited to the natural universe. This means that the behavior of the Temple will ultimately not be influenced or controlled by outside events, but will be based upon a matrix of principles and priorities determined by the Temple itself.
Technically this also means that the Temple will never pose a deliberate threat to human political or social developments, because it will not be an interested party to them. It will merely take them into objective account when evaluating the material environment in which it must exist. In “escaping” from the natural course of human events, the Temple must never make the mistake of ignoring it. In fact we must understand and appreciate it far more thoroughly than the humans who exist completely within its confines if we are to neutralize its - and their - influence upon us.

As in the relationship between Hari Seldon’s Foundation and the Empire, human society cannot claim that the Temple of Set poses a deliberate threat to it. But human nature is such that it fears anything outside of its comprehension and will actively attempt to destroy it rather than to tolerate it. We would be quite foolish if we did not appreciate this fact; on the other hand we must not allow that appreciation to give way to paranoia.

The Temple must control events in such a way so that it is never perceived or isolated as a target. This is a task which has many ramifications. The first and simplest one is that the Temple must not distort its true admissions process - one of recognition rather than of attempted conversion or indoctrination. If we seek numerical growth as a measure of “success”, we will completely violate the principle of the Elect Setian mind as the only criterion for membership.

Another aspect of distorted admissions is that humans who are exposed to the internal workings of the Temple will necessarily perceive them in a different way than we do - at best as nonsensical and at worst as a threat. When such humans are eventually processed out of the Temple, they will be suspicious and fearful of it. That it is illogical for them to hold that opinion will make no difference; they will form the vanguard of any “witch-hunt” that might develop. [Remember that Pythagoras and his school were destroyed by a mob led by and consisting largely of persons who had been dismissed from that school as being intellectually inadequate.]

At all times we must be careful to explain the Temple to curious humans in such a way that they understand its non-interference with their affairs. Only if we fail to do this are we asking for trouble by permitting a polarization to solidify against us. Make no mistake: If such a polarization should transpire, our chances of surviving it are nebulous indeed.

This is a good time to explain a few things about the First Foundation of the Temple, that “super-sinister” element that you have heard described as everything from an Orwellian “Thought Police” to a paramilitary variant on the Nazi SS. 1F is neither. Rather it is a task force with the specific mission of forecasting the social environment in which the Temple will be existing within the near- and medium-range future [up to about 50 years ahead], and of recommending timely preparations which the Temple should make to exist comfortably under such circumstances. It is really as simple as that.

The rumors get started for the simple reason that some of the alternative factors which must be evaluated in an objective forecast imply rather ugly future situations, which would call for correspondingly substantial reconfigurations of the Temple. But forecasting is a long way from established fact, and is by no means a justification for over-reaction on our part. It is a research tool, not a crystal ball. [I don’t mind saying that the forecasting technique to be tested by 1F is conceptually the most advanced - and accurate - in existence.]

The third part of the answer is that the Temple of Set is not a “thing in itself” to whose benefit the efforts of its Initiates are directed. Using the analogy of Metropolis, it is not a machine feeding upon the energy of its tenders. Put more precisely, it is a collection of systems designed to maximize the individual Setian’s expenditure of energy for magical ends.
Let us examine this point carefully. The vast number of factors and the great personal expertise which a magician must bring to bear upon a given problem make the probability of error and/or inaccuracy very high. Accordingly a lone practitioner will spend a great deal of time and effort on wild-goose chases, or in repeating the processes of elimination that many another magician has laboriously pursued before [or may be pursuing simultaneously]. Efficient communication of past and present techniques will go a long way towards eliminating this problem.

The magician’s work may be directed towards uncomprehending recipients, of course, but within the Temple an increasing percentage of it is undertaken with the object of communicating the results to minds capable of appreciating them. Here the Temple membership structure serves a second function - that of identifying such minds at levels of initiatory awareness recognized by the degree-system. By recourse to this reference structure, a magician may direct efforts to where they will achieve the maximum results with the minimum waste.

The research-oriented machinery within the Temple is being designed with a similar economy and simplicity in mind. According to the present concept, it boils down to four distinct yet interlocking areas: (1) The Scroll, (2) The Ruby Tablet, (3) Data Processing, and (4) Personal Contact.

The Scroll of Set is designed to convey information of time-value to the entire Temple at short notice, as well as to introduce ideas for general consideration which have not been researched in depth. Purely-administrative articles and notices are kept to a minimum, so that philosophical & magical material may be given priority. Contributions from I°-IV° Initiates are all encouraged. [I deliberately avoid sending material other than these annual reports in order to maximize the space available to others.]

The size, composition, weight, and length of the Scroll are all designed to maximize information. Expensive frills such as multicolor printing and heavyweight paper are avoided. Bound volumes of the newsletter are available at a low price to new Setians [or to current ones who desire a bound set].

A measure of the Scroll is that, in the two years of its existence, the volume and scientific/intellectual value of its contents have easily surpassed the precision, scope, and timeliness of all other occult/religious/magical literature in existence.

The Ruby Tablet of Set, presently scheduled for initial release this summer, will be a Setian encyclopædia designed for reference material of a longer and more complex nature than is suitable for the Scroll. It will serve as a repository for some of the most advanced philosophy of the Temple and, like the Scroll, it will not be available to non-Setians. [In fact, because of the nature of many of its contents, it will be available only to those who have been recognized as II° or above.] It will be produced in loose-leaf, so that additions and modifications to the contents can be made frequently - even monthly - without necessitating wasteful, tedious overhauls of the entire encyclopædia.

Via a system designed by its Editor, Magister Robert Ethel, the various essays are extensively footnoted, cross-referenced, and indexed to a master bibliography - which itself will be keyed to a new Temple Reading List about 2-3 times the size, detail, and sophistication of the present one. The Ruby Tablet will gradually expand into a work covering the entire scope of the Temple and completely surpassing such prior efforts as the Equinox, the Golden Bough, etc. in length, organization, and timeliness of data.

[So that the Temple will not become bogged down in storing and distributing a variety of books, the idea is to consolidate the contents of as many papers as possible in the Ruby Tablet. For example, The Book of Coming Forth by Night: Analysis & Commentary will not be reprinted as a single volume; its pages will eventually be reprinted as a section of
To date our Data Processing element, overseen from Detroit by Magister Michael Grumboski, has been used in only a limited fashion - for membership records and cross-referencing of statistical and demographic data. In the future this element will gradually assume a role of greater and greater importance to the Temple. Computers have the ability to store, process, transmit, and refine immense amounts of data at incredibly high speeds. For an operation of our projected scope, computer technology will be absolutely indispensable.

As the logical criteria for our magical operations, forecasting procedures, and cooperative projects are determined in greater and greater detail, it will be to our advantage to key them into software programs that can be applied to computer modules at momentary notice for the solution of specific problems. Coding systems for such data may be developed which will enable Setians with personal hand-calculators to decipher numerical print-outs into readable documents. These are not pipe dreams; they are concepts which are on the drawing boards right now.

The final component of our research/communications network is as crucial as the others: personal contact. Printed material can accomplish a great deal, but it cannot capture the essence of the Setian mind in the way that personal communication can. Indeed the very process of initiatory recognition of the Temple depends completely upon personal evaluation. Appropriately emphasis will always be placed in this area.

Conclaves, personal meetings, Pylon activities, newsletters, bulletins, and individual letters all form a part of this process. From Santa Barbara alone more than eight good-sized “telephone books” of letters have gone out in the past two years - twice the output of six years’ correspondence for the old Church of Satan. Forty-one bulletins of up to ten single-spaced pages apiece have gone out to the Priesthood, frequently accompanied by voluminous enclosures as well - all to ensure that every Priest and Priestess of Set is completely up-to-date on the “nerve center” workings of the Temple. All this is to ensure that when you contact one of these officials - any one - he or she will have immediate access to the same data that I do.

There is an extremely important reason for this stress upon personal contact. As you know, Setians I° face a time-limit of two years in which they must demonstrate their ability to be recognized as II°. This is not something which they can achieve by memorizing and parroting Temple documents. [Indeed little more than the Scroll is even made available to a I°.]

Rather this ability will be recognized in a I° by a III° in the course of normal, systematic dialogue between them. It is a quality which is not the product of “occult book-learning”, but of an individual’s presence of mind in the strictest possible sense.

Another effect of this practice is that persons who join the Temple with the idea of gaining access to its archives while remaining mute and unseen themselves will discover that the majority of Temple texts will be unavailable to them - and that within two years they will be gently but firmly disengaged from the Temple altogether. The time and energy of the Elect are precious and will not be wasted on parasites. They are reserved for those who are also Elect - who will continue to find their way to us and to Come Into Being as the first manifestations of the Third Stage of human evolution.

This, then, is a working profile of the Temple of Set - an organization which is at once based on principles older than the Pyramids and yet developing concepts far ahead of conventional science. Indeed it is “Alpha and Omega” - possible by Xeper.
Appendix 29: Rituals Without Chambers

- by L. Dale Seago IV°
Scroll of Set #II-11, July 1977

In the writings and teachings of traditional occult philosophy, one encounters constant references to an “astral body” and an “astral plane” (or equivalent terms such as “etheric”). The astral is described as a finer, more “spiritualized” state of matter than that with which the profane are familiar, and the most marvelously mutable qualities are ascribed to it.

The traveler on the astral plane is free from ordinary spatial restrictions. He may walk, in his astral body, right through a wall of his house, since he can perceive and function within a different “universe”. However, he will not necessarily be able to perceive the ordinary, objective universe. Thus, having passed through the wall of his home, he may not be aware that it is raining outside. In Magick in Theory and Practice Aleister Crowley observed that:

> This astral plane is so varied and so changeable that several clairvoyants looking at the same thing might give totally different accounts of what they saw; yet they might each make correct deductions. (page #145)

And then again, they might not. Thus it can be seen that the astral observations or creations of two or more individuals will correspond to each other only by chance or by predetermined collaboration, which makes the idea of effective communication or conference on the astral plane an invalid concept. This by no means rules out telepathy or clairvoyance, but these phenomena do not necessarily have anything to do with the astral plane per se - if they did, we would find less divergence in accounts of astral experiences.

Since the nature and details of experiences on the astral plane are so varied among individuals and so closely related to individual consciousness, it should be glaringly obvious [though most occultists are too blinded by the conditioning influence of tradition to see the connection] that the astral plane is actually a product of the human mind. It has no objective existence. The astral plane is not a place, but a state of consciousness. Yet its nonexistence does not really matter. It is irrelevant as long as the concept of an astral plane has a personal value for the individual magician. Astral projection and creation still have their uses.

[A contemporary occultist who has kept up with current parapsychological research would probably argue at this point that the bioluminescent energy fields photographed by the Kirlian process are the astral bodies of occult tradition, and that the existence of an astral body implies the existence of an astral state. If this complex of energies is in fact the astral body, one would expect to be able to photograph a projecting yogi or magician and not see the field. However, the emanations cease upon the physical death of an organism, and only then. Likewise, since the astral plane is said to be on a higher vibratory level than the physical, if the photographs are of the astral doubles of physical organisms, we would expect to see occasional intrusions of physically-discarnate astral entities or objects into the photographs - which does not occur.]

What exactly is astral projection? In a certain philosophical sense it is a flagrant violation of the laws of the physical universe/God. In the normal, “physical” plane one receives sensory input which triggers one’s mental and physical conditioned-response mechanisms, leading to creation of mental images and to physical actions as reactions to external stimuli.

Astral projection is a total inversion of this process, enabling the magician to create and control private universe of his own design. It is the next step upward in sophistication and complexity from the concentration exercises described by Priest Holt in “The Yoga From Yuggoth”. There is little difference in kind between this sort of projection and imagination; the distinction is a crucial one of degree. A conventional daydream is an example of what is meant by imagination in this context; it is far too crude in detail, aimless in purpose, lacking in directed will to qualify as projection.

Mental projection requires an effort of the will sufficient to enable the magician to literally forget the existence of the physical body and environment. One creates from within instead of reacting to stimuli from without. Once one is able to reach this state, it makes no difference “where” the physical body is, since one’s sphere of attention can be projected to the other end of the universe. Mastery of astral technique is obviously difficult to acquire, but it has a tremendous advantage in that it can be used under almost any physical conditions, with or without the facilities of a ritual chamber or a library of reference materials. Indeed one can create one’s own astral Temple, as lavishly appointed as can be desired, complete with Daimonic servitors and familiars, and retire into it for the performance of one’s rituals.

Astral technique is a key to the control of time. Conventional concepts of linear time do not apply in mental projection, just as a tremendously complex dream may take place in only a minute or two. Far from being a fixed law, time can be accelerated or decelerated by the magician. The implications of this alone make projection a technique of incalculable value.

An excellent example of astral creation is Lovecraft’s The Dream-Quest of Unknown Kadath. While he uses the term “dream” rather than astral projection, the result is the same. A more recent example is Priest Holt’s “A Fantasy” in Voice of the Dragon #II-2. Personal experimentation is strongly recommended, for it will be found that frequent exercise of this technique will have an abnormally-strengthening effect upon the ability of the mind to create - not only on the astral plane, but on the physical as well.
Coming to your local theater sometime in the near future will be the space epic Star Wars, the newest and most spectacular science fiction movie to come down the pike since 2001. Time and Newsweek have hailed Star Wars as “this year’s best movie”, “spectacular”, whose special effects “outdo 2001”. Well, they’re absolutely right. Don’t miss this movie. The special effects alone [costing $9.5 million] will boggle your mind; the battle scenes and the spacecraft are absolutely spectacular; and when the hero’s ship jumps into hyperspace, the audience cheers [not the maneuver - the special effect]. The miniatures are outstanding, and they’re all from the studio that brought you 2001 - Elstree.

The story is pure space opera. The evil Empire and its minion Darth Vader try to crush the rebel forces with the ultimate weapon, a planet destroyer called the Death Star (a spherical, inhabited doomsday machine). The dewy-eyed young hero, Luke Skywalker, his friend smuggler Han Solo, Solo’s copilot Chewbacca (an eight-foot high walking rug), the brave and brainy Princess Leia, and Obi-Wan “Ben” Kenobi, the last Jedi Knight, combine to destroy the Death Star. You hiss the villains, cheer the heroes, and applaud when the Death Star explodes.

But the battle is not won by the spectacular pyrotechnics of the rebel firepower, but rather by Luke’s reliance on the “Force”. The Jedi Knights, an organization that had kept peace in the galaxy for thousands of years, tapped into the “Force”, the energy which surrounds all living things. The Jedi Knights had the ability to take the “Force” and direct it toward a goal by will. The Knights were destroyed by Ben Kenobi’s pupil Darth Vader, who had become corrupted by the Imperium.

Kenobi tries to instruct young Luke Skywalker in the use of the “Force” in one scene of the movie; he forces Luke to let go of his conscious seeing mind and let his inner mind sense and direct the “Force”. All well and good. Later, at the climax of the movie, Luke must use the “Force” again to direct his weapons in the destruction of the Death Star. Throughout this whole battle Ben Kenobi makes statements to Luke [mentally] such as “Use the force, Luke,” “Rely on the Force,” etc., which Luke dismisses as figments of his imagination until, at the last crucial moment, he does take Ben’s advice and uses the “Force” on his torpedoes.

In the preceding paragraph I feel I have summed up the crucial [to Setians] issue in Star Wars. I personally liked the idea of the “Force” and most particularly the concept of directing the “Force”. However Luke is unsuited for using the “Force”. He is exposed to the “Force” by Ben Kenobi some hours/days prior to the battle. Ben wants to make Luke a Jedi Knight and gives him the key to the “Force”; Luke does not ask for it. Thus Luke does not really know what to do with the concept of the “Force”. Had he been aware of the “Force” before and asked Ben for instructions on becoming a Jedi Knight, his actual hesitant and reluctant use of the “Force” would have been unthinkable.

We as Setians entered the Temple of our own volition - we weren’t pushed, compelled into joining. Therefore we act differently in regards to will. We actively push our minds into directing our will [the key word is “actively”]. We asked to join; we want to learn and evolve. However Luke was given the key to the “Force”, and instead of taking this new power and exercising it, he merely uses it when he simply has no other choice. The application of the “Force” in Luke’s case is merely accidental. He’ll use it again if and when he’s in dire straits, whereas a Setian would direct his/her will from the beginning. For us, using the “Force” would not be accidental.

From the loose ends that have been left dangling at the film’s end, we should expect at least one sequel. I would be particularly interested in observing how Luke matures in his ability to use the “Force”. Most importantly, would Luke continue to use the “Force” by accident, or would he in effect evolve into its use? Luke has received a gift he doesn’t deserve, and he uses it without real understanding of its value. What he needs to learn is that using the “Force” is a privilege accorded to very few, and that he should grow with its use. Then and only then should he have the ability to manipulate the “Force”.

At any rate, the movie as a whole is worth the price of admission. Even at the highly-inflated prices ($4.50 in San Francisco), Star Wars is a blockbuster.
Appendix 31: Setian Science & Technology: The Pentagram of Set

- by Benjamin Kracauer II°
Scroll of Set #II-12, August 1977

The Divine Proportion, symbolized by the Greek letter φ and numerically expressed as the irrational number 1.61803 ... is inherent to the geometry of the pentagram as all of its lesser to greater ratios.

I quote from the Book of Coming Forth by Night:

When I came first to this world, I gave to you my great pentagram, timeless measure of beauty through proportion. And it was shown inverse, that creation and change be exalted above rest and preservation.

As Magus Michael Aquino has pointed out in his Analysis and Commentary, the Divine Proportion, or Sacred Cut as it was known in ancient Egypt, is the basis for the pentagram’s importance, and the calculation of φ an important use of the pentagram’s configuration. The discovery of the Divine Proportion by Max Raphael in prehistoric cave paintings, published in his book Prehistoric Cave Paintings, places the Divine Proportion with the first known attempts by man to develop an art of figurative and symbolic representation.

Of all the properties which researchers have extracted from analysis of the Great Pyramid at Giza, perhaps one most significant is its cross-section, a triangle which, if its base be assumed equal to one, the hypotenuse is equal to φ, and the adjacent side, or apothem, is the square root of φ.

Peter Tompkins, in his Secrets of the Great Pyramid, speculates that since the squaring of the circle is practically resolvable as a function of the number φ, the Pyramid was designed as a tool with which the squaring of the circle as well as the cubing of the sphere was possible. Using the (√φ) - φ - 1 triangle, the ancient Egyptians could construct maps using a Mercator projection from a spherical quadrant of 90° latitude onto a flat surface of equal area. Thus the Divine Proportion provides the key to the resolution between curved surface and flat surface as one of its many unique mathematical properties.

Schwaller de Lubicz has analyzed the triangular loincloth worn by pharaohs on dozens of stone relief representations. He invariably found two angles of the square root of φ and φ, which, due to the location of the loincloth, confirmed in his opinion the phallic attribution of the Divine Proportion. Similarly Max Raphael hypothesizes that the Golden Section - using the 19th century name for the Divine Proportion - was the key to form-making of the most profound sort.

The Golden Section is the synthesis of space and motion (time). The Golden Section is the proportion that creates form and that stresses the universality and unity of relations within this form.

The sequence of numbers known as the Fibonacci Series, developed by the medieval Italian mathematician Leonardo Fibonacci (1170-1230), is an additive series in which each term is the sum of the two previous terms. Beginning arbitrarily with the couplet 1,1, we may generate the following series: 1,1,2,3,5,8,13,21,34,etc. As the numbers increase, the ratio of two adjacent terms approaches closer and closer to the Divine Proportion.

An interesting property: adding Fibonacci whole number units to Divine Proportion units will generate a logarithm series which, only in this particular instance, is identical to a simple summation series:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Summation Series</th>
<th>Logarithm Series</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>φ</td>
<td>1.618 ...</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1+φ</td>
<td>2.618 ... or φ²</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1+ 2φ</td>
<td>4.236 ... or φ³</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2+ 3φ</td>
<td>6.854 ... or φ⁴</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3+ 5φ</td>
<td>11.090 ... or φ⁵</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

If you will, the above represents a synthesis between geometric growth and arithmetic growth which only the Divine Proportion is capable of achieving.

In a remarkable dissertation in architecture done at the University of Pennsylvania by Anne Tyng called Simultaneous Randomness and Order: The Fibonacci-Divine Proportion as a Universal Forming Principle, the Fibonacci-Divine Proportion (F-DP) is seen manifested in a wide range of phenomena which span the biological, physical, chemical, psychological, mathematical, and architectural disciplines.

An example from genetics is the genetic drift formula which is used to calculate the percentage of heterozygotes present in the offspring of the nth generation under conditions of controlled sibmating.

Plant growth is seen to be controlled by the Divine Proportion, in the patterning of leaves on a stem, in the whorl-like arrangement of the florets of a sunflower, and in the scales of a pine cone.

Jumping to the astronomical scale, Wilson (Hierarchical Structure in the Cosmos) has found Fibonacci rates to occur in mass limit calculations of planets, stars and galaxies. Muse (The Fibonacci Study of Consciousness) has found the Fibonacci Series in observations of eclipses of the Moon.

Pascal’s Triangle contains the odds for head or tails probabilities, giving the ratios for head/tail (or boy/girl) occurrences. If one were to draw a series of diagonals through this triangle and total the numbers through which each given diagonal passes, the sequence of numbers which results will be the Fibonacci Series, therefore relating probability to the Divine Proportion.

The dodecahedron and the icosahedron are the two higher Platonic solids. The Platonic solids are the only five regular polyhedra possible in three-dimensional space. A regular polyhedron is defined as having all faces identical and all angles the same. The three simpler Platonic solids are the tetrahedron, cube, and octahedron. The dodecahedron and the icosahedron are both based on pentagonal symmetry, and either one when rotated on an axis will generate the double helical outline of the DNA molecule. The DNA helix is in plan a decagon figure in which the Divine Proportion appears as the ratio between the radius of a circumscribed circle and the side of a decagon.

In the carbon atom bond one finds a fundamental Fibonacci square roots of 1, 2, 3 right-angled triangle, which is also the central structure of the three simpler Platonic solids. Deutsch’s experiments with the nervous system have indicated the occurrence of the Fibonacci triangle in the spacing of overlapping neuron fields.

Another discovery by Deutsch is the occurrence of the number \((\sqrt{5}+1)/2 (=\phi)\) in calculations for nervous system stability in experiments with amplifier gain in multisynaptic neuron chains with feedback.

The Weber-Fechner Law states that the perception of light intensity in a room which is lit by an unseen source of successively 1, 2, 3, 5, 8 and 13 candles will be perceived as equal changes in luminance by the experimental observer. Here the Fibonacci Series is seen to have an intrinsic relationship to the subjective perceptual apparatus as the basis for vision thresholds. The same relationship applies to thermoreceptors sensitive to cold and warmth, chemoreceptors such as the taste buds, and mechanoreceptors for touch and hearing.

Regarding the Fibonacci-Divine Proportion occurrence in scientific studies of the human nervous system, Tyng proffers this speculation:

The human brain has an immeasured capacity for both randomness and order: I propose that this seeming paradox of simultaneous randomness and order may be resolved by a physical statistical matrix of Fibonacci-Divine Proportion linkage.

I propose that as a matrix for the human brain, the Fibonacci-Divine Proportion forming principle includes the processes for probability and for order for the brain’s evolutionary origins and sets no limit to the future evolution of the human brain and its creativity; within such a matrix the brain forms as it is being formed.

The pentagram is a symbolic structure of Divine Proportion linkages which probably relates to all manifestations of form in this universe. The pentagram’s geometry is constructed so that every line segment is in Divine Proportion with another line segment, within a symmetry which is simultaneously radial and bilateral. Insofar as the Divine Proportion represents a universal forming principle, the pentagram embodies a paradigmatic structure representing the means by which a universe of infinite complexity is theoretically possible such that its parts, however diverse, relate to each other in the aspiration towards an overall consistency.

The Book of Coming Forth by Night relates the pentagram to the faculty of creation. Johannes Kepler saw the convergence of the Fibonacci Series on the Divine Proportion as symbolic of creation:

> It is in the likeness of this self-developing series that the faculty of propagation is, in my opinion, formed; and so in a flower the authentic flag of this faculty is flown, the pentagon.

Kepler saw the pentagon as being symbolic of the form-making potentiality of the Fibonacci-Divine Proportion. The pentagram, however, is a far richer construction, as it contains all the pentagonal diagonals intersecting each other in Divine Proportion, while clearly alluding to the pentagonal form with its radial points and actually containing a fully-formed pentagon in its center.

The potentiality of the pentagram within the pentagon is far more subtle and therefore hidden. Yet the pentagram is as simple a form as the pentagon, as both are composed of five equal line segments intersecting at equal angles. While the pentagon stresses the autonomy of its forming segments, the pentagram posits a series of formal linkages with intentions of an ordered richness of interaction. The pentagon is explicitly formed within the pentagram; the pentagon contains the pentagram only by implication. The asymmetry between these two forms establishes the primacy and ascendancy of the pentagram as the true symbol of the potentialities of creation which the Divine Proportion seems to represent.

Appendix 32: Sainthood vs. Sethood

- by Robert Menschel I°

Scroll of Set #III-1, September 1977

The Universe abounds with opposites: Bright and Dark, Long and Short, Solid and Gaseous, Good and Evil. Most opposites are relative and have an infinity of positions between them.

One pair of opposites is Sainthood and Sethood. A Saint is one who “becomes one with God”, who gives up his identity to become part of God, who willingly and willfully follows only the will of God [”God” here may be “the one”, “the all”, the universe, the racial subconscious, or whatever]. A Set (referring to a generic type, rather than Set itself) is one who establishes an identity, an individuality, as completely separated from God. Between these extremes lie all types of people.

Just what does it take to be a Saint? The Saint-to-be must decide to become a Saint [to follow the will of God only]! He must decide what is needed to do this and how to personally effect the required changes. He must then do it. He must continually evaluate his life, advancement, and methods and must change them as required.

The Set-to-be must discover the qualities of Set. He needs to determine how to develop these qualities in himself. He must make these changes. He must repeatedly review his methods and their results and improve on the methods.

Being a Saint requires intelligence and the will to follow the path to Sainthood despite all temptations. There are few Saints. There are few Sets. Sainthood and Sethood require similar strength and will. Only the direction is different.

Between these extremes are all types of people. The majority of people do not wish to be at either extreme. Others do not have the intelligence to determine their path. Others do not have the will to follow their chosen path.

Setians have chosen their path, are learning the methods, and are exercising their wills.

Good and evil are opposites. There are good acts and evil acts. There are good people who perform good acts, evil people who perform evil acts, and all types of people in between. People are judged by what they do.

Good and evil are external attributes. Sainthood and Sethood are internal attributes. Good is as good does. Set is as Set is.

Traditionally Saints are considered to be good and magicians evil. Traditionally the will of God is good; therefore those who oppose it and follow their own individual wills must be evil. It ain’t necessarily so.

A Saint becomes one with God; a Saint follows the will of God, for good, evil, or indifference.

Setians striving for Sethood must concentrate on their individuality and act as determined by their own will for their own advancement. [Good and evil acts still have relevance for the Setian, since society “judges” us by this external attribute. A good Setian will have less interference from society than an evil Setian - an Indifferent Setian perhaps even less.]

Setians are beyond good and evil. However this should not be because we don’t care whether we do good or evil, but rather because we act for the total value of the act, rather than simply because an act is good or evil.

Are there examples of how a Setian might behave, other than those given by our Priests, Masters, and Magus? Sainthood and Sethood are so similar that we might examine...
Saintly behavior and from it extrapolate “Setly” behavior.

Saint Francis is among the most revered of Saints. He found his way to Sainthood, trod it willfully and willingly, and became a Saint. He Xepered. Saint Francis performed few if any good acts. He did not preach to the world. He did not condemn those who did not follow his path. He did not even lead his followers; he simply permitted them to accompany him. Saint Francis discovered his own path and followed it. Any leadership was by example.

Anita Bryant has also chosen a path. Her path, however, leads not through personal Xeper. Rather she is trying to mold the world to fit her own personal, as yet limited concepts. She will not Xeper. She is stirring up much psychic ill will, and we know how dangerous such ill will can be.

Saints and Sets must Xeper. Only then may they accomplish their goal. Choose your own path and follow it. The first step of Setamorphosis is internal.
Once upon a time Sekhmet was awakened from her noon nap by all the living things on Earth and by all the gods and goddesses, because Apep was daring to eat Ra in front of them, and they were all frightened.

But all the gods and goddesses knew that Sekhmet could save Ra. Sekhmet got up, snarling at being so rudely awakened. Like all felines she enjoys her noon naps in little patches of sunlight under big trees. But the other gods and goddesses prevailed and calmed Sekhmet as they explained the seriousness of the situation.

Sekhmet is used to that upstart Apep trying to eat Ra each afternoon and causing it to get dark all over the Earth. Even though she enjoys the darkness of night, when she can hunt under the gem-like stars strewn on the soft darkness, she also knows that if she doesn’t save Ra, all life will perish. If she doesn’t save Ra, her own existence is in peril, so every night, Sekhmet scares Apep and makes him vomit Ra up and put him back together again, just in time for Ra to get into the barque that carries him across the daytime sky.

This day, however, Apep must have slithered into Ra’s barque, hiding until the dastardly deed was to be done. Sekhmet cast aside her fear of swimming and set out for the barque. The fight for Ra had begun. Luckily for all living things, and for all the gods and goddesses, Apep had only begun to eat Ra when Sekhmet climbed into the barque.

She pounced on Apep, roaring and with claws and fangs bared, and scared Apep so much that he let go of Ra after only one bite. Apep spat that up and, with a paw on Apep, Sekhmet herself put Ra back together again. Then she took Apep in her mouth, jumped back into the sky, and returned to Earth.

The wily Apep slithered out of her mouth and got away, but Sekhmet knew he’d be back later in the afternoon, just when Ra’s barque would be landing. So she lay down to wait for him, purring at her great accomplishment. All the living things and gods and goddesses gave loud cheers of thanks to Sekhmet for saving Ra, and for saving them.

And this is why you don’t ever need to worry about Ra. As long as Sekhmet is here, waiting for his barque, she will protect him from Apep, and we’ll have our little patches of sunlight to keep warm in, while we wait for the darkness and the good hunting it brings.

Curl up, my kittens, and go back to sleep. You’re safe.
All life on Earth is undergoing continual evolution.

Mankind’s most notable physical evolution to date has been his brain. Man first used his brain to simply survive. He learned to use tools, then to construct tools, and then to shape his environment.

Man has learned universal laws. We understand thermodynamics, and use thermodynamics. We continue to learn; we continue to use what we learn.

Man also evolves socially. Man is learning ethics. Discrimination is lessening. People are being given the chance to fulfill their potential as never before. More and more, people are permitted to follow [or not follow] their religions as they individually desire.

The animal kingdom evolves [mostly] physically. Man appears to evolve [primarily] mentally. All our above processes are continuing, still evolving, just as other species continue to evolve. Further, because our mental evolution does not require concurrent physical change, it apparently happens faster than physical evolution would.

Two hundred years ago there was a white moth, as white as the trees upon which it rested. Colored mutations of the moth were spied, and eaten by predators. These moths live in industrial England. The birches are now speckled, as is the species. White mutations are now the ones that get seen - and eaten.

Evolution is continual, and occurs in many directions. The moth is still with us, evolved. The dodo didn’t make it - the first known case of evolutionary failure: extinction.

Man has learned/is learning universal laws. We are now, finally, scientifically studying psychic phenomena. We are applying scientific methods to examine the statistics, possible causes, and possible effects of psychic powers. This is yet another direction of mankind’s evolution.

I see four lines of evolution into our development and use of psychic powers:

• There are the traditional magicians, who explore the unknown, blindly pushing in all directions, superstitiously grabbing at any method that works, jealously hiding their advances from competitors.

• There are the psychics, who simply do what they do. They may use their gift or fear it. They generally do not attempt to study it.

• There are the scientists, who study the unknown carefully, precisely, seeing and recording what happens [if it happens]. They are proving that, yes, something is happening.

• The fourth and newest group is the Temple of Set. We follow the dark, blind paths of the magicians, using the bright lights of the scientists. Yes, this works! Reduce it to the working minimum and use it, study it, improve on it, and continue past it to the next discovery, to the next use of our powers.
We combine science and magic as has never been done before. The Temple is evolving quickly, successfully. The Elect are also evolving. I feel that this indicates our pathway of evolution is a successful one.

But then our path is the one that Set would have us travel. “For mankind now hastens toward an annihilation which none but the Elect may hope to avoid.” Ours is apparently the strongest evolutionary path open.

There is evolution as a species. Is there evolution as an individual?

There is a theory of “karmic” evolution: that souls progress and evolve through a succession of lives and deaths towards perfection (nirvana, sainthood, etc.).

I personally do not [yet] believe in reincarnation. However if reincarnation does take place, then I believe in the evolution of the soul. This evolution of the soul may not be the cause of the social evolutions noted above.

If the soul evolves, it is reasonable to assume that the individual involved evolves during his/her lifetime, I happen to believe that the individual does evolve within a lifetime. I see these individual evolutions. Whether this growth is limited to one lifetime or covers many is immaterial.

Further this individual evolution seems to match mankind’s social evolution. There are scientists, academicians, magicians, slaves, dictators, slave owners, democrats, and Setians. Each individual has reached that given point [or points] in an individual evolution.

If the soul evolves across lifetimes, then it is reasonable to assume that those souls which have evolved the farthest are inhabiting the individuals that are at the head of their evolutionary path. If this is the only life we get, then the individuals who have evolved the most in this lifetime are the leaders in their respective paths.

When the slaves and/or slaveowners evolve away from their current state [as the moth above evolved], or die out [as did the dodo], then those evolutionary conditions will be at an end.

As indicated above, Setians are the leading wave of the strongest [in potential, not numbers] evolutionary trend today. [In their Morning of the Magicians Louis Pauwels and Jacques Bergier hint at others who trod this path before us, but Set apparently makes no mention of these.] Where might our future evolution lead?

Man has the power to alter his environment, and this power becomes stronger every day. Man can evolve so that the environment is totally controlled by man, so that the environment centers upon man, so that the environment becomes man and man the environment.

But even Set “cannot destroy the Cosmic Inertia without having to assume its place”. Set “could achieve identity only by becoming what the Cosmic order was not”.

Setians, therefore, must lead in the other direction. It is imperative for each of us to keep the “I” separate and distinct from the “not-I”. Just as “HarWer must exist while Set exists”, we should each define the “not-I” so that we may better define the “I”, better be the “I”.

Our evolutionary path includes this definition of the “not-I”, the definition of the “I”. As the “I” and the “not-I” become more distinct, we will know the “I” better, will know better what is required to evolve, and will evolve, will Xeper.

This is one path an individual might choose for evolution, and every evolutionary path has its dangers. Indeed it seems that the higher the evolutionary path, the greater (more dramatic, more disastrous) the dangers may be.

Every path has the danger of being a weak path. Note the dodo. These paths face the simple danger of being surpassed by other, more successful, stronger paths.
Mankind treads the highest evolutionary pathways we see on Earth. Yet mankind is headed for catastrophe.

Setians tread the foremost point of mankind’s path, and magic is dangerous. It is repeatedly stated in the Temple that the danger from White Magic is minimal. However it is there. Magus Aquino reports that Black Magic is more dangerous than White. Magister Seago has confirmed to me that the results of magical imbalance at the IV° are more dangerous than at the III°. I imagine greater dangers yet upon becoming a Magus.

“To make of man a Daimon, then, may be to break his Self-reference to the bounds in which his semblance must exist.” Magus LaVey was “raised to the Will of a Daimon”. This was a growth, a danger, for which he was neither prepared nor ready.

Where does our evolution lead? It may lead to Daimonhood and insanity. It may be a blind path, doomed to eventual extinction.

It may lead to Sethood.

My goal is not to attain Sethood, not Priesthood, nor even to become Adept. My personal goal is to \textit{Xeper}, through all the means I can discover, consciously, willfully, to evolve, to \textit{Xeper}.

I expect Sethood as I evolve, and then whatever comes after Sethood; these are but names to temporary steps in a continuing evolution. My goal is to consciously find, and willfully follow, the path of successful, ever higher, ever greater evolution.
“Death” is a word which stirs many ideas in our minds, most of which do not sit very comfortably with us. The thought that from non-existence we have come, and in a relatively short period of time to non-existence we may perhaps again return, is a thought which digs deep into the very nature of our being. The Temple of Set does not officially concern itself with life after death, as indeed it should not. This does not mean, however, that we cannot speculate on it. What follows is such a speculation.

Before I present my ideas, it is important to consider objective and subjective reality, and the universes in which each dwells.

What is objective reality? It is “God”. It is the universe [out there] and all the laws which apply therein. It is matter and energy, and all the relationships which apply to either or both. It is not our perceptions of them, but the things in and of themselves.

What is subjective reality? It is our many various and diverse perceptions of “God” in all its aspects.

It is also much, much more. It is our dreams and our fantasies. It is our own personal and private universe. “God”’s laws need not apply in our universe if we so choose. Our universe can be filled with whatever creatures or beings we wish. In it, one day we can be hunters, the next day we can be kings. There are no holes barred. We are supreme in it. In our subjective universe we are “God”, and only we rule.

It is here where astral projection must be brought into the picture. The astral universe has no objective existence. [Cf. “Rituals Without Chambers” by Magister L. Dale Seago, in Scroll #II-11.] It is completely a subjective creation. It exists only in the mind.

This does not make the astral world less valid, however. To the magician, the astral world is just as valid, if not more valid than the objective one. [Of course, as long as our bodies, which unfortunately are of “God”, must exist in objective reality, we cannot lose touch with that reality.]

So what does all this have to do with life, or more precisely, existence after physical death? When a person enters into the astral world, objective reality is left behind. Of course, while the body is still functioning, one can return to objective reality. Now if the physical body stops functioning, perhaps all that is left is the astral universe.

What am I saying? Perhaps when a person dies, that person enters into his own completely subjective universe, completely detached from objective existence. The characteristics and appearances of this astral world would be determined either knowingly by the conscious mind, unknowingly by the subconscious mind, or by a combination of both parts of the mind in varying degrees. This theory could explain the many different reports given by people with experiences similar to that of Adept Knaust [Scroll #III-2].

Of course this would raise a few questions. One would be: How long would this state last? Another and more important question would be: Could we ever contact or influence objective reality from our astral universe?

In reference to the first question, the stronger and more developed wills would probably last longer and the entirely underdeveloped wills would probably experience nothing at all and dissolve into nonexistence. [Of course the concept of “how long” would be meaningless, because time is nothing more than a relation of events. In our astral universe, we control all events and that makes us, in our astral world, among other things, masters of time.]

And in reference to the second question my answer is as follows: Perhaps reaching out of our subjective universe and touching objective reality is what magic is all about.
In the November 1977 supplement to the Scroll, I reviewed the concept of the I° - essentially a “screening process” to ensure that an individual and the Temple of Set can make an informed decision concerning their suitability for one another. When properly Recognized, the II° should indicate that the individual is satisfied with the magical and philosophical premises of the Temple; it should also indicate that the Temple is satisfied with the individual’s potential for exploring, understanding, and applying those same premises.

The II° Recognition is regarded quite seriously by the Priesthood of Set. No corruption in the process is tolerated, and mistakes in Recognition - when they come to light - are corrected promptly. Per the Temple By-Laws any III°+ has the authority to downgrade and/or expel any I° or II° for cause. All such decisions are reviewed to ensure fairness, but the point is that magical “imbalance” at any level of the Temple are not permitted to continue merely for the sake of convenience. [It might be noted that the same principle applies at III°+ levels.]

There are two reasons that access to some of the major systems and research materials of the Temple is withheld until the II°. The first is that, when a I° is being evaluated for the II°, it is important that his/her intrinsic philosophical, academic, and magical aptitudes be measured. If someone were merely to parrot Temple doctrines without really comprehending them or forming opinions as to their validity, distortion would occur. The qualities that we are looking for in an Adept are already present before exposure to specialized Temple material. It must be remembered that the Temple does not “make silk purses out of sows’ ears”. It is rather a “machine” for concentrating an already-present ability of certain individuals (the Elect).

The second reason is that, were we to permit it, the Temple would be vampirized by the “occult subculture”. Persons would join simply to gain access to the Scroll, the Ruby Tablet, etc., with no interest or intellectual commitment beyond that. Hence the II° Recognition as a precondition. This forces the would-be “armchair occultist” to either come out of his shell or be processed out of the Temple after the end of the 2-year I° time limit.

So when an individual is properly recognized as an Adept, what then? What do we mean by the title? What can and/or should the individual do as a consequence? What lies ahead, and where does the III° fit into the picture? Let me address each one of these questions in turn:

In the terminology of initiatory magic, an Adept is one who understands and can successfully employ the philosophy and techniques of the school or discipline in question. That the title may have been abused by charlatans from time to time is of no import, any more than the occasional abuse of the title “doctor” reflects adversely on properly-qualified Ph.D./M.D. recipients.

Is a Temple of Set Adept immediately qualified as such by this definition? Of course not. The II° is conferred as a recognition of potential for Coming Into Being as an Adept, not as an “end of the achievement award”. There is no such thing as a “complete” II° within the scope of the Temple, since the concept of Keper is one of expanding comprehension and magical evolution. To say much the same thing in Socratic terms, it is far easier to say what an Adept is not than what one is.

So you have just been recognized as an Adept. What do you do now? A II° stele and card will be sent to you automatically, but you must order the II° medallion and the Ruby Tablet from Magistra Wendall. At that point the direction in which you Xeper is completely up to you. As is the case with the Scroll, the Ruby Tablet is designed to be a two-way channel of communication. You can use it for information and reference, and you can submit ideas and research of your own for inclusion in it.

You will discover very quickly (if you haven’t already) that the concept of magic in the Temple of Set is a very broad one. A person who seeks in ceremonial magic a small, cozy eccentricity in which to build a psychological nest is destined to be disappointed, because an axiom of magic is that the most accurate assessment of any phenomenon is the one which treats it in the widest possible context. The magician is one who can “see the big picture” and determine the appropriate controls for guiding it towards desired ends. Such control will seem “magical” to someone who sees the same situation from an incomplete perspective. This is well illustrated in John Fowles’ The Magus.

Since the vistas before an Adept are so overwhelming, some new II°s experience a sort of “magical agoraphobia”. This is predictable and understandable. The solution is simply to work out a comfortably-paced program of interests and priorities. Then one can Xeper at a rate which is both enjoyable and stimulating. Caution must be taken to avoid becoming “intoxicated” by the experience to the extent that one becomes a “magical addict”. [If that is allowed to happen, the Adept’s perspective on the mundane world will suffer distortion, magical operations will come to lose their objective effectiveness, and the Adept’s sphere of magical influence will shrink to purely-subjective dimensions.]

I often advise magicians to balance their esoteric interests with some demanding activity in the mundane world, so that they may “step outside of their magical personalities” and see themselves in social context. Aleister Crowley was climbing mountains when he embarked upon his magical career; Anton LaVey was a lion-trainer in a circus; I was an officer in a paratrooper division. Today in the Temple some of our most successful magicians are those with surprisingly-exoteric outside interests.

Why is there so much talk about communications systems in the Temple? Because magic must be communicated to exist. You may argue that this is not true - that one can experience a purely-personal magical phenomenon. But I would say to you: Until you have rendered that experience into language, you yourself will neither be able to understand it nor be able to do anything with it. And the moment you succeed in translating it for yourself, you have made it understandable by other Adepts.

Such an accomplishment distinguishes a magician (who communicates his visions and draws meaningful conclusions from them) from a mystic (who floats in a dream-world which neither he nor anyone else can understand). Once again Crowley is a prime case in point, because he was able to communicate his magical philosophy so profoundly that he himself was immortalized by it.

The oft-repeated advice for you to write ... letters, articles, essays, poems, stories, newsletters, books ... has a valid, magical motive behind it. No matter how helpful your writings may prove to others, you will be the prime beneficiary, because you are thereby forcing your thoughts to crystallize into language ... and then you will begin to really understand and evaluate them.

Have you ever paused to wonder why it takes such an effort of will to write a paper or letter? It is precisely because the process demands that you force vague, ethereal emotions, feelings, and sensations into inductive or deductive statements. [One encouraging note: The Occasionally I am asked whether a II° is expected to “progress towards” the III°. The very question is a misconception of the degree system. The III° is not a “continuation” of the II° into a higher echelon of expertise. In fact I think I would be correct in saying that there are a number of II°s who are more skilled in their areas of magical specialty than all of the III°+ - including myself.

Recognition to the III° may indicate no philosophical or magical refinement from the II° level at all, although it may seem that way because an Adept’s magical expertise will normally continue to grow from the time of II° Recognition. Rather the III° is a recognition that the individual possesses a certain very singular quality identifying the Priesthood of Set.

It is difficult to say whether the III° is something that can be attained by effort or whether the characteristics that identify a Priest or Priestess are imparted from outside the self. Most likely it is a combination of the two.

A final point about Temple of Set degrees that I should like to clear up involves their permanence. These degrees are not awards or certificates of completion that are bestowed; they are a recognition of an individual’s state of being. And an individual can exercise the freedom of will to move in any direction or combination of directions.

Hence it is entirely within the realm of possibility that a III° may “move” to the II° without any punitive or degrading connotations whatever. The same holds true for “travel” from other degrees. If this principle is not realized, then the true nature of the degree-system is being corrupted into a one-way, ratchet-like process.

When you think about it, you will see why such a concept would be inconsistent with the presupposition of free will and the requirement that a Temple degree reflect an individual’s actual state of being. The Temple By-Laws do make it more difficult to withdraw a degree than to Recognize it, but this also has a basis in reason. The higher the degree, the more difficult it is to make a judgment concerning what the recipient must do to violate the scope of that degree. So there is a sort of “built-in benefit of the doubt” accorded with each degree. Only in essentially clear cases, then, are degree imbalances considered for correction.

I hope that this has helped to clear up some of the considerations involved in the II° - which in some ways is the “Alpha and Omega” of the Temple. If you have other questions on the topic, feel welcome to discuss them with any II°+. Unlike other esoteric societies, the Temple maintains no artificial games of secrecy about its degree system. We don’t have to. The “secrets”, such as they are, cannot be communicated to those who are not able to understand them. And those who can understand them should know about them.
Appendix 37: The Integrated Self

- by Alexandra Sarris II°

Scroll of Set #III-6, February 1978

The Set/HarWer dichotomy exists in the microcosm as well as in the macrocosm. In our own way each of us carries within us this balance - within our own minds.

The Setian has realized before becoming a Setian the complexities of the human mind, if only through exposure to theories or conceptions of Freud, Jung, and the like, and their divisions of the human mind. Psychology and psychoanalysis are favorite topics as human beings endeavor to “find themselves” through one theory or another. They vaguely grope toward an understanding of their subconscious and unconscious selves, hopefully reaching a resolution of the turmoils within themselves.

It is, I think, only within the realm of the Setian, however, to understand and solve the problems inherent in the subconscious and unconscious Aspects, through our unique viewpoint and methodology. I propose a new interpretation of the mind and its structure [as seen by Setians], although the model itself has been used in somewhat different form.

In the diagram provided, four elements are shown: the Core Self (CS), the Function Personality [FP], the Magical Entity [ME], and the various other Aspects (A).

The Core Self sits at the center of the wheel, much as it exists at the center of our mind; it is the coordinator, the hub, the ultimate self. The function personality is our mundane self - what the Core Self needs to keep us functioning and surviving in this outer world. The anonymous Aspects are the various Aspects of self beyond the function personality (which is itself an Aspect, though the most dominant and hardly the best). The [trapezoidal] “Magical Entity” is our channel from the Core Self to the Aspects and beyond.

Let me enlarge further on these elements. The Core Self exists in all of us, the basis for our being, our center of the mind. In some cultures it may be called a “soul”; the Egyptians named it the ba.

Surrounding the Core Self are the Aspects, spinning and revolving like satellites around a planet, ever changing and growing. Each one provides a different dimension of relationship to the Core Self and to the function personality, and all are fed by the energy of the Core Self.

Without the Core Self, Aspects would not exist. They form our idiolects. Each person has a different set; some Aspects are more distinct than others, and often they overlap. All of them appreciate being out in conscious reality once in a while, but that role is reserved for the function personality - the dominant Aspect that does yeoman service in the mundane world 95% of the time.
We all know, some too well, the function personality. We rise with it, survive, and go to sleep with it. This is our public face. Yet there are times when it slips and another Aspect peeps through: a different entity - softer, harder, more romantic, etc. The anonymous Aspects also may be summoned by the function personality at times.

The function personality derives its energy from the Core Self more than the other Aspects because it performs far more often. Unfortunately this public face becomes the private face; the function personality wants all functions and becomes completely dominant. The underling becomes a petty tyrant who would rule without regard to or willingness to understand what lies within, much as a “strange and fitful presence”, working its will as it sees fit, almost - since it has a logic and rationality of its own derived from its own limited, necessarily one-sided experience - expressing a “truth ever tinged in ... irrationality and inconsistency”.

HarWer, embodying a fitful, irrational, and inconsistent being, could achieve identity only by being Set’s opposite self. Ironically the function personality shares the same traits; for without oneness, there can be no balance. Without an equal alternative, only one distorted viewpoint can exist, with no clear comprehension of the whole picture.

Essentially when the function personality dominates to the exclusion of everything else, the being can only see down a narrow tunnel. Too many people see with these blinders and believe it real; others recognize that more than the function personality exists but choose either to ignore the situation or work toward resolving the damage wrought by the function personality. This may mean uncovering the subconscious scars and working out the anguish to one’s satisfaction and a better understanding of self. This process is a laudable one, but it does not ultimately satisfy. [Indeed what is required is an integration of all elements into a “superbeing”, as will be discussed briefly later.]

The function personality as tyrant believes that it is final arbiter of ideas - that all good and logical concepts derive from it. When it is strong, the Aspects have great difficulty in finding expression. [Thus, a rigid and narrow-minded function personality will not allow the creative and indulgent Aspects to emerge, rather, setting up its own expectations.]

In this microcosm, the function personality expresses the reality of HarWer. It establishes its own rationality and logic; it acts as censor, choosing what it will hear, what it will understand, absorb, distort, ignore; and it protects itself by building walls, not only toward the outside world but also against its fellow Aspects and the Core Self. By doing so, the function personality stays dominant. Should these walls be breached, disaster will strike. From the outside, it can be devastating to the whole being; from the inside, it can allow the formation of a new reality.

There is continual pressure from the Aspects and Core Self on the function personality. If the function personality becomes weakened through crisis, the other Aspects can burst into consciousness.

Just as Set is the ageless intelligence of the universe, so is the Core Self the ageless intelligence of the being. Oddly enough the evolution from the Æon of Horus [with its concurrent imbalance and onesidedness] has in its progression to the Æon of Set [and balance] a parallel in the evolution of the Setian mind.

Regard the elements. We have the Core Self (the ageless intelligence) with its Aspects, of which the function personality is the strongest and most relentless (the disordered intelligence); yet we have a bridge that leads from the Core Self to all Aspects - the Magical Entity, of which we have spoken little. Basically, the Magical Entity allows the Core Self to supersede the function personality, and reintegrate the Aspects into a new self.
There are those who actively create their magical personalities, feeding them the energy to be in fact what they are in imagination; and in this instance the Magical Entity may be conceived of as a construct of traits from the various Aspects surrounding the Core Self. For those whose magical selves arise spontaneously: Are these constructs, fashioned in the depths by the Core Self, or rather available and appropriate Aspects that fit the present and future need of the Setian?

Whether we actively will a personality from an available Aspect that fits our goals, or whether we combine various attributes from different Aspects into a new Aspect, what we do have is the Magical Entity, our new and viable alternative to the function personality. We forge lines of force between this Aspect and the Core Self and the other Aspects.

This Magical Entity also serves the purpose of bypassing the function personality’s barriers by attacking the barriers on an entirely different level than the function personality has dealt with. [The function personality is used to combat assaults on it at a mundane level, hardly a magical one.] The Magical Entity then becomes a channel of the Core Self as we send our energies through it and out by our will through the pentagram.

This cannot be done by the function personality; it simply blocks or severely censors. The Magical Entity, which has none of those barriers, can channel the will through it. And yet the disputatious function personality intrudes, causing disruption as simply as in providing active doubt as to the validity of a working once out of the ritual chamber. [How many of us have said, “That really didn’t happen, did it?” And that: “It seems really ridiculous in the ‘light of day’.”] The function personality serves best at ridicule and chastisement, using these weapons of intimidation toward subservience to its will.

And yet, when we are our Magical Entities, we find the arguments of the function personality specious and silly. Also the Magical Entity, by overwhelming the function personality, allows the energies of the other Aspects and the Core Self to become exposed. [In psychological terms, the subconscious, i.e. the Aspects and the unconscious, (the Core Self) are revealed.] These ideas and feelings become visible; no longer can we claim the ignorance of unconscious acts. Instead the creation of the Magical Entity allows us to go deep within ourselves and sift through our presently unexposed self.

In the realm of magic such an examination must be done. To leave such hidden dimensions alone would be to invite terrible retribution in the later workings. With the magical Aspect so strong, there is no limit to the energy that can be conjured up. When the demons that lurk in the unconscious also receive the benefits of this evolutionary energy, all Hell can break loose. [Cf. L.D. Seago IV°, “Psychic Hazards and Proper Use of Ritual Magic”, Scroll #I-3, November X.]

Ultimately the Magical Entity helps in the integration of the Setian. The goal of the Setian is to evolve, and one of the first steps in any sort of evolution is learning about the self. Then the various elements should be nudged in the same direction.

Imagine a herd of cattle, with a cowboy riding herd on them as they all wander down to the railhead. Some trot off, others plod along, and the leader barrels ahead of the herd. This cowboy is our will, which emanates from the Core Self, and the different Aspects are all the cattle that have been pushed, plodding, in the same direction. The Magical Entity is the leader with its conception of the ultimate “goal”, and the function personality is the maverick who wants to do its own thing, as it has done for these too many years.

The fusion ultimately of all of these Aspects together under the guidance of the Magical Entity is in a sense an enhancement of the Core Self’s will and the evolution of a new self which will incorporate all the Aspects in itself. The Magical Entity is the channel of this new self, and the function personality, though still existing, has been relegated to a primarily minor position, performing its mundane functions without tyranny.
In Freudian terms this may be considered the triumph of the “ego”. In magical terms we have the integrated self, which is evolving and metamorphizing, always changing and yet progressing. This integrated self carries with it all the power that has been frittered away by the divergent Aspects, now combined in one and all directed at the same goal. To bend one’s will and know that one’s whole being is directed behind one’s will is an achievement of this integration.
Appendix 38: Implications of Elitism

- by L. Dale Seago IV°

Scroll of Set #III-6, February 1978

At a recent meeting of the Sekhmet Pylon, a member took exception to my “fanaticism” and my apparent attitude that the Temple of Set embodies “the only true religion”. It seems to me that this should be clarified. If this organization is in fact the Temple of Set, then ours is the true religion. If it is not the Temple of Set, which the Prince of Darkness has himself ordained, then it is merely another magical order ... and there was no point in the resignations of its founders from what they saw had become merely the Church of Anton LaVey. If the concepts and principles set forth in the Book of Coming Forth by Night do not issue from Set, then ours is a false religion itself.

The Temple has been founded upon the ability of its Initiates to perceive certain Forms (in the Platonic sense) and principles, patterns, and relationships which are not apparent to ordinary humans; and upon their ability to apply their perceptions and understanding of these things to their lives [i.e. “magic”]. It is this perceptive faculty, together with its application, which distinguishes the Elect from the human and places the former upon a superior level. It is also the reason why our initiatory system of advancement is a process of recognition as opposed to administrative/organizational “elevation”.

“Elitism” has become a dirty word in our egalitarian-oriented society. It is considered “not nice”, impolite, to be better than the masses. But if the Temple of Set is authentic, then its members are elite. And the logical consequence of their elitism must be considered: Millions of humans are impoverished and starving. Do you have a “duty to humanity” to aid them? Will you give of your own substance and reduce yourself to their level in the hope of bringing them partway up to yours? Will you expend your time, your energies, your intellectual qualities, on the masses - or on your own kind from whom you can expect a reciprocal commitment? Do the non-Elect deserve as much consideration from you as the Elect? If you are truly Elect, and better than they are, do the non-Elect deserve any consideration from you at all?

I seek my Elect and none other ... and I think not of those who think not of me.

This does not mean a Setian may not have non-Elect friends and associates. There is generally some kind of reciprocal benefit in such relationships, or they would not be entered into; the non-Setian may be entertaining and amusing, possess some skill which you can either learn or persuade him to employ on your behalf, etc.

From an Elect standpoint, however, there are three kinds of people: the Elect, the potentially Elect, and the non-Elect. On first meeting people, it may not be immediately apparent to which category they belong. My own policy in any case where doubt exists is to treat them as potentially Elect until they prove themselves otherwise. If they show themselves to be non-Elect, the following options are open:
1. Cooperate with them as long as paths and goals are congruent.
2. Ignore them if they are neither a help nor a hindrance to your own plans.
3. If you have nothing they need/want but they have something you need, use them. Find some way to get it at their expense rather than your own. [Advertising agencies do it all the time by creating an artificial need in a person in order to obtain the money they want from him.]
4. If they are hostile, or a potential or actual threat:
   (a) Avoid them;
   (b) Educate or mislead them so they no longer threaten you;
   (c) Control them;
   (d) Destroy them.

Who has the moral right to decide whether someone should be made a tool of, or even destroyed? If the Elect are the Elect, then they have that right. The Setian must take upon himself the responsibility of tracing the consequences of his convictions to their logical conclusions. If he finds he cannot stomach those conclusions, he should reexamine the foundations of his convictions. To be a successful Setian requires the unceasing and discriminating use of one’s mind, and a most precise and delicate sense of intellectual balance. In dealings with those outside the Temple, it may also at times require the will to be coldly and utterly ruthless.

Are you Elect or not? If you are, then, in the words of Set spoken at the First Conclave, “Ye are alien to mankind.”

Scroll of Set #III-8, April 1978

I am writing in reference to the article in the February Scroll, “The Implications of Elitism” by Magister Seago. I do not agree with everything he said, and what follows are the reasons why.

The first matter concerns the statement that “the Temple of Set embodies the only true religion”. I believe with all my heart and mind that the Temple as it now exists is the most advanced magical and philosophical order in the world. As far as I have seen, there is nothing which can compare with it. I am very proud to be an Adept within it. I cannot, however, take it to the point of saying that the Temple embodies “the only true religion”, thus embodying the absolute and ultimate answers to the many philosophical questions we all have.

To say that means that the Temple cannot change any of its current ideas, because if it contains all the truths now, any deviation would produce falsehoods. Change is what Xeper is all about. If the religion [I personally prefer to employ the word “philosophy”] in the Temple is the ultimate truth, then the section in the new reading list “Toward the Unknown Region” means nothing - because if the statement is true, everything must be known.

The philosophy in the Temple today is the most satisfactory for me, because for me it answers questions which before were unanswerable. All my questions can’t be answered, because the Temple, even though the most advanced in the world, is not - and by the very nature of the word of the Æon cannot be - a finished product. The statement by Magister Seago implies that the philosophy of the current Temple is a finished product. Of course this first matter could be a misinterpretation of Magister Seago’s choice of words on my part.

The second matter concerns Magister Seago’s opinions on dealing with individuals in the mundane world. I do not disagree with him, but I cannot agree without a couple of modifications.

I firmly believe that Setians are quite alien to mankind. I also believe that a Setian has the absolute right to use and/or destroy anyone who is capable of being used or destroyed, if it is the Setian’s will to do so. In this sense I fully agree with him and his four options. However just as it is the right of a Setian to use individuals and if so desired destroy them, it is also the Setian’s right not to. His article completely overlooks any true friendship or love relationship which could exist between a Setian and a non-Setian. His article allows for no possibility of such a relationship.

There are those who I would destroy in a minute [and I’m trying]. There are also those for whom I would risk my life. It is my right to act in either manner if I so choose. Of course this second matter could be just another misinterpretation of Magister Seago’s article.

Scroll of Set #III-9, May 1978

It was gratifying to see the concern you expressed in the April XIII Scroll about my “Implications of Elitism” essay. As it happens your comments are in fact the results of misinterpretation. However if one person has doubts or misgivings about the essay and has expressed them, the chances are that others have some which are not being expressed. By sending a copy of this letter to the Editor of the Scroll, I may be able to allay their apprehensions as well as your own.

As I see it, the only thing which can logically be directly inferred from the statement that the Temple of Set embodies the only true religion is that the others (conventional religions) are false, which is not the same as saying that the Temple of Set has all the answers … or if it is, the connection escapes me. If I were to extend the syllogism implicit in your letter a little further, it might look like this:

1. The Temple of Set is the only true religion.
2. Therefore the philosophy of the current Temple is a complete, finished product which requires no further change, modification, or evolution.
3. Therefore Xeper, the guiding principle of the Temple (evolutionary change), is false or is impossible to execute.
4. Therefore if the Temple is the true religion, it is necessarily false.

I think you can see that the breakdown in logic occurs in the relationship between #1 and #4.

The matter of the Temple being “the true religion” [and don’t make the mistake of applying the conventional meaning of “religion” to the Temple’s use of the term; it’s like referring to stage tricks as “magic”] rests upon the answer to an antecedent question: Is Set a conscious, intelligent, objective entity? If you will go back and reread our introductory pamphlet, the follow-up document, The Book of Coming Forth by Night and its Analysis and Commentary - especially “GeneSet” - you will find that the Priesthood does indeed believe that Set is an actual being. “All other gods of all other rimes and nations have been created by men.”

We are not trying to delude anyone into thinking that we are merely humanists or existentialists dressed in fancy robes who are, developing a philosophy along certain lines because we think it is “cute”. The Temple of Set is exactly what its name says it is, which should surprise only those who are accustomed to assuming that everyone is a hypocrite.

Back in “the old days” of the Church of Satan, the distinguishing characteristic of the Priesthood was that its members had been “singled out” and “led” through experiences which showed them unequivocally that there was in fact a Prince of Darkness. The Priesthood of Set of the year XIII is a far more subtle and complex thing than that of the year X, but this remains one of its identifying features. Without this “sense of Set”, as Magister Barrett calls it, our Priests would merely be senior magicians and administrators - not Priests. And I will go on record here and now as stating that if I ever find that an individual holding the III° does not believe Set exists, I will (a) counsel that person to revert voluntarily to the II° or (b) prosecute his (or her) removal before the Council of Nine. This is not to be construed as punitive: the individual concerned might be a wonderful person and a proficient magician. But not a Priest or Priestess of Set.

Things are not so stringent, of course, for the lay membership, and I don’t think the Temple of Set is “dogmatic” in the usual, repressive sense of the word or that its philosophy is restrictive. No lay member is required to believe in the literal existence of Set. Our philosophy is pretty consistent internally, but if that is “restrictive”, then one might as well condemn a chemist for finding that the results of his experiments tend to support each other.

The Word of the Æon is Xeper, but no one is saying that it is necessary to “Say three Hail Sets and a Diabolus Noster and genuflect” in order to do it; each individual can go about it in his own way. And while I see tremendous respect and outright love expressed toward Set within the Temple, I have not noticed any “bending of knees or dropping of eyes” as occurs in the conventional concept of “worship”.

Speaking of respect and love, you stated that my essay “... completely overlooks any true friendship or love relationship which could exist between a Setian and a non-Setian ... allows for no possibility of such a relationship”. If memory serves me, what I said was: “This does not mean a Setian may not have non-Elect friends and associates. There is generally some kind of reciprocal benefit in such relationships or they would not be entered into ...”

One such reciprocal benefit, of course, might be affection. That is one of the reasons I have a cat, although I do not think of her as a Setian. I’ve also had a couple of pet humans (female), which worked fine until I began treating them as Setians - at which point they became insufferable! Seriously, though, I know a number of non-Setians whose personalities and/or intellectual abilities in various areas draw sincere affection, admiration, and respect from me, and whom I would go pretty far out of my way to help. But as far as priorities are concerned, Setians have first claim on my aid and my friendship.

You also pointed out that the Setian has the right not to destroy someone, and I agree wholeheartedly with that. This recognition is one of the essential differences between the outlook of the Age of Satan and that of the Æon of Set. The Seventh Satanic Statement proclaims that man is simply a beast who, due to his mental development, has become more vicious than all the rest. There is a lot to be said for that statement. But by virtue of that same intellectual development - the Gift of Set - man is now able to become something other than a beast. He can choose not to be vicious. Most Setians would probably prefer to follow the “path of least resistance” and live as harmoniously with non-Setians as possible. This is why cooperation was the first of the four options I suggested for dealing with them. The “vicious” options are a last resort.

I hope these comments have cleared up your apprehensions about my essay. If not, you are welcome to write to me for further discussion.

After reading Adept Murad’s letter regarding “The Implications of Elitism”, I wish to toss in two cents’ worth of my own view of Magister Seago’s article and Adept Murad’s letter.

Agreed, the Temple of Set is the most advanced magical and philosophical order in the world; no one will argue this point. But it’s also “the only true religion”. I base this statement on a passage from the Book of Coming Forth by Night: “I am the Ageless Intelligence of this Universe ... All other gods of all other times and nations have been created by men.”

“All other gods” certainly had greater or lesser followings, but being “created by men” made them shams, some impressive and grand, but shams with internal and external control by men. If anyone feels this to be the case with the Temple of Set, I invite a closer inspection. If our By-Laws are not sufficient to stop an individual intent on manipulating the Temple to his own ends, then Set himself is more than willing and capable to rectify matters.

Again from my own point of view, the fact that the Temple doesn’t yet have all the answers doesn’t indicate it isn’t the only true religion. The Elect and the potentially Elect have more of the answers than other religious systems, but these answers lead to more questions which lead to more answers, which ... etc.

Adept Murad is quite correct in saying the Temple is not a finished product. If our progress thus far is any indication, then we will have the answers to our present questions. But I might add there will be new questions - and all in accordance with the concept of Xeper. So will we ever have all the answers? Perhaps in the future through Setamorphosis, but I am no prophet and can only speculate.

Finally I cannot agree that Magister Seago’s article overlooks dealings with friends or loved ones. While the relationship dealings are not expressed openly, there are many implications to his statement that: “There is generally some kind of reciprocal benefit in such relationships, or they would not be entered into. The non-Setian may be entertaining and amusing, possess some skill which you can learn or persuade him to employ on your behalf, etc.” I feel it’s the latter half of this quote which may make the article seem cold to some; I’d point out that these examples are by no means the only benefits obtained from relationships with non-Setians. As I said, there are many implications in the first half of the quote.

For one am glad Adept Murad expressed his opinion in the Scroll. I know it made me think, and I’m sure it has done so for others.
That the symbolic value of names has been used as an element in initiation is attested in countless inscriptions. Even the names of things bear witness to the constant solicitude to establish a relation between the thing and its essential quality or its function ...

The name was held to be a definition of the essential nature of the individual and the plan of his development. That is why one person could receive several names according to the stages of his evolution.

- Isha Schwaller de Lubicz, Her-Bak

The Anubis Pylon in San Francisco celebrated the arrival of year XIII by hosting a New Year’s Eve feast and ritual. Attending were the eight Anubians and five other Setian guests. During the post-ritual discussion, the subject of magical names arose. From the comments received, it became evident to us that we were involved in certain magical developments that our guests found extremely interesting and that we would like to share with you.

There has been a tradition among witch doctors, shamans, and magicians to have both a public and a secret, personal name. These people believed that knowledge of their secret names would make them vulnerable to their enemies. Thus they were carefully guarded by those magicians.

In the Church of Satan initiates chose names for themselves to represent their desired path of development. They focused energy toward the evocation of the qualities they felt these names represented. In the Temple of Set there is no specific policy for the acquisition of a magical name. Some Setians have chosen their names according to the Church of Satan guidelines. However we of the Anubis Pylon have discovered our magical entities in another way. While we have found that there is no timetable for receiving a magical name, for us it has occurred at a point when we were becoming attuned to our selves and each other during ritual.

Within a month’s time five Anubians perceived their magical selves in the form of names. We did not choose these names! [Interestingly these entities which became manifest were Egyptian.]

Here is an example: one member considered herself to be somewhat powerless though actually she was not. Fittingly the entity who came to her was an Egyptian being who exemplified power - a being who recognized that this aspiring magician needed to evolve toward a perception of her own power. In this very same way we received the magical names of entities befitting our evolutionary needs.

Who are these entities? Are they telesmic images? Are they merely manifestations of our imagination? Are they existing beings with whom we are interreacting?

We believe they are the latter, though we cannot substantiate our reasons for this belief. We have only our impressions and perceptions to support our conclusions. We believe these beings have existed for thousands of years and have passed out of consciousness until now. They have re-emerged as they recognized those Setians evolving to the point where their (the entities’) particular attributes were appropriately suited. However the entity cannot “connect” with the Setian until an evolutionary level has been attained allowing both to become magically attuned. The entity recognizes the needs of the Setian that must be met in order to continue toward Setamorphosis.
At this point you may be thinking that we are creating telesmic images to counteract the flaws that we see in ourselves. We do not believe this to be true, because the entity in each instance has appeared before the individual had any knowledge of the qualities attributable to that entity! For the same reason they cannot be manifestations of the imagination, for often the Setian had little or no knowledge of Egyptology.

We do, however, consider that these entities may be telesmic images created by the ancient Egyptians, or the essence of pre-existing beings.

Magister Barrett has described the magical entity acquired by the Setian as “you ahead of yourself”. As we have said, the magical entity embodies those qualities to which we aspire. As we evolve through ritual experiences, so do we evolve toward the actualization of our magical selves. As our introductory note states, as a Setian grows, he can receive his name according to his evolution. [It is not inconceivable that a magical entity might choose to identify with more than one Setian.] Once the qualities of the magical entity have been realized, the Setian may begin a new cycle of development with an entirely new being. It becomes tremendously apparent when the existing name has become obsolete.

We (the authors) perceived our magical names last winter (XI). By mid-October (XII) we both recognized that these names and all they represented were no longer viable for us. [They may be perfectly adequate for other evolving Setians to whom the qualities would apply.]

During a ritual on October 21st, our new entities made themselves dramatically - and simultaneously - apparent. It is significant that though we had obviously become linked with the new entities, we had no idea of their eventual state of being. Only recently have meaningful aspects revealed themselves. At present we are aware of the fact that our prior entities seem to have been one-dimensional, with limited function. Our new entities are far more complex and are gradually becoming defined in many dimensions.

Consider the possible benefits. The magical self can in effect provide an evolutionary “short-cut”. Your association will be a constant source of stimuli; it is a tool to other dimensions that you need only employ. When bringing these entities to the fore, we experience an enhanced awareness of true magic. These beings seem to illustrate hidden aspects of our selves that we are either unaware of or do not particularly want exposed. What better way to overcome negative energies? The solution to a problem lies in clearly defining the problem!

From the text of this article, you can see that there are many questions still unanswered, though we have stated our beliefs and illustrated our experiences in this matter. Where do you feel the magical entity comes from? Is the entity directed to us by Set? Are the entities indeed individual, or are they various aspects of the complex Set-entity? Do they exist with him in his dimension? Consider some of these questions and perhaps offer your own insights, comments, and experiences which will benefit us and all Setians.

[Note: This article is a discussion by the authors alone, though some of the ideas expressed are shared by all of Anubis Pylon. Her-Bak is a beautiful book which illustrates in a clear and thought-provoking way an aspect of ancient Egyptian philosophical thought. It presents Egyptian life in regard to the search for understanding the intrinsic essence of the name. It reveals the belief of a “lesson in every feature”. From its author’s introduction: “In every instance these concrete images serve to teach abstract principles hidden within, which in turn reveal universal laws.” We highly recommend that you read it!]
Appendix 40: From Thoughts to Words, or To Define

- by Ricco A. Zappitelli III°
 Scroll of Set #III-9, May 1978

I have written this article in an all-consuming drive to make my feelings be understood and felt. I’ll try to speak of these feelings as clearly and precisely as possible. For all of you out there whom I have never personally met, I ask you to hear the “heart” of my words.

I notice that of late there seem to be letters, statements, and opinions coming from I° and II°, all questioning different basic concepts [which in itself is a commendable thing]. But after viewing them from a high enough perspective, I have begun to see an alarming pattern developing.

This pattern seems to revolve around religion and its various connotations. I am not a trained psychiatrist nor psychologist, but I do not totally understand why “problems” should arise with no apparent reason. I offer the following thoughts, words, or definitions to get us closer to working out solutions.

First of all, as the Temple of Set, what are we? Let’s define: As an organization, I feel we are (1) religious, (2) philosophical, and (3) a magical temple.

What does this all really mean? First, the Temple of Set is a religion. There, I’ve said it. I for one am not afraid of that word; rather I will define it:

A religion may be to others a principle of worship [which it is most definitely not to me!], or it can be a definite, all-consuming, all-pervading knowing or belief in a form, principle, or entity. It is this definition of the knowledge and belief in the existence of Set to be real, that I speak of when I speak of my “religion”.

From this belief springs my concept of a way of living and viewing life, and so emerges the next aspect, my “philosophy”.

And finally the third and most vital force binding the other two elements together is our magical existence and life which bridge the gates of the physical and metaphysical and allow us to break natural order and rise high above lower man’s definitions of religion, philosophy, etc. Cf. Ouspensky’s theory as defined in The Psychology of Man’s Possible Evolution.

By now you’re probably asking, “What is this madman talking about anyway?” I’ll tell you why I clearly define what I feel to be our Temple’s three aspects with such deliberation: namely the pattern I see evolving - or rather “de-evolving” - here concerning the concept of religion and whether Set is or is not real.

I can only say to those who are confused or in doubt on this matter, “Go back to the basics.” Re-read the informational letter that you received upon entry, re-read other printed material, including the most important [in my opinion] Book of Coming Forth by Night, in which Set speaks to us: “I think not of those who think not of me.” One must be or exist in order to do so; this is the very basis of our Temple: not worship, but belief that Set does in fact exist. Again from the Book of Coming Forth by Night I quote: “Speak rather to me as a friend, gently and without fear, and I shall hear as a friend. Do not bend your knee nor drop your eye, for such things were not done in my house at PaMat-et.”

To endorse our religious, philosophical, magical Temple of Set means that one in fact does know that the existence of Set is valid. To do otherwise is in my opinion quite illogical.
Now to my next feeling: It has been too long since I have seen questions and feedback aired in the Scroll of Set. We need this, and I for one heartily encourage more of it. To stifle one’s thoughts or feelings is definitely not what the Temple of Set is about.

I feel as a Priest of Set that honoring the dignity of all Setians, regardless of degree, is vital if we are to continue to Xeper to a “higher” state. Lower thoughts and mundane, petty ways cannot be. I ask that the following considerations be thought of before composing a rebuttal [as once proposed by our High Priest for answering questions, challenges, or disputable statements, especially those of a volatile nature]:

1. Put the material in question aside for a few days.
2. Later reread the material and redefine it.
3. Try looking at it from a higher perspective and from the other fellow’s possible point of view.

These three steps I have used and find helpful, since being basically of an emotional, rash temperament, I might easily tend to “jump the gun”, “climb a tree”, or be misunderstood. All I can add to this is to ask that we as Setians always keep uppermost in our mind what we are and remember that dignity and respect must be afforded us all.

I suggest further that whenever we challenge, question, or dispute, it be handled with the aforementioned qualities in mind. To do otherwise, or to challenge in an accusing or arrogant tone is a thing that can easily be done without full awareness. This we as Setians cannot allow to happen.

As one is Recognized as passing into a higher degree, one must also understand that perceptions also change, thus “verbiage” doesn’t mean the same thing and more than oft needs redefining. If a I° or II° fully understood all the implications from a III° perception, for example, he would be of that degree. This is what any school of magical initiation is about. There were many times, for example, at my I° and II° level when all I could simply do was “trust” the higher degrees’ conceptions and perceptions above me. I can look back and truly say that in no instance was I misled or un-answered. Upon Becoming III° I can now and only now begin to understand and appreciate the magical system.

In conclusion, I would also suggest that we think beyond simple questioning (gently, with our opinions) while always thinking of constructive ends towards our and thus our Temple’s goals. I for one will honor questions, statements, or disagreements stated to me in an inquiring form in a respectful manner - but will disregard and ill-dignify any written word or thought that tries to demean my thought or dignity, and will expect the same of all other Setians.

On to the questions raised in reference to the February Scroll’s article by Magister Dale Seago, “Implications of Elitism.”

The first concern over Magister Seago’s statement that the Temple of Set embodies the only true religion, I do not dispute. However I can see how questions may arise on this matter. On the following line, however, I feel he clears this up. I quote, “It seems to me that this should be clarified. If this organization is in fact the Temple of Set, then ours is the true religion.” I feel he means this from the precision of his words.

We are not an absolute and complete religion or philosophy. To make this statement would be to dispute our Word Xeper and concept of this Æon. I feel Magister Seago no more means that than to state we are the only form of a religion today. Rather I feel he means “absolute” from a higher, purer form - from an original or pure source, namely ancient Xem/PaMat-et. Definitely this does not mean absolute in the “completed” sense. All other springboard spin-offs, for example the Osirian cult, Judeo/Christianity, etc., are superficial imitations and in that sense not true.

How to deal with non-Setians? Again I agree with Seago’s statements. It was good to finally see things I have felt in my own dealings with “humans” put down in such an explicit manner, However I do feel the key is that he states these as some of the options. Since very few things in our life are “absolutes”, I agree it all ends up with the individual Setian. When we write an article, answer a letter, etc., we usually state our opinions and perceived truths, and only infrequently absolute truth!

So I see no real disagreement, but only a misinterpretation of the term “absolute”, with consideration to the more rarefied perspective of a Magister.

I hope I have shed some light on these topics for all Setians [I have for myself upon introspection!] and invite any feedback.
Appendix 41: Problems of Perception

- by L. Dale Seago IV°

Scroll of Set #III-10, June 1978

In a recent personal letter to me, Priest James Lewis remarked:

Excuse me, but damn it, Ethel was sneaky as a snake when he came out with the one about Set “becoming a god like unto the others”. That has caused more upset than anything I’ve seen yet, and the odd part is that somehow the alleged change from Set-being to “Jehovah” escapes me completely. Either I’m too smart to be taken in by it or too stupid to notice it - I like to think it’s the former.

Since this rather bewildering accusation was first made, a most interesting thing has happened: several members of the Temple of Set have resigned, giving as their primary excuse the allegation that the Temple has “become” a religion [as though it had not been one from the beginning]. One would almost think they had never read our introductory material.

It is tempting to explain all this away by saying that a Master of the Temple renounced his Mastery and elevated someone to the Priesthood on other-than-III° criteria, who then wrongly elevated Adepts, all of which led to a big mess.

At the political (organizational) level of analysis, this appears to be true; but it is still an incomplete explanation. The recent resignation letters of Richard Murad and Howard Sinnott have prompted me to explore this entire situation in greater depth from magical and philosophical perspectives. As a result I believe I have been able to identify the major factors involved.

Historically the roots appear to lie in the Church of Satan and conflict resulting from “inner” and “outer” teachings. At the level of the public and the general membership, the Prince of Darkness was seen as a metaphor - as is explained in the Satanic Bible.

The “inner circle” of the Elect, however - known as the Order of the Trapezoid and comprising most of the Priesthood - was engaged in the study and application of “higher Satanic metaphysics”; and for them, as well as for Anton LaVey as head of the Order, the Prince of Darkness was a very real entity indeed.

This was not communicated to the general membership, since a qualification for admission into that Order was an independent realization of the reality behind the fantasy. The Church of Satan, in other words, attempted to have its cake and eat it too by appealing to both a popular movement and an inner elite. The conflicts this engendered were the subject of innumerable letters between Anton LaVey and Michael Aquino, many of which I have read.

When the Temple of Set Came into Being it was decided, in accordance with the Book of Coming Forth by Night, that it would be an elitist order and that the “inner” teachings would be made accessible to anyone with the capacity to comprehend and apply them. Those who could not do so had no business being here. The C/S degree system had been breaking down, however, and many of the C/S degree transfers had to be accepted “on faith” in an effort to be fair to all concerned. The assumption was that any imprecise degree designations would sooner or later become apparent.
Many of the persons who transferred to the Temple may have failed [or simply refused] to perceive that the Temple leadership was speaking not allegorically but literally, and they may also have taught the old general-C/S-symbolic approach to newcomers with whom they came in contact.

Given the open accessibility of our philosophy and our Priesthood, I can only conclude that there was a refusal to perceive. And when finally pushed to the wall and forced to realize that we actually meant what we were saying, they would naturally accuse the Temple of Set of having “become” a religion because they had never opened their eyes and seen the Temple before. [Yet Ethel’s “Word” is “Perceive”. Rather ironic!]

There is also an inherent difficulty in the language we are forced to employ. In the late 1940s, after an eight-year study of the ancient temple complex at Luxor, alchemist R.A. Schwaller de Lubicz wrote that:

> The pharaonic mentality is typically indirect. A defined form is used to evoke the idea of this form - that is to say, the abstract complex that presides over this defined form. - The Temple in Man

And so it is in our Temple as well. We are speaking literally, but we are obliged to use conventional language and conceptual terminology in an effort to at least approximately communicate our discoveries and ideas. But the influence of our typically-Western logical, “linear” type of thinking is such that it creates the tendency to mistake our defined forms, which are merely shadows, for the actual Forms or Realities which lie behind and cast those shadows.

Thus when I say that Set exists and is an actual, objective entity, some members might think at first of the picture on the introductory pamphlet of the Infernal Anteater sitting on a throne. But what I mean is a good deal more complex than that.

Richard Murad was apparently under the impression that any philosophy is as valid as any other (which ultimately makes all philosophies meaningless), and rejected ours because he didn’t like it anymore. In a letter to Priest Lewis announcing his resignation, he said:

> Jim, I do not believe in philosophical absolutes. I feel that man has, and always will create his own truths. None of them are right, and none of them are wrong. Different ones are just that, different.

Murad obviously just hasn’t done his homework. The primary contention of the Platonic dialogues is that what Plato refers to as the “Forms”, such as “Virtue”, “Justice”, “Truth”, “the Good”, etc. [all of which are aspects of a greater Form, Principle, or neter which the Egyptians called Maat], do have an actual existence, a greater reality of which our concepts are only a shadow-play ... and that one can approach an increasingly-clear perception and understanding of the Forms through the philosophical discipline.

But Plato also recognizes and demonstrates that the logical, “linear” method of analysis is not sufficient in itself to accomplish this. Thus arises the need for some means of direct apprehension and experience of the neteru or Forms.

And this is where the working of magic comes into play in the Temple of Set. It is essentially a non-rational, non-linear sort of process which is complementary to the linear mode. For the transformation (Xeper) of the individual into a higher being capable of understanding, perceiving, and experiencing Set (the neter of non-natural, separate intellectual identity), both methods are essential and balance each other. Neither is complete without the other; they are inextricably intertwined.
This leads me to what I believe is the most important factor in the recent resignations: the failure of members to do their homework. Many people try to follow the philosophy without actually experimenting with magic. Thus they lack any real experiential understanding and are “armchair magicians” who are merely juggling theories.

Others take this imbalance even further and attempt to simply “parrot” things they hear without delving deeper. At the II\textsuperscript{a} level, for example, a comprehensive reading list is available through the Ruby Tablet of Set. One or more books in most categories are coded “RL1”. There is a reason for this. The reading of those books is required in order for the new Adept to be able to begin to really understand what this “thing of ours” is all about.

How many of you Adepts have read them? If you were to enroll in a degree program in any university and refuse to purchase the required course texts, you would be hopelessly lost by the third lecture. The magical and philosophical curriculum of the Temple of Set is every bit as demanding, and in many ways it is far more difficult.

The Temple of Set is not for people who simply want to wear pretty medallions and attend fancy ceremonies. It is for people who want to learn to strengthen and utilize their individual Wills, and who aspire to the knowledge and understanding which we of the Priesthood possess and are developing.

However our initiatory system is a highly selective process which imposes great stress upon the intellectual and magical faculties of the individual. Many initiates are unable to withstand these pressures. Those who cannot will, sooner or later, weed themselves out. That this has been occurring lately is no cause for alarm. It is as much a sign of the success of our system as is the Coming into Being of a new Priest or Priestess.

Nor should it come as any surprise that those who are resigning are attempting to rationalize their unfitness, lack of effort, and inability to \textit{Xeper} any further. No one is likely to feel psychologically comfortable facing himself in the mirror and thinking, “I’m a ‘deficient intellectual’ who couldn’t make it, freaked out, and went back to being a nerd.”

This, I think, is another reason for the otherwise-bewildering accusations leveled at the Temple of Set by Ethel, Holt, and their cronies. The real irony in all this is that Ethel’s intent was treacherous, dishonorable, despicable, and utterly vile ... and yet, in the end, he is doing us a greater service than he can imagine - by collecting our garbage.

For those of you who are tempted to conclude that the Priesthood feels that the Temple of Set exists for it alone and that the lay degrees can sink or swim, let me say this: If your motives are sincere - if you want to grow, develop, \textit{Xeper} [whether you aspire to the Priesthood or not] - we are here to help you, and we love you. But the impetus, the initiative to develop and to work, must come from \textbf{you}.

May the Infernal Anteater be with you.

* * * * *
Thank you for responding to my article in the June Scroll. Your letter brings up a few points which I feel should be addressed in some detail.

As it happens, I do remember corresponding with you when I was a corporal in the Marine Corps, shortly before I left North Carolina. I was not aware until now, however, that you had joined the Temple of Set at the time it came into being. I had not heard from you for quite a long time, and I did not recognize your name when I saw it on the computer printouts. And that fact leads me to a question: You stated that in the Temple “everyone seemed to be involved” and that you were “used to the opposite”. Why didn’t you become involved, instead of remaining just a name in a data bank?

Your comments about not being able to afford books on magic even after all these years strike me as a little strange. The real problem appears to me to be one of priorities, of which things in your life are the most important to you. Even on my enlisted military salary, I was able to set aside a little for books. If you were to save a couple of dollars a week [and most people spend at least that much just on junk food and beer], you would be able to buy about a dozen books a year. If that is somehow just not possible, you are probably within a reasonable distance of a public or college library. If you do not own your own transportation or are unable to drive to a library, check out the local bus lines.

You state that you never changed your fortunes [and therefore still cannot afford books], and again I have to ask: Why? At the inception of the Æon of Set, I was laid off from my job and was unemployed for about six months; but I drew up a plan of action, stuck with it, and made it work. I came to Santa Barbara two and a half years ago with an old car, some clothes, eighty dollars, a kitten, no job, and no place to live. I found a place to stay until I could improve my position and joined the Army Reserve to supplement my unemployment checks. Then I was hired as a bank teller, enrolled in some evening college courses, and after half a year of that got into the University of California and its Army ROTC program while continuing to work part-time for the bank. I have just recently received a degree in political science and have been commissioned a Second Lieutenant in Military Intelligence, and I will be working in the field of strategic Psychological Operations for the Army while continuing to work for the bank while pursuing a graduate degree. And I haven’t exactly been inactive in the Temple, either.

All this I have accomplished through my own efforts, with the inspiration and guidance of Set and a lot of very hard work - because it was my will to Become, and I applied my will. It can be done.

Your equation of the term “elitism” with being “well to do” has nothing to do with the way I have always applied it in my writings. In an article I wrote in January of this year for a national magazine, I said:

Esoteric orders have generally been successful as esoteric orders to the extent that they have incorporated such Black elements as elitism [in the sense of genuine rather than presumed intellectual superiority], individualism, and personal responsibility.

Intellectual superiority does not necessarily have any relationship to one’s occupation or income. When I speak of elitism, I am speaking of elite minds, not jobs. A self-educated philosopher named Eric Hoffer, who is widely respected in sociological circles and has written some superbly-insightful books, has for many years made his living as a longshoreman on the San Francisco shipping docks because he likes that kind of work. And the same situation can exist in the Temple of Set.

As I pointed out in my article, “The impetus, the initiative to develop and to work, must come from you.” The Temple accepts I° members as students and apprentices, which is what that degree is all about. It is not the responsibility of the teacher to run after his students, requesting their permission to “lay the wisdom of the Æon upon them”. Quite the contrary. It is up to the students to ask questions, make an effort to grasp what is being taught, and apply it in their lives ... which means a lot of work. If the students will not do this, then they have only themselves to blame when they “flunk out”.

You mention, finally, that the Prince of Darkness seems to you to be “quite indifferent to anything”. There may be a reason for this. In fact I think it is stated quite clearly in the Book of Coming Forth by Night: “And I think not of those who think not of me.” What have you been doing to deserve his attention? From my own experience and that of many others, he seems to take a very personal interest in his Elect who genuinely seek him. But it appears to me from all available indications that, frankly, you don’t give a damn.
Appendix 42: The Third Year

- by Michael A. Aquino V°, High Priest of Set

Scroll of Set #III-11, July 1978

On each anniversary of the founding of the Temple of Set, I have prepared a report for the Scroll summarizing the past year’s developments and outlining some prospects for the future. During the first two years of the Æon, it seemed that these reports could be justifiably positive. Everyone appeared to be enjoying the Temple, contributing to its overall creativity, and cooperating in a spirit of friendship, trust, and mutual respect.

As it turned out, however, our utopian expectations were a bit premature. This past year the momentum of the Temple was interrupted by two unfortunate incidents.

In November our first Executive Director, Priest William F. Murray, experienced an emotional and physical breakdown, necessitating his resignation from office, retirement from the Priesthood, and convalescence under medical supervision.

Twenty-four hours after Murray’s breakdown, Magister Robert Ethel, Chairman of the Council of Nine, resigned from the Temple to form an organization of his own. After trying unsuccessfully to get me to turn my back on the I°/II° Initiates and Priesthood of the Temple and cooperate with him, Ethel suddenly reversed himself. He leveled charges of corruption at me, sneered at the Temple and Priesthood whose care and guardianship he had accepted only four months earlier [upon reappointment to the Council Chairmanship], and endeavored to lure personal friends into his new group with promises of higher titles than they had been able to attain within the Temple.

Ultimately two Priests - Roland Holt and Howard Sinnott - opted to follow Ethel, as did about six or seven I°/II° Setians who believed his accusations. A few other Temple Initiates, presumably dismayed by the very fact of the crisis, have since resigned from the Temple without affirming a position one way or the other.

In terms of numbers the schism affected the Temple very little, but the Temple has never measured itself in terms of numbers. Psychologically the damage was serious. The reputations of the Priesthood, the Masters of the Temple, and the Council as groups of high integrity and impeccable motives were shaken. My own ethics and credentials as High Priest of Set and a Magus V° were attacked not partially, but with venom as sudden as it was extreme.

It would have been a farcical situation save for Ethel’s high degree and office, and for the unfamiliarity of many of our newer Initiates with the actual facts. In the resulting confusion the Council and I were forced to state, restate, and document the truth to such an extent that many of our other projects and responsibilities came virtually to a standstill for the ensuing eight months. At this writing I think we’ve cleaned up the bulk of the damage and deceit attempted by Ethel and Holt, although I understand a few more Setians are still being propagandized.

Why did something like this happen to the Temple? More importantly, what can we learn from it to prevent or at least minimize similar problems in the future? Dr. F.I. Regardie commented to me that schisms born of ego-inflation are an almost inescapable feature of magical orders. He has witnessed many others in his time, commencing with the breakup of the Golden Dawn at the turn of this century.
Let me begin by recalling the experience of the Church of Satan. As it began to grow beyond the scope of a San Francisco organization, it too encountered revolts and attempted schisms. At first Anton LaVey rode through these as fairly as he could. But, as there seemed to be no end to the incidents, he grew increasingly cynical and disillusioned, first about the integrity of the C/S as an organization and then about the sanctity of the degree system. He spoke more and more about the necessity to evaluate Satanism as a “movement”, not as an institution, and of the failure of the degree-system to draw meaningful distinctions among individuals.

To make it more difficult for incidents to spread beyond a local level, Anton severely curtailed conclaves, inter-member communications, and local/regional publications. Finally, in May of X, he decided to exploit the degree-system for purposes of financial and material profit.

It was at this point that those Satanists who believed in the authenticity and sanctity of the C/S and the degree-system resigned to form a “Second Church of Satan” which, after the North Solstice X, came into being as the Temple of Set.

At one point during the XII-XIII crisis, Ethel argued that what he was doing was essentially no different from “what I had done to Anton LaVey in 1975”.

Strictly speaking, however, Ethel had come full circle back to Anton’s position that the organization was non-productive and the degree-system meaningless. Whereas Anton had determined to reap practical benefits from his conclusion, however, Ethel opted to attempt a new organization and degree-system based not upon a recognized Mandate from the Prince of Darkness, but rather upon Ethel’s self-proclaimed concepts of what they should be.

From a conceptual standpoint, this is the basic distinction between the Temple of Set and Ethel’s Order of the Inverse Pentagram (O.I.P.): Ethel bases his claim to the title of Magus and the inspiration for the O.I.P. solely upon his own ideas while I understand the degree-system, including the V°, as authenticated and sanctified by a higher intellectual presence: Set, the Prince of Darkness. Accordingly I understand my function as a Magus to be that of an agency through which a magical principle (Xeper) is defined and explained by the Will of Set. I further presume that the Temple, like the Golden Dawn, A.'A.'., and Church of Satan before it, is the embodiment of a Mandate greater than simply the collective desires of its Initiates. It is precisely what its name implies: the Temple of Set.

This distinction makes it far easier for Ethel to explain the O.I.P. than for a Priest of Set to explain the Temple of Set, since Ethel is dealing with a known quantity while the Temple is dealing with many concepts so overwhelming that we can only approach them by induction and approximation.

The O.I.P. is nothing more than a social club for materialists who enjoy ceremonial pageantry, and this fact bespeaks the ultimate futility of its posture: If it remains true to its proclaimed atheism, then its priesthoods, rituals, and mysteries are just so much play-acting. But if it attempts to introduce any sort of external authentication into its practices, the O.I.P. betrays its origin as nothing more than a cold-blooded attempt to exploit Murray’s illness, the climate of trust and open communication within the Temple of Set, and Ethel’s high office in order to cripple and supplant the Temple with an authoritarian dictatorship.

These are strong words, and I use them deliberately, because I want you to see behind the rhetoric to just was really at stake. When the final crisis in the Church of Satan arose, there was no way for the institution to be saved in defiance of Anton LaVey, because he maintained absolute legal, financial, and organizational control of it.
When I drafted the Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws for the Temple in July of X, therefore, I determined to design an institution so open and so counterbalanced that misuse of it for anyone’s personal aggrandizement would be virtually impossible.

Accordingly organizational power was carefully divided between the Council of Nine, the High Priest, and the Executive Director via an interlocking system of checks and balances. All funds have been kept in corporate savings and checking accounts requiring multiple signatures for transaction, and the legalizing of the Temple as a California non-profit corporation was accomplished to make it just that much more difficult for someone to abuse it or exploit it.

[Complete sets of the Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws are provided to every III°, and every Setian is welcome to view them.] Finally since our inception we have endeavored to maintain a climate of openness and trust that would inhibit cliques and predatory factions from gaining a foothold.

The effectiveness of these various safeguards can be seen, I think, both in the way in which the Ethel schism developed and in the operational profile of the Temple itself during and after the crisis. Although he was Chairman of the Council, a position with, among other things, the power to remove a corrupt High Priest from office, Ethel could not have established credibility for false charges among a majority of the Nine [who would have had to confirm any such action of his by vote]. Hence the Chairman’s office, although powerful enough to protect the Temple against an incompetent/megalomaniac High Priest, is useless as a platform from which to stage a “palace revolt”.

Ethel’s only option was to disassociate himself completely from the checks and balances of the Temple structure, placing himself in a position in which he would be responsible only to himself. And that is what he did. Although he announced that his O.I.P. would be governed by a council, it would be as toothless as the old Church of Satan Council of Nine - at most a group of favored advisors who would have no institutional or legal power to challenge or overrule Ethel’s desires.

Because the Temple By-Laws specify procedures for the replacement of all officials, designation of a new Chairman of the Council and Executive Director was orderly and systematic. The new Chairman was nominated by me per recommendations from the Councillors and then confirmed by formal vote of the Council. The new Executive Director was nominated by the Chairman and again confirmed by Council vote.

Had such procedures not existed, and had the Priesthood not determined to apply them constructively, efficiently, and responsibly, it is possible that the Temple might have broken apart under the shocks that it received. Not only has it survived, however, but it has come through the ordeal with a greater sense of its own strength and character than had been apparent in the days when no such obstacles had been encountered.

The materialist/atheist alternative that had been presented and the criticisms that had been raised concerning the religious philosophy of the Temple also forced Setians of all degrees to reexamine their positions.

Some, who decided that they could not understand the propositions for the existence of Set or who grossly misunderstood the essence of that entity, but who enjoyed the pageantry of occultism, opted for Ethel’s O.I.P. Others left altogether. But still others, whether by reason or sensation or a combination of the two, came to the realization that there was indeed an essence of the Temple and the Æon that was unique and authentic. They not only admit to being Setians; they take so profound a pride in that affirmation that it transforms their entire mode of existence. They look at the past, the present, and the future with an insight and an understanding that, if not yet supernatural, are at nature’s intellectual extremes. And they are determined to expand and ultimately transcend those extremes to experience the phenomenon of Setamorphosis.

We have learned the hard way that the pains we took to protect the Temple against abuse by cliques or individuals were justified. We had the machinery to deal with such contingencies; the Golden Dawn, the A.’.A.’., and the C/S did not. They came to an end, and we survive. “Those who do not study history are condemned to relive it.”

We have also learned the hard way that the Temple cannot make silk purses out of sows’ ears. Persons who do not possess the qualities characteristic of the Elect cannot be taught them. Nor can persons who reject the exercise of those qualities be “rescued”, no matter what degree they have attained. We must content ourselves with recognizing those who appear to be Elect, then providing them with the contacts and research assists to develop and encourage their potential.

If one chooses to experiment with atomic energy, one must risk atomic explosions. And if the Temple proposes to unleash dormant powers of the will, it must risk explosions of that power which accidentally or deliberately injure it. There is no alternative.

Consequently suggestions that the channels of information and communication in the Temple be more restrictive to lessen the chances of future Ethel-revolts cannot be accepted. We would then be following the path of the Church of Satan making our existence more comfortable at the expense of our true reason for existing at all. We must understand this now, and we must remember it in the future.

Moreover crises of this sort are not merely instructive for the damage that they cause. The history of the Temple suggests that we are prone to critical episodes which test the evolutionary stamina of the institution and its Initiates: “Seldon crises” (as defined in Asimov’s Foundation trilogy ... on our reading list).

The resolution of a Seldon crisis does not return everything to status quo. Rather it functions as a sort of evolutionary dialectic: The clash of a thesis (the pre-existing situation) and an antithesis (the crisis) results in a synthesis (a more advanced mode of existence). We can see this process very clearly in the present case, as the Temple is far more precise now both intellectually and magically than it was a year ago. So while our “normal” projects may have been stopped in their tracks for eight months, the Great Project has taken quite a leap forward.

Now that the dust has cleared, we are in a position to bring our “normal” projects up to par. Later this summer the first edition of the Crystal Tablet of Set, an introductory document written for the I°, will be published. Originally designed to provide more sophisticated coverage of the same basic concepts addressed in the Satanic Bible, it has evolved into a text that is both more specific in what it does cover and more responsible in terms of its academic source.

Unlike the Satanic Bible it does not attempt to generalize the entire sweep of our philosophy. Rather it is designed to be the first in many linked stages of magical and philosophical doctrines presented to Setians. Editor and author of the CT is Magister L. Dale Seago, who has devoted much of his time during the past year researching, writing, and editing the document for release. Like other Temple publications it will be a “living” work, structured for efficient and economical revision as the process of Xeper continues.

Expect to see some revisions, expansions, and additions to the Ruby Tablet of Set. Glinda and I are at work upon one rather ambitious contribution right now, and others (such as some conjectures, shall we say, concerning Chambers’ The King in Yellow) are pending. Many of you have mentioned RT drafts you’re preparing as well. The reading list, victim of two drastic overhauls since it first appeared, will probably undergo still another updating [and fattening]. And who knows? There may be still other RT-related surprises in store - perhaps sooner than you think.
I have asked Magistra Wendall and Priest Waters to prepare, as their time permits, a general topical index to the Scroll of Set to date, so that the publication’s encyclopedic value will be enhanced. An enormous amount of the substantive research conducted by Setians since the year X has appeared in this periodical, and its intellectual depth is far greater than that of any other publication of an “occult” orientation. Any Setian who does not have the complete set of Scrolls to date should make it a point to acquire them, and all Setians who have them should occasionally review them for the many fresh insights they offer into the unfolding of the Æon. [I am surprised at how many bits of information I may miss at a first reading.]

You have heard me emphasize the importance of the Scroll before, not as a means for the proclamation of dogma but as a forum in which Setians from all parts of the globe may address the entire membership on matters important to them and to the Temple as a whole. If we are determined to have and to sustain a Fellowship that spans vast reaches of geography, rather than a varying number of purely-localized groups with only a vague sense of the entire Temple, we must not only read the Scroll; we must speak through it to one another. [At the San Francisco Conclave Priest Waters asked me if I would contribute a regular column to each new issue after this one, and I agreed. But such contributions of mine will be kept as succinct as possible, so that all of you will have maximum access to the newsletter.]

Conclaves too will receive fresh emphasis during this next year. There never seem to be enough of them to meet the enthusiasm sparked by them! In addition to local and regional gatherings, we hope to schedule the first truly Temple-wide Conclave since our founding, for the summer of XIV in Detroit. As much as we may endeavor to bridge the distances separating us with letters, calls, and publications, there are still so many factors in philosophical dialogue, magical workings, and personal relationships that cannot survive without first-hand contact.

As our scope of operation continues to grow, we will proceed with the integration of electronic data-processing into both our administrative and our creative operations. At present [and for the last three years] our entire membership and Scroll mailing records have been handled by computer. And in addition to Glinda (whom you met in the November XII Scroll), there are now microcomputers at work in both Magister Grumboski’s data-processing headquarters and in the office of the Executive Director. Eventually we plan to develop interfaces for these, so that vast quantities of data may travel across the Temple almost instantaneously. You will probably see one of these computers handling registration/scheduling/locating at the National Conclave.

And the day may not be far off when every Priest of Set and to some extent every Setian will be able to obtain both research material and single or group communications links simply by dialing a telephone number and placing the receiver in a standard, personal-sized terminal the size of a portable typewriter or television set. At that time printed documents and newsletters may become archaic, as would many letters of a routine nature. Not as fantastic a scenario as you might think.

On an interpersonal level the Executive Director, with the aid of data-processing, has just completed a project matching every Initiate of the Temple with at least two or three contacts of a higher degree, so that no one need feel out-of-touch or awkward about initiating dialogue. Again we feel that this is all the more important because of the relative isolation of many of our Initiates. Reports that have come in to date indicate that everyone seems to like the new idea.
And so we commence our fourth year of Coming Into Being. As I look back at the first three, I see far more reasons to be satisfied with what we’ve accomplished than reasons to regret the jolts we’ve occasionally experienced. As Priest Tom Huddleston once so aptly remarked, “no one said this thing was going to be easy”. As we go at it with greater energy, coordination, and awareness, it’s going to get tougher. And there will be more Seldon crises, too, I suspect, if only to keep us on our toes when we think that we’ve finally thought of everything!

When I began this report, I wondered whether I should make you any promises concerning the future of this Æon, which always seems so irritatingly open-ended. About the only thing I can come up with is a guarantee of lack of boredom. [Unless, as Ken Kesey used to say, you decide to get “off the bus”.] It is a future to be determined not just by you as a person, but by That within you which is [or may be] Elect.

A short time ago I saw the motion picture Damien: Omen II. And I had something of a surprise, because the actor playing the young Antichrist is virtually a mirror-image of me as I was at that age [although he lacks my infamous eyebrows]. As I watched his bewilderment upon realizing his identity, I felt again the shock of the North Solstice X and the conviction that has continued to grow in me since that moment.

How foolish they were, those horror-stricken Christians who collected the fables of the “Book of Revelation”! What would a true Antichrist want with world domination if those under his sway were no more than the semi-beasts they now are? He would merely be one more Alexander, one more Cæsar, one more Bonaparte.

No, the strength of the Æon which has now been unleashed lies in its promise to free the Elect among mankind once and for all from the great patterns of animalistic conceptualization and behavior in which they have been imprisoned for so many thousands of years: to take that realization of True Will as proclaimed by the Beast 666 and force it into an independent focus of identity and creative power through the principle of Xeper.

Without this ambition the Temple, as colorful and stimulating as it might be, would be inauthentic. With it, and with the collective will of the Elect in support of it, we are indeed authentic so much so that no one else on this world can begin to understand how or why this is so.

And therefore, terrified, confused, and suspicious as they are, they are arrogant enough to caricature a Magus as a mere negation of their own demagogue an “Antichrist” and to think that his weapons would be terror, murder, and domination by force! Jesus Christ is irrelevant to this Æon, as are all others who champion the return of mankind to the iron grip of the Natural mechanism. And the power of a true Magus lies not in the tools of a Cæsar or a Napoleon but in a Word: Xeper.
A Wizard of Earthsea (#T2168), The Tombs of Atuan (#T8318), and The Earthest Shore (#T2126), by Ursula K. LeGuin, Bantam Books, N.Y.

This trilogy is a wonderful adventure story. It is a biography of Sparrowhawk (whose true name is Ged), from his earliest demonstration of magical potential through his final adventure as Archmage of Earthsea. It is very enjoyable reading. It is also magically quite intriguing. It poses many magical questions and theories.

Sparrowhawk has begun his apprenticeship to Osion, master Wizard. Unknown to his master, Sparrowhawk opens a book of rituals and reads one. He becomes trapped by the ritual, which seems to summon a frightening shadow from the underworld. Osion returns to banish the shadow, and has these words for his pupil: “Have you never thought how danger must surround power as shadow does light? ... Think of this: that every word, every act of our Art, is said and is done either for good, or for evil. Before you speak or do you must know the price that is to pay!”

Setian philosophy agrees that magic is dangerous, Magicians have created/summoned beings with the power to destroy their creator/summner, probably due to guilt, and certainly due to the lack of a consciously directed and focused will. Even a Setian must recognize the dangers of magic [See Magister Seago’s “Psychic Hazards and Proper Use of Ritual Magic” in the Ruby Tablet].

Good and evil are not so well recognized among Setians [see “Sainthood vs. Sethood”, Scroll, September XII]. However we should try to avoid acts which cause effect contrary to our desires, and should perform those acts which will accomplish our goals.

We should not become paralyzed into inactivity by fear of the unknown effects of our actions. We should, however, conscientiously examine all acts, magical and mundane, for their likely effects.

Each of us has a responsibility to examine each of our acts, to determine their probable effects. We should act as our will, backed by intelligent consideration, dictates. We should not react with emotional whim.

In Earthsea the over-exertion of magical muscles can be physically harmful. Sparrowhawk’s first magical feat was to cloak his village in fog during an invasion, foiling the invaders. After the fog dissipated, “No weapon-hurt had come to the boy, but he would not speak nor eat nor sleep ... His aunt said, ‘He has overspent his power.’” It required Master Wizard Osion to bring Sparrowhawk back to life.

After a short apprenticeship with Osion, Sparrowhawk enrolled in the School of Wizardry at Roke. He proved to be an exceptional student, combining his natural magical talent with a talent for study. During a battle of pride with another student, Sparrowhawk summoned a beautiful princess from the dead. He also accidentally summoned an evil spirit from the Unknown, a demon dedicated to destroying Sparrowhawk.

Only the swift action of the Archmage of Roke saves Sparrowhawk and drives away the demon. The Archmage then strains all his power to close the gate between Earthsea and the Unknown. Ged was put to bed, and his physical wounds cared for, but:
Not far away, in the unroofed court where the fountain played, the Archmage lay also unmoving, but cold, very cold: only his eyes lived, watching the fall of moonlit water and the stir of moonlit leaves. Those with him said no spells and worked no healing ... To check the ungoverned spell and drive off the shadow from Ged, Nemmerle had spent all his power, and with it his bodily strength was gone, He lay dying ...

We must know who we are; we must know what we are. Just as we recognize the unlimited power we may Xeper to, we must recognize the relatively limited power we currently have. This is the concept of balance as expressed in the Satanic Bible.

Sparrowhawk spends over a year recovering from the attack. He finally meets the new Archmage, who has these words:

You have great power inborn in you, and you used that power wrongly, to work a spell over which you had no control, not knowing how that spell affects the balance of light and dark, life and death, good and evil. And you were moved to do this by pride and by hate. Is it any wonder the result was ruin?

When do we act willfully, and when do we act emotionally? Humans are rationalizing creatures. We must ever examine our intentions to determine if we are rationally following our will, or rationalizingly following our emotions. The latter can act in opposition to our goals.

After Ged earns his wizard’s staff, he leaves Roke and has several adventures, running from the demon. Ged eventually turns and boots the demon. Several more adventures are in the offing, until Ged finally catches up with the demon in the uncharted ocean surrounding Earthsea.

Ged overcomes the demon by naming the demon with his own name, recognizing the demon as himself, as the demon within which must be recognized to be defeated. These were a wizard friend’s observations:

And he began to see the truth, that Ged had neither lost nor won but, naming the shadow of his death with his own name, had made himself whole: a man: who, knowing his whole true self, cannot be used or possessed by any power other than himself, and whose life therefore is lived for life’s sake and never in the service of pain, or hatred, or the dark.

Each of us must know ourself. In Earthsea this is an exceptional quality which Ged attains: being whole, knowing himself. Because of it he is more powerful, more magically balanced.

As Setians, knowing ourselves is essential. Even as Set created HarWer so that Set could define himself, so must we determine what we are and what we are not. We must know ourselves and be whole; only thus can we willfully Xeper.

One of Sparrowhawk’s earlier lessons:

“You want to work spells,” Osion said presently, striding along. “You’ve drawn too much water from that well. Wait. Manhood is patience. Mastery is nine times patience. What is that herb by the path?”

“Strawflower.”

“And that?”

“I don’t know.”

“Fourfoil, they call it.” Osion had halted, the coppershod foot of his staff near the little weed, so Ged looked closely at the plant, and plucked a dry seedpod from it, and finally asked, since Osion said nothing more, “What is its use, Master?”

“None I know of.”
Ged kept the seedpod a while as they went on, then tossed it away.

“When you know the fourfoil in all its seasons, root and leaf and flower, by sight and scent and seed, then you may learn its true name, knowing its being: which is more than its use. What, after all, is the use of you? Or of myself? Is Gont Mountain useful, or the Open Sea?” Osion went on a half mile or so, and said at last, “To hear, one must be silent.”

Ged himself later explained the subject thusly:

“Do you see, Arren, how an act is not, as young men think, like a rock that one picks up and throws, and it hits or misses, and that’s the end of it. When that rock is lifted, the Earth is lighter; the hand that bears it heavier, When it is thrown, the circuits of the stars respond, and where it strikes or falls the universe is changed. On every act the balance of the whole depends, The winds and seas, the powers of water and earth and light, all that these do, and all that the beasts and green things do, is well done, and rightly done, All these act within the Equilibrium. From the hurricane and the great whale’s sounding to the fall of a dry leaf and the gnat’s flight, all they do is done within the balance of the whole. But we, insofar as we have power over the world and over one another, we must learn to do what the leaf and the whale and the wind do of their own nature. We must learn to keep the balance. Having intelligence, we must not act in ignorance. Having choice, we must not act without responsibility ...

“But then,” the boy said, frowning at the stars, “is the balance to be kept by doing nothing? Surely a man must act, even not knowing all the consequences of his act, if anything is to be done at all?”

“Never fear. It is much easier for men to act than to refrain from acting. We will continue to do good and to do evil ... But if there were a king over us all again, and he sought counsel of a mage, as in the days of old, and I were that mage, I would say to him: ‘My lord, do nothing because it is righteous to praiseworthy or noble to do so; do nothing because it seems good to do so; do only that which you must do and which you cannot do in any other way.’”

Just as we act in our own best interests, we need to be patient enough to gather the data required for the logical and willful analysis of our acts, their causes, and results. We must be patient enough to not be misled into error.

For when it rained Osion would not even say the spell that every weatherworker knows, to send the storm aside. In a land where sorcerers come thick, like Gont or the Enlades, you may see a raincloud blundering slowly from side to side and place to place as one spell shunts it onto the next, till at last it is buffeted out over the sea where it can rain in peace. But Osion let the rain fall where it would. He found a thick fir-tree and lay down beneath it. Ged crouched among the dripping bushes wet and sullen, and wished he had gone as prentice to that old weatherworker of the Vale, where at least he would have kept dry.

Which is the true knowledge? Xeper is not the only choice. Is it the best? Each of us must continually decide.

Why do I, a Setian, worry about such things as these? I do so because I am a Setian, a willful being.

Nature acts in equilibrium with itself. All natural acts are just that: natural. Men, however, have the power to side-step nature, to upset nature’s equilibrium.

Many willful acts (magical or otherwise) are not of global importance. Some, however, upset nature’s equilibrium such that there is a natural backlash, which may interfere temporarily with our goals. [One such backlash is the ever-increasing pollution caused by our unnatural but often desirable industries. Another might be the drought affecting the southwest.]

Even fewer are the acts so disastrous as to need to be countered by another willful act. One such would be a very powerful psychic “sniper”, who would locate and destroy individuals of Setian outlook and power. Another might be a mad president [of any country], intent on using the Bomb.

In Ged’s final and greatest adventure:

“Can it be a kind of pestilence, a plague, that drifts from land to land, blighting the crops and the flocks and men's spirits?”

“A pestilence is a motion of the great Balance, of the Equilibrium itself; this is different... This is not a righting of the balance, but an upsetting of it. There is only one creature who can do that.”

“A man?” Arren said, tentative.

“We men.”

“How?”

“By an unmeasured desire for life.”

“For life? But it isn’t wrong to want to live?”

“No. But when we crave power over life endless wealth, unassailable safety, immortality then desire becomes greed. And if knowledge allies itself to that greed, then comes evil. Then the balance of the world is swayed, and ruin weighs heavy in the scale.”

Arren brooded over this a while and said at last, “Then you think it is a man we seek?”

“A man, and a mage. Aye, I think so.”

“But I had thought, from what my father and teachers taught, that the great arts of wizardry were dependent on the Balance, the Equilibrium of things, and so could not be used-for evil.”

“That,” said Sparrowhawk somewhat wryly, “is a debatable point. Infinite are the arguments of mages... Every land of Earthsea knows of witches who cast unclean spells, sorcerers who use their art to win riches. But there is more. The Firelord, who sought to undo the darkness and stop the sun at noon, was a great mage; even Erreth-Akbe could scarcely defeat him. The Enemy of Morred was another such. Where he came, whole cities knelt to him; armies fought for him. The spell he wove against Morred was so mighty that even when he was slain it could not be halted, and the island of Solea was overwhelmed by the sea, and all on it perished. These were men in whom great strength and knowledge served the will to evil and fed upon it. Whether the wizardry that serves a better end may always prove the stronger, we do not know. We hope.”
Appendix 44: From Psychology to Philosophy, or Know Thyself

- by Ricco A. Zappitelli III°
 Scroll of Set #IV-2, October 1978

In Egypt and ancient Greece psychology [defined by Webster’s as “the science dealing with the mind and mental and emotional processes’’] originally existed in a form known as the Mysteries, but later split into several fragmented forms, among them alchemy, magic, masonry, occultism, and Theosophy.

The important thing to note from this historical information was that the ancient form of the study of man’s behavior was reduced from the “all-encompassing” school of Mysteries to specialized parts, making comprehension of the whole almost an impossibility.

Today the two systems of psychology as they exist are (1) the study of man as he is imagined or thought to be - a system based upon man’s being asleep, and (2) the study of man from the point of view of his possible evolution - a system based on man’s awakening.

An acceptance of the former system (placing rest and preservation as ultimate goals) can only bring about stagnation, whereas pursuance of the latter (placing change and creating above all, or Xeper) is our concern.

I give to you my great pentagram ... and it is shown inverse that creation and change be exalted above rest and preservation.

The first step toward this evolution must be brought about by efforts of a controlled kind in an observant state. The other factors which are vital toward this growth are a “learning” of certain techniques and/or knowledge of methods, and secondly help by interacting with others. [Ouspensky defines this as a “school”.] This I feel is one of the most valuable functions of the Temple of Set and its pylons - to afford a vehicle to aid towards the individual’s total possible expansion toward the goal of Xeper. I can’t help but feel without this “school” our individual evolution, [and thus the Temple’s evolution] would be slower and more arduous to bring about.

There are several reasons I can see why we could be obstructed from further growth. They might be:

(1) On true introspection the “cost” of advancement in clarifying our lifestyles would be considered too great and thus dispensed with.
(2) Because we wouldn’t have a strong enough desire to evolve, or the persistence to struggle toward that end for a prolonged-enough length of time. Desire and duration are vital in seeking evolution!
(3) Because of our inability or failure to comprehend or even understand the theory of future development, even if it were explained in detail.
(4) Last and most importantly [described by Ouspensky as the “missing link”] to overcome our inability to admit to ourselves that the qualities we ascribe as already having in fact exist only as potentials or future possibilities which we can only attain by work.
These factors, I feel upon self-observation, apply to all degrees of Setians in varying levels and ways and can aid us all toward Xeper. After coming to terms with ourselves, as it were, and deciding we in fact do want this evolution, the magician must (1) develop the dormant powers he presently considers himself as already having to their fullest potential, then (2) work on developing these powers further to the point of acquiring new facilities and powers which presently they don’t possess and under “normal” circumstances could never have, and finally (3) elevate the self to the “all-encompassing” prospective of “higher man” or, as defined by the philosophy of Nietzsche, the “superman”.

This concept of higher self is an important step I feel toward our progress of Setamorphosis to be attained through higher consciousness.

What exactly is consciousness?

Such easy questions I’m frequently asked! But seriously how does one define that?

All that I could start with was what consciousness was generally thought to be, namely the equivalent of mind-activity when in fact it is a particular kind of awareness independent of the mind’s activity, brought about by observation of self: who I am, where I am, and what I do not in fact know. Of course this conscious state or awakened state would be improved as we know by duration and frequency. My personal difficulty, however, seems to arise in the combating of what Ouspensky calls the “four harmful functions”.

I have to struggle daily against these to remain aware of them and overcome them. If you’re anything like me and not yet perfect, you might want to reflect on them. They are (1) Lying known or unknown (Know Thyself); (2) Imagination - imagining things without seeing them objectively as they really are; (3) Any negative expressions; (4) Unnecessary, unclear talking - not thought out.

From this study on psychology and our inner workings must necessarily develop a philosophy (or life and world view) of our own. In Before Philosophy before man’s way of life was formed into a pattern which could be loosely termed philosophy, he based his view on his mythology and religion.

We now have, along with this Gift of Set, a valuable vehicle which enables us to bring all things together, as was done in ancient times in their life style, namely our Temple. It affords us a work-ground for expanding magical principles - a “school”, religion, philosophy, psychology, and a research area for survival techniques, to mention a few.

I as a Priest of Set invite you also to join me on this magnificent venture - the undertaking of attaining our “impossible possibilities”.

- 557 -
Think this well over. Nothing can be assimilated to Maat that is not of Maat’s nature, true and indestructible consciousness. All that comes of the lower personality, all that is mortal, fictitious, cerebral, alien to he individual’s essential being, is rejected. - Isha Schwaller de Lubicz, Her-Bak

What does the word “Maat” evoke? A woman with a feather on her head? An Egyptian goddess standing beside a scale? Budge will tell you that Maat is the Egyptian symbol of Justice and Truth. Her feather of Truth is weighed against a deceased one’s heart to see how the deceased was in life. Should the scales tip, the deceased would be devoured by a frightful beast that stands beside the throne of Osiris. That seems to be Maat’s primary function.

The above definition of Maat is adequate - just. I would like to give you another perspective. Budge describes a function - what she does, not what she is.

Consider Maat in this way. Yes, she stands for Truth and Justice, and yet Maat is more. She is not only representative of the principles - the neteru - she embraces them collectively. She may be considered the glue that holds the whole Egyptian pantheon, civilization and essence together. Maat is the Egyptian symbol for a way of living, of being. The Egyptians had two phrases pertinent to Maat: anX m Ma’at and ma’a heru (“to live in Truth” and “true of voice”).

A person living in Maat was not merely truthful or just; he conducted his life with a sense of Truth and Justice. His life was Maat. He was Being Maat within himself. And when he spoke, his words were True; he was ma’a heru. [Note the capitalized words, particularly “true” and “True.”]

Maat’s feather is very light compared to the heart it judges. If you have been trapped in the mundane, the intellectual, the day-to-day, you have not recognized or lived in Maat, and your heart will tip the scales. But if you have begun to Xeper, to seek your higher, unified self, you will also have begun to live your life in the glow of absolutes - Truth/Justice, Maat - in particular.

Truth is a principle - one of the Platonic absolutes. We cannot measure or even define it; we can only use symbols to “define” with it. Xeper is not exclusive of Maat; with Xeper comes Maat, for as we evolve, we become more and more able to understand our selves. “Maat is in Truth the highest consciousness man can make his own.”

Let me give you a concrete example: You hear a statement and its accuracy is immediately and compellingly apparent. “That’s true!” you say, and you know that it is so.

Other times you hear a statement and agree with it or disagree with it on an intellectual basis. The first time you glimpsed Maat because you were attuning to your self. The second time you didn’t.

Maat is very pervasive; if you Xeper, you can’t avoid facing her; if you don’t, you won’t know you’re missing anything. More importantly, as you do Xeper, you will find yourself weighing your self against Maat repeatedly as you grow - not at the judgment scene at the end, for we are not [presumably] going to end as the humans in the mundane world. The rules for us are different.
Maat was the principle governing the Old Kingdom. Everyone lived in Maat; and Pharaoh was the embodiment on Earth of that principle. By the time of the New Kingdom (the Empire, Tut, etc.), this understanding had become lost [except perhaps to the few] and the words merely empty formulæ. Budge’s definition of Maat comes from that latter period. However for this new Æon, for the new being, we must see the far deeper and significant being of Maat.

Maat is the way we conduct our lives. Do we live and act and be in Truth, or do we just think so, deluding our selves? We may speak “truth” one time and not at other times. Yet perhaps it is only important to speak “Truth” when necessary. We all speak “truth” or “truths” in our daily lives, and even in our private Setian lives.

But do we speak “Truth”? Little-“t” truth is pretty easy to manage; but big “T”-Truth is something else. “Truth” does not originate in the mundane self, but rather in the deepest part of our selves, in what I have called the Core Self. As we become more in tune with this Core, we can perceive Truth as it is, not as we conceive it. As we Become, as we see and utter Truth, we move toward that true Egyptian concept of Maat - living our selves and our lives in Truth. We may still utter “truth” in our mundane lives, but we can also see “Truth” as it is in our selves and in others’. We begin to function as Maat, for as we hear words - ours and others’ - we weigh them on the scales of Truth and judge them.

Justice, the other word linked with Maat, is inherent in Truth, for without Truth, Justice would be mocked. With Truth, Justice exists. As we weigh the words on the scales for Truth, we are also seeking Justice there - not jurisprudence, but Justice the principle.

Why devote all this time to Maat? It has become obvious that many Setians think of Maat as a woman with a feather in her hair who weighs people’s hearts for “truth.” Living in Maat must be living and breathing Truth - particularly as Setians, and particularly in the ritual chamber. For here, more than anywhere else, before Set, we must face our selves and judge our selves as being ma’a heru or not. Do we perceive and utter “Truth” or merely “truth”? Set does not need to tell us; we look inside our selves and see. And every time we can examine our hearts and say, “Yes, I spoke Truth, or I saw Truth,” we are one step closer to a True sense of Maat.
In view of Priestess Alexandra Sarris’ article on Maat (Scroll, October XIII), it seems appropriate and timely for some concepts I wish to explore.

Maat, the principle of Truth, her feather symbolic of a True and Just state of being, personifies for me that oft-mentioned phrase, “them ‘n’ us”. Maat outlines in glaring brilliance the incredible contrast between those sometimes cruel and unjust, occasionally bearable, but always predictable creatures of the natural order: humanity.

As you will all attest to, our experiences and contacts with humanity-at-large can hardly be classified as either helpful, positive, or as an advancement of this Æon. But I didn’t intend this to be a critique of humanity’s mistakes. Rather I’m attempting to draw a parallel between the ancient Egyptian concept of the neter (pronounced “netcher”) and the all-inclusive concept of nature as defined by modern scientific types.

There is an obvious “them ‘n’ us” quality here, and I am hoping to clarify it for myself as well as my readers. Looking back to Priestess Sarris’ article “The Integral Self” (Scroll, February XIII) and using the following quote from Her-Bak: Egyptian Initiate, I can see a correlation between our selves, our magical essence and what it is composed of, and the neter-concept versus the natural order, human nature and what it is not composed of.

First re-read the Maat article and particularly the quote which accompanies it. Then the following:

They did establish a direct connection between natural phenomena and the principal functions, or neters. There is not a single “natural” phenomenon that may not be attributed to the action of the neters.

And from another page:

The Egyptian teaching relies on the symbol in nature; its way of action is the projection of heaven upon earth, of the metaphysical world into the physical world, and of cosmic causal functions into the human body.

“Higher man”, the “Core Self”, is obviously being described. The Egyptians seemed to feel that once you had perceived the neter within yourself, the “causal function”, you had indeed reached a higher state of being, if only in the sense that you reached an understanding of why things occurred as they did. It was a basic metaphysical understanding at best, but they certainly were on the right track.

The correlation that I see occurring now has its basis in my conviction that the recognition, the perception, and adoption of those same neters as part of a Setian’s nature leads not only to an understanding of the principle but to the actual “becoming” of, and unification with that principle.

For example, if a Setian consistently practices truth in his life and recognizes it in himself, he becomes Truth. In the “doing” you create the “being”. And once that particular neter has become manifest within your very being, no longer can it be “switched off” or ignored except by an actively negative force of will: a backward step which could cause a chain-reaction of negation leading the once-evolving Magician into essential oblivion.

The Black Magus need fear no power save his own, but he must conquer his own Will [nature?] that he cause not his destruction through ill chance or purpose. - from the Statement of Belial, The Diabolicron

What I am presenting is actually another interpretation of the Xeper-process, but perhaps with a somewhat different slant. We have heard Xeper defined as evolvement, growth toward ... but I am offering other words such as “re-creating and re-recognizing” those ancient and ageless principles called neters by the Egyptians; re-recognizing them in and as our selves, thereby creating that which is both our unbroken [though sometimes time-shrouded] link with an ancient past, and an undeniable goal as well. The entire formula, viewed as a continuous, though for ages dormant process, rings of the kind of timelessness which the Black Magician can appreciate.

Well! That’s my perception about “us”, much ritualized over and intellectually bombarded by that “nature-minded” human in me!

As far as “they” are concerned, it’s a much easier concept to swallow. You have heard the phrase: “That’s the nature of things.” Doesn’t that sound like the typical human concession to fate, hopelessness in the hands of an omnipotent, omnipresent God, etc? If “Heaven must perish; Hell must perish ...”, then what will remain? Nature? Neter? The answer seems clear, as is the course our lives must take. Think and live and be in and of Maat, and you shall discover [or re-discover] and reunite with those principal elements, the neters, by which your essence can and must be defined.
Appendix 47: Biography - Magistra Lilith Sinclair

- by Constance Moffatt II°

Scroll of Set #IV-6, February 1979

She walks in beauty, like the night -
Of cloudless climes and starry skies;
And all that’s best of dark and bright
Meet in her aspect and her eyes.
- George Gordon, Lord Byron

She walks in beauty, because she is beauty - dark, radiant, queenly, vital - a goddess!

Magistra Lilith Sinclair was born, raised, and educated in a Roman Catholic atmosphere in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. After two years in Doylestown, she moved to Spotswood, New Jersey with her two children, Beth Amber and Christopher Martin, where she remained for five years. Her last residence in the east was Jersey City.

During her time in New Jersey, she modeled for a year in New York City and secured a position as secretary to co-owners of “The Magician”, a totally Black Arts-oriented shop in Manhattan. Gradually she became manager of the store as she moved up from retail selling to wholesale buying and operating the mail order accounts. One of the owners was Ronald K. Barrett, then a Warlock II° of the Church of Satan.

Questions, contradictions, and discrepancies concerning her religious teachings started plaguing her during her high school years. Her brain ran rampant trying to find answers that never came. The nuns could not quell her questioning mind. Thus by the end of high school she was an agnostic. As she sought out other religions, she found hypocrisies, restrictions, repressions. Within 3-5 years she became an atheist.

During all of this time, Magistra Sinclair found herself fascinated with witchcraft and magic. As she read books and viewed movies on the subject, she realized that her fascination lay with the Dark Side and self-accomplishment as opposed to the White Side with its altruistic goals. One of her fellow workers, knowing of her interests, bought her a copy of the Satanic Bible by Anton LaVey. Until that time she had never even heard of the Church of Satan. As she read and re-read the book, she was overwhelmed by seeing in print the philosophies she had been feeling for so many years. It was as though LaVey had known her thoughts while writing his book. She immediately wrote to the C/S to learn more about it. She took several months to decide to join because she wanted it to be a serious decision.

In 1970 Magistra Sinclair was accepted to the C/S and was put in communication with individual members in the northeast. After six months she felt the need to work actively with a group. Consequently her own Lilith Grotto came into existence. The first meeting in Spotswood consisted of herself and two strangers. In two years the Grotto grew to 50 members in three states, and remained at that strength for the next three years. Eventually the Grotto branched off into three independent groups in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

Much of the success of the Lilith Grotto was due to Magistra Sinclair’s impact in radio, television, and newspaper interviews. Over the years she was also an invited lecturer at such locales as Boston University, Queens College, Columbia University, local N.Y.C. public and parochial high schools, the Philadelphia Ethical Society, and the Psychic Phenomenon Society. The last saw her speaking before several hundred people as she shared the dais with Jean Dixon and Hans Holzer. This was her last public speaking engagement before heading west.

By this time Magistra Sinclair had built such a reputation as to be known as the “Occult Superstar of the East Coast” (Philadelphia magazine article). Unfortunately this fame and flamboyancy had their bad effects - the loss of two jobs, harassment, vandalism of her home - particularly after a Time magazine interview.

After a year as a Satanist I° in the C/S, Magistra Sinclair took and passed her Witch II° test. Six months later she was asked to accompany Anton LaVey on an eastern publicity tour promoting his new book The Compleat Witch. As he was leaving N.Y.C., he told her to take her test for Priestess III°, which she passed in April 1972. She was formally ordained by C/S Priest Michael Grumboski at the Third Eastern Conclave at the Manhattan Statler Hilton in October of the same year.

Santa Barbara became this vivacious lady’s abode in October 1974. Within the first month after the Temple of Set came into being, Magus Aquino Recognized Lilith Sinclair as Magistra Templi IV°.

During her C/S days she had searched through the list of “Infernal names” in the Satanic Bible for a magical name. She liked the sound of “Lilith” and by instinct selected it. Her investigation of the chosen name followed. Her ritual name, which she uses only in workings when she wants to evoke the Cobra goddess with whom she identifies, is Uræus, the Serpent One.

Along with her 13-year-old daughter and 12-year-old son, she lives with a Siamese/Persian black cat with golden eyes named Seti. She works for a stock brokerage firm. Her parents and brother, Adept William Butch, still reside in Pittsburgh.

Magistra Sinclair counts among her important interests astronomy and geology, which she has studied at Santa Barbara City College. She also is proficient at belly dancing, which she does solely for physical fitness and self-enjoyment. An avid reader, she also likes instrumental music, particularly classical. The Moody Blues and Jefferson Starship are her very favorite modern performers.

A woman of keen insight and sharp intellect, she prefers talking to writing and is very eloquent at it. She likes a degree of formality with people when she first meets them. Above all she abhors anyone calling her “Lil”. She also has little patience with non-Setians who ask obviously inane, pointless questions regarding the Black Arts and Setian philosophy, since they evidence a sensational, rather than a genuine interest. On the other hand, serious, intelligent questions are met with frank, thoughtful answers and a receptive ear.

More than the ocean, which she loves, she is drawn to dense, enveloping fog, particularly on a grey, lonely, morning, beach stroll where she can hear the crashing waves as she wraps herself in a mystical, magical cloak of mist and senses her awareness of what she has become in her own universe.

Magistra Sinclair would like to develop herself to the highest degree of intellectual and magical end she can achieve. She does not know if there is a limit to this as she continues to Xeper. Ultimately she desires to be powerful, proficient, highly-evolved, skilled sorceress that she can - “to dare the Black Magic” and succeed.
Appendix 48: It is Now the Time for the Coming Into Being of Xem

- by Constance Moffatt II°
Scroll of Set #IV-9, May 1979

The “Infernal Mandate” is carried by whoever best represents the true will of the Prince of Darkness at a given point of time. I am convinced that the “Infernal Mandate” has now passed. Xeper has been Uttered, and it is now the time for the Coming Into Being of Xem. The impetus of the Æon of Set is now in the care of another Magus. - Michael A. Aquino V°

Thus did Magus Ronald Keith Barrett Come Into Being as the new High Priest of the Temple of Set on March 24th of the year XIV Æon of Set.

Magus Barrett, known magically as Anubis, entered this world in the small town of Fort Branch, Indiana, September 29, 1944 CE.

One of three sons of members of the Presbyterian Church, Anubis was elected to the Indiana State Synod, the governing body of the Presbyterian Church, when he was 14 years of age. After challenging the hypocrisies of the church and incurring the wrath of the religious fathers, he resigned from both the Synod and the church.

Anubis nevertheless continued in his search to find the true church - one that practiced what it preached. “My quest for that God that called to me from the time I was a young boy drove me [and everyone else, I might add] crazy. I was labelled ‘fanatic’ and ‘heretic’ at the same time.”

Anubis spent most of his time in the local cemetery outside of Fort Branch, or performed contrived rituals in front of the altar of the town’s Presbyterian Church, the sanctuary to which he gained access by sneaking in through unlocked windows.

The special ceremonies of the Mormon Church and the secrecy of their temple appealed to Anubis. At 17 he thought he wanted to “try it out”. When his parents prevented his baptism, he joined the Army in order to have the freedom to join the church. By this time, however, he began to question and challenge the Christian god. “I reasoned that maybe he was wrong if all his followers were such hypocrites. Then I made a bargain with both the Devil and God at the same time. The one who could prove himself to me would gain my loyalty. Religion became empty to me, and I became something of a rebel.”

Shortly thereafter Anubis decided to investigate certain magazine ads and joined AMORC. This association was not long-lived.

During the 1962-65 Army years which followed high school graduation, he had some medical training. Shortly after his Army hitch was up, Anubis joined the Universe Book Club. His first order included The Black Arts by Cavendish and Diary of a Witch by Sybil Leek.

Something in me said, “Yeah, more, more!” My very first ritual was my own version of a destruction ritual, and it really worked.

Disenchantment soon set in, however, as he became bogged down with worthless occult books. The disenchantment led to “internal outrage toward everything”. He bought a motorcycle, became involved with an outlaw club, cultivated a “very demonic appearance, and generally raised Hell”.

One day a mysterious package arrived in the mail, sender unknown. It contained Anton LaVey’s Satanic Bible. “I laughed and put it away for a rainy day. Then one day it rained!” Anubis read the book in one sitting and finished by proclaiming himself a Satanist. “I felt as if LaVey had written my own feelings and ideas in his book.” Shortly thereafter he wrote the Church of Satan for an application.

Anubis became a Satanist I° in V AS. He continued on through the Church, becoming a Warlock II° in VII. He joined the Lilith Grotto and the Grotto Council in VII in New York City, where he owned and operated “The Magician”, an occult service/store specializing in Satanic ritual supplies, books, occult jewelry, metaphysical art gallery, etc. He formed the Twilight Grotto, the last Grotto in the Church of Satan, in IX.

The Temple of Set welcomed Anubis as a Priest of Set III° in July of X ÆS. He became one of the original Council of Nine the same year. During this time he brought into creation the Anubis Pylon in San Francisco, which was active through the Vernal Equinox XIII. He became a Magister Templi IV° in August of XII, and Chairman of the Council of Nine in January XIII. He was Recognized as a Magus V° on the South Solstice XIII.

Magus Barrett moved to Potter Valley, approximately 180 miles north of San Francisco, early in XIII. Shortly afterward he made his final move to the top of his three-mile-high, magical mountain of mystic origins and wild, primitive beauty, which he named XemSet. Wilderness is some thing which he has always loved, and this extremely remote mountain more or less “found me. It is the magically correct place for me to be. I feel uncompromised here at XemSet. This is also where I first ‘knew’ my Word Xem.” Since that first day of residency on Middle Mountain, he has worked tirelessly building the XemSet complex, an extensive undertaking.

Dark and Handsome, with a rather disarming, jackal-like smile, Anubis likes to paint, sculpt, explore, and “terrorize humans”, the last of which he lists first among his pet peeves. He is also interested in metaphysics, electronic & classical music, science fiction, philosophy, Egyptian language, religion, magic, Lovecraft, other horror literature, and art.

This very magnetic and energetic Magus likes coffee, his pipe, a full Moon, summer, peanut butter, Grape-Nuts, creating things, watching nature as he works outdoors, magical work, Setian company & magical discussions, and “me”. He has left cities, loud noise, sports, pollution, and humans - all of which he abhors - behind him. More of his pet peeves are: cold, wet weather; helplessness; sloppiness; senseless red-tape rules and laws; mechanical failure; soul music; imbalance; illness; intellectual snobs; drunks & “heads”; liars & thieves; incompetence; and “situations affecting me that I cannot control”.

Merenthoth, the XemSet cat, will be joined in August by a pet wolf, who will fit quite well into the surrounding animal life of deer, jack rabbits, raccoons, owls, and snakes.

Magus Barrett fully identifies with the Temple of Set because as one of the Elect he knows that the Temple “is that one organization on Earth dedicated to Truth. The Temple is that which gives means and/or purpose to everything else. It is the vehicle of the Elect upon the path of Xeper to Xem.”

As Magus, Anubis desires to define and completely “Open the Way to Xem”; as High Priest of Set, he hopes to “guide and protect the Temple as best I can”. Personally he aspires to “fully Come Into Being as a god”.

I would like to recognize and thank Anton LaVey, who helped to set me on the path of magic, and Magistra Lilith Sinclair, who was a true teacher and guide for me. Without her example and magical expertise, I would not be who and what I am today. And finally I wish to thank and express my love and respect to Magus Michael Aquino, without whom none of us would be who and what we are. There is none greater than this one. He is honored by me above all others, not only for what he has done, but for who he has shown us that he is. It is my will and my Word that he shall always be honored among us.
As Magus Ronald K. Barrett, High Priest of the Temple of Set, advises all Setians to “never be less than you are”, he also leaves us with his favorite quote from The Morning of the Magicians: “Freedom to become in the midst of an eternity which is!”
Appendix 49: The Xem Working

- by Ronald K. Barrett III°
June 22, XII/1977 (on XemSet)

Working question: About the mountain (Khemset) “complex,” my strange thoughts, and the development of self.

The area in which I had chosen to work was also near the site I had been preparing for my future home. There was no altar per se, as I had elected to sit in a chair under the night sky. It seemed, however, that nowhere that I placed the chair felt correct. Just about the time that I was getting angry at this inability to start, the moonlight moved between some tree branches and created a nearly perfect circle in the center of the dugout and in front of a small cave that I had uncovered while digging. Instead of facing west, which runs the length of the property uphill, I felt inclined to face south. The circle provided the Moon was definitely where I should be seated.

I “opened the gates” and began to concentrate. As the working began, I experienced the sensation of being a colossus, with the size and appearance of the seated Rameses II. I did not know into what that was going to evolve, for I was rudely and quickly jerked back into mundane existence by something moving around in the fallen tree limbs behind me. I passed it off as being a lizard, quail, squirrel, or some similar small creature. When twigs began to snap, I assumed that it was probably a deer that had come snooping around. Next I heard it in the tree a few feet behind me, and then I knew it was an owl. But when twigs and small limbs began to fall, I knew that only an impossibly large owl could create such a commotion, and my spine began to tingle. When I turned around to look, there was nothing there, and the noise had stopped. When I turned to investigate, nothing was to be seen.

As I was becoming very frightened, the words “higher man must conquer fear” suddenly came to my mind. By an effort of will, my fear subsided. I turned back to welcome whatever “it” was, and this time it was gone, not to return. I was awake.

I proceeded to scan the mountain with the aid of full night vision and moonlight, and I saw it quite differently than I ever had before. There was a light blue-green haze or aura around all the plant life, and somehow it would have seemed unnatural not to have seen it. My eyes were drawn to the waning Moon. I felt an association of Set with its darker side, and of Osiris with its waning bright side; and something within me recoiled in rejection of the associations.

Immediately I had a vision of a large hall, dimly lit, with several entities (approximately 15) gathered over against a wall and observing someone who was standing before a pair of scales. He was Anubis, and there was a heart being weighed against a feather. The scene was obviously the Hall of Judgment. Although the entities were in Egyptian garb and of Egyptian appearance, I recognized them as certain members of the Temple of Set. Set was there also, but his presence was felt rather than seen.

Then came an impression: “Set is the leader only of higher man.” This did not include all Setians.

Anubis/I was before the scales only because an individual (whose heart was being weighed) was seeking entry into this group of Elect/higher beings, and because I was in some way responsible. Another seeker would be judged by another of the Elect.

Then my attention was directed to the end of this hall, only to behold a very disturbing vision. There, seated on his throne, was Osiris. He was not one of the Elect, but he was awaiting our verdict. I somehow knew that his throne was at the entrance to the hall, and that it was there for a very simple reason: his jurisdiction ended there. The individual being judged was not dead (as in “un-alive”); rather he was seeking entry into the realm of higher man and being. Should the scales tip against the seeker, he would be given back to Osiris, who is the god of the dead and of lower man, and of recycling them.

This disturbed me, and I questioned where HarWer fit into all of this. I was made to see the Sun, and it was Ra by name - still no sign of the “strange and fitful presence”.

Then a sentence from the Book of Coming Forth by Night came to me: “But speak to me at night, for the sky then becomes an entrance and not a barrier.” My perspective immediately changed to one above the spot where I was sitting. I was looking down over the land, and it was now daylight with an incredibly blue-blue sky. I continued ascending until the sky changed to very dark blue, then purple, then charcoal, and finally black. I could see stars all around me. Throughout all of this I was continually aware of being physically seated on the mountain. Then I looked back and Earth, half-dark and half-lit by the Sun.

Then I understood that Set is not limited to our night, but that we are; we are three-dimensional creatures. But we as higher man need not be. Neither are the Elect limited to communication with Set only during the hours of darkness; rather they can communicate beyond the restrictions of the senses and of time and space. To accomplish this, the Elect must be aware that in the space beyond Earth the “night sky” is permanent. The day imprisons consciousness, but it is not escape-proof, and this provides a great exercise in Xeper.

After an indeterminate time, I began receiving impressions of what I felt to be the focus of my working. It began with the words “higher man” repeating themselves over and over in my mind. Finally I saw myself aged - but by wisdom rather than time. It was “my self ahead of myself.” This being pointed out the errors of some of my thoughts and ideas. By his ancient [yet contemporary] wisdom he emphasized the concept of self-deception, the games and politics of lower man, and the quest to attain and maintain the level of higher man.

As I listened to him - on his level - I understood that Xeper is never a relaxed will, but is rather a determination to be. Even activity in the mundane world must be the result of conscious will and creative purpose. The only “truth” is that of being! All else is games, religion, and politics; these are no part of higher man or being. Those who will to participate in the lower world are conscious of that which they do and are ; but those who sink into it are imprisoned, and their being is abandoned for aimlessness. Do not participate in un-being, and quickly eliminate those who do from those who seek to and become and be what they are become.

Xem is not the word for ancient Egypt, but rather the state of higher man - the realm of higher beings. It later became the word for Egypt (Khem) denoting a place, but this occurred during the decay of Egypt. The temples and shrines of Egypt/Khem were but replicas of working facilities for Xem - the state of beings. There is no true Egyptian architecture for its own sake. What there is possesses no significance or purpose.

We are not to view the annihilation as the death of an old world, but rather as Xem being re-born out of itself, with the Temple of Set as the vehicle. XemSet shall be the beginning of the restoration of facilities for Xem, and not a reproduction of a style of architecture called “ancient Egyptian”. The attitude of all who are there - residing or visiting - is to be in keeping with the principle governing Xem or higher man - that being Xeper.
Appendix 50: The Book of Opening the Way: Key 1

- by Ronald K. Barrett V°

This which is to be revealed of Xem will require an effort of will to understand. It will be necessary to utilize wisdom and a higher sense for comprehension.

This is written for the minds and hearts of Black Magicians and none other, for only they possess the intuition and insight required. There shall be ancient and occult language used with new meanings, and a new language used with ancient and occult meanings. It is each magician’s task to comprehend truth (maat) and to become it.

To consider undertaking the changes and creation that are necessary within the being to Xeper and to create Xem, it is most important to seriously consider all the implications. Xem shall require a great amount of zealousness, of magical work, of self-discipline, of self-inspection, and no compromise.

It is up to each aspirant to determine his own willingness and readiness to meet the challenge of entering Xem. Once begun, there is no going back, for it is a new dimension of being that is initiated. If turning back once begun, the aspirant will lose all that has been gained; and worse yet, that which was gained will become as a malignancy for which there is no cure.

It must be further understood that with this new dimension of being which is ever evolving, the work shall not be accomplished by employing human standards, which are but games, petty religion, and politics. Neither is the work to be construed in an organizational concept like any other on Earth. Rather it is the constant construction of a metaphysical/magical/philosophical state of being and state of beings - with the principles of Xeper and maať as the cornerstones.

Withal the will cannot and must not relax. Those who cannot or will not understand these things should wait until they recognize Xem. But to wait too long might cause the will to grow weak, and they might be imprisoned in lower states of rest and preservation.

Those who decide to work and accept that which comes with the work will Xeper and actualize Xem. To hesitate, to rationalize in human terms, to feel negativeness or fear or lack of confidence may negate Xeper.

The aspirant must be conscious of that which he is and is not, which he knows and knows not, which he does and does not, which he wills and wills not, which is maať and is not maať. The aspirant can be conscious of all this, but he must work for it.

The Elect who shall work toward Xem must also know that alone the work cannot be completed. The Elect must realize that the work shall require assistance from Set and the other Ancient Ones, for Xem is many-sided. In order to work with them, the Elect must be constantly aware of themselves and consciously aware of Set - as well as the Old Ones with whom they shall work. Xem shall not otherwise be accomplished.

To Become and to maintain the new level of being while aspiring even higher is an enormous task. To incorporate human weaknesses, imperfections, emotional insecurities, and other personal flaws into the Xeper process will result in those impurities being later magnified, intensified, and manifested in Xem. This would ensure disaster for the magician, extreme danger to the Elect in Xem, and the possible effacing and ending of the Majesty of Set.

It becomes the task of the aspirant to Xem to not hesitate nor relax in the first steps of the new initiation. The Elect must will to work, to turn their magic in on their selves for the purpose of creating and changing into higher beings. Since there are few points of reference other than ourselves, Set, and the neteru, it will be vital to eliminate fixed opinions, animosities, psychological or emotional crutches, and fear of the unknown.

When the aspirant has decided to Xeper toward Xem and has prepared the self with an attitude of initiation, he is ready to stand before Maat and to weigh his heart against her truth. This is not unlike standing before a “magic mirror” that reflects the true being. This must be done as initiation begins. As a result of the working, the state of being will manifest itself in nobility or imperfection. The being will be seen as it is, for that is its truth and its position regarding Xem and Xeper. This is an important aspect of the first Key, and it will be used time and again with the other Keys which follow.

These Keys will not teach; neither can Xem be taught. Xem must first be recognized, then realized, and finally actualized by each aspiring magician. Not all shall understand and not because they cannot, but because they choose not. Understanding accompanies the desire to work toward Xem, to Xeper. Maat is apparent to those who willingly stand before her, for her concern is with the heart and its balance. Each aspirant must will his work of Xeper. Those who do not Xeper will be as blind to Xem as they are to Maat.

To initiate an understanding of Xem and Xem’s implications, it is vital to learn with the intelligence of the heart, which shall in turn teach the intellect a new language. It is a language of higher being, of philosophy and magic. Its forms are the symbols of essential thought and the art of the inner eye.

To begin learning with the intelligence of the heart, it is necessary to change the mental outlook and the normal way of thinking. Not all knowledge pertains to the first three dimensions or the mundane world, and neither can the language of higher being be precisely translated into merely mundane concepts.

Before the learning process begins, there must be a starting point. There can be no answer to anything unless first there is a question. The question, to inspire a valuable answer, must come from the heart and not from the intellect. It should also be known that the knowledge gained and the benefit thereof will be limited to the intensity towards which it was aspired. Therefore the significance of the question must be contemplated with wisdom, which also is of the heart.

The question must be a quest for knowledge and a question in which the entire will is concentrated and the self is conscious. Only an answer can make a question possible; therefore every question contains its own answer.

Thus it was that Xem came to be pronounced; thus it is that Xem shall be known.

Not unlike the Diabolicon, many of the secrets of Xem are cloaked in myths - but of ancient Egypt (Khem) rather than of the Hebrews. And so it is to Khem that some of Xem’s initiates shall frequently turn. Their intention will be to strip away the veil which hides the mysteries beyond. This veil is extremely complex and confusing, and that fact only strengthens the importance of learning the language of Xem, that language which can only be learned with the intelligence of the heart and which must be preceded by question.

The frequent concentration on Khem by Xem’s scavengers does not imply an attempt by them to rebuild Khem. Xem is a continuance and not a reversion to anything that has gone before. Instead the concentration there is for the taking apart of Khem, stone by stone and myth by myth, to finally reveal the secrets of Khem’s origin - Xem. This shall also be done so that Xem might continue where it left off. Uniting the magical past and future within Xem shall be part of Xeper.

To embark upon this quest as Egyptologists have done will afford only mundane/historical data and information. While that information is useful, it is not the essence of the quest. Knowledge and understanding are the purpose of this particular quest.
The quest for the secret knowledge can only be made by magicians through magical work and philosophers through the higher senses or wisdom. So it is that the quest will go beyond Egyptology and the popular sciences (which are largely superficial) into the very essence of these: Xem and metaphysics.

The quest for each Initiate must be twofold, and will resemble assembling a great metaphysical/multi-dimensional puzzle:

- First, the usable pieces must be found from a universe of sources and then placed together. The network of the pieces is just as important as the whole. To complicate this even more, Xem is only as it becomes. What Xem will be is obscured to the individual Initiate, limited by his understanding, effort, level of being, and of course time and space.

- This brings up the second aspect of the quest, which should be quite obvious. The Elect must raise their own states of being to new levels constantly, and just as constantly maintain the highest level of being attained. Thus there is an internal and external question occurring simultaneously, each making the other possible - each raising the other.

It is vital to note that the process is not automatic just because one is a Setian. The process will only occur for those Elect who work. Xem and the levels of being are ever unknown until attained.

It should not be thought that the quests are limited to ancient Egypt, for there are keys all around and throughout the times of mankind. But more important than where the keys are found is the knowledge of how to use them once they have been found.

For those who would know, let their eyes and ears turn inward to seek their question. Let them learn the language of being so that this same being might recognize Xem through maat. The only truth is that of being, but to evolve that being one must know his own self. One cannot be otherwise ordered in and of oneself. One cannot chart the way through Xeper if he does not know where he is at present - which changes constantly.

Those who shall elect to undertake this monumental work to realize and actualize Xem, and who shall recognize the self, and who are determined to become and be what they are become, shall also be ready to take the step that separates but does not divide. And that step is initiation into Xem.
Appendix 51: The Book of Opening the Way: Key 2

- by Ronald K. Barrett V°
XIV/1979

Xem is not an organization that one might consider joining, and yet it has had and will have an order and orders. Just what these are depends on what the Initiates create with their wills. Certainly these cannot be perceived from a three-dimensional perspective, nor can/should Xem be created by any other than those who are initiated into Xem’s mysteries and secrets. Xem is an abstraction which the Elect shall attempt to manifest and then transform. There are internal or hidden keys and external or mundane keys, esoteric and exoteric clues which must be used, but before these keys can be used to unlock the secrets, one must take a great step in personal evolution. This step is conscious and willed, and is called initiation. This initiation is an ordeal of change.

The initiation was shown in the original Xem Working as the hall of judgment, wherein the heart of the aspirant was weighed against Maat’s feather. Failure of the heart to be in balance with truth resulted in the aspirant being handed back to Osiris. Aspiration or good intentions are insufficient to Xeper. Xeper is never a relaxed will, and only Xeper can transform being. Xem gives direction to Xeper, and initiation into Xem ensures balance.

The fate of my Gifted race rests in balance...
- The Book of Coming Forth by Night

Thus the judgment/initiation vision. Each aspirant must pass through to Xem, and being called Setian is no guarantee of passage. One must be Setian.

Set is the leader only of higher man.
- Xem Working

This statement is strongly supported in the Book of Coming Forth by Night. The idea of judgment should not be confused with Right-Hand Path systems or philosophy that speak of moralism and altruism, etc., for these have nothing to do with maat.

Initiation is the pylon gate to Xem which opens or blocks the way to that which is beyond. It is a step of Xeper, and one that can only be approached with deliberation. To some it may seem unimportant, ludicrous, or even ominous; but it is the only entrance to Xem.

“Higher man must conquer fear” is the first challenge of the Xem Working, and likewise for one considering initiation. One may feel arrogantly secure and brave in the face of the familiar, but confronting one’s self can be a merciless ordea. And having seen the self (with its illusions of what it perceives to be) against Maat’s feather (that which truly is) can be very sobering to say the least.

Here it is that the ordeal of initiation causes change. The aspirant is confronted with the challenge of constructive transformation or regression, which can only be a gesture of regression; for one cannot unlearn nor forget what was revealed of the self during the ordeal. The Black Flame is acutely out of place in the Osirian realm, and therefore the one who tries to regress has only two alternatives: (1) extinguish the Black Flame or (2) kindle that Flame and conquer the will.183

It could be said that, among other things, initiation is a shield against impurities being further incorporated into Xeper and becoming part of the magical framework of Xem. In this respect it serves the individual and the Majesty of Set.

There is no method of initiation prescribed for Setians into Xem, for true initiation must be provoked and occur within the individual aspirant consciously and willfully. The Order of Anubis will provide initiation facilities and assistance at XemSet for those wishing to go through a planned ordeal, but those who prefer to go it alone can create their own ordeal using this Key as a guide to what must transpire.

Those approaching Xem through their own evolution will recognize the signals that will call them to initiation. Only those who have conquered fear should undertake the ordeal, as stated before.

The call to initiation is impossible to not recognize, for it comes as a longing, an inner need demanding to be fulfilled. It shall seem as a need for inner action, and there will be an unceasing impulse to force an esoteric issue. The aspirant will feel an obsession to know truth and to be. This will be unignorable.

During the initiation, which may take one evening or one year, the being calls upon its self to reveal itself to its self. This shall require an awakened state from which one may see the truth of self balanced against maat, and this must be willed. One’s inner vision is carried well beyond normal limitations, and the aspirant may be forced to see a terrifying yet awesome glimpse of man, Xem, the neteru, the work ahead, as well as the fate for failure - and his own relation to each of these. It is again a journey into the very essence of Maat and the self with regard to her. The being will definitely feel itself in the presence of the Old Ones.

The gates of Xem are opened to those who would see, and shall not be closed again. Initiation is the directing of one’s own Powers of Darkness inward to open the gates of self. Here the aspirant may find the true source of and answer to his question.

Through initiation the aspirant can be born into a new dimension of being. It is being that was not. Here awakens a conscious intelligence that recognizes its own maat and freedom. The aspirant should also have a glimpse into the source of the magical current which is passing through mankind, as well as the self ahead of itself - the path of Xeper extending toward what can be.

An important part of initiation is the call to the neter with which the successful Initiate will work; this may or may not be the result of telesmatic construction. The importance is in the function of the neter and not in the name. The neter will be recognized by its nature. If the aspirant has already established or recognized a strong affinity toward a particular neter, the reason or working relationship could quite possibly unfold. More on this shall be discussed in a Key concerning the neteru and their significance to the initiates and to Xem.

The initiation into Xem is the beginning of the actual quest for the unknown and nameless one. The work is the preparation for and concludes only with the Great Work - which in itself is but a new beginning, having fulfilled the challenge set forth in the Diabolicon’s “Statement of Leviathan”. For this reason it would not be inappropriate to call the initiates of Xem “AlXemists”. Initiation is the preparation for the work toward finding the Philosopher’s Stone - Xem.

Initiation then is the giant step toward true understanding of the mysteries and secrets of Xem. Xem’s foundation is in the abstract. To the uninitiated, Xem will always be veiled in mystery and will seem to them very much like the Second Foundation did to outsiders in Asimov’s Foundation trilogy. And they won’t be entirely wrong.

As was true of the orders and temples of ancient Egypt and Greece, there must be two vital aspects of Xem: the known and the secret, between which is the bridge of initiation. The process or system leading to that bridge is already established, and shall be the subject of an entire Key to follow.

The Daemons are, the Daemons were, and the Daemons shall be again. They came, and we are here; they sleep, and we watch for them. They shall sleep, and we shall die, but we shall return through them. We are their dreams, and they shall awaken. Hail to the ancient dreams.

- Michael A. Aquino, “The Ceremony of the Nine Angles” in Anton Szandor LaVey, The Satanic Rituals
The Æon of Set has become a magical complex far beyond what was originally envisioned in the year X. The components of this complex are distinct in their functions, and are intricately interwoven. The components are the institutional temple, the Temple of Set, the Priesthood of Set, the initiatory degrees, the Executive Director, the Council of Nine, the High Priesthood, Majestic Man or King/Pharaoh, and Xem.

The institutional temple is the manifestation of the Temple of Set in the temporal or mundane world. It is the administrative/legal/corporate vehicle in which the Elect may move as a body of Setians among mankind. It is the institutional temple that a potential Setian “joins” initially to pursue personal magical aspirations. The institutional temple is vital to the work of the Elect, for it provides the protocol, the by-laws, the treasury, etc., without which the Elect would be constantly struggling with mundane “ways and means”, thereby forfeiting valuable time and effort that should be spent in Setamorphosis (both organizationally and individually).

The Executive Director is an extremely important figure in the institutional temple, because he ensures that it operates efficiently and smoothly. Without the Executive Director, the High Priest of Set and/or the Council of Nine would become bogged down with administrivia of a non-magical nature, and the institutional temple would displace the true Temple of Set. It is not difficult to understand why the scribes in old Khem had such a prominent position in both the temples and the royal house.

The Temple of Set is the magical organization which is perceived by the temporal world as the institutional temple. It is the reality behind the appearance. It is the true house of Set. It is also true that each of the Elect is in himself a Temple of Set, since each embodies the Black Flame. It could be said that the collective Temple of Set is macrocosmic, and that the individual Setian is the microcosmic Temple of Set. Just as a single cell in a physical body carries the genetic code to the entire body, so it is with the Temple of Set and Its Initiates. The whole is the sum of its parts, and its parts reflect the whole. This in no way is intended to imply the absorption of individual being or the surrender of unique identity or of free will. Rather this is indicative of some common denominators among only the Elect which include individual being and will, as well as the essence of Set. This is also indicative of the absolute uniqueness of the Temple of Set.

Within the institutional temple the High Priest of Set is the corporate president, and it is he who determines the policy that the Executive Director will carry out; but the High Priest is more precisely the functional head of the Temple of Set in its metaphysical reality. It is the task of the High Priest of Set to perceive and administer the will of Set within the Temple of Set. This is so that the Elect can move with the magical current of the Æon as it winds its way through the future.

The Council of Nine is the “heart” of the Temple of Set, which advises the High Priest by Its “sense of Set” or maat. The Nine could be compared to the higher emotional center, because the Council advises by higher senses, feelings, and intuitions. These feelings are not to be confused with the petty and unbalanced emotions of our lower human cousins, for such advice would then be unreliable at best, and the Elect would fall to the depths of human games and politics. The Council of Nine, then, is the “reactive” principle to the “active” principle of the High Priest of Set; and the two create a principle of balance.

The Priesthood of Set consists of all III° Initiates, and is the “hypostyle” or inner Temple of Set. Only Initiates of the Priesthood are actual members of the corporation. The lay members are the “peristyle” or outer Temple of Set, and are I° and II°. 184

Xem is the naos/inner sanctum or “holy of holies” of the Temple of Set, but just what these mean is the subject for further discussion - as is “Majestic Man”. 185

The entire magical complex is separated into two basic aspects, which, while they are separate, are not divided. The two aspects have been referred to as the “Two Lands”. The Two Lands are symbols of our dual planes of being: visible/invisible, light/darkness, manifest/abstract, Ra/Set. HarWer is intentionally not mentioned as was HarWer not included in the original Xem Working.

The placing of HarWer within our Setian philosophy has been guesswork at best. HarWer has been regarded by some Setians as our own “Devil”. HarWer has been theorized into physics by other Setians, and by still other Setians HarWer is seen as the natural order of the Universe. However all of these ideas have not really appealed to the Elect’s sense of Set because they were not entirely true.

To make a rather profound answer on this subject of HarWer, there are two questions that need to be asked:

(1) “Who/what are we?”

In “Geneset” Magus Michael A. Aquino points out that man is a creature within the natural order, but that he need not be subject to all of natural law. Man’s intelligence has made him “completely inconsistent with every other life-form on this planet” and “with the known laws of evolution” and “with natural law” itself. Man can “think creatively, spontaneously, abstractly, and æsthetically”. He can “conceive, design, and construct non-natural concepts, arguments, processes, and objects”. And he can “distinguish between the natural and the nonnatural, something that would be a logical impossibility if the human brain were itself entirely natural”.

The Diabolicon in each dæmonic Statement discusses this very curious creature - man - and his past/present/future reason for being. It seems that man has both natural and unnatural aspects, and that while he belongs entirely to neither aspect, he is not entirely free of either aspect. Instead man stands with a foot in each of the Two Lands (which are opposites). “So, if humans are freakish things which have developed independently of natural law, why?” 186 What about his curious and dual being makes him so important to the Prince of Darkness? The answers are within the questions.

184 RKB chose to refer to the Priesthood of Set as the “Order of Set”, which I have corrected in these reprints to avoid confusion with the Temple’s official Orders. His portrayal here of the Temple having “inner” and “outer” divisions was also purely personal, not reflected in the Temple’s original design or organizational documents. He took the analogy from Isha Schwaller de Lubicz’ Her-Bak, which represents the “peristyle” and “hypostyle” as parts of a single continuum for initiates. In the Temple of Set, however, the II° is regarded as the attainment of personal initiation, with the higher degrees indicative of individual being beyond the exclusively-personal. - M.A.

185 There is no “holy of holies” of the Temple of Set, unless one wishes to regard the divine consciousness of each initiated individual thus. The Temple of Set does not “contain” itself inwardly in any way; its entire force is rather external, into the initiation of each Setian. - M.A.

186 “GeneSet”.
(2) “Who/what is HarWer?”

According to the Book of Coming Forth by Night, HarWer is Set’s opposite self - a strange and fitful presence. HarWer was Set when Set was once part of the Cosmos “and could achieve identity only by becoming what the Cosmic Order was not”. HarWer therefore is not the Cosmic Order. HarWer cancelled the imbalance, “leaving a Void in which true Creation could take form as Set”. HarWer was created so that Set might define himself. Also note that HarWer must exist while Set exists.

Set has made reference to his “Gifted Race” and to his “Elect”, which automatically implies that there is another race. The word “race” means a distinct group of people -- not mankind. It seems that there are both Elect/Gifted and non-Elect/non-Gifted, but what determines the difference between them? Philosophy does not make a “race”. The difference lies in the word “gifted”. The Gift of Set is the Black Flame, that which burns in its own freedom. Only those who have been given the Black Flame are among the Elect or Gifted Race. The Elect have sprung out of mankind and are among mankind, yet are distinct from mankind as a whole.

While the Black Flame makes an initial difference in the Elect, it will do no more than that unless it is used, and it can only be used through will, which must be controlled/“conquered”. The Gift unused is literally useless; and without consciousness of its unique essence, it will cease to burn. To kindle its power without controlled will may cause it to consume the Black Magician who houses the Black Flame.

The Elect, by using the Flame’s transforming powers, have begun Setamorphosis/Xeper/willed evolution. As we walk the Two Lands, how “strange and fitful” we must appear in the realm of light with our Dark aspects and likewise in the realm of Darkness with our Light aspects - we who are both and neither.

But why are the Elect so important (like HarWer) to Set? A clue is locked within the ancient symbolism of Set and HarWer uniting the Two Lands. This symbolizes the Great Work in Ÿem, but it is not the result of the Great Work. It is the fusion of the Principles of light and darkness, matter and spirit, etc. The result is not a combination of the two, but rather a new thing altogether. This Great Work is as delicate as trying to fuse matter and anti-matter, and just as dangerous; hence the warning of Belial in the Diabolicon.

Those Elect who have begun this Great Work are Ÿem and are Coming Into Being (a new kind of being) as gods whose names are unknown. Having completed the Great Work, they will no longer be Ÿem, for they will have transformed into the new beings or gods whose names are no longer unknown. They will have beheld Leviathan.

The non-Elect human cannot participate in our work because of his fear of the unknown, lack of will, lack of conscious intelligence, and the non-existence of the Black Flame within him. He is symbolized by the neter Ra - principle of finite man who is born, makes his way across his finite life, has dominion over his finite realm, is majestic in his finite accomplishments, but eventually grows old and dies, cycle after cycle, æon after æon. He cannot escape the grip of natural law - the cyclic principle of birth/life/death. The Diabolicon states that the natural order will continue its cycling until it freezes in absolute stasis, which is the exact opposite of chaos. As non-Elect man has chosen to ignore the teachings of his own imagination, the reality of his own alienness, and the proof of his potential, so is he victim to the illusion of impossibility, and, what is worse, he has grown content with it.
And man was long satisfied to measure himself within this limit, for he was intoxicated by his ability to harness the forces of the Cosmos to his whim. But Astaroth said, Close not thy eyes having seen only this much, for, were thou to bring all the systems of God to thy use, still would thy comprehension be bounded by the limits of these laws and the acceptance of the divine order as the finality of thy race.

So I confronted man, saying, Throughout the Universe hath the once single Will of God been succeeded by the balance of perfect opposition, wherein the forces of the Angels of Heaven and those of the Daimons of Hell act to mutual frustration, serving in concert only to uphold the great barrier of Will between order and chaos. And man is the child of imbalance, who shall resolve the issue between Heaven and Hell, and who, unmatched by racial antithesis, shall transcend the rule of the order of God and establish the eternal freedom of the Satanic Will.

And I said, Not through thy physical and philosophical sciences art thou to achieve this thing, for thy mind and Will must be trained anew in empirical conception. Man must create his own order independent of all external imposition. And not until he masters this power may he aspire to the end of his Satanic evolution.187

For this Key, the important things to remember from the above statement are (a) man being the child of imbalance, (b) man shall resolve the issue between Heaven and Hell or the Two Lands, (c) man must create his own order (“...yet am ordered in and of my Self”) and man must master his own power.

What power?

I am Belial, who bring to thee the third great key of Hell, by whose power ye shall confound all the laws of Heaven and Earth. Before thee shall chaos fall, and thou shalt wield for thyself the great mysteries of the macrocosmos. I speak to thee of that which is called the Black Magic, for it is true spawn of that great Black Flame which first brought thy Will to life long ages ago.188

Only man can hope to perfect being, for man is the only being of both natural law and conscious intelligence - the Two Lands. But man needs help to accomplish the Great Work. Set cannot stop the direction of the natural order without assuming its place, else all would go back to chaos. Only man can resolve the issue, but not just any man: only those who are worthy to be Elect or to receive the Black Flame.

Long ago Set experimented (magically) with a natural creature that it might perhaps do what Set could not, and man came into being. This man was a composite of opposite aspects, but his natural or physical aspects were still subject to natural law. This new man was innocent and open-minded, and received teaching through his sense of Set. This strange new creature at first did not cower from its otherness and welcomed knowledge of its new-found self. Soon it was seen that knowledge alone was not enough for this creature of dual aspects and the work ahead that only he could perform, and so to the most advanced of mankind Set gave of his own essence, and within them the Black Flame ignited.

After a time and with the power that burned within, those men who had been Elect to receive this Black Flame founded temples which were (both in essence and in structure) consecrated to Set for teaching and protecting the mysteries of being and preparation for use of the Gift of Set. The temples were schools based on initiation, not houses of worship.

Out of the temple system, the Great Ones eventually evolved. The Great Ones had become beings higher than man, and they were awed and respected as gods. So great was 187 Statement of Astaroth, The Diabolicon.

188 Statement of Belial, The Diabolicon.
their understanding and their unique perception and their being, that they had actually become Principles of their knowledge. Each Principle, working in concert with the other Principles toward the Great Work was the “function” of the Principle. Principle + function = neter (a working Form of a purpose). As the Great Ones did function according to the Principle, they took their names accordingly; hence the names of the neteru did Come Into Being. Remember that function occurs within the collective effort toward the collective evolution; work is the individual effort toward individual evolution.

That they might pass on knowledge of their Principles and functions, the Great Ones established their own priesthods. Within these they taught according to the understanding of their initiates, for they were not easily comprehended. Their beings evolved to such extent that their knowledge had to be passed down through the highest initiates of their priesthods to the lowest. And all of the priesthods remained true as aspects of the Priesthood of Set, which was the body of Elect dedicated to the Setian purpose. They were all within the Temple of Set, complementing the Great Order as Principles functioning in multiple stages of evolving being.

After more time the Temple had formed a civilization based on Maat, Xeper, and - under the guidance of Set through the Great Ones - Xem. Set had through his own essence, will, and guidance helped to bring these Great Ones into being. The greatest of them he chose through whom he would define his self. This great one would manifest the Principle of Set in the realm of natural order (Light). He would personify the Majesty of Set, and he would be a living symbol of the highest form of Xeper(a) in the Two Lands. He would be the symbol of the Elect working the Great Work with Set. He was Great Har or Hor; HarWer - the Principle of Majestic Man. With the Elect in Xem, symbolized by HarWer, Set might fuse the Two Lands and accomplish the Great Work.

The traditional rule of HarWer upon the Earth (in Khem) was through pharaoh, and his title was the Living Horus. He wore the Crown of the Two Lands, which to the uninitiated into the Priesthood of Set meant Upper and Lower Khem. HarWer/Pharaoh’s function was to balance the affairs of Light and Darkness in Xem. In time this great magical function became no more than a political office occupied by a mortal who wore, held, and sat upon sacred symbols that had lost true meaning.

...Because in those ancient days all did not go well. Man and priesthood became political and corrupt when left on their own to see how well they would do with what they had learned. Seeing that man had a good deal more to learn before he would be mature enough to commit himself entirely to the Great Work, Xem and the true Temple of Set made preparations and vanished into the disguise of the Amon Cult. (Appropriately, Amon means “hidden” - compare to the hieroglyphic Xem.) This gave the Priesthood of Set time to wrap their secrets in myth and occult (which also means “hidden”) puzzles, which could then pass fragmentarily and obscurely through time, until the time of the purification was past and the work could begin again.

Xem remains secret until established. The Order of Anpw will come about and provide the tools for the work ahead. The Dark and hidden aspects of Anubis are now important, and their reasons can be seen.

He who wears the Double Crown is needed also for the work that is to be done. Ra is man, and HarWer is Exalted/Majestic Man. He who wears the Crown of the Two Lands exists and is Michael Aquino. He must be supported, for there must be an order within the realm wherein the Elect are found.

Xem must not fade and be ended. Xem is the Philosopher’s Stone, for Xem will change and know its being. The old world fades behind Xem to exist no more. We are those who define and shape. Reason will be born and a new world recognized.
In the Year X ÆS, Michael A. Aquino was ceremonially crowned with the Double Crown and entrusted with the Crook and Flail. These are not symbols of the High Priesthood, but they are symbols of Majestic/Royal or exalted Man. He who bears them in Maat is HarWer manifest. The time has come full circle, and Michael Aquino is that awesome Principle Come Into Being.\textsuperscript{189}

“Yea, he wrought also in me a Work of Wonder beyond this, but in this matter I am sworn to hold my peace.”\textsuperscript{190}

\textsuperscript{189} While I appreciate both the complementary and complimentary intentions of RKB here, I would not characterize HarWer as a pharaonic personification or influence, nor myself as a modern version thereof. I would consider HarWer as a locus of the natural/objective universe’s awareness of itself, which is perhaps only possible by juxtaosing itself to the Principle (Set) and particulate manifestations of isolate consciousness which it is not (the Elect of Set). - M.A.

\textsuperscript{190} Aleister Crowley’s comment in \textit{One Star in Sight} concerning his attainment of the grade of Ipsissimus (10)=[1], echoed by me in my own 1979 letter to the Priesthood discussing my own Ipsissimus VI° initiation. - M.A.
At this point in our work, it is important to approach the new language that was first mentioned in Key #1. The learning of this new language will be more like remembering than gathering new data, as several of the Elect will already attest. To make this clear, go back to the first time you read the Book of Coming Forth by Night and recall the first impression it made. Was it not almost a feeling of remembering? The same should be true of this language of which I write.

In a similar vein how many times have we reread the Book of Coming Forth by Night and in doing so found a new twist to something we thought so familiar. This is because that book contains a good deal more between its covers than what has yet been understood - some of which I shall try to point out as I continue to define Xem. Another text that has a wealth of important things to understand is the Diabolicon, even though the symbolisms are “cloaked”.

Symbolism is the key, and one must learn to think in symbolism (of which both texts are greatly composed). Symbolism is a visible form of abstract (magical and philosophical) principles, qualities, and functions, awakening within us an understanding (consciousness) of being and of an already-possessed knowledge contained in our true being. Symbolic thought-form can actually provide a synthesis to our dual mental processes, and thereby both excite and express Xeper.

Symbolism is not exactly a new language to the Elect to be sure, for it can be found in use since the year I A.S. We had to use it in various forms to work even the simplest magic. But until the pure form of the Pentagram of Set was discussed in the Book of Coming Forth by Night, the symbols used were not really directly approached, and were therefore rather loosely interpreted to any meaning we wished to attach to them. Only one symbol other than the Baphomet was given truly serious thought, and that was the trapezoid, due to LaVey’s fascination with it. And then we all found out that even the Baphomet was a corruption of a pure symbol. This was an important matter to the Prince of Darkness, because he wanted the Pentagram restored to its original and pure form. I’m sure that this was not because of Set’s just disliking the design of the Baphomet. Instead I would suspect that in an impure form, the Pentagram cannot be understood as the truth that it symbolizes.

If symbols are representations of truths, then it becomes the responsibility of the Elect to understand them. Only by understanding them can they serve us as a language, so that we can accurately communicate among ourselves as we continue to evolve. Even more important though is the process that occurs within us as individuals as we work toward and discover their hidden meanings.

How does one unveil the truth of a symbol? I have said that one must be taught symbolic meanings by one’s own heart, which means that we already possess the knowledge of the symbolic. But this knowledge is locked deep within, and so our task is to bring what is known to consciousness. And this is why attaining understanding seems so much like remembering.191

191 Compare the Platonic concept of anamnesis. - M.A.
When we have found one of our questions, this same question will be converted into symbolism deep within our minds. When we follow the question within, the symbolism will expand and bring before the mind’s eye (inner eye/third eye) a vast complex of abstract, magical, intuitive states of being with qualities, associations, and relationships which, while experienced, can never be truly explained. The degree of understanding will be determined by the heart, not by the intellect. Therefore one must learn to allow the symbolic to enter the consciousness and unite the inner being with it, unhampered by the mundane intellect. When this understanding has occurred, only then can the intellect identify with it, even though it will ever be at odds to explain it.

On the other hand every Setian who “experiences” the Pentagram needs no further explanation than just seeing the symbol, because its truth has become a part of him. To anyone who has sensed this truth, the pentagram will remain merely a five-pointed upside-down star, regardless of explanations offered.

With all of this in mind, I shall discuss the Stele of Xem. To do so I shall have to employ my intellect (which shall be at odds to explain it). It will be up to you to make the symbolisms “live”, for this too is a vital part of initiation.

The Stele of Xem is both the cover and preface of the Book of Opening the Way, and is composed entirely of symbolism. No symbol has been used in the Stele for the sake of art; rather art has been employed for the sake of symbolism. Not only is each individual symbol in itself essential to understanding the whole symbolism, but the network or relationship of each symbol with the others is equally important.

The Stele manifests in symbolism the formula Xeper ir Xem. The upper portion of the Stele is framed by plumes of maat, indicating that what is known therein must be perceived-in-truth: understood. One can only understand that which has become a part of his own reality. “The only truth is that of being.”

The bases of the two plumes are touching the Set-headed uas scepters which face each other. A scepter is a symbol of authority, and in Khem a stick or staff was a medu or symbol of a word. Closer to the intended meaning would be “authority of the word”. Since the uas scepter specifically has a Set-head mounted on one end and the bifurcated tail on the other end, one can easily interpret this as “authority of the word of Set”. The sap which once flowed through the staff is replaced with the will of Set which flows into the Two Lands. Accordingly one who carries the uas also holds its meaning.

On the Stele there are two uas scepters which face each other and frame several lines of hieroglyphs. The scepter on the left issues forth the word Xem while the scepter on the right limits the same. The reason for this is as simplistic as it is obvious. Xem is a goal with not an end, but rather a new beginning as its purpose. Xem has been compared to the Philosopher’s Stone, and not without good reason. An alchemist labors diligently to create his stone, but not for possession of the stone itself - rather for its transformational properties. The same holds true for the Initiate in his quest for Xem, as will be seen later in this Key.

Between the two scepters is the neter Anubis, represented as a black jackal. In this form the neter is pure principle and entirely abstract. No motion is suggested, for the neter is not yet manifested. Around the neter are hieroglyphic transliterations of the IAM Manuscript which were first written down in English in the year I A.S., and veiled from understanding until the Utterance of Xem. The secrets of the IAM remained locked in the neter until the time of Anubis’ manifestation of recognition as Opener of the Way.

The transliteration of the IAM from English into hieroglyphic spelling as well as the ancient tongue became a very important task for me almost immediately following the South Solstice XIII. Without the skill and knowledge of Priestess Alexandra Sarris, it might never have been completed. To her we owe many thanks for her many hours and days of dedication on that project - even though she describes it as a labor of love.

The result of that project (other than the obvious finished product) is that the very words that are used in the IAM have come alive and have taken a meaning that English simply could not provide. I am convinced that the project of transliteration was absolutely vital to understanding the manuscript. And now, because of that work, the symbolism can be translated back into English with a purer and more comprehensive meaning. Ironically, the English words do not change, for the English already used is as precise as the language will permit. Both renderings of the IAM are included in the Onyx Tablet.

In looking at the top portion of the Stele of Xem, please take note of the fact that every entity is shown in a walking posture, indicating a definite motion of the Principles of the entity. It would be a mistake to regard this motion as necessarily involving time and space.
It would not be a mistake to regard this motion as the abstract process of Setamorphosis.

The Stele is read from left to right, hence Set is the first entity with whom we must concern ourselves. An Initiate embarking upon the path to Xem must receive the Gift of Set. This Gift is only given to those who have been considered by Set as his own Elect, and then only after they have ventured into the Darkness via their own will and established a personal relationship with the Prince of Darkness. Because of the nature of this unique Gift, an initial transformation occurs within the new Priest(ess) of Set, and the Initiate must adjust to a new quality/condition which cannot be quit.

That quality/condition is absolute freedom. But the figure of Set is upon a dark base which only elevates him slightly above the next figure, which is the Initiate. This shows Set’s own accessibility as a friend and his close relationship with the Elect. “Lo, I pass near to thee, I pass near to thee.”

Set’s gaze is upon the spine and skull of the Initiate, for these are the centers of the fiery essence and the temple of being. His arms are upraised as he gives of his own essence. His garb is dark for obvious reasons.

The Initiate is the next figure, and he walks upon a thick black line, which is the Darkness or the abstraction of his own being. He wears a light garment, which shows the realm in which his semblance or manifestation must exist, but around his waist is a dark band which is his umbilical, for he is also a child of Darkness. A dark nemes covers his upper vertebrae and his skull, which is divided at the crown by a headband, indicating phi quality. Upon his pineal gland is the hooded Serpent One, the force of essential fire, she “who twines the spine and rests her head upon the brow”. Her trailing body neatly separates the two halves of the brain.

A circular disk rests upon the heart of the Initiate, but the pentagram which would normally be in the center of the disk hovers freely above and before him, indicating his freedom and the conditions of his path. He has entered the inner temple, the Setian realm.
The pentagram before him “shines forth” in Its Principle of creation and change. The Initiate is reminded and charged not to succumb to rest or preservation. He must conquer all fear of the unknown and the ever-changing. Within the magic of the pentagram is the reality and the proportion to the gates ahead. The pentagram is his perspective of balance as he journeys deep within his self.

192 This suggests that the Priesthood of Set is either inherent within or expected of every recipient of the Gift of Set. I think it quite possible for the Gift to be unconsciously utilized [as among the more intelligent and creative of the profane] or both recognized and exercised by Initiates of the I°/II° without any necessity for the Priesthood as a consequence. This Priesthood-expectation by RKB, quite possibly because of his own intense drive towards and deep commitment to it, was to prove a major cause of controversy later in his High Priesthood. - M.A.
In his right hand the Initiate grasps the symbol for neter. A thorough discussion of the neteru and their Setian significance will be the subject of discussion later, but for now let’s say that the Initiate has a specific neter with whom he shall function in the cooperative effort. His right hand is his functional aspect, while his left hand is his working aspect; and the two (while related) are quite different to the individual Initiate. His work is his effort in his personal Setamorphosis and is unique to himself. The result of his work, however, may serve all of the Elect, and in that respect becomes functional. His work will usually reflect one or another aspect of his neter as well as his relationship with that neter, but his function will directly reveal the Principle of the neter.

The left hand of the Initiate is grasping the right hand of Anubis, who is the guide in this aspect. (It is not difficult to see how Anubis’ role as initiatory guide became bastardized into guide of the dead, when one considers the nature of this path.) So here we have the left hand of the Initiate which is his personal initiation, guided by the functional right hand of Anubis.

On the Stele we find Anubis shown in two ways: as a black jackal and anthropomorphically.

Anubis as Black Jackal

To appreciate the symbolism of Anubis as a black jackal, there are some Egyptological considerations to be made. First is that the canine that is commonly regarded as the Egyptian jackal as it is shown in the ancient art forms is not a true jackal. Canis lupister, the real jackal of Egypt, has a tufted short tail and yellowish gray fur. In fact they strongly resemble the American coyote, except for coloring which varies in both species a little. Jackals also look somewhat like an enlarged fox, and sometimes display near-feline characteristics. They are basically nonpredatory, as they prefer carrion (which is a clue to the Principle of Anubis). They are mostly nocturnal, timid, extremely agile and supple, and preferably nonsocial animals.

It seems that the black jackal is actually a composite canine image for the neter Anubis/Upuat. The image is shown with such features as the long pointed ears of a fox or a jackal, the tufted tail of a wolf or jackal, and the short black coat of the wild dog of Egypt.

The obvious question is why a composite image, rather than just selecting one canine (such as a wolf or a real jackal) to symbolize Anubis? It is because no one canine could symbolize the Principles of the neter. And this answer is important, because it topples any notion that the neteru were born out of the symbol or anything as crude as “animal worship”. The truth is that the symbol must fit the neter, not the reverse. So various characteristics of canine orders were used to define the various aspects of the black jackal, because the neter has multiple functions which come under basically two names: Anpw (Anubis) and Upuat. Often these two functions were shown as separate entities (which still confuses Egyptologists), but both names belong to the same neter and identify a particular functional aspect. To grasp the Principle one must first know that we are, in discussing the black jackal, simultaneously discussing alXemical processes.

Consider the purely “jackal” aspect when seeking the metaphysical reality of the symbol. A jackal is a carrion-eater which rips the body into pieces, buries the pieces, and leaves them alone until they rot. In eating the putrefied flesh, the jackal changes it into life-giving food, and this the jackal does by its special digestive process. “What would be poisonous for almost all other creatures in him becomes an element of life through a transformation of elements which are bringing out this decomposition."193 Hence the jackal function is the digestion/transformational process.

Another symbol of the jackal is the hieroglyphic sab, which means “judgment” or “the judge”. This is because in eating, it (the jackal) performs a precise, innate discrimination, separating out the elements capable of transformation and future evolution from the elements that are untransmutable within their present cycle”.194

The jackal instinctively knows the precise time that he must devour the carrion or it will become indigestible. This is symbolic of the initiatory phases of the Elect which offer either transformation or irreversible chaos, and of which I wrote on the first page of Key #1.

It is important to know that each of us has a microcosmic version of each of the neteru within us, making us each a pantheon, even though we individually may manifest specific single neteru. This shall be dealt with in more detail in a later Key, but it is important to bring it up now to help clarify the paragraph above. It is the jackal function which identifies the exact process and timing of the Principle of Xeper in the Æon.

To appreciate and use the magical functions of the black jackal (or any other neter), one must understand their functional aspects, for therein is revealed their use and part in the Great Work of Xem.

Anubis Anthropomorphic

The top section of the Stele shows Anubis as having the body of a man and the head of the black jackal. This symbolism defines the manifestation of the Principle of Anubis as was recognized by Set on XIII:11.11.

In Egyptian art we can find Anubis shown both as a black jackal and anthropomorphically, but this was not done by whim or accident or for æsthetics. One can, in studying the ancient art, easily see that few things were done for æsthetics, in fact it would at first glance appear that they deliberately tried to do things that are æsthetically wrong, but that is not the case either. In his book on sculpture, Frank Eliscu says this of design: “Standards of taste and ideals of beauty have changed continuously over the ages, but the tenets of good design remain firm and are the foundations of all art.” Then we can turn around and read of various Egyptologists reporting that the ancient Egyptians seemed at times almost in defiance of design principles and tenets in their architecture and other art forms. Yet who is left unmoved by their superb craftsmanship, and by an almost uncomfortable feeling of those ancient artists having struck some distant but familiar chord within?

As the chord chimed within, I personally began to understand that the anthropomorphic symbolism defines the neter being manifest in functional form through an agent (with Anubis that agent is myself). The neter actually defines itself through the agent.

What does Anubis have to do with Set? The neteru are aspects of the Ageless Intelligence, yet each neter is a Principle unto itself, enjoying co-consciousness, not unlike man with his several ‘I’s. Within each of us there is the true being with its various aspects or interpretations/definitions of itself as it considers itself, and as it relates to the environment around it. Soon, if these aspects become functional enough, they will actually acquire qualities, characteristics, and even aspects of themselves. It must be remembered 193 Isha Schwaller de Lubicz, Her-Bak “Chick Pea”.

194 Robert Lawlor in R.A. Schwaller de Lubicz, Symbol and the Symbolic.
however that these are aspects of the true being, not the being itself. The problem in man is that he has not consciously created these aspects, nor is he master, i.e. ordered in and of his self. Each “I” aspect has become more or less an entity unto itself, and often these aspects pull against each other instead of establishing a co-consciousness and working through and with a joint effort of will toward the creation of a self order.

Linking with a neter gives distinction to our own particular Setian essence, and manifesting this neter is in essence manifesting an aspect of Set or a Principle of the Ageless Intelligence. So as not to confuse this with possession, let me point out that this manifestation does not forfeit any part of our own will or being. We are merely bringing into our own realm the functional relationships of Set with his Elect. Our individual quests are to Xeper ir Xem.

The black jackal-headed man symbolizes the manifestation of the neter Anpu/Apuat (Upuauat). The working (left) hand of the entity holds aloft the uas scepter before a trapezoidal structure, and with the authority of the word the structure becomes a gate and the way is opened. The title of this aspect of the neter is “the Opener of the Way” or Apuat. This aspect is manifest through my V° work of opening the way to Xem. The functional hand of the entity holds the left hand of the Initiate and guides him through and along the way to Xem. This aspect of the neter is “the guide and escort” and is manifest through my function as High Priest of Set.

Once entered, the trapezoid becomes a hall through which all aspirants to Xem must pass. This is the hall of judgment, and within it stands Maat, neter of truth and justice. This particular Maat is the aspirant's individual maat or individual truth, and her function is to determine the balance or imbalance of the self who is being led through initiation. If this Maat’s feather is balanced by the heart of the aspirant, then the aspirant will recognize the macrocosmic Maat, for his own maat will reflect her. And then the Initiate may continue toward Xem; his own truth is understood. In Maat's right hand is the scales of justice, for justice is the activity of truth. In her left hand she holds the anX, which is offered to the Initiate who passes through. It is the essence of his being.

Beyond this hall is another gate, which opens to a new chamber. Beyond the gate is the scarabæus, indicating that only the Becoming of what is beyond will bring it into being. The Initiate who has reached this point has Come Into Being as a true god. The Initiate is now of the Magistry as well as of the Priesthood of Set, and here begins his Great Work. This chamber is the naos, the “holy of Holies”, the secret shrine of the gods (old and new). This is the realm of Xem.

Above the Scarabæus (or Xepera) is a cartouche, which is in the place of the dung-ball. A cartouche is the shen symbol upon which is written the hieroglyphic spelling of a name - in this case it is the name of the god who has Come Into Being. Let me very modestly define a shen as a “mirror reflecting infinity”. With that in mind I shall further say that this particular shen is inscribed with “neter Xem whose name is unknown”. This cartouche then states that this god who has Come Into Being does not yet know his true name; he is in his twilight.

The next figure is atop a rather oddlooking base which symbolizes the three main parts of the Temple of Set. Temple of Set here means both the initiatory cooperation and the individual Initiate who is in himself a Temple of Set. The left side of the base shows a pylon (bexnt), and this is the mundane aspect of the Temple. This is the only part of the Temple that is seen from without, and it serves to allow or to block entry. This was the first gate through which the Initiate had passed.

The right foot of the figure (who is shown moving toward the Initiate) is supported by columns which compose the peristyle or outer temple. This is the lay membership; those from whom the Elect will be found, those who prepare for the second gate.

The left foot of the figure is supported by a black trapezoidal structure, which is the hypostyle or inner temple. It is the realm of Darkness, the Priesthood of Set. The second gate is the entrance to the hypostyle, and the work toward Xem occurs within.

The figure is the god Xem. He is the true being who has reached full potential. He has accomplished the Great Work, and has Become a new kind of being. He is the one who has evolved from man the animal to magician to royal man to divine man. He is shown faceless, for none may know his name - not even himself until he has Become his name. The symbolism of the beard on his chin indicates his godhood. In his right hand he grasps a rolled and sealed papyrus upon which is written his name and its hidden meaning. He extends the papyrus toward the approaching Initiate, for he is the Initiate ahead of his self - awaiting completion of the Great Work. His walking motion toward the Initiate is as a reflection of the Initiate's transformation. He is the IAM.

Upon the figure’s head is a crown, which is the symbol of the naos, with its walls being two feathers of maat; for it is the Great Work within which shall crown him upon his Coming Into Being. Upon completing the Great AlXemical Work, the figure will hand the Initiate the papyrus. Having read it, the Initiate and Xem will be one, and he shall know his name.

The dark column behind Xem blocks vision to that which is beyond, for what is beyond shall only be known by those who have Become Xem and found their names.

The left hand of Xem grasps the anX, for he holds the true essence of his being.

On several different occasions I have compared Xem to the Statement of Leviathan in the Diabolicon, and in doing so I was specifically referring to the transformation of the Black Flame into the glory of its perfection. It is interesting to note that one of the definitions of Xem (according to both Budge and de Lubicz) is “a very hot fire, burning intensely”, and it was compared to the Setian fire!

A power superior to man gave the primordial names to things in such a way that the names are necessarily right. The rightness of the names makes the nature of things visible. One can absolutely say that when the names are known, the things are equally well known. - Plato

The sages of Egypt appear to me to have shown a consummate knowledge or a marvelous instinct when in order to reveal their wisdom to us, they did not resort to letters to express words and statements representing sound and expressions but portrayed objects by hieroglyphs and in their mysteries symbolically assigned an emblem of its own to each of them. So each hieroglyph constituted a type of knowledge or wisdom and presented the thing visually as a synthesis without discursive conception or analysis. This synthetic idea was then reproduced in other signs that developed it, expressed it discursively, and enunciated the reasons why these things are made as they are when their beautiful arrangement arouses admiration. - Plotinus

There is no difference, as a matter of fact, between the texts called hieroglyphs and most of the precepts of the Pythagoreans.

There is nothing more characteristic of Pythagorean philosophy than the use of symbols, such as those employed in the celebration of the mysteries. It is a language that includes both silence and speech ... What is said is very clear and obvious to those who are used to this language; it is obscure and unintelligible only to the uninformed. The apparent meaning of these symbols is not the true one, but in it one must search for what they seem to conceal. - Plutarch
In the discussion of Xem thus far, the Word had been approached from mostly its direction as regards the individual Initiate. This was initially necessary [and will be again] so that the direction of the collective effort can be gained through the individual effort. Let us now begin to approach discussion of the collective effort, so that we might know what that effort is moving the Elect toward, what the “realm” of Xem is about, and what our mutual aspirations and efforts should be.

As has been stated in the first four Keys, the individual effort must lead the evolving magician into a state of higher being that is constantly evolving; there is no stopping point. As this occurs, one experiences many changes in and around the self. One also notes that reality is mostly perceptual, and that when the individual reality is combined with the perceptual realities of other Elect individuals, some rather complicated situations and circumstances begin to occur. This is purely the nature of the work, for there is no predestination in alXemy, and magical creation establishes the real.

While the magician experiences complications and perceptual changes in and around the self, the magician also begins to notice changes involving others. Once cannot really do anything about the changes that occur to others, but one can and must do something about those that involve oneself. Willed evolution involves not only one’s own Coming Into Being as Xem, but also involves and determines one’s relationship and role or function with the realm of Xem. It must be remembered that Xem is dual in concept, for the Word at once defines the individual being and the realm of beings, all of which are becoming cooperatively.

The Xem Working laid the blueprint for the Coming Into Being of Xem. It is not a blueprint or prophecy of what will be, but rather for what can be, and the Principles involved are essential to individual and collective concepts of Xem - one aiding the other. For this and any future discussion of Xem to be of any value, there must be a climate within the Temple of Set and among the Elect - both individually and collectively - which is responsive to the changes which will become evident as the Keys are added.

This brings up the essence of Key 5, which was revealed very early in the Xem Working, and which can be stated in a strangely simple statement: “Higher man must conquer fear.”

As Black Magicians we pride ourselves in being able to meet and cope with the forces of change. We realize the need of hauling in our anchors, of being flexible and unfixed, of refusing to become locked into the death-grips of stasis. All these things we recognize in principle, but the degree of which the Principle of change has become truth for us is determined by our willingness to work it when inevitable change presents itself.

The Temple of Set began on an axis of change, whether we measure from 1904 EV, I AS, or X ÆS. Every time the full implications of the changes were realized and/or discovered to be somewhat more than what was anticipated, a few magicians were lost along the way. Ironically the change that they could not or would not effect affected them. It will always be one way or the other. Magicians must either crest the magical current of the Æon and cause/will changes for and in their selves as the current crashes through what “is”, or they will be sucked under by the force of it and very likely suffer magical death.
by being bashed against the eroding rocks of false security and illusioned permanence.

The “way” itself is change - transformation. This is in reality/truth/maat what initiation is - initiating change. Change is the most significant cause of fear, because the process is frightening and difficult; and the result is unknown. One of the hieroglyphic translations of the Word Xem is in fact “unknown”. [Consider the faceless/name-unknown god on the Stele of Xem.] With this in mind, it is easy to see why the magical formula of the Æon can be disturbing or even terrifying to anyone except the most zealous and adventurous.

When we used to stand before the altar and open the gates, those were the gates to change which opened. On XIII:11:11 when the gates were opened, never to be closed again, it was constant change that was opened and which is ever beyond those gates and through which the way that Anubis leads or guides extends. Fear is the condition that blocks the way of change. Xeper means change through will, and Xem is the result of that change, but only when it is according to the will and when the resulting condition and being is higher or evolved - as opposed to just being different or mutated. The act of accomplishing this is called magic.

In the year X the Elect responded to the changes brought about through the will of the Prince of Darkness, and the Temple of Set came to be known as such. The Book of Coming Forth by Night is full of references to past, current, and future changes up to and including mankind as a whole. It can be seen that, as has already been pointed out, whether or not one chooses to recognize the ongoing changes has nothing to do with occurrence of those changes, and it is very likely one of the major factors considered in the statement: “I seek my Elect and none other, for mankind now hastens toward an annihilation which none but the Elect may hope to avoid.”

Funk & Wagnall’s defines “annihilation” as “utter extinction”. Consider then that this worrisome statement could well mean that mankind as we now know the species is going to change right out of existence - excepting the Elect, who know and understand the Principles at work, and use them to help bring about their own Coming Into Being as Xem. To possibly support this idea, let me jump ahead to the end of the Working: “We are not to view the annihilation as an old world dying - but rather as Xem being reborn out of itself with the Temple of Set as the vehicle.”

This statement from the Xem Working deserves more comment than what I am prepared to give in this Key, but please take note of the positive emphasis of the change rather than the negative. The Elect may hope to avoid the annihilation by taking inevitable change and, by force of will, cause the Principles to bring about the Great Work or alXemy.

Going back to the annihilation statement in the Book of Coming Forth by Night, note the exact quote and place emphasis on the word “now”. In this context it appears as though the arrival of the Æon of Set somehow heralds or initiates the hastening. The Utterance of Xeper in X impacted upon the world and began the process of Becoming, of evolution for the “Elect and none other”, of annihilation through change for mankind. The Utterance of Xem gives direction to the Elect for the process by defining what we are Elect to Become. [“but I would teach them ...”]

Long ago another Word was given through Magus Crowley which was to be the essential tool needed for the Work ahead. That tool would have to be given early enough that a degree of expertise could be acquired in the use of it. That Word of course is “Will”. Now that we know the basics of the properties and potentials of this force, Set states that [as regards his Elect] he must “strengthen their Will against the coming peril...”.

Between the first and third Words, however, a bridge had to be made to (a) determine those bold and zealous enough to perform the work ahead, (b) close the gap between the early initiates and the oncoming Temple of Set, and (c) refine the understanding of magic and will prior to using them in the work upon and before us. For this Anton LaVey took upon himself the task of a Magus, and Uttered the Word “Indulgence”.

All of the Words are separate and unique, and have made/are making their impact upon the world, yet any one without the other three is rendered incapable of reaching full potential. The current magical formula combines the last two Words and utilizes all four. There is no riddle in having two Words [or four] active in a single æon, for they outline the Setian initiatory path. Of the formula Xeper ir Xem, however, let me repeat that Xeper is initiating, causing change, Becoming for its own sake. Xem then gives direction to the changes that are willed, and that is why Xem is always higher, more specific, and causes balance between being and potential being. Xem is that which is recognized, realized, and understood by the Elect being perceiving higher being. Xem is the self ahead of itself.

To make that “one step beyond” at any given point or time, the Elect must be without fear, for it is very likely our deadliest enemy. Fear can negate perception of the next step or perhaps even worse, fear can distort perception and cause unhealthy mutation. Fear also destroys the necessary force of will necessary to take that next step, and causes a desire to cling to the known, the familiar, and the illusion of stability. Therefore let the Elect who resolve to become of the gods also resolve to conquer fear that they might Xeper ir Xem.
A lot of tortured verbiage has been written about Xem over the years. To me it always was a very simple, clear, and brilliant concept: the creation of an artificial “focus” for Xeper by each individual, much after the fashion of Nietzsche’s “horizon-building”, in order to give personal Xeper some cohesion, some direction.

Consider Xeper as a sort of light-bulb, with the individual as the bulb and Xeper as the emitted light. The individual is thus “expanding/evolving = Becoming” in a total sense - well-rounded, one might say! Its drawback is that it is non-focused, that it is diffuse. It is accordingly difficult for the individual to comprehend the development of his state of being, because too much is happening too subtly. The result can be bewilderment, frustration: the feeling that something wonderful is going on with oneself but not being able to encapsulate or define the entire experience. Xeper is thus “plagued by the vague”!

Xem as originally Uttered by Magus Ronald K. Barrett acted as a kind of lens to focus Xeper: to take the “radiant light” and turn it into “cohesive light”, like a laser, directed towards a personal goal which the Setian constructed “at his personal horizon”. As Xeper is constantly expanding, so the Setian’s “personal horizon” constantly recedes; hence Xem must constantly be “re-targeted”.

As there is a problem with Xeper in being difficult for the individual to apprehend in himself, so there is also a problem with Xem. It is that the moment one creates a horizon which is necessarily limited in its “breadth”, if not in its “distance from the observer”, one sees only a part of the whole. As one fashions the laser-beam of Xem to approach that horizon, one utilizes only a part of one’s entire Xeper accordingly.

Consider this analogy: With Xeper one is standing out under the night sky, seeing an ocean of stars. With Xem one looks through a telescope. What one sees through the telescope is clearer, sharper, bigger; and the mind can make more sense of it. Over a period of time an astronomer can look at lots of individual stars, galaxies, etc. through his telescope, all of which is a scientific experience. But it would be meaningless without his original experience and apprehension of the entire night sky. Similarly, without focused, telescopic research, his original sensation of the sky would remain vague.

So that’s the way Xem began in the Temple of Set. I thought it was a downright dandy V° concept, and RKB had a dandy time with it. So did lots of other Setians.

The problem with Xem came about, in my humble opinion, simply because some Setians got so excited about their respective Xem-focus that they insisted on other Setians aligning to the same focus. I would go so far as to say that this also affected RKB himself, and that his holding of the High Priesthood made it a little too tempting to just “order people to align themselves to his Xem”. Yes, a Magus is supposed to undertake his Task through reason, logic, and philosophical brilliance. And I would say that RKB worked at this extensively and impressively. But after a few years I think he got a bit tired of it particularly with some Setians who seemed to want him to “go over it just one more time” and finally yielded to the temptation to use his Temple office to say, “Just do it and shut up or get out!”
Some did it and shut up; others got out with the result that the Temple was down to about 30 members by the time of the Set-IV Conclave crisis. RKB was matter-of-fact about this; anyone who wasn’t “right with Xem”, so to speak, ought not to be hanging around as a drag on the rest of the Temple.

Exacerbating the situation was the tendency for others to follow RKB’s example in “how to enforce a V° Word”. Magister Lynn Norton made a great show of “Uttering the Word Per-t” which was later exposed as an intentional fraud by him and was even more high-handed than RKB in demanding that Setians march to its tune or else. At the Set-4 Conclave, for example, he refused to discuss Per-t openly, saying that he would talk only to the Masters of the Temple about it and that other Setians would have to sit at their feet to be fed such elements of it as might be suitable for them.

As High Priest RKB devised a standardized written examination for the II°. At first it was voluntary that III°s take it too; later RKB made it mandatory for them as well.

As with Xem itself, the test started out as a good idea with the best intentions, then “got its knickers in a twist”, as our British cousins might say. RKB developed it to remedy a problem he perceived in the II°-Recognition process: that it was too “fuzzy”. People were being Recognized to the II° on the grounds of “vague feelings” by a III° which neither the III° nor the II° could quite put into words. RKB felt that every II° should demonstrate competence in certain standardized magical knowledge-bases, hence the II° test which required the reading of certain magical books drawn from the Temple reading list and RKB’s own library.

At first the test was to be used more on an open-ended basis, as a kind of general diagnostic tool. This was necessary given the highly-subjective, highly-personalized nature of Black Magic. This approach was still too “out of focus” for the Magus of Xem, however, so the II° was officially re-defined as “mastery of White Magic” and the answers to the test strictly standardized. [Black Magic simultaneously became the assignment of III°s.] III°s were now also required to take the II° test, and each test would be graded by RKB exclusively.

The result, as with Xem, was a forced alignment of each Setian to RKB’s personal magical skill standards and priorities. It was, in a word, a disaster. After Set-IV one of my first actions as High Priest was to scrap the entire concept, return the tests to their takers, and return the Temple to its previous policy of 100% individualized Recognitions. And of course White Magic went back out the window to the Right-Hand Path where it belongs. [Setians are still expected to know about it - indeed more about it than the RHP droolers who stumble around tangled up in it! - but as a phenomenon to be assessed from an objective, outside perspective, not as something to be personally practiced.]

Finally there were the Orders that developed during the RKB High Priesthood. They were drastically different from the Orders in the Temple of Set today. Each was headed by a Master IV°, but the I°/II°/III° members were all considered to be “apprentices” to that Master. Also each Order kept strictly to itself. Other Setians could not know what it was doing or participate in it at all. RKB’s own Order, the Order of Anubis, became in effect the “secret elite” of the Temple. Anubians routinely knew about RKB’s thoughts and plans for the Temple as a whole long before anyone else even the Council of Nine. The result was a Temple fragmented into uncooperative and suspicious cliques.

Again right after Set-IV I shook this rug out quite a bit. Since then Orders may work internally on matters of special interest to them, but the products of their wisdom are expected to be easily accessible to the entire Temple via open newsletter subscriptions, open Conclave presentations & meetings, etc. Order members are not expected to be “apprentices to the Grand Master”, but are rather free agents with a common field of interests and specialties. No one Order is a “privileged” one, and certainly no Order has higher or earlier access to Temple policy information than the Council of Nine or the Priesthood of Set generally.

Well! All of this seems so clear in hindsight, doesn’t it? It was not so apparent when the Temple of Set was first experimenting with Xem, nor with the II° test, nor with RKB’s Order system. I myself thought each was a good idea in its original form, and so did most other Setians. As things gradually got screwed up over a period of time, it was confusing to be caught somewhere between the initial, positive impressions and the developing negative realities.

As I look back on the period of stress and crisis which came to a boil at the Set-IV Conclave, I can point my finger at a number of individuals who by then were clearly conspiring to usurp the Temple for their selfish aggrandizement. I was disgusted at such profaning of a sacred trust then, and remain so today.

However and I respect the prerogative of others to disagree with me on this point I do not consider RKB a “traitor” of this type. I think that his is the classic case of the Curse of a Magus overcoming his Task made more tempting by the powers of the High Priesthood of Set which were at his fingertips. [The Temple learned from this too, and after Set-4 we rewrote major sections of the By-Laws to prevent such concentrations of authority in the hands of any one official.]

The Task of a Magus is to Utter [define, explain, demonstrate] his Word. The Curse of a Magus is that such a Word, being outside the philosophical “universe” of existing initiates, will be alien to them, hence [at least initially] unintelligible and incredible.

You see why Magi get heartburn easily particularly when they themselves must first grapple with the “blinding flash” of the Word in question, as Anton LaVey referred to it. As a Magus who has been through this “blinding flash”, Task, and Curse myself, I am often wryly reminded of a comment by the musician Miles Davis: “I’ll play it for you first and tell you what it is later.”

In a sense Anton screwed up the Church of Satan when he took his Word to a personal and selfish extreme, and the same could be said of RKB. We can condemn the unfortunate result; I think, however, that we would be arrogant indeed to condemn the Magus in question for daring to set out upon such an uncharted and hazardous journey.

Ultimately the Temple of Set is better for the RKB era, per the aphorism: “That which does not kill me makes me stronger.” And I continue to consider Xem an authentic V° Word within the Æon of Set. As with any V° Word, it has extraordinary and unsuspected power. If you use it wisely, it can do great things for you. If you fiddle around with it carelessly, it can do not-so-great things to you.
Appendix 56: The Set-2 International Conclave
- from the Scroll of Set, August 1980

Set-II and XemSet: This was Surely Home
- by Constance L. Moffatt III°

Set-II was a most magical and magnificent experience for all who attended. Almost every Setian present who had attended Set-I made comments to the effect that this second International Conclave had something that last year’s did not have. One of the prime reasons was probably the initial fact that we were at home, on sacred ground, at XemSet.

Most of us had also grown magically and metaphysically in the year’s time, and this was very evident in our discussions - both formal and informal - and in our workings. Since most of us had met in the past, or become acquainted through correspondence, we greeted each other like long-lost relatives and felt quite comfortable and relaxed alone with “our own kind”. On a mundane level the surroundings were exquisite, and the tremendous work and love that went into preparing for our stay were extremely visible.

The first official get-together was a hospitality room at the motel, hosted by the Khaibit Pylon. It was here that many friendships were renewed.

The caravan of cars left for XemSet at 9:00 the next morning; there all were once again greeted by Magus Ronald K. Barrett and Priest Ricco Zappitelli, the official hosts of Set-II. After coffee and homemade coffee cake, the first Conclave meeting was called to order in the shade of giant trees. A most moving tour of XemSet followed. The beauty and symbolism of the land and its artifacts were explained by Magus Barrett.

Even Setians must eat. And who knows better how to prepare for such activities than Priest Zappitelli and his helpers from the Bay Area? After a spread of food fit to feed an army, the meetings of the Order of Set and the lay membership were held in separate locations (XemSet is comprised of 20 acres, which gave us lots of room to move around in). While Magus Barrett, assisted by Magistra Lilith Sinclair (official coordinator of the Conclave), conducted the III°+ gathering, Adept Chuck Weiss led the I°/II° meeting.

If we thought lunch was massive, we were not prepared for the evening dinner. Priest Zappitelli and his team outdid themselves, with literally tons of various kinds of fried chicken and all the good things that go with it.

Compression for the separate III°+ and lay membership Solstice workings began at dusk. The magic of the workings that took place, this reporter does not feel can be adequately described herein. Words would appear to be too insignificant and trite. Allowed one word, my own personal one would be “love”.

Saturday morning allowed us to sleep in, see the town, or linger over brunch in Ukiah prior to the 11:30 AM departure, via caravan, for the mountain. After doughnuts and coffee, the group broke up for two separate meetings - the Order of Xepera and the Priesthood with the lay membership.

After a 3:30 break, the entire group assembled for an open forum with topical presentations, questions, and answers. Priest Zappitelli displayed the plans and drawings for improvements and expansion of the Court of the Old Ones. Priest Phil Folkler spoke about the Tarot work being carried out by Magister Lee Norton, who was unable to attend Set-II. Priest Robert Moffatt passed around photos he had taken of the Tarot paintings already finished by Magister Norton. Having seen them in person, I can only say that photos cannot do justice to their breathtaking beauty.

While some of the membership prepared for the evening’s hamburger and hot dog cookout, Magistra Sinclair, Chairman of the Council of Nine, held a meeting of the Council. Dinnertime was another feast. Priest Zappitelli cannot possibly outdo himself next year - even with lasagna. Potter Valley-grown and -fed beef is non-surpassable, and the salads: fantastic. The Khaibit Pylon is offered applause for much of this.

Preparation for the General Conclave Ritual was outlined and carried out to the finest detail by Magus Barrett and all Setians present. Every Setian had a part in the elaborate and beautiful (another word) torchlit procession up the long, winding path to the Court of the Old Ones.

The black night was brisk and the sky clear with millions of stars. We were in our own domed world with the Ancient Ones. The experience was one none of us will ever forget.

Once again we were treated to the wonderful occurrence of witnessing the Coming Into Being of a Master of the Temple, Robert A. DeCecco. All who know Magister DeCecco know his greatness and love him; thus there were many tears of happiness. Many of us also sensed Xeper within each other, and there were more tears of joy for all. The Decompression was one which left most of us not wanting to leave XemSet.

Sunday morning came all too soon, as we gathered at the Coach House in Ukiah for a delicious brunch and more discussions. Farewells did not come easy to any of us; nevertheless we went away from the mountain with filled hearts and strong beings.

A Lay View of the Set-II Conclave
- by Corey S. Cole II°

The Set-II Conclave, held July 19-22 at XemSet, was an exciting and magical experience. I am sorry for those brothers and sisters who were able to attend only in spirit. I noticed some profound differences between this year’s Conclave and the previous one in Windsor, and they are perhaps indicative of just how far the Temple has evolved in the last year. We had our fair share of mundane problems, but magic was the key.

Friday we could only go uphill, and did - to XemSet. The day was filled with meetings and discussions, enhanced by the sacred atmosphere of the mountain; the wolves seemed to recognize our Setian natures and observed most of the activities approvingly.

The Order of Set met up near the house, while the lay members discussed magical names and neters on the lower patio. It was fascinating to hear the background behind some of the lay members’ names and how they had gone about choosing [or being chosen by] them. We had a good mixture of those who felt their names were truly expressions of themselves, those who were merely using a name as a magical tool, and a few who had not yet found names with which they could be comfortable.

At Adept Chuck Weiss’ (Phoenix’) suggestion, we decided to devote the evening lay working to the discovery of names for those Setians who as yet had none. The working had a very powerful feeling to it, and was quite successful on the whole. By the time we made our way back down the mountain, everyone was named.

The highlight of the Conclave to me was the Temple-wide discussion, which featured the High Priest asking one or more individuals of each degree a series of questions relating to their magical development and “beliefs”. The key point that came out was that we do not have “beliefs” at all - we have knowledge.

Some other points from my notes: The Temple is progressing even as are the individuals within it. Before we have time to adjust to what we have Become, we have already started to Become something higher.

The Temple, being built around change rather than stasis, is continually revolving around and changing its axis. Even as we follow the spiralling path of Xeper, it is changing under our feet. As to Xem, “the only way one can know Xem is to Become Xem”.

We also had some discussion of the nature of each of the degrees: “As the Æon progresses, so do the sophistication and definition of each degree.”

The Setian I° is one of the Elite of the Earth, someone who senses the “otherness” within himself and has chosen to take an act of will, and of change, in joining the Temple.

The Adept II° is precisely an “Adept” magician; he has obtained a good working knowledge of traditional magical symbolism and has become a magical “technician”.

The Priest of Set III° has used his power to begin to explore the Dark Realm, and in so doing has had an experience by which he undergoes a major transformation and receives the Gift of the Black Flame. He has found a new realm of Being.

Saturday night culminated in the Temple of Set working in the Court of the Old Ones high atop XemSet. The torchlight procession up the hillside marked, in my eyes, the end of being held back by the Satanic psychodrama approach to ritual; the rest of the working became more and more individual.

I would be astounded to hear of any two Setians who came away from that ritual having seen and experienced the same things. The new way required much more work and personal will, but to my mind shows the vast strides we have all taken in one “short” year.

Coming down again after all that was terribly difficult. We had a fine buffet brunch in Ukiah, and nobody quite wanted to say goodbye. I recorded my feelings of the weekend in a ritual, “The Rite of the Self”, then proceeded to San Francisco to “stretch” the Conclave a few days with some of my Setian friends and brothers. The spiral is truly tightening. Xeper ir Xem.

We are the Significance of the Temple of Set
- by Robert H. Moffatt III°

“We are going to make this the most magical Conclave that anyone has ever attended,” said Magus Ronald K. Barrett, High Priest of Set, in his welcoming address at the Set-II Conclave; and the participants proceeded to make it just that.

The pervading theme in all meetings, small group discussions, rituals, and combinations thereof, seemed to be that of recounting and celebrating personal, individual change, with all aspects bared proudly.

All reports from participants were to express that the experience was a giant step in their evolution. My impressions can be summed up in the way the final Conclave Ritual seemed to conduct itself as a separate force - an energy-composition made up of the place XemSet, the Beings, and the awesome symbolism.

Each occurrence gave individual messages, elicited individual responses, and provided individual change for growth. I felt a great sense of loss for those of the Temple of Set who were not present.

Unlike the grand ritual at Set-I, where heat was a problem, the chill in the air sharpened awareness during that of Set-II and promoted the sharing of body heat. The best opportunity for this came with the Recognition of a new Master of the Temple, Robert A. DeCecco, who became the center of a swarm of joyful friends.
If There is a Constant, it is Change
- by Ronald K. Barrett V°, High Priest

[The following is a transcript of a talk by the High Priest of Set at the Set-II Conclave at XemSet.]

The Temple of Set: Is it a collective, or is it an individual response?

As Magistra Bast pointed out, the Temple, before the organizational aspects of it come into play, begins in the individual - every individual seated here. We are each a temple of the Set-entity; we are also each a stone in a collective Temple.

The difference between the Temple we comprise and other temples which have existed throughout history is that our “axis” is in a state of perpetual change because of the Words that are the motivating force behind our reason for being.

Ours is not a temple of stone intended for permanence. Any individual who composes even a small part of the Temple of Set who is not geared for flexibility and change will crumble as the Temple itself changes its axis.

In all our discussions on aspirations, growth, and Xeper, the hardest concept we have had to deal with is the element of change.

That element of change began in every one of us before we ever entered the Temple of Set. Think back: Every one of us experienced something of a search within ourselves, a looking for something else, a feeling that there’s got to be more than getting up, going to work, going home, and then starting all over again.

So the first thing that each one of us has to contend with in the design of the Temple of Set is the element of change. If there is a “constant” in the Temple, that is it!

Then comes the overall picture, the collective direction: Xeper ir Xem: Become of the gods: Become Higher Man. It sounds great. It sounds beautiful. It’s great poetry. And almost every theological and philosophical society on the face of this Earth has said that this is what it is trying to do in one form or another.

Even the Christians, whom we rib so often, seek to become pure in the eyes of their God so they can reap the reward that he offers: eternal bliss.

What’s the difference between the Temple of Set and everyone else? One major difference is, as I have said, the acceptance of the element of change - the welcoming of it.

Another factor is unqualified individuality: individual expression, individual growth. We don’t tell you what you have to do, as in an outline. We simply say: “In order to get from point #A to point #C, you have to reach point #S. How you do it is entirely up to you. Nobody is going to hand you a road map.”

What we are trying to do is not just talk about becoming gods, not just talk about various forms of higher being, not just write fancy papers on one philosophical subject or another. We are doing it, and there’s the difference. We are saying it works.

We’re saying that we do not prescribe any step along the way that someone before you has not taken successfully. Thus we can erase the element of blind faith. We can say, “Well, we do have faith, but it’s faith by experience.”

You want to see those who have mastered themselves? I can show you Masters there, there, there, and there (pointing to Masters Sinclair, Thomas, Seago, and Bast).

Our relationship with the entity with whom we work is different. We have a personal relationship. The entity needs us every bit as much as we need him. And there’s a beauty in that too, because we can all say, “My arrangement, my affiliation with Set is mutual. We are both in it for selfish reasons. I salute him only so long as he does things for me, only so long as he enlightens me.”

And, of course, our usefulness to him is reciprocal. We work together; this gives a little more significance to the idea of “becoming of the gods”, because we are truly working with the gods - not serving them, not working under them.

So the goal of the Temple of Set is to provide an initiatory path not to some heavenly godhood where you have to drop dead in your tracks to realize your reward - not to where you have to forfeit your identity to get there, but where you have to realize your identity to get there - where “selfishness” is not a bad word. But it’s an art; it’s a science; it’s an exact science. You get exactly what you put into it.

Let’s review those steps of initiation. Setians I° come into the Temple for personal reasons. The true reason they should be here is that they have sensed this “otherness”, this potential within themselves, and want to find a way to develop it. And they have met another Setian, and, through discussion with that Setian, they think that we may have a way to help them develop this thing within them.

So the first step is an act of will that is the first act of change, and that change will not cease. The change that has begun at that point is a continuous, ongoing thing. There is no time to make serious adjustment to any stage of change. We simply Become, and then we are what we have become while we are aspiring to become more.

We have another tool in the Temple called the communications pyramid. The pyramid is a magical tool, a magical structure. It is designed as a device to get us from the dilemma of our natural human existence into the state of godhood which is, as Setians, our rightful heritage. But we have to claim it. We have to do it. It won’t be handed to us.

Somewhere along this initiatory path lies the state of Xem. The state of Xem is a realm of existence unlike that which we presently know. The only ones who will truly know Xem are those who have Become it. For this reason it can be described as one might describe an ancient Egyptian temple - by walking around the outside of the temple complex without having any real idea of what is on the inside or why.

What I am trying to lead up to is that we must look at the Temple of Set as a spiral path leading to a higher state of being. Even while it is doing so, the path is itself changing. Nothing ever becomes familiar. We don’t stick around in one spot long enough for that to happen. And if we are going to accomplish this, our first important task is to begin really believing we are who we say we are. We all believe that the Temple of Set is the vehicle that is going to get us to Xem, or we would not be here. Right?

If that is true, we have another responsibility, regarding not only ourselves as who and what we say we are, but those others among us as who and what we say they are.

Consider what you are saying when you approach a Master of the Temple and address that IV° being as “Magister” or “Magistra”. You are recognizing a true Master of this initiatory path. And even the Masters have to remember this, when they address each other - that they are addressing other Masters.

Think of this when you are addressing a member of the Priesthood - one of whom Set himself has said, “I Elect this one to work the Black Magic.” If there is anyone here who is not awed by a person who has been chosen by the Prince of Darkness, that person can leave now.

And when you see someone wearing a red medallion, someone who has pulled himself out of the muck and mire of humanity and has said, “Yes, I will attempt to master the forces that are around me, and bend the natural universe to my will”, how can we but hold the most profound respect for such a person?

And then we have one who wears the white medallion of a Setian I°. Here is an individual who has said, “I really don’t know anything about this ‘Temple of Set’ except what they say they are, and what they have written; but there’s something inside me that says there’s something solid about this - there’s something real about this. And yes, I’ll take the chance, and I’ll investigate this organization of what for all I know could turn out to be a bunch of sadistic weirdos.”

Think about it: a Black Magic organization! No Setians knew exactly what they were getting into when they decided to join the Temple of Set, and yet the drive in them was so strong that they said, “Yes, I will take this step.” Who among us cannot respect such an individual? Who among us does not want to help this individual realize more of his own potential?

This is the value of the Temple of Set. This is the only value. The Temple is a tool for us to use. Without use, without utility, it has no value - it is a thing of no meaning. Set himself has no need of an organization just for organization’s sake. He needs no worshippers. He does not need an elaborate temple structure in which to rumble and make it thunder. We are the significance of the Temple of Set. For that matter, we are the hope of all humanity. Those of us who are here are the sum total of the whole Setian experiment.

So when we regard each other, let us do so in the true sense of initiatory fellowship. Let us regard each other as the present and potential beings that we are. Let us work together collectively, even as we work individually, to so propel this Temple of Set that we go into “warp speed”. It’s up to us. Set can’t do it for us.
Appendix 57: Reading Requirements for the II°

- by Ronald K. Barrett V°, High Priest
July XVI/1981

Required Reading for Setians I°

1. Magick by Aleister Crowley. NY: Samuel Weiser, 1974. Contains (a) a discussion of Yoga, (b) a discussion of magical equipment (Book Four), and (c) a discussion of magic (Magick in Theory and Practice).

9. The Occult by Colin Wilson. NY: Random House, 1972. Although this book is rather dry and weak in some areas, it remains as a good introduction to so vast a subject as “occultism”.

11. A Fascinating History of Witchcraft, Magic, and Occultism by W. B. Crow. A summary of the subject in various cultures and periods. Crow attempts to show relationships between various areas of the occult, magic, and phenomena.

12. The Psychology of Man’s Possible Evolution by Peter D. Ouspensky. “Know thyself” also applies to magicians. What are you thinking? What are you feeling? Who among you is reading this?

Recommended Reading for Setians I°

11. The Brain Revolution by Marilyn Ferguson. NY: Taplinger Publishing, 1973. “We already have the superbrain. We have had it all along. That’s what the brain revolution is all about.”

17. A New Model of the Universe by Peter D. Ouspensky. NY: Vintage, 1971. Speculations in such areas as the human dimension, the Tarot, symbolism, yoga, art, hypnotism, physics, and philosophy.

23. The Curse of the Pharaohs by Philipp Vandenberg. NY: Lippincott, 1975. Contains some speculations on ancient Egyptian magic, the priesthoods, etc.

32. 777 by Aleister Crowley. NY: Weiser, 1979. This collection was first published as The Qabala of Aleister Crowley and is composed of three books: “Gematria”, “Liber 777”, and “Sepher Sephiroth”. It contains many tables of attributions and correspondences as well as various magical discussions on the Tree of Life, etc.

Appendix 58: Letter to All Setians

- by Michael A. Aquino VI°
High Priest of Set
June 10, XVII/1982

To all Initiates of the Temple of Set:

On May 31 Ronald K. Barrett, High Priest of Set and a recently (May 20) confirmed Ipsissimus VI°, sent a letter to the Masters of the Temple in which he announced his complete resignation from the Temple. It was a decision which he had not discussed with anyone in advance - save certain members of his Order of Anubis - and for which his letter offered no explanation:

Please honor my desire for an honorable, quiet, graceful, and quick exit by not attempting to contact me, as it will only be futile, since I am absolutely resolved about this course of action. I am equally resolved not to discuss this further than saying “This is my Will!”

As soon as Magistra Lilith Sinclair, Chairman of the Council of Nine, learned of this development, she proposed to the Council that I be reconfirmed as High Priest of Set, and the Councillors approved this unanimously. Since then I have been taking immediate action to see the Temple through this development. The purpose of this letter is threefold: (1) To state my analysis of the Barrett resignation for the record. (2) To make the entire Temple aware - perhaps I should say re-aware - of some basic principles of its design. (3) To make a certain promise.

The Barrett Resignation

Since Barrett chose not to explain himself, his actions must speak for him. Indeed, as far as I am concerned, the effect of his actions is more important than any statement he could make concerning his intentions, magical or otherwise.

So it must always be with those of high standing and office. They are accorded such honors and trusts precisely because they are distinguished, wise, and prudent. Lesser beings may behave impulsively and irrationally and even destructively, and perhaps no one will comment - save to show the offender the door.

But, like Anton Szandor LaVey, Ronald Barrett is no ordinary being. We cannot just shrug him off, sweep him under the rug, and forget about him. We must judge him: hold him to account for what he has done - not to intrude upon his new private life, but rather “for the record” within the Temple of Set.

For the last several days I have listened to much speculation within the Priesthood. Now I feel that I must go on record with my own evaluation - both because I am High Priest and because I am also the individual who Recognized Barrett to the III°, IV°, V°, and VI°. Here it is, as simply and bluntly as I can phrase it:

• As High Priest, Barrett envisioned a Temple of Set in which Initiates would be trained according to exacting, standardized criteria. They would have to pass proficiency tests according to a uniform time-schedule. It was not conceivable that someone could stay at, say, the II° level indefinitely; all must move higher, and the goal was the V° for everyone. As the Initiate advanced in degree, he would be confronted more by tests and problems relative to Xem (Barrett’s V° Word) and Per-t (Magus Norton’s Word). Unlike my own Word (Xeper), however, Xem would not be directly explained. Rather one would have to apprehend its meaning indirectly, through various writings which contained both literal and symbolic meanings.

During the period of Barrett’s High Priesthood, however, signs began to emerge that things were not as well as they might be.

- The membership of the Temple began to shrink to half its size upon Barrett’s assumption of office - both from above as various senior Initiates left, and from below as fewer non-members made the decision to affiliate.

- The “Pyramid system” of communication that Barrett instituted - in which communication was required and senior evaluation of juniors was mandatory - failed because both seniors and juniors balked at the requirements.

- A test which Barrett wrote to standardize proficiency for the degree of Adept II° resulted in all II°s flunking.

- When it appeared that no members of the Priesthood III° intended to take the test voluntarily, Barrett required them to do so - within a short time limit. He was disappointed at the results, but said to Magistra Sinclair that he could not inactivate the entire Priesthood. I recommended that he simply table the results of the examinations until the Set-4 Conclave (this next month), whereupon they could be discussed constructively and a consensus reached concerning their significance. Barrett agreed to do this.

- A week or so before Barrett’s surprise letter another event occurred. He was visited by Ricco A. Zappitelli, one-time Priest of Set and very close friend who had disgraced himself at the Set-3 Conclave last year and had since been a non-member of the Temple and estranged from Barrett personally. A short time later Susan Mitchell, who works with Barrett in his occult shop, was advised by another ex-III° who had left in disgrace - Susan Wylie - that she and Zappitelli had been received warmly by Anton LaVey and been given priesthood by him.

  I am not suggesting that Zappitelli brought Barrett a “deal” from LaVey, or that Barrett would have considered it if he had. I am suggesting that such news probably depressed and discouraged Barrett all the more, particularly since he had held great hopes for Ricco’s successful emergence from psychiatric care and eventual return to the Temple.

- At the Spring Equinox of this year Barrett introduced a new Temple-wide program - “Order Without Law” - in which he announced that the Temple would henceforth be subdivided into various initiatory Orders, each headed by one of the Masters of the Temple IV°. All Setian I°s and members of the Priesthood III° [all II°s had been demoted to I° by the test] would be required to become “apprentices” in these Orders. Authority would be highly centralized in the person of the IV° heading the Order:

All Apprentices will respond and answer to their Sages [IV°s] in any/all Setian matters. It would be an act of Unwisdom to carry any matter outside the Order to which the Apprentice belongs without first having consulted the Sage of that Order ... III°s may assist the Sage in the Apprenticeships of I°s of that Order and administratively to the II°s of that Order (as per the By-Laws), but henceforth only under the direct supervision of the Sage.

On paper “Order Without law” seemed to curtail the freedom of Setians to interact - and members of the Priesthood to use their powers of supervision and Recognition - within the Temple as a whole. But in the same document Barrett said:

Nor will an attitude of ‘us and them’ be tolerated from members of the Orders or from the Orders themselves. Expulsion from the Temple of Set will be certain to follow such noticed attitudes.

Since “secret cliques” have been responsible for many a crisis in the history of the Temple - and in the Church of Satan before it - Magistra Sinclair and I were concerned enough about this particular point to discuss it with Barrett personally at his store while he was still drafting the policy. We were also concerned that his own Order of Anubis might receive his preferential attention to the possible detriment of his High Priesthood responsibilities. To both questions he answered that we had nothing to worry about, and we took him at his word.

Upon his resignation the entire Order of Anubis - less Priest Robert Brink - also resigned without discussion or explanation, save to sing in harmony that “it has nothing to do with Barrett’s resignation”.

The High Priesthood is regarded so highly in the Temple of Set that it has been virtually inconceivable to doubt the integrity of the incumbent. True, I wrote provisions into the By-Laws to remove a High Priest from office [to protect the Temple against an Anton LaVey-type disaster], but the exchange of information among the Priesthood has always been so open that we never really worried about a “Watergate”.

I think it is also correct to say that, as Barrett introduced the above-cited policies, everyone made a good effort to interpret them in the most positive way and to help them off to a good start. Most of the problems seemed to be time-pressure ones or occasional lapse of communications rather than serious doctrinal ones.

That, at any rate, was how it looked from here. While Barrett was putting his surprise letter in the mail, I was at work updating the Temple Reading List - with all the new Order material added to it per input from all of the Sages [except Barrett - but I assumed he was too busy and planned to take his recommendations from Scroll #VI-6].

• A further point to consider is that, barely a week previously, Barrett had received the highest Recognition in the Temple of Set - that of Ipsissimus VI°. Per the By-Laws this requires the unanimous consent of all of the Masters of the Temple and of the entire Council of Nine. So Barrett was hardly in a position to say that the Temple of Set - at all levels - did not respect or appreciate his expertise.
These, then, are the facts. From them I conclude that Barrett was becoming increasingly frustrated by the Temple of Set’s reluctance to mold itself into his ideal conception of it, and that he saw its decreasing size (36) as symptomatic of its impending demise. Rather than suffer the embarrassment of being in office as High Priest when that happened, he decided to jump ship, taking his Order of Anubis with him. In fact he is certainly intelligent enough to have expected that his sudden, unexplained departure would probably so shake the Temple that its death-agonies would commence - several months of struggling, perhaps, but an eventual, inevitable disintegration.

Having admired, loved, and trusted Barrett for so long, many of the Priesthood have found it hard to imagine such Machiavellian motives in his case. I myself was so stunned at the news that the only thing I could think of was to ask him if he would at least accept an Honorary Membership in token of our regard for him. [He refused this later by a two-sentence letter.] After considering the aforementioned facts, however, I feel that this interpretation is the correct one.

Some members of the Priesthood have speculated that Barrett, having achieved the VI°, has left in search of “new initiatory heights” beyond those of the Temple of Set - and/or that he has deliberately “pushed the Temple out of the nest” to force it to learn to fly, i.e. to evolve into the new and more advanced initiatory realm in which he now exists. I can understand why such hopeful, grasping-at-straws speculation occurs, but I do not share it for the following reasons:

“VII°+ Initiation”

The Temple of Set’s philosophy of initiation has always been very simple and straightforward. It is to clear up the mysteries of existence, not to further obscure them by occult doubletalk. [This no-bullshit approach is something we inherited directly from the Church of Satan, I might add.]

Advancement through the II° is purely rational [see the Crystal Tablet and included Reading List now in the mail to you].

Advancement to the III°, in its simplest terms, is by estimation of an IV° that you display the unique characteristics by which Set Recognizes his Priesthood. Advancement to the IV° is by consensus of the Temple’s senior Initiates that the III° has become so expert, sensitive, and judicious in the control and application of his powers that he should properly be considered a Master.

The V° and VI° are essentially variations upon the IV° level of expertise and consciousness. They do not denote “higher levels of consciousness” in any sense.

Note that one’s personal development is unrestricted at any degree. A II° may become tremendously wise in the ways of magic without ever displaying that peculiar combination of qualities characteristic of the III°. [Last year I received the missing ingredients for a Temple working of key importance from a Setian I° whose knowledge of the Enochian system’s origins was greater than mine.]

The IV° has been regarded as the “summit” of personally-activated initiation, because the V° and VI° are properly seen as “freakish” or “accidental” occurrences.

Masters of the Temple IV° do not cease to develop just because they Understand the known universe. First of all, they are constantly accumulating more “lesser” facts which enhance their Understanding. Secondly, as Adept magicians they have the power to create magical universes in accordance with their will - and do so. Their quality of Understanding manifests itself in the excellence and precision of these creations.
The II°, moreover, is the last degree at which personally-oriented workings are considered sufficient. All Initiates to the Priesthood of Set are expected to concern themselves to a reasonable extent to the teaching of newer, junior Initiates - as an active manifestation of the Priesthood in its most sacred sense. All Masters of the Temple are expected to concern themselves to a reasonable extent with the excellence of the Initiatory climate of the Temple as a whole.

Hence Ronald Barrett had no reason to feel constrained or stifled in his personal initiatory desires by his IV°+ state of being. His titles of Magus and Ipsissimus, like my own, are of relevance to Æonic magical “office” only. He could have resigned the High Priesthood, remained a VI°, and soared on to more personal degrees than even the Masons can conceive. The Temple of Set would have no right to judge such things, nor would Barrett have the right to expect such judgment.

Instead he resigned his affiliation entirely - including in this act all degrees Recognized by the Temple as well as the sacred Priesthood of Set itself. Moreover, charged by Set with the sacred care of his Temple as its High Priest, Barrett did not relinquish that office in a fashion designed to ensure its smooth transition to a successor. Instead of consulting with the Council of Nine, giving it advance notice of his intentions, and remaining in office until the next High Priest could be chosen after reasonable discussion and installed in office [at this next month’s conclave, for example], he departed the office so abruptly that a condition of crisis was inevitable and immediate.

“Testing the Temple”

My answer to this is short, sweet, and blunt: The Temple of Set does not play games - magical, psychological, or otherwise - with its Initiates of any degree. Our manipulative/Lesser Black Magic is reserved for the profane world. Within the Temple straight questions get straight answers; and the sincerity, intelligence, and dignity of other Initiates are always respected. This is a code of ethics which applies to VI°s and I°s and everyone in-between.

Relative newcomers to the Temple may not know this, but we feel especially vehement on this matter because the final downfall of the Church of Satan occurred when Anton LaVey made a decision to exploit all but a select few of the Church. I was among the select few, but wouldn’t stand for his decision and so spoke for the Infernal Mandate on that point. [Barrett, I may say with irony, was not among the select few ... nor, for that matter, were Ricco Zappitelli or Susan Wylie. Memories appear to be short.]

Within the Temple, therefore, any misleading of Initiates, now matter how “therapeutic” or “well-intentioned”, has always been anathema. Clearing up the mysteries of the universe is hard enough without wondering whether our co-investigator is setting us up!

And the High Priest is expected to make all policies or seriously-anticipated policies known to the Council of Nine [at minimum] at least at the earliest point in time anyone else hears of them. [Magistra Sinclair, Chairman of the Council, was put in the humiliating position of being scheduled to learn of Barrett’s decision by letter - while some of the Order of Anubis people that she talked to by phone evidently knew of it - and of her ignorance - in advance. [This is the same Lilith Sinclair, I feel moved to add, who welcomed Ronald Barrett I° into her Grotto in New York City so many years ago and watched with pride as he attained the II°.]

Summarily I deplore the circumstances and evident rationale of Barrett’s resignation from its chief executive office, which I consider not unlike stabbing the Temple of Set in the back with the expectation that it would bleed to death in the street.
I reject absolutely the notion that he was initiatorily constrained by the Temple’s degree structure.

I reject absolutely the notion that he had any right or precedent to suppose that he could “test” the Temple with a shock such as this.

Rather I assess his motives simply as self-centered and clique-oriented - no different, in final analysis, from others in the past who, finding the Temple of Set too large a pond with too many big fish, left to became the acknowledged big fish in a smaller pond. Barrett is, to be sure, the first one to toss a stick of dynamite into the big pond where the many fish were relaxed under his “guardianship”.

While you have been reading this - particularly those of you who are recent entrants into the Temple - you may have been wondering why I should spell all this unpleasant and unflattering information out to you. Most other religious and/or magical organizations would do a gloss-job, put on the best face, and hope that they wouldn’t lose too many members who could see through the paint.

As I’ve said earlier, the Temple of Set isn’t like that. Our senior Initiates are people who’ve spent years digging through mounds of occult bullshit and pseudo-science in search of the real Philosopher’s Stone. We have suffered a certain amount of social ostracism, even persecution because of our interests and dedication. But we also have a fierce pride in our integrity, and no one is going to monkey with it.

A side aspect of this is that any individual who entrusts his initiation to the Temple has the right to know the quality of the initiators. The privacy of the Priesthood and Masters of the Temple is respected as long as their execution of office is in keeping with the Temple’s established reputation. If a problem emerges, the facts are brought out in the open to all who are involved in any way. In the case of the sudden resignation of a High Priest, obviously, the whole Temple has the right to know what is going on. Q.E.D.

High Priest Policies

Since reassuming the High Priesthood, I have made specific policy decisions which I consider to be of immediate and urgent importance:

- All degree-downgradings which took place because of Barrett’s test are reversed, and use of that test (in whole or in part) becomes just one of many ways for magical knowledge to be measured. Word has circulated that just about everyone did rotten on the test. I received all the tests from Barrett a few days ago, together with the corporate papers. I haven’t reviewed them in detail, but from a quick skim-through they’re not that bad and most are impressive. We’ll discuss them more at the conclave. Some of the essays really ought to go to the Scroll for example, so that the entire Temple can benefit from them.

- “Order Without Law” is revoked as a mandatory system. Masters of the Temple may establish specialized Orders of their own [indeed this has been a traditional prerogative of the degree since the Æon of Horus], but they are not required to do so.

Initiates of the Temple may affiliate with one or more Orders as they wish to [and as will accept them], or they may choose to remain Initiates of the Temple in general.
The title of “Apprentice” will not be used as a qualifying designation to any Temple of Set degree.

The authority of supervision and Recognition empowered to the Priesthood of Set III°+ under the By-Laws will not be circumscribed in whole or in part, by explicit requirement or by tacit expectation, by any Order.

In short, the Orders are both welcome and encouraged as they lead to more enriching experiences for all members, and as they are both instructive and pleasant for Masters and other Initiates alike. Oppressive and constricting Orders, I expect I hardly need add, are not welcome and will most assuredly be discouraged.

• And now one point - straight from the By-Laws - that I cannot stress too emphatically: No Temple-germane secrets are to be kept from any member of the Council of Nine. This is also one of the historic emphases of the Temple.

I don’t give a damn what promises you have made to whom. If you’re hiding some important information from a Councillor, and you know [Setians tend not to be stupid] that the Councillor would be interested in it, you’re in trouble with this High Priest when I find out about it.

The Council of Nine, in addition to being the corporate Board of Directors of the Temple, is the sovereign authority of the Temple. It does not make policy - the High Priest does that - but it watches that policy, him, and the Executive Director to ensure that all is as it should be. Obviously the Council cannot do this if it is in the dark. Nor should its dignity be offended by Counselors being even “passively” misled [as Chairman Sinclair was when talking with Order of Anubis persons].

Temple of Set policies and programs for the present and future will be discussed in great detail at the conclave next month, and Setians of all degrees will have a chance to be heard and to have their recommendations considered. If you cannot be present, put your ideas in writing and send them to any member of the Priesthood who is planning to attend. Standing Temple-wide policies will be clarified in appropriate supplements to the Crystal Tablet of Set, and more specific and time-dated programs will be discussed in the Scroll of Set.

My Promise

Finally the promise: In 1975, during the writing of the Book of Coming Forth by Night, I pledged to Set that I would recreate his Temple and his Priesthood in their highest, noblest essence. Every decision I have made since that night, organizational or initiatory, has been made with that pledge in mind.

So powerful has been the energy that has radiated from the Temple of Set that it has accomplished things absolutely unequaled and unprecedented by anything remotely resembling it. Its Initiates have unlocked gates to themselves and their prerogatives whose existence they could scarcely have imagined.

Yet this has not been without cost. Seemingly without end the Temple has suffered shock after shock - both from outside persecution and, more sadly, from those whose dedication to initiation was disrupted by lesser motives. It has built up a host of enemies - in conventional society, who instinctively sense its authenticity [hence threat to false religious and philosophical antics], within the “occult community” (groups whose ethics, expertise, and axioms are pathetic and simplistic in comparison), and among disgruntled ex-Setians who find its continued presence an intolerable reminder of their own failures and weaknesses. Not daring to challenge the Temple of Set directly, such individuals and organizations circle about it like vultures, probing for vulnerabilities and recruiting its rejects and failures (like Zappitelli and Wylie) with mock titles and positions.

Ronald Barrett’s resignation is the worst shock yet. I have no reason to anticipate that the Temple of Set will not survive it, just as it has withstood so many others for so many years. But if it ever should seem - either now or at some other time - that the Temple’s strength is falling, then it will not be cast aside to die wretchedly, gasping out its life slowly and painfully while those who fear it and hate it assemble to gloat over its agonies. Rather, like the fabled sword Excalibur, It shall be returned with dignity, honor, and Essence to the Source from whence it came, awaiting a third moment in a far future when some restless beings who seek the ultimate Mystery will again evoke its Coming Forth by Night. Xeper.
The critical events prior to, during, and following the Set-IV Conclave are now so well known throughout the Temple of Set that it is unnecessary to recount them here. It is important, however, that the magical consequences of those events be evaluated. The disgrace of Ronald Barrett and Lynn Norton is significant in that these two individuals were recognized as Magi V° by the Temple, hence were acknowledged to have made significant breakthroughs in the magical and philosophical principles of the Left-Hand Path.

Something, however, went very badly wrong. What and why? And what are the resultant implications for the Temple?

For the first two years of Barrett’s High Priesthood (mid-1979 to mid-1981), his Utterance of the Word Xem was in keeping with the traditional climate of magical and philosophical freedom that had characterized the Temple of Set since Xeper: that is, the Word was expected to stand on its own merits, and no one was forced to concentrate on it. Barrett was a strict High Priest, but only insofar as Temple protocol and administration were concerned.

This happy state of affairs began to deteriorate, as far as I can determine, at the Set-3 Conclave a year ago. On that occasion Lynn Norton was Recognized to the V°, and Barrett’s attitude towards Xem underwent a change. Now it was important that those who had not paid what he felt to be sufficient attention to Xem do so forthwith. This was to be done by (1) the introduction of a written II° test and (2) the redefinition of the Temple’s degree system to make the degrees correspond simply to the progression of Magus-Words from Crowley forward. [Barrett announced these two policies in Scroll #VI-6.]

At the time there seemed no particular reason for concern. Barrett’s record was a good one, and he was the first to assure Setians that the test was not to be used punitively, nor would it be centrally graded, nor would there be a specific passing score. It would be used as an aid to evaluation only.

During the ensuing year, Barrett altered all three positions. He and he alone decided passing grades and correct answers to the often-ambiguous questions on the test. II°s not passing were demoted to I°. All III°s were forced to take the test with a short time limit when few did so on their own. III°s not passing the test, said Barrett, should be inactivated until they did. By April 1982 all II°s in the Temple had been demoted to I° [if they had not resigned by then], and action against the III°s was halted only by Magistra Sinclair, who as Chairman of the Council of Nine informed Barrett that she would not tolerate punitive actions against Councillors merely because of their performance on the test.

Absorbed with the massive project of The Church of Satan history, I was not immediately alarmed by the test or by the comments concerning the degree system. I trusted Barrett’s integrity, and I assumed that the test problems were “growing pains” that would be solved constructively. As for the degree-system, I did not perceive Barrett’s intent as being a change to its underlying structure - a structure so strong and time-tested that it has endured formally for a century [since the founding of the Golden Dawn].
In a letter to the III°+ on 7/15/81, Barrett commented on the Recognition of Norton at Set-III:

First and foremost is the Coming Into Being of a new Magus V°. I’m not going to say much about it at this time until the Recognition has become official, except that I’m delighted and magically elated beyond Words. I will say this however: Xem is no longer only conceptual, for the Coming Into Being of Magus Norton (Ptah) has validated one of the Principles of Xem, for the idea has become in first Manifestation. Xem’s first truth is, and through that Xem is!

Now the Gates which are open have been passed through, and it is the time of the new Magi, of whom Ptah and I are but the first. Now comes the Great Work. What is more and very important is that the Curse of the Magus is broken; it is no more.

More on all of this will be explained later, but in the meantime Magus Norton needs time to get a grip on what is happening and on a Per-t; I need time to get the reality of all this into my brain; and he and I need time to put our Words together for the first phase in the construction of the new realm. Sound exciting? You might say that.

I was concerned about this odd notion of the Curse of the Magus being ended, and further about what I had heard - but not read as policy - that “now everyone could attain a personal V°”. I decided that I had best remind both Barrett and Norton of the seriousness of the concept of Magus. To Norton [with a copy to Barrett] I wrote on 7/25/81:

From many of the Masters I have heard accounts of your Utterance of the Word of a Magus. While I was not fortunate enough to be present at the Set-3 Conclave, I respect their Understanding and your own sense of Coming Into Being as expressed both at the Conclave and in your 7/13/81 letter.

As was also the case at the time of my own and Anubis’ V° initiations, I do not think that congratulations would be magically appropriate. While the path from I° to IV° is one of increasing exaltation and satisfaction, the V° is, like Satan’s fabled fall from Heaven, a plunge into an entirely new environment. The Magister Templi can be an explorer, a teacher, a philosopher. All these pleasant pursuits are shattered for the Magus, as he must be a creator. That is his Task, and therein also lies his Curse:

And this is the horror that was shown by the lake that was nigh unto the City of the Seven Hills, and this is the Mystery of the great prophets that have come unto mankind, Moses, and Buddha, and Lao Tan, and Krishna, and Jesus, and Osiris, and Mohammed; for all these attained unto the grade of Magus, and therefore were they bound with the curse of Thoth. But, being guardians of the truth, they have taught nothing but falsehood, except unto such as understood; for the truth may not pass the Gate of the Abyss. - 666, 6th Æthyr, The Vision and The Voice

I know that there is a good deal of excitement and interest in the Temple at the prospect of witnessing the Coming Into Being of a new Magus. It is a rare and sublime occasion, and it is all the more stimulating because of its mystery. A Magus presents the magical universe with a new unknown factor which necessarily alters many, if not all preconceptions about the initiatory process. Witness the environmental changes from Crowley to LaVey to myself to Anubis.

You must recognize, however, that this initial excitement and interest on the part of onlookers is in ignorance of what your Word will actually imply for them. If this were not the case - if you fitted neatly into the existing magical universe, “making it perfect” - then you would not be a true Magus but rather a Magister Templi who had succeeded, perhaps, in making a major breakthrough in Understanding of the existing environment Then you would not be Uttering Per-t but rather fulfilling Xem.

I have read carefully Anubis’ #OS-93 comments to the Priesthood on the ending of the Curse of the Magus, and a few evenings ago he and I were able to discuss this at some length. I have reflected on what he said and the reasoning behind it, and yet I still feel I should counsel caution and care on this point.

If Anubis’ magical universe does not encompass what is meant by Per-t - and again that is necessarily the case if Per-t is a true V° Word - then Anubis’ apprehension of Per-t is that of a Magister Templi [just as my apprehension and subsequent Understanding of Xem has been that of a Magister Templi].

At this moment, if you are in truth a Magus, no one Understands you but you. That is why a Magus is characterized as Uttering a “falsehood”, and that is why the Curse: He encounters skepticism and then disbelief, and then even annoyance and rejection as he insists upon proclaiming the Word. Yet if he is a Magus, then he cannot help himself; he must continue to proclaim the Word, and that is the Task of the Magus.

Remember that it took our Initiates a long, slow, and often difficult process to make the magical switch from Indulgence to Xeper. Some fell by the wayside. Then it took a similar process to make the switch from Xeper to Xem. The word of Nuit - “inertia” - works for the Magister Templi (who streamlines and fulfills the existing magical universe) and against the Magus (who expands it and thus alters all preexisting formulæ concerning it).

It is most important that you are aware of this inertia distinction. Otherwise you might tend to interpret resistance and ignorance concerning your statements as petty, interpersonal antagonism.

That was a mistake made by Robert Ethel, who grasped after the V° and found that he was totally unable to stand the shock of the cold water after the comforting magical sauna of the IV°. He tried to save himself by “enforcing” belief in and understanding of the Word he endeavored to Utter; he tried to wrench the V° environment into a IV° semblance.

The only result was that he made it clear that he was not a true Magus, for a Magus is compelled to see the distance and distinction between his Word and the preexisting universe. He stresses it; he does not try to hide it or disguise it. And then he carries on despite the Curse, for a true Magus is also identified by his willingness to fulfill his Task. As it is written in Liber B vel Magi:

And woe, woe, woe, yea woe, and again woe, woe, woe unto seven times be His that preacheth not His law to men! And woe also be unto Him that refuseth the curse of the grade of a Magus, and the burden of the Attainment thereof.

Only you are in a position to know if you are in truth a Magus V°. All others, Anubis and myself included, can only offer you a “best possible” environment to undertake your Task - which is what the V° Recognition is in actuality.

I°-IV° Recognitions are decisions of certainty and validation. The V°, of course, is outside both of these concepts. So what the Temple actually does by a V° Recognition is to proclaim to the entire membership: “This is an Initiate who believes he is a Magus. The High Priest and the Nine see no apparent reason to disallow that claim and, from his statements to date to them, they are of the opinion that the claim has a reasonable probability of being true. Therefore they formally agree to Recognize him as a Magus, that his Task may be made easier and his Curse lighter for all Initiates will attempt to interpret him in a unique way once they are alerted to the purple medallion.”

All these things I say to you now, as I said them less clearly years ago to Anubis, and as I learned them even more crudely myself years earlier. If you know that you are in truth a Magus, then consider them well, for this is the state of being that you now assume - a state of being attained by only eleven other beings. This is a distinction beyond perfection, for attainment of perfection is a characteristic of the Magister Templi. It is a distinction beyond all honor, beyond reward, beyond compensation. Others may honor you or they may not, but you will be a Magus just the same.

If on the other hand you know that you are not a Magus that the phenomena of Set-III and thereafter are IV° and not V°, then I warn you most emphatically not to accept the purple medallion, for to do so would destroy you.

The decision is yours, and as you decide, and as the Temple of Set Recognizes that decision, so I send you my encouragement, endorsement, and confidence.

Norton answered that he felt himself legitimately a Magus by these criteria. Hence I decided I had no reason to be concerned for the definition of the V°.
Norton’s few communiques to the IV°+ concerning Per-t were vague concerning its definition, but he said that he was preparing a major presentation and explanation for Set-IV. Probably the most coherent statement concerning Per-t was written by Magister James Lewis in a 7/28/81 letter to III°s C. Moffatt, Cole, and Folkler:

... Our closest meaning will be “manifestation”, because it is higher man who will be seen in Manifestation through man!

Per-t is a refinement of Indulging the Will to Come Into Being as one of the eternally evolving gods. Per-t is an occult (hidden) thing, for it must be an individual work first and foremost before it’s done in concert.

The question which comes immediately to mind is: “What will Manifest?” And here it can get a bit ominous, for which of us is 100% free of some flaw, insecurity, or weakness? I’ll be the first to admit that I have a few here and there, but I can also state with the voice of experience that initiation in Maat purifies. ["Is initiation so horrible?” Yes and no.]

At this point I would refer you to Key #1, 7th paragraph: I surmise it is possible to manifest an anomaly. Read that last again, and then go back to Key #1. Is it a sure thing that a mutant would horribly bloom? Not if initiation is used along with an awareness of the self and Maat. And not if one is constantly, actively reaching for the higher goals. But it seems it can happen though even a minor flaw is permitted to take root.

If this leaves you with a feeling of being at unknown and unmarked crossroads, let me suggest this: Be neither overly optimistic nor pessimistic. Utilize balance. Magister Seago once said: “For years I have been harping on the necessity of keeping one’s balance.” I personally feel there cannot be too much emphasis placed on the “balance factor”. It is a basic necessity to living and one of the safeguards against mutation.

Upon Barrett’s surprise resignation from the Temple in May 1982 and my consequent reappointment as High Priest, I decided that the II° test and the “Order Without Law” policies as enforced, mandatory systems in the Temple should go immediately. “I do not consider that the intent of these systems was bad, or even that the systems as implemented were total failures,” I said in my first official letter to the III°+ on 6/2. They could be retained as voluntary devices, in whole or part, for intelligent initiatory usage. I continued:

The immediate impact of my policy changes in these areas is to return the Temple to a “maximum freedom of action and expression” mode as it was in its earliest years. In general, anything not explicitly prohibited by the By-Laws is O.K. This presupposes that each and every member of the Priesthood will use his or her powers with intelligence, maturity, kindness, discretion, consideration, openness, courtesy, common sense, and an ever-present regard for the sacred nature of the office he or she holds. As High Priest I intend to seek the greatest possible latitude for you to continue your own initiation and encourage that of others within the Temple’s enhancing systems.

Only then were I and the entire Temple of Set to begin to see what an iron claw of dogma Barrett and Norton had been designing for the Temple during the past year. Norton and his two Order of Ptah III°s Folkler and A. Seago objected immediately and obstinately to the removal of that claw; and Norton, Barrett, and Magister L.D. Seago commenced an operation designed to defame me and to obtain the High Priesthood for Norton so that the claw could reassert its grip.

No one was more astonished or dismayed to see this than myself. At first I could hardly believe it was taking place at all. Then the amount of poison “under the surface” of the situation proved another shock. For the first time in 13 years, I found myself actually having to argue on behalf of my own integrity in the Temple. Some III°s behaved with unprecedented impudence and arrogance - not that Magus Norton and Magister Seago set a better example for them. When the poison was finally cut out after two months of agony for the Temple, everyone was badly shaken.

What was it that made Barrett and Norton create the iron claw and resist its removal by every means in their power, fair and foul? It was, I conclude, their ultimate failure to accept the Task of a Magus, which never ceases, and their decision to redefine Xem and to initially define Per-t not as magical terms, but as mystical dogma. In The Dangers of Mysticism (Equinox #I-6), Aleister Crowley wrote:

The mystic is solitary and shut up, lacks wholesome combat. We are all schoolboys, and the football field is a perfect prophylactic of swelled head.

When the mystic meets an obstacle, he “makes believe” about it. He says it is “only illusion”. He has the morphine-maniac’s feeling of bien-être, the delusions of the general paralytic. He loses the power of looking any fact in the face; he feeds himself on his own imagination; he persuades himself of his own attainment.

If contradicted on the subject, he is cross and cattish. If I criticise Mr. X, he screams and tries to injure me behind my back; if I say that Madame Y is not exactly St. Teresa, she writes a book to prove that she is.

Such persons “swollen with wind, and the rank mist they draw, Rot inwardly, and foul contagion spread”, as Milton wrote of a less dangerous set of spiritual guides ...

Corollary to this attitude is the lack of all human virtue. The greatest magician, when he acts in his human capacity, acts as a man should. In particular he has learnt kind-heartedness and sympathy. Unselfishness is very often his long suit. Just this the mystic lacks. Trying to absorb the lower planes into the higher, he neglects the lower, a mistake no magician could make.

The fulcrum of the degree system in the Church of Satan and the Temple of Set has always been the III° - the Priesthood. The non-ordained degrees - the I° & II° - had similarly possessed a dignity of their own. Barrett and Norton attempted to reduce all three of these degrees to mere “apprenticeships”, to make the IV° a mere acceptance of the “mystical” Xem, and to grant a V° to anyone professing a “mystical” Per-t. After complying with my request for his resignation, Norton wrote to Priest Whitaker on 7/25:

I alone see Xem on a level higher than that of a Master. Second, the nature of my Task allows me a further vision that even an Ipsissimus lacks. Third, creation is the key to the manifestation of Xem, and so far only I am a working example of this neter.

Such blind megalomania is the fate of a Magus who refuses the Curse thereof, as admonished by Aleister Crowley in the previously-quoted passage from Liber B vel Magi. Mystics Barrett and Norton and those who worship at their feet have effectively cast from themselves the true essence of magical initiation.

The Masters of the Temple must now consider whether the pre-Set-3 concept of Xem may retain its standing as a V° Word despite the fall of the Magus who Uttered it. As for Per-t, it is now apparent that it never was more than a mystical fantasy, clothed in the dignity of a V° Word by Norton and Barrett and accepted as such by a trusting Temple.

As Barrett’s Recognition to the VI° proved a mockery due to his prior, secret decision to reject the Temple, so Norton’s V° is revealed in the cold light of day as a mistake honestly and sincerely accepted by the Temple, but a mistake nonetheless.

I can offer no better epilogue to the aftermath of Set-IV than the Book of Satan #II-12 from the Satanic Bible:

Whatever alleged “truth” is proven by results to be but an empty fiction, let it be unceremoniously flung into the outer darkness, among the dead gods, dead empires, dead philosophies, and other useless lumber and wreckage!
The heritage of the Order of the Trapezoid extends back through various secret societies and Orders of the non-Mediterranean, northwest European tradition. It would be misleading, however, to lump the Order of the Trapezoid with every pagan, Druidic, or “Odinist” movement which may have existed in the past. The Left-Hand Path is significant by its focus upon the unique, personal psyche, not upon submergence of the conscious self in pagan nature-worship. [Initiates of the Order may study this distinction in some detail in Franz Winkler’s For Freedom Destined (#14U).] Hence we focus much of our research on the Ahnenerbe (the secret magical organization within the infamous SS), the turn-of-the-century Thule Gesellschaft, and the medieval Vehm. Information concerning any of these organizations is very difficult for the outsider to uncover, but the O.Tr. has access to archives whose existence is scarcely known to conventional historians and academics. Much of our information concerning the Vehm comes from archives of the Ahnenerbe concerned with the history and significance of the Wewelsburg in Westphalia.

The Wewelsburg Castle is built on the site of ancient Saxon fortifications described in the Annals of the Saxons. Ahnenerbe archaeologists estimated those fortifications to have been used in King Henry I’s defense against the Hungarian invaders in 930, but their first reliable dating comes from 1123, when an anonymous chronicler reported Count Friedrich von Arnsberg to have constructed a stone stronghold over the Saxon ruins. In 1301 the Bishop of Paderborn Otto von Rietberg acquired the territory from the Counts von Waldeck, who had built a new stone hall on the Wewelsburg. Archbishop Theodore von Fürstenberg constructed the present castle in 1604-7. It was damaged heavily by Swedish artillery during the Thirty Years’ War (1618-1648) and had fallen into serious neglect by 1815, when the North Tower was struck and nearly destroyed by lightning. When the SS acquired the Wewelsburg as its inner sanctum in 1933, it was the North Tower that Heinrich Himmler reconstructed and remodeled as the “Mittelpunkt der Welt”.

Directly above the subterranean Hall of the Dead/“Walhalla” (location of the XVII/1982 Wewelsburg Working) is the Marble Hall (Marmorsaal), a circular chamber constructed by Himmler to replace the original chapel of the castle. There has been much speculation concerning the design and purpose of the Marble Hall [as has also been the case of the “Walhalla”]. Not until my visit to the castle for the Wewelsburg Working did I gain access to documents and other information clearing up much of the confusion and mystery.

The peculiar design of the Marble Hall is inspired by the controversial Hall of the Grail which Alfred Roller (set designer for Max Reinhardt - see my Church of Satan, Chapter #24) created on Adolf Hitler’s orders for the 1934 Parsifal at Bayreuth. Set in the center of the red Italian marble floor is a black/green marble disk from which extend twelve Sig-runes sinister (left-handed, bending like the letter “Z”). This odd design has usually been explained by bewildered scholars as a “solar glyph”, but in fact it is one of the secret sigils of the Westphälischen Femgerichte, better known as the Vehm. The Marble Hall was thus created to serve a dual purpose: that of shrine for the Grail [of which more remains to be said] and of formal court for the deliberations of the SS’ most esoteric affairs. Original SS blueprints for the North Tower reveal the Marble Hall itself to be a chamber eventually to be concealed beneath the planned main ceremonial hall for the tower, the Gruppenführersaal (SS-Generals’ Hall). On March 31, 1945 the Wewelsburg was blown up on Himmler’s orders to prevent its secrets from falling into the hands of the Allies. SS-Major Heinz Macher, holder of the Knight’s Cross with Oak Leaves, succeeded in burning out the entire castle - except for the Marble Hall and the Walhalla, whose 20.6-meter stone/concrete walls resisted destruction.

The Vehm did not yield its secrets easily, even to the Ahnenerbe. Many myths and legends have grown up around its “secret tribunals”, most of which portray it as an evil shadow on ancient Westphalia (something akin to the Sicilian Mafia or American Ku Klux Klan). Sir Walter Scott’s House of Aspen and translations of Goethe’s Götz von Berlichingen exemplify this approach, as does the most recent sensationalistic treatment by Nigel Pennick in Hitler’s Secret Sciences. In actuality, however, the Vehm represented almost the only guarantor of justice during the most anarchic period of German history, and its proceedings compared favorably with those of other systems of justice in medieval Europe.

To understand the phenomenon of the Vehmgerichte, one must first know something about the political and cultural climate in that period of medieval Germany.

The Emperor Charlemagne (r. 771-814 CE) devoted some 30 years to a war against the Saxons in the north, finally conquering them in 785 [Pennick’s dates ion #14M are in error], destroying the sacred column of Irmin, and forcing them to accept Christianity. Some 14th/15th century writers, such as the Dominican Henry of Hervorden, attributed the creation of the Vehm to Charlemagne as a governing device. Henry’s account is the apparent source of Pennick’s dating of the Vehm to 772, but there is no confirming evidence of Vehm action prior to the 13th century.

Medieval Westphalia was somewhat larger than the present-day German province of that name. It generally embraced the “red earth” lands of old Saxony, between the Rhine and Weser, south to Hesse and north to what is today Holland. After Charlemagne’s conquest this region began to suffer increasingly under Viking raids, most pronounced during the reign of Louis “the German” (843-876). Louis responded by according greater authority to the Dukes of Saxony, the first being Count Ludolf of Gandersheim. One of the more famous Dukes was the first of the Saxon kings of Germany, Henry I “the Fowler” (919-936), whom Heinrich Himmler would later claim as a previous incarnation. Henry drove off an invasion by the Magyar Hungarians in 933, and his character was romanticized by Richard Wagner in the opera Lohengrin.

After the reign of Henry III “the Black” (1039-1056), there ensued periods of instability and insurrection in northern Germany, with a succession of comparatively weak Dukes and rival warlords holding regional power interspersed with strong monarchs, most notably Frederick I “Barbarosa” (1152-1190). The death of Conrad IV in 1254 brought about the “Great Interregnum” (1254-1273) that marked the end of the medieval Holy Roman Empire. There followed a period of relative weakness in the monarchy until 1493, when the accession of Maximillian I brought the Hapsburgs into power.

It is therefore not surprising that the first historical record of the Vehm dates to 1267, when Engelbert, Count of the Mark, freed one Gervin of Kinkenrode from the feudal obligations of his inheritance of Broke in the County of Mark, pronounced at Berle in a court in the presence of the Vehmenotes (initiates of the Vehm). In 1280 the Vehmenotes are mentioned in another document, following which there are many records of their activities and institutions.
Like “Baphomet”, the origins of the term “Vehm” are clouded in mystery and antiquity, and Pennick shies away from a definitive explanation. Order of the Trapezoid sources include suggestions that its roots come from Fahne (standard), Femen (to skin), Fehde (feud), the Latin Vemi (væ mihi = woe is me), the northern Ve or Vnem (holy), the old German Vitte (prudence), Vette (punishment), the Salic law Fimmiha, and/or the Swedish Fem/ Islandic Fimm (five = the number of judges in a Vehm court). Most probably it derives from the Latin Fama (fame), referring to the Vehm’s prerogative for summoning persons to justice on grounds of their infamous reputations alone, without an accuser being required. Fem is moreover an old German term for “condemnation”; hence such courts could loosely be titled “criminal courts”. Alternately they were called Secret Tribunals (Heimliche Gerichte), Silent Tribunals (Stillgerichte), or Forbidden Tribunals (Verbotene Gerichte). [In some of the old records “Acht” appears in place of “Gerichte”].

Each tribunal of the Vehm was presided over by a Stuhlherr (tribunal lord, lord of the seat [of judgment]), who sometimes appointed a Count (Freigraf) to preside in his place. Next to the Count were the Assessors (Schöppen), divided into knights and commoners since according to feudal custom one could be judged only by one’s peers.

By the 14th-15th centuries, from which come the only reliable Vehm records, some 100,000 had been initiated. After their initiation Schöppen were called Wissende (“those who know”) or Vehmenotes. For his initiation before the Freigraf, each Schöppe would appear bareheaded for questioning, then kneel with the thumb and forefinger of his right hand on a sword and an execution-rope and utter the following oath:

I promise on the holy marriage that I will henceforth aid, keep, and conceal the Holy Vehm, from wife and child, from father and mother, from sister and brother, from fire and wind, from all that the Sun shines on and the rain covers, from all that is between sky and ground, especially from the man who knows the law, and will bring before this free tribunal, under which I sit, all that belongs to the secret jurisdiction of the emperor, whether I know it to be true myself or have heard it from trustworthy people, whatever requires correction or punishment, whatever is Vehm-free (i.e. a crime committed in the county), that it may be judged or, with the consent of the accuser, be put off in grace; and will not cease to do so for love or for fear, for gold, silver, or precious stones; and will strengthen this tribunal and jurisdiction with all my five senses and power; and that I do not take on me this office for any cause other than for the sake of right and justice; moreover that I will ever further and honor this free tribunal more than any other free tribunals; and what I thus promise will I steadfastly and firmly keep, so help me God and his Holy Gospel.

The secret sign of the Vehm - the solar “wheel” later to be inlaid into the floor of the Grail Hall of the Wewelsburg by Heinrich Himmler - was then communicated to the new initiate. [Pennick’s recounting of alleged secret signs such as the initials “SSGG” and a dagger turned towards oneself on a table are unsubstantiated by O.Tr. sources.]

Initiation into the Vehm brought with it both the duty and the right to track down criminals and bring them to justice before a Vehm court - or to execute them immediately if caught in the act. Those outlawed or Vervehmt by the court were hanged on trees, not gallows, to demonstrate the Vehm authority to carry out its sentences anywhere in the land.

Throughout Westphalia agents of the Vehm operated freely, since the populace knew that injury to a Vehm initiate would result in the offender’s certain death. Similarly abuse of the Vehm oath was virtually nonexistent, since the Masters of the Vehm knew that the Order’s success depended upon the populace’s perception of it as a dispenser of justice, not a means of persecution. Death was the penalty for breaking the Vehm oath, and Æneas Sylvias, secretary to Frederick III (1440-1493), wrote that no one had ever broken that oath. The Vehm he went on to describe as “grave men and lovers of right and justice”, a characterization generally echoed by other chroniclers of his time. The picture emerges of a system of what Americans would call “frontier justice”, administered by representatives from a number of social classes all sworn to secrecy and integrity, owing nominal allegiance to the German feudal monarch but in fact assessing each case on its particular merits. In point of fact each German emperor, at the time of his coronation at Aix-la-Chapelle, was also initiated into the Vehm by the Count of Dortmund.

Exempted from Vehm concern were clergy, nobles of ducal or higher rank [because of the difficulty of providing peer judgment at such levels], women and children [because of their sex & age], and heathens & Jews [because of their unworthiness]. Otherwise those accused of acts forbidden by the Vehm - such as murder, adultery, rape, and treason - could be summoned before the nearest court to answer the charges. Those who refused to appear voluntarily were declared vehmbar and were thus subject to immediate seizure by any tribunal.

Vehm courts were usually held in the open under an Oak tree [as again illustrated in Act I of Lohengrin] and generally in the morning as is customary with German courts. Legends of secret Vehm “inquisitions” in subterranean castle-chambers at midnight are tantalizing but unsubstantiated. In fact Vehm courts differed from Inquisitional proceedings in a number of features, including the judges’ inclination towards mercy, the right of appeal to higher Vehm courts, the right to be heard and to present witnesses in one’s own defense, and a generally unbiased trial atmosphere. Appeals were heard once a year, at the Vehm Order court which met at either Dortmund or Arensburg.

There is no reliable date for the termination of the Vehm’s activities. As a creature of necessity it grew in influence to provide for justice where none existed, and as the Hapsburg Dynasty grew in strength and jurisdiction, the necessity for the Vehm faded away. Within another century it had become the stuff of legends, and today knowledge of it is all but nonexistent.

Why should the O.Tr. regard the Vehm as one of our earliest predecessors? Not because we are cruel, because the Vehm was not excessive in its deterrents or punishments given the violence and callousness of the middle ages. But perhaps because it took a solitary stand for justice at a time when neither church nor state insisted upon it, and because it considered justice not just a social convenience but a sacred duty, to whose service a sacred oath would be sworn. At a time when many other areas of Europe were ravaged by outlaws, brigands, robber barons, and corrupt feudal monarchs, Westphalians could breathe free and walk their land without fear. For this the Vehm deserves an honorable mention in history. Profane historians may disdain it, but the ghosts of its initiates may raise their mead-horns in the halls of the Order of the Trapezoid.
Appendix 61: Project Star Gate: $20 Million Up in Smoke and Mirrors

- by Michael A. Aquino VI°, GM.Tr.
Runes #II-2, March 1984)
Order of the Trapezoid

[The original title of this article in Runes was “ESP and the Electromagnetic Spectrum”. I later revised and expanded it for publication under the “Project Star Gate” name in The Intelligencer: Journal of U.S. Intelligence Studies, Volume 11, Number 2 - Winter 2000 of the Association of Former Intelligence Officers (AFIO). It is reprinted here in that version.]

For some time now I have trudged through the wilderness of ESP, like Diogenes with his lantern, searching for bedrock amidst all of the Uri Geller stage magic and Jeanne Dixon tabloid fluff. The nonsense that still appears in “respectable” print never ceases to amaze [and amuse] me - for example Targ & Harary’s Mind Race (1984). Targ is a Stanford Research Institute physicist who says that he has worked for a decade on a “multi-million-dollar program of psychic research financed by the Defense Department and intelligence agencies” - retitled in 1995 “Project Star Gate”.

Targ’s pet project consisted of “remote viewing” experiments, on which I was eventually briefed at the State Department. It was an eyeball-roller, not only because the statistical data SRI offered proved nothing, but also because the transmission of visual information to the brain simply doesn’t occur outside the visible spectrum. Light-waves from the central fountain in Washington Square Park (alleged to have been “seen” by one of Targ’s subjects) are atmospherically diffused long before reaching Palo Alto, California.

There’s much we don’t know about the brain’s internal design, but how information travels into and around it is no mystery at all. Electricity - the same stuff that makes flashlights work. Please note that the electrical impulses rocking around in your head are extremely weak: To light a flashlight bulb you would have to generate about 30 million times your present level of brain current.

Fascinating experiments in ESB (Electrical Stimulation of the Brain) have been done by Dr. José Delgado of Yale University. Delgado’s probes, using tiny amounts of current, were capable of changing moods, stimulating memories, and even causing motor actions despite the conscious will of the subject to resist. If the human brain were not well-insulated against external electricity [which it is], you would have an explosion of utterly arbitrary thoughts every time you drove under a high-tension wire or scuffed your shoes on the carpet.

Reality check time:

(1) Coherent visible light waves (a visual “picture” of something) don’t travel through the atmosphere without progressive distortion and disintegration. “Remote viewing” at the extreme distances claimed flatly violates the laws of physics.
Unamplified electrical brainwaves can’t be picked up past EEG electrodes pasted onto your body. Just as obviously they don’t jump between heads, much less across rooms or entire countries. And even the EEG detection of a brainwave is far too crude to pick out a specific thought or mental image.

If the Pentagon and the intelligence community did in fact blow $20 million on “psychic” snake-oil, P.T. Barnum and Harry Houdini must be rolling merrily around in their graves.

So what if anything is possible in this field? How and why?

The electrical energy in your brain occurs in waves measured according to cycles per second (CPS). 1-3 CPS = delta waves, characteristic of deep sleep. 4-7 CPS = theta waves, characteristic of high emotion, violence, and frustration. 8-12 CPS = alpha waves, characteristic of meditation, relaxation, and “searching for patterns”. 13-22 CPS = beta waves, characteristic of frontal brain activity, deliberate effort, and logical thought.

We’ll come back to brain waves in a moment, but first a word about another principle: resonance. Resonance is a very interesting concept and deserves a precise definition:

1. a vibration of large amplitude in a mechanical or electrical system caused by a relatively small periodic stimulus of the same or nearly the same period as the natural vibration period of the system.

2. the intensification and enriching of a musical tone by supplementary vibration that is either sympathetically or mechanically induced.

In the course of my research I examined the work of Dr. Nikola Tesla, one of recent history’s more charming “mad scientists” who rattled the cage of “recognized” science with, among other things, experiments in resonance. Biographer Margaret Cheney relates in Tesla: Man Out of Time:

He attached an oscillator no larger than an alarm clock 2’ long and 2” thick. “For a long time nothing happened, but at last the great steel link began to tremble, increased its trembling until it dilated and contracted like a beating heart, and finally broke.” Sledgehammers could not have done it, he told a reporter, crowbars could not have done it, but a fusillade of taps, no one of which would have harmed a baby, did it.

Pleased with this beginning, he put the little oscillator in his coat pocket. Finding a half-built steel building in the Wall Street district, 10 stories high with nothing up but the steelwork, he clamped the oscillator to one of the beams. “In a few minutes I could feel the beam trembling. Gradually the trembling increased in intensity and extended throughout the whole great mass of steel. Finally the structure began to creak and weave, and the steelworkers came to the ground panic-stricken, believing that there had been an earthquake. Before anything serious happened, I took off the oscillator, put it in my pocket, and went away. But if I had kept on 10 minutes more, I could have laid that building flat in the street. And with the same oscillator I could drop Brooklyn Bridge in less than an hour.”

Now a little-known but interesting fact is that brain-waves are subject to the principle of resonance. Energy-waves reaching your brain through any medium - eyes, ears, or flesh - will tend to induce your brain-waves to cycle at the same wave-length. A common example of visual resonance is the seizures that some people experience when exposed to a light flickering at 10 CPS.
The audio spectrum - being the range of sound vibrations which human hearing can consciously detect - is from 15 CPS (bass) to 20,000 CPS (treble). The infrasonic range - 10-15 CPS - is too low to be consciously detected but is nonetheless capable of inducing resonance in the brain. Below infrasound [and sometimes encompassing it] are Extremely Low Frequency (ELF) waves, which are powerful and durable enough to travel through the Earth for communication with submerged submarines.

The relaxation which you paradoxically feel when listening to the deep, heavy throbbing of drums or bass guitars at rock concerts is the same as that felt by American Indians listening to the large dancing-drums accompanying their ceremonial campfires. Resonance is produced which inclines your brain-waves towards alpha, and if the rate of the beat seems particularly pleasing to you, I recommend that you take your pulse. My guess is that it will be close (somewhere around 70 CPM), which your system will find subconsciously soothing. [If you wish to calm a crying infant, rock its cradle at about that speed, or hold it to your breast so that it can hear the beating of your heart. Try it!]

Theta happens to be a very curious range. Soviet research into PK phenomena alleged that PK activity is generally associated with a sudden surge of theta activity at the 4 CPS level. Theta activity is also more common in the brains of young children than in those of adults, which may have something to do with the rumor (which I cannot call more than that) that “poltergeist” activity is usually catalyzed by the presence of a child in the house.

Particularly during the post-World War II era, American and Soviet intelligence agencies weren’t very clubby about exchanging any information, and especially not research in delicate/sensitive areas like mind-control techniques. On the other hand there was a lively dialogue on psi between West and East in civilian scientific circles, much to the anxiety and annoyance of Green Door types.

Here in San Francisco Michael Murphy, founder of the famous Esalen Institute in Big Sur, and his associate Steve Donovan created the Transformation Project, a mammoth database of files - rooms and rooms of meticulous file cabinets in those pre-desktop-computer days - to correlate the world’s research on ESP. Murphy had dialogued extensively and exhaustively with Soviet ESP scientists, traveling widely in the USSR throughout the 1970s, and wrote up the results up in thinly disguised “fiction” such as An End to Ordinary History (1982).

Via the Transformation Project file library, I was able to review vast amounts of records and published results of various government and university experiments in the field of ESP from both the Western & Eastern Blocs as well as non-aligned countries. The range and scope of the TP files went far beyond anything in the intelligence agency and Defense Department libraries on this topic.

One of the most rigorous and conclusive analyses was conducted in 1977 by E. Balanovski and J.G. Taylor of the Department of Mathematics, King’s College, London. The TP files contained detailed reports of their findings, including an extensive article in Nature magazine #276, November 2, 1978.

After having reviewed previous experiments attempting to test ESP for EM emission, B&T declared their dissatisfaction because of imprecise test conditions, exclusion of parts of the electromagnetic spectrum (EMS), and inadequate write-ups of the results. They determined to cover the entire EMS, and to do so under the most rigorous test conditions possible.

The battery of sensors they assembled included skin electrodes, electrometers, magnetometers, loop antennae, crystal detectors, horn antennae, thermocouples, electric thermometers, infrared detectors, and ultraviolet detectors. Many of these sensors overlapped one another’s frequency range, and altogether they covered the entire EMS from 0 to $3 \times 10^5$ GHz! As can be imagined, before the first experiment could be conducted, extensive test-running of all these sensors had occurred in order to record and filter out the irrelevant EM “noise” in the test areas, including passing cars and TV/radio station broadcasts. Readings were recorded on strip chart recorders, video tape recorders, and direct photographs of oscilloscope and frequency analyzer screens. The efficiency of this battery of devices was quickly evident:

Needle-Rotation: (2 subjects, 2 controls, 92 trials) A needle was suspended by an extra-fine nylon thread inside a clear perspex cylinder which was clamped securely to a nylon bench. Movement was achieved by the subjects moving their hands and wrists back and forth around the cylinder at about 5 cm from it. In each of the 12 sessions the subjects produced a $60^\circ$ average rotation of the needle, sometimes up to $200^\circ$. We established that a rotation of $50^\circ$ was produced by a potential of 2 mV with respect to earth at frequencies 0-1 MHz. For up to $60^\circ$ rotation, skin electrode measurements on 2 earthed subjects indicated a skin potential of only 0.2 mV. We concluded that the rotation could not be caused by E or H fields from 0-1 MHz produced by the subject’s body. When an anti-static ointment was rubbed over the surface of the cylinder, the whole phenomenon vanished, indicating that the effect was due to charge induced on the needle from the outer surface of the cylinder. The VTR showed the subjects inadvertently touching the surface of the cylinder in their attempts to move the needle. Further tests showed that the amount of rotation produced was directly correlated to the amount of charge on the outer surface of the cylinder.

“ESP” rotation of a straw atop a glass of water inside a glass dome was traced to convection current inside the dome produced by the heat of a nearby electric heater. No EM activity was detected. “ESP” rotation of a compass needle was also EM-free. The amount of rotation was then found to decrease with increasing distance between the compass and the subject’s body according to the inverse square law. It also decreased when steel sheets were inserted between the subject and the compass. Conclusion: electrostatic charge once again.

Uri Geller Dept.: When hooked up to the array of sensors, metal-benders proved to be 100% unable to bend metal, either by contact or at a distance. When the attached sensors were removed, there were some apparent successes - but the remote sensors still detected no EM signal:

Attempts were made to cause bending of a strip of metal or plastic by feeding EM energy into the strip. A Parodynamics 10 GHz X-band microwave source was used (50 kW peak power, 0.6 or 2.1 microns pulse, variable p.r.f. with external modulation). Strips of various metals, plastic, and various crystals were irradiated, and vibration of the specimens was observed at the modulation frequency in agreement with surface acoustic wave generation. Strips of aluminum, copper, and brass cut to lengths appropriate to the internal modulation showed resonance effects (at 1-3 KHz) when inserted into the waveguide of the X-band source. Although energy was thus absorbed in the strips, no bending ever occurred.

The results show that no unusual EM emission from the subject’s body was observed over the entire spectrum. If there had been low frequency signals, they could not account for the phenomenon. First, their focusing power is very poor. Second, the energy transfer is inefficient. Third, the signal levels observed are too low by a factor of about $10^9$ to explain the effect. The best candidate would be the microwave range 1-5 GHz; at these frequencies the focusing power is good and the energy transfer can be efficient for the generation of surface acoustic waves, as the skin depth in metals at these frequencies is negligible. But no microwave emission higher than the black-body radiation at the human body temperature was ever detected. Microwave radiation emitted by the body corresponds to a power level of $10^{-14}$ W. Therefore EM radiation cannot explain the apparent metal-bending occurring in the absence of the contact and television sensors.
The full sensor array further detected no unusual EM radiation during attempts at “psychic healing”, and statements by “healers” and “patients” alike of heat sensations were not verified by any of the temperature sensors. No unusual EM activity was detected during dowsing experiments either. Dowsers who claimed sensitivity to magnetic fields down to $10^{-5}$ G were tested and found insensitive to the presence of 100G!

Contrary to 1995 media stories, word of U.S. government dalliance with ESP actually leaked out in the early 1980s. In Mind Wars (1984) Ronald McRae, a Jack Anderson associate clearly having a great time with the “Project Star Gate” antics, observed:

In the ’70s the Navy signed a $50,703 contract with SRI to determine whether psychics could detect remote EM sources. Yet the Navy flatly denies that it has “ever used psychics to track submarines”. It describes one psychic antisubmarine project as an “investigation of the ability of certain individuals to perceive remote, faint, EM stimuli at a noncognitive level of awareness”. SRI delivered the final report in 1978, claiming success with several psychics.

McRae continued that, “despite its denials, the Navy has thus far employed at least 34 psychics to track Soviet ships and submarines”, and a number of psychics - like “Madame Zodiac” of Washington, D.C. - dutifully trooped forward with stories of nervous, chain-smoking Navy officers hunched over their crystal ball tables while awaiting word from Beyond of the location of the nearest Soviet sub. McRae quoted pop-occult sociologist Marcello Truzzi, to wit: “Psychic powers might have extremely important military and political consequences should the enemy be able to use them to break through national security defenses.” Woo, woo.

The Army first flirted with this particular snipe-hunt in 1980, when an article on “psychotronic warfare” appeared in Military Review, the journal of the prestigious Command & General Staff College. This was another Gomer Pyle “gaw-ul-lee!” article with absolutely no hard evidence to back it up. Not to be outdone by the Navy and Madame Zodiac, however, the Army in 1984 launched a 5-month experiment called Project Jedi. Named after the Star Wars movie knights who were able to perform exotic mental/magical feats, Project Jedi sought to use neurolinguistic programming (NLP) as a new way of teaching recruits to fire weapons. This was done through psychological analysis of the thought-patterns of expert shooters as they fired. 23 soldiers were then trained to fire, some according to the NLP “guided imagery” and others per conventional instruction. Training time was reduced almost by half for the NLP group.

In 1985 forty soldiers undergoing Russian language training were divided into two groups, one of which was trained according to a technique called “Suggestopedia”. This involved Tai Chi-like calisthenics, followed by mental relaxation & breathing exercises, followed by “guided imagery” a la Project Jedi. The bottom line was nyet: “Suggestopedia” didn’t work.

There were, however, still more psychic fish to fry. In 1985 The Army commissioned a two-year, $425,000 report from the National Research Council, an agency of the National Academy of Sciences. Among the topics reviewed were stress management, biofeedback, accelerated learning, psychokinesis (PK), extra-sensory perception (ESP) and dear old “remote viewing”.

On December 8, 1987 the NRC report, entitled Enhancing Human Performance, was released. It concluded that most of the unconventional techniques were “scientifically unsupportable”, but that sleep-learning, guided imagery, and “super learning” programs were viable.

Obviously this didn’t even slow “Project Star Gate”, which rolled merrily along taking the taxpayers on its $20 million “remote viewing” amusement park ride. For a final nail in the coffin of “remote viewing” we turn again to the B&T series of experiments:

Tests on human sensitivity to low levels of EM radiation: Five subjects were seated in a room with either a loop antenna or a horn antenna placed 50 cm from them. The source was in an adjoining room to avoid visual or auditory cueing, conscious or unconscious. The sources used were a tunable RF source in the 220-950 MHz range with a power output of 1 mW and a tunable MW source (both pulsed and CW) in the 6-17 GHz range with a power level of 5 mW. The switching on or off of the source was randomized by tossing a coin, the level of success according to chance thus being 0.5. The subject was then asked to sense the source being on or off. The results were not significantly different from chance.

Telepathy/Distant Viewing: We only investigated integrated power levels, as enough power has to be radiated before a signal can achieve its desired effect, whatever modulation the signal may have. We investigated three subjects who claimed telepathic abilities and one who claimed distant-viewing capabilities [in which a subject is supposed to be able to describe accurately a remote site without being physically there]. No unusual EM signals were detected, nor were the subjects successful in telepathic transmissions.

We have tried to detect EM signals emitted by people, and in particular the Fourier spectrum of such signals, to test the reality of ESP phenomena. All experiments failed to yield any unusual EM radiation. It is possible to conceive transmission of EM energy from one person to another, or of emission by one person in a manner undetectable by the apparatus we have used. This would have been so if very brief pulses of EM energy were used in such signalling with times less than the response time of the corresponding apparatus at the frequency used. There are no known mechanisms in the body able to produce such signals at the power levels required to produce the effects. We have also found that humans are insensitive to low levels of EM. A possible mechanism for such signalling is therefore clearly ruled out for telepathy and distant-viewing. The EM levels emitted to achieve metal-bending [in the microwave range to achieve the desired focusing] are joules, and there is no known mechanism in the body to achieve a peak power output of GW; it is difficult to suppose that this would be possible without severe tissue damage.

Bottom line: By itself the human brain can neither send nor receive the stuff of which specific thoughts are made - save through the media of the physical senses. Therefore extra-sensory perception does not occur, nor do purely mental efforts to produce physical effects (psychokinesis/PK). “Successes” in these fields are either coincidental, the results of non-mental physical phenomena (magnetic fields, gravity, etc.), or deliberate deception by clever stage-magic trickery a la Uri Geller and Madame Zodiac.

The principle of resonance as discussed above is not invalidated, however. Even though EM waves may not be detectable by human consciousness, they can still affect human brain-waves by inducing resonance at similar cyclical rates. So the possibility of subconscious, resonance-triggered changes to one’s general mental state (alpha, beta, theta, or delta) remains.

Psychological Operations specialists know that it is the conscious mind which must be reached for opinion or behavior modification, and that it is reached reliably and predictably through the normal communicative senses. Similarly the mind expresses itself through these same senses, and through media technology we have developed a multitude of ways to amplify and transmit such expressions. Communication between minds is no longer the problem; it is the content of that communication and the ethics underlying it which challenge us, particularly as old nation-state, ethnic, cultural, and social standards continue to mutate in this final decade of the 20th century.
Scientists to study synthetic telepathy
Researchers get grant to develop communication system based on thoughts, not speech

A team of UC Irvine scientists has been awarded a $4 million grant from the U.S. Army Research Office to study the neuroscientific and signal-processing foundations of synthetic telepathy.

The research could lead to a communication system that would benefit soldiers on the battlefield and paralysis and stroke patients, according to lead researcher Michael D’Zmura, chair of the UCI Department of Cognitive Sciences.

“Thanks to this generous grant we can work with experts in automatic speech recognition and in brain imaging at other universities to research a brain-computer interface with applications in military, medical and commercial settings,” D’Zmura says.

The brain-computer interface would use a noninvasive brain imaging technology like electroencephalography to let people communicate thoughts to each other. For example, a soldier would “think” a message to be transmitted and a computer-based speech recognition system would decode the EEG signals. The decoded thoughts, in essence translated brain waves, are transmitted using a system that points in the direction of the intended target.

“Such a system would require extensive training for anyone using it to send and receive messages,” D’Zmura says. Initially, communication would be based on a limited set of words or phrases that are recognized by the system; it would involve more complex language and speech as the technology is developed further.”

D’Zmura will collaborate with UCI cognitive science professors Ramesh Srinivasan, Gregory Hickok and Kourosh Saberi. Joining the team are researchers Richard Stern and Vijayakumar Bhagavatula from Carnegie Mellon University and David Poeppel from the University of Maryland.

The grant comes from the U.S. Department of Defense’s Multidisciplinary University Research Initiative program, which supports research involving more than one science and engineering discipline. Its goal is to develop applications for military and commercial uses.
Appendix 62: Dark Deco

- by Michael A. Aquino VI°, GM.Tr.
Runes #II-4, July 1984
Order of the Trapezoid

[This article was later reprinted in The Sophisticate, Journal of the Art Deco Society of California, Autumn 1984; and then in the Los Angeles magazine Antique & Collectibles, October 1984.]

The current interest in Art Deco often tends to be explained as an offshoot of the general fascination with 20th-century nostalgia-art. The style’s characteristic features have been explained by Bevis Hiller (in The World of Art Deco) as influences from Egyptian and pre-Columbian architecture; an emphasis on straight lines, tight curves, and sharp angles; and a fascination with speed and streamlining associated with the dawning machine age.

What is not so clear is why this particular type of art should exercise the allure that it does. Art Deco is never regarded with ambivalence; people are either obsessed with it or repelled by it. Since the reasons for its powerful effect are obscure, Art Deco always has something of the mysterious about it. It suggests that there are geometric and curvilinear forces at work which humans cannot quite understand, but which somehow have been captured and frozen in a particular piece of sculpture, furniture, or architecture. As with gravity or magnetism, the viewer cannot see the thing itself; he must be content with a glimpse of its “trail” in the material world. Hence one’s interest in collecting Art Deco derives at least in part from a desire to assert mastery over the unknown. If it cannot be explained, then at least it can be controlled or possessed.

It is perhaps not surprising that Art Deco came into being during the heyday of Expressionism, another “mysterious” art form. If the most shocking Expressionist statements came from Weimar Germany, the difference between them and the more subtle impact of Art Deco might be explained by the greater French and American cultural influence in the latter. Yet both shared a common theme: the reduction of objects, shapes, and features to an “expression” of their essence - what Plato referred to as a “Form” or “First Principle”. Expressionist art and Art Deco are thus aesthetically satisfying because they appear to lay bare the controlling forces beneath and behind superficial images; they show the thing as it “really is”, not as it appears to be after being laden with peripheral decorations.

Art, goes the old cliché, is in the eyes of the beholder. One might amend this to suggest that a work of art has no significance in itself; its power lies rather in the emotions, sensations, and revelations it evokes in the consciousness of each observer. Thus art is a trigger, a stimulus to the soul. It affirms something not about itself or even its ostensible subject, but rather about the psyche of the artist - and the observer.

Hence the Art Deco enthusiast, like the devotee of Expressionism, is by that interest making a statement about the nature of his or her soul. He or she is impatient with surface images, bored with frippery, and drawn by the weird and the outré. Art Deco portrays the human being as one secretly wishes to be: a kind of Metropolis robot[rix] with a dispassionate, cool, and cruel disposition. Art Deco is never warm, cozy, reassuring; it is glacial and impersonal. Those fearful of, dissatisfied with, or contemptuous of human emotions seek in Art Deco a mirror which will show them - and reinforce in them - only the non-human aspects of their souls.

Consider by way of illustration two well-known works of cinema art: Edgar Ulmer’s The Black Cat (1934) and Robert Fuest’s two Dr. Phibes films (1971 & 1972).

Ulmer, who had won his director’s spurs as an assistant to the great Expressionist director F.W. Murnau (Nosferatu and Faust), created a story of sexual obsession and Satanism in which only the two key antagonists - Hjalmar Poelzig (Boris Karloff) and Vitus Werdegast (Bela Lugosi) - truly comprehend the nature both of one another and of the the conflict between them. The young hero and heroine - a conspicuously naive American couple - are able to sense only that Poelzig is bad news and should be escaped from. Despite Werdegast’s efforts to help them, they mistrust him too - since he seems only slightly less menacing than Poelzig.

Of particular interest is the emphatic and overwhelming Art Deco atmosphere of Poelzig’s home. Built atop the ruins of Fortress Marmoros, site of World War I slaughter and “the greatest graveyard in the world”, it exudes a sterile chill of modernity, accented by the Deco’s seeming mockery of the steel and concrete catacombs of the underlying fortress. Hidden within those ruins are the bodies of many beautiful women, suspended in Deco glass capsules by Poelzig; and deeper still lies his secret Satanic chapel. Therein eventually occurs one of the most graphic Black Masses ever portrayed on the screen [regrettably edited in most of the versions shown on television]. Again Art Deco dominates the chamber, with an abstract double-cross surrounded by four stark, burnished-metal obelisks and an altar-sculpture consisting of a starburst of metal triangles. Upon the chapel’s floor is a giant five-pointed star, whose shocking contrasts of black and white inspire the same terror in the viewer as do the Expressionist shafts of light in The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari’s famous prison-cell scene.

The Art Deco element in The Black Cat, therefore, is a deliberate device to generate fear - to shatter any reassurance the audience might derive from familiar surroundings. Unlike the totally fantastic and distorted sets of Caligari and Der Golem, the world of The Black Cat lies within the realm of the believable because its Deco atmosphere could in fact exist. The film’s artistic strength derives substantially from its statement that Art Deco inspires and enhances much the same sort of audience disorientation as did the earlier Expressionist sets. Karloff and Lugosi are the icing on a cake that is already very sinister indeed.

In The Abominable Dr. Phibes and Dr. Phibes Rises Again Robert Fuest surrounded his outrageously artistic villain (Vincent Price) with a phantasmagoria of Art Deco interiors and artifacts, to include a dance-band of full-size clockwork robots.* Phibes’ succession of gruesome murders is accompanied by period music as well - “Charmaine”, “Dartkown Strutters Ball”, “Over the Rainbow” - and the mad doctor makes his dramatic entrances and exits on an elevating concert organ (with Deco pipes of illuminated crimson glass) to the tune of Mendelssohn’s “War March of the Priests”.

In the Phibes films, as in The Black Cat, one is stunned by how singularly supportive the Art Deco is to the desired climate of horror and the supernatural. Price is inevitably a more tongue-in-cheek rogue than Karloff or Lugosi, but the Deco is just as effective in Phibes’ London mansion and Egyptian tomb-lair as it is at Marmoros. Poelzig’s necrophilia is echoed by Phibes, who safeguards the body of his dead wife against a time when she may be revived. Until then Victoria Phibes enjoys a succession of Deco sarcophagi, including a mirrored vault beneath a sundial, a neon-lit juke box, and an Art Nouveau canopy of glass shaped like a Rolls-Royce radiator and topped with two RR flying-lady ornaments.
All this is hardly to suggest that Art Deco enthusiasts are frustrated murderers, sadists, or necrophiliacs. The style has its uplifting aspects as well. But perhaps out brief venture into the darker side of Deco has provided food for thought concerning lesser-known elements of its unique - and elusive - psychology.

PART II: DARK DECO II: HOUSE ON HAUNTED HILL
First published: Runes #III-6
October XX/1985

Without knowing what futurism is like, Johansen achieved something very close to it when he spoke of the nightmare corpse-city of R’lyeh, that was built in measureless aeons behind history by the loathsome shapes that seeped down from the dark stars. Instead of describing any definite structure or building, he dwells only on the broad impressions of vast angles and stone surfaces - surfaces too great to belong to anything right or proper for this Earth, and impious with horrible images and hieroglyphs ... Twisted menace and suspense lurked leerily in those crazily elusive angles of carven rock where a second glance showed concavity after the first showed convexity.

- H.P. Lovecraft, The Call of Cthulhu

Searchers after Dark Deco need not travel to R’lyeh (actually located on the Micronesian isle of Ponape and referred to as Nan Madol on conventional maps) to sample the Cyclopean architecture of the Great Old Ones. As you drive through the fashionable Los Feliz area of Hollywood, a glance up towards Griffith Park reveals - perched starkly on an isolated crag - what appears to be an ancient Mayan temple. A second glance belies this; its shape is too irregular and its atmosphere too sybaritic for any ordinary religious shrine. Although its dramatic presence dominates the hills and surrounding valley, few of the local residents can - or will - say much about it. One must prowl the pleasantly sordid little bookstores along Hollywood Boulevard in order to locate a faded Necronomicon setting forth the history of the structure; even then one receives suspicious looks from the furtive booksellers, clearly implying that no respectable antiquarian would presume to concern himself with such outre matters.

The edifice at 2655 Glendower Avenue, one learns, was designed by Frank Lloyd Wright in 1924 as a residence for Mr. & Mrs. Charles Ennis.

“Wright had been putting the finishing touches on it,” commented Anton LaVey in X/1975, “when his houseboy went berserk at Taliesen and killed seven people. It was said the house was cursed. He built it for a shoe magnate, and the man lost everything in the Depression. The next owner’s wife jumped off the parapet.”

After 44 years and 6 owners, the house was acquired by a Mr. G. Oliver Brown. In 1980 he donated it to the Trust for Preservation of Cultural Heritage, which has undertaken its preservation and restoration. Since the publication of “Dark Deco” in its Sophisticate, the Art Deco Society of California has been after me for more of the same. This seemed as good a reason as any for an archaeological expedition to HHH this past September.

In 1934 the Ennis House made its film debut in The Black Cat, inspiring the chillingly beautiful residence of Boris Karloff, the Satanist who preserved his paramours in glass Deco showcases. For years thereafter the house was rumored to be Karloff’s in actuality, and many a teenaged boy dared a nocturnal trespass over the wall hoping, no doubt, for a glimpse of nameless rites & unspeakable orgies within.

In 1958, presumably in an effort to improve its image, the House starred again as the House on Haunted Hill, wherein a gloating Vincent Price lures guests into vats of acid and... such. In a decadent detour it served as the residence of art director Claude Estee in the film version of Nathaniel West’s Day of the Locust, and entered science fiction in Terminal Man. Most recently it was chosen as the site for Harrison Ford’s residence in Blade Runner - with an amusing twist as noted below. If you have managed to miss all of the above [shame on you!], you may catch it once more in Howling II, wherein it is overrun with slavering werewolves.

Frank Lloyd Wright, we are told, did not do Deco - or Mayan - or Moderne - but [ahem!] Frank Lloyd Wright. If the Ennis house looks Mayan/Deco, it is thus purely coincidental. As was his practice at the time, Wright created a unique, geometrically-decorated 16” concrete block to be used within and without the building. Each block is reinforced by steel rods embedded in the concrete. This sounds like a nice idea, but when it rained the steel became wet and expanded, with the result that many of the blocks are disintegrating [and the roof leaks]. In the interests of authenticity the Trust has not stooped to the manufacture of new blocks, but when more were needed for a Blade Runner set, Hollywood cranked out a batch of fakes. Upon completion of filming these were donated to the Trust, which used them to build a Frank Lloyd Wright dog house for the Dobermans who escort trespassing teenagers briskly off the premises.

The entrance-hall with its stern stone symmetry, 6’ ceiling, and subdued lighting, does not exactly dispel the notion that one is entering a pre-Columbian tomb. We were informed by the Trust docent that Wright intended the ceiling to reflect the height of the inhabitants. Since the ceiling jumps to 22’ shortly thereafter, one can’t help wondering at the odd dimensions of said inhabitants. Happily no 22’ denizen appeared, though one of the Dobermans [at least I hope it was only a Doberman!] sent a mournful howl echoing through the passageways at about the time we reached the main hall.

If you are into geometric concrete blocks, you would be very happy here, as they are everywhere. In fact the basic difference between the inside and the outside of the house is that the inside is on the inside and the outside is on the outside. Wright wanted slate floors, but Ennis put his foot down [sorry!] and had white marble installed instead, which we were told went better with Hollywood bacchanalia of the 1920s. Wright also wanted a dark, rugged wood for the main ceilings; Ennis opted for a beautifully-finished teak. A later owner added a [Mayan/Deco?] swimming pool to the outside patio, from which - if you look out across the Hollywood Hills - you can see a large white Richard Neutra mansion glaring back at the House on Haunted Hill like Siegfried confronting Fafnir.

Even assuming that the Trust docent didn’t show us the room where Boris K. preserved his ladies, HHH is surprisingly small in terms of living space. Count: living room, dining room, kitchen, two bedrooms w/bath, and den. Wright expected southern California to be warm & sunny all the time, so there are just two small fireplaces which, considering all the concrete and glass around, ain’t ’nuff. One begins to understand why the place has changed owners so frequently: Despite its undeniable beauty and drama, cozy it isn’t. Dazzling guests is all well and good, but you also want to be able to raid the fridge in the middle of the night without barking your shins on Deco concrete, donning a coat, or taking a pratfall on the marble.

The Ennis house is occasionally confused with another house not too far away - the Ramon Novarro house built in 1928 by Lloyd Wright, son of Frank L.W., at 5699 Valley Oak Drive.

This dramatic mansion of pale concrete and hammered bronze trim was originally decorated by MGM set designer Frank Gibbons entirely in black fur and silver, and Novarro’s dinner guests were expected to complement same by wearing only black/white/silver attire. [Novarro later moved to a simple ranch-style house at 3110
Laurel Canyon where, as Kenneth Anger recounts, “his ghastly death by beating in 1968 brought to mind the bizarre crimes of Hollywood’s past. Here was a man dying, as he had lived, extravagantly, choked in his own blood - the lead Art Deco dildo which Valentino had given him 45 years earlier thrust down his throat.”

Tours of the Novarro house are not conducted, as it remains a private residence. Tours of the Ennis house are no longer conducted as of 2009, as the property is presently up for sale: http://www.ennishouse.org/ Be careful not to step in the big vat with the bubbling stuff in it.

My Dear Michael,

Enjoyed your article. However, as amusing as it was to hear you waxing lyrically at length about the significance of the decor, all much appreciated I might say, it’s important not to lose sight of the fact that this was a low-budget project designed as a vehicle for Vincent Price who, contract-wise, owed AIP three movies.

Bob Fuest (ex Art Director of note) and myself sat down over a few bottles of wine and tried to write some sense into what was then an appalling outline. Our motivation? Keep it light and tongue-in-cheek.

As a young designer in the industry (this was my third or fourth film), I happened to have a passing interest in Art Nouveau/Deco at the time and a reasonable supply of reference materials to hand in my library. It all just happened, so there.

My best wishes to you,

Appendix 63: Parastrology

- by Michael A. Aquino VI°, GM.Tr.
Runes #III-1 (January 1985) and #III-2 (March 1985)
Order of the Trapezoidt

Astrology had rather a rough time of it in the Age of Satan. First there was Anton LaVey’s essay “God in Sports Clothes -or- The Stars: Supplement for Weak Egos”. In this diatribe (ca. III/1968) Dr. LaVey focused not on the merit of astrology, but rather on its social/psychological impact:

If one considers the facts, it is easy to understand why astrology has become the popular delusion it has. A wise sorcerer “believes” in astrology, because he knows that the majority of the peoples of the civilized world believe in astrology [at least part of the time]; and if enough people are motivated by a hoax, then the hoax becomes as reality. Therefore, in the manipulation of humans who are affected by astrology, it is necessary to know how, where, and when the stars will supposedly guide their human followers so the manipulator will be waiting first in line to deal with his star-led subjects.

As all religions are the work of human minds and hands, so astrology must stand out as a monumental brainstorm on the part of one of the most Satanic enchanters of all time. Astrology always wins, because of that most effective sales appeal of all: ego, alias vanity! Everyone who has ever been exposed to astrology believes in it - at least for a few minutes - because in those few short moments of first exposure to astrology the listener is told about something he cannot ignore: himself - the most interesting, scintillating, awe-inspiring, contemplative, and emotionally acceptable subject on this green Earth!”

Warlock II° Michael A. Aquino was not much kinder. In a V/1970 issue of the Cloven Hoof I commented:

Upon turning his attention to the expanses of space that encompass his planet, man confronts the physical reality of natural infinity, a concept extremely frustrating to his desire to categorize his environment. Consequently the priests of the ancient civilizations groped for explanations of the firmament which would be sufficiently finite to uphold man’s sense of self-importance.

The result was astrology, or star-worship, which has endured in one form or another since its first major codification by the Babylonians in the 10th century BCE. Supposing the external universe to be a spherical shell circumnavigating the Earth, the astrologer-priests represented the Sun, Moon, and known planets as agents of prophecy and personality determination. Their positions within the star-beings of the zodiac were thought to exert a direct influence upon the fortunes of Earth and its inhabitants.

The zodiac itself consisted of a band of constellations extending the length of the ecliptic and approximately 9° in each perpendicular direction. Each constellation occupied a supposedly fixed position along this band, and the star-beings themselves were located according to calculations based upon the equinoxes.

Unfortunately the Babylonians’ admirable calculations did not allow for the gradual change in the tilt of Earth’s axis, with the result that the signs of the zodiac eventually ceased to coincide with their approximate constellations. Modern astrologers, therefore, proclaim not only the influence of gigantic masses of flaming rock and gas in human fortunes, but also the influence of random areas of deep space!
... Following which the Church of Satan and Temple of Set paid zero attention to astrology until this past month, when one brave astrologer from New York City, Robert Zoller, was admitted to the Temple under the sponsorship of Stephen Flowers, M.Tr. When the Executive Director showed me Zoller’s application, I said, “Astrologer, hmm? Why not send him Watson’s analysis in Supernature and see how he reacts to it? Ask him if he’s run into Playfair & Hill for good measure.”

I am ashamed to say my motives were somewhat on the order of Wile E. Coyote setting a trap for the road-runner. I expected either (a) an angry snarl from a charlatan whose balloon has been pricked, or (b) a sort of stupefied inability to come to grips with Watson’s criticisms [which are as incisive as, if somewhat more polite than Carl Sagan’s in Cosmos]. Zoller’s response left me feeling even more like W.E.C. - just after his latest r-r trap has backfired on him! Quoth Zoller:

I will have to acquire a copy of Playfair & Hill’s Cycles of Heaven before I can comment on it. Regarding Lyall Watson’s bit on astrology which you forwarded, however, I will say that it is overall a very nice piece for a non-astrologer. The tone is refreshingly balanced, and the author has done his homework.

There are, however, a few criticisms I could make. As an astrologer I see things which the general reading public might not find noteworthy. If an astrologer had written the article, it would have been done differently in spots.

Page #62: In the calculation it is actually the MC “midheaven sign” (specifically the degree of the sign) which is found first, then the ascendent. Secondly it seems to me that paragraph #2 confuses the signs with the constellations - a distinction which Watson attempts to rectify later, but which might better have been handled first [that is, in the paragraph beginning page #62: “The planets...”]. The problem is that the wobbling of the Earth’s poles causes the phenomenon known as the “precession of the equinoxes”. This results in the signs no longer coinciding with the constellations as they did [according at least to some astronomers] ca. 1 CE. This is the first thing on which astronomers fault the Western astrologer. So Watson’s statement on page #63 that the scientists cannot take exception [to the initial logic of astrology] is a bit misleading.

The following paragraph introduces the fact that there is in fact a bit of agreement between astrology and science. Watson could have gone further had he brought in the research done at Mount Sinai Hospital [and elsewhere] in NYC on what has been dubbed “chronobiology”. This new science, begun in Germany about 30 years ago, involves a study of the cycles of physiological functions in human and animal bodies. The major cycles studied are the circadian or almost-24-hour cycles exhibited by the body’s hormonal secretions. These cycles have been found to greatly affect a patient’s reaction to a given drug at a particular time. Modern physicians are finding that the same drug administered at different times may have different effects. This was known during the middle ages, and medieval physicians endeavored to intensify the effect of medicines by timing their administration according to astrological principles.

The circadian cycle seems to be due to some kind of light-sensitivity of the pineal gland which secretes a greater or lesser amount of serotonin at different times of the cycle. Besides the circadian cycle there are 28-day cycles [in both sexes] and annual cycles. All three cycles are identical with [or directly related to] the movements of the Earth on its axis, of the Moon around the Earth, and of the Earth around the Sun.

All this is known to, but not discussed by scientists. The problem faced by astrologers is that none of these cycles - nor Nelson’s work [pages #63-4], nor Gauquelin’s report of the electrolyte quality of water varying with the Lunar phase - shows how an individual’s being born at a particular time and place differentiates him from others born at other times and places. The above-mentioned influences apply to all inhabitants of Earth. Still it has led some astrologers to develop a scientifically acceptable ‘astrology of humanity’, so to speak.

Page #64, paragraph #2: Watson appears to confuse sidereal signs with tropical constellations. Does he mean Mercury in the sign or the constellation of Virgo?

Page #65, paragraph #1: Watson says that “each house occupies 30°”. This is is true only of the Equal House System, which is the oldest system but is now used by few Western astrologers. Perhaps Watson is confusing Eastern and Western approaches to astrology, since the EHS is still used in India. Western astrologers use a variety of house systems - and argue about “which one is right?”.

Page #65, paragraph #2: It is interesting that the Arabs also held - at least during the middle ages - that the rising planet is the key to one’s profession. My experience seems to confirm this. Gauquelin’s work is good, but he often rediscovers concepts “lost” to astrologers unwilling or unable to consult classical sources.

Page #67, paragraph #1: Watson states that astrology lacks a clear philosophic basis. It had such in the middle ages, and can be said still to have one when we consider that medieval astrology was never disproven; rather it fell out of favor as the intelligentsia went over to a new scientific paradigm in the 17th century. As modern physics is now supplanting this paradigm with a kind of neo-Pythagoreanism and a willingness to examine the energy/consciousness equation, it may well be that many, if not all of the old scientific arguments against astrology will become obsolete. The major threat to astrology today is neither science nor [as some fear] the religious right; it is the space race. There is nothing like a radical change of venue from Earth to Mars to screw up your cycles! The 28-day cycle, which plays such an important role on Earth, is nowhere to be found on Mars. Should we colonize that planet, we’d need a new astrology for the colonists.

Pages #67-8: The discussion of Clark’s experiments is interesting. The is is the first time I’ve heard of them, but then I’ve been in the 13th century for years. Most of my work is on medieval astrology, as will be apparent from Lost Key when you see it.

Watch out for Eugen Jonas’ stuff. In Psychic Discoveries Behind the Iron Curtain [unless I’m mistaken] Jonas was credited with or developed certain birth-control methods. These were elaborated on in the authors’ second book. One method dealt with predicting the sex of the child on the basis of the Moon’s position in certain “critical degrees” at conception. It doesn’t work. In fact it is a “well-known astrological method” that has been known not to work for some time. Apparently Jonas learned a little astrology from a book and jumped to his conclusion. The authors reported it, people over here began to apply it, and it failed. Several years ago I attempted to get a copy of the book. The publisher advised me that the authors had withdrawn it from publication because of the scandal.

Addey’s work with harmonics is well regarded in the astrological field - at least among the astrologers I know. The funny thing is that his harmonic system, which he undoubtedly contributed sincerely, was known to medieval astrologers. We have evidence of it in Guido Bonatti’s Liber Astronomiae, ca. 1282.

Many years ago Diane LaVey told me the story of the scientists who tested a pessimistic child and an optimistic one. The pessimist was placed in a roomful of toys, but he refused to play with them. “What’s the use?” he complained. “They’ll just break sooner or later!” The optimistic child was placed in another room which was completely filled with horse dung. Undaunted, he seized a shovel and commenced to dig. When asked why by the scientists, he said, “All this dung has got to mean there’s a pony down there somewhere!”

Diane’s reference was to my [and her and Anton’s] dogged faith in the ultimate consequence and merit of the Church of Satan despite its many growing pains. Satanism was a concept smothered in popular misconceptions, absurd myths, and general bad craziness. Somewhere down there was a pony, but to find it sure required [and still requires] a lot of digging.

Astrology is a similar pile of dung, equally high and equally smelly. Sitting atop it are hoards of quack astrologers who enjoy the smell and make a living out of selling bags of dung to people walking by the pile. Nearby stand the Carl Sagans, who try to convince the people not to buy the bags. Most, however, buy at least a small bag. And a few buy great big sacks, which they lug around for the rest of their lives, huffing and puffing with the strain.

Near the base of the pile, comparatively unnoticed, stand Robert Zoller and a few other brave souls, armed with shovels.
What are some of the objections the Carl Sagans have to astrology? Well:

(1) The constellations are out of synch with the signs (“precession of the equinoxes”). This means that astrological techniques which appeal to their “ancient origins” for validity are astronomically inaccurate.

(2) Twins have significantly divergent lives. [Sagan harped on this in the Cosmos series & book.]

(3) A horoscope requires a “beginning” point in time. Why should this be birth? Why not conception? And what is the “moment” of birth, since the average birth takes 1-2 hours? If “radiation from the planets” is supposed to be the factor, it affects a child in the womb as much as a born child, either directly or via the foetus’ dependence upon the life-rhythms of the mother.

(4) Even assuming that astrology does have an influence over an individual, how strong or weak is that influence vs. the multitude of social/personal/etc. influences that will affect his/her life? Is it so weak as to be of no practical importance?

(5) Medieval astrology was based on the presumed influence of light/heat rays. This applies to the Sun and Moon, to be sure, but not to the planets. The sum total of heat and light reaching us from them is less than that of a single light bulb. [Not until 1954 were the planets (Jupiter & Venus, at least) known to be emitting EM radiation.]

(6) Astrologers base their interpretations of planetary influence on the mythological characteristics of the planets’ namesakes, not on the physical characteristics of the planets themselves. Same complaint concerning the zodiac. It is no answer to say that the gods might have been named after the planets, since the original Egyptian and Babylonian gods attributed to those planets/decans had significantly different characteristics than those of later astrological tradition.

(7) Astrological angles are not precise, since most horoscopes use only 8 out of the possible 360°. And how does one measure the Sun’s angle vs. the Moon as 90° since at the limits of their spheres they may be separated anywhere from 76°30’ to 103°30’?

(8) What happens to the influence of planets/stars when said influence must bore 8,000 miles through the Earth [because the source happens to be on the other side of the planet from the birth in question]?

(9) What about the influence of the bunches and bunches of other stars, systems, comets, nebulae, quasars, pulsars, galaxies, novae, supernovae, etc.? For that matter, what about planets in this system not yet discovered when the astrological traditions were being ennobled by centuries of application [or just now discovered, like the one beyond Pluto]? What about the Mars/Jupiter asteroid belt? What about the satellites of the planets?
Since the entire Solar System is revolving around the center of the Milky Way Galaxy at 200 km/sec, and since everything in the cosmos changes its position vs. everything else continuously, how can astrology use any “constants” at all?

So where’s the pony? Actually there are two of them. The first pony is, as Anton LaVey suggested, astrology’s suitability as a Lesser Magical device. Under the cover of its colorful ooga-booga language, charts, and books, you can tell someone anything you want to - and astrology will help get him/her to believe it and/or do it. Since it is so disorganized a discipline, no two astrologers can “disprove” or “expose” one another. So commercial astrology is just one more trick to part people from their money for nothing and make them go away happy, like commercial Tarot-reading, crystal-ball-gazing, tea-leaf-reading, head-bump-feeling, etc.

The second pony is, from the Order of the Trapezoid’s perspective, far more interesting. Watson touched on it, but the definitive discussion of it to date is in Playfair and Hill’s The Cycles of Heaven (#22L on the Temple of Set reading list). The second pony is that the Sun, Moon, and planets exert far more influence on both the Earth in general and human beings in particular than most suspect. Only recently has conventional science begun to study this. Astrologers who really want to make something of their avocation are in an excellent position to sink their teeth into this area of inquiry, with the goal of producing guidelines which people can use for the prediction of moods and behavior in themselves and others.

What kind of forces are actually moving between the Sun and planets of our Solar System? Two: gravity and electromagnetic (EM) radiation. The gravitational force of the other planets has near-negligible influence upon Earth; our tidal phenomena are overwhelmingly from the Moon and Sun (which has 99% of all mass in its system). But the gravity of the various planets does seem to have an interesting influence on the Sun itself.

To understand why, consider that the Sun does not “hang motionless” in the center of the Solar System. It changes its position relative to those of the planets around a common Center of Mass (CCM) which [as in the years 1977-1984] may be outside the body of the Sun altogether.

U.S. Air Force scientist Paul D. Jose has theorized that the Sun’s motion relative to the CCM is directly related to the maximum and minimum periods of Solar flare activity. He has calculated an 11.08-year cycle, with most current maxima in 1984 & 1995. During a Solar flare there is an increase of X-rays and UV radiation into the so-called Solar wind, a stream of high-energy particles ca. 1 million Kelvin ejected at about 1 million mph from the Sun’s corona and traveling to Earth through the spiral arms of the Sun’s own magnetic field.

What happens when such bursts of EM radiation reach Earth? We are shielded from their direct effects by the Van Allen belts, but EM “storms” are produced which do nasty things to Earth’s radio communications systems. More insidiously, the radiation causes an increase in atmospheric ionization. Because the negatively-charged Earth repels negative ions, we get a heavier than normal dose of positive ions near the planet’s surface. Pos-ions, as all Setians should know by now, make you nervous, grouchy, angry, and unhealthy. Neg-ions are good for you and make you feel great.

The Moon’s role in all of this, apart from oceanic and atmospheric tidal effects, may boil down to its increased reflection of W/X-ray radiation to Earth during its fuller phases. Full Moon = maximum pos-ions = all the agitation associated with full Moons, up to & including lycanthropy. This theory would require the Moon’s reflected radiation to be “added to” the direct radiation produced by the Sun, thus crossing a kind of “human tolerance threshold”.

Hence, through this intricate connective chain, the positions of the planets may very well affect Earth-dwellers - here and now, and based not upon woolly things like birth dates and Greek-god myths, but upon demonstrable but not well-known or finally-proven laws of quantum mechanics.

Again as most Setians know [reading list #19J], the human body is a-quiver with its own EM fields and EM-field detection systems. The less one is grounded, the more one is sensitive to atmospheric EM disturbances. Most of us live in a jungle of electrical wires and currents, some (such as AC current) in the ELF-range. In addition to needing more precise information about atmospheric EM activity, then, we need similar information concerning conditions on this planet that either enhance, retard, or shield that activity.

Haunted house Dept.: Researchers of West Germany’s Verein für Geobiologie search, among other things, for buildings with “uncomfortable” mixtures of EM radiation. Lest it be thought that this is a German eccentricity, I recently ran into a San Francisco electronic instrumentation firm handling the same sorts of problems for bay area companies. A vibrating air-conditioner on the roof of a skyscraper can cause infrasonic resonance throughout the entire structure, making some people ill and setting others at co-workers’ throats. But the German VfG carries its EM detective-work one step further. Its “geobiologists” theorize that the surface of the Earth is criss-crossed by a network of “active strips” about 2m wide. The junctions of such strips are called “geopathic” zones, since they can cause mental and/or physical discomfort.

Electrical resistance of the Earth can be measured by driving spikes into the ground and passing a small current through the ground between them. The geobiologist, H. Petschke, has stated that when this was done within a geopathic zone, a maximum of conductivity was found corresponding exactly to the position of the “active strips”. Such a difference in conductivity could influence air ionization over the zone, as well as the flow of air and ground currents. Perhaps we have here the first real clue to “cursed” spots, such as buildings in which people feel extremely uneasy [or become “possessed” ].

“I ain’t afraid of no EM!” Dept.: Dr. S.W. Tromp of the Biometeorological Research Centre in Leiden, the Netherlands has found that dowsers (persons so sensitive to EM disturbance that they react to the weak current created by the passage of water underground) are able to detect the presence of IR radiation and electrostatic fields from another human body - without its having to be present. A measurable “electrostatic aura” generated by one or more living bodies in a room can remain there for hours or even days after the individual’s departure - as long as it has a non-grounded object (such as a bed or chair) to cling to. Grounding the item in question will cause the “EM shadow” to vanish. Advice to amateur ghostbusters: Take a water-pistol with you. In the case of heavy ghost infestations, a water-submachine gun modeled after an UZI is available from Edmund Scientific Corporation.

All of which is to say that the Temple of Set is ready for some Parastrologers, and it looks as though the first one is here, Geiger counter in one hand and UZI in the other.
Book Review: The Lost Key to Prediction by Robert Zoller
- reviewed by Michael A. Aquino VI°, GM.Tr.

Let’s start with the synopsis from the book jacket:

The book is divided into three sections. The first, in order to answer the question “What are the parts?”, searches for the primary aim of the astrological art in the greater question “What is man?”. The essence of what is called karma in the East and fate in the West is to be found in the esoteric nature of number and in the parts, a system of predicating fate. It is from this point that the author shows how the various astrological causes arise and how they act on the macrocosm and microcosm.

The second section is the author’s translation of an important Latin text on the parts by Guido Bonatti, considered the most influential astrologer of the 13th century. Bonatti explains how to derive over 100 parts, from the mundane to the esoteric, covering all areas of life represented by the 12 houses. In this major work Bonatti is seen to take his rightful place as one of the great sages of Western astrology, equivalent in rank to Farashara and Varahamihira in Indian astrological history.

In the third section the author illustrates the practical use of the parts through his own experience and practice as an astrologer, in natal, horary, and mundane figures. Among other examples he uses the parts to reveal startling insights into the Watergate scandal, and to construct an original astrological guide to commodities speculations. Zoller’s understanding of the parts and their place in a comprehensive interpretation of any horoscope is breathtakingly unraveled for the reader, who is able to see step-by-step the fascinating revelation of the parts.

As a historical text this is a first-rate work. Zoller is obviously not the usual cocktail-party astrologer, but rather someone intensely curious about the medieval roots of modern astrological principles. The notes [especially in Section #1] and bibliography evidence exhaustive research into primary sources. Zoller’s explanations and speculations are carefully and thoughtfully presented and illustrated.

Zoller’s end-run around the scientific fallacies of conventional astrology is ingenious. He does not try to justify cosmic bodies’ direct influence on a human being. Rather he contends that the study of cosmic bodies should be considered a “study of the soul writ large” [in much the same way that Plato’s Republic was a study of man’s political character “writ large”]. Says Zoller:

The “stars” and planets” employed in astrology are therefore within - in the heart of the world when we are dealing with mundane astrology, and in the native’s heart in genethlialogy. We deal with the material globes in astrology only insofar as they are used to time the movements of the inner “planets” and “stars” that lie hidden at the center of man’s being. Herein lies the true difference between the astronomer and the astrologer; and until this is fully apprehended, the more subtle astrological doctrines - such as the parts - will remain unintelligible.

This instantly raises the problem as to (a) whether there is in fact a psychic “microcosmos” of planets and stars whirling around in our minds, and (b) if so, whether there is any true cause-and-effect relationship between that microcosmos and the external macrocosmos.

Materially and objectively the answer to #a is obviously no. We are not talking about a sort of HO-gauge miniature solar system, however, but rather the ability of the psyche to conceptualize the cosmos as a thought. In that sense, Zoller is on solid [and, I think, evolutionary] ground.

Materially and objectively the answer to #b is also no. I can create a thought-image of Jupiter whenever I wish to, but that image will have only the most superficial factual connections with the macrocosmic planet [unless I happen to be an astronomer who is intimately familiar with the planet’s actual characteristics, locus, etc.].

Subjectively the answer to #b becomes yes - in a Lesser Magical context. Jupiter has significance for me to the extent that I feel it does, whether or not the macrocosmic planet gives a damn about me [which I rather doubt it does]. Jupiter’s psychological significance for me may be as a consequence of my own opinions - or as a consequence of opinions created for me by astrologers. I presumably want to please myself. Astrologers either want to please me or control me, either for harmless “entertainment” motives or for exploitive/financial ones.

So if Zoller’s premise is correct, he has exploded the balloon of conventional astrology’s insistence upon the physical influence of the macrocosmos on humanity. So why does he then, in Section #3 of his book, give us several chapters of conventional horoscopes? One would prefer to think that this is merely to illustrate the historical principles identified in Section #2. But the reader’s intelligence is scarcely flattered by a succession of tabloid-tricks such as “after the fact” astrological explanations of Watergate and the commodities market. Perhaps a bit of snake-oil was thought necessary to help sell the book to the tabloid-astrology market.

The analytical power that Zoller demonstrates in Section #1 is re-evidenced in the book’s concluding chapter, in which he focuses on the essential issue of his study:

Yet it was said that to the degree that we expand our observation away from ourselves and out toward the manifested Creation, to that degree we may see that every aspect of the world except for One participates in cyclic mutation. What is this One thing which is immutable, the same, always present? What indeed, other than the Self, the observer of the change, whose uncovering is the aim of spiritual counseling? This alone is the thread which strings together the pearls of experience.
This is the fountain, the spring from which the Light flows into this world, enlivening the drama ...

That which the many take for the self is not the Self but only a graven image, an automaton, thoroughly and boringly predictable, a red herring to distract our attention from the Source of our Being.

The human personality is like a cloudy day. One looks up but cannot see the Sun for the clouds. Yet if during the night the clouds should blow away, one may look up and see the constellations, the planets, and the Moon, and know the season and the causes of actions and events here below. Yet, though this knowledge is useful, it is infinitely inferior to the knowledge of the day, for which the knowledge of night is but a prelude, and which vanishes - as do the stars and darkness at the rising of the Sun. And yet until the Sun has risen and set repeatedly, and one has frequently watched the orderly movement of the stars and planets in the night sky and witnessed the concomitant mutations among men, he will not recognize the order of the world and the One Source from which it all flows. Having recognized the order, he draws nearer the Source until at last the Sun rises and does not set.

This is the aim. The Dawn of the Light of the Sun, of the Self, which may be uncovered through the repeated observation of cyclic phenomena for the purpose of differentiating Same and Other.
All other efforts are in vain until this occurs. All talk of escaping various aspects of one’s Fate are ignorant. All attempts to manipulate destiny according to our whims are madness.

This is the first approach to astrology I have ever encountered which strikes me as not only intelligent, but indeed truly brilliant.
A Response to Carl Sagan
- by Robert Zoller 1°

It occurs to me that it would be a good idea to address the questions raised on page #3 of Runes #III-1. I’ve locked horns with the “Carl Sagans” of the world on a number of occasions, and the result is usually an impasse. They cannot accept my position, which is that of a medieval astrologer rather than of a 20th century scientific American. I tend to think that the Hermetic doctrine of Mind [expressed in the Corpus Hermeticum] and the oriental concept of Maya ought to be given serious consideration in this regard. This will not happen, of course, because we Westerners are “concrete thinkers”; it seems to be in our genetic machinery to deny anything we cannot hold in our hands.

It is beyond me how we can persist in this view in the face of [Greater] magical experience. where one can see walls dissolve into visions of one sort or another, see “hallucinations” involving the transformation of those with whom we work, and then lastly see our “ridiculous” rituals having the desired effect at least some of the time.

I suppose it is part of our education. Despite my efforts in astrology, it was 7 years before I could fully accept the notion that it would really work. For awhile I was mildly schizophrenic about it, professing one set of values to the outside world and secretly harboring another set myself. To a point skepticism is healthy. After that it can be a self-imposed “trap” for the educated.

Astrological phenomena - the astrologer’s prediction of events and his character-analysis - can be demonstrated. The Carl Sagans deal with this part of the investigation by not doing it. Having defined these things as “out of the picture”, they don’t look at the facts - or they design statistical tests so unrealistic that the results are meaningless. Astrology is not based on a mechanistic, materialistic view of the world in which you have neatly divisible and quantifiable things. Astrology “knows” in a moment of time and in a context. There are indeed rules which lead to results, and astrology leads us to be able to measure the mind - which modern science can’t measure. But this measurement is not easily analyzed with statistics. If psychology and medicine were subjected to the same statistical games, they too would have been “disproven”.

(1) Precession: This is a problem to explain because there are 2 systems of astrology, one using the constellations and the other the signs. The problem is that they both work, and logically this seems impossible. Astrology-haters jump on this as an argument against astrology, though actually it can be used as such only against Western astrology. Indian (Hindu) astrology uses the constellations. It is true that Western astrology has no astronomical verity, at least as far as the stars of the “signs” are concerned.

It is my position that there is no physical causality in astrology.

This hardly endears me to other astrologers, most of whom believe that electromagnetism will explain it all, nor to astronomers [who know nothing besides the “known laws of physics”]. Say Amen!

If we presume some form of radiation [and medieval astrologers did ascribe to that theory, as you pointed out in objection #5], then we may feel better by condemning Western and accepting Indian astrology. But this neither explains astrology nor explains it away. As you point out, we have not found any radiation sufficient to explain astrological influence.

The precession business is best handled, in my opinion, by saying that, while there is no “HO-gauge solar system” in our heads, there is a microcosm in our unconscious. Call it an archetype if you will [though I don’t want to be understood as a Jungian]. This microcosm is not learned; it comes with the territory. This microcosm corresponds to a macrocosm which is decidedly not the physical constellations we see. The men who organized the random dots of stars in the night sky into constellations had first to discover what Plato called “the bright, clear pattern of the soul” in themselves. The really momentous discovery was that this pattern was common to all humanity, transcending all national and racial boundaries.

This universal pattern, epitomized in the glyph of the zodiac, is what is esoterically referred to as the “Word”; it is the pattern according to which all things are ordered. It is possible to elicit far more information from this glyph through various numerical “tricks” and an approach in the proper frame of mind. This doesn’t necessarily mean that all the theorems of physics can be deduced from it. I have found, however, that so-called “traditional wisdom and morality” - meaning the way things work in society - are there, as are all of the “new age” values which many think will unseat the traditional ones.

What is this zodiac? It is clearly what Plato wanted us to look for when, in the Republic he exhorts us to study the sky with an eye to the truth rather than to the physical nature of the planets. It is definitely not an arbitrary philosophical scam. It is a vision of the harmonia mundi which anyone who wishes to have power must know, regardless of his motivations. The unripe usually cannot see this pattern for what it is, hence they respond by declaring it obsolete, medieval, etc. It is always operative, and the zodiac - whether Western or Indian - is intended to be its physical mnemonic referent.

Where is this zodiac? It is in the collective unconscious - the anima mundi, the Soul of the World, which is not really separate from the individual soul (microcosm). Our science has not discovered the anima mundi. In fact its discovery was delayed by the General Theory of Relativity. Look for it in the direction of time/space. It will be recognizable when we understand the relation of energy and consciousness, towards which we are now moving. How dare I assert so outmoded an idea as an anima mundi? Well, everyone knows it’s there if he has progressed far enough in yoga or magic, or taken sufficient doses of LSD. It is an enigma only for those of us who require that everything be explained by reference to systems insufficient to do so, such as contemporary physics.

(2) Do twins have divergent lives? Some do and some don’t. I’ve seen reports of twins’ lives that are so similar that it was weird, even though they’d been separated since birth. But this is not to say that twins have no divergencies. Whether or not the birth times are significantly different, there are ways of explaining horoscope differences. For instance, in my experience one twin is solar, the other lunar. Hence one will be extroverted, the other introverted.

(3) Beginning of life: Why not conception? In the 1st century CE Ptolemy advocated using the time of conception if known. There are numerous points which we can take as the beginning of life for astrological purposes. Abu Ma’shar, perhaps the greatest astrologer of all time - and totally unknown to most modern astrologers - invented what he called a “universal question” to determine the natal horoscope birth time. What he seems to have done [not yet confirmed] was to erect a figure of the sky for the time, date and place the client asked a question of burning importance to him. Ma’shar felt that this figure must relate in a meaningful way to the unknown natal figure.

Today we take the moment of birth as the time of the first breath. Since this is not recorded, we take the time as written down on the birth certificate. For precise work we must rectify the birth time by analyzing events in the life of the client.
The ancient Germanic concept of weird held that all things are interwoven. The ancient astrologic concepts of heimarmene and harmonia mundi hold the same thing.

We come into this world at a time congruent with our soul condition. The oriental philosophies hold that the Law of Karma determines our lives in accordance with the impressions (sanskara) of our past thoughts, words, and deeds - past lives. Whether or not we accept the concept of reincarnation, all nascent magical thought holds that all things are interwoven such that apparently sequential events are actually mutually significant. Practical application of this kind of thinking led to omenology as well as to astrology and other types of "-mancies".

There is much more to this question than I can deal with here. It would require a course in self-observation and spiritual development. The laws of sanskara are far-reaching and are very important to a proper understanding of astrology as well of yoga.

(5) I discussed this in #1.

(6) Mythology: I agree that astrologers misapply mythology to their subject. In the Hellenistic period the names of the gods were used metaphorically to represent intelligible concepts. We see this in Proclus’ Commentary on the first Book of Euclid’s Elements where he says: “Philolaus dedicates the angle of the triangle to the gods Kronos, Hades, Ares, and Dionysius, since he includes within their province the entire fourfold ordering of the cosmic elements derived from the heavens or from the four segments of the zodiac circle. Kronos gives being to all cold and moist essences. Ares engenders every fiery nature. Hades has control of all terrestrial life. And Dionysius supervises moist and warm generation, of which wine, being moist and warm, is a symbol.” He adds that the triangle contributes to the process of generation and is the chief agent in the production of sublunary natures. When Proclus used mythology, he knew what he was doing. When Jungians and Jungian astrologers do, they don’t.

From the above passage it is clear how the signs of the zodiac arose. They are codes for certain concepts, and behind these concepts lie number and geometry, as I tried to show in Lost Key. For a personal demonstration of astrology, try observing the events corresponding to the rising, setting, and culmination of a given planet. With a modicum of sensitivity and simple observation of your inner and outer states, you will have undeniable proof that there is something to astrology. Moreover you will have gained it exactly as the first astrologers did - empirically.

The real question here is why the planets have the names that they do. The answer is that the planets were seen empirically to exert certain kinds of influences, whereupon observers rummaged through their mythology to find gods or goddesses who seemed to correspond to the observed effect. In Babylon, where astrology grew up, the processes of mythologizing and astrologizing went hand in hand.

(7) Aspects/Angles: Actually many astrologers use more than the old 8 aspects, 2 sextiles, 2 squares, 2 trines, and opposition. I don’t. Geometry is at base here again. You must understand Pythagoreanism to understand the role number and geometry have in astrology. The number underlying a thing forms its being.

This is no longer “occult”. Our modern physics is now a neo-Pythagorean exercise since it was recognized that geometry is a causal factor in subatomic reality. At the level of hadron bonding, the way subatomic constituents arrange themselves determines what kind of atom is produced. The geometry determines the atom. We find this process of geometrizing continuing up through the mineral (crystalline) kingdom into the biological kingdom. The Order of the Trapezoid knows that geometry determines psychology. In many senses geometry makes things what they are.

Some astrologers have tried to explain aspects by reference to wave theory and harmonics [cf. Addey’s Harmonics]. I think it is best approached in practice rather than theory. It is observable that the Moon’s square is different than her trine, for example. Violent crimes go up at the square. To measure Sun/Moon angles, take their centers.

(8) Planets under the Earth: The influence is still there, though not as powerful as above, and is determined towards the home (4th house).

(9) Nebulae, asteroids, and stars: We have to limit what we use or we’d go nuts. There is only so much information we can process. These things have their influences. and some astrologers use some of them.

(10) Movement: Everything in space is moving - at what rate? Is it meaningful to Earthlings? The rate of precession is 26,000 years. That’s negligible to us. So is the galactic center.

I hope I’ve properly answered the objections - at least as well as can be expected in a form such as this. Between you and me and the Devil, objections such as these are mere words. They help the intellectual part of us, but we sometimes forget that the “map is not the territory”. If astrology upsets us due to the cognitive dissonance produced by a violation of our reality system, it is better to put the thing to a test than to condemn it out of hand.
Twilight Zone: Magic/Science?
- by Michael A. Aquino VI°, GM.Tr.

By way of response to “Parastrology” (Runes #III-1), Robert Zoller sent a 13-page letter, abridged in this issue. While astrology itself is not particularly central to the Order of the Trapezoid, Zoller’s response is germane in a somewhat wider magical context.

As readers will note, Zoller’s response evidences his years of investigation into astrology’s historical roots - a quest which took him through a B.A. degree in Medieval Studies as well as intensive courses in Latin & Hebrew. One presumes that his arguments against the “Carl Sagan” objections to astrology, therefore, represent the best case which astrology can make.

In the 4th issue of the Cloven Hoof I edited (2/1972), I wrote an article on logic. I did it for the simple reason that many people abuse it, either innocently or deliberately. Since the Church of Satan was in the business of trying to detect and extract facts from all the woolly thinking, snake oil, and assorted hot air masquerading as facts, it seemed necessary for us to get our heads together on just how to, recognize fact when/if we saw it.

“‘The logician,’” I said. “does not talk in terms of truth, ideals, or morality, but in terms of verification and proof. As an academic discipline logic attempts to distinguish verifiable inferences from inconclusive ones. It is approached through a comparison of statements, and thus logic is also defined as that branch of philosophy which attempts to determine when a given statement or group of statements permit some other statement to be verified.”

After discussing deductive and inductive branches of logic, I cited the 11 fallacies or “danger signs” for which Satanists should be alert when assessing an argument. They are:

1. Quoting out of context.
2. Sentimental argument: Attempting to prove a statement by citing popular or individual feeling concerning the issue.
3. Authoritarian argument: Attempting to prove a statement by citing a distinguished or important person or institution who endorses it.
4. Ambiguity: Applies to words, phrases, or statements which were intended to mean one thing but are represented as meaning something else.
5. Interdependence: Two unproved statements cannot be used to prove one another.
6. Significance: Some statements are accurate only when viewed together with other statements concerning the same subject.
7. Argumentum ad Ignorantium: It is illogical to say that a given statement is true just because there is no evidence to disprove it.
8. Composition and Division: What is true of the whole is not necessarily true of the parts, and vice-versa.
9. Ignoratio Elenchi: When a person proclaims that he is going to prove something, then actually proves something irrelevant to the claim.

(10) Non sequitur: Arguments which do not logically substantiate their contentions.

(11) Argumentum ad Hominem: Attempting to disprove something by attacking the author or proponent is logically invalid.

Now the thrust of “Wanted: Parastrology” was not too far removed from that of Anton LaVey’s and my earlier articles on astrology - namely that astrology is not the “God in sports clothes” it professes to be, but that it can be utilized in a Lesser Black Magic (LBM) manner for manipulation of those who believe in it. “Parastrology” suggested that there is the potential for an even more intricate LBM application of astrology if that concept is modified to focus on actual non-terrestrial gravitation & radiation influences upon human organisms.

Subsequently, in my book review of Zoller’s Lost Key, I discussed astrology’s potential use as a GBM technique. As a means by which to organize and categorize the impressions and expressions of the mind, it is no different than the Tarot, the Runes, the I Ching, or even a Ouija board. It can thus serve as a kind of “language” or “matrix” to assist the magician in translating sub- or super-rational sensations into rational statements - which can then be analyzed, assessed, and - most importantly - communicated to other magicians.

I thought then, and think now, that Zoller broke important ground here. I was somewhat less impressed by the conventional horoscopes included in Lost Key, since the premise of such devices is that the system controls the individual rather than the other way around. For the magician to state and use this as propaganda to influence non-magicians is “LBM as usual”. Other magicians, however, are presumably immune to this as well as to other LBM trickery - though they can admire the skillful application of any LBM device.

Carl Sagan would need no “unrealistic tests” to refute Zoller’s responses, since he could do so simply in terms of their internal logic per the above checklist of fallacies. In brief:

Response #1 - Fallacies #9 & #10. Nor is the existence of a “world soul” either a deductively established fact or even an inductively logical probability. If skepticism is to be eschewed in favor of a “benefit of the doubt” approach, it should logically be when the proposition in question is more probable, not more improbable [as in astrology]. Psychology and medicine, of course, have indeed been statistically tested and verified thereby. LSD trip-reports are not noted for their consistency, reliability or objectivity.

Response #2 - A draw. Zoller can say that Sagan’s sample isn’t complete; Sagan can also say the same thing about Zoller’s sample. Astrology itself is not validated. Fallacy #9.

Response #3 - Fallacies #3 (Ma’shar) and #9 [since a method of circumventing rather than solving the problem is proposed].

Response #4 - Fallacy #2. Millions of Indians and hippies may believe in karma, but that in itself does not establish its existence. Nor is Zoller granted the prerogative to identify and/or ratify “all nascent magical thought”. Yoga exists, but its claims are not all established. Even if they were, this in itself would not validate astrology.

Response #5 - Fallacy #9.
Response #6 - Fallacy #5. It is not proven fact that either mythology or astrology is valid, or for that matter that one conceptually preceded and determined the other.

Response #7 - States that greater precision is possible. But this in itself does not validate astrology. Fallacy #10.

Response #8 - Asserts that the influence is there, but this in itself does not prove its existence. Fallacy #10.

Response #9 - Criticism not disputed. To say that the limitation is observed because it is easier to observe it is Fallacy #9.

Response #10 - It is not established that existing universal velocities are irrelevant to humans. For instance, the path of the Solar System through the Milky Way Galaxy may affect the frequency and strength of the Sunspot cycle. Fallacy #10.

If Zoller hasn’t made a case for astrology’s objective power over human organisms, it is certainly not through neglect of sincere and exhaustive research on his part. But the cruel truth may just be that there is no substance there to be found. Any “predictive” device which is based upon “fate” rather than identifiable and measurable elements of probability necessitates a metaphysical “God” which decides and enforces that “fate”. If that were true, the notion of “free will” would be illusory, and we would all be slaves who only imagine ourselves to be free.

The key premise of the Temple of Set, substantiated by both logical examination and scientific observation [cf. Black Magic in the Crystal Tablet] is that individual free will does in fact exist - in which case there is no such thing as “fate”, and the only outside forces acting upon us are the non-conscious, physical ones of the objective universe, which can influence our minds and wills only indirectly, through pressures on the physical human body and impressions on its sensory organs.

Elsewhere in the Crystal Tablet the Setian is encouraged to become familiar with stage magic in general and mentalism in particular. Herein are found many tricks by which the future can appear to be predicted - such as after-the-fact “pre”-dictions, generally applicable characteristics of recognizable types of people, use of investigative information which the subject assumes the magician cannot know, slight-of-hand reading of “sealed” documents, predictions actually [but not apparently] based upon mathematical formulae, and ambiguous statements which may be “refined” into predictions as the magician engages in seemingly casual conversation with the subject. Since horoscopic astrologers hedge their horoscopes with any number of escape clauses in case of an obvious failure, test cases prove only that the stage-magician outwitted one or more subjects - or that he could not.

Horoscopic astrology could be proved only by identification of a “smoking gun”: a detectable, independently measurable force which “makes it work”. Otherwise there is simply no reason to grant it a priori God status over us, any more than we enslave ourselves to the I Ching, the Tarot, YHVH, the Runes, or Ouija boards.

Horoscopic astrology retains its value as a LBM device for the Black Magician, so that he can awe and control and profit from the profane and the credulous via its “predictions”.
In a GBM context, it can be used as a magical language under the total control and will of the magician to enable the psyche to understand, organize, and exercise itself. [This is the point made in Zoller’s Lost Key highlighted in my review in Runes #III-1.]

The development of a true parastrology, as proposed in the lead article in Runes #III-1, awaits its pioneer(s).
In our explorations into the phenomena of life and death, we’ve come across a good many interesting facts and theories, all of which bring us closer to the “smoking gun” we’re ultimately after: a kind of “unified field theory” that would explain things like magic, ESP, PK, consciousness, the psyche. etc.

As in any new or unusual field of inquiry, however, there is a high error-factor. Some of the errors are both understandable and unavoidable: the normal give-and-take of the experimental process.

Other errors are more annoying: those which derive from quackery, fraud, ooga-booga mysticism, or just plain stupidity masquerading as true wisdom or authority. It has often seemed in the Church of Satan, Temple of Set, and Order of the Trapezoid that we have had to endure three steps back for every one taken forward, and that whatever knowledge we’ve gained has been at the expense of rather a large number of grey hairs.

In this environment it makes our day, as Clint Eastwood would say, to come across real “breakthrough” material. Here it comes, in the form of a new book entitled The Body Electric: Electromagnetism and the Foundation of Life by Robert O. Becker, M.D. and Gary Selden (NY: William Morrow, 1985).

Becker is an orthopedic surgeon who was not content just to set or wire broken bones together and let the body take it from there. He became interested in the field of bodily regeneration. The first part of his book is an Alice in Wonderland tour through hydras, salamanders, and other comparatively simple forms of animal life that are able to regenerate their bodies in whole or part far beyond the capabilities of more complicated life-forms (such as humans).

A hydra cut in half will quickly develop into two hydras, for example, and the salamander can completely replace amputated legs and tail - all at once if necessary - as well as its jaw and eye lenses.

To make a very long and highly technical story short, Becker gradually uncovered a number of correlations between electromagnetic phenomena and the behavior of living tissue. The first 2/3 of his book reads more like a medical research text than a survey written for non-MDs, but it certainly establishes the atmosphere of scientific precision in which Becker operates. When he makes a point about EM fields, it is because he has carefully cited the results of his experiments leading to that particular conclusion.

In the last third of the book, Becker takes a close look at a number of developments in EM research. One of these may very well be the “smoking gun” of the Gift of Set itself:

Francis Ivanhoe, a pharmacologist and anthropologist at two universities in San Francisco, made a statistical survey of the braincase volume of all known Paleolithic human skulls, and correlated the increase with the magnetic field strength and major advances in human culture during the same period.

Ivanhoe found bursts of brain-size evolution at about 380-340,000 years ago, and again at 55-30,000 years ago. Both periods correspond to major ice ages, the Mindel and Würm, and they were also eras when great cultural advances were made - the widespread domestication of fire by Homo erectus in the early Mindel, and the appearance of Homo sapiens sapiens (Cro-Magnon peoples) and gradual decline of Neanderthals (Homo sapiens) during the Würm.

Two other glaciations in the same time span - the Ganz ca. 1,200-1,050,000 years ago and the Riss ca. 150-100,000 years ago - didn’t call forth such obvious advances in human evolution. They also differed from the other two in that the average geomagnetic field intensity was much lower.

Ivanhoe has proposed a direct link from the magnetic field through the growth-hormone regulator pathways in the brain to account for the sharp evolutionary gains. He suggests that part of the hippocampus, a section of the brain’s temporal lobe, acts as a transducer of EM energy. A part of the hippocampus called Ammon’s horn, an arch with one-way nerve traffic directed by a strong current flow, may read out variations in the field strength, feeding them by a bundle of well-documented pathways called the fornix to the hypothalamus and thence to the anterior pituitary, where growth hormone is produced. It’s known that larger amounts of this hormone in pregnancy increase the size of the cerebral cortex and the number of its nerve cells in the offspring, as compared with other parts of the brain.

Ivanhoe also notes that the hippocampus and its connections with the hypothalamus are among the parts of the brain that are much larger in humans than in other primates. The idea gains further support from the fact that neural activity in the hippocampus increases with electrical stimulation and reaches a maximum at 10-15 cps, at or slightly above the dominant micropulsation frequency of today’s field ...

Here, as in experimental science in general, we are dealing with the “how”, not with the “why”. Nevertheless an understanding of the “how” is virtually essential to meaningful conjectures concerning the “why”.

Turning to ESP, Becker suggests that the DC perineural system and its EM fields “provide the only theory of parapsychology that’s amenable to direct experiment, and yields hypotheses for almost all phenomena except precognition”. It is possible, he thinks, that higher life-forms’ increasing dependence upon digital impulses for sensory input may have suppressed our awareness of the “hum of EM information” from other creatures, just as the sensory organs and brain are known to filter out “noise” of other types so that humans can concentrate on specific impressions. If telepathy is linked to ELF (extremely low frequency) radiation, that would account for its not becoming weaker over great distances.

On the less pleasant side of things, Becker came across evidence, both from his own research and from that of others, that certain kinds of EM radiation can either generate or accelerate damage to living organisms. He cites the instance of the Russian researcher, Yuri Kholodov, who found areas of cell death in the brains of rabbits after subjecting them to 100-200 gauss magnetic fields. The fields were found to have activated stress hormones within the rabbits, but in a way that the rabbits could not consciously sense any stress.

In 1969 Becker was one of the scientists asked by the U.S. Navy to review possible side-effects from Project Sanguine, the ELF transmitter the Navy intended to build in Wisconsin to communicate with nuclear submarines. He observes:

The only thing sanguine we found was the name ... The antenna would produce an EM field 1 million times weaker than that from a 765-kilovolt power line. It was to broadcast at 45-70 hz, frequencies close enough to the Earth’s micropulsations that living things are very sensitive to them. Similar fields had been shown to raise human blood triglyceride levels (often a harbinger of stroke, heart attack, or arteriosclerosis), and change blood pressure and brain wave patterns in experimental animals. The generalized stress response, desynchronized biocycles, and interference with cellular metabolism and growth processes were also distinct possibilities.
The committee recommended that Project Sanguine be shelved pending further data in these problem areas. The Navy marked the report “For Official Use Only” and eventually moved the project to Michigan, renaming it Project Seafarer. A new review committee was chosen; Becker was not on it.

The ELF project was later redesigned and renamed again, heavily funded by the new Reagan Administration, and after a lengthy legal battle is now under actual construction.

The essence of the danger posed by EMR on living organisms is that ELF radiation of 30-100 hz appears to interfere with the body’s normal biological cycles. Results may include a continuous condition of mild stress throughout the organism, often triggering its various immune and disease-lighting systems. As the body adapts to the ongoing presence of these systems, their combative effect on serious infections and diseases is lessened.

EMR can also cause change in strains of bacteria, enhancing their growth and resistance to antibiotics. This, suggests Becker, may account for the onslaught of “new” diseases since 1950, many of them developing from pathogens previously incapable of inducing disease. Among these: Reye’s syndrome, Lyme disease, Legionnaire’s disease, AIDS, and Herpes.

Other experiments described at length by Becker, in detail too complex and technical to be adequately summarized in this article, have yielded implications that:

- Microwave exposure can cause decreased energy levels in the brain by inhibiting electron transport chain function in brain mitochondria.
- Even very weak ELF fields, such as that produced by a TV set 60 feet away, can both accelerate and decrease human reaction time.
- A statistical study of suicide events in the vicinity of overhead high-voltage power lines revealed that magnetic fields averaged 22X higher at suicide addresses, and that areas with the strongest fields contained 40X more fatal locations.
- Animals exposed to EMR undergo a variety of blood changes, such as decline in red cell count and hemoglobin concentration, hence oxygen capacity.
- EMR of the sort received by many people in “home” environments may reduce the strength of electrical impulses governing contraction of the heart muscle by as much as 50X.
- There is an increasing body of evidence that cell-division-related diseases, such as cancer, are aggravated by EMR.
- Improperly or inadequately shielded video terminals may be a factor in the extremely high numbers of women computer operators experiencing miscarriages, stillbirths, and birth defects.

Becker devotes considerable space to a discussion of EMR potential as mind-control weaponry, noting that the CIA’s MKULTRA program, in addition to psychedelic drug & hypnosis research, also included funds for “techniques of activation of the human organism by remote electronic means”.

Readers of my Church of Satan history will be familiar with the Yezidi legend of the “seven towers of Satan extending across Asia, atop each of which sits a Priest of Satan, beaming energy to control the forces of the world for evil”. [Cf. William Seabrook, Adventures in Arabia.]

Truth is again stranger than fiction: In 1976 a new radio signal began to be heard around the world between 3.26 & 17.54 mhz, soon nicknamed the “woodpecker” because of its modulated pulse signal. It was soon traced to a giant transmitter in the Ukraine. Relates Becker:

The signal is so strong it drowns out anything else on its wavelength. When it first appeared, the UN International Telecommunications Union protested because it interfered with several communications channels, including the emergency frequencies for aircraft on transoceanic flights. Now the woodpecker leaves "holes"; it skips the crucial frequencies as it moves up and down the spectrum. The signal is maintained at enormous expense from a current total of seven stations, the seven most powerful radio transmitters in the world.

Within a year after the woodpecker began tapping, people in various locations in the U.S. & Canada began complaining of pain and pressure in the head, anxiety, insomnia, lack of coordination, numbness, & fatigue. Some engineers who studied this phenomenon in Oregon, where the communities of Eugene & Corvallis seemed to be particularly subject to the symptoms, traced a 4.75 mhz signal to the woodpecker and suggested that it might in fact be an experimental model of Nikola Tesla’s magnifying transmitter. [Cf. Runes #I-2: “Tesla”.]

“The available evidence,” comments Becker, “suggests that the Russian woodpecker is a multipurpose radiation that combines a submarine link with an experimental attack on the American people. It may be intended to increase cancer rates, interfere with decision-making ability, and/or sow confusion and irritation. It may be succeeding.”

The Body Electric, then, is a mixed bag of good and bad news. It may open the door to the Gift of Set - and it may just as well confirm the Book of Coming Forth by Night’s warning of annihilation - not by something as spectacular as bombs or bullets, but, as Dr. Becker puts it:

It may be hard to convince ourselves that something we can’t see, hear, touch, taste, or smell can still hurt us so dreadfully. Yet the fact must be faced, just as we’ve learned a healthy fear of nuclear radiation. Certain scientists, some perhaps acting in a program of deliberate disinformation, keep telling the public that we still don’t know whether electropollution is a threat to human health. That’s simply not true.

Associated Press Update 1990

Clam Lake, Wisconsin (AP): A 15-mile antenna strung out like a giant cross in the Chequamegon National Forest quietly sends radio messages to missile-equipped submarines patrolling deep waters around the world.

The Navy began using the $400 million ELF system last fall, replacing smaller transmitters that had been sending messages to missile-equipped submarines since the late 1960s.

The earlier project went through despite years of protests based on fears that the low-frequency radio waves would fry fish in nearby streams and produce two-headed squirrels.

“In the last two years we have had only two protests of any significance. Those folks were strictly anti-military,” said Lt. John Smythe, project commander. “I think the biological, ecological and safety issues have all been addressed.”
At one point, demonstrations occurred almost weekly at the fenced-in transmitter site in northwestern Wisconsin. Nuclear-weapons opponents argued the system would make the forest a target for Soviet missiles, and environmentalists called for more studies.

ELF, or extremely low frequency, is the only system of its kind that sends radio waves that penetrate water. The system permits submarines to prowl undetected by radar while receiving messages several hundred feet under water.

The antenna - two strands of cable strung on wooden poles - and a transmitter are tucked into the forest atop 20,000 feet of buried rock near Clam Lake, a quiet tourist wayside. Bears frequently climb on the poles, and snowmobiles glide through a corridor carved in the trees.

Jerry Holter and his wife Tish, both 60, live about a mile from the antenna and have watched the project unfold since 1969. “They brought in peace activists by the busloads,” Holter recalled. “You won’t find anybody in the area that ever thought the project would do all the things opponents claimed, including make you sterile if you walked under the lines.”

Mrs. Holter served as a “human guinea pig” for researchers monitoring the medical effects of the system on nearby residents. “We are both so darn healthy, it’s funny,” she said.

But Mark Peterson, executive director of the Sigurd Olson Environmental Institute of Northland College in Ashland, said the project still has its skeptics. They point to studies that indicate milk production of cows that graze near high voltage electrical lines drops off, he said.

The system, and a companion one near K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base south of Marquette, Michigan - use a total of $60,000 worth of electricity each month and employ about 75 people, mostly civilians, Smythe said.

ELF is scaled down considerably from the original plan, which included a grid of 6,200 miles of buried cable and 100 transmitters built to survive a nuclear war.
“Magick,” Aleister Crowley once wrote, “may be defined as the name given to science by the vulgar.” By this he meant that the knowledge and application of obscure scientific principles may very well seem “magical” to an ignorant observer, whether the practitioner be a stage magician or a NASA astrophysicist.

A corollary to this observation is that so-called “magic” [or “Magick”] based upon nothing more than mere superstition or ooga-booga mysticism is objectively useless, meaning that it won’t accomplish a damned thing if the person or persons in question are unaware of it. The ooga-booga stuff will work only if the person at whom it is directed (a) knows about the Working and (b) is superstitious enough to believe in it. [Note: The magician should never make the mistake of assuming that another person is not sufficiently superstitious just because that individual protests to that effect. The less people know about the Black Arts, the more they are vulnerable to superstitious reactions to them.]

I cannot overemphasize how important it is that the Black Magician not fool himself or herself in this regard. You are differentiated from White Magicians, among other things, precisely because you aren’t scared silly by your own tools, and because you don’t deceive yourself as much as - or worse than - the other person. The Black Magician must always know what is happening and be in control of it. If he doesn’t know quite what is happening when a given technique is being used, then he approaches that Working in much the same manner as a scientist making a laboratory experiment: He constructs and tests various theories and takes note of such results as may manifest themselves.

To me the foregoing has never seemed like a very difficult principle to grasp. Yet for the better part of twenty years I have been amazed by the number of people - Magicians, and would-be Black Magicians - who have scared themselves [and made themselves look ridiculous in the bargain] by taking some rag-tag superstition from some old grimoire and turning it into a personal idol before which to abase oneself. I like to think that one of the key virtues of the Temple of Set - and the saving grace of the old Church of Satan before it - has been the rejection of self-deceit, which Anton LaVey so accurately labeled “the greatest of all ‘sins’”.

The focus of this article, like so many Runes articles before it, is upon another aspect of science which is sufficiently obscure to warrant its being venerated as “magic” by the vulgar. Hence it is suitable for practical use by the Black Magician. Because it is based upon objective principles, rather than ooga-booga tosh, moreover, it can be applied successfully whether or not the object of the Working knows about it or believes in it.

In 1966 an anthropologist by the name of Edward T. Hall wrote a very interesting book entitled The Hidden Dimension (Garden City: Doubleday & Co.), whose central theme, he said, was “social and personal space and man’s perception of it. ‘Proxemics’ is the term I have coined for the interrelated observations and theories of man’s use of space as a specialized elaboration of culture.” Hall elaborates on his thesis thus:
It has long been believed that experience is what all men share, that it is always possible somehow to bypass language and culture and refer back to experience in order to reach another human being. This implicit - and often explicit - belief concerning man’s relation to experience was based on the assumptions that, when two human beings are subject to the same ‘experience’, virtually the same data are being fed to the two central nervous systems and that the two brains record similarly.

Proxemic research casts serious doubt on the validity of this assumption, particularly when the cultures are different. People from different cultures not only speak different languages but, what is possibly more important, inhabit different sensory worlds. Selective screening of sensory data admits some things while filtering out others, so that experience as it is perceived through one set of culturally patterned sensory screens is quite different from experience perceived through another. The architectural and urban environments that people create are expressions of this filtering-screening process. In fact, from these man-altered environments, it is possible to learn how different people use their senses. Experience cannot therefore be counted on as a stable point of reference, because it occurs in a setting that has been molded by man.

Hall begins his study with a discussion of the mechanics of distance regulation, first between animals, then between humans. “Flight distance” (FD) is the point at which an animal will flee when approached by a potential enemy: for example 500 yards for an antelope and 6 feet for a lizard. If you manage to approach too closely within FD, you will encounter “critical distance” (CD), wherein the animal feels so threatened that it will begin to stalk or fight. The famous Swiss animal psychologist H. Hediger offers one illustration:

A lion in a zoo will flee from an approaching man until it meets an insurmountable barrier. If the man continues the approach, he soon penetrates the lion’s CD, at which point the cornered lion reverses direction and begins to stalk the man. In the classical animal act in the circus, the lion’s stalking is so deliberate that he will surmount an intervening obstacle such as a stool in order to get at the man. To get the lion to remain on the stool, the lion-tamer quickly steps beyond the CD. At this point the lion stops pursuing. The trainer’s elaborate “protective” devices - the chair, the whip, or the gun - are so much window-dressing.

Human beings are also subject to FD/CD stimuli, as well as to an intermediate condition which Hediger terms “personal and social distance” (PSD). We have a variety of physical sensors by which we make such subconscious decisions: sight, hearing, and smell at a distance; and touch up close. In some cultures, people are accustomed to being within the smell-radius of others, for example - and in fact judge moods, class, and relationships in part on olfactory impressions. In other cultures, such as that of the U.S., we are repelled by the scent of anyone except those with whom we are personally intimate. This simple fact may identify an invisible yet powerful barrier against American rapport with various middle-eastern cultures.

Japanese culture emphasizes the “stretching of visual space”, as in gardens (wherein steps along paths or stepping-stones must be individually picked with care) or in rooms (where furniture tends to be arranged in the middle rather than near or against the walls). To the Westerner, a Japanese environment often appears “open” and “spacious” even if the physical dimensions involved are no greater than those in a Western home or office.

In public spaces and conveyances, on the other hand, orientals and Arabs have a much higher tolerance for crowding than do Westerners. Observe the behavior of mixed ethnic groups on a crowded subway or bus and see for yourself. [Hall theorizes that the increased attention to personal living-area spaciousness by the Japanese may be in the nature of a
The human skin’s ability both to transmit and to sense emotional states is greater than most people know. Anger or embarrassment triggers blushing, for example, but it also increases the blood supply to various parts of the body, causing [among other things] a subtle swelling of the forehead and temples, and a resultant rise in skin temperature in those areas. Observers can detect such changes by skin-based thermal detectors, by more intense olfactory sensation (smell), and by visual impact. Some women interviewed by Hall commented that changes in the bodily temperature and odor of dancing partners, for example, were reliable advance-signs of lust, anger, etc. - long before the male in question would speak or act accordingly. Crowley, in addition to his skill in recognition of visual signals [“Give me the sign of the Open Eye”], was similarly a student of space- and smell-based behavior. His subtle use of these techniques astonished many an onlooker, who might well credit the results to the supernatural. [Cf. William Seabrook’s account of Crowley’s “magical” trip-up of a pedestrian. The Beast merely intruded on his victim’s auditory space.]

Heat and space-perception are related. People in a cool, crowded room will not feel as cramped as the same number of people in a similar-sized room which happens to be hot. Whether or not you see or hear other persons, your heat-sensors will react to them if you are close enough. [To sample your own heat-radiation sensitivity, place the back of your hand close to your lips. Both generate a high level of heat. Then move your hand up and down in front of your face. Also try near-skin experiments with another person, particularly “out of eyesight”. You may be surprised at the results.]

Photographs and paintings of individuals create an immediate attitude-impression in a viewer depending upon whether they place him or her in FC/FD of the subject. [Try looking at people in “close” or “distant” pictures and see how you react. Also try viewing both types of pictures from near and distant positions.] Maurice Grosser, in The Painter’s Eye (NY: Rinehart & Co.) states:

Four to eight feet is the portrait distance: Here the painter is near enough so that his eyes have no trouble in understanding the sitter’s solid forms, yet he is far enough away so that the foreshortening of the forms presents him no real problems. Here, at the normal distance of social intimacy and easy conversation, the soul of the sitter begins to appear. Nearer than three feet, within touching distance, the soul is far too much in evidence for any sort of disinterested observation. Three feet is the sculptor’s working distance, not the painter’s. The sculptor must stand near enough to his model to be able to judge forms by sense of touch.

The next time you visit a museum which contains statuary from several historical cultures, try to sense (a) from what distance the sculptor wrought a particular statue, and (b) from what distance he intended that it be viewed - and why. Note that Egyptian statuary tends to focus on the ka or psyche, Greek statuary on the physical ideal of beauty, and Roman on the physical reality of individuals. Once you perceive these interrelated “filters”, you will begin to understand why these images affect you in the way they do - and which you couldn’t previously explain on a conscious level.

Perspective in painting was re-discovered at the time of the Renaissance, enabling the viewer to focus on various parts of a painting and see them proportionately represented. A peculiarity of Rembrandt’s style is that he painted “stationary visual fields”, such that by focusing on a portrait’s central feature you will see the entire portrait in the same clarity/lack of clarity as you would standing before the individual in question and observing him/her with your foveal, macular, and peripheral vision.
The conclusion to be drawn from all this is that the “boundary” of each human being does not end with the skin. Each individual possesses an unseen “personal field” - or rather variety of situational fields - which constitutes his or her true “boundary”. The magician who succeeds in controlling or altering another individual’s “personal field” thus controls or alters that person just as assuredly as though he were able to control his conscious personality.

As Dr. Becker’s bete noir was the high level of electro-magnetic activity in contemporary Western civilization [see my “From Salamander Bones to the Seven Towers of Satan”, Runes 5/85], Hall’s is the contemporary city, which he views as an absolute disaster for human spatial psychology. The more you jam people together, the more psychotic and antagonistic their behavior will become, due to intrusions within and disruptions of their personal fields. When high-density is disguised by sensory screens and barriers (such as apartment living), people become lethargic and stupid. The civilization of man has significantly muffled his FD reaction, enabling him to tolerate others within his FD radius. But if he is made fearful of others, the FD instinct can suddenly reassert itself with explosive force, resulting in the sheer savagery of inner-city crime and rioting unknown in more open environments. Hall concludes:

Man and his extensions constitute one interrelated system. It is a mistake of the greatest magnitude to act as though man were one thing and his house or his cities, his technology or his language were something else. Because of the interrelationship between man and his extensions, it behooves us to pay much more attention to what kinds of extensions we create, not only for ourselves but for others for whom they may be ill-suited. The relationship of man to his extensions is simply a continuation and a specialized form of the relationship of organisms in general to their environment. However, when an organ or process becomes extended, evolution speeds up at such a rate that it is possible for the extension to take over. This is what we see in our cities and in automation. This is what Norbert Wiener was talking about when he foresaw dangers in the computer, a specialized extension of man’s brain. Because extensions are numb - and often dumb as well - it is necessary to build feedback/research into them so that we can know what is happening, particularly in regard to extensions that mold or substitute for the natural environment.

Appendix 66: Perfect Symmetry

Book Review:
Perfect Symmetry: The Search for the Beginning of Time
- reviewed by Michael A. Aquino
Runes #III-5, September 1985
Order of the Trapezoid

I suppose this could be considered one of those “Oh, geez, he’s on another of those cosmic/theoretical trips” book reviews, but honestly it didn’t start out that way. Having for some years been annoyed with what I can only term the idiotic insolence of the “big bang” theory [such insolence consisting of (a) the assumption that a primal ylem/firecracker “just happened to exist” and (b) the assumption that a cosmic match “just happened to be around to light its fuse”], I searched and searched for a cosmology which wouldn’t insult my intelligence and finally [in 1973] found it in Dr. Oskar Klein’s infinite-time/cyclical theory of Universal oscillation. I discussed this theory in “Genesis II” (Cloven Hoof #IV-7 & Appendix #57 of The Church of Satan) and went on to other matters. [Klein’s theory is expounded in its elegance and simplicity in Worlds-Antiworlds: Antimatter in Cosmology by Hannes Alfven. San Francisco: W.H. Freeman & Co., 1966.]

Every theory has to have a hat-rack on which to hang its hat. Einstein assumed the velocity of light to be an absolute constant, and upon this hat-rack he proceeded to hang the rest of his relativity ideas. If you accept that hat-rack as a “given”, then Einstein’s conclusions drawn therefrom interrelate very nicely.

Similarly, if you accept the literal truth of the Judaic/Christian Bible as your hat-rack, then it is possible to derive a large body of sub-conclusions from it which all interrelate very nicely.

Similarly, if you accept a ylem/firecracker & cosmic match as your hat-rack, then the “big bang” theory trots along after it like a good doggie.

In short, if you can get someone to buy your axiom, then you’re home free, ’cause then it’s just a question of filling in the nooks & crannies. Einstein was well aware of this from the success of his relativity road-show, so decided to go for the sweepstakes: the Grand Axiom which, if he could sell, would enable him to preside over the physical re-definition of the universe. This was his celebrated “unified-field theory”. When he ran this baby up the flagpole in 1953, however, it wasn’t saluted. To this day the UFT floats in suspended animation, like Howard Hughes’ “Spruce Goose”, while onlookers try to decide whether to (a) acclaim it, (b) decry it, or (c) just ignore it.

In the case of Klein’s theory, the hat-rack was the principle (or neter) of symmetry. In its simplest sense this principle implies that nothing in the natural universe exists without a “mirror image” co-existing. Statement of this principle was not original to Klein; it was crucial to Egyptian cosmology, was [re]discovered with toots & whistles by Newton, and even acquired occult credentials as Aleister Crowley’s “0=2” equation.

The tricky thing about symmetry is that the “positive” and “negative” sides of a given substance will not necessarily appear the same. If you saw “0” suddenly “split” into a “+6” and a “-6”, it would be pretty easy to put the “+6” and the “-6” on opposite sides of a symmetrical relationship. But suppose you walked into a universe consisting of 3,1,1,4,2. You’d have to mess around awhile before coming up with 3x2=4+1+1 ... or 6=6. Anyone who’s survived high school chemistry remembers the sheer terror of being presented with one side of a chemical equation, and one changed part of the other side, and being required to figure out the rest in configurations that were not molecular insanity.

If you expand your universe beyond matter and energy - for example into time and mind - symmetry becomes almost impossible to trace. Where is the “negative Michael Aquino”? Is it some weird Doppelgänger, with whom I may someday accidentally collide and mutually implode? Far more probably my “opposite half” is a mixture of time, mind, matter, and energy which may be scattered among galaxies and diffused over æons of time. So symmetry is one of those neteru/Platonic Forms which is visible and even demonstrable as a simple concept, but which quickly becomes elusive as it is carried to its ultimate implications.

An eternally oscillating objective universe is symmetrical. A “big bang” universe is not symmetrical, as it presupposes the spontaneous appearance of only one side of the equation - a sort of cosmic “horn of plenty” in which a whole lot of goodies continue to tumble out of the open end of a conical basket whose other end shrinks into a point. To my simple brain this is just so much cat shit.

So by now you’ve probably deduced why I began to wiggle my nose and wag my tail when I saw a book titled Perfect Symmetry on the shelf. Here, it seemed, might be the Cosmic Graal I was questing for. Is it?

No and yes. The first 3/4 of the book consists of ho-hum chapters in Physics #1A, Astronomy #1A, and Rah Rah Einstein, and I began to think I had wasted another $18.95. But then Pagels (Executive Director of the New York Academy of Sciences) took his necktie off and got into a discussion of GUTs (Grand Unified Theories) and their implications, which is what universal symmetry is all about. There are still big holes in GUTs, the most notorious of which is gravity (which to date hasn’t been explained, much less shown as convertible into anything else). And until your GUT is complete, you can’t use it as a hat-rack.

Perhaps most infuriating to physicists [but not to Setians, who have an appropriate ace up their sleeves] is the “Catch-22” of GUTs: that human intelligence, being a component of the Master Law, would by definition be inadequate to apprehend it. In this sense, conventional physics ultimately comes around to the same hat-rack as religion: that the nature of “God” cannot be apprehended by human minds, hence must be acknowledged and obeyed as an act of faith.

Pagels is not deterred by such petty potholes. For example:

In 1968, even before GUTs were invented, Andrei Sakharov, a Soviet scientist, realized that if baryon number is not conserved, it would explain in part how the matter-antimatter asymmetry we see today could have arisen from a state of perfect symmetry. Sakharov also realized that baryonic-number non-conservation, while a necessary condition for the creation of matter, was not sufficient. Other conditions had to be met.

The first of these conditions is that the universe has to make more matter than antimatter. In order for it to do this, matter and antimatter, which are through-the-looking-glass versions of each other, have to be distinguished by some interaction that tells us on which side of the looking-glass the present universe is. Experimentalists have actually detected such interactions (they are called time reversal-violating interactions), so this condition is met.

Another condition is that the universe must, during a very early stage of its development when the baryon-number-violating processes are most effective, be in a state of non-equilibrium. This means that at some time in its early history, the universe must undergo a “phase transition”, a change of its basic state which happens so rapidly that the rate of collisions between the quantum particles in the primordial gas cannot keep up with it. If such a phase transition occurs, any matter-antimatter asymmetry that gets generated during the transition also gets to stay, because once the transition is over, the baryon-number-violating processes become less effective and baryon-number conservation is effectively restored. The “extra” protons and neutrons, generated out of nothing, are now locked into the universe.

In summary, a matter-antimatter symmetry could be generated starting from a symmetric state provided that (1) baryon number was not conserved, (2) time-reversal-violating interactions exist, (3) the universe was once in a non-equilibrium state of extreme expansion. In the standard model neither condition #1 nor #3 is met, and hence the origin of visible matter remains a puzzle in this model. However GUTs, which go beyond the standard model, can violate baryon-number conservation. This led to a revival of interest in explaining the observed matter-antimatter symmetry. By 1978 many theoretical physicists, realizing that this old puzzle could now be explained in the context of GUTs, were hard at work calculating the symmetry to see if it would agree with observation.

A few years ago a T-shirt with the slogan “COSMOLOGY TAKES GUTs” enjoyed modest popularity among cosmologists. The slogan meant that GUTs could solve the problem of the origin of the matter-antimatter symmetry and thus explain the genesis of the visible universe. Yet another meaning of the slogan is that many GUTs imply that the neutrinos are not strictly massless and hence could make up the dark matter of the cosmos. GUTs might provide the answer to the origin not only of visible matter, but of the invisible matter as well.

This is a good first shot; it is as though a person trying to navigate a room while blindfolded and hopping on one foot has decided to stand on both feet. Until he takes off the blindfold [of Einsteinian relativity], however, he’s got a few more walls to crash into.

In subsequent chapters, Pagels goes into what are charmingly called “SUSY GUTs”, or super-symmetry GUTs. These are highly theoretical GUTs including complex assumptions concerning gravity, and a quote from this part of the book would probably leave you more dazed than the above one, unless you had first warmed up to it by the extended discussion in the text:

Kaluza demonstrated the unification of gravity and electromagnetism by means of his compact 5th dimension only by making several restrictive assumptions in solving Einstein’s equations. In 1926 Oskar Klein significantly advanced this theory by showing that these restrictive assumptions were completely unnecessary. Furthermore Klein calculated the radius of the little circle in the 5th dimension in terms of the known quantities, the Planck distance scale, and the electronic charge, and found this radius to be about 10^{-30} cm - an extremely small radius ensuring that the 5th dimension is safely out of sight. But in spite of its small size, the freedom that fields have in moving around that tiny circle is always present at every point in ordinary space, and that freedom is all that is needed to guarantee the existence of the electromagnetic field.

After the 1930s the Kaluza-Klein idea fell out of favor, and for many years it lay dormant. But recently, as physicists searched out every possible avenue for the unification of gravity with other forces, it has again sprung to prominence. Today, in contrast to the 1920s, physicists are challenged to do more than unify gravity with just electromagnetism - they want to unify gravity with the weak and strong interactions as well. This requires even more dimensions, beyond the 5th.

Theoretical physicists have generalized the original 5-dimensional theory into an arbitrary number of higher dimensions. All the higher dimensions are compact; they are curled up into a tiny multi-dimensional space that exists at each point of ordinary space and hence is unobservable. But the freedom of moving around these compact, tiny spaces with symmetries more general than the simple symmetry of a circle corresponds exactly to the freedom of performing Yang-Mills gauge transformations. Remarkably the local gauge symmetries are precisely the symmetries of the compact higher-dimensional space. Because of this mathematical fact, all the gauge theories of Yang-Mills fields can be interpreted purely geometrically in terms of such higher-dimensional spaces.

Sadly, this exciting discussion is followed by a rather violent crash into the wall as our noble author endeavors to jam the stepsister-foot of the “big bang” into the glass slipper of symmetry theory. Actually he does this in a rather cute way. To simplify: If you can say that time “goes to zero” at the moment before the “big bang”, then you’ve got an infinitely-contracting variable on that side of the symmetry equation, so you can shrink the other side down to an infinite contraction as well. This is kind of shaggy-dog physics, and Pagels - to his credit - concedes as much. But on the whole I would say he deserves a round of applause for what is ultimately a courageous charge into frontiers that conventional minds fear to approach.

Order of the Trapezoid

From that time on the obliteration of Joseph Curwen’s memory became increasingly rigid, extending at last by common consent even to the town records and files of the Gazette. It can be compared in spirit only to the hush that laid on Oscar Wilde’s name for a decade after his disgrace, and in extent only to the fate of that sinful King of Runagur in Lord Dunsany’s tale, whom the gods decided must not only cease to be, but must cease ever to have been.

- H.P. Lovecraft, The Case of Charles Dexter Ward

You must stop imagining that posterity will vindicate you, Winston. Posterity will never hear of you. You will be lifted clean out from the stream of history. We shall turn you into gas and pour you into the stratosphere. Nothing will remain of you: not a name in a register, not a memory in a living brain. You will be annihilated in the past as well as in the future. You will never have existed.

- George Orwell, 1984

In the very first episode of the recently-revived Twilight Zone television series, a man telephoned his home only to find the call being answered by his double - a Doppelgänger (as Goethe called such magical mirror-images). This story of an “ultimate identity crisis” was resolved only when the double finally killed the progressively-more-insane original ... or was it the other way around?

Stories involving doubles created by magic, science, or impersonation have always been fascinatingly shuddersome. Who can forget the Metropolis robotrix, who went on a rampage of apocalyptic destruction while the real girl whose features she had taken lay imprisoned in the pentagram-emblazoned house of Rotwang the magician? Who was “the Man in the Iron Mask” immortalized in Alexandre Dumas’ tale - said to be a double of the King, and to possess “too much” knowledge of the infamous chambre ardente Satanic orgies whose exposure scandalized the French court?

To many people, one’s appearance and one’s name have a significance beyond mere convention. They are “extensions of the soul”, as it were. To know the true and/or complete name of a god or demon was often to have power over him; the mere utterance of the 72-letter name of the Hebrew God - known as the “shemhamforash” - was reputed to destroy the universe if pronounced correctly. An Indian legend says that if the name of Shiva is uttered repeatedly, he will open one of his eyes, again destroying the universe [if YHWH hasn’t trashed it first].

To take away one's name, or to deny him the right to assert it, is thus an act psychologically akin to murder. Without a name, one is merely a piece of animal flesh displacing time and space. With a name, one has identity. In Aldous Huxley’s Brave New World the bewildered humanoids constantly spoke of themselves as “we”; the climax of the story came when one bold soul struggled upward through the mists of this confusion and began to speak of himself as “I”. “To be or not to be: that is the question,” said Shakespeare’s Hamlet - as indeed it is.

A year ago another young man was fitted for an “iron mask” - rather a different type of heavy metal than that to which he had previously been accustomed. His name is Matthew Trippe, but he is better known to rock music enthusiasts as Nikki Sixx, co-founder, composer, and bass guitarist for Mötley Crüe.
Who or what is Mötley Crüe? The most controversial, if not notorious branch of rock music is “heavy metal”, known for music, costumes and lyrics which espouse Frazetta-like fantasy, intense sexuality, and an exultant, emotional, neo-barbarian life-style. While its roots can be traced back to such groups as the 1960s’ Iron Butterfly and Alice Cooper, contemporary heavy metal might be said to have come of age with the band KISS, whose musicians invariably appeared in exotic black/silver costumes and face-paint. KISS concerts went beyond mere musical recitals; they were orgies of fireworks, hydraulic stages, hyperamplified sonics, and general audience hysteria unequalled for spectacle since Adolf Hitler’s Nürnberg rallies of the 1930s. Bat-winged Gene Simmons, famed for his fire-breathing and prehensile tongue, would taunt the audience for not screaming loud enough: “You know you can do better than that - I want to see you bring the roof down!” - in answer to which there would erupt a feral roar that would come pretty close to doing just that.

Why heavy metal at all? The answer is not at all difficult to see. This is not the secure 1950s, when the world was America’s backyard to work or play in; nor the 1960s, when - secure in our virtue - we set forth from Camelot to slay the dragon of monolithic communism; nor the 1970s, when we immersed ourselves in nostalgia, back-biting, and escapist fantasies. These are the 1980s, when all of our comforting illusions have been shattered, and when Americans of all ages find themselves surrounded by depressing and dehumanizing realities which they shrink from confronting. We thought we had conquered racism, only to find that tensions are higher and more destructive than ever. Neighborhoods once secure are now fortified with steel bars, alarms, firearms. We are dismayed to see that America, far from being the world's savior, is intensely hated by many people who consider it as the “great evil”. Commercially we are increasingly despised by those who consider us merely a spoiled consumer economy, ripe for the plucking - and the most profitable destination for heroin, cocaine, and angel dust. Even the beautiful governmental temples of Washington, D.C. are blighted by ugly concrete barricades against terrorists. Commercial successes still occur, but are increasingly characterized by a “yuppie” ethic that views the dollar not just as the supreme god - but as the only god.

In this “arid wilderness of steel and stone” it is not surprising that the spirit of Moloch prevails. It is a time for witch-hunts and scapegoats. Elder America scrabbles for solace in “moral majority” religious fundamentalism, but younger America - having been brought up in a de facto materialist environment, is not so easily coaxed into a primitive religious stupor. Rather it responds with passionate frustration at being so near to a technological paradise, yet ever denied by the inexorable decay of the social and moral fabric so necessary to support it. Heavy metal, like the torchlight pageants of Nazi Germany, is an explosion of fury - fury at being hemmed in by the problem and seeing no rational solution to it - of creativity prevented from creating - of idealism without meaningful ideals. [“Yes!” thundered Hitler, “we are barbarians!”]

Under the cruel and jagged armor of heavy metal, therefore, one frequently finds a surprisingly rich outpouring of artistic, poetic, and musical talent - which in turn explains the seductive appeal of this type of music to a wide range of audiences. One does not go to a heavy metal concert to lighten one's heart, but rather to drive oneself to heights of raw emotional frenzy, followed by a dizzying descent into emotional exhaustion. Thus are the grinding frustrations of reality at least momentarily bludgeoned into the background.

By the early 1980s a number of heavy metal bands had begun to appear on the scene, and the race was on to see which could be the most outrageous. Twenty years ago we used to think that the Fugs, the Stones, the Fish, and the Mothers of Invention were just about as raunchy as you could get, but now they appeared as models of drawing-room decorum next to metalloids who looked and sounded rather like the beast-men from the island of Dr. Moreau. Of these, one of the most bizarre was Mötley Crüe. Formed in January 1981 by Matthew “Nikki Sixx” Trippe together with Mick “Mars” Reese, Tommy “Lee” Bass, and Vince “Neil” Wharton, the Crüe was signed by Elektra/Asylum Records in mid-1982 and went on to become one of the flagships of the heavy metal fleet after the 1983-84 smash success of its second album, \textit{Shout at the Devil}.

Middle America - still dominated largely by the generation who thought Elvis’ hip-movements too shocking for television - reacted to heavy metal with increasingly hysterical alarm and indignation. Writing in the \textit{New York Times} earlier this year, columnist William Safire praised the U.S. Senate’s hearings & citizens’-group efforts to censor or suppress heavy metal. “What’s to be done about sex-violence, sado-masochism, and Satanism being sold to youngsters?” he fumed. “I am a libertarian when it comes to the actions of consenting adults. With complete consistency, I am anti-libertarian when it comes to minors. Kids get special protections in law and deserve protection from pornrock profiteers.”

Allegations that serial murders and teenaged “Satanic” gangs were inspired by heavy metal music fueled calls for censorship-ratings in music similar to those applied to pornographic & violent films, and Mötley Crüe - as Mick Mars later told me - appeared to be careening straight for an “X”.

In mid-1984 the build-up of such public pressure resulted in a decision by Mötley Crüe’s management to sanitize the band. The leather, chains, flames, and Satanic insignia of \textit{Shout at the Devil} gave way to circus-clown attire - pastels, polka-dots, and garter-belts - on the cover of \textit{Theatre of Pain}, Crüe’s third album, released earlier this year. Composer Nikki Sixx, whose Satanic lyrics had already been censored on the second album [even to its title, which was originally \textit{Shout With the Devil}], was warned that he was the main cause of the Crüe’s Satanic image and instructed to deny it publicly.

There was, however, a problem: Nikki Sixx happened to believe in the Satanism he espoused in the songs he wrote, and he didn’t want to be “sanitized”. What to do? On April 1 road manager Richard Fisher told Sixx that he would be replaced upon the expiration of his contract that year. It is entirely possible that, at that time, it was contemplated that Sixx’ departure from the band later in the year would be openly acknowledged and a replacement just as openly added to the group. But now events took a turn which would ultimately result in a maze of intrigue, deception, and cover-ups to rival Watergate itself.

“In April we had just gotten off tour with Ozzy [Osbourne],” recounts Sixx, “and the band members decided to go our separate ways for a couple of weeks. I chose to go and stay with Jeff Rogers, whom I had met in Naples, Florida while doing a publicity stunt in February. On June 1 Jeff and I were invited to a party by a friend of his named John Spears. We got there at 8:30 PM and got stoned. At 10 PM Jeff and John asked me if they could use my car to get some more beer ...”

Sixx refused, but said he would drive them. Directed to the Pavilion shopping center in north Naples, he parked the car and strolled into a movie theater to visit the manager, whom he remembered from a previous publicity engagement, while the others headed for the row of shops. Leaving the theater, Sixx walked back towards his car, then noticed a man walking out of a bookstore in front of him.

“Out of nowhere I saw John catch up to him, and by the reflection of the light I saw a knife, which John put up against his throat. I panicked and ducked down behind a car. John ran to my car and called, ‘Come on, Nikki!’ I stood up and looked at Sam [Weiss, the bookstore owner], who saw me. Then I ran, jumped in my car, and sped off.”

At first it seemed that there would be no aftermath to the incident. On June 22 Sixx returned to work with the band, making a series of publicity appearances in Arkansas, Tennessee, North Carolina, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania to promote Shout at the Devil. Unknown to him, a second robbery had since been committed - this time using a rifle owned by Sixx. In Erie, Pennsylvania on August 28th, Sixx was arrested by two policemen who showed him a warrant for his arrest on the charge of armed robbery.

“I waived extradition and was returned to Florida. I spent 39 days in seclusion. Then our record company put up the $50,000 bond so that I could work on our latest album, Theatre of Pain.” He returned to Los Angeles for recording sessions from November 27 to December 21, 1984 - after which he helped make the video for the song “Smokin’ in the Boys Room” from Theatre.

On December 8 disaster struck. Lead singer Vince Neil’s sports car went out of control in Redondo Beach, California, resulting in Neil’s arrest for vehicular manslaughter and drunk driving. Intensive efforts were made to overcome the adverse publicity of this incident, to include dedication of Theatre of Pain to Nicholas Dingley (killed in the crash) and a message on the jacket exhorting fans not to drink and drive. While fans’ attention was focused on Neil’s tribulations in Los Angeles, however, another drama was taking place - unnoticed - in Florida.

Nikki Sixx’ trial was scheduled for December 27, and after finishing Theatre he and Mick Mars drove to Florida in Mars’ Lamborghini (which Sixx had decided to buy). December 27 came and went; Sixx could not bring himself to appear and had jumped bail. Four days later, shortly after midnight on New Year’s Day, Sixx and Mars took the Lamborghini out for a spin, whereupon there followed an episode straight out of Smokey and the Bandit. Recalls Sixx:

“The speeding ticket was quite a laugh. I was moving at 102 down U.S. #41 when I passed a Highway Patrol car. He put his siren and lights on, and caught up with me. When he was about 50 feet behind me, I floored it. Then I had to make a turn. I slowed down to 130 and spun the car to make it turn around 1-1/2 times. Then I had an 8-mile straightway. I floored it again, going past 170. In a little over a minute I saw a massive road-block and slammed on the brakes. One thing I learned is that you can't outrun a radio!”

Sixx received a ticket for (a) 189 mph in a 45 zone [which means the entire 8-mile stretch in under two minutes!], (b) speed too fast for conditions, (c) ran stop sign, (d) willful & wanton reckless driving, (e) ran red light, (f) driving on wrong side of road, (g) improper change of lane or course, (h) careless driving, (i) improper passing, and (j) improper turn. [“How,” I later asked him, “does one make a proper turn at 189 mph?”]

For these transgressions Sixx was slapped with a $750 fine by Judge Anderson the following day; he recalls that passenger Mars - who had been rather vocal in his annoyance at the arrest - was hit for twice that amount. Little did Sixx realize, however, how important that traffic ticket would be in the months to come.

Sixx’ failure to appear in court on the armed robbery charge had apparently not filtered down through the police bureaucracy by January 2, so he and Mars were able to pay their fines and go. Sixx headed for Erie, Pennsylvania where his ex-personal manager resided. “She hid me until March 4th, when I was caught and taken to the ‘Erie county prison’. I fought extradition for three more months, but on June 28th was finally taken back to Florida’s Collier County Jail.”

Meanwhile Mötley Crüe was on tour. Nikki Sixx’ replacement, however, was not appearing under his own name of Frankie Ferraro; rather he was appearing as ... Nikki Sixx!

How could such an impersonation succeed? It is not as difficult as it might seem. Sixx had always appeared in exotic war-paint and with a shaggy head of hair. On neither of Mötley Crüe's first two albums is there a close-up photo of him in which all of his features are clearly visible, and on Theatre of Pain the lower half of “Nikki Sixx’” face is covered in both photos, so that the difference between his jawline and that of the real Sixx cannot be seen. As bass guitarist and background vocalist, Sixx is not as instantly recognizable to live audiences as, say, lead singer Neil or lead guitarist Mars. Ferraro’s eyes are blue while Sixx’ are green, but rock-concert audiences are not usually fine-tuned to such details - particularly when they are not alerted to the fact that an impersonation is taking place.

So all through the spring and summer, while thousands of Mötley Crüe fans were applauding the imitation “Nikki Sixx”, the real one remained locked up in the Collier County Jail. In July he spoke to Elektra’s New York office, which assured him that he could still write music for the Crüe, and that he would continue to receive royalties for the band’s performance of his songs. [“Did you ever see any of that royalty money?” I later asked him. He responded, “Not a cent.”]

At the end of October, still sincere in his personal commitment to the Prince of Darkness, he wrote to the Temple of Set, identifying himself and applying for admission. Since it seemed a bit odd for a rock star to be buried in a Florida jail, we called Elektra Records’ Los Angeles and New York offices. We were informed by both that the real Nikki Sixx was on tour, and that this Matthew Trippe fellow was simply an imposter who should be ignored. I wrote back to the Man in the Iron Mask, asking for some evidence. Along came a series of letters crammed with anecdotes about the band, song lyrics [some “un-censored” from the sanitized versions on the albums], mail from fans, and - the Lamborghini traffic ticket [showing Sixx’ name as driver of the car and Mick Mars as its registered owner].

Sixx’ application to enter the Temple of Set was reviewed by the Council of Nine at the Temple’s Conclave in Las Vegas at the end of October. On one hand there was sympathy for an avowed Satanist, particularly one who had stuck to his guns under such adverse conditions. On the other hand it seemed inadvisable to admit someone under indictment for armed robbery, bail-jumping, and Smokey-and-the-Bandit car-chases at precisely the moment when Satanism was being pilloried in the media for heavy metal horror and criminal activity. Ultimately it was agreed that admissions to the Temple should be based solely on the sincerity and capability of the aspirant, whether or not it might be convenient for the Temple in terms of public relations. Nikki Sixx was admitted as a Setian I° on Halloween.

His ordeal in Florida, however, was only just beginning. Present in the audience at his trial on August 13, he recalls, were Mötley Crüe producer Tom Werman, director Daniel “Doc” McGhee, Ozzy Osbourne, and Brian Johnson [of the band AC/DC]. Sixx did not have an attorney and was assigned public defender David Mourik, who told him that the prosecution had an ironclad case and advised him to plead “no contest”.

Trusting Mourik’s advice, Sixx did so and was returned to jail - for another three months - to await sentencing. In early November he was sentenced to pay a fine, six months’ probation, and 2 years’ community control (a form of house arrest, which would restrict him to Florida). Since the bookstore owner had testified that the robbery had occurred in order to support drug habits, Sixx said, he was also ordered to attend a drug rehabilitation program.

What he did not yet know was that the establishment in question turned out to incorporate intensive Christian-fundamentalist religious programming as well. The community control and drug-rehabilitation sentence seemed odd to Sixx, who did not have a drug habit [nor, as a successful rock musician with a sizable income, would he need to rob a bookstore in order to support one]. And that wasn't the trial’s only surprise, as he wrote to me:

“This is weird. The dude who planned it was found ‘Not Guilty’. He’s the one who robbed the man. Jeff was in the car and got 3-1/2 years. I was blamed as the mastermind and I got 2-6 months. Strange as hell!”

But anything, even a drug program, seemed better than the Collier County Jail, so Sixx reported to the “New Life Center” of Fern House, Inc. in West Palm Beach. His initial joy at being out of jail [“Beds - real beds! - TV, couches, pop & candy machines!”] soon changed to apprehension when he began to realize what he had walked into, “It’s a church of God, and they preach that you should accept God in your Will. Screw them! All you really need is faith in yourself. They’re the types that want one to ask for forgiveness and to be ‘Born Again’. These people are brainwashed. Rules here are strict: No playing rock music or wearing T-shirts that invoke the Devil.” And:

“They cut my hair! And I mean it is short. They cut all the black off and left me with only short brown hair, and then denied me the right to dye it, saying: ‘It is the work of the Devil.’”

A short haircut could perhaps be survived, if not enjoyed - but other, more ominous developments began to be communicated by Sixx via phone calls during the following weeks: He was forbidden to communicate with friends from his “former life”. He was forbidden to go into a music store. Mail addressed to him was intercepted, confiscated, and/or destroyed. Even his guitar was confiscated. Verbal abuse and intimidation by the staff became a daily routine. Even his telephone calls to me were cut short abruptly by the staff after one or two minutes. It seemed that a systematic effort was underway, first to cut off all of Sixx’ contact with anyone who had known him as the insidious heavy metal Satanist, and then to work on him psychologically until he had completely lost his identity and could be re-programmed into a good little Born-Again Christian.

Increasingly concerned over Sixx’ plight, I asked Tom Traxinger, the Court Counselor who had assigned Sixx to Fern House, to investigate. He did so - with the result that, after his query had been fielded, Sixx called to say that he had been promptly hauled before one of the program directors, told that he would now be permanently restricted to the premises, that his phone calls would henceforth be restricted as well, and that the slightest infraction would result in his immediate return to jail. He was told that the the Temple of Set is “a sick, crazed cult” with which he should have nothing more to do.

At this news I wrote to the head of Fern House, promising public exposure of the treatment Sixx was receiving unless his human and civil rights were immediately and meticulously respected. The result was (a) a phone call from the program director saying that he “didn’t take lightly to threats”, and (b) Nikki Sixx being dumped at the West Palm Beach bus station at 8 PM with $2 in his pocket and a warning that he had until 1 PM the following day to report to his probation officer - 200 miles away in Naples!

Sixx called Temple of Set Priest Roger Whitaker from the bus station, and Whitaker offered to wire him funds for transportation. Sixx, however, was able to obtain emergency travel funds from Mötley Crüe’s Tommy Lee and complete the journey in time.

Lodged with friends in Naples, Sixx thought his troubles at an end. He began to speak about forming a new band, of returning to his musical career.

It seems that the vested interests behind Mötley Crüe thought otherwise. With one Nikki Sixx safely out of circulation in jail or a religious-deprogramming/drug-rehabilitation program, the other Sixx could continue to perform with the band until fans had grown completely accustomed to him. But the house of cards was beginning to tremble. Sixx’ ex-manager told him that Elektra was beginning to receive mail and phone calls from confused fans voicing suspicion about Ferraro. Sixx added that he was called by Doc McGhee, who said that if he continued to assert his identity, the company would prosecute him for fraud and see that he was returned to jail.

Then Sixx’ ex-manager called the family with whom he was staying, warning them that he was schizophrenic and quite possibly a physical danger to them. She phoned Priest Whitaker, first saying that she was just a housewife who had never worked as Sixx’ manager, then relaying the same warnings about prosecution of Sixx should he refuse to cooperate in the Ferraro representation. Priest Whitaker recommended an attorney to aid Sixx in a legal claim for his name, musical accomplishments, and royalties. Sixx responded that Gene Simmons of KISS had advised him against confronting Elektra until he had first made his plight known to his many fans and rallied popular support behind him.

So the Man in the Iron Mask remains today in Naples, Florida on probation and under “community control”, while the other “Nikki Sixx” works on a fourth album with the other three members of Mötley Crüe. Through the kind interest of Paul Kantner, he has been referred to a skilled attorney specializing in the music business, who hopefully will see fit to take his case.

What exactly is going on here? Part of the answer comes from Adept Demon O’Brien, who reports from contacts in the music business that, due to the Neil disaster and the whopping $2 million fine it entailed, Mötley Crüe is in dire financial straits. One speculates that corporate interests advanced this sum on condition that the group adhere to puritan standards of personal behavior henceforth, the idea being that the Crüe was still a good bet as a money-maker but that any more adverse publicity could destroy it permanently.

If it were ever contemplated in 1984 that Sixx’ armed-robbery charge could be survived, that option probably went out the window at the end of the year when the Neil accident occurred.

It does seem peculiar that Sixx, who just drove the robber to his destination, not knowing that a robbery would occur, would be advised to plead “no contest” to an armed robbery felony charge and be found guilty - while the actual perpetrator was found “not guilty”. It also seems peculiar that the executives behind Mötley Crüe would not have provided Sixx with privately-retained legal counsel to fight for his innocence.

Then there is the nature of Sixx' sentence, which appears tailor-made to keep him (a) stuck in Florida and (b) out of circulation in “community control” (house arrest) preceded by a “religious deprogramming” operation which, if it had been allowed to control Sixx totally without external attention, might have succeeded in destroying or seriously damaging his unique artistic and Satanic personality.

If Sixx had received his just due “behind the scenes”, with Elektra sending him regular royalties for his musical work, it could at least be assumed that the best was being made of a situation which, if known publicly, might have resulted in the total ruin of the band.
However the attempt to “erase” Sixx seems to have extended into monetary matters as well. Sixx states that he has seen no money from Warner's/Elektra at all since the beginning of 1985, and that checks from them in late 1984 were in the form of intermittent “pocket money” payments. On calling Elektra in New York in mid-85, he was told to “be patient”, and later that his earnings were being placed in an “escrow account”. He says that Mick Mars alerted him to the odd fact that the Florida state envelope containing the letter about this escrow account was actually postmarked in Los Angeles.
So it looks as though a deliberate decision were made to disconnect Matthew Trippe from his identity as Nikki Sixx, both publicly and - insofar as possible - psychologically. It is not known exactly who made such a decision. Whether or not the other three original members of Mötley Crüe anticipated the ordeal Sixx would endure as a consequence, the longer the Ferraro impersonation persisted, the more they were trapped into continuing with it. Even Ferraro himself, whether or not he believed the persona a temporary stand-in, is now stuck in the character - which, in the long run, will probably prove as unfortunate for him as for Sixx - if, no matter how talented he may be, he is impersonating another. Mars and Lee, at least, seem to have enough concern and affection for their old friend that they have stayed in occasional touch with him and on at least one occasion helped him with funds.

To merely expose the situation before the public eye might do damage that would help no one. Any corporate backers would promptly write off Mötley Crüe as a loss. Mars, Lee, and Neil would be disgraced for appearing to have cooperated in the abandonment and suppression of their old comrade. Ferraro would appear to have exploited Sixx’ misfortunes, to have deceived Sixx fans, and to be insufficiently talented to have succeeded on his own. And the real Nikki Sixx, after receiving an initial burst of publicity and sympathy, would remain saddled with a felony conviction and denied any royalties deserved from Warners/Elektra.

A better solution might be for an out-of-court, private settlement to secure for Sixx the past/present/future royalties he deserves, as well as the right to publicly assert the name Nikki Sixx as soon as the probation/community control is lifted. Alexandre Dumas’ story suggests a magically-appropriate end to the whole story, wherein - by advance agreement - Ferraro slips quietly out of the Nikki Sixx role and the real one just as quietly slips back into it!

A move should also be made to throw out the felony conviction, if in fact Sixx were not a knowing participant in the robbery and did nothing more than drive the perpetrators to the scene, then flee it in panic. He could presumably be criticized for poor taste in choosing friends, and penalized for fleeing the scene of a crime with the perpetrator - but that is a far cry from a felony conviction for armed robbery on his record, which will haunt and cripple him throughout his life.

Like Milton’s Satan, Nikki Sixx attained great heights only to fall to the lowest depths. The issue is now whether, also like Satan, he will be able to rise again to a greater dignity than before: a dignity born of the ordeals he has undergone and survived - loss of fame, wealth, freedom, the near-loss of his very personality and name. If teenaged fans once cheered him as a symbol of adolescent Sturm und Drang, people of all ages may now cheer him as one of those very uncommon, very noble individuals who would risk all, endure all - rather than refuse to Be.
Postscript 2010

The British rock magazine Kerrang! subsequently ran a feature article concerning the Sixx-identity question, and the Mötley Crüe band/management continued to deny Trippe’s claims. The Internet website “Chronological Crüe” states at:

Matthew John Trippe claimed Mötley Crüe’s managers Doc McGhee and Doug Thaler decided to bring him in as a new Nikki Sixx, after he was unable to continue after a serious car crash in mid ’83. In January 1988 he filed a lawsuit against McGhee Enterprises, Inc. citing civil theft and other relief, claiming royalties that were never paid for songs he said he wrote. These included Danger, Knock 'Em Dead Kid, Girls Girls Girls, You’re All I Need, Dancing on Glass, and Wild Side. Mötley Crüe demoed a song called Say Yeah about Trippe in March 1989 for their #1 album Dr. Feelgood. On the 10th December 1993, Matthew Trippe finally dropped his lawsuit.

On the 25th August 1998, Chronological Crüe caught up with his former band member Roger Hemond, to gain this interesting insight into the Nikki Sixx impostor Matthew Trippe.

...CC: What was the deal with his suit against Mötley? It was all a scam right?
RH: He could at times be very convincing and to this day, I don’t know whether or not anything he said was true. I have seen copyright forms processed by the Library of Congress that had every member of Mötley Crüe’s full real name, aka name, and social security number, with the exception of Nikki Sixx. All it said was Nikki Sixx and gave a social security number, which I swear to God was the same number on Matthew John Trippe’s social security card which I was holding in my other hand. I’ll tell you one thing, if I were going to try to pull what Matt alleges Thayer/McGhee did, I would probably pick someone a lot like Matt to do it with, because nobody would believe him completely - he was a lunatic! A variety of photos seemed to show differences in facial features through those years for Nikki Sixx. That could be attributed to any number of things though, I guess. Matt was at the time that I knew him, a member of the Temple of Set, which is a pretty exclusive organization. I find it a little strange that they would allow some weird-guy-nobody with no money to be a member, but I guess it could happen.

CC: What about his Nikki Sixx tattoos then?
RH: He had all of the tatts through the Theatre of Pain years. They were not cheaply done and there were several. He had a wife, a brand new baby boy, and no money - so I have no idea how he would have paid for them.

CC: So this is perhaps a case for Mulder & Scully [from the X-Files] in your mind then?
RH: He looked a lot like Nikki Sixx. Maybe a little heavier but the facial features were very similar. There are some things that leave considerable doubt as well, like the fact that he didn’t ‘remember’ some of the music he had written. He was not a virtuoso bassist! But weirder shit has happened in this country by far.

Order of the Trapezoid

In mid-1984 moviegoers were treated to an unusual science-fiction film entitled The Philadelphia Experiment. In that film the destroyer-escort U.S.S. Eldridge vanished from sight at the Philadelphia Navy Yard in October of 1943 into a sort of time/space-warp - the result of an experiment in electromagnetic-field-generated radar-invisibility which accidentally activated dimensional forces beyond those anticipated. Two sailors who jumped overboard wound up not in the water, but in 1984! The rest of the story recounted the Navy’s efforts to locate them, and to send one of them back through the time/space-warp to shut down the machinery aboard the Eldridge and return her to 1943 - albeit with hideous after-effects on the crew, some of whose molecular displacements had become entangled with that of the destroyer.

What most of those who saw the movie do not know is that the story of the “Philadelphia Experiment” is not necessarily fictional. For some years it has been a staple side-show in that amusing but rickety collection of curiosities, enigmas, and tall-tales that are periodically re-floated in van Däniken-style paperbacks. After you've read the first dozen such books, the goggle-eyed astonishment tends to wear thin - and after the second dozen [if you're really bored with what else is available on the rack] you can scan accounts of Earthwoman rape by UFO pilots, BHM (big hairy monster) sightings in the Himalayas, and/or ASS (abominable swamp slob) chases in the Everglades without getting the least bit unnerved.

In a way this is too bad, because mixed in with all the BHM/ASS accounts are some incidents, discoveries, and phenomena that are indeed rather at odds with the known objective universe. [How many of you know, for example, that H.P. Lovecraft’s fabled Irem (the ancient “city of the pillars” of the Great Old Ones in Arabia) has a basis in Arabian legend as an actual ruin (El Yafri) in the so-called “Empty Quarter” (the Rub el Khali) of the Arabian Desert? [Comment 1992: Since this article was originally written, that city has been discovered by archaeologists.]]

The Philadelphia Experiment is one of those incidents that started as semi-authenticated fact, was then exposed as an apparent hoax, was thus relegated to the loony-bin for many years, and now is beginning to gain a bit of reexamination as something that may be at least partially true after all.

What is publicly known about the PE today is due primarily to the efforts of a Minnesota school teacher by the name of William L. Moore, who became obsessed with the PE mystery and spent years following up every possible lead concerning it. The result was a book, The Philadelphia Experiment (NY: Fawcett Crest, 1980, reissued by Ballantine, 1984) (#20H on the reading list). Herein Moore sums up his rather impressive findings.

The story of the PE began with a series of letters from a “Carlos Allende/Carl Allen” sent in 1955 to scientist Morris Jessup, whose reputation as an up-and-coming astrophysicist had the misfortune to be tainted by his interest in the subject of UFOs. Such individuals, particularly if they publish anything on the subject [as Jessup did], are magnets for all sorts of nut mail, and at first glance the Allende letters seemed to fall squarely into that category. They came from spurious addresses, were written in various colors of ink, with inconsistent punctuation/capitalization, and were anything but logical in organization. For example:

The “result” was complete invisibility of a ship, Destroyer type, and all of its crew. While at Sea (Oct. 1943) The Field Was effective in an oblate spheroidal shape, extending one hundred yards (More or Less, due to Lunar position & Latitude) out from each beam of the ship. Any Person Within that sphere became vague in form BUT He too observed those Persons aboard that ship as though they too were of the same state, yet were walking upon nothing. Any person without that sphere could see Nothing save the clearly Defined shape of the Ships Hull in the Water, PROVIDING of course, that the person was just close enough to see yet, just barely outside of that field. Why tell you Now? Very simple; If You choose to go Mad, then you would reveal this information. Half of the officers & the crew of that Ship are at Present, Mad as Hatters. A few, are even Yet confined to certain areas where they May received trained Scientific aid when they, either, “Go Blank” or “Go Blank & Get Stuck.” Going-Blank IS Not at all an unpleasant experience to Healthily Curious Sailors. However it is when also, they “Get Stuck” that they call it “HELL” INCORPORATED” The Man thusly stricken can Not Move of his own volition unless two or More of those who are within the field go & touch him, quickly, else he “Freezes” ...

There are only a very few of the original Experimental D-E’s Crew Left by Now Sir. Most went insane, one just walked “throo” His quarters Wall in sight of His Wife & Child & 2 other crew Members (WAS NEVER SEEN AGAIN), two “Went into “The Flame,” I.E. They “Froze” & caught fire, while carrying common Small-Boat Compasses, one Man carried the compass & Caught fire, the other came for the “Laying on of Hands” as he was the nearest but he too, took fire. THEY BURNED FOR 18 DAYS. The faith in “Hand Laying” Died When this Happened & Mens Minds Went by the scores. The experiment Was a Complete Success. The Men were Complete Failures ...

Jessup died in 1959, an apparent suicide, without making any particular effort to follow up on the Allende letters. Intriguingly enough, the U.S. Navy’s Office of Naval Research (ONR) did. A copy of Jessup’s UFO book annotated by Allende was reproduced and circulated within ONR, and unsuccessful efforts were made to locate Allende himself. From the 7/23/76 form letter which the Navy routinely sends to PE inquirers:

The book came to the attention of two officers then assigned to ONR who happened to have a personal interest in the subject. It was they who contacted Dr. Jessup and asked him to take a look at his book. By the wording and style of one of the writers of the notations, Dr. Jessup concluded that the writer was the same person who had written him about the Philadelphia Experiment. It was also these two officers who personally had the book retyped and who arranged for the publication, in typewritten form, of 25 copies. The officers and their personal belongings have left ONR many years ago, and we do not have even a file copy of the annotated book.

The Office of Naval Research never conducted an official study of the manuscript. As for the Philadelphia Experiment itself, ONR has never conducted any investigations on invisibility, either in 1943 or at any other time. (ONR was established in 1946.) In view of present scientific knowledge, our scientists do not believe that such an experiment could be possible except in the realm of science fiction. A scientific discovery of such import, if it had in fact occurred, could hardly remain secret for such a long time ...

In 1969, following years of unsuccessful efforts to locate him, Allen/Allende suddenly walked into the offices of the Aerial Phenomenon Research Organization (APRO) in Tucson, Arizona and said that his annotations to the Varo edition of Jessup’s book [i.e. the annotations which so interested the two ONR officers] had been a hoax.

For casual PE enthusiasts, that ended everything right there. Interestingly enough, however, Allende at no time repudiated the account of the PE as contained in his letters to Jessup. [Later, in fact, he retracted his “confession”, saying that it had been motivated purely by a desire to keep sensationalist author Brad “Steiger” Olson from capitalizing on the Varo annotations.] To Moore, Allende recently elaborated concerning the PE:

I watched the air all around the ship ... turn slightly, ever so slightly darker than all the other air ... I saw, after a few minutes, a foggy green mist arise like a thin cloud. I think this must have been a mist of atomic particles. I watched as thereafter the DE 173 [the Eldridge] became rapidly invisible to human eyes. And yet the precise shape of the keel and underhull of that ship remained impressed into the ocean water as it and my own ship [the S.S. Andrew Furuseth] sped along somewhat side by side and close to inboards. Yes, today I can tell it, but then who cares ...

Curiously enough, the logbooks of both the Eldridge and the Andrew Furuseth covering the August-December 1943 period are missing. The Eldridge itself was transferred to the Greek navy in 1951, renamed the Lion, and is apparently still in service. Its official wartime history, according to Navy Department records, is also unremarkable: normal convoy duty, appropriate for a destroyer escort. One of Moore’s confidential sources, a Navy Commander who had served as a scientist in the Navy’s radar research program during World War II, commented:

I believe they did succeed in getting a ship out of Philadelphia or Newark for a limited time, probably not more than two or three weeks, and I think I heard they did some testing both along the Delaware River and off the coast, especially with regard to the effects of a strong magnetic force field on radar detection apparatus. I can't tell you much else about it or about what the results ultimately were because I don't know. My guess, and I emphasize guess, would be that every kind of receiving equipment possible was put aboard other vessels and along the shoreline to check on what would happen on the “other side” when both radio and low- and high-frequency radar were projected through the field. Undoubtedly observations would also have been made as to any effects that field might have had on light in the visual range. In any event, I do know that there was a great deal of work being done on total absorption as well as refraction, and this would certainly seem to tie in with such an experiment as this.

One of the people cited as a source in the second Allende letter was a “Dr. Franklin Reno”, a WWII government scientist whom Moore claims to have tracked down and interviewed, again with the provision that his real name not be revealed. Concerning his involvement with the PE in its planning stages, “Reno” stated to Moore:

Among the side effects [of the PE] would be a “boiling” of the water, ionization of the surrounding air, and even a “Zeemanizing” of the atoms ... One of the problems involved was that the ionization created by the field tended to cause an uneven refraction of the light ... According to our calculations, the result would not be a steady mirage effect, but rather a “moving back and forth” displacement caused by certain inherent tendencies of the AC field which would tend to create a confused area rather than a complete absence of color.

The “Zeeman effect” consists of the breaking of single spectral lines in the EM spectrum into three or more polarized components when a source of radiation is placed in a magnetic field. This “moving rainbow” effect is illustrated rather impressively in the 1984 film, I might add, and may have something to do with “Reno’s” recollection that the code name for the PE was Rainbow.

What is the significance of the Philadelphia Experiment, other than that it tends to reinforce the warnings of Dr. Becker [cf. Appendix #63] concerning the harmful results of intense EM radiation on living beings?
First, to the extent that Allende's account is at all credible, the effects of extremely high-level EM radiation, such as would have been generated aboard the Eldridge, can include molecular breakdown, spontaneous combustion, and - most difficult to conceptualize - the temporary or permanent displacement in four-dimensional space of the generated field [and anything within it].

It doesn’t make sense to talk of “fourth-dimensional time-travel”, as is shown in the film; the fourth dimension doesn’t operate as some sort of weird “escape hatch”. It is simply the measurement of an object’s extension in or duration in time in comparison with an arbitrarily-chosen object of reference [for example, Einstein’s light velocity], without which a definition according to the first three dimensions is meaningless.

Newtonian physics (phenomena caused by particles banging against particles) was eventually overwhelmed by Einsteinian physics (the cosmos explained in terms of fields, with “particles” ultimately explainable as merely intensely-concentrated fields). For awhile there remained a rat in the woodpile, however, as no one was quite sure what a “field” actually was, if in fact there is “nothing banging around” in it. The 19th century Scottish physicist/mathematician James Maxwell, famous for calculating the field-relationship between electricity and magnetism, hypothesized some kind of “ether” as a carrying medium. The Michelson-Morley experiment appeared to rule out “ether”, leaving fields defined [if you can call it a definition!] as “the manifestation of an electromagnetic phenomenon or electric wave”.

The smashing of the atom appeared to vindicate Einstein’s view of the universe; it now seemed possible to reduce everything to force-fields. The General Theory of Relativity (GTR) can be condensed into the proposition that nuclear and electromagnetic energy are inter-changeable and mathematically interconnected.

But Einstein had his own woodpile-rat: the Unified Field Theory (UFT), by which he had hoped to prove the interchangeability of electromagnetic fields with gravity (which he considered a field phenomenon). This would have tied the entire objective universe together in a nice, neat, Einsteinian package. He finally abandoned the UFT in 1929 after ten years’ struggling with it. Reason: Gravity didn't cooperate by behaving like a field. [Forget casual talk about “gravitational fields”.] Einstein decided he didn’t need gravity to make the GTR work [since no one else knew what made gravity work either], and that was curtains for the UFT.

The GTR has since taken a body blow with the advent of quantum physics, in which the movement of light, hence fields, has been traced to ultimate “packets” or quanta of mass/energy called photons. [Near miss, Maxwell!] We are back to Newton, but to a weird kind of Newton wherein the “ultimate objective universe” is a continually-fluid “soup” of interchanging quanta, which are themselves changing in internal proportion, if not in absolute value (the photon).

The current generation of physicists are nevertheless as deeply committed to the GTR as those of Columbus’ day were to a flat Earth, so there are a lot of exercises underway under the general heading of jamming the stepsister’s foot into Cinderella’s glass slipper - such as “curved space”, which to Einstein critics like Nikola Tesla was/is an idiotic notion: Because of the coexistence of action & reaction, Tesla pointed out, all “curvature” would be counteracted by “straightening”.

Anyway, the discovery of the photon has engendered a snipe hunt for the hypothetical “graviton”, presumably leading to a quantum-mechanics-era UFT and a Nobel Prize. Lots of scientists have yelled “Bingo!”, but to date no one’s actually produced a winning card. Gravity remains mysterious. Disappointed Bingo-players have shrugged off their failure by saying, shucks, it’s just because gravitons are so small, which is because gravity is such a weak force.

Well, it’s strong enough to keep the 18.5 mile/second speeding Earth (with a specific gravity of 5.417) from zooming off into space. And it obviously gets “stronger” as mass increases [which must have tantalized Einstein because of the field-implications], but not necessarily as distance decreases - which screws up “field” notions. Fields, moreover, can be escaped entirely, since they curve back into themselves [which explains why Einstein’s theoretical “field universe” is sometimes over-simplified into a gigantic donut in textbooks]. Gravity cannot be escaped: the space shuttle’s seeming freedom” from it, for example, is the result of its counteraction by tremendous orbital speed - in other words, the old “force = mass x acceleration” equation you learned in high school. And Sol hangs on to Pluto just as surely as it does Earth.

All of which digression is to say that the energy force responsible for the phenomenon of gravity is still unidentified. If in fact the underlying premise of the UFT - that all kinds of quanta are interchangeable - is true, and the known behavior of gravity suggests that it is, the manipulation of EM or nuclear energy in certain ways should affect and/or activate certain kinds of gravitational-energy phenomena.

Is this what happened in the Philadelphia Navy Yard in October 1943? In the process of attempting to deflect radar waves by generation of an extraordinarily-strong EM field around the Eldridge, did momentary transmutation accidentally occur into another energy medium entirely - that responsible for the binding-together of mass, i.e. gravity?

When the forces governing the cohesion of lowly little atoms are disrupted in a certain way, the result is an atomic explosion of astonishing power. What could be the consequences if “gravitons” were “smashed”? Not necessarily anti-gravity; in fact that would presumably require a highly-channeled and controlled application of the technique. More probably the uncontrolled release of gravitational energy in any manner of unsuspected distortions, among which could very possibly be the momentary dislocation of the Eldridge into what quantum physicists call a “wormhole” and consequent disruption of certain molecular equivalences in the organic constitutions of the humans aboard [hence the “freezing” and “burning” incidents reported by Allende].

If so, why - as the Navy form-letter so reasonably suggests - wouldn’t anything have come of the PE beyond a short-sighted coverup? First of all, wartime experimental research was oriented towards results that seemed to promise quick applications in support of victory [hence the Manhattan Project]. If the Philadelphia Experiment had produced a workable radar-blind for ships or aircraft, it might have made headlines. But dematerializing ships and freezing/burning sailors would simply mean failure in terms of war-utilization. It is not implausible that such an incident would result in the project’s abrupt termination and a coverup of the disaster to the personnel involved.

And later, after the war, why no further experiments in the same vein? For one thing, as noted above, quantum physics is still trying to get its act together: to understand the observed universe. The PE might well be “unexplored and unexplained”, hence simply ignored. And if it is indeed a hyper-classified incident, the independent scientific community would not have knowledge of or access to any substantive documentation concerning the calculations, equipment, or results. A few “van Däniken-style” paperback accounts and a “science-fiction” movie are not the stuff around which research grants are assembled. Nevertheless, says Moore:

One of Charles Berlitz’ informants, who emphatically declined to be named, confided to Berlitz that he had seen highly classified documents in the Navy files in Washington, D.C. which indicated that at least some phases of the experiments are still in progress.

Science Daily (August 11, 2008) - Scientists at the University of California, Berkeley, have for the first time engineered 3-D materials that can reverse the natural direction of visible and near-infrared light, a development that could help form the basis for higher resolution optical imaging, nanocircuits for high-powered computers, and, to the delight of science-fiction and fantasy buffs, cloaking devices that could render objects invisible to the human eye.

Two breakthroughs in the development of metamaterials - composite materials with extraordinary capabilities to bend electromagnetic waves - are reported separately this week in the August 13 advanced online issue of Nature, and in the August 15 issue of Science …

13. SUPPLEMENTARY NOTES

14. ABSTRACT
This study was tasked with the purpose of collecting information describing the teleportation of material objects, providing a description of teleportation as it occurs in physics, its theoretical and experimental status, and a projection of potential applications. The study also consisted of a search for teleportation phenomena occurring naturally or under laboratory conditions that can be assembled into a model describing the conditions required to accomplish the transfer of objects. This included a review and documentation of quantum teleportation, its theoretical basis, technological development, and its potential applications. The characteristics of teleportation were defined and physical theories were evaluated in terms of their ability to completely describe the phenomena. Contemporary physics, as well as theories that presently challenge the current physics paradigm were investigated. The author identified and proposed two unique physics models for teleportation that are based on the manipulation of either the general relativistic spacetime metric or the spacetime vacuum electromagnetic (zero-point fluctuations) parameters. Naturally occurring anomalous teleportation phenomena that were previously studied by the United States and foreign governments were also documented in the study and are reviewed in the report. The author proposes an additional model for teleportation that is based on a combination of the experimental results from the previous government studies and advanced physics concepts. Numerous recommendations outlining proposals for further theoretical and experimental studies are given in the report. The report also includes an extensive teleportation bibliography.

Appendix 69: The Order of Amon

- by R. Amn DeCecco IV°, Grand Master

Amon Issues the breath from which emerges a new strength that is recognized and actualized uniquely by each Initiate. Breathe in, and this essence will fill you with a strength to discover and eventually understand all that is hidden to you.

The Order derives much of its work from the exploration of our humanity - and the refinement of this humanity - as we continuously strive for a more perfect synthesis of Xeper and the Gift of Set. If we are to Become of the gods, there first must be a clear perception of exactly what we are on a mortal/fundamental level. What may be weak must be strengthened or transformed. What is strong must Become impervious to everything that could permanently interfere with the Initiate’s further evolution.

This the Amonian does through the utility of the heart. The heart is the center of our emotional being. The ancient Egyptians believed that the heart was the seat of all power and was responsible for the final crowning of wisdom as the initiate actualized personal emotional senses to maximum levels of awareness. The Amonian recognizes the importance of this process and so begins a powerful investigative course of self realization. This is done so that a full comprehension can be achieved of why our emotional self (heart) has the potential to be so complementary to Black Magic.

A prerequisite for utilization of the heart is a thorough initiatory self-examination, so that the one may truly begin to feel, see, and know one’s self completely. This particular method of initiation is absolutely brutal in its delivery. Often we only think we see, feel, or sense the truth within. The Amonian eventually learns to use all senses with great deliberation and with a new clarity of purpose.

The Order of Amon provides an environment of breath and fire (strength through willed transmutation) to assist the Initiate in eliminating/transforming all that is not essential to the Gift of Set. Further assisting in the creation of the core self, the personal philosophic aspects that are the cumulative efforts and results of Xeper are repeatedly purified by the Fire of Amon. To say that this particular method of initiation is difficult would be an understatement. It is perhaps one of the most difficult of all. For this very real journey is one into the darkest and most hidden areas of our selves that are seldom realized.

Adepts II° will work within the Order of Amon in a manner that is befitting self actualization through creative intelligence. The Order is open to Adepts II°+ who have communicated and demonstrated a sincere reason to work in this particular environment.

Magical practices will remain somewhat personal, since each Initiate possesses talents and abilities that are uniquely their own. Guidelines will be put in place so that the Initiate learns to extract the best from these talents and abilities. This will be experienced through the destructive Fire of Amon that is a hidden aspect of the Order and which will become known to the Initiate while moving closer to the Order’s Inner Sanctum. In time a certain purity of being will emerge from this process, and this purity will transform the Initiate sufficiently to become strong enough to reach for the Grail of all understanding.

Only through obliteration of the Universe that is may man seal his Mastery of the Black Flame, for only thus may he know that he is not subject to a greater Will.

- Statement of Leviathan, The Diabolicon
And alone I cannot preserve my Elect, but I would teach them and strengthen their Will against the coming peril, that they and their Blood may endure. To do this I must give further of my own Essence to my Elect, and, should they fail, the Majesty of Set shall fade and be ended.

- The Book of Coming Forth By Night

A Partial List of Foci for Amonians

1. Solely responsible for personal emotional well-being.

2. Works from a brutal list of “things” in the inner and outer worlds that need to be changed, and follows a chosen course of action to implement this change beginning with the less difficult, and gradually working on to the more complex.

3. Learns to discover what gives “the Breath of Life” and how this may be a key to one’s hidden nature.

4. Learns to eventually become open to the prompting of Amon in traditional ways, via dreams and omens that may also assist in #2 and #3 above.

5. Learns about the mysteries of the body, from exploring the entire scope of sexuality, to getting regular check-ups, to practicing Tai-Chi. “The body is the black earth of the Nile; it hides the potential for all growth.”

6. Engages in an academic/historic study of the Priesthood of Amon and the Middle Kingdom (and later) through intuitive means; may practice the art of ruling the world through prophecy.

7. Cultivates silence; avoids the trivia of the moment and learns to speak with precision and with power. “Still waters run deep” is a cliché that should be used by friends and enemies alike to describe all Order members.

8. Practices some sort of magical breathing exercise often to summon “The Breath of Life” and the power necessary to see things as they really are.

9. Is willing to explore difficult emotional issues that may take years or even decades to understand. Refuses to fall into the myth of the “quick fix”.

Initiation is the work of a lifetime. Amon’s great temple was in continuous construction for a thousand years.
[The Order of Amn’s Original Statement from the 1970s]

Amn:
Bringing forth, through creative fire and breath,
the perfection of the gods, and of the work.

Philosophical Tenets

Emblematic of the Philosopher-Kings, the Order of Amn pursues Setian understanding of all, through utilization of the heart (ab). The quality of all that is arises through exploration, until eventually the Initiate is “in touch” and is able, through personal power, to create, along with the magical, the personal philosophic self: that self which will aid in accomplishing the work - removed from the stigma of the past and perfected by the fires of the present Æon.

Goals

Each Initiate of the Order magically acts in the capacity akin to the ancient and now restructured Priesthood of Amon. Initiates should work in a manner befitting and complementing self-actualization through creative intelligence, beginning at the beginning. In this manner imperfection is destroyed through the destructive fires of the more hidden aspects of the Order, which will surface only through self-created purity. This purity is a “rallying banner” for all Setians of all Orders.

Magic

Aim ... Xeper - to Become ... Xepera - to manifest that which will be ... Xeperu. Magical practice remains somewhat personal to the Initiate, and guidelines may be set up for the successful approach to Thelemic, Satanic, and Setian manipulation of the personal/impersonal universe. Magic is conceived as an act of existence.

Exploration

All Initiates of the Order may be asked to explore - utilizing the senses - the past, present, and future.

One of the aims of magical initiation is to understand the universes through implementation of the senses outside the hackneyed classical philosophers’ and moralists’ ravings.

The magical tenets set down before are tools which lead us to the understanding and eventual realization of the philosophies presently unknown or hidden.

Only through obliteration of the Universe that is may man seal his Mastery of the Black Flame, for only thus may he know that he is not subject to a greater Will.

- Statement of Leviathan, The Diabolicón

If after careful consideration you decide to work, please know firstly that you will walk the path of fire. The flame is loving and guiding, but equally protective of the work and destructive of imperfection.
The utilization and successful endurance of this phase of the Initiate’s magical growth can lead to the ultimate magical goal: a god-like being. Then begins the next step...

My voice reaches unto Hermonthis: Amon responds to my invocation: He stretches forth his hand to me, and I rejoice: He calls out from behind me, “I am rushing towards thee ... to thee, Meriamn! I am with thee. It is I, thy Father: My hand is with thee. I am the Lord of Strength, Lover of Valor.” I have found a courageous heart, and I am content. All that I desire will come to pass!

- The King of Pharaonic Theocracy

There is no truth but what is! The true illusion is what one sees! The most obvious lie is that which one is sure he knows to be true!
Appendix 70: The Order of Anpu

- by Linda Reynolds IV°, Grand Master

Briefly, the purpose of the Order of Anpu will be to uncover the true Black Magical dynamics of the various aspects of the Opener of the Way which may be buried deep within the Initiate’s most hidden self. A challenge proclaimed in the ancient language of Wepwawet can only result in those veils of self-deceit being lifted away, secret issues forced, silent weaknesses exposed and disposed of - the true magician transformed, empowered, and armed with clear vision.

This is how my announcement was worded in the August 1993 issue of the Scroll of Set. I then went on to say that I would clarify that statement at Set-XIV. To do so, however, would be an attempt to condense all the knowledge I’ve gathered throughout my years in the Temple of Set and put it all on a couple of sheets of paper. A skilled wordsmith may find that a simple task; I am not a wordsmith. What I am, however, is one of the people you’ll encounter in life who can show you some truths about yourself! This is the focus, the culmination of my Work along the Path all these years. It is my only concern; my only life’s Work; the reason for and purpose of the Order of Anpu.

We shall pursue this truth in different ways: some extremely mysterious and ceremonial, others straightforward and more conventional. Some will be personal and confrontational, others simple and easily accessible. The routes are varied, including the exploration of time, our manipulation of it, its impact on our lives and Work, etc. We shall also explore the “alien being” that dwells within and nearby each of us - the “Self ahead of self” as you’ve probably heard it described - and the implications of neter and magical names, the connection with and utilization of the Isolate Intelligence - the ultimate access to that part of each of us that can sometimes remain elusive. Uncovering truth, Opening the Way, transforming the ordinary into the extraordinary - all the functions and Work of the ancient sorcerer and the modern Black Magician and the multi-leveled connections between them shall be our task and our pleasure!

As the figure and language of Wepwawet was prominent to the ancient priesthoods in a strategic sense (symbolizing the unification of the Egyptian state) so we of the Order of Anpu shall create and utilize our own rites and language to transform and unify ourselves on all planes of existence and perception, to understand and master both sides of the Abyss.

Membership in the Order of Anpu shall be by invitation only (following a personal conversation with the Grand Master) and shall be offered to Initiates of the II° and above who express an interest. Since the Work of the Order of Anpu is complementary to all the Work of the Temple of Set and its other Orders, dual Order membership is acceptable with the permission of the Grand Masters concerned.
Appendix 71: The Order of Bast

- by Margaret A. Wendall IV°, Grand Master

The Order of Bast is one of the oldest Orders in the Temple of Set. It began in the Church of Satan as Bubastis Chapel and continued into the Year X as Bubastis Pylon. One thing which has always distinguished the Order of Bast is that its members have never been afraid to get our feet wet or incur the “wrath” of other Initiates by our studies. One of my goals in the Temple of Set was to re-create this Order; but when I looked at the mailing list, most of the names were just this - names, not faces or voices. It has been difficult for me to communicate with “names”, although I realize each name is connected with a Being on a path at least parallel, if not more or less identical to my own. I hesitated.

At Set-V in Santa Cruz names became much more. Each Initiate who attended is my Brother or Sister and friend. It will be much easier to communicate with you, and this is a real joy to me.

Therefore it is with great pleasure that I announce the re-creation of the Order of Bast - with a change. Bast, the Lady of Life, is interested in the quality of our lives. Isn’t your own Bast interested in how your life is going, if for no other reason than when she purrs for a grumpy Setian, it’s to cheer you up and prompt you to try harder?

The new Order of Bast will be devoted to the study of modern technology and how it affects us as Setians. We will ask and try to answer the following kinds of questions [which are general but not exclusive]:

1. How does modern technology affect our lives, both magical and mundane?

2. How can we adapt to this new technology? Should we? Must we?

3. How can we adapt modern technology to our advantage, both as individuals and as the Temple of Set?

We had an excellent answer to the last question at the Conclave Rite of Recognition of Stephen Flowers as a Priest of Set. He could not attend the Conclave in Santa Cruz; hence the Rite was held simultaneously in Santa Cruz and in Texas, via speakerphone. Those of us in Santa Cruz heard Priest Flowers, and he and his Pylon heard the Priesthood assembled on the West Coast. It was a very magical moment. No longer are we strangers or names on a list. I feel as though I have known Priest Flowers all my life. Those of us attending this Rite used modern technology to achieve this Black Magic.

Other areas we could explore are: (1) sending our Word and words into outer space and examining the results, (2) robotics, (3) medicine, (4) electronic mail, (5) artificial intelligence, and (6) an infinite number of other equally-interesting technological endeavors. A television ad for a computer magazine sums up the Magical Quest of the Order of Bast: “The possibilities are endless.”
Appendix 72: The Order of Beelzebub
- by Paul F. McAtee IV°, Grand Master

In the Chinese Year of the Goat, following the Dog Days of Sirius and in clear view from the planet Mars, the Esoteric Order of Beelzebub came into being.

Beelzebub, a persona of antiquity, is a well-known figure throughout Western occult literature, by means of such sources as the Götia. However within the context of the EOB, it is noted that across the Middle East and Persia of ancient times the name had a much different meaning than is now commonly known. For instance, amongst the Philistines Beelzebub was associated with the Sun, which also brought the flies, resulting in his popular title “Lord of the Flies”. An even older version of the name, “Ba’al Zebul”, is translated as “Lord of the Mansion” or “Master of the Dwelling”. This latter translation is of special significance to the work of the Order.

It has been said that man in his ordinary mechanical state is like unto a mansion where the master of the estate is gone away on business or vacation and the staff is unsure of precisely when he will return. Thus the staff begins behaving in ways they never would is the master were present. The gardener lets the foliage grow wildly, the butler tries on the master’s clothing in an effort to mimic his authority, while the kitchen staff prepare uncommon dishes at all hours of the day, and so on. Just as mice will play while the cat is away, order can be restored to the mansion only by the master’s return.

Man’s position in the universe is very much like this. Without a single and permanent “I” or “master” to take command and order his inner state of affairs, his life is governed mostly by whims, false personalities, and unconscious reactions. Emotions may try to do the work of the intellect, the intellect may try to do the work of the body, and so forth. Without a master a man’s house falls quickly into a state of disarray, and in such a state it is very unlikely that the man will accomplish anything meaningful for himself. Just as only the master can return his own house to order, only a single and governing “I” can return the self to order.

Work in the EoB begins with preparing one’s mansion for the return of its master.

Aim

The aim of the EOB is toward the question of self-consciousness, in connection with and by means of, the Æonic word Xeper. To “Come Into Being” in this sense may also be taken as “to come into a state of conscious being”. Consciousness, from the point of view of the EOB, is the result of an effort drawn from the totality of one’s being, to include not only one’s thoughts but also one’s feelings, sensation, and physical presence. Xeper, then, is not only an intellectual effort, but a process engaging the entirety of one’s being.

If the Gift of Set is a gift of conscious essence, then it is a gift of potential only. Man in his ordinary state generally assumes he possesses such things as consciousness or will. However it may be quickly demonstrated by a few simple experiments that most common human functioning takes place on a purely non-conscious, mechanical level. From the point of view of the EOB, it is very important to realize that such things as consciousness and will exist for us initially only as possibilities, for man is unable to work toward that which he already believes himself to possess. The Remanifestation of a higher, more “permanent” conscious state is generally only the result of much work and wish.
Conditions for Work

Knowledge, from the point of view of the Order, refers to knowledge that can help man in his quest to become himself. Such knowledge is a very scarce resource in the world, and is generally found only in esoteric “schools”. While some religions in the world today may have had their origins in schools, it is nevertheless important to recognize certain distinctions in principle between “schools” and “religions”. For instance, in religion one’s beliefs are often the main focus. By contrast in a school one’s beliefs are not nearly so important as what one might do, or what one might wish for.

In a school one may come in contact with “esoteric knowledge”. Esoteric knowledge is a body of ideas and teachings of a rather material/organic nature, disseminated almost entirely by means of direct interaction or oral tradition, by means of schools. Thus esoteric knowledge tends to travel in accordance with the laws of accumulation and magnetism, more so than the conventional and often politically governed channels of ordinary knowledge. Esoteric knowledge often seems to transmit something more than the sum total of words spoken, and can act almost like “food” for higher states of being.

While empires may crumble and libraries burn, esoteric knowledge survives by covert passage from mouth to ear and “essence-transmission” from teacher to student. The conditions of the world in which we find ourselves are largely mechanical and chaotic, offering little if any possibility for conscious evolution. Schools, unlike many religions, are often quite difficult to find – but when found, represent a great opportunity as well as a great challenge. Indeed, finding a true school may require not only will and wish, but a bit of luck as well.

The exoteric manifestation of the Temple of Set is as a religion, functioning in broadly socio-political conditions. The esoteric manifestation of the Temple is as a school, functioning in exclusively metaphysical conditions. While recognizing the absolute necessity of its exoteric manifestation, it is the Temple’s esoteric manifestation that forms the circle of the EOB.
Appendix 73: Order of the Black Tower

- by James B. Severson IV°, Grand Master

Symbolism of the Tower

In the Egyptian system of hieroglyphs, the tower is a determinative sign denoting height or the act of rising above the common level of life and society. Basically the tower is symbolic of ascent (Essent).

During the Middle Ages towers and belfries held the significance of watchtowers. But also, by the simple application of symbolism of level (whereby material height implies spiritual elevation), they expressed the same symbolism as the ladder - linking earth and heaven...1

Since the idea of elevation and ascent (Essent), implicit in the tower, connotes transformation and evolution, the athanor (the alchemist’s furnace) was given the shape of a tower. This signified inversely that the metamorphosis of matter implied a process of ascent.

Another symbol usually mentioned in this connection is the bronze tower in which Diana, the mother of Perseus, was imprisoned.

Finally we would point out the analogy between the tower and man: Just as the tree is closer to the human figure than the horizontal forms of animals, so too is the tower the only structural form distinguished by verticality. Windows at the topmost level, almost always large in size, correspond to the eyes and the mind of man.1

It is possible to discover a dual tendency in the symbolism of the tower. Its upward impulse may be accomplished by a deepening movement: the greater the height, the deeper the foundations.

Nietzsche talked of descent during ascent (Essent). Nerval (in Aurelia) refers to the symbolism of the tower and said: “I found myself in a tower, whose foundations were sunk deep into the earth, reaching up like a spire into the sky, that my whole existence already seemed bound to be consumed in climbing up and down.”1

Introduction to the Order

What is the Order of the Black Tower, and what magical elements can be found therein?

The symbol of the Tower has been, and continues to be a profound and enduring image within a large variety of magical traditions.

As a metaphor for the process of initiation in general, I have chosen this image to further symbolize the emergence of an ancient and long-overlooked initiatory tradition: the Vedic Left-Hand Path. Examples are the Kaula School of Tantrism and the Yoga Sutras of Patanjali. [“Vedic” refers to a grouping of initiatory texts entitled the Veda, or simply “Knowledge” in Sanskrit. The actual written Veda was a product of India ca. 1500 to 800 BCE, but existed as an oral tradition for quite some time previous to those dates.]

Within many traditions of the East, the concept of yoga is obviously a prevalent core aspect. It has now become important that this term be defined in an entirely new light.
Yoga and the Left-Hand Path

“Yoga: ‘union’; a yoke; a process or path or displace leading to oneness with the divine or with one’s self (from the root verb yuj (‘to unite, join, connect’); the state of oneness with the self, a god; the practice leading to that state.”

According to Shaiva Siddhanta it is a path to liberation characterized by contemplation and internal worship. It is called the path of friendship to a god (sakha-marga). Its goal is gaining the form of a god (Sarupya) [See Moksha].

Moksha: “liberation: spiritual freedom: release: the final goal of human life (from the root verb moksh ‘to liberate’).”

Shaiva Siddhanta says that the path of release consists in carya, kriya, yoga, and jnana. In release the soul obtains its individuality. It becomes similar to a god. Thus release is unity in duality. The soul enjoys a god’s nature, though it is not identical with any particular god.

“It isn’t over ’til it’s over.” This revelation is what separates Left-Hand Path philosophy from the greedy hedonism of the world. Non-players may think that the game tokens they accumulate, from a good car to a happy marriage, are signs they are winning. These are merely signs they are playing well. In chess you may capture almost all of your opponent’s pieces, but you lose if your king is captured.

- Don Webb V°, “Moksa, or What do I Do when the World Sucks?”

Setian Black Yoga

What I am beginning to define as “Setian Black Yoga” (SBY) is a process by which the laws of nature are intelligently and deliberately applied to daily life in order to consciously realize one’s own isolate nature. SBY is also based on the theory that man is not his body alone: that the real spirit (Purusa) actually uses the body as an instrument.

In order for this to be a LHP truism, the presence of a “watcher” or witnessing element within the mind must first be located, then further enhanced.

Singularity breeds further understanding and can afford the Black Magician an ability to bind and/or separate the forces within and beyond, for the purposes of willed intent.

Dark Transcendence

Dark Transcendence (DT) is the primary focus of the Order. Within the envelope of Greater Black Magic, DT takes a unique, but not necessarily uncommon approach.

Utilizing the tools of SBY, DT is a four-fold process utilizing the body, the mind, the emotions, and the spirit (psyche).

Theoretically one’s isolate nature defines what clarity one would experience in any of the above four realms - the more the clarity, the more the possibility for initiatory balance. Here “balance” refers to the ability to draw upon the integrative strength each realm can afford another.
The Nine Schools of the Order

To facilitate mastery of this process, the OBT offers Nine Schools of SBY as a starting point:

1. Hatha, which is based on control of the physical body to open it to the cosmic energy by breathing and physical exercises. [LHP concept: To engage the body as one of the principal tools in accessing & utilizing the isolate self.]

2. Laya, which works on the psychic centers to awaken the primordial cosmic energy of the individual (Kundalini). [LHP concept: To better understand how these psychic centers can effect the ability of the self to manifest within/into objectivity.]

3. Mantra, which makes use of the repetition of certain words and phrases to steady the mind. [LHP note: The use of specific magical formula, which empowers the isolate self towards a greater ability to manifest within/into objectively.]

The above three work by operating from the outer periphery of consciousness to an inner center. The following three proceed from the inner self outwards:

4. Jnana, which seeks to effect a resonance of inner and outer by a change of thought, resulting from the attainment of a deeper understanding of both the objective and subjective (Yoga of Knowledge). [LHP concept: The word union being replaced with resonance and/or “to Yoke”, which implies more of a separate vantage-point, and reference for isolate control.]

5. Bhakti, which seeks to effect a resonance by the change of one’s emotional consciousness through devotion to an ideal - or a First Principle as per Plato (Yoga of Devotion). [LHP concept: Devotion to the isolate self involving but not limited to: self-love, deserving compassion, compassionless love, etc.]

6. Karma, which seeks to effect a resonance by which control of one’s actions initiate from within the core self (Yoga of Action). [LHP concept: This is a “self” determined act. Specifically for the purposes of gaining a greater understanding of that same self. In other words, to have self-control is one of the greatest challenges a Setian can continue to endeavor.]

All of the above six are embraced in:

7. Raja Yoga, one of the earliest and most scientific treatments of the subject of self-transformation. [LHP concept: Raja Yoga is - for the most part, a mental and/or spiritual discipline, which requires an isolate perspective to be effective. It is here more so than anywhere else that the concept of “to Yoke” has its greatest impact on the Adept. Union - or more specifically understanding, with regards to the isolate self is the critical differentiation which separates this form of Yoga from its RHP cousins.]
In the Setian/LHP system of Yoga there are also two other schools - as mentioned above, which are only now being developed and extrapolated upon:

8. Luciferian which seeks to isolate the self in a context, which transcends the facade of only the ego, towards a greater appreciation of the totality of the psyche.

9. Meta which seeks to transcend that very subjectivity, which provides the initial vehicle for LHP liberation. [Facilitator’s note: This is the SBT’s version of the mystery of the Red Magus. Thank you, Order of Leviathan.]

Structure and Operation

As is the general guideline for the entire Temple of Set, OBT affiliation is restricted to II°+ Initiates. All interested Initiates are encouraged to first contact a member of the Order before actually contacting the Grand Master. The reasons for this are many, so I’ll only mention a few here:

One of the greatest gifts an Order can give its members is the opportunity for magical and/or initiatory personalization. The GM has already created a specified path for himself, thus the formation of the Order. But the active member has - in most cases, just begun. And his perspective can be both various as well as personally unique.

Depending on one’s level of knowledge and proficiency, it is also good to start from a platform of somewhat familiarity - like that of a similar degree or interest level, before attempting anything unfamiliar.

Once contact has been established, the process of acceptance will take as long as is needed for each individual candidate.

Structures of the Order

The Peristyle

The outer courtyard of ancient temples was sometimes called a Peristyle. A place in which the novices would congregate and study - a place of introduction, which could further specify various types of further advancement...

For those who find this magical concept intriguing, but do not have significant and/or a developed background in general Yogic processes, they would begin their journey here. Even those who would have a developed background, but have not yet integrated such a tool within the general concept of Setian philosophy, would also begin here.

The Inner Temple

In those same ancient temples of antiquity, the concept of entrance into the Inner Temple was a process of advanced education, as well as great initiatory understanding.

The Inner Temple of the OBT will represent a definitive personalization of the initiate’s process within the Order, specifically based upon the concepts of LHP initiation and the Temple of Set proper.

The school of Left-Hand Path Yoga is about creating suitable companions for the Prince of Darkness. It will be hard Work to create such a School in the West, but hard Work is the path of the deified human as opposed to the occult culture bum.
Information Sources within the OBT

The Third Eye

The OBT will report its experiments and/or magical discoveries to the Temple through a newsletter: The Third Eye. It will be published approximately three to four times a year. All the active membership will be expected to contribute to this publication on a regular basis.

This publication will be made available to all Pylon Sentinels and Masters of the Temple free of charge. All other initiates would be asked for a donation of US$3 per issue to cover the costs of printing and postage. [Yearly subscriptions are available upon request.]

The Black Tower Chronicles

At the end of each year the Order will produce a single volume of information chronicling its endeavors. Any interested Temple initiates - regardless of Order affiliation & holding at least the Degree of Adept, are welcome to purchase any of these volumes for the cost of printing and postage. Please contact the GM for further details.

Reading List

As a part of the Second Volume of the Black Tower Chronicles, there will be an ever-evolving Reading list developed in the same spirit of the one in the Crystal Tablet of Set.

Xeper & Remanifest through Runa and Essent

Appendix 74: Order of the Great Bear

- by Vesa T. Iitti IV°, Grand Master

Introduction

The Order of the Great Bear came into being on the traditional northern day of the bear, on the 13th of July, XXXVIII Æon of Set. This day of the year was celebrated as a day of midsummer, a summer solstice by pre-Christian northern people. It was a special day dedicated to honor the celestial bear who was considered the ancestor of humans, a sacred being residing beyond the seven stars of the Big Dipper.

Now the cycle of that old occasion has been touched from within the Æon of Set, and the great bear, an ancient magical entity sacred to the Isolate Intelligence in the North, is honored by the creation of the Order of the Great Bear of the Temple of Set.

Lineage of the Order

Furtherance of the Temple of Set in the North since XXVI ÆS has enchanted the bear to surface as the ancient magical entity sacred to the Isolate Intelligence in that part of the world.

Historically bear cults are known to have existed in the same basic forms throughout northern regions of the world for thousands of years. In these cults the bear was considered as a sacred being who often resided beyond the constellation of the Big Dipper and who was the ancestor of humans: the first shaman.

Bears’ link with humans was celebrated in an annual bear ceremony that marked renewal of the link between the bear and humans. The ceremony stood for the vitalizing power which the bear brought with him from his sacred abode beyond the borders of profane existence.

The bear was considered to be an entity of borderlands, an entity embodying the sacred power that resides beyond the borders of the known areas. It can be deduced that the bear symbolized power of change as opposed to the status quo that manifested within the known areas of existence.

The bear was, and still is, the most powerful and Set-like animal, in myth and nature, in the North. In this spirit the Order of the Great Bear emphasizes Isolate Intelligence’s manifestation as explorer of borderlands, separator of profane from sacred, and embodiment of the Highest of Life.

Within the Temple of Set there are several elements that as special schools of initiation have been essential for the Grand Master in his path of Becoming and accordingly in his formation of the Order of the Great Bear. These elements include (now closed) the Heart Element and the Order of Amon in relation to teachings of Heart, Order of the Trapezoid and the Arkte Element in relation to dynamic manifestation of one’s Work in the world, and Orders of Vampyre and the Black Tower in their general emphasis of cultivating body-psyche-relationship in one’s Work. Also the closed Order of the Claw of the Bear needs to be mentioned due to its cultural context and the Grand Master’s close working relationship to it.

The vision of the Order of the Great Bear started to open through Karhunpeijaiset, the Bear Ceremony, that was written by the Grand Master as the Arkte Working for the Contexts of Work

The Work in the Order takes place within two general contexts, those of Hyperborea and Heart. These contexts can be seen as separate, but within the Order they are essentially subtly interwoven, forming the general approach the Order has to initiation. The central goal in using these contexts is the same as the central goal of every Order of the Temple; that of furthering Xeper.

The context of Hyperborea gives emphasis to all circumpolar and northern cultures in general (European, American, Asian) as sources of magical inspiration for an Initiate’s work. The Order is a tool for furthering study, use, and recreation of magical methods and traditions of the North from the Left-Hand Path point of view. Of special importance for the Order in this area is shamanism.

The context of Heart is interwoven with the context of Hyperborea because the first emerged through the Grand Master’s work with the second.

The context of Heart refers first and foremost to a holistic approach to initiation and to cultivating understanding of the religious dimension of one’s Xeper. An Initiate of the Order seeks systematically to challenge herself in theory and in practice in realms of body, persona, and mind as appropriate in her pursuing of initiation. She also seeks to cultivate understanding and sovereignty of a larger picture of her life, everything initiatrixely relevant that takes place between natural birth and death; in past, present, and potential future. Essentially related to this, she simultaneously seeks to strengthen her separate, non-natural self and its psyche-centric existence unbound by laws of the objective universe.

Structure and Operation

The Order consists of its inner and outer hall. Every Initiate of the Order is automatically a member of the outer hall. Entry into the inner hall is acquired through mastering an area of work relevant to the focus of the Order and recognized as such by the Grand Master.

The Order hosts two Heart Sumbles each year, during the summer and winter solstice. These workings are tools to bind an Initiate’s vertical (physis, persona, psyche) and horizontal (past, present, and potential future) realms of existence meaningfully together in her efforts to Xeper. A Sumble is a formula to dynamically bind an Initiate’s subjective universe with objective universe. It emphasizes one’s will and its concrete manifestations in the world.

Related to the theme of the Heart Sumble, the Order runs a project called the Book of Life. The project consists of writing an initiatory autobiography, accompanied with related workings.

Communication in the Order occurs mostly via its e-list. The Order’s newsletter Boreas is published twice a year. Book of the Great Bear, the Order book, is a collection of writings recording work and central teachings of the Order.

Affiliation

Affiliation with the Order takes place via dialogue with the Grand Master. A candidate, a II°+ Initiate, is expected to express appropriately why she seeks affiliation with the Order, what she seeks to achieve through work in the Order, and how she expects to attain those goals.

Work in the Order is naturally individualistic, but there are certain expectations that the Grand Master has of the Order’s Initiates. An Initiate of the Order is expected:

- To take part in at least one Heart Sumble per year, and accordingly to share one’s work with the Grand Master and in Order’s forums as appropriate.

- To create a personal Book of Life and to share related insights with the Grand Master and in the Order’s forums as appropriate.

- To attend international Conclave at least once in five years. The Order emphasizes communication that occurs in person and prefers it whenever possible.

Experience of the Heart is to experience linking various facets of one’s existence meaningfully together in one’s efforts to Xeper. It is about creating and experiencing profound meaning from one’s most potent self via act of will. It is about dynamically experiencing and embodying the Highest of Life.

There is an Aurora Borealis of an individual’s will under the constellation of Arktos! Xeper.

The Order of Horus was established at the Heb Sed Festival of the Temple of Set, year XXX of the Æon of Set. In Egypt the Heb Sed Festival involved a ritual and symbolic joining of the two powers: Horus and Set - Upper and Lower Egypt. The Order of Horus was established to make manifest the netjer HarWer, or Horus the Elder/the Great Celestial Horus, the brother of Set.

The Order of Horus focuses upon power and is for those who, like the ancient pharaohs, would take the Falcon God as an emblem of their personal and unique power. As the Order of Horus involves a number of individuals and not just a single pharaoh, the members of the Order of Horus are nobles, the princes of Set. As in any order of nobility, the members of the Order wield power and assume commensurate responsibilities.

As power is not to be confused with force, it is important to clearly distinguish these two ideas. The idea of power is that which can flow from a non-corporeal entity, such as an individual, an ideal, or an æonic Word. For example, words such as Xeper, Remanifest, and Runa all carry a great deal of power but do not entail force. The use of brute force is antithetical to real power, as real power takes effect by virtue of itself. Hence no one would force another to accept an individual, an ideal, or an æonic Word.

The Order of Horus is also concerned with action. Action can be thought of as part of a threefold scheme of principles:

1. Consciousness: reflective awareness, reasoning, and the ultimate nature of an individual. This may also be thought of as an aspect of the Gift of Set.

2. Action: the power to make manifest or to cause change, creation, and self-unfolding, as well as the ability to extend consciousness both inward and outward. This may also be thought of as an aspect of the Power of Horus.

3. Skills: the principle of taking on, changing, or terminating skills. In the subjective universe these are the skills of thought, feeling, and behavior. In the objective universe these skills become the “laws” of nature or the way things occur, subject to the workings of magic.

The Order of Horus is a Left-Hand Path initiatory Order, and works with all three of these principles. The nobles of the Order of Horus are psychocentric individuals striving for initiation and immortality. By refining the Gift of Set, each Initiate further develops the first principle. All initiation, action, and magical practices within the Order of Horus are designed to further this Left-Hand Path initiation into selfhood.

This initiatory work is furthered by the second principle: the taking of action. By taking action one’s sense of self is reinforced and further defined. When an individual acts, he affirms himself as the creator and cause of the action and its result. By extending and manifesting one’s own unique selfhood into the subjective and objective universes, nobles of the Order of Horus further both their selves and their power.

The Order of Horus is further based upon the third principle, which involves self-control and -mastery. With this principle the workings of magic and yoga take place as the Initiate develops new skills that further individual initiation, and casts off old and unwanted habits that limit initiation. In its work with the third principle, the Order of Horus includes all forms of operative magic, yoga, and related fields, including traditional initiatory methodologies as well as modern and postmodern methods.

The Order of Horus includes, but does not limit itself to a Left-Hand Path training curriculum based on Aleister Crowley’s A.'.A.'.'. The primary difference between the Order of Horus system and the traditional A.'.A.'.' is that the Order of Horus assumes that its initiates will choose to become “Black Brothers” and enter the City of the Pyramids as self-made and -defined Initiates. Hence the Order of Horus is not tied to an antiquated notion of initiation that requires teachers and students.

As many people are familiar with the O.T.O. and similar organizations, it is important to distinguish the Order of Horus from them. First, while the Order of Horus includes Thelema as an æonic Word, its scope within the Order is primarily restricted to workings dealing with the third principle of skill. Secondly and more importantly, the Order of Horus is a Left-Hand Path organization which employs Right-Hand Path methodologies only as useful to individual Initiates.

The Order of Horus maintains an internal hierarchy based on a nine-grade system. However this hierarchy is subordinate to each member of the Order, regardless of grade, being treated as a noble and of equal dignity with every other member of the Order. Hence members of the Order are all equal in the sense of a college of peers or fraternal order.

The Order of Horus views itself as an Order based on power, action, and creation. The Order is primarily concerned with the initiation of its members and the sharing of initiatory methodologies. Adepts II°+ of the Temple of Set may apply by writing to the Grand Master. The Order of Horus is selective in its membership, and applicants should have one or more areas of initiatory expertise with which they have worked or wish to work.
The roots of the Occult Institute of Technology (OIT) began with the development of the National Satanic BBS or NSBBS. This was a plain old telephone system (POTS) BBS (no Internet, no World Wide Web) that I created as a personal reaction to the spread of “SRA” misinformation. In terms of content the NSBBS had a few essays written by Setians, the intro letter, some download files, and copies of interesting list mail. All of this was operated on a Commodore 128 (remember those days?) with a mere two floppy drives.

As I developed the NSBBS system, I realized that the patterns of my personal thinking, and active work as a Temple of Set Initiate, revolved around art and certain types of technology. Eventually I understood that the practical function of these interests was to develop and promote Lesser Black Magical and Greater Black Magical ritual/working areas. I called this particular approach techno-magic and continued to disseminate essays about it through computer bulletin boards - mostly hacker and phreak sites - throughout the 1980s.

As I became more sensitive to my techno-magical interests, I wanted the NSBBS to more accurately reflect my personal initiatory bias. The result was my coming up with the moniker “Occult Institute of Technology” or “OIT”. With this I had created a sigil that represented my understanding that there is a responsibility to maintain an equilibrium between the advances of knowledge (in general) and the techniques of self transformation (specifically). Additionally OIT was and still is an extension of my own psyche in a very detailed manner.

Near the end of the 1980s the NSBBS permanently closed. However I retained the organizational title and magical ideas that were formed through the Occult Institute of Technology (OIT).

It was during the 1990s that OIT became a Lodge within the Order of the Trapezoid, operating within the parameters of the Mad Lab Angle of the Spectrum of the Trapezoid.

Later during this period of time I went on a personal hiatus from the Temple of Set. This brought to me quiet moments in which I began to sense the mechanical nature of the universe through the paradigm of resonance. It was through this synthetically engineered perspective that the Setian concepts of isolate intelligence became very clear to me. By understanding the nature of the mechanical structure of the universe (through resonance), I glimpsed its shadow - which I have perceived as the very essence of non-natural consciousness.

With my eventual return to the Temple of Set mainstream, and with the advent of the House system within the Order of the Trapezoid, I remanifested the OIT as a cyber House within that Order. This took form as a large website which to date has had thousands of visitors, and which has been directly responsible for numerous individuals seeking out and joining the Temple of Set. The House of OIT was set up to act as a “magnetic” center (in Ouspenskian terms), drawing into it those individuals who had an affinity for the ideas of the LHP as understood by the Temple of Set.

In 1998 I retired from the Order of the Trapezoid as a Master Emeritus in order to develop a new Order within the Temple of Set - the Occult Institute of Technology. It is with this document that I officially announce that OIT is manifest as an Order within the Temple of Set.
Temple of Set. However there are many aspects regarding the Occult Institute that you need to understand before considering any form of affiliation. The following information will provide a more complete understanding of OIT.

From out of Chaos emerges Art. OIT is an antinomian-based perusal of the concept of isolate intelligence as understood through the laws of resonance. It is our belief that the Left-Hand Path experience is a three-fold life long process. This process consists of repeating periods of extension, retraction, and synchronization of ideas, principles, and personal synthesis. From the results and interactions of these three points of activity, a ladder of ideas forms within the Initiate. These ideas extend themself directly into the process of initiation as a guide to understanding the process itself. This is stepping into resonance.

It is this ladder of ideas that I have set forth in our manual entitled The Technician’s Guide to the Left-Hand Path. This book sets forth in clear detail the resonant paradigm that forms the basis of OIT philosophy and magical practice. It is this guidebook that gives a concrete basis of Remanifestation as a vital and active causal principle. It is this guide that explains the theoretical basis of “how” both ritual and the magical link operate. It is this book that details the way in which resonance (through its harmonic properties) extends principles and ideas through time. The Technician’s Guide provides - through a combination of symbol, metaphor, and metaphysics - a practical manner in which the individual can view the universe and one’s relationship to it.

The Occult Institute of Technology promotes a cause and effect understanding of the relationship between the principle of isolate intelligence and of the individuality of the self. By understanding the constituent mechanism (resonance) of activity that is embedded within the very fabric of the universe, the Initiate can sense how these actions are mirrored through a variety of purely human scenarios - culture, religion, politics, spirituality, and more. By understanding how these activities affect the Initiate’s life, the Initiate can dissent from being a pawn in a cosmic game to consciously utilizing the knowledge of personal observations to promote personal existence to desired states of being.

The philosophical ideas of OIT are multi-faceted. They take into account the paths of ideas that lead to, that lead away from, and that synthesize or “branch” out from specific points of Setian LHP initiatory activity.

The basic premise of “acquiring” knowledge within OIT is based upon the recognition that a principle is a completion and polarization of specific energy in the form of revelatory principles and ideas. Understanding that a principle can neither become anymore, nor anything less, it is stable and transformative through induction. In other words, as a principle is recognized, it can transform by revealing to the individual knowledge that carries the potential of self transformation. However the principle itself does not change; it remains stable and consistent. For example, from the Principle of Isolate Self Consciousness, knowledge of Being is extended. Once knowledge of Being is attained, one can Become that knowledge; one can then extend personal energy into future models via individual activity.

As previously mentioned, the paradigm that OIT perceives its environment through is that of resonance. Resonance is the essential mechanical principle behind all that humans perceive through their inborn senses, or through the mechanical and prosthetic extension of the senses. Resonance in its active state is a movement of energy; it extends its energy from a point, or retracts its energy towards a point. It is this principle of extension and retraction of energies - in the form of pure abstraction, i.e., ideas, future becomings, affinities and so on - that lies behind spiritually transformative experience.
By understanding this resonant environment through its various components such as harmony, timing, synchronicity, density, octaves etc., the Initiate can learn to manipulate those fundamental activities to create desired effects.

Set is the God of the Future Becomings - Synchronicity

Synchronicity means to become aligned with the first extension - the genesis of isolate intelligence in its first primeval form. Synchronicity is stepping into the proper timing of the movement of ideas relevant to the Setian Mystery.

This synchronization results in a spiritual conversion - a major psychological transformation that manifests throughout all the activities engaged within by the Initiate. It is such transformative states that the OIT wants to be able to replicate in terms of ritual environments that enhance, promote, and attract to it individuals capable of achieving these states of extended consciousness.

Let it be known only that which modifies specificity can be transmitted. This, in a practical sense, is what Xeper is all about. The alteration of specific states of consciousness creates remembrance, and movement toward new horizons.

Transmission is extension. Its remembrance - or its experience - is retraction or the temporary displacement of forward movement whose purpose is to create a self-definition. This self-definition does not occur unless one can stop and stand back from events and experience through a vehicle of a perceptual potentiality and sensuous experience. The flesh, sinew, nerve, and brain of the human is such a perceptual vehicle.

That which observes consciously through it is a harmonic, or alignment with that first surge of something into nothing (genesis). Sometimes the harmonic is in a perfect tune with this original extension. In other cases it becomes dissonant and disperses its energy, thus becoming incapable of creating momentum. In either scenario, a clue as to “how” specific states of consciousness are possible is hinted at.

If there is no resonance, then there is nothing. In such a theoretical environment nothing could extend forth, nor retract back towards its causal source. This means that the possibility of experience, memory, time, and eventuality cannot occur. Conversely, resonance must be able to extend and penetrate through the environment it is a partner within. Resonance that cannot penetrate through its environment is also the same thing as nothing.

The OIT approach to magic is both explanatory and revelatory. That is, it takes into account and explains such concepts as the magical link, proxemic environments, consciousness extension through prosthetic means, and total environmental manipulation. The purpose is to create areas of influence that promote the extension of individualized consciousness into previously unexperienced perceptual parameters.

Within these explanations lies a practical methodology that can be learned and applied to the benefit of the individual involved. The goals of self determination are solely the product of a consciousness that is willfully, and forcefully following a series of clues, and mysteries (attracted by a type of magnetic polarity called affinity) to various conclusions.

In light of this psychological aspect of initiation (psycho-initiatory state), we can easily understand that OIT has no specific goals for its Initiates. Its fundamental reason for existing is to teach others how to utilize and manipulate the phenomenology of resonance in order to create relevant personal strategies for the purpose of self growth and spiritual transformation.
Affiliation

OIT operates with both an inner peristyle and outer peristyle aspect. What this means is that interested individuals who are not members of the Temple of Set can participate within a restricted framework in the Occult Institute through the outer peristyle. This largely amounts to receiving the OIT Journal, engaging within “public” OIT chat meetings and engaging in dialogue with the GM. This is in keeping with a long-running methodology that OIT has had both as a Lodge, and then House within the Order of the Trapezoid.

Additionally OIT is also open for limited participation by Setians I° of the Temple of Set if the Setian meets certain criteria [read the following statement]. There are no fees connected with OIT membership. We already have what we need.

Affiliation with OIT requires that each individual have Internet email and web access. Additionally each participant will have to obtain at least one software package for live chatting and lectures [it’s free], and to register with at least one specialized multi media oriented Bulletin Board Server [it’s private]. OIT also has its own reading list; participants will need to obtain these books. Upon a request for affiliation you will be informed specifically as to what you will need.

Setian I° Criteria for Statement of Interest

1. Must be a member of a Pylon or the Soa Gild.

2. State the specific empathy and affinity one has with OIT.

3. Must submit at least one article or artwork for inclusion in the Scroll of Set, the OIT Journal, and/or OIT website within one year of affiliation.

4. Must have an Internet connection with private email and web access.

5. Have the explicit permission of any III°+ Initiate you may be in regular contact with to participate within OIT. You will be denied participation if your Priesthood contact feels it will impede your formative and initial work with the Temple of Set as a Setian I°.

6. Only the Grand Master can revoke membership. However it is a given that if a member of the Priesthoods seeks revocation for a member it will be granted once the particular circumstances have been determined. Revocation has no impact upon membership within the Temple of Set, which will be considered as a separate issue by the Priesthood of Set.

Note: Participation at the I° level within OIT is not full Order affiliation, which has its own set of magical and initiatory requirements. I° participation amounts to a statement of interest in OIT, allows access to the secured OIT website, and places the Grand Master as an additional III°+ contact.
Adept II° Criteria for OIT Affiliation

1. Be an Adept II° in good standing.

2. Must submit at least one article or artwork for inclusion in the Journal and/or OIT website within one year of affiliation.

3. Must have an internet connection with private email and web access.

4. Only the Grand Master can revoke membership. However it is a given that if a member of the Priesthood seeks revocation for a member, it will be granted once the particular circumstances have been determined. Revocation has no impact upon membership within the Temple of Set which will be considered as a separate issue by the Priesthood of Set.

5. Must communicate directly with the Grand Master of the Order regarding magical and initiatory requirements.

Priesthood of Set III°+ Criteria for Affiliation

1. Be a member of the Priesthood of Set in good standing.

2. Must submit at least one article or artwork for inclusion in the Journal and/or OIT website within one year of affiliation.

3. Must have an Internet connection with private email and web access.

4. Only the Grand Master can revoke membership with consultation from the High Priest and other Masters of the Temple. Revocation has no impact upon membership within the Temple of Set.

The Action of Annunciation - Achieving OIT Mastery

OIT does offer Recognition to the level of Master of OIT. Any II°+ Initiate of the Temple of Set who is also an OIT affiliate can seek the Path of Mastery after at least one year of affiliation. OIT does not presently offer Mastery levels of Recognition to OIT participants who are not members of the Temple of Set, nor to Setian I° participants.

Final Words

OIT has a large online archive of information at both its public website and its secured private website (available only to Temple of Set OIT affiliates). Additionally we publish a large electronic magazine quarterly, entitled the OIT Journal.

OIT also has live chat, online lectures, and a very important reading list whose books affiliates will have to obtain. With this small bit said I send you greetings!
Appendix 77: The Order of Kronos

- by William T. Butch IV°, Grand Master

On the 18th of October XXXI (1996), The Order of Kronos came into being during an Atlantean ancestral working. Kronos, one of the mythological Atlantean Kings, sent forth his warrior/priest/scientists, to the four corners of the Earth to create outposts among the barbaric tribes of that time. From those outposts came what we now call civilization. The Order of Kronos is based upon the spirit of these outposts.

The Order of Kronos will be composed of the three elements of its namesake. The Element of the Warrior, the Element of Science, and the Element of the Mystic.

Each element will have its own Master, with the expertise to conduct guidance in that area. The Master of each element will be responsible to the Grand Master of the Order, who will create the atmosphere in which meetings, workings, and seminars will take place. The Grand Master will work within all three elements.

Any Adept II° (+) may work within one, all, or any combination of elements within the Order. Some Setians may not feel comfortable with aspects of one or another of the elements but nevertheless want to be a part of the whole.

In keeping with the spirit of Kronos, a magical name is to be chosen by each Initiate to further enhance the work of the Order through individualized effort.

The Element of the Warrior will consist of the study of martial arts, edged weapons, and the use of herbs for health and healing purposes. Those who participate in this element will be guardians of the Temple and will conduct themselves according to the traditions of chivalry and comradeship. This is an element of heart, strength, and physical well-being. Be advised that this element is the heart of the Order and is only for those Setians who wish to walk in the way of the ancient fighting spirit. A high sense of honor, truth, and courage are important factors and prerequisites for entrance into this element.

The Element of Science will focus on the study of astronomy and the possibility of other life-forms in the universe. Since the beginning of time we have been fascinated with the stars and what they may hold. This element is one of creativity, imagination, and exploration of phenomena beyond our own planet.

The Element of the Mystic addresses exploration of the ancient mysteries of Atlantean mythology and the study of supernatural phenomena. Results shall be used in workings of Greater Black Magic. This is an element of dark shadows and unknown regions in which we come face-to-face with our fears, joy, power, and being.

Those who wish to enter the world of Kronos may do so by written letter to the Grand Master. Include why you have taken an interest in the Order, in what element you would like to specialize, and what skills or knowledge, if any, you would like to contribute to this element.
Appendix 78: The Order of Leviathan

- by Bruce Ware IV°, Grand Master

The Order of Leviathan is one of the oldest Orders of the Temple of Set, coming into being in the year XVII of the Æon of Set (1982 CE), under the guidance and genius of the Order’s first Grand Master, then-Magister James Lewis. The Order was created to explore the messages of the “Statement of Leviathan” as found in the Diabolicon and expanded through the years to the uncovering of the Æon-enhancing Word Remanifest, Uttered by then-Magus Lewis. Now, as then, its aims are to uncover the essential principles of identity, intelligence, and immortality.

The Order of Leviathan operates as a magical vehicle for the Setian to explore the Æonic Words Xeper and Remanifest. That is, we seek to answer the most fundamental and transcendent questions of human existence, such as “What is the self that experiences Xeper?”

What sort of Setian Initiate would pursue the quest in this fashion, rather than choosing another Order and method? The paths of initiation are as multivariate as the Initiates themselves. However a certain type of mentality reads the open works of the Order and resonates with this mode of initiation.

The OL offers a unique approach to Xeper: The Adept Black Magician explores and seeks to apprehend supra-rational concepts (and their supporting universal principles) of Being and Becoming that must be translated and applied in a no-nonsense manner to the Objective Universe. It is this expression of initiation in the Objective Universe that is contained in Remanifest: its relation to identity, intelligence, and immortality.

Discovering universal principles through the dialectic process of the Socratic/ Platonic “pyramid of thought” - dianoia and nœsis (“learning” and “knowing”) - is the basic core of the Order of Leviathan’s approach to initiation. This approach is an overtly intellectual orientation through which the Setian mind obtains wisdom and understanding to achieve the ultimate expression of the Gift of Set - Setamorphosis.

Thus the Order of Leviathan holds that the Word Remanifestation is critical to the accomplishment of the Æonic Formula: Xepera Xeper Xeperu. That is, without Remanifestation, the idea of Becoming is an abstraction - one without the necessary context of demonstrating to the Objective Universe the essential fact that Xeper has occurred, that “something” in the initiating being has changed.

We Remanifest the sense of Self that is the core identity. We Remanifest the power of our essential humanity through the expression of the Gift of Set - the capacity or potential called intelligence that humans alone possess. We Remanifest the development of the personal will that leads to the possibility of surviving death as an integrated and unique individual consciousness - what we know as immortality.

Some of the current goals and interests being explored in the Order are briefly summarized in the following list:

- What is the essential Self, and how does it differ from the everyday personality?
- By what act of will can we achieve identity with (i.e. recognize) this essential Self?
• How can we enhance and increase the capabilities inherent in intelligence - the singular Gift of the Black Flame by which our forebears became human?

• How may we further exalt the Black Flame of Set?

Through this approach, and because of our use of the inspired texts, the Order of Leviathan presents itself as the explicitly religious core of the Temple of Set, uniting a rigorous application of reason with a willed assent to the idea of an objective end for which humans were designed, a purpose underlying the bestowal of the Gift by Set, a transcendent destiny for Setians as the agents of the Black Flame.
Appendix 79: The Order of Merlin

- by David Austen IV°, Grand Master

Merlin in Context

The figure and character of Merlin conjures up visions of the flag-bedecked towers of Camelot, King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table, battles with dragons and giants, as well as wondrous magical feats: all the “stuff” of legend.

The Hollywood glamour machine has given the character of Merlin some star treatment. Two notable characterizations stand out: Nicol Williamson as Merlin in John Boorman’s rendering to film of Excalibur (from Sir Thomas Mallory’s book Morte d’Arthur published in 1485), and Edward Woodward’s quite exceptional portrayal of the magician for a low-budget TV movie.

Sometime between 14 and 50 CE the Romans invaded the Druid stronghold on (what is now known as) the Isle of Anglesey. In an effort to break Celtic British resistance to the Roman annexation of the island, the legionaries exterminated the cult leaders, razed the sacred groves, and at a stroke wiped out the whole belief system. Presumably a few “Druids” managed to escape the carnage and took refuge in the remaining Gælic enclaves in the areas that we now call Wales, Scotland, and the West Country. It is in these areas that the Merlinic myths have endured.

The popular figure of Merlin comes to us from one main source, the Vita Merlini, a biography of Merlin that contains a complete magical system. Much of the material derives from Celtic and classical traditions, particularly the Mabinogion, an ancient Welsh epic poem. Secondary sources are The Prophetic Vision of Merlin, which itself is derived from yet another source, The History of the Kings of England (both were transcribed by Geoffrey of Monmouth between 1140-1160 CE). The latter work deals at some length with the early life of Merlin as well as the Glastonbury Legend, which alludes to a visit by Jesus of Nazareth in his youth with Joseph of Arimathea, and Joseph’s later return to Glastonbury with the “Holy Graal”. Thirty years after the first transcription an addition was made to the work to accommodate the transition of human remains - claimed to be those of Arthur and Guinevere - to the nave of Glastonbury Abbey in 1190.

However Geoffrey of Monmouth’s material is not intended to be biographical in the modern understanding of the word. It does not seem to have been the author’s intention to render the material as anything other than a loose collection of tales, poems, and images woven around the central character of Merlin. This included imagery, magic, and psychic insights that are undeniably ancient. These may be assumed to be drawn from oral tradition retaining the wisdom, songs, and poems of the old Celtic/Druidic cultures, preserved by bards and travelling storytellers. Geoffrey of Monmouth and his contemporary Gerald of Wales recorded these tales for posterity.

The character of Merlin is composed of two component parts: Merlin Calidonius and Merlin Ambrosius. Merlin Calidonius appears to be what we could interpret to be “Merlin of the Wild Wood”, viz. the Shamanistic Merlin. Merlin Ambrosius would seem to be compatible with Merlin’s intellectual aspects.

Merlin’s name has connotations for the present Æon, for the literal meaning of the Gælic rendering of Merlin is Myrddin (old Welsh), meaning “Hawk”.

The legends and myths of Merlin touch upon deep-seated yearnings within the psyche of all magicians, and are as relevant at the dawn of the second millennium CE as they were to our ancestors.

The Order of Merlin will not be a flag-waving exercise for British based Setians. The underlying Principles of the Merlinc myth are universal, and as with all Temple Orders Merlin will make the results of its workings and magical projects available to the Temple through the Ruby Tablet and the Scroll of Set, as well as through the pages of the Order’s newsletter, The Draconian Tablet.

Magical Paths

Under Merlin’s cloak the Order is able to pursue and entertain a wide field of magical workings, drawn from a rich body of lore.

Merlin permeates most Western magical traditions, Aleister Crowley being no exception; thus we have a wide field to explore. We have in Merlin the exemplification of shamanism which, through the many ages of human development, has been prevalent at one time or another in most cultures.

In Arthur’s early days as King, Merlin transforms the sovereign into a variety of animals. This enabled Arthur to appreciate the strengths and weaknesses of the various creatures and to obtain a view of life from their perspective. Shape-shifting has been used by warriors through the ages, from the Native Americans to the Leopard Men of Kenya, as a means of obtaining strength in battle.

In the name of Arthur we have Arth gwyr (Brythonic), the Roman “Gens” name of Artorius (coming from the Latin artos viros) meaning “Bear Man”, or a combination of the Brythonic and Latin words for bear, Arth and Ursus. This would be in keeping with the traditions of many cultures to define a warrior’s ability and his guardian spirit. Examples from the Native American culture are Sitting Bull, Crazy Horse, Grey Wolf, etc.

Wolves were particularly abundant in Europe until the eighteenth century. Werewolf legends are probably remnants of the shape shifting rituals of our ancestors.

Such magic enables the magician to perceive the transformations and expressions of the self as it undergoes metamorphosis, also to perceive that absolute core self which remains the same in Essence as it Remanifests.

The shaman is also at one with the environment, and the scope for gleaning the magical knowledge in these are boundless. Subjects like herbs, plants, even the practice of sweat lodges are all fertile grounds for research.

The legends of Merlin occupy a position close to the core of Western magic. This tradition involves inner transformation and growth through radical changes in one’s modes of consciousness. The Vita Merlini reveals Merlin’s life as an exemplary magical pattern, demonstrating both masculine and feminine powers. The Order of Merlin exists to facilitate an integration of all aspects of the psyche, including the generally repressed “minority” or “demonic” Self. The Merlinc magician possesses mastery of his/her complete Self.

Merlin also offers an additional perspective into the magical practices of Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelly. Many of the “Enochian Visions” were induced using the Druidic practice of scrying, employing either water or mirrors, crystals, and “shew stones”. Dr. Dee’s scrying mirror, on show for many years in the Renaissance Gallery of the British Museum, was an obsidian mirror taken from an Aztec Temple. The Aztec ritual of the “Smoking Mirror” was another form of scrying, and Dee’s mirror had been used for that purpose by the Aztec Priests.

Merlin does not die, according to the Vita, but rather moves into a state of being best explained by Xeper and Remanifestation. The legend of Merlin is yet another example of a magical tradition truly international in scope. The lore surrounding this figure is rich and stimulating; Merlin is not just an obscure figure of legend and history, but a very real force to be embraced.

Of Many Tongues

One of the saddest indictments of our so called modern and enlightened age is that it has allowed so much of our heritage to slip through its grasp.

For the most part very few of us on this planet are aware of our culture or our heritage, part of which being our native languages.

Some of the languages are lost forever with no surviving link (e.g. we know roughly how ancient Egyptian sounded from its surviving counterpart). The sounds and languages of the Vikings and Anglo Saxons have been restored, since some semblance of their language survives today and can be reconstructed from manuscripts, etc. Who would not thrill to hear Beowulf spoken in the original Anglo/Germanic language in which it was originally created?

However the sub-dialects of the main languages have passed from us only in the last hundred years. Manx (a branch of the North Celtic language), native to the Isle of Man, saw the last polyglot speaker die in 1955. Fortunately the language was recorded by linguists and has enjoyed a small renaissance. Cornish (a Southern Celtic branch language) was declared extinct in 1800, but again the language has been restored, thanks to records. However the neighbouring Devonshire Gælic was extinct by 1820 and entirely lost to us. Breton, Flemish, Welsh, Irish, and Scottish Gælic survive and are spoken quite widely in their various countries, with their own unique and poetic characteristics.

Part of the work of the Order of Merlin will be the encouragement of its members to engage in the study of a native language. The Order will then record and preserve those languages for posterity and for future Setians. In translating the ancient magical records into English or another major language, so much of the original meaning can be lost. However viewed and read in the language it was originally written in can in itself be an experience unrivalled.

Affiliation

The Order of Merlin welcomes correspondence from all Initiates. However formal membership of the Order is reserved to Adept II° and the Priesthood of Set III°. The Order’s work will be made available to the Masters of the Temple, as well as to members of the Priesthood and to Pylon Sentinels if they so request it. Much of the material will be copied to the Ruby Tablet of Set.

The newsletter/magazine for the Order is the Draconian Tablet, the title reflecting Merlin’s close association with “the Dragon”, identifying with the natural forces of the earth (in European and Far Eastern magic). This publication will be available worldwide (in English), primarily free to Order members and to Initiates of the Priesthood of Set who request it. It will also be posted to Glinda.

The Grand Masters will expect a commitment from all OM members to work together in their geographical areas, independent of their Pylon activities, and to explore Merlin’s magical path in a spirit of unity, accord, and dignity that befits the most honourable title of Setian.

Xeper and Remanifest. Ab uno disce omnes. (From one example learn about all).
Appendix 80: The Order of Nepthys

- by Lilith Aquino IV°, Grand Master

The Order of Nepthys will approach magic as a “total environment”, with attention to outward, physical appearance holding as important a place as the inner self of the Initiate. Basic principles, for example, will include techniques of attire, grooming, and cosmetics designed to bring out the individual's most striking physical attributes. Simultaneous emphasis will be accorded aspects of personality, being, and will. The synthesis of mental and physical development will be the manifestation of a total being. Only such a being can expect success in magic, as the entire spectrum of individual qualities is called upon for Lesser and Greater Workings.

Initiates will be expected to learn to handle various situations relative to the profane public, to include lecturing and interviewing. Not every Initiate will engage in such activities regularly, but all must have the skills and self-confidence to do so. The Order of Nepthys accepts both male and female Initiates.

Admission to the Order of Nepthys requires Recognition to the degree of Adept II° as a prerequisite. New members of the Order will not immediately be exposed to advanced applications of the Greater Black Magical (GBM) theories or philosophies of the Black Arts pertinent to the Order. Their first concern will be rather with Lesser Black Magic (LBM): what it is and how they may use it to their advantage. They will approach the concept of the “true self” and its magical development according to the Word Thelema.

Members of the Order will then further refine their basic magical skills while being introduced to the principles of the Word Indulgence. This will enable them to perfect their mastery of LBM and to gain initial skill in GBM. At this stage in their development, they will learn the significance of the Black Flame and will undergo instruction in the high art of Black Magic. Such instruction will be under the personal guidance of the Grand Master of the Order. Only when the Grand Master is satisfied that the Initiate is cognizant of and competent in the techniques of this Art should the Initiate apply them independently.

Initiates of the Priesthood III° will work with the Grand Master on advanced applications of the Black Arts. They will be exposed to the concepts of the Abyss and of the magical Formulae outlining the Great Work of the Æons. Workings at this level will again be on an individual basis, as determined by the individual characteristics of each Priest or Priestess. At this point the rationale for a magical name will be explored and applied where and if appropriate. Guidance to and cooperation with II° Initiates of the Order will be a part of III° responsibilities, with greater time and attention being accorded those who make greater efforts to learn from the Order.

Appendix 81: The Order of Nietzsche

- by Roland Winkhart IV°, Grand Master

A premise of the Temple of Set is that the psychecentric consciousness can evolve towards its own divinity through deliberate exercise of the consciousness and will, a process of Becoming or Coming Into Being whose roots may be found in the dialectic method expounded by Plato and the conscious exaltation of the Will proposed by Nietzsche. - M. Aquino VI°

Friedrich Nietzsche was born near Leipzig in 1844, the son of a Lutheran clergyman. He attended the famous Pforta School, then went to university at Bonn and Leipzig, where he studied philology (the study of literature and related fields) and read Schopenhauer. When he was only 24 he was appointed to the chair of classical philology at Basel University; he remained there until retiring for reasons of health in 1879.

While at Basel he made and broke his friendship with Wagner, participated in the Franco-Prussian War as an ambulance orderly, and published The Birth of Tragedy (1872), Untimely Meditations (1873-6), and the first two parts of Human, All Too Human (1878-9). From 1880 until his final collapse in 1889, he divorced himself from everyday life except for brief interviews. Supported by his university pension, he lived mainly in France, Italy, and Switzerland. The third part of Human, All Too Human appeared in 1880, followed by Dawn in 1881. Also Sprach Zarathustra was written between 1883 and 1885, and his last completed book was the autobiography Ecce Homo. He became insane in 1889 and remained in a condition of mental and physical paralysis until his death in 1900.

Much of human history can be explained, if not excused by the conflict between those of low intelligence (who consider good/evil objective) and those of high intelligence (who consider good/evil subjective). Certainly it begs the question to use these very terms to distinguish one extreme from the other ... The Temple of Set seeks freedom by attempting to escape those norms - and preexisting ones - and to encourage its Initiates to construct enlightened, individualistic definitions. This is as much an art as a science, and the quest must be undertaken and pursued with logic, caution, common sense ... and the apprehension of the Agathon. - M. Aquino VI°

Nietzsche is perhaps best known for his strident materialism - “God is dead!” - and his concept of the Übermensch (superman). Only those who have taken the time to study Nietzsche’s works carefully know the exact meaning and context of such terms. All too often Nietzsche’s ideas are confused with the xenophobic propaganda of National Socialism, with which it actually has very little in common. Nietzsche’s concept of the Übermensch, for example, was intellectually rather than racially based.

Nietzsche approached such ideas as the Übermensch and the “Will to Power” in Also Sprach Zarathustra. For instance:

> When I went to men for the first time, I committed the folly of hermits, the great folly: I set myself in the marketplace. And when I spoke to everyone, I spoke to no one. In the evening, however, tight-rope walkers and corpses were my companions; and I myself was almost a corpse. With the new morning came understanding; I learned to say, “What are the marketplace, the mob, and the mob’s confusion to me?”

> You higher man, learn this from me: In the marketplace no one believes in higher men. And if you want to speak there, very well, do so! But the masses will blink and say, “We are all equal. There are no higher men; man is but man, and before God we are all equal.”
Higher men, this God was your greatest danger, but now this God is dead. Do not accept equality with the masses; depart from the marketplace!

Do you understood, O my brothers? Are you terrified? Do your hearts fail? Does the abyss yawn before you? Does the very hound of Hell bay at you? So be it! God is dead; now we desire that the superman shall live.

Within this exhortation to the superman is a warning: Even when the masses appear to praise creative intellects, such admiration may be fickle and treacherous because the masses sense that such intellects are capable of exposing and exploding mundane, traditional values based on popular falsehoods. The masses’ only enduring loyalty belongs to demagogues who play to mob sentiment rather than to the great truths. “Eine neue Gattung von Philosophen kommt hervor ... diese Philosophen der Zukunft möchten ein Recht, vielleicht auch ein Unrecht darauf haben, als Versucher bezeichnet zu werden. (A new type of philosopher is emerging ... These philosophers of the future take to themselves, even if imprecisely, the role of tempters.)”

Thus the Nietzschean superman functions as a Black Magician. “Alle Menschen, auf die bisher etwas an kam, waren böse. (All men who have been of real value have been evil.)” But this is not the evil of wanton cruelty or sadism - rather a casting-aside of idols that, while reassuring to the masses, have served to stifle the evolution of the soul.

As is demonstrated by Zarathustra, Nietzsche was not so much a designer of utopian social/political systems as a proposer of capabilities and attitudes for intelligent individuals. His writings are frequently allegorical, demanding conscious effort on the part of the reader to comprehend the underlying principles.

Nietzsche intended that the principles in his writings be applied, not merely intellectually appreciated. Thus philosophy is akin to the physical sciences and indeed to the basic tasks of life; they all involve “attitudes of becoming (Lebenshaltung)”. “Alle die Wahrheiten sind für mich blutige Wahrheiten. (All truths are for me bloody ones.)”

The Order of Nietzsche will study this great Satanic Master’s philosophy from the Setian perspective - the applicability to our personal Xeper. And Nietzsche was not only a great thinker but a man of refreshing and subtle humor. In one of his posthumously-published notebooks - called “black diamonds” - he wrote: “Mit den Fürsten der Finsternis habe ich Würfel gespielt. (With the Princes of Darkness I have gambled at dice.)”

Do not bend your knee nor drop your eye, for such things were not done in my house at PaMat-et. But speak to me at night, for the sky then becomes an entrance and not a barrier.

- The Book of Coming Forth by Night

Inspired by the stellar gaze of the Setian pharaohs, the Order of Sebekhet looks to the night sky and its historical, philosophic, and initiatory impact on the origin, development, and future of the psyche.

The intent of this work is the personal and self-directed transformation of the Initiate on the path to psychecentric divinity. The method is Polarian, involving an oscillation between the poles of reason and creative intuition.

The Order’s work can be described in terms of several goals:

• Exploration of a specific perspective on the symbolism of the Left-Hand Path.

• Pursuit of the immortality of the psyche.

• Use of the night sky as a source of continuing energy and inspiration.

• Creating times and places into which the psyche may Remanifest.

The Order explores various methods of approaching these goals:

• Examining the origins of human orderings of space and time.

• Learning to consciously order the spatial and temporal structure of one’s experience.

• Uncovering the true impact of cosmic phenomena on terrestrial systems and events.

• Equipping and experiencing the self as a creator of universes.

Origins and Destiny

The arts and sciences of interest to the Order of Sebekhet have enabled certain individuals to traverse deserts, seas, and other liminal regions, crossing both cultural/subjective and material/objective boundaries to bring fresh knowledge and possibilities to the world. This knowledge ultimately unlocks a gate to passage of a transhuman intelligence across fathomless depths of space and time.

The survival of star maps in the tombs of the Setian pharaohs attests to the antiquity and authenticity of this knowledge. Moreover the association of the ancient cult of Set with the desert oases and caravan towns is well documented, as is the identification of Set with the circumpolar stars.
It is the traveler who has the practical interest in circumpolar stars. In this simple fact one may glimpse the purpose of Set in reconsecrating a Temple of Set on Earth at this time.

Theory and Practice

The Order of Sebekhet examines all facets of the relationship between the psyche and the night sky. One begins by experiencing the night sky directly and becoming familiar with it.

Experiencing the night sky is best done by leaving populated areas, which have substantial light pollution, and going to wild or empty open areas on a clear night. It is not necessary to own a telescope. It is necessary to pick up a vocabulary for what is seen.

Learn the meaning of these terms: ecliptic, precession, zodiac, equinox, solstice, circumpolar, helical. Some of these are connected with the very origin of the modern Temple of Set, being found in the Book of Coming Forth by Night and in the commentary on that Working text. Understanding these terms - and relating them to what is seen of the night sky - will also unlock “secrets” of several other esoteric traditions.

Setians who have previously paid no attention to the night sky may find that this experience evokes thoughts, insights and impulses of initiatory significance without the artificial “jump start” of ritual. There are reasons for this that become evident with repeated exposure, intellectual study, and philosophical introspection. It is suggested that the Initiate keep a journal or some other record of these impressions.

Once the student has mastered the basics, personal work becomes a springboard into the unknown within and beyond. Here are a few of the topics that fall within the Order’s scope:

The Objectification of Experience

Measurement is, in its broadest sense, the objectification of subjective experience. The Initiate of Sebekhet examines historical, political, anthropological, archaeological, and sociological aspects of measurement as well as philosophical theories on the structure and experience of space and time.

Sciences & Technologies of Orientation

Having established measures of space and time, the isolate intelligence uses these tools to structure its relationship to the natural order. Cartography, calendars and timekeeping, celestial navigation, and the biology and physiology of orientation fall under this heading.

The Celestial Context of the Self

The isolate intelligence, having created subjective tools to explore and work with the natural order, then turns them to investigation of this self-created order, its limits, and its significance. What is the relationship of its creative power to the natural order? Study of historical schools and doctrines addressed to this question is part of the work of the Order.

Examples of such schools and doctrines include the star cults of pagan antiquity, astronomical elements of Christianity and Islam, Gnostic cosmology, and Renaissance astrological ideas, astral motifs, and themes in Thelemic texts, and modern stellar mythology such as UFO contactee cults. This study, aside from its instructive and inspirational side, provides the Initiate with building blocks for definition of the self order in relation to the world order.

Structure

Admission

To be considered for affiliation with the Order of Sebekhet, open a dialogue with the Master of the Order. Successful candidates will have

- An explanation of what interests them about the Order of Sebekhet, and what they hope to accomplish through affiliation.

- A specific question they want to explore.

- Plans for how their findings will be communicated or demonstrated.

Publications

The Order of Sebekhet occasionally publishes an internal journal, M101.

Organizational Structure

The Order of Sebekhet has an outer and an inner peristyle. All Setians who affiliate with the Order belong to the outer peristyle. Access to the inner peristyle is open to affiliated Setians who illustrate both theoretical and practical mastery of the Order’s methods through public teaching and external publication.

Appendix 83: The Order of the Sepulcher of the Obsidian Masque

- by Robert W. Robinson IV°, Grand Master

Essent into Essence
Love is the Essence, Love within Death

The Order of the Sepulcher of the Obsidian Masque (OSOM) perceives Set as an indwelling and essential component of the human psyche which is representative of man’s potential for physical, intellectual, and spiritual development. Consequently Set serves as a meta-model for transformation and change that is the result of a soul-wrenching refusal to accept a status quo morality based on an antiquated set of artificially-imposed standards that have ceased to serve, but instead now imprison the evolving human mind.

Thinking of Set in these terms - as an indwelling energy source which can be activated through magical initiation, and as a model for change - is the first step in understanding the purpose and function of this Temple of Set Order. Furthermore Setians wishing to explore the Temple of Set via the OSOM generally come to this realization for themselves prior to requesting membership.

The next step, and a crucial one, is the realization that the Order of the Sepulcher of the Obsidian Masque (the opposite of the sepulcher as a place of death) is designed to help develop a “state of being” in which the reality of death is confronted through intense ritual processes and meditations designed to introduce a Setian to a richer and more profound sensitivity for life.

This practice is fundamental to many of the ancient mystery schools (Egypt, Tibet, the Mayans, etc.) in which “secret” knowledge was promised to those who dared confront the darkest and most frightening event in life - death. The Wewelsburg Working, performed by Dr. Michael Aquino, then-High Priest of Set, is a perfect example of donning death’s most horrible but fascinating mask in order to gain deeper life-affirming insight. OSOM proposes that only through this kind of confrontational exploration of death can a true and lasting awareness of the mysteries of life, death, and continuation come into being.

The Sepulcher of the Obsidian Masque is a metaphor for the usually dormant, under-utilized, and largely unexplored arena of possibility and potency that lies sleeping within. The ignorant should beware, however, for the “Essence” can awaken!

After a rather long period of reflection on such terms as “crypt”, “tomb”, “grave”, “holy place”, “sarcophagus”, “vault”, etc., I chose the word “sepulcher” as the one best able to describe the Sokarian exploration of life through an experiential comprehension of death. One appealing aspect of this word is that, as an expression for a place of interment, “sepulcher” is rarely used today except in gothic horror-stories when an eerie effect is desired. Its use avoids the movie and novel cliches which are immediately evoked when words like “crypt” and “tomb” come into play.

Even as a place of interment a sepulcher is different from other such places dedicated to the memory of the dead. Instead of being built up with stones, bricks, or concrete, or dug into the ground, a sepulcher is carved out of living rock. It is a sacred place of lasting grandeur that is used but once and sealed for eternity. As an adjective the word is used in describing the rituals and ceremonies of death and renewal (sepulchral rites), and in reference to the deep, mysterious, and resonant voice that appears to originate within its depths (a sepulchral voice). Both concepts have importance in the Order of the Sepulcher of the Obsidian Masque.

Obsidian

Obsidian (pure black obsidian, fire obsidian, and rainbow obsidian seem to be the most appropriate as far as OSOM is concerned) is the material out of which the masque (symbolic of the neutral, uninformed self at the center of being - essence) is cut. Obsidian is a dark, usually black (or mostly black), hard and strong vitreous (glass-like) lava. Today it is a popular gemstone, but in the past many cultures used it in the construction of knives, spear- and arrow-heads, as well as sacred ritual tools, jewelry, and mirrors. Black obsidian is the fire-born, fire-hardened substance of the Abyss which must be crossed before true self-realization is possible. It is the Black Flame of Set which burns darkly bright within the heart of every Setian magician.

As far as black obsidian is concerned, it is easy to agree with some “New Age” statements describing this stone’s power as a “master teacher” and a “warrior of truth.” As such it is important to realize that black obsidian does not cater to the egotistical whims of any self-deceiving individual.

Setians know better than most the power of the darkness that is so elegantly symbolized by this powerful volcanic stone. In her book Crystal Enlightenment Katrina Raphael goes even further [the brackets are added by me for reasons that would be obvious if the reader had the original text in hand]:

> It [black obsidian] bluntly and often tactlessly shows the ego-self where it is at and what it needs to change in order to advance to the next step of evolutionary growth. It acts as a mirror that reflects the flaws in one’s nature, and magnifies the fears, insecurities and egocentric attitudes that suppress the soul’s superior qualities.

> Black obsidian could be named “the warrior of truth”, that which slays the illusion to give birth to the vision of [the AEon of Set]. In this new [aeon] each person will live in accordance to the dictates of his own higher consciousness, and that unified consciousness will form the foundation and be the common denominator that links each person to [a shared] truth.

> The black obsidian consciousness interprets all experiences and occurrences from a neutral, clear perspective. The mastery is in the ability to constantly identify with the truth that is inherent but often hidden in the illusion, in every facet of life.

Masque and Mask

As far as the word “masque” is concerned, I chose the French spelling over the English “mask” for several reasons. Besides containing all the variety of meaning that is in “mask”, the “masque” plays an important role in the history of presentational theater (different from dramatic literature).

In England and France during the 15th and 16th centuries, the masque was a very popular, semi-dramatic theatrical production which involved music, dance, mime, verse, and spectacle. It was written, designed, directed, and performed by royal amateurs for their own entertainment. The popularity of this form later gave rise to professional theater as we know it today.

The performers of masques wore masks to protect their identity and permit them a certain freedom of expression which family and position would not normally allow.

Masks (which can be simply defined as intuitively- or artistically-designed facial coverings) are part of an ancient tradition, which OSOM wishes to identify with and tap into. They have been a primary form of symbolism and abstraction since the very beginning of mankind’s search for, and exploration of its own humanity.

Masks are symbolic in form and construction, and they become symbols of sometimes enormous potency and authority in themselves. Ceremony and ritual, fetish and taboo, totem, superstition, and magic have been the messages of masks from primitive cultures down to our own - we assume more sophisticated - culture. From the animal and spirit masks of ancient Egypt to the present, these sculpted face coverings have demonstrated the deepest fantasies of the artist in man and continue to evoke nebulous sensations of the unknown and the supernatural.3

For the purposes of OSOM, “Masque” will be capitalized and used only when referring to the Order and the Obsidian Masque itself, which reflects the total potential for fruition at the center of the Setian magician.

When referring to the various manifestations of Xeper which can be represented by “masks” of various types, styles, and materials, the word “mask” is appropriate. The phrase “masks of the magician”, for example, refers to the various magical personalities, functions and roles the magician plays within reality as he or she perceives it.

Masks have and will continue to serve as important tools in the Dromenic exploration of Essence, as well as in the various ways the Setian magician manifests on this plane of existence.

Back to the Order

Prior to manifestation the Obsidian Masque (Essence) is pure and formless, neutral and without expression, as it lies in silent potency at the center of being. The largely internal process of initiation shapes this formlessness and neutrality into a cast of features which best express the characteristics, attitudes, feeling states, and symbologies relative to a specific phase of magical development.

Each stage of Xeper, the process through which Essence (the higher self in all its potency) is explored and ultimately realized, is represented by its own, ultra-specific mask. Each Setian mask (the vampyre, the serpent, the magician, the mythological Set, the archetype of Satan, death, Anubis, the neter of a magical name, etc.) is a reflection of the magician’s degree of initiation at any given time, within any specific area of exploration, during the ongoing and ever changing process of Xeper.

Initiation can be thought of as a blend of intellectual and intuitive learning processes. Each Setian’s learning/initiatory process differs to a greater or lesser degree from others, because each Setian is a complex mix of right- and left-brained responses to stimuli originating somewhere within the perceived reality of the individual Setian (the Setian’s “subjective universe”). The decisions made and actions taken in response to such stimuli are the building blocks of who we are - self-initiating magicians. Consequently it is expected that the manifesting form of Setian expression (prose, poetry, music, art, etc.) should vary greatly from Initiate to Initiate.

Many Setians undertake a search and exploration of their reality on an intellectual level and best express their insights in some prose format. For other Setians their internal explorations result in poetry, music, and various forms of illustrative artwork. Most Setians achieve a certain amount of balance and harmony in their magical work as well as in their mode of expression, mixing both left- and right-brained explorations of the self and expressing the results in terms both the intellect and the emotions can comprehend.

These modes of expression have one thing in common, however; they do not require that the producing Setian, the one with whom the expression originated and whose inner journey is shared, be present in order to be understood by other Setians.

There still remains a group of Setians for whom an important mode of expression is their physical being (actors, dancers, storytellers, mimes, singers, orators, musicians, martial artists, stage magicians, etc.). Such expression demands the physical presence of both the presenting magician, as well as other magicians in the form of an audience. Only through physical expression can this type of Setian’s message be fully and appropriately conveyed. Such performance- or presentation-oriented magicians are also fully capable of expressing themselves through other modes of communication, but there remains a very expressive and deeply magical aspect of the self which can only be shared through movement and/or voice. A Dromen(a) of the Sepulcher (a member of the OSOM) is the kind of magician for whom a physio-dramatic expression of magic is of paramount importance.

Dromen(a) of the Sepulcher and the Dromon

To many it may seem that the primary interest of the OSOM is the planning and performance of Dromenon or Psychosomatic/Ritual Theater Productions. One probable reason for this misconception was the original decision of the Grand Master to designate members of the OSOM as “Actors of the Sepulcher”. The reason for doing this was not to emphasize the importance of performance as much as to stress the important roles that actors have traditionally played in the societies in which they have lived. They have been seen as the guardians of intuitive wisdom, as seers and shamans, and as creators of visions with the power to assist others in experiencing magical realities that might not otherwise have been possible.

In contemporary use, however, the term “actor” is often used to designate one who “plays” roles for money, “acts” out scenes for entertainment, or presents a “persona” which has nothing whatsoever to do with “truth” or the expression of a truth. Because of this perception and the ease with which the word “actor” can be misinterpreted, it was decided that a name-change was in order.

A search was undertaken for a term that would express the multifaceted nature of the Setians who might want to join the Order, but even more importantly an expression was needed which could encapsulate the pursuit of that knowledge which results from an intense experiential awareness of real biological death. Research finally led to a book by Joseph L. Henderson, The Wisdom of the Serpent, in which the appropriate word was found:

Symbolically man enters the underworld, he “dies” in a dromenon ... and he is always symbolically reborn ... The uninitiated and hence inconsecrate remains “in death”... Only he who in a dromenon, the sacral mime, becomes “blessed” (moves into the realm of the initiated) ... (this) true initiate [the Dromen] is one who by the very nature of his psychic unrest or suffering needs a period of containment during which he can be healed [the period of initiation].

The Dromen or Dromena (feminine), the Initiate who accepts the sacred role of Actor/Mime by joining the Order of the Sepulcher of the Obsidian Masque, must not only experience an individual dromenon but must share that experience with others via a Dromenon created and performed by them. And every such Initiate must also be convinced beyond doubt of the individual and unique nature of the Dromenon (a ritual theater exploration) experienced. Still, no matter how profoundly one has been affected by it, experiences of this sort must be periodically re-experienced because, as Henderson writes:
The coherence of the initiation archetype is broken up or distorted by many other problems pressing in from the personal affairs of everyday life and the claims of that very collective world in which we necessarily must live. During the initiatory experience of the dromenon, dream symbols are impregnated with personal associations so closely interwoven with the archetypal images that it may take many months to unravel the two meanings of the same symbol, one belonging to the personal ego and the other to the impersonal [the Essence].

But fortunately the symbolism of initiation itself usually comes to the rescue with a new symbolic content of such universality as to redeem the individual from auto-erotic isolation and lift his/her experience to another level of meaning where ego and self, personal and impersonal (mundane and essential) again may come together in a spirit of cooperation.

A Dromenon is an ideal way to encounter death in a controlled and positive environment. The lasting impact of this experience can be just as great as the “real thing” without the negative connotations. In simple terms the OSOM Dromenon manifests the process of initiation that can occur through a symbolic death/life initiatory experience.

Because of this experience it can be said that a Dromen(a) has one foot in this reality and the other in a very different reality of his/her own choice and creation. Subsequently Initiates who actively and willingly undergo such a process [as members of OSOM] are designated a Dromen(a) of the Sepulcher (DS), that which is signified by the Bind Rune (Dag-Ken-Tyr), and is thus commended to all Initiates of the Left-Hand Path as one who has been touched and changed by the fire of death and ennobled with the understanding that death is but a state of transition and essential metamorphosis. This entire exploration is referred to by the Grand Master of the Order as “Essent into Essence”.

Essent into Essence

As the Black Magician continues the strange and sometimes fitful journey along the Left Hand Path, he or she eventually - usually sooner rather than later - comes to the point where the Platonic question is asked: “What constitutes a full and complete life?”

For the Setian who wishes to join the OSOM and become a Dromen(a) the next question should be: “Is it possible to live such a life without taking into consideration the role that death plays in life?”

Such a person, in order to provide life with the qualitative value it requires, sees no alternative but to take death into consideration and, without equivocation, incorporate it into the living of life. So total should this commitment be that the ultimate incorporation of the death metaphor into life is no longer a question of “Do I?” or “Don’t I?” but “How should it be done?”.

The truth resulting from this exploration is measured by the degree to which it facilitates the individual process of Setian self-initiation. If insight can be sparked and result in a wider vision of what is, and evoke a deeper inquiry into what can be, this process (Essent into Essence) can be of immeasurable and lasting value.

By now it should be evident that the OSOM sees but one “true” way to gain certain knowledge of one’s Essence: through an intense and dedicated exploration of existence. Living life, in all its tragi-comedy uniqueness, is the only means to this end. To know Essence one must not only passionately seek and live life to the fullest [which takes place through the willed application of the AEonic concepts of Xeper and Remanifestation], but must also become involved in an in-depth examination of death and the role it plays as an inherent part of life. This experiential journey into Essence through an exploration of death is called Essent - Essent into Essence.
As indicated at the beginning of this statement, the OSOM sees Set as an indwelling Essence (of isolate, un-natural origin) which is activated through the process of self-initiation. Examining this idea through the lens of Essent into Essence, it becomes clear that Essence and Set are one and the same, and that Essent is the initiatory death which precedes an awareness of self that is thought of as Set-consciousness.

This realization can be likened in its intensity to the Satori state occasionally experienced by Zen practitioners. The major difference, however, is that the experience of Set-consciousness is not one of losing the self by becoming a part of a greater cosmic whole, but is an experience of Becoming one with the highest, most essential self - Set.

Love is the Essence - Love Within Death

The Left-Hand-Path/Setian experience of “love” in its purest form is Platonic in nature, and is defined as “the desire to comprehend a thing in all its thingness or to know a thing as it is and not as the perceiver wishes it to be”.

The Set-XIV Conclave experience made it clear to the GM that an exploration of Setian (Platonic) love is a necessary part of the Essent into Essence, and begins with the desire to comprehend and “love” the self in all its selfness. This “love” can obviously include the popular concept of romantic love, but it is in no way restricted by it, nor is it diminished through the self-less moral and emotional sacrifice demanded by conventional religion.

This kind of “love” is not given indiscriminately nor universally to the deserving and the undeserving alike. Furthermore it is never directed at some god-being outside the self who requires adoration beyond reason and above the self.

Setian/initiatory “love” is a love that strengthens, is highly selective and creative, and facilitates Xeper through the honest and sincere feedback it stimulates and provides. “Love”, then, is an initiatory experience derived from an all-consuming desire to see the self Become and experience Essence.

Order Membership

The OSOM is designed to provide interested Setians with certain tools for Xeper and Remanifestation through training, psychodramatic ritual, the sharing of information and materials, and the presentation of individual and group Dromenon at Conclaves.

It is not absolutely necessary that non-Dromen Setians (members of other Orders, or Adeptis without Order affiliation) interested in being involved in an OSOM Dromenon become Dromen, since the presented material might well be the product of work within another Temple of Set Order. To date members of several Temple of Set Orders (Vampyre, Trapezoid, and Python) have already participated in Dromenon and have expressed the interest in doing so again. It is in this way that the OSOM is able to span Orders and serve as a means whereby individual Setians and groups (Orders, Pylons, etc.) may join together in the psychodramatic presentation of a shared magical insight.

Initiates who do wish to become members of The Order of the Sepulcher of the Obsidian Masque, however, would not only participate as creator/performers but could also act as resource people in helping any group or individual in deciding how to approach a given theme ritually/psycho-dramatically.

It is also expected that Dromen of the Sepulcher present workshops and/or seminars in their areas of expertise (via video tape, audiotape, live presentations at Conclave and regional conclaves, etc.) to other members of the Order and/or the Temple of Set.
Besides research into all areas of Psychodramatic Mythic/Ritual Theater, a major area of interest will be the idea of transformation in all its forms [including the assemblage of material leading to a fuller and more detailed understanding of existential death and transcendence].

Other areas in which OSOM will attempt to gain insight are sex magic, esoteric modes of non-verbal communication (secret sign languages), dance, martial arts & the role played by conflict in initiation, and other areas of interest which may serve as external expressions of internal archetypal energies (neters), and words of power. Notwithstanding, at its very core the OSOM is dedicated to the examination and intuitive understanding of the greatest of mysteries - the Temple of Set as it is made manifest within the living heart of the Setian magician.

Setians interested in joining [or wishing more information regarding] The Order of the Sepulcher of the Obsidian Masque can contact the GM by writing to the Temple of Set address in San Francisco or speaking with him during a Conclave.

For reasons explained in the Crystal Tablet of Set, only Adepts+ of the Temple will be considered for Order membership.

Multiple Order membership seems to be the norm among Dromen of the Sepulcher, and is encouraged so long as the Initiate has the time and energy to fulfill all Order commitments. Multiple Order membership also requires the written support of all the Grand Masters involved.

Dromenic participation will be periodically examined, and non-productive or non-involved members will be asked to re-examine their self-initiatory needs and expectations. Inactive Dromen may also be directed to resign from the Order or seek membership in some other Temple of Set Order which is better able to suit their needs and inspire their participation.

Since magical initiation sometimes requires massive change, all Dromen of the Sepulcher are asked to review their affiliation with the OSOM and determine if it is still providing the kind of creative impetus they have the right to expect. If change is deemed necessary, then steps will be taken so that the Initiate can find the best method of continuation without the need to jeopardize the integrity of personal Xeper.

The OSOM will communicate with the rest of the Temple through a newsletter, The Sepulchral Voice (S.V.), which will be produced at irregular intervals whenever sufficient material is available to warrant production and distribution. Order members and all Masters of the Temple will receive the S.V. without charge. All others are asked for a donation of US$2 (per copy/per issue) to cover postage & handling. Dromen(a) of the Sepulcher are expected to contribute regularly to the S.V. as well as participate in all Order-oriented activities.

Essent into Essence
Love is the Essence, Love within Death
Xeper and Remanifest

Notes

1. One such meditation is derived from the Yoga Niedra tradition, which means “corpse posture”. Its main goal is to transcend everyday consciousness and find the reality of consciousness which is the highest expression of the self - the self that is fully awake. It differs from other Yogic practices, however, in that the practitioner visualizes his own dismemberment, decapitation, and dissolution into nothingness. When a state of “nothingness” is achieved, the visualization continues with the reconstruction of the self. The fully Remanifested self is imbued with all that the individual deems right and worthy, while all undesirable characteristics that inhibit the realization of one’s potential are simply not included in the process of Remanifestation.

2. Magus Don Webb tells me of an Aztec/Toltec legend of an obsidian mirror used for revelation. He also reminded me of the obsidian “shewstone” used by John Dee and Edward Kelly to receive the Word of Set. A similar obsidian mirror is ascribed to Merlin of the Arthurian legends. This could be a very interesting area of research.

Appendix 84: The Order of Setne Khamuast

- by Don Webb IV°, Grand Master

Ten measures of magic have come into the world. Egypt received nine of these, the rest of the world one measure. Talmud, b. Qid. 49b

Setne Khamuast wun 'wy nw(t) pet per m kerh r irt merr(t) -f nbt tp-ta m-m 'nkaw. [Set-is-Beautiful, General of Thebes, who opens the doors of the sky, shall come forth by night to do all he wishes upon the world among the living.]

I declare that in Year XXX an Order shall Come Into Being bearing the name of the world’s first Egyptologist and one of Egypt’s most renowned magicians, the fourth son of Rameses II, Setne Khamuast, whose name Setne can be rendered in English as “Set-is-Beautiful” or “Set-is-Kind”.

As a soldier he distinguished himself in the campaigns in Israel and the Sudan. He is perhaps the author of the famed lost papyrus “Scroll of Producing Terror and Respect” mentioned in the story of Rameses III. As an Egyptologist he began a careful series of diggings to claim back from the sand the monuments that were lost, and more importantly he created a magical library, the Rameseum, to serve as the mortuary chapel of his father. This gathering of scrolls in a centralized place for study was a first, and changed Egyptian and eventually world magical practice. Because of his interest in magical literature, the Greeks called him “King of the Magicians” and a thousand years after his death a story was circulated about how he had found the Book of Thoth.

As a magician he restored the two Ceremonies of Rebirth connected with the god Set. The first of these is the heb-sed, the “Festival of Set”, practiced for national rebirth. The heb-sed renews the life of the Pharaoh and the land’s connection with the divine. It is first performed after a Pharaoh has reigned for thirty years, since in Egyptian numerology thirty is the number of completion. It may then be performed at the Pharaoh’s discretion throughout his reign. Concerning the effectiveness of the work, Rameses II was the longest-lived of all Pharaohs, outliving his talented son.

The second ceremony was the “Opening of the Mouth”. The Setian aspect of this ceremony has almost destroyed by Osirian overlays. But the most important aspect - the tool called the Pesh-Kent knife made in the shape of Set’s forked tail and fashioned out of iron (bia-en-pet = the metal from the sky) - became Setne’s personal emblem. He served as High Priest of Thebes and Chief Sem Priest. Those of you who have seen his statue in the British Museum have seen him dressed as Sem Priest wearing the original garb of the Setian Priest: the spotted leopard-skin of the south, a reverse-color image of the night sky ruled by Set.

Order members will perform a twofold function. They will discover the treasures of antiquity, and they will be able to present them to the Temple not as interesting curiosities of mankind’s past, but as working formulæ adapted not only to the present, but crafted to producing a stronger, more powerful Temple in the future. There is a threefold process by which this may be accomplished:

First, begin with the best, hardest, most recent scholarship you can find. The OSK doesn’t grow from semi-digested old sources. And above all beware of the many “occultnik” glosses on ancient practices. For too long the tradition of the South has been the home of idiots.
Second, when you find among those good sources that mysterious thing that calls to you, study it well. Begin with the objective facts first, and then re-enact as appropriate for your life. Try until you get results! Then turn your eyes inward and see how it has affected your initiation. If you see a positive effect on your Xeper, then you are ready for the third phase.

Third, communicate what you have learned. I’m not talking about a long, dry article full of Egyptian and Greek terms [although scholarly publication, particularly outside of the Temple, is encouraged], but rather the task of communicating personal initiation to other Initiates. Extract the processes of the ancient formulæ and present them to the Temple, for learning to teach something is the first step to its mastery.

Although the Order’s studies will primarily focus on Egyptian practice, others interested in the South are welcome in the hopes that other Orders will grow from this Order just as the OSK grows from my own pilgrimage to the Land of Eternal Day in the Order of the Trapezoid. In addition to the study of classical Egypt some areas of interest will be:

1. The magic and philosophy of Græco-Roman Egypt.
3. The use of Egyptian motifs in European magical traditions.
4. The practice of Lesser Black Magic using antique themes, or how to astonish your friends and neighbors by remembering you were Tutankhamen.

The Order will have an Outer Court and an Inner Court. Outer Court affiliation will be very informal, consisting of a simple desire to examine the order, attend its workings, or joining a Phyle while pursuing a particular Initiation in an another Order. The Inner Court consists of formal obligation to the Order. Entering the Inner Court will both require and cause a change in the Initiate’s relationship to the Objective Universe, which will affect not only the seeker but will remanifest throughout all of the Temple and finally the world.

Groups may form from time to time to pursue specific activities. They will called Phyles (Greek term for hard-to-pronounce za), the Egyptian name for a crew of craftsmen based on ancient Upper Egyptian social organization. Phyles are to be headed by Inner Court members, and may pursue any topic of interest. They may last for a week or be as the sands of time, they may have non-OSK members.

There is no planned newsletter yet, but if it should be desired, it will be called the D’Elmet Setne (The Magical Word Gathering of Setne).

There is another purpose to the Order, which I may only hint at here. On August 24, 394 ev. the last hieroglyphic inscription was written by a Priest of Isis at her shrine on the island of Phiæ. He no doubt met his death during the terrible Christian persecutions that characterized early Fifth Century Egypt. The Copts brag of the destruction of Phiæ claiming that one of their saints caused the Nile to flood over it. It has been sixteen hundred years and I think it’s time to make the waters recede.
Appendix 85: The Order of Shuti

- by Robert Menschel IV°, Grand Master

I. Introduction

Shu and Tefnut, the twin lion gods, are opposites. Shu and Tefnut are male and female, hot and cold, dry and wet, public and private, intellectual and emotional, et cetera and so forth.

Alone, either one would be dangerously unbalanced, and would have earned an evil reputation for his or her excesses. But Shu and Tefnut are always together. Each defines the other; each requires the other. Each balances and tempers the other. Shu’s most prominent headpiece, the feather of Ma’at, emphasizes this balance, as does the representation of Shu through the use of this feather alone, as a single hieroglyph. Shuti is Shu and Tefnut together, under one name, as one composite being.

The Order of Shuti is dedicated to the study of Opposition and Balance, Opposition in Balance, Balance in Opposition, and Balance through Opposition. More, we will pursue Xeper through Balance, and Xeper through Opposition. By “Opposition” we don’t mean just conflict (though of course that is included). We will study and use opposites, the actions and forces of these opposites, the ranges of existence between these opposites, the balance of these opposites, and the dynamic magical implications thereof.

One obsolete philosophy of magic was that to achieve balance, the magician had to experience and participate in the extremes (often the extremes of good and evil).

There are simply too many different pairs of opposites and extremes for a magician to experience them all. Further, many extremes are downright dangerous, such as extreme hot and cold, unnecessarily evil and unlawful acts, and excessively self-sacrificing acts. But the Initiate of Shuti will recognize and work with any and all opposites/extremes, and with the ranges and balances between them, whenever and however appropriate.

“For with no purpose the force of the mind must fail ...” This study of opposition and balance can support many diverse goals.

One such purpose will be to study and understand the physical and objective universe, and to study and understand the magical and subjective universe, so that we may change those universes in accordance with our Wills (per the challenge of Michael, found in the Diabollon’s Statement of Satan ArchDaimon).

Other goals and purposes are and will be supported; this is but one which has been defined and will be offered to interested Initiates. Any and all sets of opposites will be valid and appropriate areas of study for the Initiate. The universes are our library and our laboratory. But some topics will be of global interest:

Life and Death are the major pair of Opposites. We will work to recognize all forms and degrees of these opposites. We will work to always strive for Life, to always reject Death.

One set of Opposites of major interest is Self and Not-Self. How do we define our Selves? When we Remanifest continued existence without these bodily shells, how will we then define our Selves? How will we differentiate between personal Xeper and the willful modification of the external universe?

We will also study Set and the Opposite Self, HarWer. We will study them as individual entities, as Opposite Selves, and as Satan (Set and HarWer fused).
Related to these above topics, we will examine the opposites of your own Higher Self, that towards which you Xeper, and your Lower Self, that which you Will outgrow.

II. Activities

The most visible activity of the Order of Shuti is its newsletter, Dialogues. Published on an irregular schedule [due to the Grand Master’s time restraints, certainly not due to a lack of material], the newsletter contains active discussions of a large variety of topics, reports of progress made in various areas of endeavor, and more.

The Order of Shuti also indulges in a high level of correspondence between its members, on topics listed above and others of interest to the members. Most correspondence is between individuals, but from time to time select correspondence will be shared with the entire Order membership.

The Order of Shuti also hosts open activities at Conclaves, to which all Conclave attendees are welcome. Finally the Order hosted a weekend workshop several years ago, to which many Setians were invited, and we plan to hold more workshops in the future.

Other pairs of opposites are knowledge and ignorance, ability and inability, comprehension and noncomprehension, perception and nonperception, etc. Shu is a god of knowledge, the light of the sun. With Tefnut’s influence, Shuti is a god of active Satanic enlightenment. We therefore expect the Order’s Initiates to actively contribute material to the Scroll of Set and the Ruby Tablet of Set. We also expect the Order’s Initiates to participate in, assist, and/or lead Pylons as appropriate, whether local Pylons, correspondence Pylons [like the Gates of Hell], or otherwise.

III. Affiliation and Participation

The Order of Shuti is a fairly “open” and available Order. Our newsletter, Dialogues, is available by subscription to all Setians. We publish our major works in the Ruby Tablet of Set. We welcome dialogue with all Setians concerning any Order topic of interest.

Because of this, some Setians may wonder, “Why should I join the Order of Shuti, when I can have all of its benefits without joining it?” The answer is that Setians outside of the order don’t get all of its benefits. There is correspondence within the Order which is not published. Order members have opportunities for Xeper which are not readily made available outside the Order. Order members have more direct and frequent contact with the Grand Master. Etc.

How can an Adept formally affiliate with the Order of Shuti? Order membership is closely tied to active participation with the Order. [Order members will be - and have been - expelled for a lack of participation. Allowances are made, of course, for time restrictions due to schooling and other high priority elements of Xeper.] Interested Adepts should therefore: (1) correspond with the Grand Master discussing your interest, and (2) participate in the Order’s activities.

This participation includes reading and contributing to Dialogues, and correspondence with Order members and/or the Grand Master on topics of interest to you. You should also develop your ideas through research and/or discussion, and submit the results of your work to Dialogues, the Scroll of Set, and/or the Ruby Tablet of Set.

After having demonstrated your interest in and participation with the Order of Shuti, you may then apply to the Grand Master for formal admission to the Order. Such application normally will be approved after a fairly short review.
Appendix 86: The Order of Taliesin

- by Eric Kauschen IV°, Grand Master

If music be the staff of life, play on!
- William Shakespeare

Music is a living, breathing thing. Every piece of music can exist as a ritual that can be performed over and over again. Few musicians are aware of these, even fewer people are aware of this. Rituals that are based around music and media are extremely powerful and cause the celebrant to flow with the environment they are in leaving the environment outside of the ritual chamber. This is an area that needs further exploration.

There have been many musicians within the Temple, but very few of them have spoken about this. It is time for this to change. The creation of music and media has come into the hands of more people, and because of that there is more poorly-produced and understood music and media made available today.

The name of the Order comes from Taliesin, Chief Bard of Britain and Celtic shaman, a historical figure who lived in Wales during the latter half of the sixth century. His verse is established as a direct precursor to the Arthurian Legends, and Taliesin himself, shaman and shapeshifter, is said to be the direct forebear of Merlin.

Initiates of the Temple of Set who hold the degree of Adept or higher may seek admittance to the Order of Taliesin by writing to the Grand Master, but be forewarned: this is not an Order for people who just like music. It is an Order for those with a good understanding of music and media who want to learn more in exchange for offering what they know.

The Order of Taliesin will work in the following areas as well as others as the Order grows:

1. Music composition and performance
2. Audio recording and production
3. Multimedia composition and production

The Order of Taliesin was not created to be a large Order, but to take the natural Black Magical skills in every musician and develop and expand upon them.

If music be the staff of life, play on!
Appendix 87: The Order of Uart

- by Linda Reynolds IV°, Grand Master

Originally named Order of Python, this Order was founded in 1979 by Magistra Linda Reynolds and then-Magistra Nancy Flowers. Their intent was for it to be an Order for the exploration of art and magic. In 1997 Priestess Heather Lee Ayres, who had been in the Order since shortly after its conception, was named Acting Grand Master by Magistra Reynolds. Priestess Ayres felt it absolutely necessary to Remanifest the creative essence out of its long stagnation for the Order to survive. The Python was magically laid to rest and cremated, with the UART manifesting from its ashes.

Uart is an Egyptian term that means “the artist’s quarter”: a place of bifurcation or division (i.e. the Guild/Temenos structure within the Order. If seen as two words, U and Art means the “well of the Flame in the Great Oasis”, the source of Dark inspiration and imagination within the Temple of Set.

The work of the OU is based upon the “Nine Perceptions of Heka-An”: the initiatory significance of art that was revealed to Priestess Ayres on March 21, 1997. These Nine Perceptions are:

1. Art in itself is a valid form of expression.
2. Art is a record of one’s initiation.
3. Art is the Magical Link between the subjective and objective universes.
4. Creativity is a process of the Black Flame.
5. Art is a historical record of culture.
6. The artist becomes immortal in the objective universe.
7. The artist becomes immortal in the subjective universe.
8. The state of mind achieved during an act of creation is a gateway for communication with the Prince of Darkness.
9. Throughout the act of creation, the mind of Set can begin to become known.

Artists - members of the Order - may work with one or any combination of these perceptions that best suit their individual path, but are expected to minimally produce ARTifacts to carry the history and culture of the Temple of Set into the coming millennia, affect the objective universe through their work by unleashing it into the world via gallery shows, publication, performance in a theatre, etc., reflect their evolving Set nature in their work, and participate in the Order’s Xeper by putting forth their ideas and projects within their Guild or to the Order as a whole. These are the criteria for being recognized as a Master of the Uart.
Within the Order are nine Neter Guilds that work within a specific area of art. These are Acting/Performance Art; Computer Graphics/Photography; Dance; Drawing/Painting; Music; Sculpture/Jewelry; Textiles; Magical Tool Making; and Writing. Each artist works within a primary Guild but is not limited to that specific artform. As long as one is productive in a chosen Guild, one is free to work in as many as driven to.

Within these Guilds are temenos (studios) which are each artist’s personal working space, wherein all artforms that the artist works in are made manifest. A temenos is the subjective magical universe, while the studio is the objective place of business. Just as each Setian is the center of the universe, each temenos is the core of the Uart.

The Order produces an annual work presented to the Temple, and publishes a newsletter entitled Art en Ptah (‘Document of Ptah’) as submissions warrant.

The Uart is open by invitation to II°+ Initiates of the Temple of Set who are ablaze with the fire of creation, are compelled to know and express themselves by and through their artwork, and who work their most powerful magic through their art.

Dual Order membership is acceptable as long as it does not diminish the interaction and focus of the Initiate’s work in either Order.

Obtaining entrance to the Uart is a process that begins by interested Initiates submitting to the Grand Master via the Temple office: (1) a sample of their artwork (photographs or copies are acceptable), and (2) a written brief manifesto of what/why/how they intend to proceed with their work in the context of their initiation, the Uart, and the Temple of Set.

Behold the genius of your creation!
Appendix 88: The Order of the Vampyre

- by Lilith Aquino IV° & William T. Butch IV°, Grand Masters

The Order of the Vampyre is an order which embraces the concepts of vampyric presence as a means to personal power and potential immortality. Vampyrism is a unique Black Magical condition that in and of its very nature requires a posture which enables a natural and effortless exchange of power from the lesser to the greater. In normal communication this power is evidenced by the psychological control exerted over others. Through our Black Magic this power is evidenced by accessing what is known as lucid dreaming, and increasingly gaining mastery over that state of Becoming which is desirable in its own right.

Vampyrism goes back to time immemorial, and true vampyrism can be traced back in many cultures around the world, and is therefore known by many different names. A true vampyre knows that he does not achieve the posture of effortless power through the mundane act of physical blood-drinking. In fact to pursue such acts would mean that he did not understand his own condition, let alone vampyric Black Magic.

Through Xeper, the Word of the Æon of Set, members of this Order will strive to bring to life those qualities and aspects of our potential which have long been considered to be dead or latent.

Communication is a cornerstone of our work. Members of the Order will communicate effectively in order to maintain that concert which will be our collective effort. The Order’s founders undertook research that brought them into a dialogue with, and the acquaintance of existing vampyric characteristics and archetypal forces. They were examining, testing, and proving to themselves through direct experience how many of the alleged vampyric powers - such as invisibility, manipulation, the power of sound and breath, etc. - were real and were useable. Many of these same powers are of course harnessed by non-OV Setians.

Through the great Black Magic, and in ways that are special to the Children of the Night, we seek to further enhance and augment such powers. On a lesser level these powers will be evidenced in social communications, resulting in personal power as measured by social position, wealth, and personal freedom. On a greater level, by achieving control of the lucid dreaming state, these powers will be the direct experience of vampyres in a world of their own creation, which can also be potentially shared.

Vampyres can be hideous as well as noble by nature. Vampyres can also be - and are - glamorous. Those who are members of the Order of the Vampyre will learn to perfect such skills as the application of cosmetics, the use of the voice in subtle ways (including the embedding of commands in one’s phrases), and the act of holding another’s gaze to influence, to distract, to control. All of these are designed to enhance the creation of the vampyric posture such that power flows to the vampyre for both lesser and greater goals.

It is our desire that our school for vampyres address the vampyre at all levels, and that our teachings have a practical application in the world. Hence all of these are steps towards the formation of a more compleat Setian, a more compleat vampyre.

As such, powers of imagination and visualization are employed by members in this Order. Therefore art, music, and literature can and will be used as tools for our Order members. Within our school for vampyres will arise those who specialize in certain aspects of vampyrism and its proper application. These schools within our school, as well as other directions and things yet to come to this Order, are to be decided by its Masters and members.

There will be those who first learn more about the Arkte Element here, who then become warriors. There will be others who first learn of the MetaMind Element here, and who will then specialize in it. Each of these schools within a school will either be an official office or function of the Temple of Set, or will be informally controlled or helmed by a Master or senior member of the Order.

Applicants will be considered for admission to the Order by an existing Master of the Order (preferably), or by a III°+ member of the Order at large, or by one of the Grand Masters themselves. In most cases, if a Master of the Order deems a Setian is appropriate for the Order, that Setian’s membership will almost always be guaranteed. In all cases, however, the decision to admit a Setian will be at the sole discretion of one or both Co-Grand Masters. Either or both Co-Grand Masters will decide favorably on the applicant if he/she is (a) particularly well-suited for the Order and (b) has the necessary amount of time and degree of commitment for such specialized work. Questions concerning membership into the Order, or about aspects of the vampyric being, may be addressed to any Master of the Order (preferably), also to any III°+ member of the Order at large, or to either Co-Grand Master.
Appendix 89: The Order of the Wells of Wyrd

by Rebecca Lance IV°, Grand Master

An ash I know, Yggdrasíl by name
With water white is the great tree wet;
Thence come the dews that fall in the dales,
Green by Urðh’s well does it ever grow.

Thence come the maidens mighty in wisdom,
Three from the dwelling down ’neath the tree;
Urðh is one named, Verdhándi the next -
On the wood they scored - and Skuld the third.
Laws they made there, and life allotted
To the sons of men, and set their fates.

With these lines from the Voluspa is introduced a magical working model of the interaction between space and time:

At the axis of the Universe stands a tree, Yggdrasíl by name. In its branches lie the worlds of both gods and men. From beneath its roots springs a well of silvery water - the Well of Wyrd, Urðh’s Well. Any actions from within the Worlds, any events, any “doings” or “sayings”, manifest as drops of water that fall like silvery drops of dew from the branches of Yggdrasíl into the Well of Wyrd at the base of the tree.

The tree is tended by three Norns - Urðh, Verdhándi and Skuld. Urðh - what has become; Verdhándi - that which is becoming; and Skuld - that which should become. The Norns tend the waters of the Well. They set the fates of men, and water the Tree with the waters of the Well.

The cycle is clear: the past flows to the future, which in turn becomes part of a formative past. It is important to note that in this model there is no room for a predetermined “future”. New actions, new layers in the Well are not merely stacked on top of each other as a linear archaeological record of the past. Each event, each action that occurs in the Tree drips down and mixes throughout the waters in an integrative fashion. The past - a fluid repository of all actions and events in the tree - is mutable, ever-changing. The potential future that flows from it fluxes as well.

The Initiate, as a self-contained manifestation of the Black Flame, has the opportunity to work directly with this flux and flow. Each willed moment is a magical event. The present is that infinitesimally thin interface between what-has-been and what that moment can become. The present is a transformative moment because it directs the flow of Wyrd and transforms all that has gone before, and all that will follow. Reception-transformation-re-expression.

Wells

The Well of Wyrd is just one of many mythical wells to be explored within the Order.

In Norse mythology, Yggdrasíl, the World tree, has three distinct roots extending into three wells. The Well of Wyrd as a whole is actually composed of the tripartite series of these wells. A root surrounding Ginnungagap feeds from Mímir’s Well. This is the well into which Odhinn sacrificed one of his eyes, that he might see into the worlds and obtain wisdom. It may be said to be the Well of Perception.
A root extends into Niflheim and is associated with the well Hvergelmir. Hvergelmir is known as the Roaring Kettle, or Seething Cauldron. In its bubbling, seething waters are the source of integrative synthesis.

Urdh’s Well nourishes and sustains the root which extends into Asgard, the realm of the Aesir. In old Norse, Urdh’s Well is known as Urdhar-brunnr. The term “Brunnr” has been translated into English as “well”, but the word is much more potent than that. Brunnr represents a spring or a well that is centrally located. It also represents the source of that well, the power that allows the well to fill, and the container of the well itself.

There is a difference between water that arises from a spring in a marsh and spreads out over the ground, and water that arises through a deep shaft cut in stone, or through a rift in the rocky earth. The water that is not bound or contained spreads out over the ground and rapidly becomes mud. Water that arises through a defining source, however, retains its purity and its connection to that source. “Brunnr” represents not only the waters of the well, but their source, and that aspect of containment or boundary that allows the well to retain its purity and magical charge.

The only etymological descendant of “brunnr” found in English is the word “bourne”. Hence the name of the Order’s newsletter, Bourne of Wyrd.

For the Initiate to become an effective interface between what-has-been and what-should-be, he/she must increase powers of awareness: Awareness of the worlds, awareness of limitations and boundaries, awareness of mind and body.

The foundation work of the Order is largely composed with increasing these awarenesses, and learning how to work with the resultant new perceptions.

The cosmology described in the preceding paragraphs is intrinsically Norse, but it illustrates a concept that is universal: the flow of patterns and the movement of the patterning principle as it sculpts a new future out of all actions that have become.

In the Order of the Wells of Wyrd, we will call this flow-from “what has been”, to “that which could become” - the Flow of Wyrd. Work within the Order will center around apprehending the Flow. To attempt to comprehend Wyrd is to attempt to understand the very thing that allows happenings to manifest. Most of us were raised primarily from within the comforting rational causalities of Newtonian physics. Drop the apple; it falls. To comprehend Wyrd, however, is to attempt to perceive a paradigm of causality that transcends linear cause and effect. It is beyond microscopic and cosmic. It is both and neither.

For Initiate of the O.W.W., the ultimate magical goal is to learn to direct the Flow of Wyrd in a willed fashion. Each of our initiatory paths flowers from within a matrix of Wyrd. Apprehending and directly working with this matrix will be the Great Work of the Order. We must learn to bring to the waters those things that will sustain our magical worlds and nourish the manifestations of our Wills.

Avenues of Exploration

The avenues of exploration of the Order are multifold, and will not all be outlined here. It is expected, however, that the following three basic avenues should be explored by each Initiate.

(1) Subjective States

To fully apprehend Wyrd, the Initiate may chose to actively explore receptive and subjective states: altered or discrete states of consciousness. For our purposes, an altered state will be considered to be any discrete state of consciousness that is somehow different from our “normal” waking state. This includes meditative states, hypnotic states, dream states, and trance states.

To perceive something in its entirety, it is helpful to “view” it from many different perspectives. By experiencing alterations in consciousness, we allow ourselves to expand our perception, and apprehension of Wyrd. The term “Altered States of Consciousness” (ASC) has become popularized in modern culture, but perhaps a better term would be “Altered States of Perception” (ASP). This more aptly explains the purpose of the state within the Order.

Altered states are one way to explore powerful causal connections in our world and ourselves: Learning to lucid dream, one can regain control over nightmares, and discover that one’s daytime fears change in quality as a result. Learning to focus visualizations of energy while in a meditative state, one may learn to utilize healing techniques. Learning to inject intent into any number of limenal states offers the Initiate an enormous range of tools with which to work.

(2) Body/Kinesthetic Awareness

As the body/mind framework is the most direct way to apprehend and transform the Flow of Wyrd, an awareness of body/mind states and energies are vital. Initiates will be encouraged to develop their own inner awareness of their physical being through some discipline. Dance, martial arts, yoga - all are excellent avenues. For some Initiates, frequent meditations on kinesthetic awareness may prove effective

(3) Building an Objective Structure

Due to the morpheous and inherently individualistic quality of subjective states, the initiate benefits enormously from having a symbolic structure or model to frame these experiences on. This is how we give them meaning.

Visions only have a voice if they speak our language. Most Setians are quite capable of developing their own symbolic language with which to interpret and work subjective states. This is vital, but insufficient. We need to be able to share and communicate these states and explorations. We must seek universals. We must be able to find the common threads that hold our magical experiences together.

Therefore the Initiate will be expected to become familiar with academic, cultural, or scientific studies relating to his or her individual experience. Depending on the Initiates experiences, he or she may need to research traditional magical systems, or delve into philosophical structures as diverse as quantum physics, or Chinese medicine. The idea behind such an avenue of study is to find the universal thread that holds the magical experience together. Hopefully, in so doing, we will also learn a way to better communicate our experiences with each other.

An Order Between Orders

It is expected that there will develop with the Order certain mutual focal points of interest between members. These focal points will be known as Wells. Current active Wells include the Well of Dreams, which intensively studies dream and sleep states, and the Well of Healing.
Work within the Order will also be very closely connected to and supported by its sister organization - Urdh’s House - a House within the Order of the Trapezoid. Current active Foci within Urdh’s House include a Focus on Seidhr, a Focus on Dreams, and a Focus on the Way of the Warrior.

As the work of the Order of the Wells of Wyrd will closely tie in and be supported by the work of other Orders, the O.W.W. may be seen at times as an “Order between Orders”, a well of integrating focus.

Members of the O.W.W. who belong to other orders will be mandated to carry the work of Wyrd to members of other Orders in a way that will benefit all.

For Initiates who do not belong to other Orders, the O.W.W. should become a place where they can learn to intimately integrate multifaceted aspects of life and Work.

“Apprehension” and “Transformation”

These are key words of the Order.

Through this work it is expected that the Initiate will learn to become a Master of his/her own destiny - and to learn what “destiny” really is.
Appendix 90: The Order of Xnum

- by William D. Pridgen IV°, Grand Master

I am Xnum, your maker! My arms are around you, to steady your body, to safeguard your limbs. I bestow on you stones upon stones; since former times nobody ever worked with them to build the temples of the gods. For I am the master who makes, I am he who makes himself exalted in Nun, who first came forth, Hapy who hurries at will; fashioner of everybody, guide of each man.

- The Dream of Zoser, Col. 18-20 of the Famine Stele

Introduction

The Order of Xnum is the philosophy department of the Temple of Set. Its focus is the practice of philosophy as an initiatory discipline. Philosophy has been translated from the Greek as “passion for wisdom”. Initiates of the Order of Xnum will demonstrate this passion through the active pursuit and gradual embodiment of wisdom.

Xnum is the personification par excellence of that which guides and informs the philosopher’s path. By Hellenistic times the cult of Xnum had been absorbed into the cult of agathodaimon because Xnum, as is quoted above, was understood to be the “fashioner of everybody, guide of each man”. As this dovetails rather nicely with the Socratic tradition of the daimon and the Platonic principle of the agathon, it’s not surprising that such a synthesis occurred.

While Pythagoras was the first person to call himself a philosopher, the cult of agathodaimon was at its height in Hellenistic times, when the Greeks had identified the Egyptian decan Xnm as a composite of stars from their constellations Hydra and Leo. Thus has come down to us the familiar symbol of the Æon as a composite lion-serpent. As Black Magicians, Initiates of the Order of Xnum will draw inspiration from the historical impact this principle has had by recovering and putting into practice the magical records of this ageless academy.

Affiliation and Expectations

Membership in the Order of Xnum is available to II°-VI° Setians. Interested I’s who have some background or interest in the humanities may begin dialogue with the Grand Master towards possible future affiliation. This should not, however, take precedence over learning and applying basic Setian principles as outlined in the Crystal Tablet of Set. Dialogue at this level will focus exclusively on the essentials of Setian philosophy.

Initiates of the Order of Xnum are responsible for understanding the basics of Setian philosophy and pursuing it as a way of life. This lifestyle, as summarized in the Word Xeper, should be evident in the thoughts, words and deeds of the Setian philosopher. Part of this lifestyle is achieved through the practice of LBM, the foundation from which the pursuit of greater mysteries becomes possible. Through GBM the Setian philosopher attempts to tap into the living Æon, so that personal insight may become undiluted by changing the nature of perception. Beyond these general goals are the following specific tasks:
What an Order Member Does

1. Reads contemporary and classical philosophy (From Heraclitus to Whitehead).

2. Is able to discuss, with Setians and non-Setians, philosophical ideas and offer examples of their application in day-to-day life.

3. Works on deep applications/investigations of traditional problems in ethics, ontology, and epistemology within a Setian context.

4. Works on a magical level with daimonic guidance/information (with special reference to daimonic invocations in the Magical papyri).

5. Will become familiar with current daimonic thought outside of the Temple (for example Jung, Iyer or Hillman).

6. Can describe Setian thought to non-Setians in nonsectarian language, and does so.

7. Develops a good bullshit detector, and applies skepticism to modern occultism, parapsychology, politics, and other con games - and can help others to do so with humor, grace and good spirit.

8. Identifies and supports movements resonant with the Order’s orientation in the objective universe and finds schools for furthering his goals (of learning and self-transformation) there as well.

9. Reports on these activities with justifiable pride and sensible humility to the Grand Master, the members of the Order, the Temple, and Worthy friends in the world at large - carefully explaining to them (and to himself) how these activities lead to a desired state of self-transformation.

Every question is a rung on the ladder to godhood. Invoke often!

Above I stated that philosophy is the discipline of the pursuit and gradual embodiment of wisdom. I also stated that Xnum was a personification of the guiding and informing principle of this discipline. Xnum represents a reconciliation between HarWer and Set. His goals and adversities parallel those of Set, while also incorporating many of the positive qualities of HarWer. Xnum’s primary goals are the cultivation of life towards higher forms, the pursuit of self-knowledge and creation on various levels of existence. This has close ties with Magister Menschel’s concept of Setogenesis, but within the Order of Xnum it is referred to as ARI-KAT (“to process, to synthesize, to manufacture”). Initiates of the Order of Xnum will seek to uncover deeper meanings beyond the obvious.

The Order of Xnum is a Remanifestation of the cult of agathodaimon, which is the cult of bringing into being the essential Self through the discipline of philosophy. Like the ancient Greeks, we will pare mythology and symbolism down to the bare essentials. Philosophy allows us to discuss uncommon things in a common (albeit precise) language. We will in turn be able to use mythology and symbolism in a more potent way because of our comprehension of principles. Thus we work in the spirit of the ancient Hermetic tradition, which is the spirit of cooperative individualism. There is room for both reason and magic in the worlds we create.

Conclusion

The Setian mind hungers for knowledge - the most essential knowledge being Self-knowledge. Setian epistemology can therefore be said to be rooted in ontology - or as one Setian Magus expressed it: “The only truth is that of being!” The Setian philosophy, as summarized in the Word Xeper, advocates the principles of life, dynamism, and self-awareness, as much as it opposes death, stasis, and self-delusion. These are mirrored within and beyond the Setian, as he struggles to perform the alchemy of transforming the self that is yet to be into the Self that Is To Be!

Let the one who aspires to my knowledge be called by the name Setian.

Appendix 91: Remanifestation: The Process Explained

- by James Lewis V°
September 13, 1989

It is by necessity of the initiation that each Magus set forth the principles of his Word and those aspects of it which exist with both contemporary life and the Words previous to it. A Word, whether of the primary or Æon-enhancing kind, must have relevance to the chemistry of life. It is the duty of the one who Utters it to show the principle at work. It is not the duty of the Magus to do all the work involved with his principle; instead he shares such Understandings as his intellect is able to translate into comprehensible language so that others may put his perceptions to the test. It is for this reason that while the Degree of Magus is uncluttered by obscurity and is in fact the most easily understandable of all Grades, the difficulty associated with it is in its successful functioning. No one would have ever been able to convey the full weight of that to me prior to having personally experienced it and it may be that one or more of you reading this may one day undergo that freak occurrence which we name the Fifth Degree. Future Magi have now been forewarned!

Reamanifest was initially a Word which answered the question of continuation of the Self after the metabolic processes of the biological envelope eventually ceased. The finer points of time cycles and manipulation at first escaped me, as did the daily Willed function of the principle at work in both the Initiatory aspects and those coming about as a naturally occurring action. The Word is a tool through which the power of Xeper can be more skillfully used to make the most of the core of the Wewelsburg Working, itself an unveiling of the dynamic force operating as the focal point from which stem all deliberate and a majority of the accidental and coincidental acts Initiates and non-Initiates alike encounter. In that sense it is present side by side with Xeper in that an absence of either would cause the machinery of the Self to grind to a halt. The deliberate and ethical pursuit of the theory and dynamics of Xeper cannot but produce a Remanifestation through which newer and more refined uses of previously gathered knowledge can be put into practice. This in turn creates a further Xeper and another option to Remanifest anew. This continuation can and will take place as long as the hand-in-hand process is Willed to persevere. Our early predecessors, the inhabitants of ancient Khem, did not think of time as being linear, but rather as circular and cycling its occurrences through progressive accumulations of events and influences. Such insights as theirs have more than an incidental meaning for the questing Magician and in fact assist in extending his grasp of the way in which it is possible [and inevitable] that he will Remanifest. It is in accord with the principle of Xeper that all Willed and even accidental actions which move the individual build up to a point at which a being emerges who for all practical purposes is a newly made presence on the planet. Such a result is one of the aims of the Initiatory process.

Eventually the exploring mind must ask what the Self can/will Come Into Being as in a long term sense. A complete and definitive answer to that question is not available to us for the simple reason that no one can foretell the future. [What a dull world it would be if we could!] It may be that increasingly sophisticated Remanifestations will produce a Self unlike any that contemporary man can conceive of by today’s standards - I rather suspect that will be exactly the case. Given the force of Thelema still making itself felt, there is in point of fact no limit to what can come to be. Neither is there anything outside of man which is able to destroy the soul’s ability to assert its presence in any way it perceives as proper and just. Life, once understood, is a treasure not to be thoughtlessly cast aside at whim. It is the basic key to immortality through the doors of new forms.

The Trail of the Serpent is the newsletter of the Order of Leviathan. Since XIX it has covered different facets of the way in which individuals and groups Remanifest. It did so prior to the Word receiving V° Recognition and subsequently has continued to serve as one of the vehicles for its ongoing explorations. Those nuances of the Word uncovered there have advanced far beyond anything I could have expected and indeed have surpassed a number of times beyond what I had at the time thought of as the most comprehensive insights possible into the principle. It is intellectually and Magically satisfying to encounter new facets which previously had been missed. It is even more satisfying to see the Word being tested and used by those bearers of the Black Flame for whom it was intended. Those who put the augmenting implement to Xeper into practice find themselves more successful in their Hegelian quests to uncover that knowledge of Set spoken of in the Book of Coming Forth by Night. This advantage is not applicable to my own Word only, but is germane to an appreciation of Thelema, Indulgence, Xeper, and even Restriction, that Word of Sin spoken of by HarWer. The practical asset of it all has the far more long-reaching effects which Coleridge saw as far back as 1833 CE: “If a man is not rising upwards to be an angel, depend upon it, he is sinking downwards to be a devil. He cannot stop at the beast. The most savage of men are not beasts; they are worse, a great deal worse.”

The angel and devil references are not unworthy of Magicians’ attention. In the context of Coleridge’s penned words and our Æon, “angel” need not be dismissed as representing an effete winged servant. Neither should “devil” be thought of solely as a vessel of malice. The quote as seen through the eyes of present day discernment more accurately portrays the angelic as a symbol of the aristos and the devilish as that which selfishly plots a course for the perverted use of life in order to cause harm and mutation rather than beneficial evolution. Such destructive behavior must eventually find itself undergoing the same fate Ipsissimus Crowley described the Black Brothers as suffering: a slow and sure disintegration of the self into the nothingness of oblivion.

This is not to say that those who are deliberate in their evil are doomed to a Judgement Day-type retribution. Just as those who sincerely Will to Come Into Being as the highest and best possible states of Being are successful in their endeavors, so the small and selfish also have an opportunity to escape the annihilation of consciousness. Survival, in the long run, does not depend on the shell which houses the soul, but rather on that core self which may go by the name each individual feels most comfortable with, be it soul, ba, ka, psyche, or whatever. It is all a matter of Willing (in the purely Thelemic sense) one’s personal future. And, I might add, the yet-to-be is not fixed; it is subject to change and may alter itself by the moment, thereby lending itself as a tool working equally well in the hands of the good and evil. The crux of the entire process is a proper understanding of not only what is being done, but why it is being carried out. Hence, when Initiate A aligns his determination in the direction of increasing his fund of Magical knowledge, he is successful even if the results do not make immediate sense. He has taken the sum of his knowledge and skills to that moment and concentrated them on his quest for truths. His Xeper has brought about a Remanifestation which makes his personal Coming Into Being more cultured than before. He could just as easily have changed the intent of the Working to bring about an increased perception of the paths of evil and Remanifested as a more worldly-wise monster. In both cases the hypothetical Initiate opens doors to new states of being and has thereby the option of continuing what he has begun. The eventual disintegration has a greater chance of taking place in the pursuit of evil because malice is in the end a limiting thing leading to the door to annihilation. Sooner or later it must fall under the domination of the Word of Sin and find itself without a purpose - just so much destruction can take place before there is nothing left to obliterate. The soul is then left in a cosmos made empty by itself.

The author of Words from the Æon of HarWer to the present has been sought through as many singular avenues as there have been individuals setting their feet on the Path. The Æon of HarWer, as recounted in the Book of Coming Forth by Night, was marked by confusion as its Magus did his best unwittingly or not to surround the principles of the initiating Æon with as much extraneous material as was humanly possible. As much as Ipsissimus Crowley has my personal admiration, his predilection for piling the obscure on in heaping doses often leads me to a state of exasperation with his works. After all, why describe the dynamics of air intake, nerve action/reaction, and the force of air expulsion in cryptic jargon when it is more direct to use the word “sneeze” and be done with it. The fault is not totally DCLXVI’s - his god had a great deal of the fitful about him. Things, to put it mildly, were not particularly easy or straightforward in that Æon.

The Path became less cluttered when I ÆS arrived and Anton LaVey began disposing of an enormous amount of the outdated and needless material still lingering from the Æon of HarWer in the course of his Task of expounding Indulgence. As any study of the Satanic Bible will show, his was a far more direct approach to life than were those of the winding Crowley teachings. The philosophy of the Church of Satan was an attractive one to many a person, thrill seeker and serious student alike, but what a good number failed to see was that its Magus, Church, and Satanic Bible operated on another subtle and higher level beyond the mere “do anything you want” outlook. As Dr. Aquino has said in the past, Magus LaVey would not speak as freely and definitively on the subject of Satan as he would on other topics relevant to his Age. Although he made references to forces and vibrations and the Man Downstairs without making the defining statement of what Satan actually was, it would be an error to consider him a nonbeliever in the god of the Satanic Age. The question of the objective reality of Set (or Satan or HarWer) must arise at one time or another and the problem demanded a personal resolution on the part of the Magus Anton LaVey as surely as it does with each of us in the Temple of Set. Setians are not asked to blindly believe in Set - it is better that they examine all the reasons for there not being an entity called Set in order to arrive at an intellectual conclusion that there might well be something out there and that our current fund of knowledge is most probably correct regarding that which we and it call Set. Anton LaVey’s Task was to lay a groundwork that man might increase in nobility through the use of the Word Uttered through his lips. None can turn his hand to such a responsibility without the knowledge of the deity passing near to him. Man might be related to the beasts of the planet through his organic body, but there burned in him an alien spark which the Magus of Satan kindled further through his Work.

The Word of the Church of Satan, like its predecessor, is integral to successfully carrying out an upward Remanifestation. Also like the Word before it, the correlation can be explained simply and clearly. All Words are brought forth that they might amplify man’s use of both the moment of now and the pursuit of the future, options available to them through the Black Flame. Both Thelema and Indulgence defined components which can be magnified in an upward direction to allow for building the structure of the being into a self-defined and compleat being, Thelema being the presence of that able to set its course through the cosmos and Indulgence the means through which that course can operate on a divine rather than mundane orientation. Without the Words before Remanifest the principle would have nothing higher to elevate and without Remanifest the others would be single event happenings.

Remanifest is far more closely allied to Xeper than to the previous Utterances even with its relevant bond to those Words. It was in the Æon of Xeper that Remanifest came to be and by the rules under which it exists, it cannot conflict with the Word and teachings of Ipsissimus Aquino. Its function more properly supplements the action of Xeper in Initiatory life through demonstrating the exponential results of that quest. Xeper is operative as a verb in addition to its noun status and is constantly taking place in both lesser and greater ways. Remanifest describes the point at which those acts of Coming Into Being unite to focus and induce change. It is by definition as simple and clear as that.

Looking to the future is one of the very reasons that the written and spoken sequence of “Xeper and Remanifest” seems so precisely correct to me. Initiates Come Into Being and then having reached that new state of being, Remanifest all that they have Become through the newly realized powers at their disposal. This leads to further explorations of the universes with those sharpened skills and new *Xeper*s which in turn bring about new possibilities to Remanifest ad infinitum. These new beings produced by the process will eventually uncover new Words and as I have commented in the past, upcoming principles are areas of intense curiosity on my part. It is highly likely given our present rate of evolution that they will emerge and try as I may to perceive the future, those secrets are hidden from me. It is right, proper, and logical that it should be so. Æon-enhancing Magi in years to come will feel precisely as I do, that their Words should be linked with Xeper. Although the “Xeper and Remanifest” sequence is the most embracing elucidation of the Formula at the time of this writing, other Magi will make the Formula even more patent and understandable. They will themselves undertake their Tasks from the basis of new Understandings highly relevant to the Magical Current of the day and will proclaim their bonds with Xeper. From this you can see the reasoning behind summarizing the Formula as Xeper and Remanifest.

The Temple has not disappointed my expectations for the Word. Initiates have read the material available, given feedback and criticism, and tested the proposition for validity in their own lives. No Magus can successfully carry out his Task with an iron hand. He can share his understanding with others insofar as his communication skills and attention span will allow and then hope for the best. That, Setians, is what the atmosphere of the Temple of Set is: the best, most exacting, and fertile of environments for the development of implements to aid the reason for the Temple’s presence - the evolution of man into the divine.

Xeper and Remanifest.
Appendix 92: Runa

- by Stephen E. Flowers V°
October 1990

Runa is that which is hidden, perpetually beyond the grasp of the intellect. By attaining to levels of Understanding of what was previously hidden, we push back the barriers and in the process create even greater mysteries beyond. This process is clear in science as well as art.

As I Understand the current constellation of Æonic Words (Words within the Æon), Xeper is the process of evolution of Self in the quest for the elusive Graal/Walhalla (Xem), the mechanism is Remanifestation, the map is Thelema, Indulgence is all with which we even gain union, and Runa is that which lies outside or beyond our direct experience. It is the hunger for the Graal which drives the magician: the subtle sense of the unknown and the unknowable that motivates the magician ever onward.

Runa is intimately attached to the circle or ring of nature - to the ring around the pentagram. It is a kind of magnetic ring, pulling a focus (the Self) through the Nine Angles. The points themselves - even before the current of energy reaches them - are Runa, the energy is Thelema, the Ninth Angle/Black Flame is Walhalla; the very process itself with all of these and yet unknown qualities is Xeper.

The eternally Hidden draws us ever onward. The Hidden can sometimes be interpreted as the Feminine or the Darkness, but essentially it is the eternally-deep core reality which simultaneously pushes and draws us into the Unknown.

The relationship between Runa and the ring is important to the Work of the Order of the Trapezoid with which the natural cosmos interacts according to the æsthetics and magical criteria of the Romantics. But that is the subject of another work.

Runa, therefore, is obviously an Æon-enhancing Word rather than one intended to usher in a new æon. Its strong historical roots also suggest that it is a strangely non-linear, omnipresent Word which weaves in and out of time, Remanifesting according to a mysterious pattern.

Runa is the Sense of the Unknown. This implies an element of subjectivity, which will have a different quality depending upon the level of Initiation of that Subject. For the non-Initiate, especially those on Paths other than the Left-Hand, there will be the element of horror and fear which will accompany the Unknown - once the seeker has delved to sufficient depths of Being.

In the most basic level of our experience, Runa is that Sense of the Hidden - even of the Forbidden - which has perhaps motivated humanity more vitally than anything else. One of the greatest of all human drives is the drive to uncover the hidden, to discover that which was previously unknown. This is so obvious, yet it remains something largely unexplored as a Principle in and of itself. Ultimately this factor in the human psyche is that responsible for the actual reception of the Gift of Set: Set may have given, but some part of the receiver must already have been capable of receiving the Gift in a productive way. This factor remains with humanity, of course. Only now it is powered with the Gift and therefore can be conscious of this drive.

As distinguished from some of the other Words which have been Uttered, Runa is one that is essentially comprehensible by all Setians regardless of degree, because some aspect of it has been experienced by all. It remains, however, something which can be Understood fully and completely for what it is only by the Magistry.

We in the Temple have rightly been very mistrustful of “mystery” and “mysticism” - anything which smacks of the “unclear” or “fuzzy” - because such terms have been so abused by “mystics” of the past. What they may mean by “mystery” and what I mean by Runa are two different things. Runa does not lead to obscurity; rather it is the first step to clarity. Just as Socrates was declared the wisest man in all Hellas because he claimed to “know nothing” - as all knowledge begins with the assumption of ignorance - so too does clarity begin with a Sense of the Hidden. This is an eternal process: As we push back the veil of the Hidden in one field, that very act creates yet more fields of the Unknown beyond. In just such a way, if consciously applied, humanity exercises the god-like power of creation.

The real function of Runa - of “mystery” - on the Left-Hand Path is the way in which it leads to the clarification or objectification of subjective/inner experience.

Dangers: All æonic Words carry with them inherent dangers - to their Magi more than anyone else, but also to the world, as they will make alterations in the fabric of the Objective Universe. The danger of Runa is to become lost in the realm of subjectivity - in the sense of mystery. Its Magus, however, is aware of this and moreover finds himself in the company of fellow Masters of the Temple who, by their very Being, guard against this danger.

Runa Ultima

The ultimate Rune is the objectification or objectifying of the ultimate subject. This would be the entry into the ring of Runa and the attainment of an “omnijective” perspective. The end and means of this are contained in Xeper, and the notion that the end/means constitute a return (qualitative) is Remanifestation. No amount of philosophizing on this topic or process can make one Understand what this means. It is something which must be the result of one’s own Initiatory level of Being coming directly to grips with the challenge. Although the concept of Runa can be comprehended by almost anyone and be understood by several, only those who have entered the City of the Pyramids can be said to truly Understand it.
I am a Magus of the Word Xeper (pronounced “kheffer”), an English language coinage expressing an Egyptian verb written as a stylized scarab and meaning “I Have Come Into Being”. This Word generates the Æon of Set, and is the current form of the Eternal Word of the Prince of Darkness. To know this Word is to know that the ultimate responsibility for the evolution of your psyche is in your hands. It is the Word of freedom, ecstasy, fearful responsibility, and the root of all magic.

Xeper is the Word of worlds; it describes the process through which all worlds Come Into Being. It is a Word that creates a matrix into which it can be reUttered, on both personal and historical levels. Each reUtterance both destroys and re-creates the matrix into which it is Uttered or known.

It is the word of cyclic dynamism, reflecting the cycle of Manifestation --> Being --> Dismanifestation --> Remanifestation. It affects those who know it as a pleasurable and clear perception of their reality, power, and will in both the objective and subjective universes.

Each moment of knowing Xeper, that is to say of being in the place in your life where you can say “I Have Come Into Being!”, is a moment that Ouspensky describes as “objective consciousness” (RL #19B). It is from the moments of perceiving and acting upon Xeper that the Setian begins the process of becoming an immortal, independent, powerful, and potent Essence, which affects the universes in many ways both casually and a-casually.

An æon is a world. As human beings we are familiar with many “worlds”. We can talk about the “world of Thomas Jefferson” or the “world of Newton”. Magical worlds are created by Words - by the verbal power of mankind to express a divine principle - which through the effect of that Utterance on the objective universe brings about the creation of the world. The Word serves as a gateway for the mind seeking to enter the world it defines, and the effect of an Utterance of a Word will cause many worlds to be reconfigured in order to hear it.

The Æon of Set is created by the Word “Xeper”. Xeper is an Egyptian verb meaning “I Have Come Into Being”. Xeper is the experience of an individual psyche becoming aware of its own existence and deciding to expand and evolve that existence through its own actions. Xeper has been experienced by anyone who has decided to seek personal development.

Awareness of Xeper usually begins with a moment of rebellion against the spiritual status quo. In this sense Xeper is a “Satanic” word, and the condition that led to its re-emergence on this Earth began in the working called the Church of Satan. Its properties, however, transcend and in some ways oppose that matrix. It is the nature of self-creation that it continually re-creates its matrix in the objective universe so that the subjective universe can evolve and expand.

To experience that moment of Xeper, of emergent self-divinity, one must love two things with all of one’s heart. The first of these is freedom, because only in freedom can one take the steps [if initially only mentally] that create and limit the self. The second thing one must love is knowledge. This isn’t the same thing as information; this a transformative Understanding of those things within us and beyond us which determine who we are.

The symbols of Xeper are the scarab beetle and the dawning Sun. The beetle is symbolic of self-trust and hard work. The beetle goes through very different stages from egg to larva to pupa to beetle. Each stage has its own work: a particular way of gathering energy and materials, particular ways of transforming them. It senses its own evolution and works toward it - even though the momentum of that evolution will change its shape radically, taking it at the appropriate time into unknown worlds and new modes of being. The dawn is symbolic of the way the world is perceived.

Unlike the followers of conventional religion who possess guidebooks that explain the world away, the seeker after Xeper is looking for an intensification of being so that the world may be made intelligible in a uniquely personal light. In this darkling universe there are no lights save for those you create through your hard work, your spiritual rebellion, your seeking after the mysteries of your own choosing. When that light dawns, it will by its very nature not only give you moments of clarity about the things in your life closest to you, it will likewise show you new horizons - horizons for you and you alone to explore. This secret was known symbolically to the Egyptians; they identified their god Xepera, the Self-Created One, with Hrumachis, the god of the horizon. This secret was also known [at a divine level] by Aleister Crowley, who predicted that the Æon of Hrumachis would surpass his own.

Set, the Egyptian god of Darkness, is the divine origin of the Word. Set’s name ultimately means the “Separator” or “Isolator”. His chief enemies are the gods of stasis and mindlessness. The first of these is Osiris, Death himself.

Set’s slaying of Osiris has a twofold significance for the seeker of Xeper. Firstly this represents the slaying of old thought-patterns: the dethroning of those internal gods whom we have received from society. On a second level this was the act by which Set, alone of all the gods of ancient Egypt, became deathless. The Left-Hand Path is a quest to Become an immortal, potent, and powerful Essence.

Set’s other enemy is the demon of mindless chaos, Apep. Set is said to slay this creature every night just before dawn. This symbolizes overcoming self-doubt and delusion, of acting at the times of greatest despair, or not being lulled to sleep by the powerful self-hypnotizing engines of mankind.

Set achieves [on a divine level] this isolation from the universe so that he may say, “Xeper” (“I Have Come Into Being”). Each of these breaks - the break from the dead past [by slaying Osiris] and the break from the confused present [by slaying Apep] - is done for the sake of a self-determined future. One of Set’s cult titles, Set-Heh, means “God of Unending Futurity”.

Set did not receive the aid of other gods in his two quests, nor does Set give aid to those who seek to emulate these quests on a human level. Those who struggle [like Set] with the principle of Xeper are of his Essence. Their actions are essentially the same. Those who want to share their quests and pool their knowledge seek after Set’s chief tool of his Æon, the Temple of Set. It is the most concentrated environment for the study of Xeper, both as noun and verb. As such those who are affected by the power of their own Xeper will seek to enhance and protect the Temple.

Xeper cannot be studied as an abstract intellectual idea. It must be experienced. One can read about justice, or one can hope for it; but to truly know justice you must bring it into being. One can read about Xeper, as your interest in secret things has brought you to do. You can hope for it. Or you can seek the solitary self-transformation that will cause you to experience it.
The Temple of Set represents a concentration of the Æon. Like Set himself it does not answer prayers, and by its very Being provides challenges for those who would seek after the Word of Xeper. It is the embodiment of the Emerald Dawn envisioned by a German LHP order, the Fraternitas Saturni (RL #24J).

We are not necessarily a “Satanic” order, save that we understand that for initiation on the Left-Hand Path to be effective for those who have just begun work on that path, the antinomian aspect of the work does need to be fulfilled by some means. The imagery of the Black Arts provides that need for many, but it likewise can be limiting as it is mastered. Our predecessor was caught by this trap, and we hope by exploring the manifestations of the principle of Xeper in many cultures and times and in our own creations to have much further horizons. Diabolical imagery is useful only in a culturally-bound antinomian sense; beyond this it represents a new stasis to be discarded.

Xeper: An Egyptian verb, like an English verb, can have several forms depending on its number, tense, voice, and mood. You can have a verb such as “run” which can be conjugated (I run; you run; he, she or it runs; we run; I am running; I ran; etc.). There are about 140 forms for an English verb [I remember this because my junior high school Latin teacher often made us write the full conjugation of English verbs when he was mad at us]. We happen to know the tense and person of the verb Xeper from the sentence Xepera Xeper Xepeur. It is first person stative. Now while you’re trying to remember your high school grammar as to what tense “stative” is - you won’t. We don’t have the tense in English. It refers to a past event that modifies a current state. We do have first person, of course; this means that “I” did it.

The proper translation of the verb Xeper is “I have Come Into Being”. There are some implications of this which we in the Temple are only now beginning to consider. For instance the verb refers to a moment that has happened that explains why we are here. When you write or speak or think the word “Xeper”, you are talking about something that has taken place. You are not talking about something taking place at the moment of the speech-act.

Xeper is not a continuous process. It is a series of events whose presence we sense either through either reason or divine apprehension. We are aware that something has occurred to give the particular Being we have at any moment. We are aware that whatever the great shaping potential of that something we don’t have that potential at this moment. In short we are aware that we have had a moment wherein we acted as gods. We did something divine - we had some peak experience - we made some life-altering choice - and it has produced the creatures we are now.

This produces two great realizations. First, we are aware that we have a capacity beyond wherever and whenever we are right now to both limit and create ourselves. All moments of Xeper both limit and create ourselves. Or to use both of those ideas at the same time, all moments of Xeper isolate ourselves from the cosmos. Second, we want to do this again. Humankind wants the divine. In erroneous religions this desire is a return to the divine in one way or another [either by union or by being in the divine presence in some place with far too much harp music]. Well, that doesn’t work. You can’t go back to the state where Xeper last occurred. You can’t go back to a previous divine state any more than you can fold an oak back into an acorn. You can only go forward to another divine state. If you want to both achieve and experience your godhood, you’ve got to go forward.

In our Earthly incarnation we never fully experience the divine moment. Only through magical introspection do we discover that we have passed through one and thus can say [with both happiness and terror] “I have Come Into Being”. In the Bremmer-Rhind Papyrus this idea is reflected in the fact that Xepera’s first two children are Shu (Reason) and Tefnut (Peak Emotions). Through these two human experiences we can detect the divine, and having detected it learn to work with it to have more divine experiences.

The first question is: How do I have more divine experiences? Xeper happens to every sapient being. Most humans [and most of us most of the time] stumble across those experiences which would set up the conditions enabling them to later say “Xeper” if they had brains large enough to hold the concept. The experience might be going into a drugstore to buy a malted milk and meeting the person who will become your spouse for the next fifty years. That was divine moment: It both limited and created your life. A Christian would say it was the hand of God, a Hindu would invoke karma. But we know who did it: that man or woman we face in the mirror every day.

The scary thing for all humans - and in fact the reason they/we invented religion in the first place - is that most divine experiences occur blindly. So most humans either on bended knee ask some fairytale gods not to give them bad experiences, or if they’re a little braver try to influence them with magic, or try to deny them by asserting the meaningless nature of the cosmos. But the Setian, knowing that only through such experiences can he or she find the metamorphosis which our philosophy finds both achievable and desirable, seeks out the divine experience. I can’t tell you where to find yours. If you did what I did, you would find mainly that it didn’t work. This is due to the individualistic nature of Xeper [remember? First person verb].

This tells you many things about Xeper the verb. It is not continuous. All events do not feed it equally. It is not fully under conscious control. Rather consciousness and emotion arise from it, but can and must be used to seek more of it. This means that Xeper is not simple self-development or self-improvement, but that these things chosen rationally can create conditions wherein Xeper can occur.

All sapient beings experience Xeper, but those who can name it and Understand its purpose have a much better chance of achieving it. The paths to it are absolutely personal, but some of its properties (such as being fed/triggered by peak experiences) lead to certain group functions as facilitators. It limits you; divine decisions always involve a road not taken. It creates you; divine decisions always lead to much more than can be rationally deduced. When you can say “Xeper”, you are in some way a different person.

The noun “Xeper” - that thing we speak of as “our Xeper” - is likewise an Egyptian noun. It is usually translated into English as “manifestation” or “the thing that happened”. The plural of the noun is Xeperu. When we talk about “our Xeper”, we are talking about a very large thing indeed - and we usually [in our normal, sluglike mode] give very little thought to it. Yet if we simply become aware of Xeper, our personal magical and philosophical horizons greatly expand.

Many magicians in the Temple of Set take justifiable pride in the magical items they create. It’s easy to see one’s magic in a necklace one makes. However as magicians what we do is to make a very large magical object, existing on many levels of reality. Our entire life considered at any moment is a Xeper, a manifestation.

If you can think of all the things that you’ve wrought - changes in your mind/body complex, your recognition, your reputation: all of those things that represent what you have brought to this Earth - as a giant talisman, then you’ve got a handle on Xeper the noun. Many of you may have written a Rune to pull something - gold or love - out of the unmanifest. That Rune is a tiny, tiny version of the great talisman that is your Xeper. The creation of Xeper is the working whereby we attract what we’re going to get in this life, and the divine memory we will have of this life.
Xeper the noun is the extension of existence to a further level of being. These extensions can be a thought which you’ve raised to a developed, conscious level from an intuition - which would represent two levels of being in your subjective universe. These extensions can be what others think of you. The extensions are particularly evident in actions that represent a first or personal best effort at something.

Hence if you really want to Xeper, conquer fear by doing something you didn’t think you could. Or find a mystery and bring it to the surface of your understanding - or better yet the understanding of others. Or create something new [the last would be an example of the verb for “create”, s’Xeper].

Since Xeper exists as a noun, you can interact with the Xeper of others: You are affected [usually blindly] by the work of past magicians, or if you have learned the art of shaping and seeking your own Xeper first, you can consciously work with others’ products. An excellent example of this would the Wewelsburg Working.

I’ll leave you with one other word for your word-hoard - the dual noun Xeperi. Egyptian nouns can be singular (one cat), dual (two cats) or plural (too many cats). The noun Xeperi can best be translated by “synchronicity”, although the standard translation is “miracle”. The Egyptians knew the sign of something Coming Into Being was the meaningful coincidence. We know too - either by Shu (“What were the odds of that happening?”) or by Tefnut (“It sent shivers down my spine.”). The noun Xeperi shows that manifestations are not continuous but discrete - actions at a distance - or more simply magic. Xeper has occurred when two discrete systems resonate with one another.

Another form of Xeperi is that moment of communication of wordless magical information with one another. The most familiar form of this is through our interactions with the Aeon. The more adept you are at seeking and shaping your own Xeper, the more you can positively interact with the Xeper of the Aeon and help fulfill its purpose of exporting Xeper into the objective universe.

Think about these things. Think about them ’til that shiver runs down your back. Then put this aside for awhile, and come back to it. Then after the most personal and individual of experimentation, you too can know and heed the Law: Xepera Xeper Xeperu = “I have Come Into Being, and by the process of my Coming Into Being the process of Coming Into Being is established.”

I will speak on the Word’s history, and I will ask you all to think on this evolution in the objective universe, and then upon the evolution of your own subjective universe: how you, the reader, have experienced Xeper. With each evolution of the Word, note how it doesn’t lose meaning, but gains through each historical test - just as Xeper in yourself gains as you gain new being.

The formula Xepera Xeper Xeperu has been traced by French Egyptologists back to the First Intermediate Period. There it was a formula of power for finding meaning when the divine kingship, the most important source of order, had collapsed. This was probably the birth of the Left-Hand Path - the idea that meaning can only come from the individual. Xeper was the last fortress - the mind and body of the individual. Xeper was the word of anyone who would not let the divine principle of isolation and evolution fail.

The second appearance was in Rameses III’s time. The formula was used to empower travelers through the desert. Xeper was a touchstone for those who extend existence by passing boundaries. Xeper was the word of the extender of Egypt - of the known order.

The third appearance was at the beginning of the Hermetic tradition. Xeper became the word of the individual magician seeking two types of power: power to see through the illusions of this world, and power for a coherent afterlife. These practitioners began a magical practice that went beyond the state goals of Egypt, Greece, or Rome.
The fourth appearance - connected with the study of Budge’s Egyptian Language by a Priest of Mendes - was very different. The Left-Hand Path was up and running. The Word worked on a matrix of its own making. Michael Aquino had to find the Word (cast in Roman and Greek letters) in a translation from its last appearance. He didn’t write the Rhind Papyrus, any more than its author came up with the spell of continuous re-creation. But his Utterance of that Word - in a matrix conditioned by its last appearance - produced a new access to energy and power beyond any previous Utterances.

Aquino’s Utterance in 1975 CE was the Utterance of the Word of the Æon, defining the process that each sapient being must experience in order to undergo evolution of the self: Xeper is the concept upon which the cycles of manifestation are actualized [in both the noumenological and phenomenological worlds]. The actual activity of cyclical dynamism is generated by the formula of Xepera Xeper Xeperu, and my Remanifestation of the Word with my own Utterance of Xeper on the Spring Equinox of 1996 CE will raise and attune the imagination of the world to a new and permanent understanding of the principle.

My Utterance of the Word is in the tradition of Michael Aquino’s. I am Uttering the Word into a matrix of its own conditioning. The results should be stronger and further-reaching than Michael Aquino’s Utterance - just as the one who follows me may extend the Word further.

Each pharaoh attempted to extend the borders of the country further than his predecessor. I am extending the possibilities for Xeper further than Michael Aquino. My accomplishments will be less; the time of seeing an Æon being born is very rare. My job will be to find and articulate more of the properties of Xeper so that each student of the Black Arts will have new types of tools for collaboration with Set.

If I manage to extend the boundaries and make there my Oath of Truth, then I will be seen as a successful Magus. If I fail, others will Utter Xeper, just as mankind has been doing for the last four thousand years. It is the job of the Temple to keep the connections of the Word alive, so that long periods of ignorance come not again. If we fail utterly, then the Word will not be heard on this Earth again.

The beginning work of the Setian is to learn the formula Xepera Xeper Xeperu, which is rendered in English as “I have Come Into Being, and by the process of my Coming Into Being the process of Coming Into Being is established.”. Learn the formula not as a mantra but in order to see its effects in your life. Learn to see your Xeper as the one truth that separates you from the mass of delusions that we create in our minds so that we might sleep-walk through existence. Having learned to awaken to the reality of Xeper, learn to ask yourself where you wish to steer - “What do I want to do?” “What do I want to Become?” - and then act accordingly while keeping that divine realization fresh in your mind and soul.

To those who dare the Black Magic, who will take up the uniquely personal challenge of Xeper, as both a spiritual quest for self-deification and a psychological exploration of antinomianism, I send greetings and the sure knowledge that when you think of Set, he thinks of you.

Appendix 94: Essent into Essence

by Robert W. Robinson V°
December 29, 1996

Since 1986 the magical concept of Essent into Essence has slowly evolved and taken shape as a tool for enhancing initiation. In 1991 it took root within the Temple of Set’s Order of the Sepulcher of the Obsidian Masque. On April 19, 1996 (XXXI ÆS), when I was confirmed as the sixth Magus of the Æon of Set by the Council of Nine, Essent became the fifth Word of the Æon to be Recognized for its Æon-enhancing qualities.

Assorted aspects of this formula have come into being on an irregular basis and as a result of personal initiation, the influence of members of the OSOM who have decided to make Essent a part of their own initiation, as a direct result of the effects of Dromenon performed at conclaves, and through my efforts to answer questions on Essent posed by interested Initiates of all degrees.

From the beginning Essent into Essence dealt with the process of experiencing essence - merging with and activating the eternal potential that lies at the core of all sentient beings. Essence is our “first form” - the unnatural aspect of our being that extends beyond body and brain and is unlimited by time and space. We experience essence when our activities are directed by a system of philosophical inquiry and enlightenment of the self based on direct knowledge and experience of being.

Essent into Essence is a magical formula, a “Key”, consisting of several “facets” which facilitate the realization of the highest levels of being or essence. All Essent into Essence-oriented processes require a pre-existent qualitative level of life/being before the process can be triggered and fully activated. The goal of all such processes is the enhancement of life/being in increasingly more focused ways. Simply stated, Essent = being. That Essent into Essence can be reduced to such a simple formula is a measure of its effectiveness and validity in initiatory pursuits focused on the realization of being as it manifests moment to moment.

Essent into Essence is the journey toward, as well as the manifestation of the self in the immediate present. In Platonic terms, it is the process of an intensification of the nœtic experience of self-realization, of being - the absolute surety that “I am an existential singularity”. It is both process and product, direction and destination. Essent into Essence is also the “embodiment of essence” which is the consequence of “coming into being”. It is the relentless continuation of existence, of being, at its most intense and most responsible.

Although free from the restriction placed on corporeal form, I have come to realize that essence is finite [meaning that at some time in the distant future individual essence ceases], and that by being finite it becomes achievable. The personal magical goal of all individuals interested in knowing themselves “essentially” and totally, should be to become, in the now, their own essence.

An obvious goal in this transformation process is to complete it - achieve essence - while still in physical form. Regardless of what happens to consciousness, or how drastically our perceptions of the Universe are altered, if we still have a body, then we are still very much connected to the natural universe and the laws that govern it. Of course our relationship with nature will be changed dramatically and irrevocably, but it will be in no way ended.
Becoming separate, becoming essence, transcends physical laws as they pertain to mind, spirit, soul, or essence. Cause and effect relationships are altered. Seeming opposites - being and non-being, natural and unnatural, joined and isolate - are seen as aspects of the same continuum and therefore more alike than different.

“Embodying essence” initiates a kind of an alliance between the self and the cosmos - a union in which nothing of the self is lost. Consequently the essence is rarefied, intensified, energized, and the potential that has always been there is activated - awakened. We become the cosmos of the self: equal to but not necessarily better or more than any other cosmos. We take on the self’s “ideal form”: that which manifests only once in all existence.

To comprehend and achieve essence I have developed many tools, and a “Key” has been formulated symbolizing both process and attainment. The “Key of Essent into Essence” is broken down into nine “facets”, which are designed to open the door to an “embodiment of essence”. For a complete breakdown of the Key, please see my essay “Essent into Essence: The Key and its Facets”, available in the Ruby Tablet or in a back-issue of the Scroll of Set.

The Key is broken down into the following facets:

1. Life and being make up the first facet, because without life “process” is simply not possible. Existence as “unembodied essence” - pure spirit - is arguable at best and is not the focus of Essent [but perhaps an eventual by-product of it]. What is of interest is the potential for “embodied essence”, and this is the goal of all efforts of Essent into Essence.

   The dual symbol of Ankh-W3S ideally articulates the kind of life that is the focus of Essent. It is life in which choices have been made to dominate, control, educate, empower, embolden, and initiate the self.

2. Death or non-being, the second facet of the Key, can be either a transitory stage occurring at various times during life, or it can be a permanent state out of which nothing ever arises.

   On the Key-diagram, this state is symbolized by the Djed scepter of the ancient Egyptians, which symbolizes in its various guises stability, the “world column”, transformation, resurrection, rebirth, or Remanifestation that occurs when some kind of confrontation with death (real, metaphorical, or metaphysical) has been successfully survived.

   Non-being also incorporates the idea of sacrificing aspects of the self that are detrimental, non-productive, inhibiting, and non-essential to the process of realizing essence. In this light, magical initiation can be thought of as the death of all that is not of the self - that which simply doesn’t work.

3. Love is the third facet, and is symbolized by the two-pronged fork at the end of the Key - that which first enters the lock that allows us to open and shut the door to essence. The Left-Hand Path/Setian experience of love in its purest form is Platonic in nature, and can be defined as the desire to comprehend a thing in all its “thingness”, or to know a thing as it is and not as the perceiver wishes it to be.
4. Fear, and its use as an initiatory tool, is the focus of this facet of the Key. Facing and dealing with fear provides an opportunity for dealing with fear while not demanding that it be conquered or destroyed. If all fear were somehow magically destroyed, which is unlikely, the destruction of the self would most likely follow. Fear is not - and never should be - thought of as the enemy.

   As an accomplice, however, fear can be a very efficient and powerful tool which can help us avoid some very stupid mistakes. Using the Key as a frame of reference, we can will ourselves to deal with fear by learning how to dominate, focus, and control it. When one can see the positive, constructive, and creative role fear often plays in life, it becomes nothing more and nothing less than it is: a means for identifying potentially dangerous situations and a tool for dealing with them.

5. Immersion, the fifth facet of the Key, means “to absorb oneself in one thing, being, or idea, to the exclusion of all others”. An implied aspect of “immersion” as it relates to Essent is the examination of a product of Xeper [or Xeper itself], an insight, or truth, by taking it into the self to the point that it becomes part of one’s life. It also describes the potential for an exploration into something to a degree where it can be understood from within its own perspective.

6. Embodied essence, as a facet of the Key, describes essence as an obtainable and achievable goal. Each time we successfully utilize the process in our efforts to gain insight into the self, we touch essence. A primary goal of these encounters is to sustain them.

7. Spontaneity became a facet of the Key as a direct result of Dromenon presented at conclaves in which we demonstrated the link between spontaneity and creativity, and how this awareness can positively enhance our explorations and facilitate an eventual embodiment of essence.

8. Self-examination/re-examination recalls Plato’s suggestion that the unexamined life has not been lived to its fullest. The initiatory life-style, by its very nature, is dedicated to an examination and analysis of existence. It is a mistake to assume that this inquiry should only be focused outside the self. The world can teach us a great deal about being, but the full answer to the question “Who am I?” can only be found within.

9. Energy is fundamental in the exploration of Essent into Essence. Essent is purposeful and demands direction. It is driven by an immensely powerful energy source which is activated only through need, desire, or willed intent. Consequently in a paradigm governed by Essent into Essence, the aim is to develop new, or re-think already extant methodologies and practices in which one can directly tap into the energy that makes up and sustains essence.

   Essent deals with an internal flow of energy which can be used for any process leading to enhanced being and eventual godhood. The energy itself is neutral; intent is everything.

   To finalize: Essent = being, and being is the source as well as the planned activation of the energy that lies at the heart of all existence - the inherent urge to be.
By now it should be clear that being has nothing to do with stasis. It is instead a dynamically energetic and ongoing process which occurs only in the immediate present - within the time-frame best described as “moment-to-moment”.

If you think about it, the past is static - dead except for the way our memories continually resurrect it - and the future is but unfulfilled desire and potential. The present, however, is the only dimension of time that we can truly own, master, and control. The challenge is to be in a series of moments to the extent that those moments begin to encompass that which is not yet, but is destined [because we will it] to be. The quality of the future is a direct outgrowth of the quality of the present and our work within it.
The astonishing and unbelievable worship of animals by the Egyptians presents great difficulties to anyone who seeks reasons for it; the priests have a secret doctrine concerning these reasons.

- Diodorus II, 86

During the Order of the Vampyre Working at the Set XIV International Conclave (Sacramento, 1993), I formally inaugurated a new Element dedicated to all the creatures with whom humanity shares this planet. As yet without a name, the Element was conceived not just to admire or appreciate or help animals, but more importantly to focus on their intelligence and dignity as sentient beings in their own right.

Until that time Setians had generally assumed that the Gift of Set could be defined as “just” the kind of high intelligence, evident through Self-awareness, unique to human beings and activated by the Initiates among them.

This new Element undertook to see whether there might be anything about our fellow animals with a similar Gift of Set “signature”. If so, then we would have discovered yet another dimension to the Gift, perhaps not so obvious to us as our own, but deserving of recognition nonetheless.

It was characteristic of this “unknown” Element that I did not dictate a name for it, but rather invited all interested Setians to suggest one. I finally chose the one proposed by newly-Recognized Magister Don Webb: “Arkte”, a later Hellenistic variation of the original Hellenic arktoi, referring to the constellations of the Great and Little Bears.

The original legend concerns a nymph, Kallisto, who gave birth to a son by Zeus whom she named Arkas. Hera, as angered by Zeus’ extramarital dalliances as Freya would be by Odin’s later on, changed Kallisto into a bear while she slept. When Arkas was about to kill the bear, whom he did not recognize as his mother, Zeus seized hold of his spear to save her life. While Zeus could not undo Hera’s spell, he then changed Arkas into a little bear, whereupon he instantly knew Kallisto. In order to safeguard them both against further danger from Hera, Zeus then transformed them into constellations and gave them the night sky for their eternal playground.

According to their own legends, the Arcadians of ancient Greece claimed to be the original human beings, directly descended from Arkas. Setians know Ursa Major and Ursa Minor, additionally, as sacred to Set and Anubis in ancient Egypt. “Here there be Mysteries,” it can assuredly be said, explorable in such works as Arktos: The Polar Myth (cf. Dr. Aquino’s Black Pyramid in the May 1995 Scroll of Set).

I announced the then-unnamed new Element in the March XXIX issue of the Order of the Vampyre’s Nightwing: “The purpose of this Element is the defense and protection of animals, and the bringing to justice of those who harm them in any way, including for reasons of ‘research and experimentation’.” What the founding “Arkte Warriors” did not realize at the time was that the magical powers we would invoke in this cause would quickly expand the Element far beyond its original scope.

In the subsequent years the growth and work of Arkte within and beyond the Temple of Set have become legendary. Not only have Arkte Warriors directly acted to help and save animals in any number of plights and crises, we have awakened and transformed something new within our Selves, discovering a new kind of friendship, bond, empathy, and destiny which we can share with our furred, feathered, or scaled counterparts. We have learned new ways of looking at the Gift of Set, to see that it can embrace other kinds of intelligence as well as the uniquely-reflective consciousness with which we humans are familiar.

Arkte therefore come to mean much more than just sympathy for animals. It mandates respect for them, a need to understand them on their own terms, not ours. It envisions a Setian future in which there is as much a place for them as for human Initiates, in which the great neteru such as Bast, Sekhmet, Anubis, and their fellows are restored to their full dignity.

While it has been my privilege to be the Initiate around whom this magical concept has coalesced and found its identity - I cannot overemphasize that its Truth has become possible only through its reception and adoption by many others, who through it have become great Warriors in furtherance of it. To this I refer with the greatest pride and appreciation for their efforts, as evidence of the continuing magical authority of Arkte.

While there is of course the collective impact of the individual actions by the many Arkte Warriors, myself included, in everything from donations and demonstrations to caregiving and adoption efforts, a recent event has served to highlight the Element even more: Magister James and Priestess Carmel Severson have expanded Arkte beyond the Temple of Set as a legal entity in the mundane world, affording Arkte Warriors an additional means for carrying on their work before the general public.

Nevertheless a day does not pass without fresh news of horrors perpetrated against animals, often all the more terrible because they are done as though the animals in question are mere commodities or trash - just as Arkas was so casually willing to slay his own mother until Zeus gave him the initiatory sight of a bear himself.

Thus the Work of an awakened Arkte Warrior is fraught with both great love and great pain. This Work is something with which we have all become familiar these many years. It is a difficult and strenuous Working to sustain, but we have all continued to do it.

I have been asked whether there is a central magical principle underlying Arkte. I would first emphasize that the Work of this Element is not mere compassion or “kindness to dumb animals” as advocated by traditional humane organizations. Rather it calls upon the initiatory capacity of humankind to realize that animal intelligence must be measured against its own benchmark, not ours, and that as such it goes beyond mere “instinct” to various forms of metaphysical awareness pertinent to each species.

Beyond this new initiation into and participation in different kinds of Self-aware high intelligence I see a new and greater evolutionary transformation of Setians into magical beings unlimited to their own animal species. Potentially we may recapture that esoteric bond with our animal fellows which the ancient Egyptian priesthoods had attained, and which so awed Diodorus. And then we will have lifted the Gift of Set to an entirely new level of nœsis.
